Mr. William F. Marshall
425 Third Street SW, Suite 800
Washington, DC 20024

Dear Mr. Marshall:

I refer to our letter dated November 25, 2016, regarding the release of certain Department of State material under the Freedom of Information Act (the "FOIA"), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The processing of records responsive to your request is ongoing and has yielded an additional 411 documents. After reviewing these documents, we have determined that 111 may be released in full, and 300 may be released with excisions. All released material is enclosed.

An enclosure explains the FOIA exemptions and other grounds for withholding material. Where we have made excisions, the applicable exemptions are marked on each document. All non-exempt material that is reasonable segregable from the exempt material has been released.

We will keep you informed as your case progresses. If you have any questions, your attorney may contact Trial Attorney, James Bickford, at (202) 305-7632 or James.Bickford@usdoj.gov. Please refer to the case number shown above in all correspondence about this case.

Sincerely,

Eric F. Stein, Acting Director
Office of Information Programs and Services

Enclosure: As stated

The Freedom of Information Act (5 USC 552)

Hi H--

Know you are in Europe doing Great Work, as usual.

I stopped my column for Wash Times after my friend Exec Editor John Solomon resigned on principle. But still writing each Thurs for The Hill - and am using my favorite theme, "Purple Nation."

Saw Pres Clinton in NH Wed night - my soulmate Chris Spirou, who predicted your win in NH primary, invited me up as guest. Pres Clinton was truly great - still the second best public speaker and politically gifted person I have ever known. (You remain my #1!)

Congratulations on Chelsea. Pres Clinton actually said he looked forward to be a grand-father!!!!

Be well, sleep when you can, and you continue to amaze me and everyone else with the job you are doing (and with highest job approval rating of anyone in office on Washington and maybe in the world! Funny how life is a full circle and there is justice somewhere sometimes....)

My best wishes to you, the President, Chelsea and your future son-in-law for happy and health holidays (those two worlds being the ONLY ones that truly matter).

Lanny

(My column is below in case you want to read it)

Purple Nation

By Lanny J. Davis

<http://mobile.thehill.com/opinion/columnists/lanny-davis/>

The Obama White House must consider last week to have been a pretty good one. When the president is attacked personally in the same week both from the right by former Reagan speechwriter and Wall Street Journal columnist, Peggy Noonan, and from the left, by New York Times columnist Maureen Dowd, he must figure he's in the right place politically and substantively.

Late last week, Ms. Noonan made a rather personal attack on Mr. Obama for what she described as his "iconic" bow to the Emperor of Japan. This, she concluded, emblemized Mr. Obama's weakness as president. Then came the witty and acerbic Ms. Dowd a day or so later, noting that "President Obama can often be more interested in wooing opponents than tending to those who put themselves on the line for him."

Meanwhile, here are the facts and results in the reality-land called the White House:

*Mr. Obama returned from his trip to Asia after obtaining some concessions from the Chinese on global warming for the first time ever; and then China also indicated it would join Russia, for the first time ever, to support increased pressures on Iran to cease its development of a nuclear bomb. Funny how that respectful bow to an emperor seemed more important to some conservative Republican critics of Mr. Obama than these concrete, albeit preliminary, results of his trip to the Far East.

*Then on Tuesday night, after many weeks of deliberations, President Obama made the tough decision on Afghanistan to send 30,000 additional U.S. GIs (plus, he hopes, additional troops from NATO countries). But he made that decision not, as Ms. Dowd might suggest, in order to "woo opponents," but rather, based on a careful assessment of facts, a variety of opinions -- elected officials from both sides of the aisle, experts, civilian and military -- and then he exercised his best judgment. The mission, which he clearly spelled out in his sober speech Tuesday night, is to prevent Afghanistan from reverting to a rogue, Taliban-controlled state -- one that provides safe harbor to Al Qaeda, and thus, increases the risks of a terrorist attack on the U.S. Most of Mr. Obama's, traditional anti-war Democratic Party base are probably unhappy with his speech and his decision.

*Yet this is the same Barack Obama who banned torture and closed Gitmo, pleasing the left; but refused to prosecute Bush Administration officials for war crimes or even to support a Truth Commission, offending the left. This is the same Obama who has led this nation closer than it has ever been in its history to a national health insurance system, pleasing the left; while indicating he is willing to give up a government -- run "public option" if that's what it takes to pass the bill, and thus, offending the left.

So which is it? The weak Obama who bows to an emperor? Or the Obama who is willing to use increased military strength to protect the U.S. from another 9/11?

Is it Obama the liberal, who believes in the FDR-embedded principal of government as a friend, not an enemy, and national health insurance as a follow-on to Social Security and Medicare? Or Obama the centrist, who fundamentally believes in the bedrock role of the private sector in a free market economy -- i.e., who is ready to pass a national health insurance plan that almost entirely relies on the private insurance industry (even if a public option were included)?

To me, the answer is as obvious as it is displeasing to the both the hard left and hard right: Barack Obama was during his campaign, and remains to this day, a pragmatic man of the center-left.

I wasn't an Obama supporter during the primaries -- and I don't always agree with him on every issue. For example, my gut favors getting out of Afghanistan entirely, based on past history and too many memories of Vietnam. But I am impressed with this president's careful and thoughtful decision-making; so I am going to trust him and support his decision on Afghanistan and hope and pray he has made the right decision.

Now comes the next battle. Purist liberals will again be angry when the president supports a health care bill without the public option, as he must, since it will be the only way national health insurance can get enacted into law this year. But as I've written before: I'll bet not one of those brave liberals who insist it is better to do without any bill than one without a public option have been forced to take a sick child to a public hospital emergency room because they couldn't afford health insurance; or have risked bankruptcy -- or even death -- for the same reason.

Such purist liberals who see the good as the enemy of the perfect may not be salvageable. But I only hope that thoughtful and fair-minded conservative Republicans in the congress will give President Obama a chance to work with them and pragmatic progressive Democrats to create the bi-partisan consensus that he and most Americans – left, right and center – truly want in the months and years ahead.

Will I receive a full notebook for approps hearings tonight?

I'd like a call this afternoon or evening to go over the draft Af-Pak regional strategy. Who should be on call? It is quite good but lacks "milestones" and budgets for each section.

Re the required report for Kerry-Lugar, I want to be sure that the language in both our report and this one echo the same language.

I never called Patricia Espinosa--should I?

Also, have we rec'd a memo from Shaun Woodard for Robinson and McGuinness calls?

There will also be a PC on Af-Pak Tuesday and I want to be sure our report is ready.

The latest draft is getting closer. And I agree w Dan that we have to be careful not to topple the tree w too many ornaments. That said, I'd like to have a call w you (and anyone else who you think should be on) this afternoon or evening to raise a few points. I'm copying Lona and Huma so they can help schedule it. Thanks for all your good work.

Bloomberg's David Glovin just called the PA FO. Whoever answered the phone decided to transfer the call to me. He asked for help obtaining the contact info for the "Clinton Campaign Treasurer." I said that I just work for the State Department and have no information about that.

I googled him and he's the NYC-based Federal Courts Reporter.

