I'm on at 6am so if there are any points you want made let me know.
 Following Ben Smith's piece, they are going to frame this as HRC trying to reassert herself into foreign policy, potentially some of her own themes. Obviously I can handle that so if there are substantive points to help frame the speech that would be great.

Huma,

Thanks for getting back to me. It was great catch up with April and talking about all exciting work we all did in the East Wing.

Thank you for looking into this for me. I did get a chance to talk to Margaret and told her that I am VERY interested in working with Dr. Eric Goosby at PEPFAR. Any good word you can put in for me would be greatly appreciated.

[redacted] are very excited about returning to DC and being of service to the Secretary.

Please let me know what you find out.

Warmest regards, [redacted]

Huma,

I hope all is well. I wanted to touch base with you regarding my interest at State. Below is an email trail that I have had with Cheryl. Would appreciate any thoughts on how to proceed from here.

Last night I had dinner with April Springfield and also encouraged me to reach out to you on this.

Hope to hear from you soon...

Ms. Carpenter,

Per the recommendation of Cheryl Mills, I am writing to express my continued interest in serving the President and Secretary of State Clinton. [Redacted]

[Redacted]

In January, I was asked to submit my top two/three preferences at the Department of State. I sent David Helfenbein the following positions:

1. Deputy Chief of Protocol
2. Foreign Affairs Officer (Visits)
3. Foreign Affairs Officer (Ceremonials)

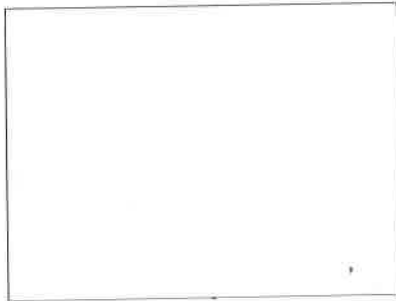

Based on Cheryl's email and suggestion, I understand that these positions may now be filled and I would like to talk to you and get your suggestions on how to proceed with other possibilities at State. I am, however, very interested in serving in the Office of the U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) and the under the leadership of Dr. Eric Goosby.

Any suggestions and recommendations you could provide would be greatly appreciated. I have attached an updated resume for your perusal and I can be reached at [REDACTED]

B6

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Warmest regards,

Cheryl,

I hope that this note reaches you well. I just wanted to touch base regarding possible appointment opportunities at State. Understanding that the process has slowed a bit, I wanted to reaffirm my interests in joining the team at the State Department.

The following positions fall under the Office of Protocol and are of great interest to me:

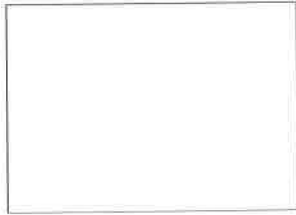

1. Deputy Chief of Protocol
2. Foreign Affairs Officer (Visits)
3. Foreign Affairs Officer (Ceremonials)

Again, thank you for your time and consideration.

Warmest regards, [REDACTED]

Ms. Carpenter,

Per the recommendation of Cheryl Mills, I am writing to express my continued interest in serving the President and Secretary of State Clinton. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

In January, I was asked to submit my top two/three preferences at the Department of State. I sent David Helfenbein the following positions:

1. Deputy Chief of Protocol
2. Foreign Affairs Officer (Visits)
3. Foreign Affairs Officer (Ceremonials)

Based on Cheryl's email and suggestion, I understand that these positions may now be filled and I would like to talk to you and get your suggestions on how to proceed with other possibilities at State. I am, however, very interested in serving in the Office of the U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) and the under the leadership of Dr. Eric Goosby.

Any suggestions and recommendations you could provide would be greatly appreciated. I have attached an updated resume for your perusal and I can be reached at [REDACTED]

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Warmest regards,

Cheryl,

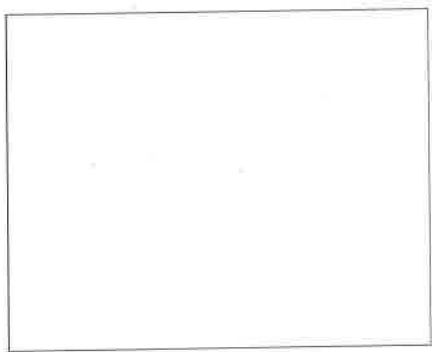

I hope that this note reaches you well. I just wanted to touch base regarding possible appointment opportunities at State. Understanding that the process has slowed a bit, I wanted to reaffirm my interests in joining the team at the State Department.

The following positions fall under the Office of Protocol and are of great interest to me:

1. Deputy Chief of Protocol
2. Foreign Affairs Officer (Visits)
3. Foreign Affairs Officer (Ceremonials)

Again, thank you for your time and consideration.

There are a few folks I have heard from again and wanted to bring to your attention - these folks are qualified and hard working. The administration would be proud to have them on bd. I have sent their information on thru a variety of avenues - and to date they have not heard from anyone.

Totally understand that there is a log jam - so understand! But would go a long long way to some folks just to hear from others than me.

[redacted] are two who would be great for one of you all to meet with if you can - you may hear something different or may know of something they would be perfect for - or at least they would know that their info did not go into the abyss

If you all can - I can send their contact info if you need it - but I think David has it. I copied Huma on this who knows them both well and could offer any information you need

The National Organization of Portuguese-Americans Letter of Support for a Portuguese-American Ambassador to Portugal

Dear friends of NOPA,

As with every new Administration, the current President is nominating individuals for appointed positions - this includes Ambassadorial nominations. 2009 could be a good year for having the first Portuguese-American Ambassador of the United States to Portugal. As such, we have written President Obama a letter which you will find below.

If you feel that this is an important issue, we ask you to forward this email to all of your contacts. Furthermore, we ask you to make your voice heard by copying and pasting this letter - with your signature - and emailing it to the White House and your Senators. You may contact the White House by clicking here.

The Letter
June 8, 2009

The President of the United States
1600 Pennsylvania Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President,

On behalf of The National Organization of Portuguese-Americans (NOPA), we would like to congratulate you on your election to the Presidency of the United States. We hope that, as fellow Americans, we will have the opportunity to work with your Administration. As your new Administration continues in its process of assigning the many nominated positions yet to be filled, it has come to our attention that the Senate has begun working on the confirmation process for ambassadorial positions and that there is not, at the present moment, a Portuguese-American slotted for the ambassadorship to Portugal.

NOPA has heard from many individuals, including members of Portuguese-American communities around the US, that 2009 could be a good year to nominate a Portuguese-American to become the next American Ambassador in Lisbon, Portugal. There are many Portuguese-American individuals who we feel are greatly qualified to represent the United States in Portugal. Among those, we feel that [REDACTED] would be an exceptional candidate for this position. NOPA believes such an appointment would be significant to the Portuguese-American community and would further an already strong relationship and alliance with Portugal.

B6

NOPA's interest in this appointment stems from our mission, as a national non-profit organization, to support and work with communities and organizations that advocate for and empower Portuguese-Americans. We represent a group of people who have had a positive impact in the development of the United States. Approximately 1.5 million Americans of Portuguese descent make up a large part of the populations in states like Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Jersey. States like California, Hawaii, and New York, among others, also have major communities. Therefore, NOPA would like to request that you to consider a qualified Portuguese-American including someone like [REDACTED] to said position.

Respectfully,
Francisco Semião
Executive Director
NOPA, Inc.

NOPA is a national nonprofit organization that supports and works with communities and organizations to advocate for and empower Portuguese-Americans.

Dear Huma,

Hope this email finds you well. How is Hillary doing?

