William Gould, a Stanford University law professor who was appointed to head the NLRB by President Bill Clinton, has his doubts about this complaint. "It's perfectly reasonable for a company to want to avoid strikes," he told me.

In his view, the board's general counsel "is wrong when he says the company can't divert work from a union facility when it can't get a no-strike clause, so long as it offers some other means to resolve differences. I don't infer from that anti-union animus, which is prohibited."

outrageous, if he really said it!

ACTING GENERAL COUNSEL
NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD
BEFORE THE
COMMITTEE ON OVERSIGHT AND GOVERNMENT REFORM
UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
NORTH CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA
JUNE 17, 2011
Mr. Chairman and distinguished Members of the Subcommittee:

I appear before you today as the Acting General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, having been appointed to this position by President Obama on June 21, 2010. For the 38 years before my appointment, I have served as a career civil servant in many positions throughout the Agency, ranging from field examiner, staff attorney, supervisory attorney, and finally, as a member of the Senior Executive Service.

I would like to start by acknowledging that workers in North Charleston are feeling vulnerable and anxious because they are uncertain as to what impact any final decision may have on their employment with Boeing. These are difficult economic times, and I truly regret the anxiety this case has caused them and their families. The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations.

This complaint was issued only after the parties failed to informally resolve this dispute. I personally met with the parties and I tried for three months to facilitate a settlement of the case. I remain open to playing a constructive role in assisting the parties to settle this dispute without the costs and uncertainties associated with extended litigation. I believe that, given the parties’ longstanding bargaining relationship, a settlement would serve the interests of the parties and the workers and would promote industrial peace. In the absence of a mutually acceptable settlement, however, both Boeing and the Machinists Union have a legal right to present their evidence and arguments in a trial and to have those issues be decided by the Board and federal courts.

I would like to begin by describing briefly the relevant regulatory framework and the role of the Office of General Counsel within that framework. The National Labor Relations Act divides responsibility over private-sector labor relations between the National Labor Relations Board and the General Counsel of the Board. The Board adjudicates cases in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Act itself, the Administrative Procedures Act, and the Constitution. The Office of the General Counsel serves as a prosecutor of labor law violations in such cases.

The Office of the General Counsel was created by the Taft-Hartley Amendments of 1947. Under Section 3(d) of the amended Act, the General Counsel has “final authority”, on behalf of the Board, with respect to the investigation and prosecution of unfair labor practice complaints. In order to ensure that the newly-established General Counsel of the NLRB would have both the independence and resources necessary to make final, unreviewable decisions in typically heated labor and management controversies, Section 3(d) also provided that, with the exception of administrative law judges and legal assistants to Board members, General Counsel “shall exercise general supervision over all attorneys employed by the Board” and would have general supervision “over the officers and employees in the regional offices.” Like my predecessors, I have gone to great lengths to ensure that all unfair labor practice charges, which must be initiated by private parties, are fairly considered, relying on "findings, reasons, precedents, checks through appeals and through internal supervision, and procedural protections." See K. Davis, Discretionary Justice 207 (1969).

To that end, all charges filed with our regional offices are carefully and impartially investigated to determine whether there is reasonable cause to believe that, under the Board’s precedents, an unfair labor practice has been committed. Fairness to the parties and sound development of the law weighs in favor of presenting these types of cases to the Board for decision, subject to review by the courts. See Kenneth C. McGuinness, Effect of the Discretionary Power of the General Counsel on the Development of the Law, 29 Geo. Wash. L.Rev. 385, 397 (1960). I would not be fulfilling my responsibilities if I turned a blind eye to evidence that an unfair labor practice may have occurred. I took an oath to enforce the National Labor Relations Act and to protect workers from unlawful conduct.

The General Counsel’s concern with fairness to the parties does not end with the issuance of the complaint. The Supreme Court has recognized that the Act and the Board’s rules are designed to ensure that proceedings are conducted in a manner that respects the private rights of the charging party and the charged party. Automobile Workers v. Scofield, 382 U. S. 205, 217-221 (1965).
The Supreme Court has also recognized that “Congress intended to create an officer independent of the Board to handle prosecutions, not merely the filing of complaints.”

NLRB v. United Food & Comm. Workers Un., 484 U.S. 112, 127 (1987) (emphasis in original). Thus, throughout the proceeding, the General Counsel remains master of the complaint and the charging party is not permitted to pursue alternative theories of a violation without the consent of the General Counsel. See, e.g., Teamsters, Local 282 (E.G. Clemente Contracting Corp.), 335 NLRB 1253, 1254 (2001). Throughout the proceedings, the General Counsel is responsible to ensure that the prosecution of the case is justified by the facts and law. As such, it remains open to the General Counsel to make concessions on issues of fact or law and to pursue settlement discussions with the charged party -- even over the objections of the charging party.

For all these reasons, the actual fairness of the proceedings before the Board -- and, equally important, the perception that the Board’s administrative processes are fair -- vitally depends on the public and the parties retaining the confidence that the General Counsel is carrying out his prosecutorial responsibilities on the basis of the facts and law in the case, and is not making decisions on the basis of political or other matters not properly before the Board.

As you know, the Boeing hearing began on Tuesday of this week before an administrative law judge in Seattle, Washington. I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case. My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here. I hope you will share my commitment that these proceedings not be construed as an effort by the Congress to exert pressure or attempt to influence my prosecutorial decisions in this case, which have been and will continue to be made based on the law and the merits and in a manner which protects the due process rights of the litigants.

I come here voluntarily out of respect for the oversight role of Congress. I will do my best to answer your questions, consistent with my obligations to the parties and to the American public with respect to the ongoing Boeing case. The adjudicatory process must be fair and impartial so that the parties’ due process rights, which are guaranteed by the Constitution, are preserved. Our American legal system of justice is guided by these fundamental principles.

ALJ Denies Boeing Bid to Dismiss Complaint, Allowing Trial of Unfair Labor Practice Issues

Posted June 30, 2011, 4:09 P.M. ET

The National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge hearing Acting General Counsel Lafe E. Solomon's allegations that Boeing Co. unlawfully transferred jetliner production work from Washington state to South Carolina June 30 denied the airplane manufacturer's motion to dismiss the complaint (Boeing Co., NLRB ALJ, No. 19-CA-32431, 6/30/11).

ALJ Clifford H. Anderson said it is rare to dismiss unfair labor practice allegations in an NLRB proceeding before the board’s general counsel has even begun to introduce evidence. He further observed that Boeing has not yet established facts to support its argument that Solomon has taken out of context the allegedly unlawful comments Boeing executives made about the opening of the South Carolina plant.

Anderson rejected Boeing's challenge to Solomon's allegation that the company illegally discriminated against union-represented employees in Washington when it built a second assembly line for 787 Dreamliners at a nonunion site in South Carolina. Boeing argued there could be no finding that it violated the National Labor Relations Act without proof that building the South Carolina line adversely affected the Washington workers represented by the International Association of Machinists, but the ALJ disagreed, finding that NLRB precedent could support Solomon's claim of unlawful discrimination.

Finally, the ALJ refused to strike from the administrative complaint Solomon's request that Boeing be ordered to have the second Dreamliner assembly line handled by the unionized workers in Washington rather than the nonunion workforce in South Carolina. Anderson observed that the acting general counsel has not disputed the company's right to oppose the requested remedy as unduly burdensome, but the ALJ said it would be inappropriate to issue a pretrial ruling that would preclude the parties from making a full record on the question of remedial relief to be ordered if the complaint against Boeing is sustained.

Eleventh Circuit Reinstates Fired White Supervisor's Reverse Race Bias Claims

A white supervisor fired by a Lockheed-Martin Corp. subsidiary for forwarding to another employee a racially insensitive “joke” e-mail disparaging African Americans may pursue federal law race discrimination claims based on evidence the company disciplined black employees less harshly for similar offenses, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit ruled today (Smith v. Lockheed-Martin Corp., 11th Cir., No. 09-15428, 6/30/11).

In reversing a district court's grant of summary judgment, the Eleventh Circuit said Anthony Mitten's failure to identify black supervisors who were treated more leniently for comparable offenses was not fatal to his race discrimination claims under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the Civil Rights Act of 1866 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

The U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia had reasoned that Mitten, who was fired in 2005 by Lockheed-Martin Aeronautics Co. for violating a “zero-tolerance” policy against “transmission of ethnic slurs or racial comments,” failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination because he could not identify a black comparator who was treated more leniently. Although Mitten did identify two black employees who received only temporary suspensions for sending similarly racially offensive e-mails, the district court found that those employees were not similarly situated to Mitten because they were not supervisors who have heightened obligations to prevent and report violations of Lockheed's internal anti-discrimination policies.

The Eleventh Circuit, however, ruled that Mitten produced adequate circumstantial evidence of disparate discipline of white and black employees for similar offenses to establish a prima facie case of race discrimination and raise triable claims under Title VII and Section 1981.

Among other things, the court said, a reasonable jury could find that adverse media publicity about shootings at a Lockheed plant in Meridian, Miss., and a pending Equal Employment Opportunity Commission investigation of an alleged racially hostile work environment at Lockheed may have contributed to management firing Mitten as an example of taking a hard line against racial harassment. A jury should resolve whether racial considerations contributed to Mitten's termination while black employees were disciplined less harshly for using racist speech, the appeals court said.

Posted June 30, 2011, 4:15 P.M. ET

A federal district court abused its discretion when it reduced to $50,000 a $300,000 sexual harassment jury verdict in favor of a female former construction worker in Puerto Rico by using the calendar year in which the damages were awarded as the relevant time period for determining damage caps under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit ruled June 29 in an issue of first impression (Hernandez-Miranda v. Empresas Diaz Masso Inc., 1st Cir., No. 10-1639, 6/29/11).

Under 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(3), the appellate court said, damage caps in Title VII claims involving intentional discrimination range from $50,000 to $300,000 depending on the number of employees an employer has "in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year.”

Reversing and remanding the U.S. District Court for the District of Puerto Rico, the First Circuit joined the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh Circuits in interpreting Section 1981a(b)(3)'s reference to the “current” calendar year as meaning the time period of the alleged discrimination, and not the time period in which the jury entered its verdict.

To reach its conclusion, the appellate court relied on judicial interpretations of the phrase “current or preceding calendar year” in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b), a parallel provision in Title VII that limits the definition of an “employer,” as meaning the year of discrimination. Additionally, the court said its interpretation of “current” calendar year “best serves” Title VII’s purpose of “encouraging resolution of disputes before litigation commences.” Such purpose, it said, is “best advanced by providing clarity and certainty as to the size of potential damage awards from the outset of a dispute.”

In the instant case, the First Circuit said, the district court applied a $50,000 damage cap to the $300,000 awarded to Edna Hernandez-Miranda based on employer Empresas Diaz Masso Inc.'s (DM) employment of 25 individuals in 2008, the year of the jury verdict. However, the court said, Hernandez-Miranda alleged sexual harassment that occurred in 2004, when DM had approximately 247 employees. Based on that employee figure, a $200,000 damage cap instead should apply to Hernandez-Miranda's award, the appellate court held.

Chief Judge Sandra L. Lynch wrote the court's opinion, joined by Judges Juan R. Torruella and Eugene E. Siler.

Fired Supervisor's `Cat's Paw' Claim Failed With No Intent, Causation Proof, Court Says

Posted June 30, 2011, 5:39 P.M. ET

A former supervisor in an Iowa hog-processing plant did not prove he was retaliated against for seeking accommodations for an injured worker under the "cat's paw" theory of employer liability because he did not show that an intermediate supervisor had any retaliatory animus, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit held June 28 (Diaz v. Tyson Fresh Meats Inc., 8th Cir., No. 10-1472, 6/28/11).

Affirming summary judgment for Tyson Fresh Meats Inc. on the claim brought under the Iowa Civil Rights Act, Judge D.P. Marshall said there was "some tension" in James Diaz's assertion of the cat's paw theory in this case. "We need not, however, resolve the doctrinal tension in Diaz's case because his cat's paw theory fails on its own terms," the court concluded.

The undisputed evidence showed that Diaz's supervisor, Tom Hanson, may have lied during an investigation into the failure to accommodate the injured worker, but Hanson's actions were intended to protect himself from discipline, not to dupe a neutral decisionmaker into making a discriminatory decision, the court said.

Even if Hanson had set up Diaz to be fired, the court said, the plant manager's decision to fire Diaz was "untainted" because it was based on Diaz's admission that he did not honor work restrictions set by a company nurse.

Somehow we have all become accustomed to the price of gasoline zooming up, then gradually coming down again. We all gripe when a single cucumber at the grocery store costs 65 cents.

...meltdown in a month? We're supposed to be happy when Obama's National Labor Relations Board sues Boeing to stop it from adding thousands of jobs in South Carolina, providing employment for 1,000 men and women.

Obama's whining about corporate jets and tax breaks is totally incoherent. President Obama's core message in his Wednesday press conference, his first since March, could be found in his advice to Republicans. "You go talk to your constituents and ask them, 'Are you willing to compromise your kids' safety so some corporate-jet owner can get a tax break?'" This was just one company is being told by Obama's union-hack-packed National Labor Relations Board that it cannot open a new manufacturing plant in South Carolina.

Stakes high for Boeing in NLRB fight

Portland Business Journal – 06/30/11 19:27 –
Boeing is turning into a political headache for President Barack Obama, giving his Republican rivals a fresh opening to bash the administration's economic policies.

The stakes are high for both Boeing Co. and the state of South Carolina as the National Labor Relations Board ponders whether Boeing illegally set up a new 787 production line in that southern state to avoid union strikes.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A federal judge has blocked a new state law that sought to pre-empt matters already governed by the federal National Labor Relations Act.

The Idaho law sought to strip labor unions of power, ruling the measure passed this year during a flurry of anti-union zeal in the Idaho Legislature likely conflicts with federal law.

House Republicans hold hearing to complain about, threaten NLRB

By: Edward P. Shallow

The stakes just went up in the National Labor Relations Board's (NLRB) attack on Right to Work. The Republican freakout over the National Labor Relations Board continued this week, with the House Education and Workforce Committee holding a hearing on the NLRB's proposed rule changes to streamline elections by reducing frivolous legislation and abuses.

Obama wants Boeing, workers resolve conflict - AP Politics

President Barack Obama is calling once again for Boeing Co. and its workers to resolve their differences without "wasting a lot of time in court." Obama was asked about the National Labor Relations Board's lawsuit against the aerospace giant in a KING-TV interview aired Friday night. The president restated an earlier comment that "businesses should be able to locate wherever they want to operate" and have to follow the law.

NLRB Expands July 18-19 Open Meeting on Ambush Election Proposal

Attention job creators (and those who do not want a union in their work lives): If you are concerned about the Obama administration's latest assault on America's job creators, as well as union bosses putting more of a stranglehold on the economy through President Obama's National Labor Relations Board's proposed rule changes, you're invited to attend an open meeting to hear new rules proposed by the National Labor Relations Board.

Hearing Exposes Harmful Impact of NLRB's Proposal to Rush Union Elections

The hearing on the harmful impact of the National Labor Relations Board's (NLRB) proposed rule changes for the conduct of union elections drew both sharp criticism and strong support in a recent hearing before the House Education and Workforce Committee.

Business leaders scorch new NLRB rules change

As expected, the National Labor Relations Board's proposal to streamline the union voting process drew both sharp criticism and strong support in a recent hearing before the House Education and Workforce Committee.

Joe Brenckle 202-224-2465 WASHINGTON, D.C. – Senator Mike Enzi (R-Wyo.), Ranking Member on the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions (HELP) Committee, said he was disappointed to see the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) ignore the Executive Order issued today that called for more public actions in support of organized labor.

Perhaps it’s because the union extremists at the National Labor Relations Board have 40% less work than their predecessors in 2001, yet have nearly $67 million more in their budget that they now have money to blow on an August conference in Washington, D.

House Panel Clears Spending Bill That Would Give EEOC No Increase for FY 2012

Posted July 13, 2011, 4:55 P.M. ET

The House Appropriations Committee today approved a fiscal year 2012 Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies spending bill that would give the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission a $366.5 million budget for the next fiscal year, the same as its current funding level.

By voice vote, the committee cleared an approximately $50.6 billion omnibus measure (bill number not yet available) that covers the Justice Department, the Commerce Department, the National Science Foundation, NASA, and other miscellaneous federal agencies, including EEOC and the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

EEOC currently is operating on a $366.5 million budget under a bill signed by President Obama in April that funds the federal government through Sept. 30, 2011, the end of fiscal 2011 (72 DLR A-16, 4/14/11). President Obama earlier this year proposed a $385.5 million budget for EEOC for fiscal 2012, which would be an increase of about $19 million from the agency's current funding level (30 DLR B-5, 2/14/11).

The civil rights commission would receive $8 million for fiscal 2012 under the House committee's bill, a drop from its current funding level of approximately $9.4 million. The president had requested $9.4 million for the civil rights commission for fiscal 2012.

House Panel Presses NLRB for Documents, Calling Boeing Case Disclosures Incomplete

Posted July 13, 2011, 3:15 P.M. ET

Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Calif.), chairman of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, told National Labor Relations Board Acting General Counsel Lafe E. Solomon in a July 12 letter that Solomon has not satisfied committee requests for documents concerning an unfair labor practice complaint against Boeing Co., and warned that the committee will... consider the use of “compulsory process” if the documents are not turned over to the panel within two weeks.

Solomon has submitted some documentation to the panel, which last month held a hearing in South Carolina on the controversial Boeing case, but the acting general counsel has resisted giving the committee other case-related documents. He told Issa in a June 29 letter that premature disclosure of information not yet released in the administrative proceeding “could seriously compromise the litigation and result in an unfair advantage to one litigant over another.”

Issa wrote that he appreciates Solomon’s concern for the due process rights of litigants but disagrees with NLRB’s assertion of various objections to disclosing documents related to the Boeing case. He set a July 26 deadline for NLRB to produce “the entirety of the documents requested” by the committee.

Claimants’ Employment Status Under FLSA, State Law Is Jury Question, Court Rules

Posted July 13, 2011, 5:08 P.M. ET

Whether three DirecTV Inc. satellite television technicians are employees or independent contractors under the Fair Labor Standards Act and Louisiana law is a jury question, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana has held (Lang v. DirecTV Inc., E.D. La., No. 10-1085, 7/12/11).

The court July 12 denied the summary judgment motion of DirecTV and one of its home service providers, JP&D Digital Satellite Systems Inc., on the prospective FLSA collective action alleging minimum wage, overtime, retaliation, and recordkeeping violations brought by Christian Lang, Larry Tucker, and E. Dwayne Humphrey. The court also refused to grant summary judgment to the companies on the technicians’ proposed class action for alleged violations of the Louisiana Wage Payment Act.

Responding to the companies’ argument that the technicians were independent contractors not covered by the federal and state statutes, the court decided that genuine issues of material fact exist regarding the level of control that the companies exerted over the technicians, the extent to which the companies controlled the technicians’ opportunities for profit, and the technicians’ ability to exercise initiative in their work.

The opinion was signed by Judge Sarah S. Vance.

Global Unions File OECD Complaint Against Deutsche Telekom for 'Union Busting’

Posted July 13, 2011, 5:23 P.M. ET

The Communications Workers of America, the UNI Global Union federation, and the German-based ver.di union have alleged that Deutsche Telekom AG, the parent company of T-Mobile USA, has violated the guidelines of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development through a campaign to undermine U.S. employees' efforts to join a union.
The complaint filed in Germany yesterday with the OECD alleges breaches of the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises by Deutsche Telekom through “management conduct designed to undermine and frustrate employees’ efforts to choose union representation freely and to deny employees their rights to collective bargaining.”

The unions urged OECD to resolve the issues and ensure the company allows all of its workers worldwide to participate in union activities. “We urge you to use your good offices to make Deutsche Telekom aware of its obligations under the OECD MNE Guidelines, encourage it to insist that its U.S. ... subsidiaries adhere to the same high level of corporate responsibility it exhibits in Germany, and urge it to reform their practices,” the three union organizations requested in the complaint.

To resolve the T-Mobile situation, CWA, ver.di, and UNI proposed that the German contact point investigate the extent to which Deutsche Telekom has abridged the rights of the freedom of association and collective bargaining in the United States, and if Deutsche Telekom is been found to have abridged those rights, the contact point should issue a statement detailing the specific violations and require Deutsche Telekom to communicate to all U.S. workers regarding freedom of association, explaining their rights to choose union membership. The unions also called for Deutsche Telekom to sign a global agreement with UNI Global Union that guarantees labor rights for its workers worldwide.

From a Congressional Quarterly reporter, in case this sheds any light on the amendment:

They say it: "Strengthen the existing protection in the National Labor relations Act of state right-to-work law to ensure that state laws cannot be pre-empted by union contracts or the NLRB. It provides necessary clarity to prevent the NLRB from moving forward in their case against Boeing or attempting a similar strategy against other companies. It updates the current law with the following:

Nothing in the Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor organizations and employers, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organizations, a condition of employment either before or after hiring."

Hi Lauren,

I realize I was mistaken. I'd gotten the idea that this was a national right to work bill from another reporter; it turns out that's not what this is. We're trying to figure out exactly what it would do.

Hey Nancy -- Thanks for helping me out with this. I really appreciate it!

For the daily story about Sens. Alexander and Graham’s right-to-work legislation, I'd love to get a comment on the ramifications of the language, both for labor and for the NLRB. Something similar to what we talked about over the phone: That this is an attempt to mandate all states adopt right-to-work policies. That this legislation is really nothing new and has been introduced by the GOP many times before.

To give you a better sense of what I'm looking into for my feature story: I'm writing about the natural oscillation of the board and it's pro-union vs. pro-business decisions depending on which party is controlling the White House. My argument is that the Boeing case provides ammunition to those that are trying to prove the NLRB has an activist agenda, but in reality, the NLRB under Obama is no more pro-union than it was pro-business under the previous Bush administration. The NLRB is also under much greater scrutiny on the whole due to the larger labor environment. I would love to get a comment about the natural progression of the board becoming politicized, and how it's historically seesawed between pro-union and pro-business decisions based on the administration.

Thanks so much and please let me know if you have any questions! I'm on my cell today: 617-633-0425

Best,
Lauren

A good case against Boeing

By Kate Bronfenbrenner

Business, politicians and the media have made much over the National Labor Relations Board’s complaint against Boeing, but the outrage has been misdirected. The board was right to bring the complaint, because the law is on its side, and such complaints are a step in the right direction.

These are strange times in U.S. labor relations, and they are getting stranger by day. The past two weeks have seen several important developments in the bizarre ongoing saga between the National Labor Relations Board and Boeing, which has become a cause célèbre for conservative politicians and pundits, even forming part of the discussion during the New Hampshire Republican presidential debate, with former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich calling for abolition of the labor board.

So what happened? First, after more than a year of construction, Boeing opened its new billion-dollar facility in North Charleston, S.C., which will act as a final assembly plant for the 787 Dreamliner, widely considered the future of commercial aviation. Then, the NLRB started its administrative law judge hearing that will decide the fate of the complaint issued by the acting general counsel, which accuses Boeing of breaking the law by moving work from a unionized plant in Washington state to a non-union plant in South Carolina in retaliation for strike action at the union plant.

Adding to the drama, South Carolina Sen. Lindsey Graham announced that he would block President Obama's nomination for secretary of Commerce — despite the nominee being a member of Boeing's board of directors — until the president states publicly that Boeing is an "ethical" corporation. Then Boeing refused a settlement offer from the machinists union that involved keeping the disputed work in South Carolina.

Congressional Republicans, meanwhile, called a hearing of the House Oversight Committee in Charleston to "discuss" the NLRB's actions. With considerable reluctance, Lafe Solomon, the acting general counsel who issued the complaint, testified at the hearing only after Republicans threatened to subpoena him if he refused to appear. Republicans accused the NLRB of waging "class" and "regional" warfare, attacked Solomon for "prosecutorial misconduct" and quizzed him about the case — a clear threat to due process. So much for Southern hospitality.

Conservative politicians and pundits have tried to make this dispute about anything other than the key question: Did Boeing violate the law? Fox News has run stories on South Carolina workers with headlines like: "What would you do if the government tried to kill your job?" But South Carolina is not the issue — the legal issues would be identical if Boeing had transferred the jobs to the moon.

The NLRB is not telling a private company where it can and cannot do business. Under U.S. law, Boeing has a right to transfer work from Washington to South Carolina for good reasons, bad reasons, or no reason at all. But it is not allowed to transfer work for discriminatory reasons — in this case, retaliation for Washington workers exercising their right to strike.