Iona and I wanted to give you an update on travel both alonzo and mario are recommending against travel today reagan is still closed until this afternoon per alonzo.
mario is holding seats on 7am tomorrow.
as for trains, i talked to amtrak, they have trains running, some approx 1 hour behind schedule and a couple have canceled but they are running today.
Iona will be hearing from melanne in the next few hours or so about whether event will be on or canceled tomorrow.
will keep you updated

"Hey piece in IHT today is good and thoughtful, tho I think misses a bit – especially in headline (which I know you don't write) – the upsides of what transpired. If 6 weeks from now all the major players have inscribed their targets/policies and we're on the way to 100 + countries signing up (and with endorsements of African Union and AOSIS that seems more than realistic), the Copenhagen Accord will start to look pretty damn significant.

"Then, if we can start framing the financial and technology institutions it calls for and guidelines for a transparency and verification system, it will become a key focus for international endeavor.

"The real question in Copenhagen wasn't whether we got the Accord or a legal treaty, it was whether we got the Accord or Doha. And if you'd have laid down a Vegas bet on Wednesday night that we'd get the Accord, you'd be a rich man now.

"This was a big deal. Not the treaty people wanted, but that was a mirage by the time Copenhagen opened, and even well before that.

"We'll see where the process goes.

Talk soon. Todd"

holidays to all.

Thanks for the superb and critical support. White House performed magnificently at every level (as did our own Secretary of State). Mike a superstar, POTUS goes without saying, but whole team of Ben and others was terrific throughout, and especially at crunch time, when it was all in balance. Thanks so much. Todd

About the New Zealand United States Council

RELEASE IN FULL

The New Zealand United States Council was established in 2001. It is a non-partisan organization, funded by business and the Government, and committed to fostering and developing a strong and mutually beneficial relationship between New Zealand and the United States.

The strong friendship that exists between New Zealand and the United States has been built up over many years and reflects common interests and shared values. In today's significantly less stable global environment it is important that the relationship between New Zealand and the United States encompasses the broadest possible engagement.

Government to government contacts between the two countries remain essential and strong business to business links with the world's largest economy are vital to New Zealand's future prosperity and economic development.

The NZ US Council stands as a credible, non-governmental voice in this relationship. It has developed excellent networks and initiatives to expand and enhance New Zealand's relationship with the United States. The Council's supporters and sponsors include some of New Zealand's largest companies covering the primary, manufacturing, finance, travel, new technology and services sectors.

The Council works closely with its counterpart in Washington DC, the US NZ Council, with other business groups in New Zealand and with government agencies, especially the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade and the New Zealand Embassy in Washington.

The Council is governed by a Board of directors chaired by the Rt Hon James Bolger ONZ, former Prime Minister of New Zealand. The Council's Executive Director is Stephen Jacobi. An Advisory Board provides advice and support to the Board. The Auckland Regional Chamber of Commerce and Industry provides administrative support to the Council.

RELEASE IN FULL

The American Chamber of Commerce

The American Chamber of Commerce in New Zealand exists to promote two-way trade and investment relationships primarily between New Zealand and the United States and also within the Asia-Pacific region.

New Zealand United States trade and investment have a considerable impact on the New Zealand economy. The USA has become New Zealand's second largest trading partner with trade totaling in excess of $NZ 9 billion. US companies operating in New Zealand account for investment totaling in excess of $NZ12.6 billion and thousands of jobs.

Through membership of the United States Chamber of Commerce, AmCham New Zealand has liaison relationships with all Chambers in the United States and more than 83 AmCham offices in 73 countries abroad including the influential APCAC – the Asia Pacific Council of American Chambers of Commerce.

AmCham New Zealand is able to provide a unique service for members by being the largest conduit for enquiries from American companies seeking business contacts in New Zealand.

Through the international division of the Chamber in Washington, AmCham New Zealand is able to provide American business and administration officials with information on local legislation and fiscal actions affecting international trade and investment.

A not for profit organization, AmCham New Zealand is run and financed by New Zealand based business people with an annually elected Board of Directors. It employs an experienced Executive Director to ensure the highest professional standards.

New Zealand-based businesses form the majority of members.

Dear Friends:

We will convene a conference call tomorrow (Wednesday, December 23) at 11:00 am to discuss the Secretary's January trip to Hawaii, Papua New Guinea, New Zealand, and Australia. OpsCenter colleagues will call out to you to patch you into the conference. I will send shortly a separate e-mail attaching a draft outline of the trip and proposed event scenarios. Many thanks and I look forward to working with you on this fourth trip to Asia in the past 12 months!...km

Subject: FW: END OF THE GOLDMAN CASE

I thought I would share this heartfelt message from Patricia Lamego de Teixeira Soares, the head of Brazil's Central Authority, the office responsible for Hague Convention abduction cases. You will see that in spite of our efforts to protect the son, the Brazilian family chose to make a spectacle outside the Consulate this morning by parading Sean through a crowd. Ms. Lamego recently visited the U.S. where she met with members of Congress and others to explain all that the Brazilian Central Authority was doing to reunite Sean and his father under the Hague Convention. The delays we saw in this case were largely the result of a wealthy, well connected family able to influence court decisions.

We are all relieved and thrilled to see this long overdue but very happy ending. I should also highlight the amazing work done by US Mission Brazil. The consular staff, Charge, Acting DCM (Marie Damour, the Consul General in Brasilia), LegATT, RSO, and a host of others all played a role in this successful return. My OCS DAS, Michele Bond, and her dedicated team also played a big role in communicating with David, his lawyers, Congress, and the press. We had Members of Congress, former Assistant Secretaries and US Ambassadors all pitching in. While there were disagreements at times over tactics, we all agreed that we were working towards the same goal: the safe return of Sean.

We particularly appreciate the strong support from the Secretary. Many people will try to take credit for today's happy reunion but it was the Secretary's continued concern and interest in this case that made the difference. We could not have provided a better gift to David Goldman during this season of giving. Janice

Dear All,

The Goldman case finally came to an end, and despite the efforts of all involved the hand over of the child to the US Consulate in Rio was transformed into a deplorable display of the child walking in the streets with the maternal family, being exposed to the media and to the public that surrounded the consulate.

I'm sorry this had to happen but it seems that Mr. Sergio Tostes, the maternal family's attorney, did not feel at all embarrassed to use and expose the child, who was probably under severe stress, in order to gather support for his position. This most despicable man is not accepting the fact that, despite his life long relationships with influential authorities in Brazil, he was unable to win the case and Sean is finally being reunited with his only real father.

I just hope that David and the Goldman family find enough time to recover their lives and their relationship with Sean. They need time more than anything else and now it is up to the US government to guarantee that David Goldman will not have to face the maternal family once again in the US courts where, according to Mr. Tostes last declaration to the Brazilian press, he will "fight to defend the child".

Please allow David Goldman to live in peace with his son and have the life that he deserves after fighting so much for so many years.

In my name and in the name of all the staff of the Brazilian Central Authority I wish David, Sean, and their family all the best and a most happy life once they are finally back in the United States.

And to all of you who worked so much in support of this case, our deepest gratitude. We wish you all a Merry Christmas

RELEASE IN FULL

CJCS Guidance for 2009-2010

Purpose

21 December 2009

The purpose of this memorandum is to relay priorities for my strategic objectives through 2010. This document directs the Joint Staff and informs the Joint Force.