I understand with all that has been happening plus your upcoming visit to India, you must have an extremely busy schedule. The reason for me writing is to ask about your trip to India. I was wondering if your travel dates were still scheduled for July 20 & 21. And if you had any American business delegates who will be joining you while you are there? If so, would it be possible for me to be listed as one of your delegates? Ultimately, I would be much obliged if you could kindly include me on your guest list to any events being hosted for Secretary Clinton (as the Prime Minister's office has included me on theirs).

I apologize for troubling you with this but as always I do appreciate and thank you all your assistance for always making things possible for me.

Because your time in India is limited, please feel free to let me know if you have any shopping request during your visit. I would be more than happy to arrange for the shopping to come to you at your hotel as we did the past.

With many thanks & best regards,

Sant Chatwal

Based on Cheryl's email and suggestion, I understand that these positions may now be filled and I would like to talk to you and get your suggestions on how to proceed with other possibilities at State. I am, however, very interested in serving in the Office of the U.S. President's Emergency Secretary Clinton, I trust you've been able to enjoy our nation's birthday. It's a special honor to serve our great nation and to work every day to ensure the freedoms and liberties we cherish in America can be enjoyed by more people around the world. I returned today from a trip to Chad, Italy, and Libya; the following is an initial report on this travel. My primary objectives were 1) to accelerate the unification process for non-JEM rebels and to prepare for the next round of Doha talks to address the dire and unacceptable remnants of genocide in western Sudan, 2) to advance our goal of ending the proxy war between Chad and Sudan, and 3) to gain insights from experts on options to support voluntary resettlement in Darfur.

In Ndjamena and Tripoli, I met with commanders from the Sudan Liberation Army (Abdul Wahid faction), the Sudan Liberation Movement/Unity (Yahya faction), and the Justice and Equality Movement (JEM). Leaders of the first two groups (SLA/M) are now ready to join the Doha peace process, but understand that they must first unify the various Sudanese Liberation Army factions if they are to be effective in negotiations with the Government of Sudan (GoS). I also met with leaders from the Darfuri civil society and with representatives of smaller rebel factions in Tripoli to encourage them to join the unification effort and to support the Doha peace process. On the margins of the AU Summit, I pressed AU/UN Chief Mediator Bassole to support the unification process and to move quickly to the next round of the Doha peace negotiations (i.e., to move beyond the ceasefire roadblocks and to initiate the talks on a political settlement). In concert with the AU/UN Mediator, the US role in this next round will be to develop and coordinate an initial proposal based on principles that were accepted in the 2006 Darfur Peace Agreement: we'll make the required adjustments based on lessons learned from Abuja. Further, we'll facilitate appropriate participation of unified rebel movements, civil society representatives, and political groups. I also intend to encourage Bassole to invite Chadian, Libyan, and Egyptian observers to monitor the peace process in Qatar.

[REDACTED]

In Chad, I met with President Deby in his office and later over dinner (a highly unusual and gracious invitation) to discuss ways to end the Chad-Sudan conflict. The President conveyed his strong desire to improve the Darfur situation, but asked for further US assistance to verify Sudan's compliance with previous agreements.

Both Chadian and Sudanese officials asked that the United States support a greater role for the UN peacekeeping forces in eastern Chad (MINARCAT) and in Darfur (UNAMID) to monitor the border.

In Sirte, I attended the African Union Summit as part of the US delegation led by Assistant Secretary Carson. The Summit provided an excellent opportunity to meet with leaders who have a stake in Sudan. Notable meetings included discussions with Libyan Leader Qadafi and all members of his senior team, Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles, Arab League Chairman Mousa, Kenyan Foreign Minister Wetangula, UK Minister Malloch Brown, and two extensive meetings with Sudanese Presidential Advisor Ghazi. I will highlight specific details of these meetings in my trip report.

The most important outcome of my discussions in Sirte is an agreement by Sudan, Chad, and Libya on an approach to lower tensions and build confidence. Under our phased plan, Sudan will: 1) recall the commanders of its sponsored Chadian rebels back to Khartoum immediately so forces can't fight, 2) restrict its Chadian rebel soldiers to base camps for the next month, and 3) withdraw its Chadian rebels at least 100 kms from the Sudan-Chad border in August, and 4) eventually disarm its rebels. The proposal includes monitors from Chad, Sudan, and Libya to verify implementation at each location. The United States has also suggested that AU representatives join the six monitors in rebel locations to ensure compliance. Concurrently, we will continue to push the political processes in Doha.

and elsewhere to end the conflict in Darfur by Dec 09

In Sirte, senior African officials expressed deep appreciation for the role the United States is playing on Sudan, and noted that US influence has resulted in consensus on the above confidence-building approach. While previous agreements have gone unimplemented, all parties now agree that implementation will be carried out first, then senior-level meetings can be arranged to confirm full implementation. We will continue to press forward on this track.

On my last day in Libya, senior Libyan officials dispatched an aircraft to take me and the Ambassador back to Sirte for discussions with Libyan Leader al-Qadafi. The Leader welcomed the US role in Sudan and endorsed our joint approach. He asked that the United States and Libya work together to end the proxy war between Chad and Sudan, and to address the underlying causes of the conflict in Darfur. He stressed that the opportunity to bring peace to Chad and Sudan (and to Darfur) must be seized. I conveyed our appreciation for Libya's role to improve relations between Chad and Sudan, and pledged our support for joint efforts to end the Chadian-Sudanese proxy conflict. Leader al-Qadafi promised to continue his nation's close collaboration with the United States. As Chairman of the African Union, Leader al-Qadafi will represent the AU in Rome at the G8 summit and is eager to meet you and President Obama on the margins of the Summit.

In Rome, I met with the UN Food and Agriculture Organization's (FAO) emergency program and the UN World Food Program Executive Director. FAO representatives expressed appreciation for US aid and warned of growing instability from drought, localized floods, and conflict in Southern Sudan. WFP confirmed that growing instability in Southern Sudan is negatively affecting rehabilitation operations, and warned that development efforts were being diverted to meet needs of newly displaced persons as a result of the conflicts—particularly in Southern Kordofan. WFP operations in Darfur continue to meet 95-100 percent of the emergency food needs for internally displaced persons in Darfur. The UN is continuing to use local communities (although in a decreasing manner) to distribute food where international NGOs are not yet available. In addition to its focus on meeting emergency food needs for internally displaced in Darfur, WFP is also working with other partners to review how to support voluntary returns from camps to their places of origin or to other areas chosen by the Darfuri people. WFP and other agencies are looking to coordinate activities to ensure physical security and human rights protection are guaranteed for all returnees, and that food and non-food needs will be met. Wish best wishes for an enjoyable holiday weekend, very respectfully, Scott

BY SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL

Via Conference Call

10:45 P.M. EDT

MR. McDONOUGH: Hey, everybody. Thank you very much for waiting for us, and apologies for making you wait. We do appreciate very much the opportunity to get on the phone here and just talk you through a little bit of what's transpired over the last couple days.

I do think it's worth noting that earlier tonight, between 8:30 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. eastern time, the President did call family members of both Euna Lee and Laura Ling to express his relief that their families will be reunited here shortly.

I'm going to turn it over to one of my colleagues -- senior administration official colleagues here to talk through several important data points as it relates to the last several days and then we'll open it up to your questions, mindful of the fact that it's late in the night here and everybody wants to get some rest. I'd just remind everybody that this call is on background and let me turn it over to my senior administration official colleague.

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Good evening and thanks for joining us.