Boeing has claimed that the NLRB complaint takes out of context remarks on the motivation behind the transfer of work. The comments in question are about as clear as one could imagine. The "overriding factor" in the decision to locate the jobs in South Carolina, Boeing's EVP explained, was the need to avoid further work stoppages.
In its defense, Boeing states that, not only has it not cut jobs in Washington, but it actually has added new jobs. True, but these new jobs involve "rework" and "out of sequence work" needed to remedy ongoing problems in Boeing's complex and dysfunctional global supply chain. When the supply-chain problems are fixed, the jobs will disappear.

Boeing also states that the South Carolina jobs are new jobs, which will surprise the workers on the 'surge line" in Washington state who are doing final assembly work on the Dreamliner, and whose work will be wound down as the South Carolina plant becomes fully functional.

So what is this really about? Though they would never say so, it is about Republicans' visceral hatred of the current NLRB and the workplace rights it protects. Republicans have been looking for an issue with which to attack the NLRB since their sweeping election victories last November. Several previous attempts floundered, but Boeing has provided red meat for those who would like to destroy the last vestiges of workers' rights in America.

If Boeing reads the situation right, it will settle this dispute. Based on the evidence so far, it probably will lose based on the legal issues. But the Republicans who have used the Boeing dispute as a pretext to attack the NLRB will never settle. For them, there always will be another reason to attack the agency mandated with protecting the right to form unions. For it is that basic right on which they have really declared war.

Just got this message back from the top producer on CNN’s State of the Union. I sent him a copy of the fact check and explained a little more about our concerns. He may offer to do another show. We’ll see.

Dear Ms. Cleeland,
I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:
1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring/> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

From a Congressional Quarterly reporter, in case this sheds any light on the amendment:

They say it: "Strengthen the existing protection in the National Labor relations Act of state right-to-work law to ensure that state laws cannot be pre-empted by union contracts or the NLRB. It provides necessary clarity to prevent the NLRB from moving forward in their case against Boeing or attempting a similar strategy against other companies. It updates the current law with the following:

Nothing in the Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor organizations and employers, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organizations, a condition of employment either before or after hiring."

Hi Lauren,

I realize I was mistaken. I'd gotten the idea that this was a national right to work bill from another reporter; it turns out that's not what this is. We're trying to figure out exactly what it would do.

Hey Nancy -- Thanks for helping me out with this. I really appreciate it!

For the daily story about Sens. Alexander and Graham's right-to-work legislation, I'd love to get a comment on the ramifications of the language, both for labor and for the NLRB. Something similar to what we talked about over the phone: That this is an attempt to mandate all states adopt right-to-work policies. That this legislation is really nothing new and has been introduced by the GOP many times before.

To give you a better sense of what I'm looking into for my feature story: I'm writing about the natural oscillation of the board and it's pro-union vs. pro-business decisions depending on which party is controlling the White House. My argument is that the Boeing case provides ammunition to those that are trying to prove the NLRB has an activist agenda, but in reality, the NLRB under Obama is no more pro-union than it was pro-business under the previous Bush administration. The NLRB is also under much greater scrutiny on the whole due to the larger labor environment. I would love to get a comment about the natural progression of the board becoming politicized, and how it's historically seesawed between pro-union and pro-business decisions based on the administration.

Thanks so much and please let me know if you have any questions! I'm on my cell today: 617-633-0425

Best,
Lauren

Respondent The Boeing Company (“Boeing”), by their undersigned attorneys, for their Answer to the Complaint and Notice of Hearing (“Complaint”) filed by the Acting General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board (“NLRB”), states as follows:

GENERAL DENIAL

Except as otherwise expressly stated herein, Boeing denies each and every allegation contained in the Complaint, including, without limitation, any allegations contained in the preamble, headings, or subheadings of the Complaint, and Boeing specifically denies that it violated the National Labor Relations Act (“NLRA”) in any of the manners alleged in the Complaint or in any other manner. Pursuant to Section 102.20 of the Board’s rules, averments in the Complaint to which no responsive pleading is required shall be deemed as denied. Boeing expressly reserves the right to seek to amend and/or supplement its Answer as may be necessary.
DEFENSES

Without assuming any burden of proof, persuasion or production not otherwise legally assigned to it as to any element of the claims alleged in the Complaint, Boeing asserts the following defenses.

1. The Complaint and each purported claim for relief stated therein fail to allege facts sufficient to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

2. The statements cited in Paragraphs 6(a)-6(e) of the Complaint are protected statements under Section 8(c) of the NLRA and under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and are not admissible to show any violation of the NLRA.

3. Boeing’s decision to place the second 787 assembly line in North Charleston was based upon a number of varied factors, including a favorable business environment in South Carolina for manufacturing companies like Boeing; significant financial incentives from the State of South Carolina; achieving geographic diversity of its commercial airline operations; as well as to protect the stability of the 787’s global production system. In any event, even ascribing an intent to Boeing that it placed the second line in North Charleston so as to mitigate the harmful economic effects of an anticipated future strike would not be evidence that the decision to place the second assembly line in North Charleston was designed to retaliate against the IAM for past strikes. Nevertheless, Boeing would have made the same decisions with respect to the placement of the second assembly line in North Charleston even if it had not taken into consideration the damaging impact of future strikes on the production of 787s.

4. Even if the actions described in the Complaint had constituted movement or transfer of work, which allegations Boeing expressly denies, the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers District Lodge 751, affiliated with International Association
5. Boeing has not violated Section 8(a)(3) of the NLRA as it has not discriminated in the hire, wages, tenure, or terms or conditions of employment of any Unit member.

6. Boeing’s alleged conduct was not inherently destructive of employees’ rights under the NLRA because, inter alia, in its collective bargaining agreement with Boeing, the IAM expressly agreed that Boeing has the right to place work in any location of its choice without the need to bargain with the IAM, and because an intent to mitigate the adverse economic impact of an anticipated future strike is not inherently destructive of protected employee rights under the NLRA.

7. Boeing has not violated Section 8(a)(1) of the NLRA as it has not interfered with, restrained, or coerced employees represented by the IAM in the exercise of their rights protected by the NLRA.

8. The remedy requested in the Complaint is impermissibly punitive and would cause an undue hardship on Boeing, its employees, and the State of South Carolina. Moreover, none of the complained of actions caused any hardship on any Boeing employees or the State of Washington.

9. The remedy requested in Paragraph 13(a) of the Complaint is impermissibly retroactive because its legal basis represents a radical and not reasonably anticipated departure from current Board and court precedent.

10. The remedy requested in Paragraph 12 of the Complaint is improper because Boeing has not violated Section 8(a)(1) of the NLRA.
11. The remedy requested in Paragraph 13(a) of the Complaint is impermissible because it does not seek a restoration of the status quo.

12. Contrary to what the Complaint alleges in Paragraph 13(b), the remedy sought in Paragraph 13(b) would effectively cause Boeing to close its assembly facility in North Charleston, South Carolina.

13. Some or all of the claims asserted in the Complaint are barred by the six month statute of limitations set forth in Section 10(b) of the NLRA.

14. The Complaint is ultra vires because the Acting General Counsel of the NLRB did not lawfully hold the office of Acting General Counsel at the time he directed that the Complaint be filed.

RESPONSE TO SPECIFIC ALLEGATIONS OF THE COMPLAINT

AND NOW, incorporating the foregoing, Boeing states as follows in response to the specific allegations of the Complaint:

Preamble: Boeing denies the allegations contained in the preamble, except to admit that District Lodge 751, affiliated with the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers (“IAM”) has charged in case 19-CA-32431 that Boeing has engaged in certain unfair labor practices prohibited by the NLRA, and that the Acting General Counsel of the NLRB has issued this Complaint and Notice of Hearing based upon the IAM’s charge.

1. Boeing lacks information and knowledge sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations of Paragraph 1, except to admit that, on or around March 29, 2010, it received by regular mail a charge, designated as Case No. 19-CA-32431.

2. (a) Boeing admits the allegations of Paragraph 2(a).
(b) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 2(b), except to admit that in the last twelve months its business operations resulted in gross revenues in excess of $500,000.

(c) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 2(c), except to admit that during the last twelve months it received, shipped, sold and/or purchase goods at its facilities in the State of Washington valued in excess of $50,000 from places outside of the State of Washington.

(d) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 2(d), except to admit that it is and has been an employer engaged in commerce.

3. Boeing admits the allegations of Paragraph 3.

4. The first sentence of Paragraph 4 states legal conclusions for which no answer is required. As to the remaining allegations in Paragraph 4, Boeing admits that the identified individuals are or were either agents or supervisors, and that they held the following positions in October 2009:

- James (“Jim”) F. Albaugh: Executive Vice President, The Boeing Company; Chief Executive Officer, Boeing Commercial Airplanes
- Scott Carson: Executive Vice President, The Boeing Company; Chief Executive Officer, Boeing Commercial Airplanes (until August 2009)
- Raymond L. Conner: Vice President and General Manager of Supply Chain Management and Operations, Boeing Commercial Airplanes
- Scott Fancher: Vice President and General Manager, Boeing 787 Dreamliner Program, Boeing Commercial Airplanes
- Frederick C. Kiga: Vice President, State and Local Government Relations and Global Corporate Citizenship for the Northwest Region, Boeing Commercial Airplanes
• Douglas P. Kight: Vice President, Human Resources, Boeing Commercial Airplanes
• W. James (“Jim”) McNerney, Jr.: Chairman of the Board, President, and Chief Executive Officer, The Boeing Company
• James Proulx: Manager, Boeing Commercial Airplanes News and Media
• Patrick (“Pat”) Shanahan: Vice President and General Manager, Airplane Programs, Boeing Commercial Airplanes
• Eugene Woloshyn: Vice President, Labor Relations, The Boeing Company

5. (a) The allegations contained in Paragraph 5(a) state legal conclusions for which no response is required, but to the extent a response is required, Boeing admits that the production and maintenance employees in Washington State constituted a “Unit” for collective bargaining purposes.

(b) The allegations contained in Paragraph 5(b) state legal conclusions for which no response is required, but to the extent a response is required, Boeing admits that the production and maintenance employees in the Portland, Oregon area constitute a “Unit” for collective bargaining purposes.

(c) Boeing admits the allegations of Paragraph 5(c).

(d) Boeing admits the allegations of Paragraph 5(d).

6. Boeing denies the introductory sentence to Paragraph 6, and specifically denies that, it “removed” or “had removed work” from its facilities in Everett, Washington or Portland, Oregon because Unit employees had struck Boeing, and also specifically denies that it threatened or impliedly threatened that those facilities would lose additional work in the event of future Unit strikes. As to the lettered subparagraphs:
(a) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 6(a), except to admit that its President, Chairman and CEO James McNerney, participated in an earnings conference call on October 21, 2009; and Boeing specifically denies that Mr. McNerney made an “extended statement” or any statement about moving 787 Dreamliner work to South Carolina due to “strikes happening every three or four years in Puget Sound.” Boeing admits that the referenced newspaper articles appeared in The Seattle Post-Intelligencer and The Seattle Times.

(b) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 6(b), and further states that the referenced October 28, 2009 memorandum speaks for itself.

(c) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 6(c), except to admit that the referenced newspaper article appeared in The Seattle Times on December 7, 2009.

(d) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 6(d), except to admit that the referenced newspaper article appeared in The Puget Sound Business Journal on December 8, 2009.

(e) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 6(e), except to admit that a Seattle Times reporter conducted a video-taped interview of Mr. Albaugh and that the tape speaks for itself.

7.  (a) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 7(a), and specifically denies that it transferred the “second 787 Dreamliner” assembly line from its facility in Everett, Washington to a facility to be constructed in North Charleston, South Carolina, and except to state that on October 28, 2009, Boeing announced that it would place a new second assembly line for the 787
Dreamliner in North Charleston, South Carolina.

(b) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 7(b).

(c) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 7(c).
8. (a) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 8(a), and specifically denies that it transferred a sourcing supply program for the 787 Dreamliner assembly line from its facilities in Portland, Oregon to North Charleston, South Carolina.

   (b) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 8(b).

   (c) Boeing denies the allegations of Paragraph 8(c).

11. Boeing denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 11.

12. Paragraph 12 does not allege facts for which an answer is required, but relates the remedy sought by the Acting General Counsel and, accordingly, no response is required. However, to the extent that a response may be deemed to be necessary, Boeing denies that the Acting General Counsel is entitled to, or that the Board can order the remedy requested in Paragraph 12.

13. (a) Paragraph 13(a) does not allege facts for which an answer is required, but relates the remedy sought by the Acting General Counsel and, accordingly, no response is required. However, to the extent that a response may be deemed to be necessary, Boeing denies that the Acting General Counsel is entitled to the remedy, or that the Board can order the remedy requested in Paragraph 13(a).

   (b) Paragraph 13(b) does not allege facts for which an answer is required but merely describes what the Acting General Counsel says is not part of the remedy he is seeking. To the extent that a response may be deemed to be necessary, Boeing denies that the Acting General Counsel has correctly stated that the remedy sought in Paragraph 13(a) will not effectively cause Boeing’s assembly facility in North Charleston to shut down.
Boeing reserves the right to raise any additional defenses not asserted herein of which they may become aware through investigation, as may be appropriate at a later time.

William Gould, a Stanford University law professor who was appointed to head the NLRB by President Bill Clinton, has his doubts about this complaint. "It's perfectly reasonable for a company to want to avoid strikes," he told me.

In his view, the board's general counsel "is wrong when he says the company can't divert work from a union facility when it can't get a no-strike clause, so long as it offers some other means to resolve differences. I don't infer from that anti-union animus, which is prohibited."

outrageous, if he really said it!

Congressional Republicans meddle with NLRB case that involves Boeing

The NLRB is months, if not years, away from determining whether Boeing built a manufacturing plant in South Carolina to punish its unionized workers in Everett, Wash. But that hasn't halted the GOP's brazen campaign of interference.

Michael Hiltzik

June 26, 2011

In the quaint old days, even the most ravenous publicity hounds in Congress would hold off announcing a big investigation until they had something to investigate. As is shown by the furor enveloping a National Labor Relations Board case involving Boeing Co., those days are gone.

The NLRB is looking into whether Boeing chose to establish a manufacturing plant for its new 787 airliner in South Carolina to punish its unionized workers in Everett, Wash., which would be illegal. But the board is months, if not years, away from making any such determination or taking any concrete action against Boeing. An administrative law judge convened a hearing June 14, but thus far has heard not a single word of testimony.

Yet one would gather from the rhetoric that the case is shaking the republic to its foundations. A few weeks ago, Senate Republicans openly intimidated the NLRB's general counsel, a career public servant named Lafe Solomon, by threatening to kill the confirmation of his appointment.

Functioning as Boeing's full-time henchmen, they've interfered with the NLRB's work by flagrantly misrepresenting the nature of the case, its precedents and its legal underpinnings, and introducing special-interest legislation to protect the company from the board. Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Vista), who as chairman of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform is striving to make himself into that chamber's outstanding hot air machine, has already held a hearing on the matter. Its very objective-sounding title: "The NLRB's Holding Pattern on Free Enterprise."
And from your elected Democrats? Silence. To paraphrase a song from "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," they've bravely turned their tails and fled.

The issues in the case arose last year when Boeing decided to build three 787s a month outside Charleston, S.C. Its existing manufacturing facility in Everett would still build seven a month.

Boeing negotiated at length with the machinists union in Everett, seeking concessions, before it decided instead to expand in South Carolina. The union subsequently filed a complaint with the NLRB, alleging that Boeing acted to punish the Everett workers for exercising their legal rights to bargain collectively and to strike. NLRB counsel Solomon spent months trying to broker a settlement between the two sides. When that failed he went ahead and filed a complaint against Boeing on April 20, citing the union allegation.

Here's the fundamental law governing the case: Every business has the right to manufacture its products anywhere it wishes. But if it moves jobs in reprisal for workers exercising their legal rights, including the right to strike, that's against the law.

There's nothing doubtful about that principle or novel in its application. There's even a legal term for it: the "runaway shop" doctrine. The key Supreme Court precedent dates from 1965. Another important ruling was handed down in appellate court in 1967 by Warren Burger, whose conservative bona fides were established two years later when he was named chief justice of the U.S. by President Nixon.

Boeing has never made it a secret that among its goals in establishing the new manufacturing line was to keep it away from the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, which represents the Everett workers. During a conference call in 2009, Boeing Chairman and Chief Executive Jim McNerney observed that the "modest inefficiencies" associated with manufacturing in South Carolina would be "more than overcome" by avoiding the strikes that were occurring "every three or four years" in Washington state.

Boeing's general counsel, J. Michael Luttig, told a Senate committee in May that a 2008 machinists strike that shut down the 787 line for 58 days cost the company more than $1 billion and damaged its standing with customers and investors. He said Boeing was "legitimately concerned" about the possibility of further strikes.

Those statements appear to be admissions that the factory decision was aimed against the union. But Boeing also says it was motivated by the lavish incentives offered by South Carolina, which have been estimated at $900 million — more than the construction cost of the plant. Luttig mentioned the state's "exceptional business environment." That includes its "right-to-work" law, which prohibits union membership from being a condition of employment and raises other obstacles to union organizing.

The NLRB's task is to determine how these factors played into Boeing's decision and to fashion a remedy if it finds the company's real motivation was to punish union workers. Either the union or the company can appeal an adverse decision in court.

The process won't be short or easy, even without the GOP's hysterical posturing. Rep. Issa opened his hearing (staged in the South Carolina community that hosts the Boeing plant) by announcing that the NLRB case would have "disastrous consequences." His star witnesses against the NLRB included a corporate labor attorney, a local headhunter employed by Boeing, a local Boeing employee and Alan Wilson, the attorney general of South Carolina.

Wilson took a swipe at the union, claiming that its last strike "caused customers to question whether or not to buy from Boeing ever again." That's amusing, because Boeing claims that the 787 is the fastest-selling aircraft in history and that it has 850 orders in hand.
Boeing has also confessed that when the machinists struck in 2008 the 787 was already 15 months behind schedule — chiefly because the company had outsourced engineering and parts manufacturing around the world and failed to manage that process competently.

Among the problem locations were — hello — South Carolina, where a manufacturing subcontractor turned out such wretched work that Boeing had to take over the operation, at a cost of $1 billion. If customers have any doubts about Boeing, the reason is more likely management ineptitude than union activity.

Issa and his GOP colleagues maintain that the NLRB action is a union-inspired assault on "right-to-work" states and therefore on the working person's right to be free of union oppression. So it's proper to examine the effect of "right-to-work" laws.

There's no consistent evidence that "right-to-work" laws contribute materially to economic growth. The 22 "right-to-work" states generally rank among the poorest in the nation: The only two with average household incomes higher than the U.S. median are North Dakota and Wyoming, which have tiny workforces. South Carolina ranks 45th in median household income at $41,101.

There are indications, however, that business proprietors in those states keep more of their income, meaning that less of it trickles down to workers — a clue to why managements like Boeing's may be so enamored of the South Carolinas of the world.

This is, of course, the American malady — a race to the economic bottom in which decisions are made to benefit managers and shareholders at the expense of the workforce and, indeed, the product. The trend is certainly enabled by the decline of union representation, which has shrunk from more than 20% to less than 12% just since 1983, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. This is roughly the same period in which the middle class has lost its grip on the benefits of economic growth and productivity.

And this is the trend that "right-to-work" advocates and their water carriers in the GOP seek to perpetuate. One has to ask: Why aren't President Obama and congressional Democrats pushing back, hard, against this brazen campaign of interference with the legal deliberations of an independent government agency? Or are they content to stand by while the American worker is led further down the road to serfdom?

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:

1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring-> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Thanks again,

Nancy Cleeland

Dear Ms. Cleeland,
I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Dear Ms. Cleeland,
I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,
Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:
1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a 'Fact
Check' that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB's statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Thanks again,

Dear Ms. Cleeland,
I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:

1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen.
Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Thanks again,

Dear Ms. Cleeland,

I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:

1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring-> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. Here is a copy of the amendment:

They say it: “Strengthen the existing protection in the National Labor relations Act of state right-to-work law to ensure that state laws cannot be pre-empted by union contracts or the NLRB. It provides necessary clarity to prevent the NLRB from moving forward in their case against Boeing or attempting a similar strategy against other companies. It updates the current law with the following:
Nothing in the Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor organizations and employers, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organizations, a condition of employment either before or after hiring."

Hey Nancy -- Thanks for helping me out with this. I really appreciate it!

For the daily story about Sens. Alexander and Graham's right-to-work legislation, I'd love to get a comment on the ramifications of the language, both for labor and for the NLRB. Something similar to what we talked about over the phone: That this is an attempt to mandate all states adopt right-to-work policies. That this legislation is really nothing new and has been introduced by the GOP many times before.

To give you a better sense of what I'm looking into for my feature story: I'm writing about the natural oscillation of the board and it's pro-union vs. pro-business decisions depending on which party is controlling the White House. My argument is that the Boeing case provides ammunition to those that are trying to prove the NLRB has an activist agenda, but in reality, the NLRB under Obama is no more pro-union than it was pro-business under the previous Bush administration. The NLRB is also under much greater scrutiny on the whole due to the larger labor environment. I would love to get a comment about the natural progression of the board becoming politicized, and how it's historically seesawed between pro-union and pro-business decisions based on the administration.

Thanks so much and please let me know if you have any questions! I'm on my cell today: 617-633-0425

Best,
Lauren

Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon testifies at Oversight Committee field hearing in South Carolina

In his opening statement, Mr. Solomon said he would do his best to answer the questions of committee members while also protecting the due process rights of all parties in the ongoing case. “I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case,” he noted. “My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here.”

The Acting General Counsel also described the Agency’s investigative process, and his attempts to facilitate a settlement before the complaint was issued. He said, “The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations.”

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:
1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Thanks again,

Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said: Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring-> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.
Thanks again,

Dear Ms. Cleeland,

I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We'll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:

1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being "NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Here it is.
STATEMENT OF

LAFe E. SOLOMON
ACTING GENERAL COUNSEL

BEFORE THE

NORTH CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA
JUNE 17, 2011
Mr. Chairman and distinguished Members of the Subcommittee:

I appear before you today as the Acting General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, having been appointed to this position by President Obama on June 21, 2010. For the 38 years before my appointment, I have served as a career civil servant in many positions throughout the Agency, ranging from field examiner, staff attorney, supervisory attorney, and finally, as a member of the Senior Executive Service.

I would like to start by acknowledging that workers in North Charleston are feeling vulnerable and anxious because they are uncertain as to what impact any final decision may have on their employment with Boeing. These are difficult economic times, and I truly regret the anxiety this case has caused them and their families. The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations.

This complaint was issued only after the parties failed to informally resolve this dispute. I personally met with the parties and I tried for three months to facilitate a settlement of the case. I remain open to playing a constructive role in assisting the parties to settle this dispute without the costs and uncertainties associated with extended litigation. I believe that, given the parties’ longstanding bargaining relationship, a settlement would serve the interests of the parties and the workers and would promote industrial peace. In the absence of a mutually acceptable settlement, however, both Boeing and the Machinists Union have a legal right to present their evidence and arguments in a trial and to have those issues be decided by the Board and federal courts.

I would like to begin by describing briefly the relevant regulatory framework and the role of the Office of General Counsel within that framework. The National Labor Relations Act divides responsibility over private-sector labor relations between the National Labor Relations Board and the General Counsel of the Board. The Board adjudicates cases in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Act itself, the Administrative Procedures Act, and the Constitution. The Office of the General Counsel serves as a prosecutor of labor law violations in such cases.

The Office of the General Counsel was created by the Taft-Hartley Amendments of 1947. Under Section 3(d) of the amended Act, the General Counsel has “final authority”, on behalf of the Board, with respect to the investigation and prosecution of unfair labor practice complaints. In order to ensure that the newly-established General Counsel of the NLRB would have both the independence and resources necessary to make final, unreviewable decisions in typically heated labor and management controversies, Section 3(d) also provided that, with the exception of administrative law judges and legal assistants to Board members, General Counsel “shall exercise general supervision over all attorneys employed by the Board” and would have general supervision “over the officers and employees in the regional offices.” Like my predecessors, I have gone to great lengths to ensure that all unfair labor practice charges, which must be initiated by private parties, are fairly considered, relying on "findings, reasons, precedents, checks through appeals and through internal supervision, and procedural protections." See K. Davis, Discretionary Justice 207 (1969).

To that end, all charges filed with our regional offices are carefully and impartially investigated to determine whether there is reasonable cause to believe that, under the Board’s precedents, an unfair labor practice has been committed. Fairness to the parties and sound development of the law weighs in favor of presenting these types of cases to the Board for decision, subject to review by the courts. See Kenneth C. McGuiness, Effect of the Discretionary Power of the General Counsel on the Development of the Law, 29 Geo. Wash. L.Rev. 385, 397 (1960). I would not be fulfilling my responsibilities if I turned a blind eye to evidence that an unfair labor practice may have occurred. I took an oath to enforce the National Labor Relations Act and to protect workers from unlawful conduct.

