First Interim Release

Dear Mr. Peterson:

This is the first interim response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request to the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), dated December 29, 2015.

DHS's Production

For this month's production DHS reviewed 215 responsive pages. Of the 215 pages, 18 pages are released in full, 140 pages are released in part pursuant to FOIA exemption 5 and 6, and 57 pages are withheld in full pursuant to FOIA exemption 5 and 6. The enclosed documents are bates stamped DHS-172-00001 to DHS-172-00215.

Sincerely,

Hi Jeh,

How are you doing? Thank you again for making our trip to D.C. so memorable. We had an incredible dinner with you and (b)(6) and the visit to the White House basically blew our minds. We are still talking about it. Anyways, I am writing to touch base about the November 14 Pacific Council luncheon at which you will speak. The luncheon will take place at the JW Marriot in downtown Los Angeles. Pacific Council has proposed the following itinerary:

11:45PM Secretary Johnson arrives, meets with Nili Moghaddam (moderator) to discuss final program details in holding room
12:00PM Secretary Johnson, traveling party, and Moghaddam join VIP reception
12:15PM Doors open to ballroom, guests take their seats
12:20PM Secretary Johnson and Moghaddam enter the room and are escorted to their seats at the head table
Lunch is served
12:40PM Secretary Johnson and Moghaddam are equipped with lavalier microphones by the AV technician
12:45PM Pacific Council President & CEO Dr. Jerrold D. Green provides welcome remarks and introductions
12:50PM Secretary Johnson and Moghaddam take their seats on the stage
Moderated discussion commences
1:20PM Moghaddam opens floor to the audience for questions
1:45PM Moghaddam takes final question from the audience or allows for Secretary Johnson to provide closing remarks
1:50PM Program adjourns (hard stop)
1:55PM Event Envoy meets with Secretary Johnson for 5-10 minutes of one-one-one interview in which 3-4 follow up questions will be asked including PCIP
Hallmark Question: "What is the most important global issue that we don't hear enough about?"
2:05PM Secretary Johnson departs JW Marriott

Would you like to propose any changes to this itinerary? Also, when you have a moment, could you connect me with someone on your staff with whom I can work to prepare for the talk?

Thank you,

Nili

Hi (b)(6)

I hope you and Jeh have been enjoying these final few weeks of summer! I wanted to share an update with regard to the Coast Guard Headquarters. Unfortunately, given the size of the event and logistics, we were unable to move forward with hosting our National Leadership Dinner there on Saturday, December 6th. With that, we thought it might be the perfect venue to host our Friday evening PACA dinner on 12/5. I have not heard back from the Commander, but wanted to share the idea with you before following-up. I think PACA would be the perfect group to host at the Headquarters, and if Jeh was interested in addressing them, all the better. Again, just wanted your thoughts before moving forward. Let me know what you think!!!

Warm regards,

Dear Commander,

I hope this note finds you well. After additional consideration, we have decided to move forward with an alternate location for our dinner the evening of Saturday, December 5th. With that, we wanted to know if we might be able to host a smaller dinner at your facility on Friday, December 4th for the President's Advisory Committee on the Arts, of which (b)(6) (as an appointed member) and Secretary Johnson would be invited to attend. I am not sure if the space is available, but this would be a much smaller group (approximately 55 guests) and easier to manage with one set arrival and departure. Please let me know if this might be a possibility and I will move forward with acquiring the necessary paperwork to continue the request.

Thank you again for your consideration.

Best wishes for the long weekend,

(b)(6)

Dear Commander -

Thank you again for taking the time to meet with us last week. We thoroughly enjoyed the tour of your exceptional facility. With that, we are still considering options for our Saturday evening dinner. Given the unique opportunity an event hosted at the Headquarters would present for our group, we would very much like to continue the conversation about hosting our evening with you. We also want to ensure that this does not present you (or the Kennedy Center) with any logistical situations that could prove to be problematic, and are weighing the pros and cons with the utmost thoughtfulness. Would it be possible to continue to keep us in mind for the 12/5 date while we consider this further and also touch base with the appropriate parties to help us secure the space?

With gratitude,

(b)(6)

She would like to arrange a date/time for the week of August 10th when you return to visit USCG HQ and see the area that could be available for use for a Kennedy Center function on Saturday evening, December 5th.

Can you please relay when you are available that week for Desiree and someone else from her office to come by? The middle of the week would be fine as I believe you said you were not available the beginning of the week.