I want to not just go back a couple of days, but go back a few months here to give some context to the events of today in Pyongyang. Today's events reflect an awful lot of work over a couple of months on behalf of two United States citizens who were detained in North Korea and also the very fine work of President Clinton and his team in North Korea today.

As I think most of you know, on March 17, 2009, North Korea border guards seized and detained two American journalists, Laura Ling and Euna Lee, while they were filming for former Vice President Al Gore's Current TV along the China-North Korean border. Since their being detained the President and Secretary of State directed that we in the administration take every appropriate step to look out for the safety of these Americans and expedite their release.

On June 8, 2009, Laura Ling and Euna Lee were convicted on charges brought by the North Koreans and were sentenced to 12 years of hard labor in a labor camp. As the State Department has briefed -- and the set-up here, as you know, we don't have relations, formal diplomatic relations with the North Koreans, so that we have in Pyongyang what's called a protective power, a protecting power, and it's the Swedish government.

C05962417-IED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C05962417 Date: 03/28/2017

The Swedish ambassador in Pyongyang, acting on our behalf, provided consular services and got mail and medicine to the two women. At our request Sweden also pressed very hard to ensure their safety and good treatment, and were very appreciative of that good work by the Swedes, especially Ambassador Mats Foyer in Pyongyang.

Through the Swedish ambassador and other channels, as I said, we repeatedly pressed the North Koreans to agree to the quickest posture release of the two journalists and the guarantee of their well-being in the meantime. During this time we in the State Department maintained very close contact with the families of the two journalists, talking to them daily, briefing them on efforts each week. And as you know, Secretary Clinton met with the families in person in May.

In response to our many requests, the North Korean authorities at a point during the spring began allowing Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee to call their families periodically, and family members, they shared their readouts of these calls with us. Often Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee reported what the North Korean officials were telling them.

In mid-July, during one such phone call, Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee shared what the North Koreans had told them -- that they would be willing to grant them amnesty and release the two Americans if an envoy in the person of President Clinton would agree to come to Pyongyang and seek their release.

This, as I said, was reported by family members to us, and to Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee's employer, former Vice President Al Gore. Both the families of former [Vice] President Gore asked us in the United States government to assist in seeing if President Clinton could go on a humanitarian mission, and if he did, whether such a trip would be successful in securing the release of Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee.

The National Security Advisor and our team here did quite a bit of due diligence on this issue through a variety of channels and a variety of means to seek a judgment -- to make a judgment as to whether or not if in fact President Clinton did go to Pyongyang, that he would be able to successfully secure the release of our two American journalists there. As I said, we did a lot of due diligence on this through a variety of channels, and worked this issue very hard.

During the weekend of the 24-25 of July, the National Security Advisor spoke with President Clinton about his willingness to take on this mission and as we indicated, Vice President Gore, on behalf of the families, had already been in touch with President Clinton about this.

So the families and Vice President Gore made their appeal to Bill Clinton to go to Pyongyang. We spoke to him over that weekend. President Clinton indicated that he would be willing to undertake this mission as a private, humanitarian mission if there were a reasonable chance of getting Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee released. We continued to do our due diligence on this issue. We considered the request carefully. We tested directly with the North Koreans repeatedly. We sought and received North Korea's agreement in fact that a visit by President Clinton would secure the release of Ms. Ling and Ms. Lee.

During the course of these discussions, it was insisted that the North Koreans acknowledge, as former President Clinton's visit was not any part of a negotiation, it was not in any way connected to the nuclear issue or other issues that we have a government-to-government basis with the DPRK, including their noncompliance with international obligations and behaviors that have been the subject of Security Council resolutions and statements and actions by our government and other governments in the international community.

The North Koreans confirmed to us directly that they accepted his visit in a private capacity that exclusively focused on the humanitarian purpose of releasing the two Americans. On this basis, President Clinton proceeded to make the logistical arrangements to go to North Korea to seek the -- secure their release.

In advance of departure, President Clinton did talk directly with the families and with Vice President Gore, where they repeated his request that he make this trip.

I should also point out that we in the administration, prior to President Clinton making the trip, consulted directly with allies to ensure that they understood what the trip was about and what it wasn't about. Consistent with the humanitarian nature of the trip, we offered President Clinton's good (inaudible) in pressing North Korea on humanitarian concerns of other countries, including South Korean citizens and abducted Japanese citizens.

In advance of the departure, we also conferred with China and Russia and our other partners in the six-party talks to make sure, again, as I said, that they fully understood what the trip was and what it wasn't; that they fully understood specifically the unofficial, humanitarian character of the trip.

As you all know by now, President Clinton and his party have left North Korea. They're on their back to the United States. We've been in touch with them. We can report that the two journalists are enormously relieved and in seemingly very good health.

And with that, Denis, I'd be glad to answer any questions as to what we know about this and what we can tell folks about our efforts to date.

Q Yes, when you say that you tested the idea with the North Koreans repeatedly, do you mean there were direct talks between the U.S. and North Korea or was that also conducted through an intermediary?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: I don't want to get into the details of how this has gone. I can tell you, though, that after the two journalists in conversations with their family members indicated that North Korean officials had told them that if President Clinton visited as an envoy on a private mission that they would be released, that we, through a variety of means, tested that proposition and to our satisfaction were convinced that in fact the North Koreans would, in response to President Clinton visiting Pyongyang would release the journalists. I don't want to get into the details of exactly how we communicated, the back and forth.

I can tell you though that we became convinced through our contacts that in fact this would be the result, and it was based on that that we could advise President Clinton that his trip was likely to be successful.

Q Thank you very much. I just really wanted to take a step back and look at policy overall to North Korea. How is it possible to maintain that North Korea is deepening its isolation as a result of the nuclear program when you just had this very high-level, albeit private, visit by a former President of the United States? I know that you're insisting that these are two wholly separate tracks, but doesn't it at least complicate your message that North Korea is isolating itself still further?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: We, in undertaking this project -- and I will tell you and we can tell you after talking to our colleagues who were in Pyongyang over the last day, can tell you that we made clear in every communication we had with the North Koreans, and President Clinton made clear in all his conversations, that this was a purely private humanitarian mission aimed solely at the release of the two American journalists -- and that in fact was completely separate from issues between North Korea and the international community. It was made crystal clear, the separation here. That's point one.

Point two is that the United States and its international partners continue to pursue aggressively the goal of a verifiable denuclearized Korean Peninsula. The United States -- and as you've seen over recent weeks, having secured a new Security Council Resolution, 1874, fully intends and has to successfully implement that resolution. You've seen a number of instances -- a couple of instances of that in recent weeks and we'll continue to implement that resolution vigorously.

I have to tell you, as Secretary Clinton said after her trip to the ASEAN meeting last week, that I don't know of a time when the Koreans have been more isolated. I don't know of a time when there's been such cooperation among the international community with respect to actual implementation -- not just adoption, but implementation of an important and tough U.N. resolution. And we will continue on that path.

So I -- you know, it's just the facts. It's in the performance. So it was both in the communications with North Korea about what this was and what this wasn't, and we had one goal in mind, which was in the U.S. interest, which was to seek to release of these two Americans. That's what it was, and we've been very clear about what it wasn't. It in no way indicates -- and we've been -- that's why I also wanted to underscore the consultations that we had with allies before the mission to make sure we were absolutely clear here as to what it was and what it wasn't. And it wasn't in any way about our disagreements with the DPRK with respect to its conduct or with respect to our intention to vigorously enforce the resolution and to vigorously seek the denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula.

