VIII. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION OR EXPLANATIONS (Indicate part of Report.)

A. (Items 20 and 26) McCarter & English maintained a KEOGH Retirement Plan for all partners in the firm. When I withdrew from the firm, my interest in the plan was segregated into a separate account so that it is managed at my sole discretion distinctly apart from the firm's general retirement plan. Effective January 1, 1996, all participants in the plan were required to invest their accounts in one of ten mutual funds offered by Fidelity Investments, Boston, Massachusetts. Each fund participant was permitted to switch back and forth between any of these funds, but could not otherwise choose other investments. As with all mutual funds, actual investments are controlled by fund managers. Effective May 8, 2002, I withdrew from the McCarter & English plan and rolled over my entire account into an individual IRA where I was permitted to choose investments other than Fidelity funds. However, I made no change in the particular Fidelity funds in which I have been invested although in 2004 I did transfer Money Market funds into a specific investment selected by me (No. 26). In Part VII, I have listed values for the IRA as a whole and below that I have listed the specific funds or assets in which I am invested. I am doing that pursuant to the instructions given in correspondence from the Committee dated August 6, 2002. Item No. 20 represents the value for the entire IRA. Items 21-26 represent component parts of the IRA. I gather it is not required to complete Columns B and C for the individual component parts which are mutual funds where I do not control the investments. However, I have provided individual information for No. 26, even though this amount is also included in the entire IRA total in No. 20.

B. (Item 18) For many years, I listed as a liability an old investment in a real estate limited partnership investment known as Minneapolis Associates, Ltd. My account had a substantial negative basis and I had been advised by my accountant that there was a risk of tax recapture liability. In the year 2001, I received an offer to purchase my interest in Minneapolis Associates, notwithstanding its substantial negative basis. I also received in past years two cash distributions. Thus, I have removed Minneapolis Associates as a liability and listed it as an asset with the appropriate value code. I have also reported the income shown on my K-1, even where there was no actual cash distribution. This year I sold my partnership interest to the general partners. Because of the large negative basis, both the proceeds and the gain on the sale (for tax purposes) far exceeded the cash actually received (Value Code L). I have reported the sale on this report using the values I used on my 2007 individual tax return.

C. (Item 30) Before I became a Judge, I had created a life insurance trust to which I transferred four policies, three issued by Mass Mutual and one by Northwestern Mutual. Depending on circumstances, [REDACTED] will be beneficiaries of the trust when I die. The Trustee is an individual attorney. I have been paying the premiums to the Trustee, but since [REDACTED] are the beneficial owners of the trust, these payments to the Trustee for premiums are treated as gifts to the beneficial owners. All four policies are whole life policies which have cash values. The value code in Column B(1) reflects all dividends received by the Trustee whether or not paid out in cash or used to reduce premiums. The value code in Column C(1) reflects the combined cash value of the four policies in the trust. Dividends not used to reduce premiums are paid by the Trustee to [REDACTED] as beneficial owner of the trust. In prior years, policy loans were made on some policies to pay a portion of the premiums. Dividends have also been used to pay interest on policy loans.

D. (Item 7) [REDACTED] Rhodia were, as a result of a corporate reorganization exchanged for [REDACTED] of "new" Rhodia. The [REDACTED] were exchanged for cash as part of the reorganization leaving me with an even [REDACTED].

E. (Item 36) Inadvertently omitted from 2006 report. Purchased 1/6/06. Purchase Price - "K". Income during 2006 - "None". Value at end of 2006 - "J".