I spoke to (b)(6) this morning and she is very interested in speaking with you about this opportunity.

(b)(6) worked for (b)(6) at the Business Roundtable so if you wish to pursue this I'm sure John would speak to (b)(6) smarts. (b)(6) can also discuss her qualifications.

(b)(6) had been an R and switched party affiliation when then-Senator Obama was running for President - she was/is a supporter. She's very savvy, knows her way around DC, politics and the media. She hasn't been looking for a full time gig, so something that is a year-plus is just right. I know her work style, which is totally professional and dedicated, so she'd be totally focused on the mission.

She's leaving for a 10 day vacation in Italy on Wednesday, so based on your interest and your schedule you could meet with her immediately or once she's back.

Dear Jeh:

By way of introduction, (b)(6) is old friend of more than 20 years. (He is also good friends with (b)(6) (b)(6) from their days working in Paris.)

He is former staffer for (b)(6) and subsequently worked with (b)(6)

(b)(6) during her tenure as a Member of the UNICEF Board. (b)(6) is presently with the UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR) building; public private partnerships and communications strategies for crisis management.

During his career (Bio and CV attached) he has worked for international organizations focused on socio-economic and humanitarian needs. Among these organizations is the OECD, where he'd like to return.

If you could kindly find ten or fifteen minutes to meet with (b)(6) soon toward this end, I'd be most grateful. His unique background and perspective may compliment DHS's engagement with the OECD. (b)(6) is in exploratory conversations with their Disaster Risk Management Program/High Level Risk Forum whose US interface is DHS. Your former (b)(6) is moving back to Paris and would like to make a contribution through a posting/consultancy with the OECD, be it a direct assignment or as an agency secondment. Given DHS's work within the OECD GOV Directorate's Risk Management Program or elsewhere within the organization, your consideration and support for his is appreciated.

18 months from point of last year's discussion would be the point at which the OPC Independent Cost Estimate analysis will be complete. Our complete USCG/DHS analysis and subsequent recommendation will not be finished until the summer of FY16 which is roughly 18 months from down select contract award.

Secretary Johnson - I wanted to reach out to congratulate you on the nomination of (b)(6) for USM. Just as you said you would, you have assembled an outstanding team at DHS.

A crucial member of that team is Christian. I had the pleasure of sitting down with him for over an hour. I understand why you have so much confidence in him. He has a command of the organization, knows how to get things done and has a wonderfully engaging manner.

I am immensely grateful to you, Christian, Pam and the rest of your team for the time and effort that you have expended on my behalf. If you are willing, I would respectfully ask that you appoint me to the HSAC. It would allow me to learn more about DHS, try to make a modest contribution in the near term and then see if other opportunities might arise in the future.

Recent events underscore the critical, and growing, importance of the mission of DHS. I salute you and your colleagues for everything that you are doing to protect our nation.

Christian,

Hope you are well. Please advise me on what actions I need to take to meet the Secretary's intent for me to apply for the CT position in "Intelligence and Analysis." I am led to believe that Pam is no longer my POC and that you are.

Can you also spend some time explaining the type of work? Type of position? Most important type of resume and anything else I need to do on this end.

Thank you for your time,

Dear Jeh,

I'm really looking forward to your visit this weekend in Jeddah, I think your visit is very important. Your early afternoon arrival gives us the chance to have my senior team and I provide you with a short brief, which will provide strong context for your MOI meeting later in the evening. I'll have key members of my senior staff ready at a secure space in the Consulate to supplement the brief after you arrive.

(b)(6)

As you know, we've also got General (b)(6) arriving on Sunday afternoon, so I appreciate you accommodating the brief upon arrival so I can get back to the airport to welcome the Chairman.

Some important movements are afoot, and notwithstanding media and defense counsel accounts, these movements are HUGELY POSITIVE for the legitimacy of the eventual outcomes of the main cases. It would NOT have been good if the trials had gone into closed session every time the accused would have wanted to speak about treatment, and the commitment of our nation to justice would have been understandably doubted.

> The Senate has confirmed Jeh Johnson, once the Pentagon's top lawyer, to lead the Department of Homeland Security. Mr. Johnson brings a sharp legal mind and reputation for probity to the job. He will need both to manage the department, a daunting agglomeration of agencies and missions and chronic management problems.