C05962417 FIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C05962417 Date: 03/28/2017

Q If I could follow up on that --

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Sure, of course, go ahead, sorry.

Q The other argument, of course, is that -- is there any possibility that at a time when North Korea has indicated it may be willing to get back to some kind of talks with the U.S., that this might create a certain positive momentum by cooling tensions? Is there any overlap in that sense?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Yes, we have indicated quite clearly, in coordination with our partners in the six-party talks, that the Koreans have two paths to consider here. They can consider the path of provocative behavior, continuing to pursue their nuclear program, and they will face deepening isolation. There's another path, which is they actually implement irreversibly the steps that they've agreed to implement to date, and that they can come back into talks. But the two paths are quite clear here, and we feel that those paths remain in front of them.

So, you know, to answer to your question directly, that's up to the North Koreans, as it has been. Provocative behavior, continued pursuit of the nuclear program, continued violation of U.N. Security Council resolutions will result in their facing the kind of unified international community isolation that they're facing at this moment. A path that says that they re-embrace the irreversible denuclearization of the North Korean Peninsula, and engage in a way that indicates the irreversible taking of the steps that they've agreed to take in 2005 and beyond would put it on a different path. That's our firm view going forward here, and it's up to them.

Q Thank you.

Q Hi, there. I won't use your name, but nice to talk to you. Can you tell us about the conversations between former President Clinton and Kim Jong-il? I mean, to what degree did they discuss the nuclear program? Who brought it up first? What can you tell us?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Margaret, I can't -- you know, we don't have a detailed readout on exactly what happened. I can give you a couple of things here, though.

Number one, of course the principle discussion was around seeking the release of the journalists. Point one.

Point two, I can give you a couple of details which we've learned in our conversation with the folks on the airplane before getting on the phone with you all; that President Clinton and his team did engage in an hour-and-fifteen-minute meeting with President Kim Jong-il this -- I guess yesterday afternoon, right, and then had a dinner which lasted a little over two hours. So the total amount of time that they were speaking -- or in meetings or in dinners with each other was about a little over three hours and 15 minutes. And I don't have a readout on the particulars of what was discussed at this point.

Q Was the nuclear issue at least discussed?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: I don't know the answer to that question, you know. President Clinton -- I'm sure he gave him -- I'm sure President Clinton gave President Kim his views on denuclearization, and his views are well known with respect to denuclearization.

And President Clinton, as you know, Margaret, has a history here of both being quite tough, where we went through some very serious episodes with the North Koreans, as you know when you covered in the 1990s, but also entered into agreements and with President Kim's father.

And President Clinton's view on denuclearization and on the question of whether or not pursuit of nuclear weapons will make the North Koreans safer or -- more safe or less safe are well known. But again I'd be speculating at this point, given the short conversations we've had with them to go beyond that.

But I can tell you this, though, one other thing that one of my colleagues just reminded me of here, is that in addition to discussing, Margaret, the U.S. journalists, he also discussed and we know pressed very hard -- and we heard this from our debrief, our short debrief from the plane -- he did press very hard on the positive things that could flow from the release of the South Korean detainees and entering into talks and to really -- seeking the release of Japanese abductees. So I can tell you with confidence that both those issues were raised.

Q Good evening, gentlemen. Let me ask this. In this sequence of events did President Obama speak either directly to former President Clinton or Vice President Gore as this process moved along? And for a while there was this sort of public spat between the North Korean government and Secretary of State Clinton about her characterization of North Korea's isolation and it I guess is maybe consistent with North Korea's own behavior, but it just seems interesting that that kind of spat would be going on while it appears, based on your timeline, that these other very significant conversations were going on in back channels about the release of these two journalists. Can you address both of those issues?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: I can, Major. With respect to conversations that President Obama has had, former Vice President Gore has been directly, vigorously, and constantly involved in trying to seek the release of his colleagues at Current TV. And Vice President Gore has been, as I said, pretty tireless in this effort, and I think if you talk to the families of the two journalists they'll tell you that. And that includes being in touch quite frequently with members of the United States government -- and I do believe he did have at least one conversation with President Obama. Point one.

Point two on your question is that President Obama has not spoken to President Clinton about this mission or about this issue. President Clinton has had, as you would expect, conversations with members of the national security team and in preparation -- well, two things: One, in determining the bona fides of the offer -- that is, whether or not we could assure him that if he undertook this visit, as I said earlier, that in fact it would succeed, and we did tremendous amount of due diligence on that, and we did talk to him obviously about that.

And secondly, prior to his trip, he was -- as we would do with any other prominent American undertaking such a trip, we did sit down with him on two occasions, the last one being last Saturday at his residence in Washington --

Q Would these be face to face?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Yes, absolutely. There were telephone conversations, but there were at least two face-to-face briefings, Major. One on the issue, as I said, of the bona fides of the offer, but the second, as we would do with any prominent American or any American who undertook such a trip, we did last Saturday. He did sit down with members of the interagency team and experts on the Korean issue to receive a briefing on the issues and on the current circumstance in Korea. And that's, as I said, that last briefing took place at his residence in Washington, D.C., last Saturday.

Q Last Saturday?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Yes.

Q And on the spat?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Remind me of the spat?

Q Oh, the -- you'll remember, there was this kind of dialogue, official commentary from the North Koreans comparing the Secretary of State to a child or a young girl or a schoolgirl or something like that, and it just seems odd that that kind of highly undiplomatic language was going on at the same time it appears, based on your timeline, that very high-level and intense back-channel diplomacy was going on about the two journalists.

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Yes, both those things were going on at the same time. That's just a fact.

Q Anything unusual or striking about that in your mind?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: No, I just think, as I said earlier to the question from the Financial Times, that we are engaged in an effort, worked with the international community, with respect to the North Korean nuclear program and other issues. And those efforts are important and they continue. But we also had an effort underway to -- as we had from March of 2009 -- an effort underway to seek the release of American citizens, which we consider to be one of our obligations. And as you know, we take that really seriously here.

HA 03/01/2015

C05962417 FIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C05962417 Date: 03/28/2017

Q Very good, thank you.

MR. McDONOUGH: Why don't we take one more?

Q Hi. Can you just clear up whether there was an apology or sign of contrition from former President Clinton towards the North Koreans as the official media has reported? And how much of a sort of bounty do you expect to receive in terms of the kind of intelligence the former President was able to gather about the state of Kim Jong-il's health, possible succession moves, and what's going on inside North Korea?

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: With respect to the first question, the answer is no. With respect to the second, I'm not going to comment on that.

MR. McDONOUGH: All right, everybody. Sure appreciate you getting on the phone with us here and I'm sure we'll be in touch on this and other issues. But let me just reiterate here in closing that this is a briefing on background and we sure appreciate you're taking the time to be with us.

SENIOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL: Thanks for your patience, everybody, and I apologize for being so late.

Summary of call with media (tom did briefin)

Issue of message did not come up.

See below:

At our request we had been pressing for good treatment;

Appreciated Swedes help.

Pressed for their release

State dept kept in close contact with families

In spring, NK allowed ling and lee to call their family where they often reported what nk were telling them.

In mid july, ling said they said they would get amnesty if an envoy – Clinton – would seek their release in person

Family reported it to us; and to gore

Both families and gore asked USG to assist in seeing if WJC could go and if he did, would he be successful.

NSC team did diligent through channels to make a judgment to see if he went, he could be successful

Weekend of 24/25 july, NSC spoke with WJC about his willingness to take on this mission; VP Gore already had been in touch; families made an appeal – wjc said yes as pvt humanitarian mission if reasonable chance for release

Tested it repeatedly and NK said a visit would secure a release.