Intent

The three priorities I established upon becoming Chairman continue to direct our course. We will improve stability and defend our vital national interests in the broader Middle East and South Central Asia. We will focus on Health-of-the-Force by considering holistically how to better prepare our force and care for our people. And, we will balance global strategic risks by deterring conflict, while always being prepared to act decisively should deterrence fail.

Brief Assessment

Afghanistan has deteriorated in the last year, but reversing the Taliban's momentum is achievable. Pakistan has made progress in its fight against militants, but its internal security remains vital for us. Most critically, Iran's internal unrest, unpredictable leadership, and sponsorship of terrorism make it a regional and global concern—a concern heightened by its determined pursuit of nuclear weapons. A responsible drawdown in Iraq can cement past successes, bringing a better peace to a war torn country. Conditions on the ground there have improved dramatically, making our commitment to a responsible drawdown possible.

While Al Qaeda is weakened, its intent to attack the U.S. and our interests remains clear. The threat is still real. Globally, many extremists operate in loosely coupled networks and falsely claim to speak for the vast and peaceful religion of Islam. They are funded by criminal enterprises and by some governments who want to capitalize on their violence and hatred. Military activities can disrupt them, and buy time for diplomatic efforts and terrorism's inherent contradictions to cripple Al Qaeda. But, their eventual defeat requires the support of many global partners and a broad application of civil services—as well as support from those who represent the millions of Muslims seeking a positive future for their children.

HA 09/01/2015

Priorities and Strategic Objectives

Defend Our Vital National Interests In The Broader Middle East and South Central Asia

The goal of the President's Afghanistan-Pakistan Strategy is clear: to disrupt, dismantle, and defeat al Qaeda in Pakistan and Afghanistan, and to prevent its capacity to threaten America and our allies in the future.

Our main effort now must be to push forces into the theater as quickly as possible--including shifting the balance of enablers from Iraq. We do not fight alone. Ally and partner contributions will speed our success. But combat leaders in all theaters and at all levels must continue to be both creative and efficient in force employment. How force is used often matters more than how much we have. We should extend wartime initiatives like the Pakistan-Afghanistan Coordination Cell, Afghanistan-Pakistan Task Force, and the Afghanistan-Pakistan Hands program. Still, far too many of our daily practices do not match the speed of war.

We must continue to push our best talent forward and into the fight. I will take gaps in manning the Joint Staff in order to support the war. I expect Combatant Commanders and Services outside of CENTCOM to consistently make choices, however painful, that fully support the fight.

The President's Strategy sets us on an urgent course in the region. My engagements with Pakistan have convinced me of the importance of a long-term U.S. commitment. To achieve our strategic goals, we must deliver robust civilian and military assistance programs to the government of Pakistan. These and other initiatives will set the conditions for a more stable region and deny a safe haven to those who would do us harm.

In Iraq, there is reason for optimism. In accordance with the President's direction, we will end our combat mission by August 31, 2010, and our forces will transition to advising and training Iraqi security forces as well as providing force protection. Our efforts and those of our allies and partners, coupled with the demonstrated commitment of the Iraqi people, have increased security and stability in Iraq. Drawing down must be closely managed. Lingerings tensions could flash. But sustained security gains to date and Iraq's continued progress have placed it on a positive course for the future. We must finish well in Iraq.

The President's efforts at engagement, UN actions, and regional initiatives have given Iran's rulers ample incentive to cease developing nuclear arms. No resolution is yet in sight, but I fully support the effort to focus on diplomatic solutions to existing tensions. My belief remains that political means are the best tools to attain regional security and that military force will have limited results. However, should the President call for military options, we must have them ready.

The broader Middle East and South Central Asia will remain important to the security of the United States for years to come. Strengthening professional relationships with our regional counterparts is thus essential to addressing our shared interests. Consistency, patience, and respect should guide our long term engagement.

Health-of-the-Force

As a global force with global responsibilities, we shoulder a heavy burden. While we remain the most capable military in the world, the stress on our forces and the strain on our families are real. Deployed forces from our Active and Reserve Components and National Guard will remain high, exacerbating these concerns even further. Though we have made progress, we will not see marked improvements in the ground force dwell time until 2011. Health-of-force goes beyond our people—our systems and capabilities are under extraordinary stress as well, and resetting and reconstituting the force will take significant time and resources.

Our core responsibility is to win wars while caring for our people and their families. They are the heart and soul of our formations, our fleets, and our air expeditionary wings, and our incredible fighting spirit. As a Nation, we have a solemn obligation to support fully, across the spectrum of need, our service men and women, standing and fallen, and their families. As leaders, we must ensure that all receive the care, counseling, training, and financial support they need to become self-sufficient and lead productive and fulfilling lives. We have not yet done enough here, particularly in research and care for the unique wounds of our current wars. We must accelerate our efforts while connecting with community based efforts throughout America. To understand the way forward, we will conduct an independent assessment of the progress—and setbacks—in the care of our warriors over the last two years. We owe this to our warriors who have given the Nation so much.

Our culture must value and support a continuum of care that lasts for a lifetime, and encompasses military members, retirees, and their families. Making that culture shift will require constant attention and cooperation between myself and the Chiefs, and close work with the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Department of Veteran Affairs.

I am concerned that we still do not have a holistic and clear way of measuring all the components of health-of-the-force, ranging from unit readiness, training, and age of weapon systems to retention/recruiting and personnel challenges, like suicide or divorce. In measures like dwell time, we still do not have sufficient fidelity below the unit level, down to the impacts on individuals and families. We do not yet have a common understanding of the time and costs to reset and reconstitute our forces—but just how fast and how well we reset will become a driver for global risk. We must make all of these a higher priority.

The country faces mounting deficits and growing debt. That will require difficult budget decisions for our government. As we carry out our assigned missions and reset a tired force, we must guard against growing hollow. The quality of the force remains paramount.

That our people continue to excel under stress and strain is a testament to our remarkable military culture and core values, as well as great support from the Congress and many of our fellow citizens. Professionalism, standards of conduct, discipline, mutual respect and mutual support are the basis of our resiliency. We must sustain the strength of character that is the heart of our armed forces. It is a strength that comes from the remarkable diversity of the citizens we protect. As always, first class training and elite leaders will be imperative. We must continue to emphasize and improve the diversity of our military across ethnic and gender lines, especially for the officer corps.

I remain concerned that the pace of operations prevents us from training for the entire range of war and erodes our ability to counter future threats. Current operations place at risk our ability to generate additional ground forces for another contingency, should one arise.

Ensuring the health-of-the-force will require a broad set of flexible capabilities that deter aggression globally. With this in mind, we must make wise investments in our fleets, formations, and aerial systems (manned and unmanned), and especially in the capabilities that tie them together. We have important steps ahead to return our units to the desired levels of readiness, articulate vital national interests, and determine the best mix of capabilities and programs to protect those interests. The wars in Afghanistan and Iraq will end, and we must think today about how the US military will need to adapt to future threats. The health-of-the-force investments that we make today will pay dividends in national security tomorrow and well into the next generation.

Properly Balanced Global Strategic Risk

Properly balancing global strategic risk begins with appreciating the complexity of our current security environment. Geographically, that means understanding the criticality of the Pacific Rim, of Africa, and our own hemisphere. It means monitoring the spread of technology that could empower new threats. And it means appreciating the fundamental need to secure the global commons: sea, air, space and cyberspace. This year's Chairman's Risk Assessment and National Military Strategy will frame our approach to defending our nation against the full range of threats and addressing our own vulnerabilities.

