I just responded to Steve Young on this issue. I'll forward that email. Mr Rosebrock is well known and was well aware of his actions at the time he was issued a citation by VA Police. If a veteran or any other citizen is issued a citation they have two options; either pay the fine if there is one or take it to court. Mr Rosebrock has a long history (years) of protesting and hanging flags (sometimes a full size flag upside down which means distress) on VA property and he has been warned and issued multiple citations in the past.

Since this incident is older I'm not sure there is anything we can do at this point in the legal process. I'll let Ann add to this message and please look for the one that I'll forward.

Vivieca- can we quickly check with Ann brown and see if this story is accurate- if so we should not be pressing charges and we should do a release saying so

I understand the media reports do not always tell the real story.

You are correct it is out of our hands. From what I know about the process (experience with cases at my former facilities) he was issued a citation from the VA Police and if he chose not to pay the fine then he elects to take it to court which is where it is now. [REDACTED] (b)(5)
