

Help Judicial Watch Enforce Our Immigration Laws

What will it take to convince politicians they must get tough on illegal immigration? The American people have already spoken loud and clear – 80% said they want Congress to enforce our immigration laws.* The problem? Members of Congress don't want to listen.

That is why Judicial Watch does more than just talk about illegal immigration. We go to court to take action against politicians and government officials who refuse to enforce our nation's immigration laws. For example:

- ▶ When the Bush administration tried to keep secret a Border Patrol survey that proved a proposed "amnesty" program led to an influx of illegals, Judicial Watch filed an open records lawsuit and forced its release.
- ▶ When the Town of Herndon and Fairfax County, Virginia voted to bankroll a day laborer site for illegal aliens with taxpayer funds, Judicial Watch filed a lawsuit to shut the facility down.
- ▶ Judicial Watch also sued the L. A. Police Department over a policy (Special Order 40) that prevents police officers from inquiring about an arrestee's immigration status, allowing criminal illegal aliens to roam the streets.

Over the last decade, Judicial Watch has learned when it comes to responding to government corruption, talk is cheap. So we take action. Thanks to this aggressive approach, Judicial Watch was recently named one of the nation's "Top Ten" most effective watchdog organizations by The Hill newspaper.

Don't depend on politicians to do the right thing. Help Judicial Watch enforce our nation's immigration laws. Visit our Internet website today and join Judicial Watch's campaign to stop illegal immigration.
