Mr. William F. Marshall
425 Third Street SW, Suite 800
Washington, DC 20024

Dear Mr. Marshall:

I refer to our letter dated July 29, 2016, regarding the release of certain Department of State material under the Freedom of Information Act (the "FOIA"), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The processing of records responsive to your request is ongoing and has yielded an additional 279 documents. After reviewing these documents, we have determined that 89 may be released in full, 185 may be released with excisions, and 5 must be withheld in full. All released material is enclosed.

An enclosure explains the FOIA exemptions and other grounds for withholding material. Where we have made excisions, the applicable exemptions are marked on each document. All non-exempt material that is reasonably segregable from the exempt material has been released. For the documents withheld in full, we have cited FOIA Exemptions 5 and 6, 5 U.S.C. §§552 (b)(5) and (b)(6).

We will keep you informed as your case progresses. If you have any questions, your attorney may contact Trial Attorney, James Bickford, at (202) 305-7632 or James.Bickford@usdoj.gov. Please refer to the case number shown above in all correspondence about this case.

Sincerely,

Eric F. Stein, Acting Co-Director
Office of Information Programs and Services

Huma,
 I have not heard back from you since June 8th about my request below on behalf of Peabody Energy. If we could have 20 mins with HRC, it would be wonderful. Can this be worked out please? As you may know, I have been in contact with Capricia since April too. Can you help please?
 I really appreciate your help

 Subject: Meeting Request - Peabody Energy

Dear Huma,
 I spoke to Capricia Marshall about this and she wanted me to send this to you directly to intervene if possible. Huma, Peabody Energy is the largest coal company in the US, and they have partnerships in China, Mongolia and Australia. All pertinent details on Peabody are listed below.

Please know that I am a consultant to Peabody Energy and Dick Gephardt's firm, the Gephardt Group, does their lobbying.

On April 1, Peabody Energy VP, Cartan Sumner wrote to Lona Valmore to request a meeting. Lona called me back the following week to tell me that it couldn't be done then. Capricia told me that we should wait a few months since HRC was trying not to schedule meetings for her first six months.

Huma, I need your help now to intervene please. We need this meeting with Secretary Clinton, who has been there now for nearly six months. This is, by the way, my first request. I really would appreciate your help on this. It should go without saying that the Peabody folks came to Dick and I because of our relationship with the Clinton's.

I would really appreciate you getting this scheduled for their CEO.

My cell is [redacted]

Thanks for your attention. Hope you are well.

Ms. Lona Valmore
 U.S. Department of State
 Washington, DC

Dear Ms. Valmore,

My name is Cartan Sumner and I serve as Vice President of International Government Relations with Peabody Energy based in our St. Louis, Missouri headquarters. The purpose of this e-mail is to respectfully request your assistance in scheduling a meeting for U.S. Secretary of State Clinton with Peabody's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Gregory H. Boyce and Peabody's Senior Vice President of Government Relations Fredrick D. Palmer.

By way of background, Peabody Energy (NYSE: BTU) is the world's largest private sector coal company. We own majority interests in 30 coal mining operations located in the U.S. and Australia and serve more than 300 customers on six continents. Peabody's coal products fuel 10% of U.S. and 2% of worldwide electricity generation. We are also pursuing large-scale open cut mining opportunities in China and Mongolia through our development offices in Beijing and Ulanbaatar.

Obtained via FOIA by Judicial Watch, Inc.

In addition to our core mining activities, Peabody is advancing the development of clean coal technologies around the world. In China, we are the sole non-Chinese partner in the country's signature climate project -- GreenGen -- which is constructing a near-zero emissions coal-fueled power plant with carbon capture and storage (CCS). In Australia, we are a Founding Member of the Global CCS Institute recently formed by Prime Minister Rudd and participate in the coal industry's voluntary COAL21 Fund which supports clean coal technology demonstration projects in Australia. In the United States, we are a member of the FutureGen Industrial Alliance working in partnership with the Department of Energy as well as a financial sponsor of the Consortium for Clean Coal Utilization established by Washington University in St. Louis in 2008.