Increasingly, freedom of movement and peaceful use of the global commons are being challenged as well as exploited by transnational threats—among them terrorism, proliferation, natural disasters, illicit trafficking, piracy and cyber attacks. We have given the cyber domain more organizational effort. But we must put more resources—intellectual, money, and people—into accelerating development of our cyber capabilities and integrating them into our daily operations. Impeded progress here is a serious risk in our national security posture.

Tensions also persist between nations as they compete for energy, water and other scarce resources. Climate change and environmental degradation increase these tensions, putting pressure on vulnerable populations while changing our operating space, in the Arctic and elsewhere. We do not yet understand the military implications of the changing global environment, and must examine them closely to be ready.

The proliferation of nuclear weapons and missile technology is a pressing concern. We must continue to work with the international community in the areas of counter-terrorism, counter-proliferation, and crisis response to ensure the safety of nuclear arsenals and to prevent enabling technologies, materials and know-how from falling into the wrong hands.

Critical to balancing global risk are improving processes to assess it. We need to listen more carefully to the Combatant Commanders, cross-level their views of threats and opportunities, and independently convey the risks involved to executing plans with available forces. I expect us to constantly improve here, with better mechanisms for coordinating between the Joint Staff, the Services, and Combatant Commanders across geographic and functional boundaries. We must build a common understanding of global risk, regardless of where we sit.

In the near term, we will maintain focus on regular and irregular threats to vital national interests and to our forces directly in harm's way. We must continue to build proficiency in irregular warfare while restoring the balance and strategic depth required to assure national security. This means finding the right size, shape, and posture to globally detect, deter, and defeat current and future threats. Enhancing deterrence is critical in balancing our global risk, and updating our warning processes is essential. We must rethink what deterrence means where familiar problems are coupled with transnational, non-state and proliferation threats. Increasing our pool of talented minds to address these issues is critical, and we should look outside traditional frameworks for solutions.

Persistent global engagement underpins our strategic priorities. It supports our allies and partners through programs abroad and at home—programs that are best conducted hand-in-hand with our interagency, commercial partners, and non-governmental organizations to achieve sustainable results. Our capacity building efforts are good examples of long-term investments that bolster security and stability by helping emerging powers become constructive actors. Enduring international relationships are essential to our strategic priorities, global security and stability, and securing our vital national interests. Our military must be capable of reassuring our allies while tempering potential adversaries' offensive designs, by imposing prohibitive costs on those who would destabilize the commons or attack our interests.

Conclusion

In providing my best military advice over the past two years, I have emphasized that military activities must support rather than lead foreign policy. We have learned from the past eight years of war that we serve best when we are part of an approach that employs all elements of national power. By operating hand-in-hand with allies and partners, supporting the interagency, and working outside organizations, we will provide the Nation with the security the Constitution guarantees.

Thank you for your superb performance during a critical time in our Nation's history. Your sustained and unwavering investment of intellect, time, and energy has enabled me to provide my very best advice to the President and the Secretary of Defense.

Dear Cheryl and Jack,

The Secretary was kind enough to forward to you our exchanges on USAID contracting practices and the conflict between their (and their cost plus contractors) adversity to risk and the need to succeed in our mission in Afghanistan, as outlined by the President.

Symbion Power, a company of which I am a director has a strong record of success in difficult environments having completed nine projects for the U.S. military in Iraq between 2004 and now. These projects included a power transmission line across al Anbar province during the height of the war there, and two power substations in Sadr city during the fighting there. The key to our success has been partnering with local entities and training local employees to do the work. In four years we have trained and certified over 3000 linesmen in a partnership with the Northwest Linesman College in Boise, and our joint venture partner is now fully capable of bidding on projects on his own.

You may recognize this strategy, as it is one that was subsequently used by General Petraeus and forms the basis of the thinking about succeeding in Afghanistan. Symbion has experience in Afghanistan where our corporate philosophy of training locals to do the work was also succeeding before we terminated Black and Veatch for various reasons. While we were there, we took a hard look at the power transmission line project from Kajaki to Kandahar. In fact, we sent 5 people to survey the area, including all the towns along the line route and they had no problem whatsoever. They took hundreds of photographs and produced a situation report of the existing facilities. They were locals from that area whom we had trained in Kabul, which is why they had no problems. When asked if they thought we could get the work done, they all immediately said YES, without a sign of any hesitation. And yet, we are told that USAID will not move to reobligate the funding owing to ongoing security concerns.

Using security as an excuse not to do the job will ultimately undermine everything this administration hopes to accomplish in Afghanistan. In this particular project, for example, electricity would be brought from the north through scores of villages to Kandahar. Jobs will be created for Afghans in the region, work will be generated, money will be earned and spent, alternatives provided to joining the Taliban. All of these are goals of the Afghan effort and we are persuaded that they are achievable now.

Our experience with the U.S. Government in both Iraq and Afghanistan is that in Iraq the money was controlled by the military which was much more goal oriented. The quick fix for the Kajaki-Kandahar project would be to take the money from USAID and let the military manage it. If that is not possible, then there has to be some acceptance of risk in support of the objectives to be met.

The President of Symbion, Paul Hinks, who is an addressee on this email, can far more eloquently describe our activities in Iraq and the keys to our success. He is available to travel to DC on a moment's notice if you would like to meet or speak with him.

All the best in 2010. Joe

Dear Madame Secretary,

I am taking the liberty of sending this directly to you rather than through Sid because it is of immediate import and is outside Sid's area of expertise.

Further to our discussion about working in dangerous areas and pacifying them, we were shocked to learn that USAID and its coterie of pet Cost Plus Contractors are mothballing projects and refusing to consider others because of the perceived danger. With that as an attitude, we will not succeed in Afghanistan. This flies in the face of recent policy decisions, and should be seen as such. If AID won't do the job, money should be transferred to the military. They are better at understanding the real risk, contracting and spending the money. And the Cost plus contractors should just get out and let companies like Symbion, who have a proven track record get in there and roll up our sleeves.

I have attached and copied below a memo to me from Paul Hinks, the President of our company which lays out our thinking.

Valerie joins me in extending our best wishes to you and the family this holiday season. All the best for the new year, Joe

Memorandum

For. Joe Wilson

From. Paul Hinks

Date. 18th December 2009

Electricity Infrastructure in Southern Afghanistan

President Obama has announced a US troop increase in Afghanistan and it seems like most of the deployment is in the hostile areas in the south and in the east. He has also stated that there will be a considerable civil component that will accompany the troop surge.

In contradiction, USAID has now stated publicly that they have mothballed the installation of the new turbine at Kajaki hydro-electric plant and they will not be able to build the new 110kV transmission line from Kajaki to Sangin, Tangi, Duri Junction, Lashkar Gah and then Kandahar. USAID funds have been available for this project since 2006 but nothing has been done. They say that the funds will be reallocated to less hostile places where it is easier to work.

The stated reason for mothballing all this work is that it cannot be executed due to poor security conditions in the region. That is exactly what we were told in 2005 in Iraq. That the 400KV transmission line stretching 300kms from Baiji to Haditha and then onwards to Al Qaim in Al Anbar Province could not be built. Similar sentiments existed about the two 132KV gas insulated substations inside Sadr City in Baghdad which was another 'no go' area controlled by Shiite militias.