The General Counsel’s concern with fairness to the parties does not end with the issuance of the complaint. The Supreme Court has recognized that the Act and the Board’s rules are designed to ensure that proceedings are conducted in a manner that respects the private rights of the charging party and the charged party. Automobile Workers v. Scofield, 382 U. S. 205, 217-221 (1965).
The Supreme Court has also recognized that “Congress intended to create an officer independent of the Board to handle prosecutions, not merely the filing of complaints.”

_NLRB v. United Food & Comm. Workers Un._, 484 U.S. 112, 127 (1987) (emphasis in original). Thus, throughout the proceeding, the General Counsel remains master of the complaint and the charging party is not permitted to pursue alternative theories of a violation without the consent of the General Counsel. _See, e.g., Teamsters, Local 282 (E.G. Clemente Contracting Corp.),_ 335 NLRB 1253, 1254 (2001). Throughout the proceedings, the General Counsel is responsible to ensure that the prosecution of the case is justified by the facts and law. As such, it remains open to the General Counsel to make concessions on issues of fact or law and to pursue settlement discussions with the charged party -- even over the objections of the charging party.

For all these reasons, the actual fairness of the proceedings before the Board -- and, equally important, the perception that the Board’s administrative processes are fair -- vitally depends on the public and the parties retaining the confidence that the General Counsel is carrying out his prosecutorial responsibilities on the basis of the facts and law in the case, and is not making decisions on the basis of political or other matters not properly before the Board.

As you know, the Boeing hearing began on Tuesday of this week before an administrative law judge in Seattle, Washington. I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case. My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here. I hope you will share my commitment that these proceedings not be construed as an effort by the Congress to exert pressure or attempt to influence my prosecutorial decisions in this case, which have been and will continue to be made based on the law and the merits and in a manner which protects the due process rights of the litigants.

I come here voluntarily out of respect for the oversight role of Congress. I will do my best to answer your questions, consistent with my obligations to the parties and to the American public with respect to the ongoing Boeing case. The adjudicatory process must be fair and impartial so that the parties’ due process rights, which are guaranteed by the Constitution, are preserved. Our American legal system of justice is guided by these fundamental principles.

LAFe E. SOLOMON
ACTING GENERAL COUNSEL

BEFORE THE

NORTH CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA
JUNE 17, 2011
Mr. Chairman and distinguished Members of the Committee:

I appear before you today as the Acting General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, having been appointed to this position by President Obama on June 21, 2010. For the 38 years before my appointment, I have served as a career civil servant in many positions throughout the Agency, ranging from field examiner, staff attorney, supervisory attorney, and finally, as a member of the Senior Executive Service.

I would like to start by acknowledging that workers in North Charleston are feeling vulnerable and anxious because they are uncertain as to what impact any final decision may have on their employment with Boeing. These are difficult economic times, and I truly regret the anxiety this case has caused them and their families. The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations.

This complaint was issued only after the parties failed to informally resolve this dispute. I personally met with the parties and I tried for three months to facilitate a settlement of the case. I remain open to playing a constructive role in assisting the parties to settle this dispute without the costs and uncertainties associated with extended litigation. I believe that, given the parties’ longstanding bargaining relationship, a settlement would serve the interests of the parties and the workers and would promote industrial peace. In the absence of a mutually acceptable settlement, however, both Boeing and the Machinists Union have a legal right to present their evidence and arguments in a trial and to have those issues be decided by the Board and federal courts.

I would like to begin by describing briefly the relevant regulatory framework and the role of the Office of General Counsel within that framework. The National Labor Relations Act divides responsibility over private-sector labor relations between the National Labor Relations Board and the General Counsel of the Board. The Board adjudicates cases in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Act itself, the Administrative Procedures Act, and the Constitution. The Office of the General Counsel serves as a prosecutor of labor law violations in such cases.

The Office of the General Counsel was created by the Taft-Hartley Amendments of 1947. Under Section 3(d) of the amended Act, the General Counsel has “final authority”, on behalf of the Board, with respect to the investigation and prosecution of unfair labor practice complaints. In order to ensure that the newly-established General Counsel of the NLRB would have both the independence and resources necessary to make final, unreviewable decisions in typically heated labor and management controversies, Section 3(d) also provided that, with the exception of administrative law judges and legal assistants to Board members, General Counsel “shall exercise general supervision over all attorneys employed by the Board” and would have general supervision “over the officers and employees in the regional offices.” Like my predecessors, I have gone to great lengths to ensure that all unfair labor practice charges, which must be initiated by private parties, are fairly considered, relying on "findings, reasons, precedents, checks through appeals and through internal supervision, and procedural protections.” See K. Davis, Discretionary Justice 207 (1969).

To that end, all charges filed with our regional offices are carefully and impartially investigated to determine whether there is reasonable cause to believe that, under the Board’s precedents, an unfair labor practice has been committed. Fairness to the parties and sound development of the law weighs in favor of presenting these types of cases to the Board for decision, subject to review by the courts. See Kenneth C. McGuinness, Effect of the Discretionary Power of the General Counsel on the Development of the Law, 29 Geo. Wash. L.Rev. 385, 397 (1960). I would not be fulfilling my responsibilities if I turned a blind eye to evidence that an unfair labor practice may have occurred. I took an oath to enforce the National Labor Relations Act and to protect workers from unlawful conduct.

The General Counsel’s concern with fairness to the parties does not end with the issuance of the complaint. The Supreme Court has recognized that the Act and the Board’s rules are designed to ensure that proceedings are conducted in a manner that respects the private rights of the charging party and the charged party. Automobile Workers v. Scofield, 382 U. S. 205, 217-221 (1965).
The Supreme Court has also recognized that “Congress intended to create an officer independent of the Board to handle prosecutions, not merely the filing of complaints.”

NLRB v. United Food & Comm. Workers Un., 484 U.S. 112, 127 (1987) (emphasis in original). Thus, throughout the proceeding, the General Counsel remains master of the complaint and the charging party is not permitted to pursue alternative theories of a violation without the consent of the General Counsel. See, e.g., Teamsters, Local 282 (E.G. Clemente Contracting Corp.), 335 NLRB 1253, 1254 (2001). Throughout the proceedings, the General Counsel is responsible to ensure that the prosecution of the case is justified by the facts and law. As such, it remains open to the General Counsel to make concessions on issues of fact or law and to pursue settlement discussions with the charged party -- even over the objections of the charging party.

For all these reasons, the actual fairness of the proceedings before the Board -- and, equally important, the perception that the Board’s administrative processes are fair -- vitally depends on the public and the parties retaining the confidence that the General Counsel is carrying out his prosecutorial responsibilities on the basis of the facts and law in the case, and is not making decisions on the basis of political or other matters not properly before the Board.

Mr. Chairman and distinguished Members of the Committee:

I appear before you today as the Acting General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, having been appointed to this position by President Obama on June 21, 2010. For the 38 years before my appointment, I have served as a career civil servant in many positions throughout the Agency, ranging from field examiner, staff attorney, supervisory attorney, and finally, as a member of the Senior Executive Service.

In the absence of a mutually acceptable settlement, however, both Boeing and the Machinists Union have a legal right to present their evidence and arguments in a trial and to have those issues be decided by the Board and federal courts.

I would like to begin by describing briefly the relevant regulatory framework and the role of the Office of General Counsel within that framework. The National Labor Relations Act divides responsibility over private-sector labor relations between the National Labor Relations Board and the General Counsel of the Board. The Board adjudicates cases in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Act itself, the Administrative Procedures Act, and the Constitution. For Boeing, the only two stories making the rounds were regarding yesterday’s order to grant limited intervenor status to three SC employees, and an ethics complaint that was filed against Sen Graham:

Response from the Machinists:

We see nothing in the President's comments that deviate from his previous position -- that it is a law enforcement action that will run its course in the courts. Any of his other statements reflect what we believe America's priorities should be -- creating jobs in America, following the law, and that workers and management need to work together to ensure America wins in global competitions. We want to thank President Obama for reminding corporations of the importance of having positive labor relations, which is what the Machinists Union strives for.

The President's comments reflect the value of American jobs and their significance to our economic recovery. The NLRB is not proposing that Boeing shut down its North Charleston operation. Boeing is free to recall thousands of jobs it has contracted overseas to fill Charleston and other American manufacturing sites to the brim. Today, more than 3200 union represented Everett employees are working on the 787. Not a single new American job will be created if Boeing is allowed to unlawfully transfer most of those jobs to South Carolina. Let's add jobs across America.

Democrats Miller, Cummings Call for Delay or Limits on House Panel's Boeing Hearing

Posted June 16, 2011, 5:52 P.M. ET

The ranking Democrats on two House committees told Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Calif.), chairman of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, in a letter today that Issa should either delay a June 17 hearing on the National Labor Relations Board complaint against Boeing Co. or instruct committee members to avoid questioning NLRB Acting General Counsel Lafe E. Solomon on the particulars of the cases, which is now being heard by an administrative law judge.

Rep. George Miller (D-Calif.), ranking member on the House Education and the Workforce Committee, and Elijah E. Cummings (D-Md.), ranking Democrat on the Oversight committee, said that Issa has disclosed plans to question Solomon about the pending case at the June 17 field hearing the committee will hold in North Charleston, S.C.

Miller and Cummings said Issa's plans for questioning Solomon about an active case involving private litigants "indicate a serious potential for improper interference” with the unfair labor practice case, and “a disturbing regard for what that interference could mean for the due process rights” of the parties involved.

The Oversight and Government Reform Committee has announced that the subject of the June 17 hearing is to be “Unionization Through Regulation: The NLRB's Holding Pattern on Free Enterprise,” but Issa has been pressing for several weeks to have Solomon appear at the hearing to discuss the unfair labor practice complaint against Boeing that was issued April 20 with Solomon's authorization.

A spokesman for Issa told BNA today that the committee chairman will respond to the letter from Miller and Cummings, but said their comments "largely mirror" arguments that Issa had already addressed in correspondence to Solomon.

Arbitrator Must Decide Arbitrability of Sheen's Claims, California Court Rules

LOS ANGELES—Actor Charlie Sheen's breach of contract and wrongful termination lawsuit filed against a producer and a studio after he was fired from the hit television sitcom Two and a Half Men must be submitted to an arbitrator to decide whether the dispute must be resolved through arbitration rather than in court, a California Superior Court judge ruled (Sheen v. Lorre, Cal. Super. Ct., No. SC111794, 6/15/11).

Judge Allan J. Goodman of the Los Angeles County Superior Court June 15 did hold that Sheen's Private Attorney General's Act (PAGA) claim is not subject to arbitration. But the judge stayed further court proceedings on the PAGA claim pending the arbitrator's decision on whether Sheen's nine other claims must be arbitrated.

Goodman's rulings came on Sheen's motion to stay arbitration; WB Studio Enterprises Inc.'s petition to compel submission of the arbitrability of the disputes to arbitration; and a petition to compel arbitration on the merits, brought by producer Chuck Lorre. Sheen asked the court to stay all proceedings before the arbitrator pending a court trial on his claims, which include breach of contract, retaliation, and violation of the California Fair Employment and Housing Act. Sheen filed suit in March.

House Republicans Revive NLRA Proposal to Eliminate Protection for Union 'Salting'

Posted June 16, 2011, 5:45 P.M. ET

Six Republican House members have introduced legislation (H.R. 2153) that would amend the National Labor Relations Act to eliminate protection for employees and job applicants who seek or obtain employment as part of a campaign to "salt" an employer's workforce with professional union organizers or other individuals who are really applying for jobs "in furtherance of other employment or agency status."

Rep. Steve King (R-Iowa) introduced the proposed Truth in Employment Act, which is identical to bills (H.R. 2808/S. 1227) that Republicans offered in June 2009 (112 DLR A-16, 6/15/09). The earlier proposals died in House and Senate committees.

The new House bill is co-sponsored by Reps. John J. Duncan (R-Tenn.), Dennis A. Ross (R-Fla.), Gary G. Miller (R-Calif.), Dan Burton (R-Ind.), and Lynn Jenkins (R-Kan.).

RWDSU, Macy's Reach Tentative Agreement Covering 4,000 Workers at New York Stores

Posted June 16, 2011, 4:27 P.M. ET

Macy's and Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union Local 1-S announced today they have reached a tentative five-year collective bargaining agreement covering more than 4,000 workers at four Macy's department stores in the New York City area.
Union members employed at Macy's flagship store in Manhattan's Herald Square will begin the ratification vote today, while members working at Macy's stores in Queens, Parkchester, and Westchester will vote June 20-22 on the proposed settlement praised by union leaders. The union negotiating committee is recommending that members vote to approve the proposal, a union spokesman told BNA.

“This is a solid contract and it reflects the fact that our workers are the true magic of Macy's,” Local 1-S President Ken Bordieri said in the union's announcement.

RWDSU President Stuart Appelbaum said the deal contains impressive gains for Macy's employees. “The workers at Macy's today are sending a clear message to working people throughout this country: when people join together in strong unions, they can fight back and win,” Appelbaum said in a statement. “While working people throughout this state and country have been under assault, the unionized workers at Macy's have been able to make impressive gains. It is a lesson that working people everywhere need to understand.”

ILO Adopts New Convention on Protection of Domestic Workers

GENEVA—Representatives from governments, labor unions, and employer groups attending the International Labor Organization’s annual general assembly meeting in Geneva voted today to adopt a new global convention on the protection of domestic workers.

The United States voted with a large majority of ILO member governments in approving the new convention and accompanying recommendations, the first international instrument of its kind aimed at improving the rights and protection of household workers. Swaziland was the only government voting against the convention, while the governments of the Czech Republic, El Salvador, Malaysia, Panama, Singapore, Sudan, Thailand, and the United Kingdom abstained from the vote.

Employer groups from 15 ILO member states voted against the convention, while labor unions from all ILO member states in attendance, with the exception of Egypt, voted in favor. Under the ILO’s “tripartite” system, each of the organization’s 183 member states is represented by two government delegates, one employer delegate, and one worker delegate.

ILO director-general Juan Somavia said there were at least 53 million domestic workers around the globe, with some estimates putting the figure at up to 100 million. The great majority of these workers are women, and many are migrant workers, he noted.

Among other things, the new convention offers guidance on limiting the practice of payment in kind to domestic workers, addresses food and accommodation for live-in workers, and calls on ILO member states to ensure reasonable hours of work and sufficient hours of rest, he said.

Congressional Republicans meddle with NLRB case that involves Boeing The NLRB is months, if not years, away from determining whether Boeing built a manufacturing plant in South Carolina to punish its unionized workers in Everett, Wash. But that hasn't halted the GOP's brazen campaign of interference.

In the quaint old days, even the most ravenous publicity hounds in Congress would hold off announcing a big investigation until they had something to investigate. As is shown by the furor enveloping a National Labor Relations Board case involving Boeing Co., those days are gone.

The NLRB is looking into whether Boeing chose to establish a manufacturing plant for its new 787 airliner in South Carolina to punish its unionized workers in Everett, Wash., which would be illegal. But the board is months, if not years, away from making any such determination or taking any concrete action against Boeing. An administrative law judge convened a hearing June 14, but thus far has heard not a single word of testimony.

Yet one would gather from the rhetoric that the case is shaking the republic to its foundations. A few weeks ago, Senate Republicans openly intimidated the NLRB's general counsel, a career public servant named Lafe Solomon, by threatening to kill the confirmation of his appointment.

Functioning as Boeing's full-time henchmen, they've interfered with the NLRB's work by flagrantly misrepresenting the nature of the case, its precedents and its legal underpinnings, and introducing special-interest legislation to protect the company from the board. Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Vista), who as chairman of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform is striving to make himself into that chamber's outstanding hot air machine, has already held a hearing on the matter. Its very objective-sounding title: "The NLRB's Holding Pattern on Free Enterprise."

And from your elected Democrats? Silence. To paraphrase a song from "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," they've bravely turned their tails and fled.

The issues in the case arose last year when Boeing decided to build three 787s a month outside Charleston, S.C. Its existing manufacturing facility in Everett would still build seven a month.

Boeing negotiated at length with the machinists union in Everett, seeking concessions, before it decided instead to expand in South Carolina. The union subsequently filed a complaint with the NLRB, alleging that Boeing acted to punish the Everett workers for exercising their legal rights to bargain collectively and to strike. NLRB counsel Solomon spent months trying to broker a settlement between the two sides. When that failed he went ahead and filed a complaint against Boeing on April 20, citing the union allegation.
Here's the fundamental law governing the case: Every business has the right to manufacture its products anywhere it wishes. But if it moves jobs in reprisal for workers exercising their legal rights, including the right to strike, that's against the law.

There's nothing doubtful about that principle or novel in its application. There's even a legal term for it: the "runaway shop" doctrine. The key Supreme Court precedent dates from 1965. Another important ruling was handed down in appellate court in 1967 by Warren Burger, whose conservative bona fides were established two years later when he was named chief justice of the U.S. by President Nixon.

Boeing has never made it a secret that among its goals in establishing the new manufacturing line was to keep it away from the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, which represents the Everett workers. During a conference call in 2009, Boeing Chairman and Chief Executive Jim McNerney observed that the "modest inefficiencies" associated with manufacturing in South Carolina would be "more than overcome" by avoiding the strikes that were occurring "every three or four years" in Washington state.

Boeing’s general counsel, J. Michael Luttig, told a Senate committee in May that a 2008 machinists strike that shut down the 787 line for 58 days cost the company more than $1 billion and damaged its standing with customers and investors. He said Boeing was "legitimately concerned" about the possibility of further strikes.

Those statements appear to be admissions that the factory decision was aimed against the union. But Boeing also says it was motivated by the lavish incentives offered by South Carolina, which have been estimated at $900 million — more than the construction cost of the plant. Luttig mentioned the state's "exceptional business environment." That includes its "right-to-work" law, which prohibits union membership from being a condition of employment and raises other obstacles to union organizing.

The NLRB's task is to determine how these factors played into Boeing's decision and to fashion a remedy if it finds the company's real motivation was to punish union workers. Either the union or the company can appeal an adverse decision in court.

The process won't be short or easy, even without the GOP's hysterical posturing. Rep. Issa opened his hearing (staged in the South Carolina community that hosts the Boeing plant) by announcing that the NLRB case would have "disastrous consequences." His star witnesses against the NLRB included a corporate labor attorney, a local headhunter employed by Boeing, a local Boeing employee and Alan Wilson, the attorney general of South Carolina.

Wilson took a swipe at the union, claiming that its last strike "caused customers to question whether or not to buy from Boeing ever again." That's amusing, because Boeing claims that the 787 is the fastest-selling aircraft in history and that it has 850 orders in hand.

Boeing has also confessed that when the machinists struck in 2008 the 787 was already 15 months behind schedule — chiefly because the company had outsourced engineering and parts manufacturing around the world and failed to manage that process competently.

Among the problem locations were — hello — South Carolina, where a manufacturing subcontractor turned out such wretched work that Boeing had to take over the operation, at a cost of $1 billion. If customers have any doubts about Boeing, the reason is more likely management ineptitude than union activity.

Issa and his GOP colleagues maintain that the NLRB action is a union-inspired assault on "right-to-work" states and therefore on the working person's right to be free of union oppression. So it's proper to examine the effect of "right-to-work" laws.
There's no consistent evidence that "right-to-work" laws contribute materially to economic growth. The 22 "right-to-work" states generally rank among the poorest in the nation: The only two with average household incomes higher than the U.S. median are North Dakota and Wyoming, which have tiny workforces. South Carolina ranks 45th in median household income at $41,101.

There are indications, however, that business proprietors in those states keep more of their income, meaning that less of it trickles down to workers — a clue to why managements like Boeing's may be so enamored of the South Carolinas of the world.

This is, of course, the American malady — a race to the economic bottom in which decisions are made to benefit managers and shareholders at the expense of the workforce or, indeed, the product. The trend is certainly enabled by the decline of union representation, which has shrunk from more than 20% to less than 12% just since 1983, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. This is roughly the same period in which the middle class has lost its grip on the benefits of economic growth and productivity.

And this is the trend that "right-to-work" advocates and their water carriers in the GOP seek to perpetuate. One has to ask: Why aren't President Obama and congressional Democrats pushing back, hard, against this brazen campaign of interference with the legal deliberations of an independent government agency? Or are they content to stand by while the American worker is led further down the road to serfdom?

Democrats Miller, Cummings Call for Delay or Limits on Boeing Hearing

The ranking Democrats on two House committees tell Rep. Issa (R-Calif.), chairman of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, that he should either delay a June 17 hearing on the National Labor Relations Board complaint against Boeing Co. or instruct committee members to avoid questioning the NLRB’s acting general counsel on the particulars of the case now being heard by an administrative law judge.

Reps. Miller (D-Calif.), ranking member on the House Education and the Workforce Committee, and Cummings (D-Md.), ranking Democrat on the Oversight committee, say Issa has disclosed plans to question Acting General Counsel Solomon about the pending case at the June 17 field hearing the committee will hold in North Charleston, S.C.

Miller and Cummings say Issa’s plans for questioning Solomon about an active case involving private litigants “indicate a serious potential for improper interference” with the unfair labor practice case, and “a disturbing disregard for what that interference could mean for the due process rights” of the parties involved. But an Issa spokesman says the committee chairman already has addressed Solomon’s concerns about the hearing.

House Republicans Revive Proposal to Cut Protection for ‘Salting’

Six Republican House members introduce legislation (H.R. 2153) that would amend the National Labor Relations Act to eliminate protection for employees and job applicants who seek or obtain employment as part of a campaign to “salt” an employer’s workforce with professional union organizers or other individuals who are really applying for jobs “in furtherance of other employment or agency status.”

Rep. King (R-Iowa) introduces the proposed Truth in Employment Act, which is identical to bills (H.R. 2808/S. 1227) that Republicans offered in June 2009. The earlier proposals died in House and Senate committees.

Stating that an “atmosphere of trust and civility” is essential in labor-management relationships, the proposed legislation asserts that “[t]he tactic of using professional union organizers and agents to infiltrate a targeted employer’s workplace, a practice commonly referred to as ‘salting’ has evolved into an aggressive form of harassment not contemplated when the National Labor Relations Act was enacted and threatens the balance of rights which is fundamental to our system of collective bargaining.”

Court Denies Meatpacker’s Bid to Dismiss EEOC Bias Suit

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission may proceed with a broad discrimination suit against the meatpacking firm JBS Swift & Co. on behalf of Somali Muslim workers even though the relevant union local is not a party to the suit, a federal district court in Colorado rules (EEOC v. JBS USA LLC d/b/a JBS Swift & Co., D. Colo., No. 10-cv-02103, 6/9/11).

EEOC sued JBS Swift last year, claiming the company violated Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act by discriminating against Somali Muslim workers in Greeley, Colo., and Grand Island, Neb. EEOC charged the company with national origin, religious, and race discrimination, and two groups of current and former Greeley employees intervened. JBS Swift urged the court to dismiss EEOC’s complaint because it does include United Food and Commercial Workers Local 7 as a party.

The UFCW local is not a “required” party because the court can afford the plaintiffs requested relief even in the union’s absence, Judge Brimmer decides. EEOC has not alleged any wrongdoing by the union and does not challenge the collective bargaining agreement, the court says. To the extent JBS Swift fears an unfair labor practice charge if the court orders it to unilaterally accommodate Somali Muslim workers, the court says any relief ordered would be within the parameters of the union contract. New York City Restaurant Chain to Pay $5.1 Million in Settlement

A sandwich restaurant chain based in New York City has agreed to pay $5.1 million in back wages, damages, and penalties to settle minimum wage and overtime violations, New York Gov. Cuomo (D) announces.

The settlement with the chain known as Lenny’s: The Ultimate Sandwich is the largest on record with the state labor department, Cuomo says. The previous record was a $2.3 million settlement with the owner of the Ollie’s chain of restaurants.

From 2002 to 2008, the state says, more than 800 employees at 11 Lenny’s locations were cheated out of millions of dollars. A state labor department investigation found employees were regularly paid below the minimum wage and were not paid overtime. Employees worked 10 to 12 hours a day, six to seven days a week, at an average weekly salary of $275 per week, and under state minimum wage and overtime law, employees should have been paid at least $500 per week for the hours worked, the state says. In addition, it charges, time records kept by the employer were not accurate and wage statements were not provided to workers, as required by law. A-11

RWDSU, Macy’s Reach Tentative Pact for 4,000 at New York Stores

Macy’s and Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union Local 1-S announce they have reached a tentative five-year collective bargaining agreement covering more than 4,000 workers at four Macy’s department stores in the New York City area.