It would be great privilege and honor for Peabody to have the opportunity to meet with Secretary Clinton and provide a briefing on our company's worldwide activities. In particular, we would look forward to updating the Secretary on Peabody's clean energy and sustainability initiatives in the U.S., Australia and Asia as well as our ongoing interaction with senior officials with the governments of China and Mongolia.

Thank you for your consideration and I look forward very much to your response. Please do not hesitate to contact me should you have any questions or require further information. I am working this week from our Brisbane, Australia offices and am therefore most easily reachable via e-mail or on my mobile number.

Sincerely,
Cartan Sumner

Whenever you do something big on TV we all hear from lots of folks saying you did great. But this time is noticeably different. First, people across the spectrum - DC insiders, reporters, staff, ex-staff, friends of friends, WH folks, etc - were blown away. Second, people were REALLY moved by the last segment, three people even told me they teared up. I'm guessing and hoping you hear this directly from random folks in the coming days.

And I think because it's been a lousy couple of weeks for the Admin, with mixed messages and bad news, coupled with many people seeing you for the first time for an extended period talking about the job and your relationship with the President, and that combo was probably the most powerful reminder since your speech in Denver that you're in a class all your own (including the President who became enmeshed in the Gates incident)

That you didn't wait for the envoy question was key, you turned it into a strength. What you said about the President and how you said it, one can't help but think how much of a team player you are and how remarkably you've adapted to the role.

You were definitely on your game. You either threw a perfect game - or at least a no hitter. So this couldn't have gone better, achieved everything we needed to times 10, and comes on the heels of a great 10 days.

Will be interesting to see the storyline that emanates from this. Because there was no substantive news, it'll be a focus on style - especially saving Biden.

Secretary Clinton –

I understand you are going to Kenya next week and while I know the trip is primarily focused on trade issues, I wanted to flag an issue for you because I know it is near and dear to your heart.

Kenya has one of the strictest anti-abortion laws in Africa – it is illegal unless a woman's life is at risk and criminalizes both the woman and the provider. Two years ago, Kenyan authorities imprisoned a doctor and two nurses, falsely accusing them of providing illegal abortions. After a year in prison, the providers were found innocent and released, but it galvanized the legal and provider community who formed a coalition to make abortion less restrictive. It will come as no surprise to you that, as a result of their abortion law, Kenya has one of the highest maternal mortality rates in all of Africa, with an estimated 800 women a day seeking the procedure, often through dangerous means.

Kenya is restarting a long-stalled constitutional review process and they hope to produce a final Constitution by next year. Religious groups are on a concerted crusade to include new language in the Constitution which would codify that "life begins at conception". The current Constitution is largely silent on the issue. If this fetal personhood amendment goes forward, it would place Kenya in the small community of nations with such a provision. It would clearly mark Kenya as out of step with countries attempting to institutionalize the African Union's Maputo Protocol, one of the most progressive regional documents on women, development and reproductive rights, and with the vast majority of African countries in general. For a country trying to regain the momentum of stability and success it enjoyed until recently, such a policy imposition would be a regression for women's rights and for the country writ large.

I went to Kenya last month to work with the coalition that has formed to strategize against the Constitutional amendment and to work toward a less restrictive abortion law. I also visited several of our clinics and providers in Nairobi and in nearby villages where Planned Parenthood has programs to train providers in post abortion care. You have seen this a million times in your travels around the world, so I don't need to tell you how poignant the stories were of the lives saved and lost, the bravery in standing up to constant government harassment, and the fear of what this potential Constitutional amendment will mean to the provision of safe medical services. I know it is asking a lot, but if there is any way that you could draw attention to this issue when you are in Kenya, you would be even more of my personal hero than you already are. It is our hope that if Kenya knows the world is watching they may be more careful in how they proceed. Of course we would be happy to help you in any way if you decide you want to do something on this while you are there. There is also a Congressional delegation going to Kenya the week of August 8th and we are working on them to have a side meeting on this issue as well.