The large US 'Cost Plus' contractors who were awarded those construction projects in 2004 told the government that they could not complete them due to security. The government then terminated the contracts and re-bid them on a Firm Fixed Price Lump Sum basis. Both of these projects were awarded to Symbion. We employed extraordinary methods, working with Sheiks and other local leaders and we trained people from those places to do the work. The result was that we successfully completed these projects and a further 7 projects most of which were in insecure locations.

I feel very strongly about the fact that we are withdrawing funding from an area where we need to win over the hearts and minds of the indigenous population. I simply do not agree that this work cannot be done. We have studied the area and we have surveyed both the dam and the 178kms of line route. We started training people from rural villages in Helmand Province in 2008 to do this work, but neither USAID or the Louis Berger & Black & Veatch Joint Venture have allowed it to proceed. If they had done so it would have been finished by now.

The turbine for Kajaki was delivered to the site by a British and Canadian force of around 3000 men soldiers and airmen with attack helicopters and armored personnel carriers. This ISAF operation in which 200 insurgents were killed was described in the newspapers as 'the biggest of it's kind since World War 2'.

After this I ask how can anyone consider stopping the installation and commissioning work ?

We (Symbion) can build this power line and the associated substations in an 18 month period and we can almost certainly complete the generation work at Kajaki. If the line is routed through the villages and towns that are hostile to our troops we can build relations with the local people by using them to undertake the work. This will in turn translate into a more congenial atmosphere for the troops as they conduct their own operations and they build friendships in the same places as we are operating. It is simply a defeatist approach to pull out of Kajaki and to give up on the transmission line. It really can be done.

This is exactly what transpired in Iraq. We worked hand in hand with various US military units, most notably with the US Marine Corps and the US Army Corps of Engineers and at the same time we employed 3000 Iraqi's in supposedly hostile territory infested with insurgents and Al Qaeda in Iraq foreign fighters. All the time we engaged the Sheiks and the villagers.

Commanders such as General Long and General Dorko of USACE, Colonel Mike Moon and Commander Steve Stancey of JCC-I can all testify about this project. Current Commanders resident in Ramadi such as General Rick Tryon and his Chief of Staff Colonel Bull Lanham are aware of what we did in Al Anbar and they know of the good relations we have with leaders there today.

Through your good contacts with senior people in the government do you think it is possible to draw attention to this issue. They must not withdraw and they should rather adopt an aggressive approach to getting this work done. They must not take the easy route and divert money elsewhere.

This is more than a business opportunity. I am passionate about it and I want to help us succeed in Afghanistan. To do this we must calm this region and one way of helping is to give people electricity. I've built transmission systems and power plants all my life, in areas of conflict in Africa, Iraq and elsewhere and I never met a sole who didn't thank me for giving them light and heat.

We are probably the only company on this planet that has done something like this before. It is a unique situation and I don't think there will be any other firm prepared to bid for the work due to the perceived risks. However, we have a formula for success and if we work collaboratively with ISAF and US forces it will all get done and everyone will benefit.

Since it's unlikely that there will be other qualified bidders for something of this nature I am prepared to work on any formula that the government requires to satisfy requirements for cost control and transparency. We have already undertaken basic scheme design for the transmission line and it would take weeks, not months to negotiate and get started.

If you need anything from me to support what I am saying in this memo please let me know.

Best Regards

Subject: Kajaki & SEPS

HA 09/01/2015

Here is a report from last week about what's happening in Kajaki and the SEPS (South Eastern Power System). I simply don't believe that there is no way to get concrete poured in the dam. It requires sand, stone, cement and water and a batching plant, all of which can be stockpiled. I'll bet that if the goods are purchased from suppliers in the villages nearby they will be lining up at the gate to sell it. Or the ingredients can be heavy lifted by helo into the plant - slow but possible. It sounds like they are looking for a reason to go home, not a way to get it done.

In 2004, when Washington Group & KEC were awarded the Haditha work, including that dam work we were told the exact same story. That supplies could not be delivered into the dam. The roads outside were also 'no go' and they were effectively controlled by the insurgents, who 'mined - IED'd' them every evening. Not a sole from Washington Group or KEC would go near the area - and in the end the work was T4C'd - in the case of KEC it was T4D'd because they would not start work.

Between Symbion & Hart - working with the locals we got the work done despite what appeared to be insurmountable challenges. The US were happy to see cooperation between us and the locals in Iraq and it's what is needed in Afghanistan. We will employ them not 'pay them off' just as we did in Al Anbar.

This is total dejavu. Here we have a dam that people say is inaccessible for work and a 200km powerline and instead of Washington Group and KEC we have Louis Berger and Black and Veatch who are probably very happy to have funds moved to other areas.

I've attached a memo I sent after talking to Joe. He is going to see if he can get any traction in DC. I think it's worth making an effort to point these things out as it will be sad to see this area neglected when it's possible to get the work done. I've also attached the Guardian article and the USAID IG report which gives more details.

HUGE TURBINE MOTHBALLED AS TALIBAN CONTROLS DAM ROAD

Joe Sinclair, Press Association

A huge hydro-electric turbine dragged 110 miles by British troops through Taliban territory in Afghanistan is being packed away because the cement required to install it cannot be delivered safely, it was reported today.

More than 2,000 UK troops led a dangerous operation to transport the turbine by road to the isolated Kajaki dam in northern Helmand in August and September last year.

HA 09/01/2015

The mission was hailed a success and it was hoped electricity provided by the turbine would help win Afghan hearts and minds.

But 15 months later the area continues to be besieged by Taliban fighters and the turbine's components remain unassembled because Nato has been unable to secure a 30-mile stretch of road needed to deliver the huge amounts of cement required.

John Smith-Screen, head of energy and water projects for the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), told the Guardian the turbine parts were being packed away and it was looking for other energy projects to invest in across Afghanistan.

He said: "Our message is that until we have a secure road we cannot continue with the installation of turbine two.

"When the turbine was moved in by British and American forces it was a huge effort and it was done in a point of time. But we can't move in the large quantity of cement and aggregate that we need in a point of time, we need a sustained effort."

He said a Chinese company CMIC contracted to install the turbine left overnight for security reasons and the agency had not been able to find an alternative sub-contractor prepared to do the work.

Mr Smith-Screen said USAID was deciding what to do with the turbine but the process of inventorying the parts and storing them away had already begun.

The operation to transport the turbine to Kajaki was hailed at the time as one of British Army's biggest success stories.

The transport mission, taking the turbine from Kandahar Airfield to the Kajaki dam, involved nearly 4,000 ISAF troops from the UK, US, Canada, Denmark and Australia.

The convoy took six days to get to Kajaki with its 200-tonne cargo.

During the mission one British soldier was injured when he was run over by a vehicle and a Canadian soldier died when his vehicle was struck by an IED.