> Every year the Government Accountability Office publishes a "high-risk list" of federal agencies and departments that it considers "most in need of transformation." Homeland security has appeared on that list, year after year, for failing to become "a single, cohesive and effective department that is greater than the sum of its parts." It has many parts: 22 agencies were folded into homeland security in 2003; today the department has more than 240,000 employees handling terrorism prevention, disaster response, immigration (legal and illegal) and many other things. Staffing vacancies are high. Morale is low.

> What most needs fixing is immigration enforcement. Under Mr. Johnson's predecessors, the department's continually shifting strategies against illegal immigration had two things in common. They were ineffective and cruel. The administration of George W. Bush specialized in high-profile deportations. In one notorious instance, the government professed itself shocked to find Hispanics without papers working in a meat plant in Iowa, so it swooped in and removed them, devastating scores of families and the town they lived in.

> The Obama administration promised greater prosecutorial discretion to focus more on removing violent and dangerous criminals, but, nevertheless, it ramped up deportations to record levels. Deportations roared along at about 400,000 a year, a record number that smelled like a quota. Though the rate has subsided in the last year, thousands of noncriminals and minor offenders are still being swept into the dragnet, while complaints persist of overzealous, unconstitutional enforcement.

> Although comprehensive reform lags in Congress, Mr. Obama has taken some steps to take the pressure off unauthorized immigrants who pose no threat, including a laudable program to defer the deportations of some young immigrants. Though he has been accused of intruding into Congress's authority, the program is a legitimate stopgap to protect a group of potential citizens who have been stranded by Congressional inaction. Mr. Obama and Mr. Johnson should find ways to expand it.

> In a Dec. 12 letter to Senator Richard Durbin of Illinois, Mr. Johnson said deferred deportation had been a success and promised to keep it that way. He added, "I do not believe that deportation quotas or numeric goals are a good idea," and he promised to investigate reports of abusive conditions at detention centers. These are good signs.

> Mr. Johnson has little experience with immigration. But the homeland security deputy secretary confirmed on Friday, Alejandro Mayorkas, does. Mr. Mayorkas is the director of Citizenship and Immigration Services, the agency within homeland security that handles legal immigration. Under Mr. Mayorkas's capable leadership, it has done a good job in managing the deferred-action program. Mr. Mayorkas, an immigrant himself, looks to be an excellent partner for Mr. Johnson in beginning the formidable job of bringing the department's immigration policies and practices into line with its mission.

We briefly discussed your planned visit to Ground Zero tomorrow and wanted to see if you would be interested in us exploring a very low-key tour of the site conducted by the NYPD. The WTC site is “owned” from a NYPD standpoint by the Counterterrorism Bureau (CTB), who is led by Chief Jim Waters, a close friend of the Department. Given that CTB will be on-site anyways, we thought this might be an interesting way to see the memorial.

Additionally, in addition to any photos that are potentially releasable, Clark would like to draft a short readout for press of your visit as well.

Please let us know what you think.

To the men and women of the Department of Homeland Security:

Today I took the oath and became the fourth Secretary of Homeland Security. Our mission represents the most important function a government can provide for its people. Our mission's success depends on your everyday efforts.

As your leader, I pledge to be your champion and your advocate. I care about you and your family, and I admire your commitment to serving our Nation. In the days and weeks ahead, I will visit each of your component's headquarters, and travel to DHS worksites around the country. I want to meet as many of you as possible, hear your views, and share with you my vision for the future of our Department.

I would also like to thank Alejandro Mayorkas, who was sworn in today as the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, for his continued service.

I wish each of you a happy and safe holiday season and I salute your important work on behalf of all Americans.

Sincerely,

Jeh Johnson

To the men and women of the Department of Homeland Security:

Today I took the oath and became the fourth Secretary of Homeland Security. Our mission represents the most important function a government can provide for its people. Our mission's success depends on your everyday efforts.

As your leader, I pledge to be your champion and your advocate. I care about you and your family, and I admire your commitment to serving our Nation. In the days and weeks ahead, I will visit each of your component's headquarters, and travel to DHS worksites around the country. I want to meet as many of you as possible, hear your views, and share with you my vision for the future of our Department.

I would also like to thank Alejandro Mayorkas, who was sworn in today as the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, for his continued service.

I wish each of you a happy and safe Holiday season and I salute your important work on behalf of all Americans.