Union members employed at Macy’s flagship store in Manhattan’s Herald Square begin the ratification vote, while members working at Macy’s stores in Queens, Parkchester, and Westchester will vote June 20-22 on the proposed settlement praised by union leaders. The union negotiating committee is recommending that members vote to approve the proposal, a union spokesman tells BNA.

“This is a solid contract and it reflects the fact that our workers are the true magic of Macy’s,” Local 1-S President Ken Bordieri says in the union’s announcement. RWDSU is withholding details of the tentative contract until members are briefed about it. A-8

Democrats Miller, Cummings Call for Delay Or Limits on House Panel’s Boeing Hearing

The ranking Democrats on two House committees June 16 told Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Calif.), chairman of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, that he should either delay a June 17 hearing on the National Labor Relations Board complaint against Boeing Co. or instruct committee members to avoid questioning NLRB’s acting general counsel on the particulars of the case now being heard by an administrative law judge.

Rep. George Miller (D-Calif.), ranking member on the House Education and the Workforce Committee, and Elijah E. Cummings (D-Md.), ranking Democrat on the Oversight committee, said that Issa has disclosed plans to question Acting General Counsel Lafe E. Solomon about the pending case at the June 17 field hearing the committee will hold in North Charleston, S.C.

Miller and Cummings said Issa’s plans for questioning Solomon about an active case involving private litigants “indicate a serious potential for improper interference” with the unfair labor practice case, and “a disturbing disregard for what that interference could mean for the due process rights” of the parties involved.

A spokesman for Issa told BNA in a June 16 e-mail that the committee chairman will respond to the letter from Miller and Cummings, but said their comments “largely mirror” arguments that Issa had already addressed in correspondence to Solomon.

Dispute Over June 17 Committee Hearing. The Oversight and Government Reform committee has announced that the subject of the June 17 hearing is “Unionization Through Regulation: The NLRB’s Holding Pattern on Free Enterprise.” But Issa has said the hearing will explore the decision to issue a complaint against Boeing, and he has been pressing for several weeks to have Solomon appear at the hearing to discuss the unfair labor practice complaint against Boeing that was issued April 20 with Solomon’s authorization.

The complaint alleges that Boeing unlawfully established a second assembly line for production of 787 Dreamliner aircraft at a nonunion plant in South Carolina in order to retaliate against workers in Washington state represented by International Association of Machinists District Lodge 751 who have in past years engaged in lawful strikes over contract disputes with the company (77 DLR AA-1, 4/21/11).

Solomon said that he would seek an administrative order requiring the company to add a second line for assembly of its 787 Dreamliner plane in Washington, utilizing supply lines maintained by IAM-represented workers in the Seattle area and Oregon.

An administrative law judge June 14 opened a hearing on the unfair labor practice allegations in Seattle.

The hearing is expected to last approximately six weeks, spread over a period of 2-3 months (114 DLR AA-1, 6/14/11)

The committee’s field hearing on June 17 is scheduled to take place in North Charleston, S.C., where Boeing’s nonunion facility is located.

Flurry of Letters Over Solomon Appearance. In a May 26 letter to Solomon, Issa told the acting general counsel “The Committee asks you to provide testimony about the NLRB’s action against Boeing and how its actions could impact the thousands of Boeing employees at a non-union worksite in South Carolina” (110 DLR A-1, 6/8/11).

Solomon responded in a June 3 letter that NLRB would provide public documents along with trial testimony and exhibits as they became available, but declined to appear at the hearing, stating his appearance could “threaten the rights of the parties to a fair trial” of the unfair labor practice allegations against Boeing.

Miller and Cummings said Issa’s plans for questioning Solomon about an active case involving private litigants “indicate a serious potential for improper interference” with the unfair labor practice case, and “a disturbing disregard for what that interference could mean for the due process rights” of the parties involved.

Issa replied on June 7 that the hearing would not intrude on Solomon’s decisionmaking process or legal strategy, but “will focus on how your actions against Boeing could impact the thousands of Boeing employees at a non-union worksite in South Carolina.” Issa asked Solomon to reconsider the chairman’s invitation to testify.

On June 10, Solomon wrote to Issa. Solomon noted that he had offered to provide a written statement to the committee as well as testimony by Associate General Counsel Richard A. Siegel, an agency official who was not a decisionmaker in the Boeing case but could explain NLRB’s general policies and procedures. Solomon said he would appear at the South Carolina hearing if Issa insisted, but said he “cannot and will not compromise the very legitimate interests that I have articulated in all of my communications to you.”

Issa Rejected Acting General Counsel’s Objections. Issa answered Solomon’s letter on June 14 and insisted on Solomon’s personal appearance at the hearing.
“As you know,” the committee chairman wrote to Solomon, “the NLRB is an agency that was created by Congress and is accountable to Congress. Further, taxpayers have a strong interest in how the NLRB is carrying out its legislative mandate under the NLRA.”

Addressing Solomon’s assertion that questioning him on the Boeing complaint could prejudice the rights of litigants, Issa said that the acting general counsel’s role in the litigation was not to act as a final agency decisionmaker on the merits of the unfair labor practice complaint against Boeing. Arguing that Solomon’s appearance would not affect the due process rights of the parties in the NLRB proceeding, Issa added that “to the extent that it may, such a claim is for the affected parties to raise, not the agency, in federal court after a decision has been rendered by the agency.”

Issa told Solomon that “the policy implications of your interpretation of the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA), coupled with the corresponding impact on jobs, are far too great for Congress to ignore.”

“As recognized by the Supreme Court,” Issa wrote, “the Committee is appropriately inquiring about your administration of an existing law.”

Miller, Cummings Express ‘Grave Concerns.’ Miller and Cummings said in their June 16 letter that they have “grave concerns” about the planned hearing.

Noting that the unfair labor practice case is now under way and is expected to go on for several months, the Democrats said that Solomon would likely be involved in decisions about the case, at least until NLRB attorneys complete their case against Boeing.

“Yet,” they wrote to Issa, “you have indicated that you plan to subject this decision-maker to questions about the active case at the hearing.”

The letter contended that Issa had pressed an “intrusive” demand for NLRB documents about the Boeing litigation and charged that the document demand and other statements by Issa “indicate that you have every intention at the upcoming hearing of pressing the very questions that put the due process rights of private parties in jeopardy.”

Miller and Cummings wrote that “There is still an opportunity for you to demonstrate some modicum of concern about the constitutional and ethical impact of what you are doing.”

Urging Issa “to be circumspect about the nature of the questions you and other Members pose to the chief prosecutor of this live case,” Miller and Cummings wrote “At a minimum, we ask that you direct Committee Members to limit all questions to Mr. Solomon to general questions about the NLRB and its processes, and not issues related to the ongoing proceeding before the Administrative Law Judge.”

In addition to Solomon, the committee has scheduled six witnesses to appear at the field hearing. Attorney Philip Miscimarra of Morgan, Lewis & Bockius in Chicago and Neil Whitman, president of Dunhill Staffing Systems in Charleston, S.C., are scheduled to appear on one panel with law professor Julius G. Getman of the University of Texas at Austin, and Cynthia Ramaker, a South Carolina Boeing worker and former union officer.

The committee is also to hear from South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley (R) and South Carolina Attorney General Alan Wilson.

House Republicans Revive NLRA Proposal To Eliminate Protection for Union ‘Salting’

Six Republican House members June 13 introduced legislation (H.R. 2153) that would amend the National Labor Relations Act to eliminate protection for employees and job applicants who seek or obtain employment as part of a campaign to “salt” an employer’s workforce with professional union organizers or other individuals who are really applying for jobs “in furtherance of other employment or agency status.”

Rep. Steve King (R-Iowa) introduced the proposed Truth in Employment Act, which is identical to bills (H.R. 2880/S. 1227) that Republicans offered in June 2009 (112 DLR A-16, 6/15/09). The earlier proposals died in House and Senate committees.

The new House bill is co-sponsored by Reps. John J. Duncan (R-Tenn.), Dennis A. Ross (R-Fla.), Gary G. Miller (R-Calif.), Dan Burton (R-Ind.), and Lynn Jenkins (R-Kan.).

Bill Proposes NLRA Amendment. Stating that an “atmosphere of trust and civility” is essential in labor-management relationships, the proposed legislation asserts that “[t]he tactic of using professional union organizers and agents to infiltrate a targeted employer’s workplace, a practice commonly referred to as ‘salting’ has evolved into an aggressive form of harassment not contemplated when the National Labor Relations Act was enacted and threatens the balance of rights which is fundamental to our system of collective bargaining.”

Stating that union organizers have sought employment with targeted employers in order to organize workers “or to inflict harm specifically designed to put non-union competitors out of business,” the bill provides that “an employer should have the right to expect job applicants to be primarily interested in utilizing the skills of the applicants to further the goals of the business of the employer.”

The legislation provides that a “balance of rights” of employers and employees should be required under federal labor law, and proposes adding a subsection to the existing NLRA Section 8(a), a provision that lists prohibited employer unfair labor practices.

H.R. 2153 would add to the NLRA provision:

“Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as requiring an employer to employ any person who seeks or has sought employment with the employer in furtherance of other employment or agency status.”

The bill has been referred to the House Committee on Education and the Workplace.

Text of the bill may be accessed at http://op.bna.com/dlrcases.nsf?Open=ldue-8hvq6g.

Three-Year Agreement Between FAA, NATCA Cost $669 Million More Than Previous Pact

A 2009 collective bargaining agreement between the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Air Traffic Controllers Association will cost FAA an estimated $669 million more than it would have cost to extend a 2006 agreement, according to a report issued June 16 by the Transportation Department’s Office of Inspector General.

While the OIG found FAA’s approach to developing the estimate to be reasonable, it said several provisions in the collective bargaining agreement could escalate the agency’s additional costs beyond $669 million before September 2012, when the current three-year agreement, ratified in September 2009 (184 DLR A-4, 9/25/09) is scheduled to expire.

“In developing its estimate, FAA assumed that the retirement rate of veteran controllers and overtime usage would be comparable to historical data. However, if either of these factors varies from FAA’s projections, the portion of the cost estimate related to controller pay and benefits could be impacted. For instance, FAA projected in its 2009 Controller Workforce Plan that 779 controllers would retire in fiscal year (FY) 2010. However, the actual number of controller retirements for FY 2010 was 468. As a result of the lower retirement rate, FAA personnel costs under the 2009 CBA were $14 million higher than it initially estimated for the first year of the contract,” the report said.

Provisions Could Boost Costs. Provisions in the 2009 contract also could escalate costs beyond FAA’s estimate, the report said.

For example, it said, the OIG in 2003, looking at a 1998 collective bargaining agreement between FAA and NATCA, found hundreds of negotiated memoranda of understanding (MOUs) that resulted in $23 million in overtime costs, $1.8 million in cash awards, $30 million in additional salary incentives, and 65,000 hours in time-off awards.

There are three areas where FAA’s internal controls currently are insufficient to prevent contract cost escalations, the report said.

“First, although FAA has a detailed policy for reviewing and approving MOUs before they can be implemented, we found that some local air traffic managers and regional managers do not strictly comply with the steps specified in the policy. Second, we found that the national MOU database, FAA’s primary tool for tracking all national, regional, and local MOUs, is not yet fully operational. Finally, FAA does not have adequate controls over union participation in workgroups,” it said.

Without sufficient internal controls covering these areas, FAA risks repeating the mistakes that contributed to some of the additional costs that occurred during the five-year term of the 1998 CBA, the report said.

The OIG recommended that FAA:

- update the contract cost estimate of the 2009 CBA annually to reflect any changes to the underlying assumptions and incorporate it into its annual budget request;
- expedite completion of an MOU database and enter all MOUs that were agreed to since the 2009 CBA was enacted;
- conduct an internal evaluation of its MOU policies and procedures to ensure that the guidelines incorporated in FAA Order 3710.18 are being followed; and
- implement formal policies and procedures to oversee the formation of controller workgroups, workgroup productivity, and the implementation of workgroup results and agreements.

FAA in Partial Agreement. In its response, which was included in the report, FAA fully concurred with the first three recommendations and partially concurred with the fourth.

“The Agency has met with NATCA to jointly address the appropriate and effective use of a collaborative process, including the use of workgroups. As a result of this process, the FAA and NATCA have formed a national Collaborative Work Group, and entered jointly into a formal program which requires managers and union representatives to receive structured training on the use of work groups as established in Article 48 of the parties’ CBA. This includes determining the appropriate need for workgroups, defining scope and authority, and establishing definitive measurable outcomes to be achieved,” FAA said in the report in response to the OIG’s recommendation on workgroups.

In addition, it said, FAA is working to track workgroup costs in cooperation with NATCA while also developing a formal labor strategy emphasizing the need for fiscal responsibility. “[W]e expect these measures to suffice without the need for additional formal policies and procedures,” FAA said.

Requested by Rep. Mica. The report was requested by Rep. John Mica (R-Fla.), chairman of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, who said he asked for the report because of what he said were significant cost overruns associated with the 1998 agreement between FAA and NATCA.

According to a statement from Mica, FAA’s initial cost estimate for the 1998 agreement was $200 million, but the agreement eventually required more than $1 billion in additional funds. These overruns spurred the request that the OIG issue this report now, while FAA has the opportunity to avoid repeating its earlier mistakes, he said.

“With this report, the FAA has been given fair warning that it must closely oversee the use of taxpayer money and put controls in place to avoid another $1 billion bill that we can ill afford. It is crucial that we do all we can to protect the American taxpayer and ensure that those cost overruns are not repeated with the current agreement,” Mica said.

ILO Adopts New Convention On Protection of Domestic Workers

GENEVA—Representatives from governments, labor unions, and employer groups attending the International Labor Organization’s annual general assembly meeting in Geneva voted June 16 to adopt a new global convention on the protection of domestic workers.

The United States voted with a large majority of ILO member governments in approving the new convention and accompanying recommendations, the first international instrument of its kind aimed at improving the rights and protection of household workers.

Swaziland was the only government voting against the convention, while the governments of the Czech Republic, El Salvador, Malaysia, Panama, Singapore, Sudan, Thailand, and the United Kingdom abstained from the vote.

Employer groups from 15 ILO member states voted against the convention, while labor unions from all ILO member states in attendance, with the exception of Egypt, voted in favor.

Under the ILO’s “tripartite” system, each of the organization’s 183 member states is represented by two government delegates, one employer delegate, and one worker delegate.

At Least 53 Million Domestic Workers. ILO director-general Juan Somavia said there were at least 53 million domestic workers around the globe, with some estimates putting the figure at up to 100 million. The great majority of these workers are women, and many are migrant workers, he noted.

Among other things, the new convention offers guidance on limiting the practice of payment in kind to domestic workers, addresses food and accommodation for live-in workers, and calls on ILO member states to ensure reasonable hours of work and sufficient hours of rest, he said.

“But above all, this convention states that domestic workers are workers,” Somavia declared. They are neither servants nor members of the family. This might sound obvious, but it is not.”

“Many domestic workers today are closer to being forced laborers than workers,” he added.

AFL-CIO’s Shuler Lauds Convention. AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Liz Shuler also welcomed the adoption of the convention.

“For far too long, domestic workers not only have faced widespread exploitation and abuse, they have been denied basic recognition as workers,” Shuler said. “This is an emotional and proud day for these workers, mainly women, who toil long, hard hours for meager wages.”

The ILO’s Manuela Tomei cautioned that the situation of domestic workers “won’t improve overnight” as a result of the adoption of the convention, and that a lot will depend on how national governments implement the agreement.

She noted that the convention contains “lots of flexible clauses” allowing for gradual implementation at the national level.
In fact, the convention gives national governments leeway to exclude categories of domestic workers from the agreement’s coverage, including workers where “special problems of a substantial nature arise.” Also excluded are workers who perform domestic work “only occasionally or sporadically.”

Provisions of Convention. Tomei however dismissed suggestions that the new convention was toothless, citing provisions to ensure that domestic workers are informed of their terms and conditions of employment (preferably through written contracts) and requiring governments to implement measures allowing labor inspectors (under strict conditions) to access households in order to verify compliance with domestic laws. She said these are provisions “which make a difference.”

Other specific provisions in the convention include a minimum of 24 consecutive hours of rest each week; allowing domestic workers to leave the home when not working; allowing domestic workers to keep travel and identity documents in their possession; ensuring domestic workers enjoy minimum wage coverage (where such coverage exists) and are paid directly in cash at regular intervals at least once a month; and ensuring effective access to courts, tribunals, or other dispute resolution procedures.

Tomei also said ILO members would not be starting from scratch, noting that a number of governments already have adopted regulations specifically aimed at protecting domestic workers.

“Indeed, many of the provisions that are contained in the convention are a reflection of what is already out there,” she said.

Tomei said she believed that the two national ratifications necessary to bring the convention into force would be achieved by the end of 2012.

Religious Discrimination

Fired Jehovah’s Witness May Not Proceed With Discrimination Claims, Court Determines

Michigan rehabilitation assistant and Jehovah’s Witness who was fired after missing two meetings scheduled on his days off failed to prove his religious accommodation and retaliation claims under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan ruled June 14 (Fields v. Rainbow Rehab. Ctr. Inc., E.D. Mich., No. 10-10079, 6/14/11).

Granting summary judgment to Rainbow Rehabilitation Center Inc., Judge Patrick J. Duggan found that the employer gave Leonardo Fields the options to trade shifts with co-workers and to schedule one-on-one meetings whenever he missed a training session or a monthly staff meeting scheduled for one of his requested days off. But Fields missed a training session after agreeing to attend it and failed to schedule a one-on-one meeting after missing a staff meeting, the court said. It found that Fields therefore failed to show that Rainbow fired him for failing to meet a job requirement that conflicted with his religious beliefs.

The court also granted summary judgment to Rainbow on Fields’s claim that the center retaliated against him for submitting an internal grievance by scheduling him for shifts and arranging meetings on days he requested not to work. Fields failed to show a causal link between his grievance and either allegedly retaliatory action, the court said.

Allowed to Take Multiple Days Off Each Week. Rainbow, which provides rehabilitation services to neurologically impaired people at a facility in Paint Creek, Mich., hired Fields in 1990 as a rehabilitation assistant responsible for patient care. About 1994, he requested that Rainbow not schedule him to work on Sundays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays to accommodate his religious beliefs and to allow him to care for his son. Fields had custody of his son on those three days each week. He asserted that Rainbow accommodated this request until June 2008.

After Rainbow suspended Fields for two days and gave him a final written warning for failing on Nov. 17, 2007, “to stay when mandated until appropriate staffing arrived and [leav­ing] the facility without permission,” he filed an internal grievance complaining that he was forced to stay beyond his scheduled shift multiple times because co-workers did not arrive on time to relieve him. A review board reduced his suspension to one day but kept the final written warning.

To address the problem of employees working beyond their shifts when replacements had not arrived, which incurred overtime costs for Rainbow, the center implemented a “fair share weekend” policy under which it required staff members to work a certain number of weekends. Fields was scheduled to work on Sunday, June 23, 2008, and on Sunday, July 6, as a result of the policy. But he swapped shifts with co-workers to avoid working on either date.

In August 2008, Fields met with his supervisor Julie Wigand and human resources director Tiffany Alexander regarding conflicts with his scheduling accommodation. Afterward, Rainbow never scheduled Fields to work on an accommodated day. In November 2008, the center approved his request to add Wednesdays as one of his accommodated days so he could go to Bible class.

Fields failed to attend a required cardiopulmonary resuscitation/first aid class on Jan. 13, 2009, a Tuesday that he and Wigand had jointly chosen for him to take the class. Fields explained that he had to stay with his son at school. As a result of the absence, Rainbow issued him a “last and final written warning with a suspension until you complete your recertification training requirements” on Jan. 19. Fields returned to work on Jan. 24 upon attending a training session.

On Jan. 27, 2009, a Thursday, Fields failed to attend a mandatory monthly staff meeting. Pursuant to Rainbow’s policy, a rehabilitation assistant who is unable to attend a training session or a staff meeting must inform a supervisor ahead of time and set up an alternative one-on-one session.

Rainbow fired Fields on Feb. 24, 2009, due to the staff meeting absence and his prior policy violations, including a December 2008 incident in which he did not properly supervise a patient and received a three-day suspension and a written warning. He proceeded to sue Rainbow, Wigand, and Alexander.
Conflict With Job Requirement Did Not Cause Firing. To show a prima facie case of religious discrimination, Fields needed to show he holds a sincere religious belief that conflicts with an employment requirement; he informed the employer about the conflicts; and he was discharged or disciplined for failing to comply with the conflicting employment requirement, the court said. It found that Rainbow did not dispute Fields's ability to satisfy the first and second elements.

Although Fields was disciplined for failing to attend a training session on one of his days off, he and Wigand had selected that date together, the court said. It found that Rainbow fired Fields after missing a staff meeting on an accommodated day because he failed to set up a one-on-one meeting with Wigand.

Pointing to Fields's ability to arrange one-on-one training as an alternative to attending meetings on his accommodated days, the court agreed with Rainbow that Fields did not make out a prima facie case of religious discrimination because he failed to show that the center fired him for noncompliance with a job requirement that clashed with his religious beliefs.

"However, even if Plaintiff established a prima facie case of discrimination, the evidence shows that Defendants in fact accommodated Plaintiff's religious beliefs throughout his employment by not scheduling him on the three and then four days each week that he sought off, allowing him to trade shifts when he was scheduled (whether intentionally or unintentionally) on one of his accommodation days, and permitting him to arrange a one-on-one meeting or training session when such meetings or sessions were scheduled on his accommodated days," the court said.

It would be unreasonable to expect an employer to schedule such staff meetings or training sessions around a single employee's accommodated days, especially when that employee can only work three days a week, the court said. It found that Rainbow provided Fields with reasonable alternatives to attending meetings or training sessions or simply working on his accommodated days by letting him arrange alternative meetings or training sessions and swap shifts with coworkers.

As to Fields's retaliation claim, he ultimately did not work either of the two Sunday shifts at issue after trading them with other employees, and he therefore was not subject to an adverse employment action, the court said. It found that Fields presented no evidence showing a causal connection between his internal grievance and Rainbow's scheduling either of the two shifts or of the staff meeting and the training session on his accommodated days.

Fields represented himself, pro se. Gregory M. Meinh of Foley & Mansfield in Ferndale, Mich., represented the defendants.

ASPPA, ICI Highlight Advantages Of Broader Use of Electronic Disclosure

Allowing defined contribution pension plans to provide plan disclosure and information in an electronic format would give participants easier access to the information in a more user-friendly format, according to a white paper released June 14 by the American Society of Pension Professionals and Actuaries, and the Investment Company Institute.

The paper, Delivering ERISA Disclosure for Defined Contribution Plans: Why the Time Has Come to Prefer Electronic Delivery, compares the effectiveness of electronic and paper delivery and makes the argument that "there are large and growing advantages of electronic over paper delivery."

ASPPA and ICI submitted the paper as a supplement to their comment letters responding to the Department of Labor's call for comments to determine whether to modify current rules governing the electronic distribution of employee benefit plan information (67 DLR A-5, 4/7/11).

Access to material delivered electronically has increased dramatically, and plan information provided this way can be accessed anywhere a plan participant can access the internet, the paper said. Electronic delivery also is cost-effective and environmentally friendly, the paper said.

Additionally, the paper said the Obama administration's policy in Executive Order 13563 "decisively supports a major shift toward electronic disclosure." The order called for federal agencies to detail which existing significant regulations they will review to identify whether the regulations can be made more effective or less burdensome (11 DLR A-9, 1/18/11).

"The arc of change is overwhelmingly in the direction of electronic rather than paper delivery," the two groups said. "Now that access to electronic disclosure is widespread, and access is actually better electronically in major respects, there is a compelling case for the next regulation to permit plans to choose a default rule of electronic delivery."

West Virginia Metal Plant Cited Over ‘Fine Metal’ Blast That Killed Three Workers

The Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration proposed more than $150,000 in penalties against AL Solutions Inc.'s West Virginia facility June 14 for a 2010 “fine metal” explosion that killed three workers.

The explosion occurred at the company's New Cumberland facility, which processes titanium and zirconium. The U.S. Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board is also investigating and has said it could have been a dust explosion, as both metals can autoignite at room temperature if their particle size is small enough (237 DLR A-12, 12/10/10).
The 18 citations alleged against the company include one willful violation under the general duty clause for maintaining a water suppression system that, when used in the presence of combustible metals, could actually result in an explosion. OSHA proposed a $70,000 fine for that citation.

“This tragedy could have been prevented,” David Michaels, assistant secretary of labor for occupational safety and health, said in a written statement. "It is imperative that employers take steps to eliminate hazards and provide a safe working environment.”

OSHA cited the company for 16 serious violations, including others under the general duty clause, for not maintaining a properly designed system for detecting hydrogen gas, failing to provide over-pressure protection, failing to provide personal protective equipment, and failing to safely store flammable metals.