We secured agreement it was not associated with nuclear prolif or other issues that are part of govt to gov channels

NK said would focus on humanitarian basis of getting journalists released so wjc went to secure release

C05962266 UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C05962266 Date: 03/28/2017

Wjs spoke with family and Gore right before going

Admin consulted with allies and told them what trip would and would not be about and that he would raise SK detainees and Japanese abductees

WJC and party have left NK on their way back to US

Have spoken with them, journalists are relieved and in relatively good health.

Questions:

Horsely, NPR: tested idea with NK, so where their direct talks or intermediary

Ans: after journalists said NK had told them if wjc came as envoy they would be released, we tested proposition to our satisfaction that NK would release them to him. Won't get into details of how we communicated. We did b/c convinced through our contacts that this would be result and based on that we advised wjc his trip was likely to be successful

Bay, Financial Times: how maintain isolation of them when you have a high visit by former Pres – doesn't it complicate the message that NK is isolating itself.

Ans: we made clear in every communication as did WJC that this was pvt humanitarian mission aimed solely at release of journalist and separate from issues of international communities; US and its partners continue to pursue a verifiable denucl peninsula – we just got a new resolution and implemented it; as Sec Clinton said, don't know of time when NK were more isolated and there was greater unity of partners in implementation of sanctions – so the comm. And performance shows it – our only goal was their release and we were clear about what this trip wasn't – it wasn't about our disagreements about NK conduct or to vigorously seek implementation of sanctions

FU-Q – will this trip cool tensions?

Ans: we have indicated quite clearly – NK has 2 paths – provocative behavior; or they implement irreversibly steps they agreed to do and come back into talks. Up to them

Warner, News Hour: tell us about conver b/w wjc and KJI – any discussions of nuclear program

Ans: we don't yet have detailed read out on what happen; 1 – release of journalists discussion; they met with KJI for 1.15 min meeting and then had 2 hour dinner so total time together was about 3.15h – don't have read out on particular point

FU-Q: was denucl addressed

Ans: I don't know – WJC likely discussed his views – WJC has been quite tough on this issue and pursuit of nuc weapons but don't yet have a full readout from team to know so I would be speculating b/y that; I can tell you they discussed the positive things that would flow from a better relationship and pressed the abductees/detainees

Garret, Fox: in this sequence of events, did WJC speak with Bo (or did Gore speak with BO); what about HRC's spat about the NK's behavior which was curious – can you address both?

C05962266 FIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C05962266 Date: 03/28/2017

Ans: Gore has been directly vigorously involved in trying to get his colleagues release, tireless in his efforts including with USG and at least one conversation with BO; President Bo has not spoke to WJC about this mission; WJC has spoken with NSC in determining the bonafides of offer and that it would succeed and prior to trip he was briefed on 2 occasions (last one last sat at his residence in wash) as we do with other Americans on issues and circumstances in Korea ;

Garrett: and on the spat: hrc/school girl; NK/spoiled child – odd given diplomacy was going on Ans: both were going on at the same time – that's just the facts. We are engaged in an effort with int'l community and they continue and we also had effort underway to seek release of amcit.

Collins/AFT: clear up whether there was an apology to NK by WJC as media reports and how much of a bounty of intelligence will you get about KJI's health.

Ans: first ques – no; second question: no comment.

It appears that the photo of President and Ms. Clinton laying the bricks at the Victoria Mxenge site is not ours, but rather from the White House archives.

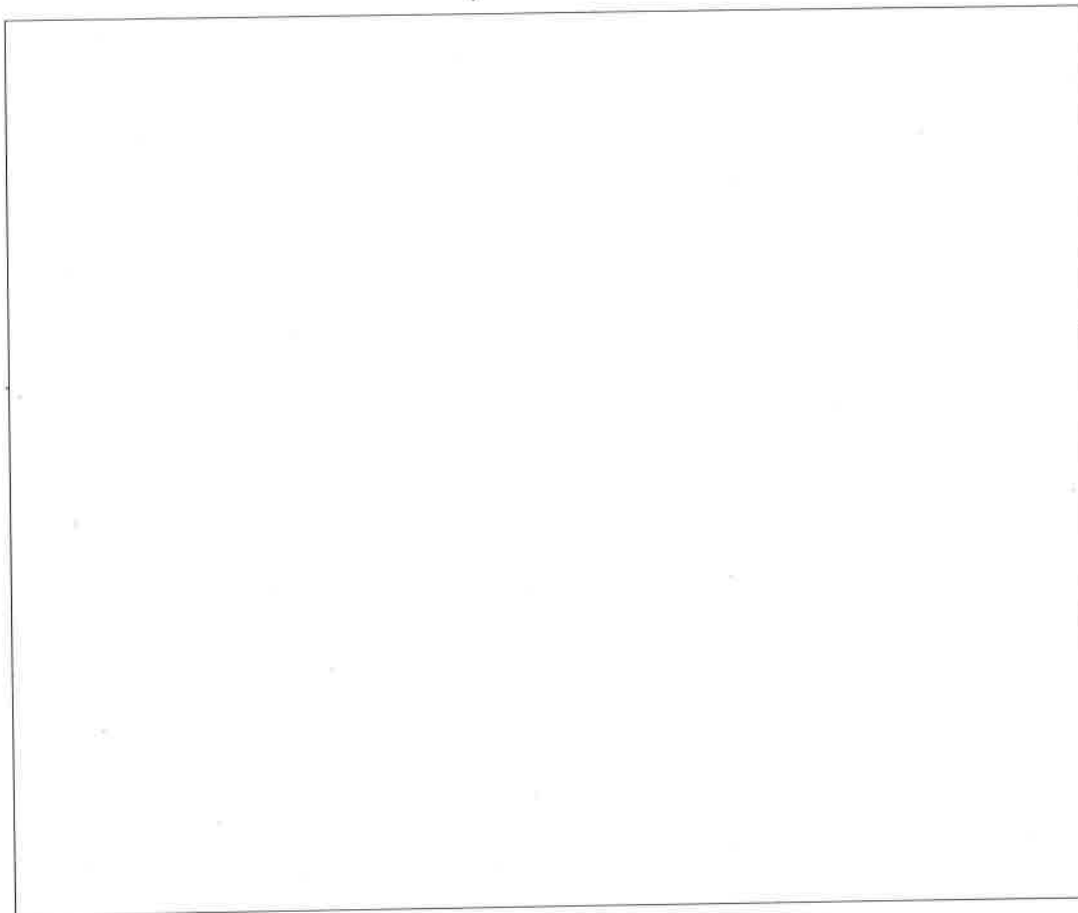

PAS Pretoria (ccd on this e-mail), is trying to obtain them and send them to you. If that fails, note that we have already sent a copy of the page that has that White House photo to Mark Canning. We are also checking our own archives further to see if we have something comparable.

From: Whitney Williams [REDACTED]
 To: Abedin, Huma
 Sent: Fri Jul 24 21:25:41 2009
 Subject: RE:

Hey H.