Sincerely

Jeh Johnson
Secretary of Homeland Security

JEH JOHNSON SWORN IN AS FOURTH SECRETARY OF HOMELAND SECURITY

WASHINGTON – Today, Jeh Charles Johnson was officially sworn in as the fourth Secretary of Homeland Security. Secretary Johnson, joined by his family, took the oath this evening at his home in Montclair, New Jersey. As Secretary of Homeland Security, Johnson now oversees the third largest Federal department in the United States and leads the 240,000 dedicated men and women working tirelessly to implement the Department's important homeland security mission. Secretary Johnson is in close coordination with senior leadership of the Department, including Deputy Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas – who was also sworn in on Monday.

“I am honored to assume the important responsibilities of this office,” said Secretary Johnson. “The men and women of the Department of Homeland Security deserve strong leadership and I look forward to supporting them every day as we work together to make our communities and our nation safer, more secure, and more resilient.”

Prior to joining DHS, Secretary Johnson served as General Counsel for the Department of Defense, where he was part of the senior management team and led the more than 10,000 military and civilian lawyers across the Department. Secretary Johnson’s career has included extensive service in national security, law enforcement, and as an attorney in private corporate law practice. Secretary Johnson was General Counsel of the Department of the Air Force in 1998 to 2001, and he served as an Assistant U.S Attorney in the Southern District of New York in 1989 to 1991.

Clark; these look fine to me with two exceptions: my swearing in will not occur today at 10am, obviously. Hopefully it occurs today and will not occur as described here. Just say "was sworn in on December 23" if that hopefully turns out to be the case. Second, I don't use the word "humbled". Just say I am "honored".

Jeh Johnson

Jeh Charles Johnson was sworn in on December 23, 2013 as the fourth Secretary of Homeland Security. Prior to joining DHS, Secretary Johnson served as General Counsel for the Department of Defense, where he was part of the senior management team and led the more than 10,000 military and civilian lawyers across the Department. As General Counsel of the Defense Department, Secretary Johnson oversaw the development of the legal aspects of many of our nation's counterterrorism policies, spearheaded reforms to the military commissions system at Guantanamo Bay in 2009, and co-authored the 250-page report that paved the way for the repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" in 2010.

Secretary Johnson's career has included extensive service in national security, law enforcement, and as an attorney in private corporate law practice. Secretary Johnson was General Counsel of the Department of the Air Force from 1998 to 2001, and he served as an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York from 1989 to 1991.

In private law practice, Secretary Johnson was a partner with the New York City-based law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP. In 2004, Secretary Johnson was elected a Fellow in the prestigious American College of Trial Lawyers, and he is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Secretary Johnson graduated from Morehouse College in 1979 and received his law degree from Columbia Law School in 1982.

I congratulate the skipper, officers and crew of U.S. Coast Guard Cutter STRATTON, which is just returning to Alameda, Calif. from a four-month patrol of the Eastern Pacific.

By every measure, this four-month voyage off the west coast of North and Central America was a huge success. While at sea, the STRATTON seized more than 66,500 pounds of cocaine worth more than $1 billion. This included seizures of cocaine from two drug-running submarines – one of which amounted to 12,000 pounds of cocaine worth about $181 million.

Every day, the U.S. Coast Guard performs missions vital to our homeland security, maritime security and public safety. I am especially proud of the STRATTON and crew, which I came to know when I visited Alameda just before her departure in April. Ever since, among my many responsibilities, I took special interest in receiving daily reports from the STRATTON and tracked her progress.

The STRATTON's successful, record-breaking mission reflects the hard work, excellence and dedication put forth by the men and women of the U.S. Coast Guard every day. The mission also reflects an impressive level of cooperation between the U.S. Coast Guard, law enforcement and intelligence agencies in the U.S., Canada and other partner nations.

Last week, the U.S. Coast Guard celebrated its 225th anniversary. I said then that the U.S. Coast Guard can look forward to a future 225 years even brighter than the last 225. The STRATTON is one of the U.S. Coast Guard's fleet of new National Security Cutters. She was christened by First Lady Michelle Obama in March 2012 and named in honor of Dorothy Constance Stratton, the first female commissioned officer in U.S. Coast Guard history. As such, the STRATTON is part of the current recapitalization of the U.S. Coast Guard fleet, and reflects that bright future.

To the skipper, officers and crew of the STRATTON, welcome home.