As always, thank you so much for all you do. We are all so grateful that you are there! All best, Laurie

Hi Huma,

Greetings from sunny Singapore. I hope this note finds you well.

[redacted]

Looks like I'll be in DC on the 13th of August as well as the 15 and 16th of September. I wonder that would be a window for setting up a brief face to face meeting with our friend. I've been doing my thing as gadfly for a national innovation agenda and now, via my new NGO, working the global angle of innovation stewardship and collaboration. (See attached NY Times article). I'd like to update HRC and see what the opportunities might be for catalyzing a renewed approach to innovation, both at home and in terms of our global connections.

You know the drill.

Thanks as always for your help.

All the best,

John

Dear Huma,

Well life in your neck of the woods continues to be exciting it seems! I hope this note finds you well and taking deep breaths when necessary.

I'm sure things will continue to be busy on your end indefinitely; at the same time, I'm very interested in seeing when our friend might have time to talk. I would be willing to fly out at any time for that meeting. At the same time, I will be in the DC area on 2/12 and possibly 13th and will also be coming out East a fair amount over the next couple of months.

Please let me know what might be possible. I look forward to stay in touch.

All the best,

Can Governments Till the Fields of Innovation?

BY STEVE LOHR

INNOVATION — the tricky, many-step process by which ideas become products and services — has typically been seen, studied and celebrated at the micro level, as a pursuit for entrepreneurs and clever companies.

But governments are increasingly wading into the innovation game, declaring innovation agendas and appointing senior innovation officials. The impetus comes from two fronts: daunting challenges in fields like energy, the environment and health care that require collaboration between the public and private sectors; and shortcomings of traditional economic development and industrial policies.

Innovation policy, to be sure, is an emerging discipline. It lacks crisp definitions or metrics. The most explicit embrace of it has been outside the United States, though the Obama administration is taking some initial steps. Its new budget directs the Bureau of Economic Analysis to develop statistics that “uniquely measure the role of innovation” in the economy. And the government’s new chief technology officer, Aneesh Chopra, speaks of building “innovation platforms” to spur growth.

The rising worldwide interest in innovation policy represents the search to answer an important question: What is the appropriate government role in creating industries and jobs in today’s high-technology, global economy?

That central issue animated much of the discussion at an unusual gathering earlier this month at a lodge north of San Francisco. This invitation-only affair was organized and moderated by John Kao, a former professor at Harvard Business School and founder of the Large Scale Innovation.

John Kao, right, a former professor at Harvard Business School, spoke this month at a meeting covering the appropriate government role in creating industries and jobs. (Peter DeSilva for The New York Times)

A few speakers covered big-think issues like climate-altering geoengineering and water-management technologies. But the main participants were innovation-policy practitioners from nine countries: Australia, Brazil, Britain, Chile, Colombia, Finland, India, Norway and Singapore.

The meeting offered a window onto the state of innovation policy — how it is being defined, and what countries are doing. Above all, innovation policy is an attempt to bring some coordination to often disparate government initiatives in scientific research, education, business incentives, immigration and even intellectual property.

“It’s about setting an agenda and helping build a portfolio of skills that let an economy and a society move forward in smarter, faster ways,” Mr. Kao said.

Yet if the reach of innovation policy is broad, the attendees agreed, it is best done with a lighter touch than industrial policies of the past, which often focused on specific companies for government support. They used metaphors like “impresario” and “orchestra conductor” to describe government’s role. The ideal, they said, is “stewardship,” not command and control.

In Britain, a national innovation agenda is beginning to take shape with policy documents and the creation of a Department for Business, Innovation and Skills. “We’re determined not to second-guess the future by trying to pick winners and losers,” said Philip Rycroft, a senior government official overseeing innovation policy. “But we do think government can create the conditions so that new industries can rise more easily.”