Here are some top level thoughts and questions. We should talk through it, I am happy to chat this weekend. I will keep feeding you stuff but wanted to get these off ASAP. See my comment boxes imbedded in the attached as well and then other notes below. Let's talk when you can

1. Do you want a list of cultural options? If so, where are you most likely to have some time? Do you want everything from shopping to church to half day gorilla safari? There is a safari park in the MIDDLE of Nairobi, I know she has done it but she could do a sunrise safari trip before her official stuff starts.
2. I don't know what your briefing books are like now but I have a whole bunch of briefing papers for many of the issues you are exploring and site briefs if you want them. Let me know so we can start pulling.
3. I am working on some public-private partnership water sites will have those to you soon. Do you want to see some other health research like TB vaccines? You can do that in Cape Town...
4. Where do you think your biggest holes are?
5. Kenya
  - I think you should really try to visit Kibera Slum. Largest slum on continent and there is so much to see/learn. We could do any number of things highlighting Water, Sanitation, Health, Maternal-Newborn-Child Health etc - if you want specific options let me know which issue you are leaning toward. After the Kenyan elections there was a ton of violence there, a bunch of it burned etc. It is visually stunning
  - I know the KARI research folks well. There are some extraordinary women researchers we should be sure to include/highlight. Its cool because its different women in research in AG is unique and people don't hear it/see it much. Note that the entire AGRA team (Gates and Rockefeller grant) are in DC on Monday and Tuesday if any of your policy people want to meet with them about this trip/ideas. We should do a tour of KARI's facility (crops in the field) as well as a sit down discussion with some leading crop scientists. Need to have enough time for this. Beautiful photos, uplifting site visit, women as partners etc.
  - We can give you some good names for the civil society roundtable in Nairobi if you do one.
  - I was with HRC the day of the bombings, I don't know if you remember the nightmare of trying to find a plane to go there and retrieve the bodies. As you know, we didn't go, Madeline went instead but there are some extraordinary people/survivors one woman I know who was pregnant, thankfully had the baby, loves the Clintons anyway we should make sure to get some of them there for the wreath laying or Embassy meet and greet.
  - I know a number of women agribusiness entrepreneurs if you want to stop by their shops on the way to or from the AGOA forum (street stands where they sell seeds etc)
6. Pretoria
  - There are some extraordinary young successful women entrepreneurs we should include in your lunch. I will put together a list if you want. Richard Branson has done a lot of work with entrepreneurs there, he may have an exchange happening around that time, let me know and I will find out what their plans are.

7. Congo

- In general you should spend AS MUCH time as possible in Goma. They will want you out by sun down so get there early.
- We should do the survivors discussion at HEAL Africa in Goma. It is the only hospital around performing fistula repair surgery. Women come there for the surgery as a result of rape and child birth. We can tour, talk with women and then have a talk there. Good spaces for this. They have income generating activities on site as well so that would tie in with your social/economic entrepreneurship theme
- For the peace keepers meeting, you can go to their compound and meet with them. Its all close in Goma no more than 25 minutes drive to anything
- There are 3 massive refugee and IDP camps right in Goma. It is a little weird to go there and not see one, you will pass them on the road. There are about 100k people displaced (living in camps) right in Goma. UNHCR is doing a terrible job of caring for these people but other, local Congolese orgs are there as well and you could see them.
- There is a therapeutic feeding center (1-5) year olds run by International Medical Corp in Goma. Incredible place, its run by Africans so you would get a good sense of African solutions to African problems.
- Note you can walk from Goma into Rwanda.....literally. President Kagame regularly takes meetings in Gisenyi on the border with Goma and you can take off from his military base. The stunning difference between Congo/Rwanda can literally be seen by walking across the border.
- The "Desmond Tutu" of Congo is a priest named Malu Malu, you could meet with him/others in the peace process. Great example of regional governance/local solutions. You could see him in either west or east.
- Let me know if you want other site ideas for Kinshasa.....

B5

Nigeria

- FYI in November 08 there was a Heads of State Summit re: Congo held in Nairboi, Obasanjo (fmr Pres Nigeria) was lead negotiator the HoS agreed to call for an immediate ceasefire, humanitarian corridors and urgent humanitarian assistance, strengthened MONUC mandate and additional forces, establishment of regional forces and a Great Lakes, AU and UN mechanism. Anyway he is back in Nigeria, you may want to see him since you have just been in Congo. Its another great example of Good regional governance.

Subject: Proposed Travel -- Africa

AF is pleased with the Secretary's planned August trip. They do not have anything specific for the rest of the year, but noted two things:

1. They would like S to travel to the West Coast of Africa (Namibia, Angola, Benin, Senegal and Mali), but there is no real hook in terms of timing. The themes would be democracy, good governance, energy, economic growth, and regional cooperation.
2. They would want the opportunity to raise possible last-minute travel should certain prominent African leaders die.

Subject: Indications of Another Missile Test

May 31, 2009
By THE NEW YORK TIMES

A senior American official on Saturday confirmed South Korean news reports that the North seemed to be preparing to ship an intercontinental ballistic missile toward a testing site on the Sea of Japan, a sign that North Korea might be planning another long-range missile test.

It would probably take several weeks for the missile to reach the site and be put in place, and there was still no evidence that the North Koreans had the technology to create a nuclear device small enough to fit atop a missile.

The North Koreans have conducted two such tests before, including one over Japanese territory, and American officials are particularly concerned about Japan's reaction to another test. Such missiles could theoretically reach Alaska and Hawaii.