CHRISTIAN P. MARRONE

Christian P. Marrone currently serves as Chief of Staff of the Department of Homeland Security, under Secretary Jeh Johnson. Prior to joining DHS, he was most recently Vice President for National Security and Acquisition Policy at the Aerospace Industries Association, bringing to the association extensive budget policy experience from both the Department of Defense and the private sector.

Marrone held a number of senior positions within DOD, including Special Assistant to then-Secretary Gates and Acting Assistant Secretary of Defense for Legislative Affairs. During his time at DOD, Marrone worked on and supported DOD's leadership on many issues and priorities, including budget, key acquisition programs, overall program, management and acquisition policy efficiencies, and cybersecurity. Marrone also led the annual development of the Department's legislative program, including a variety of tasks and initiatives to support passage of the National Defense Authorization Act.

Marrone also previously served as an Executive for Defense Markets for 3M, where he was charged with helping build and develop the company's Defense Markets Division. He also provided advice and guidance on National Security-related issues to the company's senior leadership.

Marrone is a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, with a B.A. in Political Science. He also holds a J.D. from Temple University and a master's degree in Government Administration from the University of Pennsylvania. He is a proud alumnus of the Coach Joe Paterno's Pennsylvania State Football Program, of which he was a member from 1993 to 1997.

Deputy Commissioner, thank you for your review and guidance today; and thanks to all of your staff who helped us craft this important product. We have incorporated your narrative and included data provided by CBP and OIS to convey our progress in the first six months of 2015.

We intend to provide this to the Secretary very soon and would like your final confirmation on the data, the narrative, and the investments to ensure we are accurately portraying the information.

There are a few questions enclosed. Request your help in getting this info right and we look forward to any additional edits you may have.

If you could provide us with your final inputs by mid-day tomorrow, that will allow us to package it for S1.

Thank you very much.

I have captured key developments from yesterday's SAC-D "2016 USAF" Force Structure Hearing (Sec. James/Gen. Welsh). (b)(6)

cid:image001.png@01CFE147.9DE48300

I. Secretary James 2016 USAF Program Priorities: [Nuclear is #1 Modernization priority. Expect USAF to push for stand-alone nuclear modernization fund (LRS-B, "GBSD", etc.), similar to Navy SSBN(X) "NSBDF". Aug. 2016 F-35 CTOL IOC is on-track. USAF is strongly protecting KC-46, even under 2016 Sequester. Loss of RD-180 could create de facto SpaceX EELV monopoly. "NGLRE" development could take 6-8 years at ≈$2B total cost. USAF considering A-10 recapitalization, budget-permitting.]

- [Sec. James]: "[N]umber one [modernization priority] for us is nuclear...[W]e're developing the Minuteman-III ICBM follow-on [and] accelerating the long-range standoff weapon...[I]t is crucial to maintain a flexible nuclear triad. I've never been in favor of going down to just one leg or two legs. I like all three because of the flexibility...[W]e are trying to double down our efforts...This will be not a one-shot deal. It's not a one-year thing. It needs to continue...[W]e have ≈+$5.6B more in this [2016-2020] FYDP...than...a year ago. That is...how important we think it is..." [≈$13.9B 2016-2020 LRS-B RDT&E; ≈$1.8B 2016-2020 LRSO RDT&E; plus ≈$1B 2016-2020 "GBSD" RDT&E]
- [Sec. James]: [Aug. 2016 F-35 IOC]: "[W]e're projecting...2016 [F-35 IOC] between...August and December...[T]here's always certain risks, but I...feel quite good...that we're going to make it. Software...is a bit of a concern. And then we've had the need for experienced maintenance people to be able to shift over to the F-35. We think we've got that reasonably under control now...We want to keep this on track."
- [Sec. James]: [F-35 Sequester-impact]: "I can tell you with certainty [F-35 unit-cost] would go up [under full 2016 Sequester], because we would have to buy fewer and...[by default] the cost goes up for everyone. The other thing that worries me is what message does that send to the partners in this program across the world?...[I]f they see us buying less, and then they start to also buy less, that drives the unit cost up even more. We project we would be buying 14 fewer F-35s in FY16 if sequestration returns."
- [Sec. James]: [KC-46]: "[O]ur [2016] budget...fully supports the KC-46. And even should we have to go to sequestration, we would wish to protect that program as well. We have what we consider to be a very favorable contract there. We don't want to change any bit of that contract because if we do, it raises the possibility of opening that contract back up, which means the terms could change and it could cost us more money. It's on track...and we would want to keep it on track, even should sequestration happen." [S2.4B/12 AC 2016 KC-46 Proc. Request]