The agency also issued one other-than-serious citation for failing to fill out an injury and illness report for an employee placed on restricted work duty for 64 days in 2009 after an injury in an unrelated incident.

Placed in Severe Violator Program. OSHA entered AL Solutions into the Severe Violators Enforcement Program as a result of the citations.

The program, begun in the spring of 2010, is intended to focus agency resources on employers that commit willful, repeat, or failure-to-abate violations involving a fatality or catastrophe; industry operations that expose workers to severe occupational hazards; exposure to highly hazardous chemicals; or “egregious” actions. The company declined to say whether it planned to challenge the citations, which it must do within 15 days.

"We are aware OSHA issued its report,” AL Solutions said in a written statement. “The accident is still under investigation and the company continues to fully cooperate with all investigators. We must defer comment until all investigations are complete.”

Particles Not Airborne. While some of the metal particles were small enough to be characterized as dusts, “OSHA findings were that the nature of the process was such that the metal was wet and not airborne,” Joanna Hawkins, a spokeswoman for OSHA Region III, told BNA in a June 15 e-mail. “The explosive component here in OSHA’s opinion was hydrogen.”

OSHA also recently initiated a national emphasis program aimed at the primary metals manufacturing industry that will focus, among other hazards, on metal dusts (107 DLR A-13, 6/3/11).

Furthermore, OSHA is continuing with its combustible dust rulemaking, the next step being the convening of a Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act panel. Among the questions OSHA will consider is whether to include metal dusts in its proposal.

Canada Contracts Negotiated in April Produced Average Wage Gain of 2.4 Percent

OTTAWA—Major collective bargaining agreements reached in Canada during April produced average base rate wage increases of 2.4 percent, more than double the 1.1 percent average in March, Human Resources and Skills Development Canada reported June 15.

The April figure also was larger than the averages of 2.1 percent in February, the 1.2 percent in January, the 1.3 percent average for the first quarter of 2011, and the 1.8 percent average for 2010 as a whole, the department said in the latest issue of its Workplace Bulletin publication.

“Wage adjustments in April ranged from a wage freeze in three agreements—Connor Bros., division of Clover Leaf Seafoods I.P. with 750 employees in New Brunswick; government of British Columbia, with 800 nurses; and the University of Victoria with 500 instructors and lecturers—to a high of 5.8 percent for the University of Windsor, with 950 teaching assistants,” HRSD Canada said.

The April figure was based on 37 agreements covering 90,180 employees. The last time parties to those settlements negotiated, the contracts had wage increases averaging 3.5 percent and durations averaging 36.4 months. The new agreements average 34.5 months in duration.

Private Sector Contracts Gain 2.0 Percent. Private sector agreements reached in April showed average annual wage increases of 2.0 percent, down from the 2.3 percent average in March and 2.2 percent in February, but matching the 2.0 percent in January. Private sector settlements had averaged 2.2 percent in first quarter 2011 and 2.1 percent in 2010 as a whole.

Public sector agreements, meanwhile, showed average annual wage increases of 2.8 percent in April, more than double the 1.0 percent average in March and larger than the averages for 2.1 percent in February, 1.2 percent in January, 1.2 percent in first quarter 2011, and 1.6 percent in 2010 as a whole.

The larger public sector figure was due largely to 12 agreements in the Alberta education sector, which provided 21,580 teachers across the province with wage gains of 4.5 percent; in the private sector, six construction agreements, also in Alberta, provided 33,350 employees with wage adjustments averaging 2.0 percent,” HRSD Canada said.

Settlements without cost-of-living adjustments in April showed average wage growth of 2.7 percent, up from 1.1 percent in March, 1.8 percent in February, 1.2 percent in January, 1.3 percent in first quarter 2011, and 1.8 percent for 2010 as a whole. Settlements with COLA provisions showed average annual wage increases of 2.0 percent, down from the 2.7 percent in March and the 3.0 percent in first quarter 2011. The gain for 2010 as a whole was 1.9 percent.

On a sectoral basis, the largest average annual wage increases in April were reported for primary industries (3.9 percent), followed by utilities (3.4 percent), transportation (3.2 percent), education, health, and social services (3.1 percent), finance and professional services (3.0 percent), construction (2.0 percent), public administration (1.5 percent), entertainment and hospitality (1.3 percent), wholesale and retail trade (1.2 percent), and manufacturing (0.0 percent).

On a regional basis, the largest average annual wage increases in April were reported for the federal jurisdiction (3.1 percent), followed by Alberta (3.0 percent), Ontario (2.0 percent), Quebec (1.9 percent), Manitoba (1.5 percent), British Columbia (1.3 percent), Nova Scotia (1.0 percent), and New Brunswick (0.0 percent). No settlements were reported for the remaining provinces or the territories.

Chicago Teachers Enter Negotiations After Losing Bargained Wage Increase

CHICAGO—The Board of Education of the Chicago Public Schools voted June 15 to rescind a previously bargained 4 percent wage increase for thousands of district employees, touching off a wave of accusations from unions representing teachers and educational support personnel and raising concerns about a possible strike later this year.

The board voted unanimously not to fund a 4 percent wage bump, scheduled to commence July 1, in a bid to trim $100 million from a massive budget deficit. The funds are desperately needed as CPS faces a projected $712 million shortfall heading into the upcoming school year. The board’s decision will affect most of CPS’s 40,000 employees, represented by seven different unions.

The wage increases were specified during the fifth and final year of the unions’ collective bargaining agreements with CPS. Three quarters of the affected workers are teachers, represented by Chicago Teachers Union (CTU) Local 1. The other unions representing CPS employees include: Local 73 of the Service Employees International Union; Local 143-143B of the International Union of Operating Engineers; Local 7 of the Fireman and Oilers; Local 1 of UNITE HERE; Local 726 of the State and Municipal Teachers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union; and Local 134 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Process Calls for Negotiations. Liz Brown, a spokeswoman for CTU, said June 16 the board’s action is required under a provision in the collective bargaining agreement if it believes it does not have reasonable resources to fund the increase. Formal rejection, however, triggers processes by which the affected unions can accept the denied compensation or enter into negotiations with CPS. Brown told BNA that the seven unions signed a letter June 15 expressing their desire to commence negotiations on the issue.

But Brown stressed that the process could escalate over the course of the summer. If the parties reach an impasse, she said, the unions could authorize a strike.

Teachers have not struck the nation’s third-largest school district since 1987.

CTU President Karen Lewis said she was “appalled” by the board’s decision to shirk its duties under the contract.

“We’ve kept our promise to them. But today the newly appointed Chicago Board of Education voted to break its promise to us and not fund our four percent raises for the next and final year of our contract,” Lewis said in a memorandum to her 30,000 members. “We plan to fight the refusal to honor commitments to teachers and school professionals who help educate our children.”

New Mayor Brings Tougher Stance. At multiple levels, the board’s decision signifies a new chapter in the labor-management relationship.

The vote came during the very first meeting of a completely reconstituted school board and responded to recommendations by CPS’s new Chief Executive Officer Jean-Claude Brizard. The new board and Brizard were handpicked by Mayor Rahm Emanuel (D), who took office one month ago. While former mayor Richard Daley was often willing to invest generously to achieve long stretches of labor peace, Emanuel campaigned on a platform stressing shared sacrifice and concessions from public employee unions.

In a statement, Emanuel commended the board for its “courage” in the face of a massive budget deficit that only will be partially solved with a freeze on wages. He said the school district would do its best in the coming weeks to ensure classroom resources are spared during the budget crisis.

“I want to thank the dedicated teachers and administrators who will make the sacrifice in the interest of improving our children’s education,” Emanuel said. “I look forward to working with them to give our children the tools they need to compete and win in the economy of the future.”

Brizard took issue with suggestions by Lewis and others that CPS is attempting to balance its budget on the backs of teachers. He said the school district faces an unprecedented crisis demanding shared sacrifice from all constituencies. Moreover, CPS stressed that 74 percent of teachers would continue to receive “step increases,” rewarding them for their years of service. Another 1 percent of teachers will collect increases compensating them for earning an advanced degree.

“I have the utmost respect and admiration for teachers and all that they do for our children,” Brizard said in a statement. “But today’s Board action was taken in response to the massive financial crisis facing our system. My team is now tasked with developing a balanced budget and presenting it to the Board and the public in August and our promise remains to minimize any impacts on the classroom and our kids.”

DOL Reviewing AFL-CIO Submission Alleging Violations of U.S.-Bahrain FTA

The Labor Department’s Office of Trade and Labor Affairs in a June 16 Federal Register notice said it has accepted for review an AFL-CIO submission alleging that Bahrain has violated its obligations in the U.S.-Bahrain Free Trade Agreement (76 Fed. Reg. 35,244).

The AFL-CIO filed the submission April 21, alleging that Bahrain violated Article 15.1.1 of the FTA by failing to fulfill its obligations and commitments under the International Labor Organization Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work and its follow-up on the rights of association and nondiscrimination against trade unionists.
“These allegations were supported by specific factual descriptions which, if substantiated, could demonstrate that the Government of Bahrain’s actions were inconsistent with its commitments under the Labor Chapter,” the agency said in the notice.

The FTA requires Bahrain to enforce domestic laws providing internationally recognized labor rights.

AFL-CIO Seeks U.S. Withdrawal From FTA. The AFL-CIO submission stated that, in light of the brutal repression in Bahrain of peaceful protest, the United States should serve notice of its withdrawal from the FTA.

“The U.S. simply should not provide preferential trade treatment to a country that has and continues to engage in well-documented widespread and serious violations of human rights, including labor rights of its citizens and residents,” the submission argued.

The AFL-CIO called on the U.S. government to immediately enter into consultations with Bahrain.

In May, U.S. Trade Representative Ron Kirk said the administration was taking the charges seriously. However, he added, “I don’t know that we would agree with the assessment that we go from A to Z in terms of saying that we’re going to pull out of the trade agreement.”

According to the notice, the affected trade unionists have tried to engage in dialogue with Bahrain’s government on the allegations contained in the AFL-CIO’s submission.

OTLA said its decision to accept the submission for review is not intended to indicate any determination on the validity of the allegations. The review will gather information so that OTLA can better understand and publicly report on the U.S. government’s views regarding whether Bahrain’s actions were consistent with the obligations set forth in the FTA’s labor chapter, the notice said.

The review will be completed and a public report is issued within 180 days unless circumstances require an extension of time, the notice said.

The U.S.-Bahrain FTA took effect in 2006 (228 DLR A-5, 11/28/06).

AFL-CIO Applauds OTLA Move. The AFL-CIO June 16 issued a statement applauding DOL’s decision to accept its complaint regarding the government of Bahrain’s failure to live up to its trade agreement commitments with respect to workers’ rights.

The statement said for two months, “the union movement around the world and in the United States has called on the government of Bahrain to halt its all-out attack on workers.” According to the statement, “in retaliation for peaceful protests and as part of the Bahraini government’s overall crackdown on dissent,” more than 1,700 workers have been summarily dismissed from their jobs, state-owned press and social media have been used to identify and threaten people who joined the demonstrations, union leaders have been threatened by members of the Bahraini parliament and some pro-reform activists have been arbitrarily detained, some have died in custody, and others are being tried by military courts.

“The egregious attacks on workers must end, and the Bahraini government’s systematic discrimination against and dismantling of unions must be reversed. These actions directly violate the letter and the spirit of the trade agreement,” AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka wrote. “Workers must be reinstated to their jobs and the elected union leadership must be allowed to function without fear of reprisals. Failure by the United States to intervene to support workers and their democratic institutions would make a mockery of the labor protections included in the free trade agreement.”

National Origin

EEOC National Origin, Race Case Results in $125,000 Settlement

RALEIGH, N.C.—Ricoh Americas Corp. has agreed to pay $125,000 to settle charges that three employees were subjected to harassment based on their national origin and race and were fired after they complained, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission announced June 15 (EEOC v. Ricoh Ams. Corp., M.D.N.C., No. 1:10-cv-743, settlement filed 6/15/11).

In addition to paying the compensatory damages and back pay to the three former employees, Ricoh, which denied all of EEOC’s allegations, will implement employee training, report to EEOC on any harassment complaints it receives, post its policy against harassment and provide compliance updates to the commission, according to the settlement filed in the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of North Carolina.

Ricoh Americas is based in West Caldwell, N.J., and sells and services copiers, printers, and fax machines, and provides related supplies.

Comments on Intelligence, Work Ethic. In its lawsuit, EEOC had alleged that James Nyema-Davies, a black Liberian, Anibal Melendez, a Puerto Rican, and Gustavo Tovar, a Colombian, were subjected to offensive national origin- and race-based harassment by their site manager at Ricoh’s site in Greensboro, N.C., in violation of Title VII of the 1984 Civil Rights Act.

The commission contended that the three employees were subjected to the offensive conduct on a daily or near-daily basis from June 2006 through October 2009.

The harassment included ongoing comments about the intelligence or work ethic of the employees’ national origin or their race, according to EEOC. The employees all complained to management about their treatment multiple times—Nyema-Davies also requested a transfer, which was denied—but the harassment continued, the commission said.

According to EEOC, the three employees were fired Nov. 2, 2009, shortly after making additional complaints about the harassment to Ricoh management.

Under the settlement agreement, Nyema-Davis and Melendez each will be paid $47,000 in compensatory damages and back pay, and Tovar will receive a total of $31,000. Ricoh also will remove any references to the EEOC’s charges and related events from their personnel files.

“Race and national origin harassment include racial or ethnic slurs or other expressions of dislike for different racial and ethnic backgrounds,” Lynette A. Barnes, regional attorney for EEOC’s office in Charlotte, N.C., said in a June 15 statement. “The EEOC is deeply committed to combating such harassment and holding em-
Retail Stores

Company Denies Allegations. Ricoh in a June 17 statement said it "has always been committed to ensuring that it treats all of its employees fairly and that it fosters a work environment free of harassment and discrimination, and where employees are able to raise concerns without the fear of retaliation."

"In relation to the Greensboro EEOC matter, Ricoh continues to deny the allegations contained in the Complaint," the company said. "However, consistent with our commitment to take allegations of this matter seriously, we entered into discussions with the EEOC early in the litigation in an effort to reach an amicable resolution."

It added: "It is important to note that the cornerstone of this settlement is Ricoh's continued commitment to on-going employee training. . . . Ricoh is an equal opportunity employer and remains committed to fostering a culture of diversity and inclusion."

RWDSU, Macy’s Reach Tentative Agreement Covering 4,000 Workers at New York Stores

Macy’s and Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union Local 1-S June 16 announced they have reached a tentative five-year collective bargaining agreement covering more than 4,000 workers at four Macy’s department stores in the New York City area.

Union members employed at Macy’s flagship store in Manhattan’s Herald Square will begin the ratification vote June 16, while members working at Macy’s stores in Queens, Parkchester, and Westchester will vote June 20-22 on the proposed settlement praised by union leaders. The union negotiating committee is recommending that members vote for ratification, a union spokesman told BNA.

"This is a solid contract and it reflects the fact that our workers are the true magic of Macy’s," Local 1-S President Ken Bordieri said June 16 in the union’s announcement.

RWDSU President Stuart Appelbaum June 16 said the deal contains impressive gains for Macy’s employees. "The workers at Macy’s today are sending a clear message to working people throughout this country: when people join together in strong unions, they can fight back and win," Appelbaum said in a statement.

"While working people throughout this state and country have been under assault, the unionized workers at Macy’s have been able to make impressive gains. It is a lesson that working people everywhere need to understand."

RWDSU is withholding details of the tentative contract until members are briefed about it.

"Following an all-night negotiating session, Macy’s is pleased to have reached a tentative agreement with Local 1-S of the RWDSU on a new five-year agreement," Macy’s spokeswoman Elina Kazan said June 16. "We look forward to a ratification of the agreement by our associates, and to serving our customers without interruption. This tentative agreement reflects tremendous efforts by company and union negotiators over the past several weeks to reach an agreement that addresses the economic and business realities of the retailing industry, while keeping jobs at Macy’s among the best in the department store industry."

Unanimous Strike Authorization. RWDSU members had voted unanimously at membership meetings June 6-9 to authorize the union executive board to call a strike if a new contract was not secured by midnight on June 15. The last strike by RWDSU Local 1-S at Macy’s was in 1972, according to a union spokesman.

The union and employer negotiated June 15 through-the-out the day and night, agreed to continue talks into the next day, and by 9 a.m. announced a tentative settlement had been reached.

Speaking June 8 before the deal was reached, Appelbaum said the main issues of contention during bargaining were wages, benefits, and work hours. "Clearly Macy’s is in a position to offer decent wages, benefits, and hours—which is all that the 4,000 workers we represent want. But the company is pushing back and saying it cannot afford to do this, despite paying its executives record high compensation."

According to the union, Macy’s had sought to make work shifts available on a first-come-first-served basis, not by seniority; to reduce paid time off; to eliminate retirement benefits under the defined benefit pension plan for new employees; and to raise the employee cost of health care.

RWDSU pointed out that Macy’s is in solid financial health, earning $847 million in profits in 2010, and that the company’s credit rating recently was upgraded.

Race Discrimination

No Bias in Union’s Refusal to Refer Worker In Hiring Hall, Tenth Circuit Determines

A black worker failed to show that race discrimination motivated his union’s failure to refer him for employment after it received "no-rehire" letters about him from employers, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit ruled June 7 (Powell v. Laborers Union #1271, 10th Cir., No. 10-8087, 6/7/11).

Affirming a district court’s grant of summary judgment for Laborers’ International Union Local 1271, the appeals court, in a decision written by Judge David M. Ebel, found that George Powell failed to show that the union’s actions were a pretext for race bias. The no-rehire letters presented by the union, it said, demonstrated a "legitimate justification" for not referring Powell to the employers.

Powell claimed that on several occasions the local had passed over his name on a hiring hall list under a collective bargaining agreement with companies using temporary labor. The union explained that it did so because it had received no-rehire letters from employers directing the union not to send Powell to their worksites because of work performance problems. Powell maintained that the union’s action stemmed from race dis-crimmination in violation of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Powell alleged that the union removed him from his position in the hiring list without questioning the legitimacy of the no-rehire letters. He contended that the union had vigorously opposed a no-rehire letter regarding a white laborer, but failed to investigate and challenge the letters regarding his own employment because of race bias.

In granting the union’s motion for summary judgment, the district court held that the “few isolated and fairly innocuous comments” Powell cited as direct evidence of discrimination did not demonstrate a genuine issue of fact. In addition, it ruled that Powell failed to create a triable issue of pretext with respect to the union’s legitimate justification for not referring him to employers that sent no-rehire letters.

Work Performance Problems. The union articulated and substantiated a justification for not referring Powell for work with P.S. Cook LLC, Gregory Piping Systems Inc., and Western Refractory Construction Inc., the court found. All three companies sent no-rehire letters requesting that Powell not be referred to their worksites because of problems associated with work performance, attendance, tardiness, and insubordination, it said.

Under the collective bargaining agreement, each employer is the judge of a union member’s qualification for work, and the letters regarding Powell left him ineligible for work with the three companies, the court observed. James Hansen, the local’s business manager, testified that Powell’s situation was unusual, in that it was uncommon for a worker to have even one such letter in his file. The combination of the collective bargaining agreement and the no-rehire letters established a legitimate, racially neutral basis for the union’s action, the court found.

Powell insisted that the no-rehire letter from P.S. Cook, which complained that he had worked only seven hours in a three-day period of 12-hour shifts overstated the nonattendance issue, in that only it had been a two-day period, some other laborers worked only eight-hour shifts, and he had asked the foreman for time off to attend to personal matters.

Employer Perception Controls. This line of argument was a “non-starter,” the court found, because it is a “commonplace” in employment law that the employer’s perception of employee performance controls the pretext inquiry, and can justify termination even if mistaken. Even if the no-rehire letters were groundless—which was not shown here—Powell offered no evidence to prove that the union would have known that, the court found. The three separate no-rehire letters would have been mutually corroborative as to the unsatisfactory nature of Powell’s work performance, it added.

Powell contended that union efforts to contest a no-rehire request received for a white member demonstrated that its capitulation in his own case was racially biased. It was undisputed, however, that business manager Hansen contacted the company that sent Powell’s first no-rehire letter, to attempt to persuade it to allow him to return to work, the court observed. While Hansen’s attempt was unsuccessful, it was the union’s effort, not the employer’s response, that was material, the court determined. And although it did not appear that Hansen opposed the two subsequent no-rehire letters for Powell, there also was no evidence that the union opposed successive no-rehire letters for the white employee or anyone else, the court said. Powell therefore was left without a similarly situated comparator necessary to make out a case for disparate treatment by the union, the court ruled.

Powell argued that racial comments by some employers, including Larry Gregory of Gregory Piping Systems, and Hansen’s reaction to the comments, raised an issue of discriminatory animus behind the union’s actions.

The comments were, however, of very limited significance given that it was the union’s racial bias that was relevant, not that of third parties, the appeals court found. Two of the instances were remote in time, it said, occurring three years before the events giving rise to the lawsuit. In addition, the court found, there was no evidence that Powell himself ever complained to Hansen about the incidents.

The incident that was the least indicative of racial animus, the court said, involved Gregory Piping Systems. Larry Gregory removed Powell from a worksite and sent a no-rehire letter to the union after Powell left a $40,000 Bobcat vehicle running in the field, and later was not working when Gregory felt he was supposed to be working, the court noted.

No Bias Found. Gregory characterized these legitimate criticisms as “acting black on me,” the court observed. While this comment was inappropriate, Gregory had legitimate grounds for the no-rehire request, which was honored by Hansen in accordance with the collective bargaining agreement, it ruled.

The court dismissed Powell’s “underdeveloped” argument that the no-rehire letters “seemed to be prepared” by the union, not by the employers. This argument was not adequate, either factually or legally, the court said.

The court also found Powell’s passing criticism of the union for its delay in telling him of the no-rehire letters insufficient to require further discussion.

Judges Scott M. Matheson Jr. and Senior Judge Monroe G. McKay joined the opinion.

Solis, Ambassadors Sign Pacts to Protect Workers From Guatemala and Nicaragua

Labor Secretary Hilda Solis and the ambassadors from Guatemala and Nicaragua June 16 signed declarations intended to help the Labor Department protect the rights of Guatemalan and Nicaraguan citizens who work in the United States.

The heads of DOL’s Wage and Hour Division and its Occupational Safety and Health Administration also signed letters of arrangement with the embassies from the two countries.
“Individuals from Guatemala and Nicaragua make important contributions to the U.S. economy, and their workplace rights should be protected,” Solis said. The Labor Department is “committed to ensuring they’re safe on the job and fully and fairly compensated for their hard work,” she said.

The declarations will enable the regional enforcement offices of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Wage and Hour Division to cooperate with local Guatemalan and Nicaraguan embassies and consulates to identify vulnerable workers and distribute information to migrant workers about U.S. health, safety, and wage laws. Training also will be provided to both migrant workers and their employers.

Speaking in both English and Spanish, Solis, whose mother grew up in Nicaragua, said, “No matter how they came to this country, these workers have certain rights,” including a safe workplace and a minimum wage.

DOL already has signed similar agreements with the Mexican and Salvadoran embassies (86 DLR A-16, 5/6/10, 55 DLR A-6, 3/22/11).

Workers will be able to get information or report complaints at toll-free, confidential DOL hotlines that will be open day and night and be staffed by employees who speak Spanish as well as English.

Arbitrator Must Decide Arbitrability Of Sheen’s Claims, California Court Rules

LOS ANGELES—Actor Charlie Sheen’s breach of contract and wrongful termination lawsuit filed against a producer and a studio after he was fired from the hit television sitcom Two and a Half Men must be submitted to an arbitrator to decide whether the dispute must be resolved through arbitration rather than in court, a California Superior Court judge ruled June 15 (Sheen v. Lorre, Cal. Super. Ct., No. SC111794, 6/15/11).

Judge Allan J. Goodman of the Los Angeles County Superior Court did hold that Sheen’s Private Attorney General’s Act (PAGA) claim is not subject to arbitration. But the judge stayed further court proceedings on the PAGA claim pending the arbitrator’s decision on whether Sheen’s nine other claims must be arbitrated. Goodman acknowledged that courts have differed in their interpretation of whether even clearly written arbitration clauses require referral of the arbitrability question to arbitrators, or to courts, which he ascribed to a preference, “particularly in state courts, for open court proceedings, enforcing the state’s Constitutional right to trial by jury, and for the clear and well-understood and public procedures of trial and appeal.”

But Goodman decided that the parties to the Sheen-WB contract, and the identically worded Lorre-WB contract “intended to submit to the Arbitrator for determination the matters defined as Disputes by this carefully worded text, including the matter of arbitrability and all defenses related thereto.”