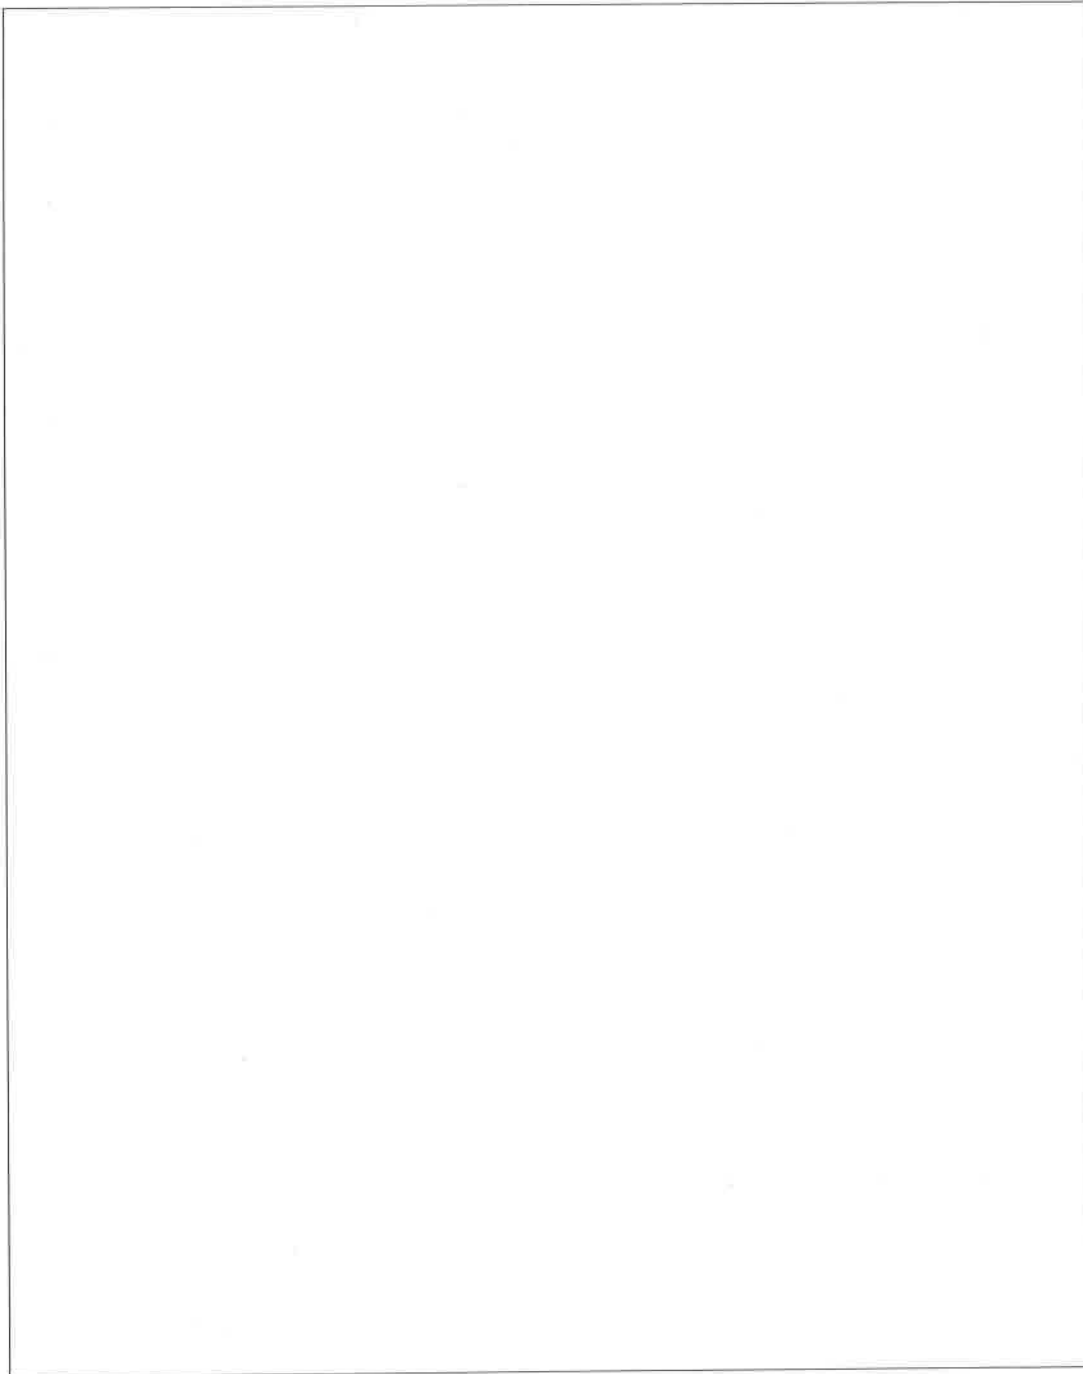

The news comes as North Korea has been test-firing short-range missiles since Monday, when it conducted an underground nuclear test.

North Korea last test-fired a long-range missile on April 5. That test did not achieve its goal of putting a satellite into orbit.

RELEASE IN FULL

ACTION MEMO FOR THE SECRETARY

FROM: IO – Esther Brimmer

SUBJECT: Calls to FM Lavrov and FM Yang on a Resolution on the DPRK

Recommendation

That you call Russian Foreign Minister Lavrov and Chinese Foreign Minister Yang to urge them to instruct their missions in New York to work constructively with Ambassador Rice to draft a serious Chapter VII resolution in response to the DPRK's provocative threats.

Approve _____ Disapprove _____

Background

In order to create conditions for progress in the P5 plus 2 (Japan and South Korea) consultations scheduled at the Permanent Representative level in New York on Monday, we need to move both the Russians and the Chinese from a position of offering nothing concrete beyond the existing provisions of UNSC resolution 1718 to a position of willingness to negotiate substantively new elements that go beyond resolution 1718. Thus far, our USUN experts level and Permanent Representative level consultations have borne no fruit. Our embassies in Moscow and Beijing are delivering talking points to the Russian and Chinese governments, however, without high-level contact, the Chinese and Russian missions are unlikely to have the flexibility to negotiate elements of the resolution when discussions resume Monday morning in New York. Should we be unable to move the Chinese and the Russians with calls at your level, we are asking the President to be prepared to make calls to his counterparts as well.

Dear Ms. Spear,

RECENT U.S. POLICY REGARDING VISAS FOR CUBAN ARTISTS

HA 09/01/2015

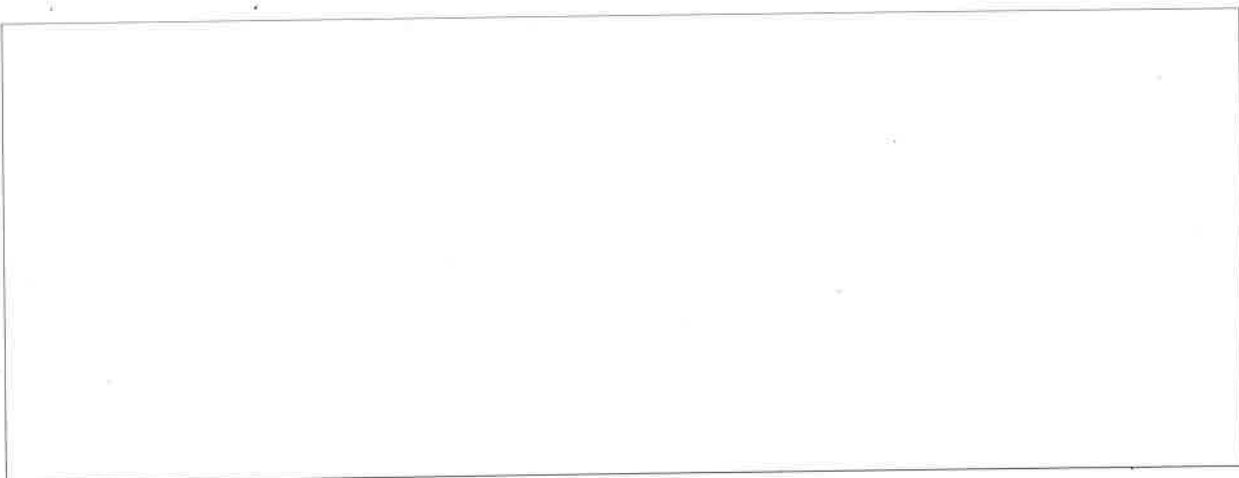

As we discussed, the timing of this application comes at a unique time in the history of U.S.-Cuba relations. While occasionally, Cuban artists residing in third countries have been admitted into the country, no Cuban artist still residing in Cuba has been issued a visa since December 2003 when the Bush administration rejected notions of the Clinton administration's "people-to-people" policy and returned to the Reagan Proclamation in which all Cuban artists were considered agents or employees of the Cuban government or were members of the Communist Party, and therefore ineligible for entry into the U.S.

With the election of President Obama, there has been renewed hope for better relations with Cuba. Following up on his pre-election pledge for engagement with Cuba, President Obama has already partially reversed the Bush administration's policy, mainly by allowing unrestricted travel to Cuban American family members. Yesterday's announcement was the latest, most significant of these policy changes.

While no mention was made of a change regarding cultural exchanges with Cuba, it is expected that President Obama will return to the "people-to-people" policy that allowed so many Cuban artists to travel to the U.S. (and for U.S. artists to perform in Cuba). Such a reverse of policy is consistent with his "cultural diplomacy" platform: "opening America's doors to...artists provides the kind of two-way cultural understanding that can break down the barriers that feed hatred and fear...Barack Obama will streamline the visa process to return America to its rightful place as the world's top destination for artists....".

[redacted] offers the Obama administration an opportunity to make good on this cultural diplomacy pledge.