- [Sec. James]: [Potential SpaceX monopoly concerns]: "There may not be much of a competition if [Atlas V] is not available to be a part of it...The question is, would [Delta IV] be cost effective? If it's not, then I fear that we would inadvertently be trading one monopoly...which ULA has been, for a new [SpaceX] monopoly – and I don't think anybody wants that to happen." [Statement to reporters; Reuters, Inside Defense]
 - [Sec. James]: ["NGLRE"/RD-180 replacement]: "[W]e are working...to have a domestic engine launch capability, at least two, because we want competition...and we're trying to get there as quickly as possible. But all of the technical experts with whom I've consulted tell me this is not a one or two or three-year deal...[T]hat 2019 date is pretty aggressive, and I'm not sure we can make it...I would certainly welcome some clarification in what Congress wishes for us to do, but I'd also like to get the technical experts in so that you all can hear what I'm hearing, because I'm not sure 2019 is doable...[Y]ou've got to do it right...6-8 years is what I've been advised for a newly designed engine, and then an additional 1-2 years on top of that to be able to integrate the engine into the launch vehicle...[T]he cost estimate I have seen...[is] $2B...to develop this domestic capability." [S84M 2016 "NGLRE" RDT&E Request]
 - [Sec. James]: [SpaceX EELV Certification]: "SpaceX has not really been part of our EELV program yet...They're trying to get certified to be part of that, but...they have had various mishaps. But every developmental program does...I'm quite sure they're going to get there from here, and having some mishaps along the way in a developmental program...is normal...[W]e believe...SpaceX will be [certified] hopefully later on this year...I'm looking to see [how] we can streamline...without sacrificing our mission assurance needs...[T]here are other companies who also are waiting and watching. The more that come in...[the better] for competition, and for the national security needs."
 - [Sec. James]: [A-10]: "[T]he proposal to retire the A-10 again, we do it with the greatest of reluctance. It's a budgetary matter...[W]e have what we have...But...every aircraft eventually gives way to the next generation...General Welsh and I have been discussing, is there an alternative approach to address the A-10, and is there another way to [recapitalize]?...And we've got some ideas..."

II. General Welsh 2016 USAF Program Priorities: [Key date for F-35 is 2021 FOC. Lack of F-35 maintainers is critical concern. AETP is "game-changer" but would be 2016 sequester bill-payer. Sustained investment in combat capability infrastructure is now required. USAF is re-prioritizing JSTARS, F-15, U-2, and AWACS.]

- [Gen. Welsh]: [F-35]: "I'm actually very optimistic about the F-35 program today...The price has come down...The company team that's put together to oversee this program...is an exceptional one. I think we have a great partnership with them...A year and a half from now [Aug. 2016], we will declare [IOC] for the F-35 and I see nothing that stands in the way...So I feel pretty good about where the program is."
- [Gen. Welsh]: [F-35]: "For the Air Chief, the real important date is 2021...when you get [F-35] full operational capability...It will have operational capability [by 2016 IOC], but the things that are being discussed in the press...are things that we've known it wouldn't be able to do. It's been part of the plan the entire time. Full development of that capability will come at [2021 FOC]...[T]he biggest hurdle to get over between now and...2021...is this maintenance-manpower issue. This is a real issue for us. We have got to figure out how to create trained maintainers from experienced maintenance force in the rest of the Air Force to bed down F-35 units. We've got a short-term solution in place that we think will let us get to IOC, but we need a longer-term solution..."

- [Gen. Welsh]: "[T]he Advanced Engine Technology Program is a game-changer...[W]e should be looking at how to insert that engine technology into every fleet of airplanes that we fly...[T]his is technology that will return costs over time...I would just hate to see [it] terminated, but we are now comparing it...to [higher-priority] operational requirements...It [Sequester] is an ugly tightrope...and I hope we can stay the course."
- [Gen. Welsh]: "We...have a broader readiness issue...[which] is a lack of investment in infrastructure...that produces combat capability. Things like training ranges, test ranges, simulation infrastructures, space launch facilities, nuclear infrastructure...have all been intentionally underfunded for the last 15 years in order to focus spending on individual and unit readiness. That bill is now due."
- [Joint James/Welsh Prepared Testimony]: "The FY16 PB request...buy[s] back combat capabilities in areas where the Air Force accepted risk in the FY15 PB - the JSTARS, and F-15C. U-2 and E-3 AWACS divestment is re-phased to FY19, so we can continue to operate those platforms and meet combatant commanders' most urgent needs."