Cheryl -- I note that lots of offices write up weekly reports, which we don't do. But given that a lot of the people in S/P do a lot of great work that S may not know about, I had this memo written up (and believe it or not boiled down many times). We'll send it up the line, but if u wd send it to her before Monday she can skim it quickly and feel good about all the things she has made happen. AM

UNCLASSIFIEDRELEASE IN PART
B5NOTE FOR THE SECRETARY

FROM: S/P – Anne-Marie Slaughter

SUBJECT: End of Year Summary of S/P Accomplishments

As the year comes to an end, I wanted to reflect for a moment on the critical work that S/P has done over the past year and its direct impact on policy formulation and implementation, as well as on the articulation of that policy for the domestic and global community. I have a fabulous staff, all of whom are deeply engaged in a wide range of projects with other bureaus and S offices. Indeed, I see part of my function as attracting the best people possible and then lending them out to others as a collective asset. This approach also means that we often measure success precisely by things that we help make happen that we don't get direct credit for; as we all know, even the most brilliant S/P memo has to be translated into action by someone with line authority.

S/P has sought to inform you in a number of ways: providing you with sound analytical reviews; flagging issues and conflicts, developing long-term policy strategies; red-teaming existing strategies; and working closely with the speechwriters to develop an effective articulation of policy. Many members of S/P are also now directly involved with the QDDR, in helping to analyze problems and generate recommendations and in red-teaming recommendations coming from other sources. In addition to individual projects, S/P staff members now work collaboratively in five different groups: national security; global governance; development, democracy, and human rights; 21st century statecraft; and economics and energy.

Much of our days are spent in routine activities: clearing paper, working on memos with bureaus, answering dissent channel memos. But virtually every member of the staff has launched new initiatives and seen at least some of their ideas become policy and even action on the ground. I thought that you should see some of the initiatives that we have launched that have had a direct impact on the policy process. I look forward to introducing you to many of the great staff members responsible for all this when we have the traditional picture taken together as soon as we can arrange it.

U.S.-China Strategic and Economic Dialogue

- Co-lead for the conceptualization, development, and execution of the first U.S.-China Strategic and Economic Dialogue (S&ED). This Dialogue – hosted by Secretaries Clinton and Geithner with Vice Premier Wang Qishan and State Councilor Dai Bingguo – elevated the level of our discussion of foreign policy issues with a range of Chinese government ministries and gave the Secretary a valuable platform to guide U.S. relations with China. One key breakthrough of the S&ED was discussion at a senior level of overseas development assistance programs.

U.S.-India Strategic Dialogue

- Played key role in the design and launch of the overall U.S.-India Strategic Dialogue as well as a decisive role in sub-dialogues such as the U.S.-India Global Issues Forum. Our efforts and initiative helped maintain momentum in the U.S.-India relationship and lay the foundation for a strong, broad-based, and long-term partnership.

Iran

- Drafted policy paper with recommendations on Iran for the new Administration. While S/P cannot claim sole authorship of all the recommendations, many were adopted, such as an offer of direct engagement on the nuclear issue, without preconditions, as well as an offer of direct bilateral engagement. Another recommendation was to alter our rhetoric on Iran and to avoid inferences to regime change. In the wake of the political crisis after the June presidential elections, we have made recommendations on how to balance our acute concern about the deterioration of the human rights situation in Iran with our continuing efforts to achieve a resolution to Iran's nuclear issue.

- Continued to participate fully in the State Department's management of the range of Iran-related issues, including the P small group and the broader P Coordination Group on Iran. Our impact can be seen in our ability to bring together as many threads on Iran as possible and assess the Iranian perspective to look for strategic opportunities.
- Communicated with private corporation "Twitter" to ensure that its services remained available to the Iranian people as a tool of communication during a time of peak use and importance in the aftermath of Iranian Presidential elections.

Afghanistan/Pakistan

- Participated directly in the President's Afghanistan and Pakistan Strategic Review and six month re-assessment and managed the substance of the U.S.-Pakistan-Afghanistan Trilateral Dialogue with the Office of the Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan.
- Initiated concrete mechanisms for diaspora engagement, including coordinating State Department involvement with the Pakistani American community to send female doctors to Swat, working with the USAID Afghanistan and Pakistan Task Force to develop a workshop for the Pakistani Diaspora on how foreign assistance works in Pakistan; and played a key role in the growth and launch of the American Pakistan Foundation.
- Worked with Roshan telecommunications (along with DOD) to expand mobile banking in Afghanistan (where ninety-seven percent of the population does not have a bank account) to rural conflict areas to develop that population's financial capacity to save and transfer funds, receive micro-finance loans over cell phones, and make transactions for goods over cell phones .

- Continued working (along with DOD) in Wardak Province with Roshan Telecommunications on a pilot project that is paying ANP salaries via mobile phone and ensures that salaries arrive on time, in their entirety, and can be instantly transferred to family members in other districts instead of having to leave the post to deliver them.
- Worked Text Swat campaign for Pakistan, which was a grassroots campaign connecting individuals across the globe to the plight of people in Pakistan's Swat Valley. A text via any cell phone results in a $5 donation to internally displace persons through UNHCR.

- Worked with Mobile Accord and funded the establishment of the Humari Awaz (Our Voice), which was the first free Pakistani mobile phone-based social network for people to freely communicate with each other. The USG pledged to fund the first 24 million text messages for people to communicate directly and share information on where to receive medical supplies, aid, food, and other critical needs. In the first month over 100,000 people have signed up and 11.5 million texts have been sent. Since then it has exceeded 20 million texts with more than 250,000 followers.

Iraq

- Led a multi-stakeholder initiative that will bring the Iraq National Museum online. BlueStateDigital took the lead on constructing the web platform for the Iraq National Museum, set to go live early 2010. Google, building on techniques used for Google Maps and Google Street View, sent three engineers to Baghdad in October to take more than 15,000 pictures to catalog all the exhibits currently on display. After completing this phase of the project, people worldwide will be able to "walk" through the museum and take a close look at all of the artifacts in the museum. Mobile Accord established a short code and a foundation that will allow people to text "Iraq" to make a donation to the Museum. Howcast is producing "how to" instructional videos associated with the museum so that foreign visitors can learn about everything from how to help rebuild the museum to how they can determine if an Iraqi antiquity is stolen. YouTube is working with the museum to build a Museum YouTube channel in addition to its Iraqi government YouTube channel. Edelman will run a public relations campaign to help promote the "Iraqi Museum" short code and promote the museum.

- Worked a series of tech delegations to Baghdad that convinced the Iraqi government to reach beyond public sector circles in strategizing how to bring Iraq into the 21st century information grid. Resulting action included collaboration with the Deputy Prime Minister's Office to establish an Iraq Technology Task Force that brings together people from across Iraqi society, from the public and private sectors, students, women and others, to identify the technology needs of their own communities. A digital platform where U.S. tech companies will be able to receive requests directly from the Iraqi people is being finalized. Also established the Support Network for a Digital Iraq, which is a network of companies in the United States with an interest in supporting and/or investing in Iraq's ICT sector. The Network can also connect the Iraq Technology Task Force to the broader technology industry.
- Worked to establish the U.S.-Iraq Technology Internship Program, set to launch in January, which will place Iraqi engineering students in internships with American tech start-up companies to give them an entrepreneurial experience that they can bring back to Iraq. Plans are underway to establish an Iraqi venture capital fund that can be tied to this internship program.
- Worked to support YouTube's efforts with the Iraqi government to launch a YouTube channel. The channel will include clips from the Parliamentary sessions, direct messages from Iraqi leaders to citizens, instructional videos on how to engage with government services, and behind-the-scenes footage of the inner-workings of the Iraqi government.