Finland has long taken a comprehensive approach to innovation policy, investing in areas as varied as an outstanding national education system and high-speed Internet connections for its residents. It has also produced a power in the cellphone industry, Nokia.

But Mikko Kosonen, president of the Finnish Innovation Fund, a public investment fund, says Finland now needs an "innovation policy 2.0" to climb the economic ladder to remain competitive. "We see value migrating to software and services," he explained.

The country has the second-fastest-aging society in the world, after Japan, and its health care costs are rising rapidly. To turn that challenge into a growth engine, Finland intends to become a global leader in developing software and services for medical monitoring and preventive health services. "We think well-being services are the next big opportunity for Finland," said Mr. Kosonen, a former senior executive at Nokia.

Other governments are also focusing on targets of potential advantage. In Australia, the government is looking to nurture industries that arise from its harsh climate and a scattered population. So research centers are working to improve strains of drought-resistant wheat and cotton for export as adaptive technologies to cope with climate change, said Terry Cutler, who recently headed a government-appointed expert panel on innovation in Australia. And Boeing last year selected Australia as the location for a Phantom Works lab for developing unmanned aircraft, he said.

"Test flights don't bump into things," he said. "Sparsity can be a global competitive advantage."

In India, the government and industry have financed research into products and services that reverse the traditional pattern of innovation flowing gradually from wealthy nations to the rest of the world, said R. A. Mashelkar, chairman of the country's National Innovation Foundation. Early evidence of the trend, he said, includes the $2,000 Nano automobile, and low-cost drugs for tuberculosis and psoriasis.

"If you make something for the rich, the poor cannot afford it," Mr. Mashelkar said. "But if you design for the poor, everyone can afford it."

CLEARLY, the innovation meeting in California was a gathering of enthusiasts. One view not heard was that innovation policy itself is a mistake — government meddling in decisions best left to the marketplace — as free-market purists contend.

Lars Aukrust, executive director for innovation at the Research Council of Norway, answered that criticism by comparing a nation with a large corporation. "If you are going to run a big company," he said, "are you going to leave it all to serendipity or make some strategic choices?"

"Innovation policy is a probability game," Mr. Aukrust added. "You can improve the odds of success." ■

Dear Melanne,

I have really been trying to help Pattie get an answer. Philippe called me back last Friday and sounded quite positive and near definite that he would give the green light. I didn't quote him to Pattie but did say that after the conversation, I was optimistic that it would be a go. I am completely puzzled about why no one would have then given Pattie a call so that she need not be fretting and begging. Is there any way you can help her get an answer? Miss you and hope you are doing well.

Warmly,

Melanne—I've resisted the urge to lasso your help, beyond cc'ing you on the emails to Philippe and Caroline Adler. Whatever help you've given behind the scenes, thanks so very much.

But I'm reaching out to you now—and called your office before I cc'ed you on today's emails to Philippe and Caroline—because this is the deadline for an answer re doing the interview with Secretary Clinton for the MPWomen issue. As you know, Indra Nooyi really wants to do it. We really want to do it. The Secretary should—and I'm being objective here—want to do it, simply bc this issue is one of Fortune's biggest and most popular of the year, a must-read for CEOs and young women, and front and center at the MPWomen Summit. This is her chance to "speak" at the Summit (and to millions more influentials besides) even if she can't be with us in person.

So whatever you can do, we would so greatly appreciate. Thanks and all the best—Pattie

If there's no time to deal with this, I completely understand, but if there's a way that [redacted] can be included in the Goma press, that would be very special. Subj: Re: Do you have any suggestions for [redacted]

Rosina,

Thanks for your willingness to help. I am currently on the road with limited email access but I am reachable at the following number: [redacted] anytime. Knowing that I have this out with you, I will try to check email again soon.