“DHS 2015: the Secretary's Progress Report”
January 29, 2015
The Woodrow Wilson Center
Washington, DC

Introduction

[slide 1] Good afternoon. I would like to start with a family photograph.

[slide 2] Though you won't believe this, this is me and my kid sister in 1966. I was 8 years old, standing next to my Dad's 1966 Buick convertible. The most striking thing about the photograph is that as recently as 1966, a private, everyday family of tourists like us could drive our car on to the grounds of the U.S. Capitol and park it, with no inspection or prior notice, just a few feet from the building.

[slide 3] This is the same spot, today. The public parking lot is gone, replaced by a few black Suburbans, police vehicles, and heavily-armed members of the Capitol Police. Sadly, there are threats to our homeland security today that did not exist in 1966. The Department of which I am Secretary is responsible for addressing those threats.

[slide 4] A year ago I stood here and spelled out my vision for the future of the Department of Homeland Security. I was new to the job then. Now, a year later, I'm here to provide a progress report on our efforts, with the benefit of a year's experience.

I thank Jane Harman and the Wilson Center for once again providing me with the forum for this speech. Jane Harman is a wise supporter, advisor and mentor. In this town, people like her mean a lot to people like me. We could not govern without you. Thank you and the Wilson Center for everything you do.

Improving the Manner in Which We Deliver Homeland Security

[slide 5] On New Year's Day I wrote out a set of New Year's Resolutions for the senior leadership of DHS. At the top of the list were things that go to the manner in which we conduct business and deliver homeland security. The reality is that DHS is a very large conglomerate of 22 components that is only 12 years old. We are a large and new bureaucracy. We are still finding our way, but we are headed in the right direction.

[slide 6] Filling the vacancies. First, over the last year we have filled almost all the senior-level vacancies that existed in the Department. Just prior to the time I took office a year ago, the Department of Homeland Security had no Secretary, no Deputy Secretary, and vacancies at a number of senior-level positions.

[slide 7] We now have a new Secretary (me), a new Deputy Secretary (Alejandro Mayorkas), a new Under Secretary for National Protection and Programs Directorate (Suzanne Spaulding), a new Under Secretary for Intelligence and Analysis (General Frank Taylor), a new Under Secretary for Science and Technology (Dr. Reggie Brothers), a new Commissioner of Customs and Border Protection (Gil Kerlikowske), a new Director of Citizenship and Immigration Services (Leon Rodriguez), a new Assistant Secretary for Immigrations and Customs Enforcement (Sarah Saldana), a new Chief Financial Officer (Chip Fulghum), a new Deputy Administrator of FEMA (Admiral Joe Nimmich), a new Inspector General (John Roth), a new Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs (Brian DeVallance), and a new Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs (Tanya Bradsher).

We are actively working through slates of candidates to fill the vacancies that have arisen the past year: Director of the Secret Service and Administrator of TSA.

[slide 8] Unity of Effort. We are restructuring the whole manner in which we make decisions within the Department of Homeland Security. In April I directed a “Unity of Effort” initiative, which has brought about a more centralized and integrated process for making decisions concerning budget requests, acquisition, strategy and other department functions. We are moving away from decisions made in stove pipes. As part of this initiative, we have created a Joint Requirements Council consisting of senior leaders from the DHS components, to identify and recommend investments to maximize efficiency. We have also realigned seven major DHS headquarters functions, to consolidate like functions and promote efficiency.

[slide 9] A commitment to transparency. Next, as I said here last year, we are committed to greater transparency. Government transparency breeds credibility and confidence; government secrecy breeds suspicion. [slide 10] One of our executive actions that the President announced on November 20 is to direct our Office of Immigration Statistics to collect, maintain and report consolidated DHS-wide data on the number of people we apprehend, remove, return or repatriate every year, in a manner that can be made public. Here again, we’ve been far too stove-piped in how we collect and report this information. [slide 11] I applaud Chief Fisher for making public the Border Patrol’s use of force policy last year, and Commissioner Kerlikowske for making public the recommendations of the independent Police Executive Research Forum about use of force by the Border Patrol, two documents long sought by the media.