It would be so fitting that Mr. Seeger, a good friend of the Clintons and one of the main performers at President Obama's inaugural festivities, should be honored by being allowed to share time with [redacted]

Dear Mrs. Clinton,

We seek your urgent assistance in a matter that is a profound concern for our mutual friend, Pete Seeger. As you may know, this Sunday, May 3rd, we will be celebrating Pete's 90th birthday at Madison Square Garden. Joining Pete will be more than 40 internationally recognized artists such as Bruce Springsteen, John Mellencamp, Dave Matthews, Emmylou Harris, Joan Baez and Ladysmith Black Mambazo.

Background for the Secretary's Call to Foreign Minister Wirajuda

- We believe that Indonesia can be an important voice on Burma.
- With over forty percent of Southeast Asia's population, Indonesia plays a key leadership role in ASEAN.
- Indonesia has been at the forefront of leading ASEAN to take a stronger stand on democracy and human rights. For example, Indonesia pressed for inclusion of language on those topics in the ASEAN Charter. Indonesia is also working to create a credible ASEAN Human Rights Body.
- President Yudhoyono (SBY) and FM Wirajuda have also sought to promote democracy throughout Asia, chiefly through the Indonesia-hosted Bali Democracy Forum, which met for the first time in December 2008.
- SBY has written to Senior General Than Shwe several times urging reform. To our knowledge, however, the Burmese have never replied.
- Yudhoyono believes that Indonesia's own transition from a military dominated authoritarian government to a democracy offers a useful model for Burma's own reform process. Indonesian leaders also think that their success with regional separatist conflicts, such as those in Aceh and Papua, will allow them to help the Burmese address similar problems.

Background for the Secretary's Call to Foreign Minister Wirajuda

We believe that Indonesia can be an important voice on Burma.

With over forty percent of Southeast Asia's population, Indonesia plays a key leadership role in ASEAN.

Indonesia has been at the forefront of leading ASEAN to take a stronger stand on democracy and human rights. For example, Indonesia pressed for inclusion of language on those topics in the ASEAN Charter. Indonesia is also working to create a credible ASEAN Human Rights Body.

President Yudhoyono (SBY) and FM Wirajuda have also sought to promote democracy throughout Asia, chiefly through the Indonesia-hosted Bali Democracy Forum, which met for the first time in December 2008.

SBY has written to Senior General Than Shwe several times urging reform. To our knowledge, however, the Burmese have never replied.

Yudhoyono believes that Indonesia's own transition from a military dominated authoritarian government to a democracy offers a useful model for Burma's own reform process. Indonesian leaders also think that their success with regional separatist conflicts, such as those in Aceh and Papua, will allow them to help the Burmese address similar problems.

Indonesia has used its own experience rebuilding after the December 2004 tsunami to assist Burma in rebuilding areas devastated by cyclone Nargis.

Many observers expect President Yudhoyono to take a more active role on regional democracy and human rights issues, including Burma, should he win a second term in this year's election.

The Burmese regime's recent actions against Aung San Suu Kyi (ASSK) came when senior Indonesian officials are focused on running mates and party coalition announcements for the upcoming elections and the World Ocean Conference (WOC) May 11-15.

Question:

What is the status of any investigations into this tragic incident conducted by the U.S. State Department and the Government of Israel? When can we expect the investigation to be completed and made public?

Answer:

The Government of Israel is responsible for investigating the March 13 incident in which Tristan Anderson was injured. On March 15, U.S. Embassy Tel Aviv raised with the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs the importance of conducting a full, transparent investigation and has requested any investigative reports prepared by the Israeli Defense Forces (IDF) or other government bodies. The Embassy has also conveyed to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs the Anderson family's desire for an independent investigation. Within a few days of the March 13 incident, the Embassy sent a written request to the IDF for an investigation, and Ambassador Cunningham has personally raised our request for an investigation at senior levels in the IDF.

Jack - do you recall our confusion over the assertion that Congresswoman Lee had met with you and Steinberg to raise the amcit injured in Israel? Mystery solved: Lee was physically in the room when you and Steinberg briefed on Afghanistan and then she submitted a "question for the record" to Steinberg on the Anderson case. Here are the draft responses, which look fine.

Speechwriting friends,
We have somewhat of a speechwriting conundrum on our hands. We tasked Final Remarks for this Monday morning press avail today (when we learned there would be a press avail) and just now at 10pm on a Friday, we got BBs from the building— not final remarks. I'm drowning in paper up here and wondering if you all might consider turning these into remarks ?

But this "policy" also applies in cases where you all order a buffet for example like in the Hague. I think Jo may have been partially to blame there, and I think the hotel took advantage of her lack of specificity, but that spread cost $700. Bottom line is we can pay for any of the Secretary's incidental food and beverage charges, since she does not get per diem, but not food in her suite for others. Complicated, I know, but it's a finely tuned system that's been worked out over the years.

Huma, we need to chat about room service before next trip. I pay for HRC room service charges. But I don't have authority to pay for other people, since they get per diem. My worry is that at some point we get audited and dinged. The issue is with meals like yesterday's lunch, where HRC "buys" lunch for a group but charges to her room. I have authorized the payment but in the future the way it works is we then have to reduce the invitees' (in this case you, Philippe and Jake) per diem so that they aren't "double dipping" (getting per diem, and the USG paying for their lunch). I know this seems overly bureaucratic but just trying to save us all problems down the road. Let me know if you have any questions or want to discuss. Thanks, Lew

Chavez to restore ambassador in Washington

39 minutes ago

Sat, Apr 18, 2009

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez says he expects to soon be sending an ambassador back to Washington. He told reporters at the Summit of the Americas after a day of exchanges with Hillary Clinton and other U.S. diplomats that he'd even decided on the diplomat.

Chavez expelled the U.S. ambassador to his country in September in solidarity with leftist President Evo Morales of Bolivia. Washington reciprocated.

Morales booted the top diplomat in his country for allegedly helping the opposition incite violence.

Chavez has warmed to U.S. President Barack Obama at the summit. On Saturday, he repeated in English what he told Obama the previous night at their first meeting: "I want to be your friend."

All I have given (on background) is that "We would welcome the return of ambassadors." So far only to the Herald and to Bloomberg.

I've been pressed on whether Chavez raised this or we did; is there a concrete plan/timeline for reinstating ambassadors; whether or not Chavez said HE would welcome the amb back, etc. On those, I referred to Amb Davidow's background briefing at 10:15 this morning, where he said that VZ kicked out Amb Duddy in a show of solidarity with Bolivia, so the ball was in their court. Off the record I've just said that this won't happen overnight, but the key is that the willingness is there so this is a positive sign.

Chavez to restore ambassador in Washington
39 minutes ago
Sat, Apr 18, 2009

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez says he expects to soon be sending an ambassador back to Washington. He told reporters at the Summit of the Americas after a day of exchanges with Hillary Clinton and other U.S. diplomats that he'd even decided on the diplomat.

Chavez expelled the U.S. ambassador to his country in September in solidarity with leftist President Evo Morales of Bolivia. Washington reciprocated.

Morales booted the top diplomat in his country for allegedly helping the opposition incite violence.

Chavez has warned to U.S. President Barack Obama at the summit. On Saturday, he repeated in English what he told Obama the previous night at their first meeting. "I want to be your friend."

We still have the 2 reserved seats.
And this is a big deal.
And we may not take speechwriter which I'd prefer.

Huma, that's every seat. Do we not want to hold one or two in case other people add at last minute? Or are we fairly confident that there will be no more staff along?

Is an 11th seat possible? It would make a big difference. 12 would be huge but I know that's asking too much.

Lew has 14 seats for you.
They will be jammed but we have the seats.

Wait - are you kidding? We just went from 10 to 14?!?!?

Please confirm I'm not crazy, we'll fill them asap!