PAGA Claim Definitely Not Arbitrable. On Sheen’s PAGA claim, however, Goodman found no basis to refer it to the arbitrator. That particular cause of action seeks a remedy not belonging to any individual, but rather to the state’s Labor and Workforce Agency (LWA), which did not execute the arbitration clause at issue, the judge said.

“PAGA suits seek penalties for violations of state law,” Goodman wrote. “That a PAGA claim may be enforced in an action brought by an individual standing in for the under-staffed LWA . . . does not convert it into a private claim,” he said, concluding that such enforcement actions are exempt from the preemptive provision of the FAA that otherwise might prohibit such lawsuits.

Nevertheless, Goodman granted WB and Lorre’s request to stay trial court proceedings on the PAGA claim, pending conclusion of the proceedings before the arbitrator.

WB, in a statement e-mailed to BNA, said: “We’re very gratified by the court’s ruling enforcing the parties’ arbitration agreement.”
Howard Weitzman, an attorney for Lorre, said in an e-mail: “The court made the appropriate ruling in denying Mr. Sheen’s request to stay the arbitration in referring his lawsuit against Warner Bros. and Chuck Lorre to arbitration as his contract calls for. This matter will now proceed in an orderly fashion as the parties agreed to.”

Sheen’s lawyer, Martin D. Singer of Lavelle & Singer in Los Angeles, did not return a call seeking comment on the rulings.

New York City Restaurant Chain to Pay $5.1 Million in Record State Settlement

New York City—A sandwich restaurant chain based in New York City has agreed to pay $5.1 million in back wages, damages, and penalties to settle state minimum wage and overtime violations, New York Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo (D) announced June 14.

The settlement with the chain known as Lenny’s: The Ultimate Sandwich is the largest on record with the owner of the Ollie’s chain of nine Asian restaurants in the city (52 employees were regularly paid below the minimum wage for the hours worked, the state said. In addition, it charged, time records kept by the employer were not accurate and wage statements were not provided to employees at 11 Lenny’s locations were cheated out of millions of dollars.

A state labor department investigation found that employees were regularly paid below the minimum wage and were not paid overtime wages. Employees worked 10 to 12 hours a day, six to seven days a week, at an average weekly salary of $275 per week, the state said.

Under state minimum wage and overtime law, employees should have been paid at least $500 per week. The state said the company “has worked closely with the investigators” and “is now, and has been for some time, fully compliant” with DOL regulations.

Mandatory E-Verify Legislation Unlikely To Clear Senate, Become Law, Opponents Say

Opponents of legislation (H.R. 2164) that would mandate use of the federal government’s employment verification system, E-Verify, are confident the bill will not become law, officials with the Service Employees International Union said June 16.

Eliseo Medina, SEIU international secretary-treasurer, and Mitch Ackerman, SEIU international executive vice president, held a teleconference to criticize the bill, which was introduced June 14 by House Judiciary Committee Chairman Lamar Smith (R-Texas) (114 DLR A-15, 6/14/11).

“It’s a bad, bad idea that Smith had,” Medina said. “It’s bad for the economy, it’s bad for business, it’s bad for immigrants, and it’s bad for all of society.” Separately, the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) sent Smith a letter June 15 supporting the legislation.

The proposed Legal Workforce Act would require public and private sector employers to use the currently voluntary E-Verify system, which allows Social Security numbers of new hires to be checked against Social Security Administration and Homeland Security Department databases. The requirement would be phased in over three years based on the number of an employer’s employees.

Medina said the requirement will be costly and burdensome for small businesses, Ackerman said. He asserted that contractors are prone to abuse of workers by paying them below the minimum wage.

Medina said farm operations already face a shortage of workers to do menial labor such as picking tomatoes.

“People show up the day the job starts,” Medina said. “Owners do not have time to check [for verification]. Every day the owner has to wait, he is going to lose a lot of money.”

In addition, Ackerman said, the E-Verify databases are “very much inaccurate.”

The error rate is between 2 percent and 3 percent, but “when you talk about millions of people, that’s a lot of people,” Medina said. She asserted that some 80,000 undocumented workers were fired as a result of verification last year.

Boehner Has Not Taken Position. While the legislation is expected to be marked up and approved by the Judiciary Committee in the near future, House Speaker John Boehner (R-Ohio) has yet to take a position on the bill. With his support, House passage would be a gone conclusion.
‘It’s an uphill battle in the House, but we’re going to give them a run for their money,’ Medina said.

The committee held a hearing on the legislation June 15 (115 DLR A-14, 6/15/11).

However, the legislation is expected to be dead in the water in the Senate, where Democrats have maintained control. “We’re confident we can stop it in the Senate,” Medina said.

SHRM Thanks Smith. Meanwhile, in its letter, SHRM thanked Smith for introducing the legislation.

Henry Jackson, SHRM interim president and chief executive officer, said that human resource professionals “are on the front lines of employment verification and are fully committed to only hiring work-authorized individuals.”

“We also recognize, however, that the current employment verification system is in need of real reform,” Jackson said. “The patchworks of state and local verification laws are unworkable and creating a confusing set of legal requirements for American employers and employees.”

The legislation would preempt any state laws dealing with E-Verify.

“There is also ample evidence that the employment verification system is prone to fraud, forgeries and identity theft, making it difficult, if not impossible, for an employer to differentate between the legal and illegal worker,” Jackson said.

The bill includes a provision creating a biometric pilot program with the aim of cracking down on fraud in the system. Supporters of the bill argue that a mandatory E-Verify system would open up millions of jobs for U.S. workers.

UNITE HERE Launches Boycott in Hawaii At Hyatt Regency Waikiki as Bargaining Lags

«UNITE HERE Local 5 is set to launch June 17 a consumer boycott of the Hyatt Regency Waikiki in Honolulu where the union represents 500 employees whose collective bargaining agreement expired nearly one year ago, the union announced June 16.

Local 5 has been in sporadic labor negotiations with the Hyatt Regency Waikiki since the contract expired June 30, 2010, union spokesman Cade Watanabe said. The union and employer last engaged in bargaining for two days in early May but prior to that had not met since fall 2010, he said. The parties are scheduled to hold negotiations June 27-28.

Union-represented workers at the Hyatt Regency Waikiki “are fighting to defend and maintain their union contract standard that includes putting an end to subcontracting and providing safe working conditions for workers,” Local 5 said.

The union represents almost all nonmanagement workers at the hotel.

By an 89 percent majority of those who voted, Local 5 members June 8 approved authorization for union leaders to call for customers to refuse to book rooms, hold events, or spend money at the Hyatt on the island of Oahu. The consumer boycott will be the first since 2006 that Local 5 has launched against a major Oahu hotel, according to the union.

After the contract expired in June 2010, UNITE HERE has conducted a number of demonstrations outside the Hyatt Regency Waikiki to draw attention to its fight for a new contract. Workers participated in a civil disobedience action in July 2010 (138 DLR A-13, 7/20/10), a one-day strike in September 2010 (170 DLR A-17, 9/2/10), and numerous informational pickets and rallies.

The union intends to send letters to travel groups to communicate about the labor dispute, Watanabe said. UNITE HERE also is working to educate the local community about the importance to the Honolulu economy of keeping well-paying jobs and opportunities in the tourism industry. And union retirees will continue to demonstrate outside the hotel in leafleting action in support of the employees.

Subcontracting Is Major Issue. Employer subcontracting of union jobs is the biggest issue preventing the parties from reaching labor agreement, according to Watanabe. The union is seeking to stop subcontracting of night cleaning workers, accounting and finance department workers, food and beverage concession stand employees, and maintenance and engineering workers, he said.

Watanabe said the situation is particularly acute at the Hyatt Regency Waikiki, a property owned by the Goldman Sachs Group Inc. At other large hotels, Local 5 has been able to ensure that subcontracted work maintains union standards followed elsewhere in the hotel, he said. In contrast, Hyatt pays subcontracted workers who clean public areas and kitchens at night about half of the union wages of about $18 per hour paid at the hotel.

“Our basic position is that we will not allow the Hyatt Regency Waikiki to pay poverty wages in our community,” Watanabe said.

In the labor agreement Local 5 reached with Hilton Hawaiian Village Beach Resort & Spa on Waikiki Beach in Honolulu earlier this year (46 DLR A-11, 3/9/11), about 75 cleaning and food and beverage positions at the Hawaiian Village currently performed by subcontracted workers will be returned in-house to the bargaining unit by March 1, 2013.

UNITE HERE members ratified contracts with Hilton and Starwood (54 DLR A-2, 3/21/11) hotels in Honolulu in March covering about 1,500 workers and 2,800 workers, respectively, but the union has not reached agreement yet with Hyatt Hotels Corp., Marriott International Inc., and several smaller hotel properties.

Watanabe said although union and Hyatt negotiating teams have not yet reached agreement about wages and benefits, the union is confident it will be able to maintain the standards set in bargaining with Hilton and Starwood.

UNITE HERE has called for boycotts of Hyatt hotels in 17 other U.S. cities where workers are seeking union representation or are working to reach agreement on a labor contract, including San Francisco, Chicago, Indianapolis, San Diego, and Los Angeles, the union said.»

Obama Administration Denies Employers Will Drop Health Insurance Under Health Law

The head of the federal office that regulates private health insurance told a congressional subcommittee June 15 that the Obama administration does not believe that large numbers of employers will drop employee health insurance once state insurance exchanges begin in 2014 under the health care overhaul law.

“We certainly don’t think they will, and we don’t expect that they will,” Steve Larsen, director of the Center for Consumer Information and Insurance Oversight (CCIIIO), told the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health.

Rep. Henry A. Waxman (D-Calif.), ranking member of the full committee, asked Larsen about a report issued June 6 by management consulting firm McKinsey & Co. that estimated that 30 percent of employers would drop employee coverage once health insurance exchanges start in 2014 (112 DLR A-6, 6/10/11). The Obama administration has reacted sharply to the report, calling the study an “outlier.”

Larsen said other studies, including one by the RAND Corp., predicted that the number of small businesses and their employees who would have coverage “would increase significantly, thanks to the efficiencies of” the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

The hearing was a continuation of a June 2 hearing on the effect of the health care law on employment.

Baucus Demands Answers From McKinsey. On June 16, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus (D-Mont.) sent a letter to McKinsey & Co. Global Managing Director Dominic Barton, who is based in London, calling on the company to release information on the report, calling the study an “outlier.”

Larsen said other studies, including one by the RAND Corp., predicted that the number of small businesses and their employees who would have coverage “would increase significantly, thanks to the efficiencies of” the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Larsen said other studies, including one by the RAND Corp., predicted that the number of small businesses and their employees who would have coverage “would increase significantly, thanks to the efficiencies of” the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Burgess asked whether contributions to health savings accounts would be counted as medical expenses under the medical loss ratio rule of the PPACA. The rule requires individual and small group health plans to spend at least 80 percent of premiums on medical expenses or quality improvements and large groups to spend at least 85 percent, or the difference must be refunded to policyholders, beginning in 2012.

“High deductible health plans are extremely popular,” Burgess said, citing increases in the number of Americans covered by them. “What kind of assurances can you give me to those millions of people who have high deductible health plans that they’ll still have access to this as a coverage option?” he asked Larsen.

According to a report released June 14 by America’s Health Insurance Plans, a group that represents the health insurance industry, more than 11.4 million Americans were covered by insurance plans eligible for health savings accounts as of January, a more than 14 percent increase since last year. Proponents of health savings account plans say the plans give consumers incentives to manage their health care costs efficiently by combining tax-favored savings accounts used to pay medical expenses with high deductible health plans.

Larsen said he was not sure how health savings account contributions would be counted under the medical loss ratio, and he promised to provide more information to the subcommittee.

But, Larsen added, the popularity of high deductible health plans “demonstrates the manner in which the current market is broken, and for many people, unaffordable.”

“Many people end up purchasing these types of policies because, frankly, that’s maybe what they can afford,” Larsen said. “It may not be what they want. I’m not sure many people want to have to pay out-of-pocket the thousands of dollars that they may have to for a high deductible plan. But in the current health care environment, pre-reform, pre-2014, that may be your option. But we find that most people actually want comprehensive coverage for their costs.”

 Discrimination

Court Denies Meatpacker’s Bid to Dismiss EEOC Bias Suit for Somali Muslim Workers

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission may proceed with a broad discrimination suit against the meatpacking firm JBS Swift & Co. on behalf of black Somali Muslim workers even though the relevant union local is not a party to the suit, the U.S. District Court for the District of Colorado ruled June 9 (EEOC v. JBS USA LLC db/a JBS Swift & Co., D. Colo., No. 10-cv-02103, 6/9/11).

In August 2010, EEOC filed two lawsuits against JBS Swift, claiming the company violated Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act by discriminating against Somali Muslim workers at its meatpacking plants in Greeley, Colo., and Grand Island, Neb. (169 DLR A-16, 9/1/10).

EEOC alleged that JBS Swift failed to accommodate the Muslim workers’ religious beliefs by hindering their prayer breaks and Ramadan observances, and that supervisors and co-workers harassed the Somali workers by uttering vulgar epithets and throwing bones, meat, and blood at them. In September 2008, the employer locked out, suspended, and ultimately fired Somali Muslim employees in Greeley who had walked outside the plant to break their Ramadan fasts, EEOC alleged. It charged JBS Swift with unlawful national origin, religious, and race discrimination.

JBS Swift moved to dismiss EEOC’s suit regarding the Greeley plant on several grounds. The company claimed the entire case should be dismissed either because EEOC failed to join United Food and Commercial Workers Local 7, which JBS Swift contended is a necessary party to the litigation, or because EEOC failed to conciliate the discrimination charges. The company also urged the court to dismiss the claims of two groups of plaintiff-intervenors, arguing the individuals failed to exhaust their administrative remedies.

Union Is Not a ‘Required’ Party. Rule 12(b)(7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allows a court to dismiss a suit for failure to join a ‘person’ under FRCP Rule 19, Judge Phillip A. Brimmer wrote. Rule 19 requires a two-step process before dismissing a claim for failure to join an “indispensable” person, the court said. It must first determine whether the absent person is “required” for the claim to proceed, and if so, the court then must decide if it is feasible to add that person to the litigation or whether the claim must be dismissed, Brimmer wrote.

A person must be joined under Rule 19 if “in that person’s absence, the court cannot order complete relief among existing parties” or if the absent person claims an interest in the suit’s subject matter and disposing of the matter without the absent person would “impede or impair” that person’s ability to protect the interest or leave an existing party subject to “a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations.”

JBS Swift argued that the relief sought by EEOC—including requiring the company to accommodate Somali Muslim workers’ religious beliefs, to either rehire terminated workers with back pay or give them front pay, and an injunction against future discrimination—could not be achieved without UFCW Local 7, which represents the Greeley plant workers.

The court, however, said it could afford the relief sought by EEOC and the intervening plaintiffs even in the union’s absence. EEOC has not alleged any wrongdoing by the UFCW local, and the plaintiffs do not challenge the collective bargaining agreement between JBS Swift and the union, the court said. “[T]he relief requested by plaintiffs will not significantly impact the [collective bargaining agreement], which provides for flexible scheduling of break times and prohibits discrimination.” Brimmer wrote.

The “mere fact” that EEOC seeks reinstatement, or alternatively front pay, for the terminated Somali Muslim workers “does not make the union necessary to accord that relief,” even assuming that such relief would violate union contract seniority provisions, the court said. “Moreover, it is not clear that reinstatement of these employees would violate the CBA, as the CBA only allows for loss of seniority where an employee is discharged for cause,” Brimmer wrote.

The union is not a “required” person under Rule 19, even though it has “claimed an interest” in any possible future negotiations about break schedules and religious accommodation of bargaining unit employees, the court said. It found that the union’s articulated interest is “not patently frivolous.”

But allowing EEOC’s suit to proceed without the union as a party does not “impermissibly risk impairing the union’s ability to protect its interests,” the court said. “The union’s interest in obtaining religious accommodation for Muslim employees as required by the CBA is not impeded by this suit; rather, it is furthered by it,” Brimmer wrote.

The court acknowledged it is “a more difficult question” whether the union’s interest in representing non-Muslim employees could be impaired by EEOC’s suit. JBS Swift argued that any court-ordered religious accommodation for Muslim employees “will significantly impact non-Muslim employees” and “could result in major discord at the plant.”

The court, however, said that since the plaintiffs’ requested relief “does not substantially impact” the bargaining agreement, “it is not clear what legitimate, non-frivolous interest the union has in modifying any discord that may arise from accommodating Muslim employees.” The bargaining agreement allows JBS Swift to make such religious accommodations unilaterally as long as such accommodations do not require modification or waiver of the union contract, Brimmer wrote. “Therefore, the court concludes that the union’s ability to protect its interests is not so impeded” as to require joinder of UFCW Local 7, he wrote.

Low Risk to Company of Conflicting Duties. Allowing the case to proceed without the union also will not expose JBS Swift to “a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations,” the court said. The company expressed concern that if it unilaterally changes workplace policies regarding accommodation, it will risk unfair labor practice charges, the court observed.

But the company “has not established that the risk of such charges is substantial in light of the fact that the CBA itself directs defendant to accommodate employees’ religious practices and allows defendant to make unilateral changes in its policies to do so, provided that such changes do not waive or modify provisions of the CBA,” Brimmer wrote.

EEOC Conciliation Held Sufficient. JBS Swift argued EEOC’s complaint should be dismissed because the commission did not “conciliate in good faith” before filing suit as required by Title VII.

Under applicable U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit precedent, EEOC must make “a sincere and reasonable effort to negotiate” by providing the employer with “an adequate opportunity to respond to all charges and negotiate possible settlements,” Brimmer wrote. But the Tenth Circuit also has said that a court “should only inquire whether its minimal jurisdictional requirement is satisfied” when considering whether EEOC has met its conciliation obligation and should not “examine the details” of “offers and counteroffers” by the agency and employees responding to charges.

JBS Swift does not deny that EEOC attempted conciliation but rather argues that the agency’s failure to include the union precluded the possibility of an acceptable settlement, the court said. The company “provides no authority” for the proposition that EEOC was required to include the union, and it does not appear from the record regarding its interchanges with the agency that JBS Swift “truly believed” the union’s presence was necessary, Brimmer wrote.

Given that EEOC informed JBS Swift of the nature and extent of the allegations, gave the company an opportunity to respond, and informed the employer that a breakdown in conciliation could result in legal action, the court concluded the commission met its statutory obligation to conciliate.

Mixed Rulings on Plaintiff-Intervenors. The court issued mixed rulings on JBS Swift’s motions to dismiss the complaints of two groups of plaintiff-intervenors for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. The “Abade intervenors” consist of approximately 104 employees or former employees at Greeley who filed a Nov. 2, 2010, motion to intervene in EEOC’s suit. On Nov. 29, 2010, a group of six former employees—the “Abdulle intervenors”—filed a separate motion to intervene.

The court previously granted the motions to intervene, but JBS Swift argued that at least some of the plaintiff-intervenors’ claims must be dismissed because they never filed EEOC charges, filed untimely charges, or filed charges that were never “verified,” that is, sworn to or affirmed by the charging party.

Although the court acknowledged that many of the Abade intervenors’ charges were never verified, it ruled that the “technical” verification requirement may be waived and that JBS Swift waived this defect by responding to the substance of those charges.

As for Abade intervenors who never filed any EEOC charge, the court said it needs more information about individual claims to decide who, if anyone, may take advantage of the “single filing” rule that allows individual claimants to “piggyback” on EEOC charges filed by others with substantially similar claims.

Regarding the six Abdulle intervenors, JBS Swift argued that none of them received an EEOC right-to-sue letter before proceeding to federal court, that all their claims are time-barred, and that one of them never filed an EEOC charge.

The court said the intervenors’ claims are untimely to the extent they challenge discrete acts occurring more than 300 days prior to their filing of EEOC charges, but said their harassment claims may be viable as “continuing violations” if one act of alleged harassment occurred during the 300-day period.

The Abdulle intervenor who did not file an EEOC charge may take advantage of the “single filing” rule because his claims stem “from the same discriminatory treatment as the other intervenors’ claims,” the court said.

EEOC attorneys David A. Winston, Iris Halpern, Stephanie Struble, and William E. Moench in Denver represented the agency. Ashley McCall Kelliher and Diane S. King of King & Greisen in Denver represented the plaintiff-intervenors. Heather Fox Vickles, Raymond M. Deeny, and Walter V. Siebert of Sherman & Howard in Denver represented JBS Swift.

Members of House, Labor Leaders Oppose Passage of U.S.-Colombian Trade Agreement

Several members of Congress joined with U.S. and Colombian labor leaders June 16 in calling on the Obama administration to delay submitting implementing legislation on the U.S.-Colombia free trade agreement until there is verification that the Action Plan on Labor Rights, which was negotiated between the two countries in April, is working.

Addressing a press conference called by the AFL-CIO and the Communications Workers of America, Rep. Hank Johnson (D-Ga.) said he and 13 of his colleagues have signed on to a letter that will be sent within the next week to President Obama, telling him the agreement should not be approved until “stronger and more credible actions” are taken to protect Colombian workers’ rights. Johnson added that he expects more members to sign the letter before it is transmitted.

Johnson contended that multinational companies in Colombia are using cooperatives to subcontract workers to employ workers without giving them “any basic labor rights,” such as the right to get paid in a timely fashion. He said sometimes these workers work for weeks without a paycheck, and the paycheck they finally receive does not always reflect all the overtime hours they were required to work. This “abridges the rights of workers to organize,” he said, adding that there are “techniques in place [in Colombia] to subvert the human rights guaranteed to workers.”

Effort to Delay Congressional Consideration. The press conference was called as part of an effort by organized labor to delay congressional consideration of the trade agreement. Labor and some congressional Democrats are opposed to enactment of the agreement because of murders and other violence directed at labor unionists in Colombia, as well as violations of human and labor rights. The administration has not indicated when it will transmit implementing language to Congress.

CWA President Larry Cohen told the press conference that now is not the time to proceed with the FTA. He contended that “nothing has changed” in Colombia since the action plan was negotiated two months ago, adding that the killings and exploitation of workers continue. “Every week a trade unionist is killed,” he said.

A recent report released by the International Trade Union Confederation found that Colombia continues to be the most dangerous place in the world for trade unionists, with 49 trade union members murdered in Colombia last year (115 DLR A-10, 6/15/11).

Cohen maintained that until Colombia “adheres to and provides tangible progress on Action Plan goals and metrics, we fear the plan is more rhetoric than reality. We should use this time and this opportunity to encourage true democratic reforms in Colombia before moving forward on the FTA,” he said.

AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka, who was scheduled to be at the press conference but was unable to attend, issued a statement maintaining that the action plan “does not go far enough to protect workers and ensure their safety and security.”

Trumka said passage of the FTA is not the solution to the violence in Colombia. “Once the deal is in place, we’ll lose our leverage if the violence against average Colombians begins to rise again,” he said. Noting that there have been more than 2,850 trade unionists killed in the last 25 years, Trumka said “the violence and impunity against trade unionists in Colombia is a decades long problem” that will not be solved “in a matter of weeks.”

Elements of Action Plan. Under the action plan, by June 15 Colombia was to launch enforcement regimes on the use of temporary service agencies to circumvent workers’ rights and the detection of collective pacts undermining the right to organize, among other things (66 DLR A-14, 4/6/11).

U.S. Trade Representative Ron Kirk announced June 13 that Colombia had met the requirements slated for completion by June 15, including securing legislation to establish criminal penalties, including imprisonment, for employers that undermine the right to organize and bargain collectively, or threaten workers who exercise those rights (113 DLR A-17, 6/13/11).

No Evidence That Plan Is Having an Impact. While Rep. George Miller (D-Calif.) said the trade agreement and the action plan are “a step forward,” he added that there is no “evidence on the ground that the plan is having any impact.” He contended that workers who try to form unions or are union members still experience violence, threats, and even murder. “This is something that the Congress of the United States cannot ignore, and before we give American preference to another country for trade arrangements, we need to ask if this is good for American workers and good for American values. The Colombian free trade agreement does neither,” he said.

Rep. Linda Sanchez (D-Calif.) said it is “hard to understand why Congress is considering this agreement,” adding it is not the time to do so. “We should be focusing on creating jobs,” she said, and the agreement “does not create jobs here.”

Noting that the administration has said the requirements of the action plan have been met, Sanchez contended “they do not go far enough.”

“The plan benefits transnational corporations that already repress Colombian workers,” she said, adding “nothing gets better for workers, who don’t get an equal share of the benefits this FTA could bestow.”