This YouTube channel will give Iraqi citizens—and the larger global community—daily access to the milestones and challenges of the Iraqi government and aims to bring transparency, openness, and innovation to the Iraqi government and its citizens.

Western Hemisphere

- Drafted a series of memos and notes and organized a series of high-level discussions to help shape and flesh out the Administration's evolving policy toward the region and crystallize key aspects of our approach, before the new WHA Bureau leadership came on board.

Colombia Policy Planning Talks

- Led Colombia Policy Planning Talks in October that helped develop a baseline understanding of common interests, as Colombia makes the transition to a net contributor to global public good.

Honduras

- Developed pragmatic options, in consultation with WHA, that helped ensure that our response to the June 28th coup was consistent with our principles and strategic objectives and that our approach remained within the Inter American consensus.

Mexico

- Continued working with Carlos Slim on a crime alert network in Mexico that leverages telecommunications to involve citizens in reporting crimes and providing anonymous tips on drug cartel activities. Mexican telecommunication companies will subsidize the creation of a shortcode (i.e. 4044) for individuals to send in information for free. That information will be aggregated by an anonymous third party, which will then distribute the facts, figures, and information to the appropriate parties.

Cairo Implementation

- Led the Department's effort to execute the President's call in his June 4 Cairo speech for a "New Beginning with Muslims around the world." Specifics include:
 - Provided the policy lead for Cairo follow-up and developed the strategic guidance for all Bureaus, Offices, and Embassies.
 - Played leading role in close coordination with the White House and the interagency in launching and developing the initiatives the President announced in his speech (all initiatives under development; half already launched).
 - Established a continuous system of communication with our Embassies in the field to receive their input and post them on activities in Washington and a coordinating process in Washington to support the ongoing effort.
 - Worked closely with R to establish a public diplomacy effort to support and amplify our efforts.
- Developed the Economic Opportunity strategy for our "New Beginning" efforts. You announced two of these components in your Morocco speech: A Global Virtual Entrepreneurship Network and Business Development Centers.
- Formulated and developed a new partnership between the Department of State and Partners for a New Beginning, an independent group of 12 to 15 eminent Americans from industry, education, NGOs, Foundations and entertainment, that will systematically reach out to the private sector to develop partnerships to advance New Beginning programs and goals. We are finalizing the details and are working towards a launch in January 2010. Madeleine Albright has agreed to chair and Walter Isaacson has agreed to serve as a vice-chair. This is an extraordinary opportunity to harness private sector resources and capabilities in a difficult fiscal environment. It will send a powerful message to Muslims around the world that we are engaging some of our most prominent citizens to advance the New Beginning. And, this will be a flagship public-private partnership and example of 21st Century Statecraft.

Global Governance and the G-20

- Provided strategic guidance on the elevation of the G-20 as the primary forum for international economic cooperation; continue to monitor G-8 to G-20 transition process and work to protect State equities throughout the transition; engage key partners and allies to determine the most promising organization and structure for the G-8 and G-20 going forward.

Working Group on Political Islam

- Established an interagency working group on political Islam, dedicated to rationalizing policy toward non-violent Islamist groups. Produced a working paper on best practices in engaging Islamist organizations; and outreach to multiple posts is underway to map current diplomatic activity with these groups, as well as lessons learned.

Working Group on Interfaith Strategy

- Established an interagency working group on interfaith engagement strategy, which meets every 2-3 weeks to coordinate USG global interfaith efforts. Developed an interfaith strategy, as well as two signature initiatives: regional interfaith working groups (the first begins in Jakarta in January); and a proposal for Community and Interfaith Engagement Officers. We represented the USG with two well-attended listening events at the Parliament of World Religions in December.

Reinvigorating the Forum for the Future

- Worked very closely with the White House and NEA to change the focus of the Forum for the Future from a forum that promoted dialogue to a more action-oriented forum in which partners from government, the civil sector and the private sector would join together to work on shared projects responsive to the needs and aspirations of people in the broader Middle East and beyond. The Global Virtual Entrepreneurship Network is a perfect example of the sort of shared project that will help the Forum become more action and results-oriented.

U.S.-North African Economic Partnership

- Worked very closely in partnership with EEB to develop the U.S.-North African Economic Partnership initiative, in which we will put forward a series of programs to develop ties to - and between - private sector partners across the Magreb, helping to advance economic regional integration and political reconciliation. We hope that Undersecretary Hormats will be able to launch this initiative this Spring.

Middle East Regional Architecture

- Developed a proposal that was approved by Deputies to establish a new architecture for multilateral cooperation in the Middle East base. We have launched consultations on the proposal and hope to move to the next phase of our initiative within the next few months.

Yemen

- As a result of a note I sent you earlier in the year, a comprehensive, whole of government strategy to mitigate the risk of state collapse. A number of steps have already been taken to deal with the crisis in Yemen: a more integrated approach to U.S. and international assistance, including the development of a Friends of Yemen network to coordinate donor funding and to help the Yemeni government understand the need for reform, and development of a regional diplomatic strategy.

B5

Working Group on Small Gulf Monarchies and Saudi Arabia

- Worked actively with NEA and posts in the Arab Gulf to develop a five-year strategy for diplomatic efforts in Saudi Arabia, and also in the small monarchies of the Arab Gulf. S/P now facilitates a strategy working group on Small Gulf Monarchies, and is developing a working group with the embassy in Saudi Arabia. As a result, we have developed a prioritized list of our long-term objectives, and are working to develop new initiatives in these countries to meet these objectives. Targeted new initiatives include efforts to consolidate U.S. diplomacy toward Saudi Arabia, efforts to build capacity in the diplomatic networks of Gulf states, enhanced educational and professional engagement, support for economic diversification and media professionalization, and more effective coordination on policy toward Iran, Iraq, and Yemen.

DRC

- Planned collaboration between UN and non-government aid groups within the Democratic Republic of Congo along with administrators of internally displaced persons (IDPs) camps to communicate via existing mobile phone infrastructure. Information shared will pertain to criminal and in particular sexual and gender based violence (SGBV) in areas at high-risk of SGBV in and near IDP camps in eastern Congo.

- Continued working in partnership with American private sector companies, Afghan telecommunications experts, and Congolese stakeholders to establish a mobile banking program that will pay the Congolese Army's salaries via mobile payments.

Haiti

- Led the security sector component of the Haiti Policy Review headed by Cheryl Mills and continue to coordinate the development of a new security sector strategy for Haiti.

- Helped lay the groundwork leading to your April 15 announcement of the Administration's counter-piracy strategy; continue to work within the Department and the Interagency to promote the prosecution of pirates, efforts to go after pirate money, and to ensure that the USG's developing Somalia strategy will promote counter-piracy measures in Puntland and elsewhere in Somalia.

Global Health Initiative

- Developed initial conceptual framework (principles and strategic approach) for the Global Health Initiative, a six-year, $63 billion administration initiative focusing on the critical health needs of the poor.