This summer I am interning for a Ugandan weekly news magazine called The Independent. The website is www.independent.co.ug. My travel plans have changed slightly but I was informed that Hillary Clinton is scheduled to be in Goma around August 8/9. I am currently scheduled to go back to Kampala on the 9th, but I will be about 30 minutes from Goma at that point and if Hillary will be there then, I will go back. The ideal, if we are going to be there at the same time, would be for me to get to where she's going to be and best case scenario ask her some questions. The story would be for The Independent.

Thanks again!

Best,

Hey There,

Hope you are having a wonderful summer! I am leaving tonight for a trip to Burundi, Rwanda, and Congo and assuming all goes according to plan, I will be in Goma the same day as Hillary Clinton supposedly (Aug 7-8). I'm trying to find an exact itinerary and can't at the moment. I'll try and call the press office next week but I thought that there might be a very slim chance Rosina would know who the best person to talk to might be? I know its unlikely and completely far fetched, but worth asking, right? (I would have emailed her directly, but I don't seem to have her email saved anywhere).

Basically, if we are going to be there at the same time, I'd ideally like to try and get to where she's going to be. Best case scenario I would get to ask her a question or two, but I know that's unlikely and am really just trying to confirm whether or not I will be in Goma when she's scheduled to be there

Thanks!

Dear Huma:
How are you? I hope everything is doing well with you

Please pass the following message to Hillary:

Dear Hillary & President Clinton:

"We were taken to a location, and when we walked through the doors, we saw standing before us President Bill Clinton," Ling said with Lee standing beside her. "We were shocked, but we knew instantly in our hearts that the nightmare of our lives was finally coming to an end."

Reading through Mrs. Ling's words both of us were swept with overwhelming emotions visualizing that sublime moment. Actions like this symbolize the true nature of both of you. Absence of fear, boldness, calculated risk, willingness to take the heavy burdens and responsibilities of being living symbols and leaders of our great nation.

We are grateful, We are proud.

Amarilis and Claudio Osorio.

Drozdiak also says that the US is totally out of the loop in Berlin—no ambassador, no DCM and a political counselor who has just arrived. The Germans have nobody to talk to and they don't expect to deal seriously with Obama's ambassadorial appointment. We should expect that the Germans and Russians will now cut their own separate deals on energy, regional security, etc., and those deals will reflect narrow, parochial economic and political needs indifferent to whether or not we deem them to be in the broader interest of the Western alliance.

It was just one of those wonderful days and I just wanted to say thank you a million times for having the confidence in me, sticking with me, and giving me this chance. I will do everything in my power to fulfill and deserve that trust. On to Tokyo and see you in Thailand. Best Kurt

Dear Madam Secretary-

I hope this note finds you, the President, and Chelsea all doing well. Congratulations to President Clinton on successfully securing the release of the 2 American journalists. I am planning a trip to Asia for October 3-10. While there, I will be traveling to Beijing, Tokyo, Hong Kong and Singapore and I was wondering if there is any way you could help set up a meeting or 2 with some elected officials in any of those regions. Once again, you're doing an amazing job and all of America is very fortunate to have you as our Secretary of State. I look forward to seeing you soon.

From: Sid
Re: N. Ireland forum at CGI

1. Shaun Woodward, UK Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, suggested a panel at CGI to be conducted by former President Clinton of British and Irish prime ministers, and perhaps leaders in NI, under the theme of "Implementing Peace."
2. Former President Clinton has conveyed to me his approval, contingent on approval of the State Department.
3. I have copied below (and attached) Woodward's letter to me.
4. Let me know to move this forward.

Dear Sid,

Following our conversations about the CGI, it would be good to try and explore further now with President Clinton and State the idea for an event at the CGI for Northern Ireland.

As you know, and very much thanks to the help again of HRC, we hope to be able to move forward with the final phase of the political process in the Autumn.

As the CGI coincides with the UN meeting and also the G20, we should explore the idea of whether we could bring together and participation of both the British and Irish Prime Ministers under the auspices of the CGI. The theme could be 'Implementing Peace'. The session would explore the steps for the