“Why are we rushing to approve an agreement that most workers don’t even want?” Sanchez asked, stating that her colleagues are overlooking the working conditions in Colombia. She added there is an “economic impact to workers in the United States when they have to compete with workers who are not allowed the rights to form a union” or have a minimum wage or overtime. “When corporations can move to other countries where workers can’t stand up for themselves, how can American workers compete?”

Sanchez maintained that the workers in Colombia have been attacked and killed for trying to improve their economic situation. “Without fair competition we will see more American jobs shipped overseas,” she said.

Colombian Union Leaders Oppose FTA. Also appearing at the press conference were several Colombian union leaders who have been meeting this week with members of Congress to tell them why they oppose the agreement.

One of those union leaders, Jose’ Dio’genes Orjela Garcia, an educator and a member of the CUT labor federation, told the press briefing that the action plan is “nothing more than a trick” to get Congress to pass the agreement. He contended that the plan “won’t stop the violence” against unionists, adding that since the plan was negotiated, at least four teachers have been murdered and three more have been threatened. “Congress should not be fooled,” he said, adding that the plan “needs to be monitored for a long time.”

Jhonsson Torres Ortis, the treasurer of Fiscal Sindicorteros, a union representing sugar cane cutters, said the action plan has not been put into practice. Recently, he said, one large company fired nine workers for trying to form a union, and other companies are using temporary workers to perform permanent work. The treaty should not be ratified, he said, because “there is no trust by the workers that it will improve their lives.”

In Brief

OPM Touts Increase in Veterans Hired

The Office of Personnel Management June 15 released a report showing an increase in the hiring of veterans in the federal government last year, despite a decrease in overall hiring.

The announcement came with the release of its report, Employment of Veterans in the Federal Executive Branch Fiscal Year 2010, the first since President Obama issued Executive Order 13518, which established the Veterans Employment Initiative and the Council on Veterans Employment.

“Through the President’s Veterans Employment Initiative, OPM and our agency partners are helping tens of thousands of veterans and their families continue their legacy of service,” OPM Director John Berry said in a statement. “These are some of the best, brightest and hardest-working Americans in the federal government. While we’ve accomplished a lot in the first year, too many veterans are still unemployed and we’re going to keep pushing to do even better going forward.”

Lockheed Martin to Cut 1,200 Space Systems Jobs

Lockheed Martin Corp. June 14 announced that one of its subsidiaries, Lockheed Martin Space Systems Co., would eliminate approximately 1,200 jobs by the end of 2011.

The affected positions are across the country, the Bethesda, Md.-based company said, but would be concentrated in Sunnyvale, Calif., the Delaware Valley region of Pennsylvania, and Denver. The cuts primarily will af-effect “middle management,”’’ the company said. A Lockheed Martin spokesman told BNA June 16 that the move was “not expected to seriously impact” union-represented workers.

“This is a difficult but necessary action to improve efficiencies and make our business more competitive go­ going forward,’’ Joanne Maguire, executive vice president of Lockheed Martin Space Systems, said in a statement.

“We will remain relentlessly focused on achieving operational excellence and mission success for our customers as we position to deliver more affordably in the future.”

The space systems division of Lockheed Martin designs and manufactures “a full spectrum of advancedtechnology systems for national security, military, civil government, and commercial customers,’’ such as human space flight systems and satellites, the company said. The division currently employs about 16,000 workers in 12 states.

MSHA to Hold Hearing on Work Area Exams and POV

The Labor Department’s Mine Safety and Health Administration will hold an additional public hearing July 12 on its proposed rules regarding work area examinations and pattern of violations, MSHA’s deputy assistant secretary for operations Patricia Silvey announced June 15 at a hearing that was expected to be the final hearing on the proposals.

The additional hearing will be held in Hazard, Ky., at the Forum at the Hal Rogers Center at 101 Bulldog Lane. The hearing on the work area examination rule will begin at 8:30 a.m. and will be followed by the POV hearing. The agency has extended until Aug. 1 the deadline for submitting public comments on the proposed rules.

The proposed work area exam rule, (75 Fed. Reg.
81,165), would require mine examiners to identify and correct violations of mandatory health or safety standards while conducting preshift, supplemental, onshift, and weekly safety examinations of underground coal mines (246 DLR A-5, 12/23/10).

The proposed pattern of violations rule, (76 Fed. Reg.
5,719), would revise MSHA’s POV system. It would eliminate the potential POV procedure, under which the agency notifies mine operators in writing when their mine is in danger of being placed on a pattern of violations status (20 DLR A-15, 1/31/11).

Unemployment Insurance

First-Time UI Claims Decrease 16,000 To 414,000 in Latest Week, ETA Reports

The number of jobless workers filing individual unemployment insurance claims decreased by 16,000 in the week ended June 11 following an increase of 4,000 the preceding week, as revised, according to seasonally adjusted figures released June 16 by the Labor Department’s Employment and Training Administration.

First time UI claims totaled 414,000 in the latest week, down from 430,000 claims in the week ended June 4. The latest figure is consistent with the gradual downward trend that has occurred over the past year. One year ago, initial claims stood at 474,000.

The four-week moving average of initial UI claims, a less volatile measure, was 424,750 for the week ending June 11, unchanged from the previous week.

Initial claims “are heading in the right direction” as they fell larger than anticipated, Ryan Sweet, a senior economist at Moody’s Analytics, said.

“The four-week moving average didn’t budge, which suggests that both the labor market and the broader economy are struggling to gather momentum,” Sweet added.

When first time claimants were excluded, the number of workers filing ongoing UI claims was 3,675,000, a decrease of 21,000 from the previous week’s revised total of 3,696,000, ETA said.

The nation’s insured unemployment rate in the week ended June 4 was 2.8 percent before seasonal adjustment, a 0.1 percentage point increase from the previous week. States with the highest insured unemployment rates in the week ending May 28 were Alaska (4.9 percent), Puerto Rico (4.5 percent), Oregon (4.1 percent), and Pennsylvania (3.9 percent).

States with the largest increases in claims filed in the week ending June 4 were Wisconsin (1,528) and Tennessee (1,055). According to ETA, Tennessee attributed the increase in claims to layoffs in the service industries. Wisconsin did not provide a comment.

States with the greatest decreases in claims filed were New York (4,060), California (2,510), and Massachusetts (1,846). New York officials attributed the decrease in claims to fewer layoffs in the construction, manufacturing, and retail industries. California officials attributed the decrease in claims to a shorter workweek, as well as fewer layoffs in the service industry. Massachusetts, meanwhile, said the decrease in claims was the result of fewer layoffs in the construction and service industries.

Unadjusted ETA figures showed that nationwide 7,401,228 people filed claims for unemployment insurance benefits under all federal and state programs during the week ending May 28, a 209,116 decrease from the previous week. During the comparable week in 2010, 9,600,820 people filed UI claims.

The number of claimants receiving extended unemployment compensation in the week ended May 28 was 591,124, a drop of 27,335 from the previous week, but more than the 496,869 filings reported a year earlier.

Newly discharged veterans claiming UI benefits in the week ended May 28 totaled 35,559, which was 702 fewer than the 36,261 veterans filing claims the previous week. A year earlier, 36,039 claims were filed.

Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon testifies at Oversight Committee field hearing in South Carolina

NLRB Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon today appeared before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform at a field hearing in South Carolina called regarding his decision to issue a complaint against the Boeing Company on April 20.

In his opening statement, Mr. Solomon said he would do his best to answer the questions of committee members while also protecting the due process rights of all parties in the ongoing case. "I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case," he noted. "My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here."

The Acting General Counsel also described the Agency’s investigative process, and his attempts to facilitate a settlement before the complaint was issued. He said, "The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations."

Posted June 30, 2011, 4:09 P.M. ET

The National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge hearing Acting General Counsel Lafe E. Solomon's allegations that Boeing Co. unlawfully transferred jetliner production work from Washington state to South Carolina June 30 denied the airplane manufacturer's motion to dismiss the complaint (Boeing Co., NLRB ALJ, No. 19-CA-32431, 6/30/11).

ALJ Clifford H. Anderson said it is rare to dismiss unfair labor practice allegations in an NLRB proceeding before the board’s general counsel has even begun to introduce evidence. He further observed that Boeing has not yet established facts to support its argument that Solomon has taken out of context the allegedly unlawful comments Boeing executives made about the opening of the South Carolina plant.

Anderson rejected Boeing's challenge to Solomon's allegation that the company illegally discriminated against union-represented employees in Washington when it built a second assembly line for 787 Dreamliners at a nonunion site in South Carolina. Boeing argued there could be no finding that it violated the National Labor Relations Act without proof that building the South Carolina line adversely affected the Washington workers represented by the International Association of Machinists, but the ALJ disagreed, finding that NLRB precedent could support Solomon's claim of unlawful discrimination.

Finally, the ALJ refused to strike from the administrative complaint Solomon's request that Being be ordered to have the second Dreamliner assembly line handled by the unionized workers in Washington rather than the nonunion workforce in South Carolina. Anderson observed that the acting general counsel has not disputed the company's right to oppose the requested remedy as unduly burdensome, but the ALJ said it would be inappropriate to issue a pretrial ruling that would preclude the parties from making a full record on the question of remedial relief to be ordered if the complaint against Boeing is sustained.

Eleventh Circuit Reinstates Fired White Supervisor's Reverse Race Bias Claims

A white supervisor fired by a Lockheed-Martin Corp. subsidiary for forwarding to another employee a racially insensitive “joke” e-mail disparaging African Americans may pursue federal law race discrimination claims based on evidence the company disciplined black employees less harshly for similar offenses, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit ruled today (Smith v. Lockheed-Martin Corp., 11th Cir., No. 09-15428, 6/30/11).

In reversing a district court's grant of summary judgment, the Eleventh Circuit said Anthony Mitten's failure to identify black supervisors who were treated more leniently for comparable offenses was not fatal to his race discrimination claims under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the Civil Rights Act of 1866 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

The U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia had reasoned that Mitten, who was fired in 2005 by Lockheed-Martin Aeronautics Co. for violating a “zero-tolerance” policy against “transmission of ethnic slurs or racial comments,” failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination because he could not identify a black comparator who was treated more leniently. Although Mitten did identify two black employees who received only temporary suspensions for sending similarly racially offensive e-mails, the district court found that those employees were not similarly situated to Mitten because they were not supervisors who have heightened obligations to prevent and report violations of Lockheed's internal anti-discrimination policies.

The Eleventh Circuit, however, ruled that Mitten produced adequate circumstantial evidence of disparate discipline of white and black employees for similar offenses to establish a prima facie case of race discrimination and raise triable claims under Title VII and Section 1981.

Among other things, the court said, a reasonable jury could find that adverse media publicity about shootings at a Lockheed plant in Meridian, Miss., and a pending Equal Employment Opportunity Commission investigation of an alleged racially hostile work environment at Lockheed may have contributed to management firing Mitten as an example of taking a hard line against racial harassment. A jury should resolve whether racial considerations contributed to Mitten's termination while black employees were disciplined less harshly for using racist speech, the appeals court said.

A federal district court abused its discretion when it reduced to $50,000 a $300,000 sexual harassment jury verdict in favor of a female former construction worker in Puerto Rico by using the calendar year in which the damages were awarded as the relevant time period for determining damage caps under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit ruled June 29 in an issue of first impression (Hernandez-Miranda v. Empresas Diaz Masso Inc., 1st Cir., No. 10-1639, 6/29/11).

Under 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(3), the appellate court said, damage caps in Title VII claims involving intentional discrimination range from $50,000 to $300,000 depending on the number of employees an employer has "in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current

Reversing and remanding the U.S. District Court for the District of Puerto Rico, the First Circuit joined the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh Circuits in interpreting Section 1981a(b)(3)'s reference to the "current" calendar year as meaning the time period of the alleged discrimination, and not the time period in which the jury entered its verdict.

To reach its conclusion, the appellate court relied on judicial interpretations of the phrase "current or preceding calendar year" in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b), a parallel provision in Title VII that limits the definition of an "employer," as meaning the year of discrimination. Additionally, the court said its interpretation of "current" calendar year "best serves" Title VII's purpose of "encouraging resolution of disputes before litigation commences." Such purpose, it said, is “best advanced by providing clarity and certainty as to the size of potential damage awards from the outset of a dispute.”

In the instant case, the First Circuit said, the district court applied a $50,000 damage cap to the $300,000 awarded to Edna Hernandez-Miranda based on employer Empresas Diaz Masso Inc.'s (DM) employment of 25 individuals in 2008, the year of the jury verdict. However, the court said, Hernandez-Miranda alleged sexual harassment that occurred in 2004, when DM had approximately 247 employees. Based on that employee figure, a $200,000 damage cap instead should apply to Hernandez-Miranda's award, the appellate court held.

Fired Supervisor's `Cat's Paw' Claim Failed With No Intent, Causation Proof, Court Says

Posted June 30, 2011, 5:39 P.M. ET

A former supervisor in an Iowa hog-processing plant did not prove he was retaliated against for seeking accommodations for an injured worker under the "cat's paw" theory of employer liability because he did not show that an intermediate supervisor had any retaliatory animus, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit held June 28 (Diaz v. Tyson Fresh Meats Inc., 8th Cir., No. 10-1472, 6/28/11).

Affirming summary judgment for Tyson Fresh Meats Inc. on the claim brought under the Iowa Civil Rights Act, Judge D.P. Marshall said there was "some tension" in James Diaz's assertion of the cat's paw theory in this case. "We need not, however, resolve the doctrinal tension in Diaz's case because his cat's paw theory fails on its own terms," the court concluded.

The undisputed evidence showed that Diaz's supervisor, Tom Hanson, may have lied during an investigation into the failure to accommodate the injured worker, but Hanson's actions were intended to protect himself from discipline, not to dupe a neutral decisionmaker into making a discriminatory decision, the court said.

Even if Hanson had set up Diaz to be fired, the court said, the plant manager's decision to fire Diaz was "untainted" because it was based on Diaz's admission that he did not honor work restrictions set by a company nurse.

House Education and the Workforce

July 7, "Rushing Union Elections: Protecting the Interests of Big Labor at the Expense of Workers' Free Choice"

10 a.m., 2175 Rayburn House Office Building

The House Education and the Workforce Committee will hold a hearing July 7 titled "Rushing Union Elections: Protecting the Interests of Big Labor at the Expense of Workers' Free Choice." That hearing will examine NLRB's proposal to change union election rules.

Republicans argue that the NLRB proposal would make it harder for employers to communicate with workers about the decision to start a union. The NLRB has said it is looking to improve union election processes that now result in "unnecessary delays, allow wasteful litigation and fail to take advantage of modern communication technologies."

Boeing-NLRB Fight Provides Grand Forum for Useless Political Saber-Rattling

It seems that every politician in Washington these days wants to wade into the fight between the National Labor Relations Board and Boeing over the aircraft maker's decision to build a non-union plant in South Carolina.

The Morning Plum

* Could GOP accept defense cuts as part of deficit compromise? Lori Montgomery and Paul Kane have the read of the morning: House Republicans are now entertaining defense cuts as an area of compromise that is more likely than tax hikes to prove acceptable to Republicans.

Workbook: How to compromise on a compromise

In general, debt deals consist of spending cuts to make conservatives happy and tax increases to make liberals happy. But given the narrowing space for compromise, we're going to need to go even more specific than that: we're going to need spending cuts that make liberals happy and tax increases that...

The House Education and the Workforce Committee will hold a hearing July 7 titled "Rushing Union Elections: Protecting the Interests of Big Labor at the Expense of Workers' Free Choice." That hearing will examine NLRB's proposal to change union election rules.

Republicans argue that the NLRB proposal would make it harder for employers to communicate with workers about the decision to start a union. The NLRB has said it is looking to improve union election processes that now result in "unnecessary delays, allow wasteful litigation and fail to take advantage of modern communication technologies."

The House Education and the Workforce Committee will hold a hearing July 7 titled "Rushing Union Elections: Protecting the Interests of Big Labor at the Expense of Workers' Free Choice." That hearing will examine NLRB's proposal to change union election rules.

Republicans argue that the NLRB proposal would make it harder for employers to communicate with workers about the decision to start a union. The NLRB has said it is looking to improve union election processes that now result in "unnecessary delays, allow wasteful litigation and fail to take advantage of modern communication technologies."

Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon testifies at Oversight Committee field hearing in South Carolina

NLRB Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon today appeared before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform at a field hearing in South Carolina called regarding his decision to issue a complaint against the Boeing Company on April 20.

In his opening statement, Mr. Solomon said he would do his best to answer the questions of committee members while also protecting the due process rights of all parties in the ongoing case. "I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case," he noted. "My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here."

The Acting General Counsel also described the Agency’s investigative process, and his attempts to facilitate a settlement before the complaint was issued. He said, "The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations."

Liebman Notes ‘Profound Divide’ Over NLRA
But Says She will Not Be Swayed by Pressure

NEW YORK—The recent barrage of criticism of the board has been driven by a “very profound divide in our country” and a “profound lack of understanding” of the role of labor law and labor unions in American history, National Labor Relations Board Chairman Wilma B. Liebman told an audience at New York University June 10.

Speaking at the 64th Annual Conference on Labor, co-sponsored by NYU, St. John's University, and Cornell University, Liebman said that the good news from recent criticism of the agency has been that there is now an increased public awareness about collective bargaining and the employee rights protected by the National Labor Relations Act.

But Liebman said she has been surprised by some of the “threats and assaults” on NLRB, and told the audience “what we have to do is enhance the public's understanding of collective bargaining.”

NLRB Subject of Vigorous Criticism

Liebman, who has served as a board member since November 1997 and was named as chairman by President Obama on Jan. 20, 2009, said she dates the recent contention over the board to September 2007, when a President Bush-appointed board majority issued approximately 50 decisions that organized labor referred to as “the massacre,” and that was followed by a congressional hearing on the board and its rulings.

Immediately after Obama's inauguration, she said, the agency again came under fire, with increasingly heated rhetoric about board nominees being “radical” and claims that the board was pursuing an agenda that improperly favored organized labor. Criticism of NLRB coincided with a legislative battle over the proposed Employee Free Choice Act, which failed to win congressional approval, Liebman observed.

The NLRB chairman said that recent criticism of the board has been particularly strident, and she said she recognizes that it may be influenced by the sense of economic insecurity some Americans have. Liebman said she recently received an unsigned letter reading, “Withdraw the Boeing complaint, you partisan progressive Marxist moron,” referring to the Boeing unfair labor practice complaint issued by the NLRB's acting general counsel, which has not yet come before the board.

But Liebman said she was surprised by the subject of some of the criticism. Noting that the board's invitations for the filing of amicus briefs in recent cases have been questioned and criticized, Liebman said, “I thought it was something that was a good thing,” not an action that would be controversial.

Some people have never accepted the NLRA or NLRB, Liebman said, and they now label the agency “job-killing,” while supporters of the act and collective bargaining are frustrated and disillusioned.

Chairman Links NLRB Information to Understanding

Public misunderstanding of the act may be partly attributable to the lack of experience of younger workers with the act and with labor unions in general, Liebman said. Even the judiciary is sometimes misinformed about the NLRA, she commented, but with private-sector union membership below 7 percent, fewer and fewer Americans even know anyone who belongs to a union.

The lack of public understanding is the reason the board issued its notice of proposed rulemaking to provide for employer posting of a notice of employee rights, Liebman said. The board received 7,000 comments on the proposal and is still in the process of reviewing comments and deciding what to do with the proposed rule, she said.
Liebman's current term on the board ends Aug. 27, and there has been no announcement about whether she will seek or receive renomination, but the chairman told the New York audience that as long as she serves on the board she “will fight for the values” embodied in the NLRA.

Former Board Member Decries Attacks on Board

Marshall B. Babson, who served as a member of the NLRB from 1985 to 1988 and who was a panelist at the NYU conference, commented after Liebman's remarks that he is “very, very concerned” about recent attacks on the board.

Stating that there has been a repeated effort to “trash the agency and trash the process” created by the NLRA, Babson said, “I will not stand by” when the agency is unfairly attacked.

Citing as an example comments that NLRB's acting general counsel has undertaken “unprecedented” action by issuing a complaint in the Boeing case, Babson told the audience that “you need to stand up and be heard” in opposition to attacks on the agency.

The former board member is now a partner at Seyfarth Shaw in New York where he represents employers in labor and employment law matters.

Exemption 6 - Rich Ahearn personal address has recommended the following article from Charleston City Paper:

"AFL-CIO, local labor leader blast Boeing hearing"

(To view the article, please click the above link.)
I am writing to inform you that that, based on a merit determination by Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon, I issued a Complaint today against Boeing, alleging violations of 8(a) (1) and (3) by their decision and various statements that they decided to place the second line for the 787 Dreamliner production at a non-union site in So. Carolina rather than with the IAM represented unit here because the union had engaged in past strikes and in order to avoid the consequences of future potential strikes. As striking constitutes protected concerted activity under the NLRA, transferring work to retaliate against employees for engaging in such activity violates the statute. The remedy we seek includes restoration of the second line here but does not seek to interfere with Boeing’s opportunity to place work anywhere, including So.Carolina, for non-discriminatory reasons. The Complaint issued only after Lafe made numerous efforts to reach a negotiated settlement.

I want to particularly recognize the hard work of Dianne, who investigated this case and who did a superb job of assembling the evidence and analyzing the legal principles. Mara is currently assigned the trial; I expect to select another attorney to work with her and of course remain open to further settlement opportunities.

I expect this case may generate significant public and press interest. Please direct any such inquiries to me.

Many thanks.

The Right to Work folks say they’ll ask to intervene representing SC workers, according to this story. (And they think it would be terrible if there was a settlement in the case.)

Mix said his worry is that the company will agree to a settlement that weakens right-to-work laws. A top concern is that Boeing will allow the machinists union to try to organize its local plant by signing cards -- a method know as check-card voting -- instead of by secret ballot, he said.

These are strange times in U.S. labor relations, and they are getting stranger by day. The past two weeks have seen several important developments in the bizarre ongoing saga between the National Labor Relations Board and Boeing, which has become a cause célèbre for conservative politicians and pundits, even forming part of the discussion during the New Hampshire Republican presidential debate, with former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich calling for abolition of the labor board.

So what happened? First, after more than a year of construction, Boeing opened its new billion-dollar facility in North Charleston, S.C., which will act as a final assembly plant for the 787 Dreamliner, widely considered the future of commercial aviation. Then, the NLRB started its administrative law judge hearing that will decide the fate of the complaint issued by the acting general counsel, which accuses Boeing of breaking the law by moving work from a unionized plant in Washington state to a non-union plant in South Carolina in retaliation for strike action at the union plant.

Adding to the drama, South Carolina Sen. Lindsey Graham announced that he would block President Obama's nomination for secretary of Commerce — despite the nominee being a member of Boeing's board of directors — until the president states publicly that Boeing is an "ethical" corporation. Then Boeing refused a settlement offer from the machinists union that involved keeping the disputed work in South Carolina.

Congressional Republicans, meanwhile, called a hearing of the House Oversight Committee in Charleston to "discuss" the NLRB's actions. With considerable reluctance, Lafe Solomon, the acting general counsel who issued the complaint, testified at the hearing only after Republicans threatened to subpoena him if he refused to appear. Republicans accused the NLRB of waging "class" and "regional" warfare, attacked Solomon for "prosecutorial misconduct" and quizzesed him about the case — a clear threat to due process. So much for Southern hospitality.

Conservative politicians and pundits have tried to make this dispute about anything other than the key question: Did Boeing violate the law? Fox News has run stories on South Carolina workers with headlines like: "What would you do if the government tried to kill your job?" But South Carolina is not the issue — the legal issues would be identical if Boeing had transferred the jobs to the moon.

The NLRB is not telling a private company where it can and cannot do business. Under U.S. law, Boeing has a right to transfer work from Washington to South Carolina for good reasons, bad reasons, or no reason at all. But it is not allowed to transfer work for discriminatory reasons — in this case, retaliation for Washington workers exercising their right to strike.

Boeing has claimed that the NLRB complaint takes out of context remarks on the motivation behind the transfer of work. The comments in question are about as clear as one could imagine. The "overriding factor" in the decision to locate the jobs in South Carolina, Boeing's EVP explained, was the need to avoid further work stoppages.
In its defense, Boeing states that, not only has it not cut jobs in Washington, but it actually has added new jobs. True, but these new jobs involve "rework" and "out of sequence work" needed to remedy ongoing problems in Boeing's complex and dysfunctional global supply chain. When the supply-chain problems are fixed, the jobs will disappear.

Boeing also states that the South Carolina jobs are new jobs, which will surprise the workers on the 'surge line' in Washington state who are doing final assembly work on the Dreamliner, and whose work will be wound down as the South Carolina plant becomes fully functional.