Human Rights

- Developed matrix of reform options for the upcoming review of the Human Rights Council (HRC) in 2011, so we will be well-positioned to advance our policy of re-engagement in a way that strengthens human rights at the HRC and throughout the UN system.
- Advised DRL in designing NGO outreach strategy to 5-6 cities across the country, beginning with New Orleans, for our first HRC Universal Periodic Review, to enable us to lead by example through a transparent process. Convening the NY NGO consultation.
- Participated in the U.S. delegation to the UNGA Third Committee and HRC, to advance S/P's research into comparing the efficacy of universal membership bodies (such as the Third Committee) and limited membership bodies (such as HRC).
- With input from State and Justice Department offices, continued compiling an "elements paper" for a proposed Human Rights and Democracy Executive Order for the NSC.
- Coordinated preparation of an IM for you outlining our objections to the OIC-backed "Defamation of Religions" notion, co-signed by IO A/S Esther Brimmer, Acting DRL A/S Karen Stewart, and me. The Memo also outlines our proactive approach to combating religious intolerance.

- Continued participating in an interdepartmental working group that is examining whether and how to reposition our stance on economic, social, cultural rights.
- Assisted with elements of your speech on human rights, democracy, and development at Georgetown University in December.
- Convened a series of interdepartmental meetings on accountability for mass atrocities, such as rape in the DRC, following your trip there, to facilitate coordination of multilateral and bilateral engagement.
- Continued to work with the White House to determine an international strategy for open and equal access to the Internet in defense of Article 19 of the U.N. Declaration on Human Rights. Multifaceted approach that requires interagency collaboration, international messaging, and U.S congressional support.

Women's Issues

- To facilitate gender integration within the UN, helped IO draft the accountability language in Security Council Resolution 1888, which we sponsored and was adopted in September. The Resolution establishes a SRSG on Sexual Violence and technical teams of experts.
- Drafted an IM to you on Security Council Resolution 1325, co-signed by A/S Esther Brimmer, Amb. Melanne Verwee, and me, in anticipation of the 10 year anniversary of the Resolution, which addresses the role of women in peace negotiations and peace operations.
- Assisted S/GWI and other bureaus in framing our strategy toward the proposed UN Gender Composite, to ensure it becomes a vehicle for mainstreaming, not segregating, gender in the UN system.

21st century statecraft builds the foundation for 21st century leadership by forging connections and building relationships with as many different actors across as many different sectors as possible -- from government to people, people to government, and people to people. In addition to the examples of 21st century statecraft woven throughout this document, please find below examples of S/P's leadership in utilizing 21st century statecraft not only to support, but to facilitate our civil society goals and State Department capacity building.

- Worked with others in State with more than 30 private sector partners to establish Alliance of Youth Movements (AYM) as a third party vehicle to support grassroots movements in places like Iran, China, and other parts of the world where repressed populations are relying on technology to make a difference. AYM is the only 501c3 that engages and empowers a new cadre of civil society actors that have a URL or a Web site instead of an office, followers and members instead of a paid staff, and use open-source platforms instead of having a robust budget. This initiative has been so successful that the British government recently contributed $700,000 to the cause.

Press Link:

<http://www.npr.org/templates/transcript/transcript.php?storyId=113876776>

- Worked to create a platform for civil society groups across the globe to communicate with each other (Civil Society 2.0), share best practices, potentially receive USG grants for their work, and access web-based tools designed to instruct and enhance community organizing.

Press Link: <http://www.state.gov/r/pa/prs/ps/2009/nov/131234.htm>

- Worked to bring new and current technologies (25,000 new FOBs) into the daily conversation at the State Department and modernizing the image and practice of USG Diplomats.

Like-Minded Allies Group

- Successfully institutionalized the Strategic Policy Planning Dialogue, a forum aimed at encouraging closer collaboration amongst our major transatlantic and transpacific allies on a range of global strategic challenges; and established a website to support the Dialogue. Hosted formal plenary meeting in Washington in July, facilitating briefings by key senior USG officials with like-minded counterparts on key issues, including Afghanistan-Pakistan, Iran, North Korea, and the global economic crisis. Established a Global Governance Working Group under the Dialogue to facilitate an exchange of ideas on issues relating to the G8/G20 and the future of multilateral cooperation. Exploring the possibility of establishing other working groups, for example, on the Middle East and North Korea. (NOTE: The nine participating countries

S/P-Sponsored Policy Discussion Dinners

- Developed a Protocol for the ongoing Policy Discussion Dinners and organized a series of policy discussions with outside experts representing the full spectrum of views to engage with you on key issues; including: Afghanistan/Pakistan; Asia; Mexico; India; Africa; Higher Education; Iran; and Women.

S/P-Sponsored In-house Policy Seminars

- Organized a series of in-house policy seminars for the Deputy Secretary and other 7th Floor Principals on a range of issues, including: Strategic Partnerships; Diaspora Communities and Diplomacy; anti-corruption; ungoverned spaces.

S/P-Prepared Independent Policy Analyses, "Red Team" Assessments, and Recommendations

- As part of S/P's mandate to provide objective reviews and analyses, including red team analyses, S/P prepared papers/recommendations on: Extending Deterrence for the Middle East; Gaining Russian Support on Iran; North Korea Policy; A Roadmap for Getting to Global Zero Nuclear Weapons; and The Congressional Commission on the Strategic Posture.

S/P Outreach

- S/P reaches out to all bureaus and offices to integrate them into the policy planning process. For example, S/P formed a strategic linkage with the G family focused on elevating and integrating development issues into G Bureau diplomatic initiatives. S/P and G send representatives to their respective staff meetings and collaborate closely on policy issues related to democracy/human rights, humanitarian concerns, and science issues. This model can be expanded to include other Under Secretary level cooperation as appropriate.

Mitch McConnell asked me again when I was coming to his program at Ky. I asked him if a Sunday would work and he said they had never done the program that day but thought it would work. I'd like to do when Bill would be out of town. Let's discuss.

There's a lawyer in Little Rock named John Gill who's doing a book about the Arkansas Governor's Mansion. He's interviewed everyone but me. Pls schedule a call w him asap.

I want to visit the non P bureaus--especially S/P (Anne-Marie says there is a traditon of a photo w the Secretary), T, CA. We need a schedule to try to do all of these in January.

I also have to meet w the Armenia Caucus after Congress is back.

I want to meet w Walter Isaacson this month.

First, Happy New Year to Jen and Stern clan. Hope to talk soon about our way forward for 2010.

I received the following email from Jairem Ramesh over the holidays. I intend to respond in kind but wanted to run by you for advice.

Thx. HRC--

Dear Madam Secretary of State:

It was wonderful catching up with you in Copenhagen. The opportunity to interact with President Obama and you at the very last minute to salvage the Copenhagen Accord at the US-BASIC Summit Meeting was fantastic and unforgettable for me personally. I am still reeling from that historic 75 minutes!!

With greetings for Xmas and best wishes for the New Year,

With warmest regards,

Jairam Ramesh

First, Happy New Year to Jen and Stern clan. Hope to talk soon about our way forward for 2010.

I received the following email from Jairem Ramesh over the holidays. I intend to respond in kind but wanted to run by you for advice.

Thx. HRC—

Dear Madam Secretary of State:

It was wonderful catching up with you in Copenhagen. The opportunity to interact with President Obama and you at the very last minute to salvage the Copenhagen Accord at the US-BASIC Summit Meeting was fantastic and unforgettable for me personally. I am still reeling from that historic 75 minutes!!

With greetings for Xmas and best wishes for the New Year,

With warmest regards,

Jalram Ramesh