So what is this really about? Though they would never say so, it is about Republicans' visceral hatred of the current NLRB and the workplace rights it protects. Republicans have been looking for an issue with which to attack the NLRB since their sweeping election victories last November. Several previous attempts floundered, but Boeing has provided red meat for those who would like to destroy the last vestiges of workers' rights in America.

If Boeing reads the situation right, it will settle this dispute. Based on the evidence so far, it probably will lose based on the legal issues. But the Republicans who have used the Boeing dispute as a pretext to attack the NLRB will never settle. For them, there always will be another reason to attack the agency mandated with protecting the right to form unions. For it is that basic right on which they have really declared war.

In the quaint old days, even the most ravenous publicity hounds in Congress would hold off announcing a big investigation until they had something to investigate. As is shown by the furor enveloping a National Labor Relations Board case involving Boeing Co., those days are gone.

The NLRB is looking into whether Boeing chose to establish a manufacturing plant for its new 787 airliner in South Carolina to punish its unionized workers in Everett, Wash., which would be illegal. But the board is months, if not years, away from making any such determination or taking any concrete action against Boeing. An administrative law judge convened a hearing June 14, but thus far has heard not a single word of testimony.

Yet one would gather from the rhetoric that the case is shaking the republic to its foundations. A few weeks ago, Senate Republicans openly intimidated the NLRB's general counsel, a career public servant named Lafe Solomon, by threatening to kill the confirmation of his appointment.

Functioning as Boeing's full-time henchmen, they've interfered with the NLRB's work by flagrantly misrepresenting the nature of the case, its precedents and its legal underpinnings, and introducing special-interest legislation to protect the company from the board. Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Vista), who as chairman of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform is striving to make himself into that chamber's outstanding hot air machine, has already held a hearing on the matter. Its very objective-sounding title: "The NLRB's Holding Pattern on Free Enterprise."

And from your elected Democrats? Silence. To paraphrase a song from "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," they've bravely turned their tails and fled.

The issues in the case arose last year when Boeing decided to build three 787s a month outside Charleston, S.C. Its existing manufacturing facility in Everett would still build seven a month.

Boeing negotiated at length with the machinists union in Everett, seeking concessions, before it decided instead to expand in South Carolina. The union subsequently filed a complaint with the NLRB, alleging that Boeing acted to punish the Everett workers for exercising their legal rights to bargain collectively and to strike. NLRB counsel Solomon spent months trying to broker a settlement between the two sides. When that failed he went ahead and filed a complaint against Boeing on April 20, citing the union allegation.
Here's the fundamental law governing the case: Every business has the right to manufacture its products anywhere it wishes. But if it moves jobs in reprisal for workers exercising their legal rights, including the right to strike, that's against the law.

There's nothing doubtful about that principle or novel in its application. There's even a legal term for it: the "runaway shop" doctrine. The key Supreme Court precedent dates from 1965. Another important ruling was handed down in appellate court in 1967 by Warren Burger, whose conservative bona fides were established two years later when he was named chief justice of the U.S. by President Nixon.

Boeing has never made it a secret that among its goals in establishing the new manufacturing line was to keep it away from the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, which represents the Everett workers. During a conference call in 2009, Boeing Chairman and Chief Executive Jim McNerney observed that the "modest inefficiencies" associated with manufacturing in South Carolina would be "more than overcome" by avoiding the strikes that were occurring "every three or four years" in Washington state.

Boeing's general counsel, J. Michael Luttig, told a Senate committee in May that a 2008 machinists strike that shut down the 787 line for 58 days cost the company more than $1 billion and damaged its standing with customers and investors. He said Boeing was "legitimately concerned" about the possibility of further strikes.

Those statements appear to be admissions that the factory decision was aimed against the union. But Boeing also says it was motivated by the lavish incentives offered by South Carolina, which have been estimated at $900 million — more than the construction cost of the plant. Luttig mentioned the state's "exceptional business environment." That includes its "right-to-work" law, which prohibits union membership from being a condition of employment and raises other obstacles to union organizing.

The NLRB's task is to determine how these factors played into Boeing's decision and to fashion a remedy if it finds the company's real motivation was to punish union workers. Either the union or the company can appeal an adverse decision in court.

The process won't be short or easy, even without the GOP's hysterical posturing. Rep. Issa opened his hearing (staged in the South Carolina community that hosts the Boeing plant) by announcing that the NLRB case would have "disastrous consequences." His star witnesses against the NLRB included a corporate labor attorney, a local headhunter employed by Boeing, a local Boeing employee and Alan Wilson, the attorney general of South Carolina.

Wilson took a swipe at the union, claiming that its last strike "caused customers to question whether or not to buy from Boeing ever again." That's amusing, because Boeing claims that the 787 is the fastest-selling aircraft in history and that it has 850 orders in hand.

Boeing has also confessed that when the machinists struck in 2008 the 787 was already 15 months behind schedule — chiefly because the company had outsourced engineering and parts manufacturing around the world and failed to manage that process competently.

Among the problem locations were — hello — South Carolina, where a manufacturing subcontractor turned out such wretched work that Boeing had to take over the operation, at a cost of $1 billion. If customers have any doubts about Boeing, the reason is more likely management ineptitude than union activity.

Issa and his GOP colleagues maintain that the NLRB action is a union-inspired assault on "right-to-work" states and therefore on the working person's right to be free of union oppression. So it's proper to examine the effect of "right-to-work" laws.
There's no consistent evidence that "right-to-work" laws contribute materially to economic growth. The 22 "right-to-work" states generally rank among the poorest in the nation: The only two with average household incomes higher than the U.S. median are North Dakota and Wyoming, which have tiny workforces. South Carolina ranks 45th in median household income at $41,101.

There are indications, however, that business proprietors in those states keep more of their income, meaning that less of it trickles down to workers — a clue to why managements like Boeing's may be so enamored of the South Carolinas of the world.

This is, of course, the American malady — a race to the economic bottom in which decisions are made to benefit managers and shareholders at the expense of the workforce or, indeed, the product. The trend is certainly enabled by the decline of union representation, which has shrunk from more than 20% to less than 12% just since 1983, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. This is roughly the same period in which the middle class has lost its grip on the benefits of economic growth and productivity.

And this is the trend that "right-to-work" advocates and their water carriers in the GOP seek to perpetuate. One has to ask: Why aren't President Obama and congressional Democrats pushing back, hard, against this brazen campaign of interference with the legal deliberations of an independent government agency? Or are they content to stand by while the American worker is led further down the road to serfdom?

The National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge hearing Acting General Counsel Lafe E. Solomon's allegations that Boeing Co. unlawfully transferred jetliner production work from Washington state to South Carolina June 30 denied the airplane manufacturer's motion to dismiss the complaint (Boeing Co., NLRB ALJ, No. 19-CA-32431, 6/30/11).

ALJ Clifford H. Anderson said it is rare to dismiss unfair labor practice allegations in an NLRB proceeding before the board’s general counsel has even begun to introduce evidence. He further observed that Boeing has not yet established facts to support its argument that Solomon has taken out of context the allegedly unlawful comments Boeing executives made about the opening of the South Carolina plant.

Anderson rejected Boeing's challenge to Solomon's allegation that the company illegally discriminated against union-represented employees in Washington when it built a second assembly line for 787 Dreamliners at a nonunion site in South Carolina. Boeing argued there could be no finding that it violated the National Labor Relations Act without proof that building the South Carolina line adversely affected the Washington workers represented by the International Association of Machinists, but the ALJ disagreed, finding that NLRB precedent could support Solomon's claim of unlawful discrimination.

Finally, the ALJ refused to strike from the administrative complaint Solomon's request that Being be ordered to have the second Dreamliner assembly line handled by the unionized workers in Washington rather than the nonunion workforce in South Carolina. Anderson observed that the acting general counsel has not disputed the company's right to oppose the requested remedy as unduly burdensome, but the ALJ said it would be inappropriate to issue a pretrial ruling that would preclude the parties from making a full record on the question of remedial relief to be ordered if the complaint against Boeing is sustained.
I will be out of the office from Monday, July 18 through Friday, July 29. During my absence, DRA Marty Eskenazi will be Acting RA for the week of July 18, and DRA Brian Sweeney will be Acting RA for the week of July 25. All matters Boeing related will be handled directly by Rich.

Thanks.

Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon testifies at Oversight Committee field hearing in South Carolina

NLRB Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon today appeared before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform at a field hearing in South Carolina called regarding his decision to issue a complaint against the Boeing Company on April 20.

In his opening statement, Mr. Solomon said he would do his best to answer the questions of committee members while also protecting the due process rights of all parties in the ongoing case. “I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case,” he noted. “My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here.”

The Acting General Counsel also described the Agency’s investigative process, and his attempts to facilitate a settlement before the complaint was issued. He said, “The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations.”

The House Education and the Workforce Committee will hold a hearing July 7 titled "Rushing Union Elections: Protecting the Interests of Big Labor at the Expense of Workers' Free Choice." That hearing will examine NLRB's proposal to change union election rules.

Republicans argue that the NLRB proposal would make it harder for employers to communicate with workers about the decision to start a union. The NLRB has said it is looking to improve union election processes that now result in "unnecessary delays, allow wasteful litigation and fail to take advantage of modern communication technologies."

Good morning Lafe,

As we discussed yesterday, I am putting together bios for you and a few other facts for your meetings tomorrow. I believe you mentioned that Ms. Murray might be interested in a Lockheed Martin contract? Is that correct? I apologize – I could not remember which company you named and I have been unable to information on the issue.

I will run the backgrounder by Bob and get you something this afternoon. Thanks!

Dear Ms. Cleeland,

I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:

1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

You probably know that Sens Alexander and Graham introduced an amendment to section 14 of the NLRA. They say it would prevent something like the Boeing complaint from being issued. Wanted you to see it. Reporters are asking for comment, but I think we should say

Here is a copy of the amendment:

They say it: “Strengthen the existing protection in the National Labor relations Act of state right-to-work law to ensure that state laws cannot be pre-empted by union contracts or the NLRB. It provides necessary clarity to prevent the NLRB from moving forward in their case against Boeing or attempting a similar strategy against other companies. It updates the current law with the following:

Nothing in the Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor organizations and employers, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organizations, a condition of employment either before or after hiring.”

Hey Nancy -- Thanks for helping me out with this. I really appreciate it!

For the daily story about Sens. Alexander and Graham's right-to-work legislation, I'd love to get a comment on the ramifications of the language, both for labor and for the NLRB. Something similar to what we talked about over the phone:
That this is an attempt to mandate all states adopt right-to-work policies. That this legislation is really nothing new and has been introduced by the GOP many times before.

To give you a better sense of what I'm looking into for my feature story: I'm writing about the natural oscillation of the board and it's pro-union vs. pro-business decisions depending on which party is controlling the White House. My argument is that the Boeing case provides ammunition to those that are trying to prove the NLRB has an activist agenda, but in reality, the NLRB under Obama is no more pro-union than it was pro-business under the previous Bush administration. The NLRB is also under much greater scrutiny on the whole due to the larger labor environment. I would love to get a comment about the natural progression of the board becoming politicized, and how it's historically seesawed between pro-union and pro-business decisions based on the administration.

Thanks so much and please let me know if you have any questions! I'm on my cell today: 617-633-0425

Best,
Lauren

AMENDMENT intended to be proposed by Mr. ALEXANDER

Viz:

1 At the appropriate place, insert the following:

2 SEC. ___. PROTECTION OF RIGHT TO WORK.

3 (a) APPLICABILITY OF NLRA TO STATE RIGHT TO WORK LAWS.—Section 14 of the National Labor Relations Act (29 U.S.C. 164) is amended by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

4 “(b) Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor or organizations and employers that make membership in the labor organization, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organization, a condition of employment either before or after hiring.”.

(b) APPLICABILITY OF RAILWAY LABOR ACT TO STATE RIGHT TO WORK LAWS.—Title II of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 181 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 209. EFFECT ON STATE RIGHT TO WORK LAWS. “Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor organizations and carriers that make membership in the labor organization, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organization, a condition of employment either before or after hiring.”.

Boeing lawyer rejects NLRB charges in 787 case

William Gould, a Stanford University law professor who was appointed to head the NLRB by President Bill Clinton, has his doubts about this complaint. "It's perfectly reasonable for a company to want to avoid strikes," he told me.

In his view, the board’s general counsel "is wrong when he says the company can't divert work from a union facility when it can't get a no-strike clause, so long as it offers some other means to resolve differences. I don't infer from that anti-union animus, which is prohibited."

The Right to Work folks say they’ll ask to intervene representing SC workers, according to this story. (And they think it would be terrible if there was a settlement in the case.)

Mix said his worry is that the company will agree to a settlement that weakens right-to-work laws. A top concern is that Boeing will allow the machinists union to try to organize its local plant by signing cards -- a method known as check-card voting -- instead of by secret ballot, he said.

Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon testifies at Oversight Committee field hearing in South Carolina

NLRB Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon today appeared before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform at a field hearing in South Carolina called regarding his decision to issue a complaint against the Boeing Company on April 20.

In his opening statement, Mr. Solomon said he would do his best to answer the questions of committee members while also protecting the due process rights of all parties in the ongoing case. "I am actively involved in overseeing the Boeing litigation and in strategic decisions necessary for the prosecution of this case," he noted. "My obligation to protect the independence of the Office of the General Counsel and the integrity of the enforcement process restricts my ability to offer insight into the decision-making here."

The Acting General Counsel also described the Agency’s investigative process, and his attempts to facilitate a settlement before the complaint was issued. He said, "The issuance of the complaint was not intended to harm the workers of South Carolina, but rather, to protect the rights of workers, regardless of where they are employed, to engage in activities protected by the National Labor Relations Act, without fearing discrimination. Boeing has every right to manufacture planes in South Carolina, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as those decisions are based on legitimate business considerations."

There has been no rest for an American public weary of corporate wrongdoers parading before Senate hearing rooms, blue-ribbon commissions and law enforcement panels. So they brought their case to the independent law enforcers at the National Labor Relations Board, which, in April, took action against Boeing.
Business, politicians and the media have made much over the National Labor Relations Board’s complaint against Boeing, but the outrage has been misdirected. The board was right to bring the complaint, because the law is on its side, and such complaints are a step in the right direction.

The National Labor Relations Act says that it is an unfair labor practice to retaliate against workers for union activity such as organizing.

John Kline, Representative, House

For Immediate Release

Hearing Exposes Harmful Impact of NLRB's Proposal to Rush Union Elections

Contact: Press Office (202) 226-9440

WASHINGTON, D.C.

John Kline, Representative, House, for immediate release.

The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) recently proposed a rule change that would allow the agency to conduct unfair labor practice elections in as little as 10 days, down from the current 24-42 days.

Unfortunately, this rule change, if implemented, will have a harmful impact on the fairness of elections and the free choice of employees to form or remain in a union.

Union elections are a critical aspect of American free labor. Employees have the right to choose whether or not to join a union, and an election process that is timely, orderly, and impartial is essential to protecting these rights.

This rule change would undermine the free choice of employees by distorting elections. Employers are more likely to intimidate employees or improperly influence them. And employees are more likely to be coerced, intimidated, or persuaded to change their minds in a 10-day election than in a 24-42 day election.

The NLRB also proposed another rule change that would eliminate the right of employees to have union stewards present at polling places during the election. If this rule change is implemented, employees will be less likely to seek assistance from union stewards and will be more likely to go unaided when marking their ballots. The result will be an election that is even less fair than the currently proposed 10-day election.

The NLRB's proposals will also undermine the rights of non-voting employees. If this rule change is implemented, and the election is conducted in 10 days, non-voting employees will be less likely to have an opportunity to express their own preferences, and the outcome of the election will be less reflective of the true preferences of employees.

The NLRB should maintain the current election timeline, and should not eliminate the right of employees to have union stewards present at polling places. The NLRB should also be required to keep the 10-day election period applicable to all of the elections authorized by the National Labor Relations Act.

Putting ‘labor’ back in NLRB

New rules from the board curtail some of the maneuvers used to keep workers from organizing.

One of Congress’ responses to the Depression was the National Labor Relations Act, which officially encourages collective bargaining between employers and employee representatives.

Thumbs up to Sting, thumbs down to Jerry Brown

Farmworkers are exempted from the National Labor Relations Act, the federal law that gives most workers their collective bargaining rights.

Give me liberty or give me debt

Many times in life we find ourselves at major crossroads. When we do, difficult and often painful decisions must be made. America finds itself in that very position today.

...that is why we need unions. Government departments like the National Labor Relations Board and unions will protect the people and meet their needs.

Subject: Re: Senator Graham's statements

Dear Nancy,

Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:
1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a ‘Fact Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:

Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring-> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.
These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show's title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Thanks again,

Nancy Cleeland

Subject: Senator Graham's statements

Dear Ms. Cleeland,

I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Tom Bettag
Thanks for the great ideas everyone. I will try to consolidate them into a couple of answers and circulate them for suggestions.

process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Also, both Candy Crowley and Sen. Graham repeatedly said that the NLRB told Boeing they had to close the South Carolina plant. That is absolutely not true. There is a finite amount of work in question – basically 3 planes a month. Boeing has tremendous backlogs and could locate more work in SC.

I’d be happy to discuss this further. For better or worse, we’ve been in the news a fair amount lately, and probably will continue to be. I’m a long time journalist myself – just left the LATimes three years ago after a decade as their labor writer, and have been here at the NLRB for a year and a half. I’m also a fan of Candy Crowley’s, so was sorry to have to write that comment.

Dear Ms. Cleeland,

I am the executive producer of State of the Union. Your e-mail was passed to me, and I am the correct person to deal with.

You say there are “some errors,” and:
Please contact me to avoid repeating them. Also, why no attempt to contact us to balance your piece with Sen. Graham?

There is a simple answer to your question. We are a Sunday morning talk show where we allow guests to have their say, and we are more than happy to continue reporting on what they say if the record needs correcting. We made it clear after we aired Senator Graham’s statements that we would continue reporting in order to give the full story. The truth of the matter is that we did send word to our contact at the White House that this issue was going to come up, and there has been no response whatsoever.

We pride ourselves on accurate and fair reporting, and we are more than happy to pursue this further. What is it in Sen. Graham’s statements that you consider to errors?

Dear Nancy,
Let me come back to you at the end of the week with where we are. We’ll do something on Sunday, but it will be very short.

It seems there are two significant points, and correct me if you think there are more:
1) You say in your fact check that news organizations erroneously report that Boeing is being ordered to close its plant when it is only being challenged on its production of Dreamliners. That should be duly noted, but Boeing and Sen. Graham (among others) contend that the purpose of the plant was to specifically produce Dreamliners. I understand your point, but isn’t it fair to say that both things can be true?

2) You make a point of the separation between the Board and the General Counsel and point to the show’s title as being “NLRB rules against Boeing.” I can only point to your news release which uses this headline: “National Labor Relations Board issues complaint against Boeing Company for unlawfully transferring work to a non-union facility.” Everyone we turn to for guidance says this is a blurry line, and that a complaint by the General Counsel can be called a complaint by the NLRB. Is this as critical as your desire do be clear about not ordering the plant closed?

I can see that this has become broad enough that this will quickly get to be a headache for you. We’re going to try to get past it. And FYI the White House declines comment.

Hi Tom,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I appreciate the opportunity to explain my concerns. Yesterday, we put out a 'Fact
Check’ that attempted to correct the misinformation we’ve seen out there, which was repeated on your show – not only by Sen. Graham but by Candy Crowley herself. This is what we said:
Several news outlets have erroneously reported in recent days that the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Boeing Company to close its operations in South Carolina. In fact, the complaint issued on April 20 by the Acting General Counsel <http://www.nlrb.gov/news/national-labor-relations-board-issues-complaint-against-boeing-company-unlawfully-transferring-> does not seek to have the South Carolina facility closed. It seeks to halt the transfer of a specific piece of production work due to allegations that the transfer was unlawfully motivated. The complaint explicitly states that Boeing may place work where it likes, including at its South Carolina facility, as long as the decision is not made for discriminatory reasons.

In addition, the Board has not yet considered or ruled on the allegations in the complaint. Under the NLRB’s statute, the General Counsel and the Board are separate and independent, with the General Counsel functioning as prosecutor and the Board functioning as a court. The case is scheduled to be tried before an administrative law judge, acting under the Board’s authority. That decision could then be appealed to the Board itself for its decision.

These may seem to be fine points, but in fact they are very significant. When the show’s title said ‘NLRB rules against Boeing’, it fed into the idea that this was a political decision made by a political body. In fact, the Acting General Counsel – who is a career NLRB attorney recently named to the job - merely issued a complaint, which is the first step in the process. He alleged that Boeing broke the law, but now the case must be heard by an NLRB judge and perhaps ultimately the Board.

Tell him lafe is thinking about it. I had unsatisfactory conversation with Kilberg. I'll fill everyone in on Wed. I answered his questions and he is getting back to Boeing. I'll call again Friday if I don't hear sooner.

Attached is the latest, and perhaps final, version of the Boeing release with some nice additions by Rich and Celeste. Fact sheet will be coming soon. We'll link to that in the release if it's ready. Thanks everyone.
The Right to Work folks say they’ll ask to intervene representing SC workers, according to this story. (And they think it would be terrible if there was a settlement in the case.)

Mix said his worry is that the company will agree to a settlement that weakens right-to-work laws. A top concern is that Boeing will allow the machinists union to try to organize its local plant by signing cards -- a method know as check-card voting -- instead of by secret ballot, he said.

Subject: Boeing Complaint

I am writing to inform you that that, based on a merit determination by Acting General Counsel Lafe Solomon, I issued a Complaint today against Boeing, alleging violations of 8(a) (1) and (3) by their decision and various statements that they decided to place the second line for the 787 Dreamliner production at a non-union site in So. Carolina rather than with the IAM represented unit here because the union had engaged in past strikes and in order to avoid the consequences of future potential strikes. As striking constitutes protected concerted activity under the NLRA, transferring work to retaliate against employees for engaging in such activity violates the statute. The remedy we seek includes restoration of the second line here but does not seek to interfere with Boeing’s opportunity to place work anywhere, including So.Carolina, for non-discriminatory reasons. The Complaint issued only after Lafe made numerous efforts to reach a negotiated settlement.

I want to particularly recognize the hard work of Dianne, who investigated this case and who did a superb job of assembling the evidence and analyzing the legal principles. Mara is currently assigned the trial; I expect to select another attorney to work with her and of course remain open to further settlement opportunities.

I expect this case may generate significant public and press interest. Please direct any such inquiries to me.

Many thanks.

has recommended the following article from Charleston City Paper:

"AFL-CIO, local labor leader blast Boeing hearing"

(To view the article, please click the above link.)
William Gould, a Stanford University law professor who was appointed to head the NLRB by President Bill Clinton, has his doubts about this complaint. "It's perfectly reasonable for a company to want to avoid strikes," he told me.

In his view, the board's general counsel "is wrong when he says the company can't divert work from a union facility when it can't get a no-strike clause, so long as it offers some other means to resolve differences. I don't infer from that anti-union animus, which is prohibited."

outrageous, if he really said it!

Here is a copy of the amendment:

They say it: "Strengthen the existing protection in the National Labor relations Act of state right-to-work law to ensure that state laws cannot be pre-empted by union contracts or the NLRB. It provides necessary clarity to prevent the NLRB from moving forward in their case against Boeing or attempting a similar strategy against other companies. It updates the current law with the following:

Nothing in the Act shall be construed to limit the application of any State law that prohibits, or otherwise places restraints upon, agreements between labor organizations and employers, or that require the payment of dues or fees to such organizations, a condition of employment either before or after hiring."

Hi Lauren,

I realize I was mistaken. I'd gotten the idea that this was a national right to work bill from another reporter; it turns out that's not what this is. We're trying to figure out exactly what it would do.

Hey Nancy -- Thanks for helping me out with this. I really appreciate it!

For the daily story about Sens. Alexander and Graham's right-to-work legislation, I'd love to get a comment on the ramifications of the language, both for labor and for the NLRB. Something similar to what we talked about over the phone: That this is an attempt to mandate all states adopt right-to-work policies. That this legislation is really nothing new and has been introduced by the GOP many times before.

To give you a better sense of what I'm looking into for my feature story: I'm writing about the natural oscillation of the board and it's pro-union vs. pro-business decisions depending on which party is controlling the White House. My argument is that the Boeing case provides ammunition to those that are trying to prove the NLRB has an activist agenda, but in reality, the NLRB under Obama is no more pro-union than it was pro-business under the previous Bush administration. The NLRB is also under much greater scrutiny on the whole due to the larger labor environment. I would love to get a comment about the natural progression of the board becoming politicized, and how it's historically seesawed between pro-union and pro-business decisions based on the administration.

Thanks so much and please let me know if you have any questions! I'm on my cell today: 617-633-0425

Best,
Lauren