[slide 12] Improving Morale. The Deputy Secretary and I are on an aggressive, multi-faceted campaign to improve morale within components of DHS. [slide 13] In October of last year we restored the Secretary's Awards Program, which had been dormant since 2008, to recognize more than 300 employees who have made outstanding achievements across DHS.

[slide 14] Getting off the GAO High Risk List. Next, DHS is one of 16 departments and agencies on GAO's so-called "High Risk List." We are on a path to get off that list soon. Indeed, GAO has informed us that our interactions with GAO serve as a "model" for how other federal agencies can work to address GAO's high risk designations.

[slide 15] Improving responsiveness to Congress. We have improved the Department's responsiveness to Congress. This [slide 16], despite the challenge of -- depending on how you count -- 92 committees and subcommittees of Congress who claim an oversight role over this Department. [slide 17] Members of Congress¹ on both sides of the aisle, including some of our harshest critics, have taken note.

[slide 18] From Worst to First in Plain Language. Finally, earlier this week we learned that, in the judgment of the Center for Plain Language, the Department of Homeland Security has gone from worst to first among federal agencies in our ability to communicate in plain language -- one of my personal passions.

"Mr. Secretary, I want to begin by thanking you for your accountability. . . Your responsiveness to our requests and our questions and your commitment to transparency I think there's a long way still to go within the department, but in the last 12 months, we've seen more transparency than we've seen in years. And so I really do appreciate that."

Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT):

"I can tell you, since you've taken office, the production and the response to Congress in terms of responding to our letters and inquiries is -- the difference, I cannot tell you how much better it is. And I thank you and the people who work on this. I do appreciate [that]."

Sen. Tom Coburn (R-OK):

"Jeh Johnson has proven to be a capable leader, a transparent partner with Congress, and committed to making tough decisions and improving the Department."

* * * *

In these challenging times, management reform is itself a homeland security imperative. Now, here is where we are on the substance of some of our important missions:

Counterterrorism

[slide 19] I said here a year ago, as long as I am Secretary, counterterrorism will remain the cornerstone of the Department of Homeland Security's mission. Thirteen and a half years after 9/11, it's still a dangerous world. And, in 2015, we must recognize that we have evolved to a new phase in the global terrorist threat. Today the terrorist threat is more decentralized, more diffuse, and more complex.

We are concerned about the so-called foreign fighter who leaves his home country, travels to another country to take up the fight there, links up with terrorist extremists, and may return home -- whether it's this country or one of our allies -- with a terrorist extremist purpose.

We are concerned about terrorist organizations' new, slick and skilled use of the internet to publicly recruit individuals to conduct attacks within their own homelands. AQAP no longer builds bombs in secret; it has now publicized its instruction manual, and has called for people to use it.

We are concerned about the domestic-based threat lurking in our midst -- the so-called "lone wolf" -- who may become inspired by this extremist propaganda on the internet, and who could strike with little or no notice.

So, what are we doing about this in 2015?

First, as everyone knows, we are taking the fight to these groups, in places like Iraq and Syria.

Our intelligence community continues to detect terrorist plots at their earliest stages.

Domestically, the FBI investigates, interdicts and prosecutes terrorist plots in the homeland.

[slide 20] In response to the recent attacks in Paris, Ottawa, Sydney and elsewhere, and the public calls by terrorist organizations for attacks in the West, I directed that the Federal Protective Service increase its presence at federal buildings in major cities in the U.S.

[slide 21] We continue to tailor and enhance our security through every method appropriate. For example, the visa waiver program we offer to 38 nations is a valuable tool for international commerce and travel. It is a program that must continue, but there are ways in which the security of the program can be improved. To enhance security while maintaining the integrity of the program, last November we identified added information fields to the Electronic System for Travel Authorization – or “ESTA” – to learn more about those who travel to the United States from countries for which we do not require a visa. We are considering further security enhancements.

We are engaging our allies in Europe and elsewhere to encourage them to maintain and share travel information about individuals of suspicion.

[slide 22] We are sharing more information and training with state and local law enforcement in this country. Given the manner in which the terrorist threat is evolving, the cop on the beat must be as vigilant as the intelligence analyst.

Engaging the community

[slide 23] Our efforts must include public engagement. DHS, along with the Justice Department, are engaging communities, organizations and institutions here at home that are themselves in a position to deter others who may be turning toward violence. In 2014, DHS held over 70 of these roundtables, meetings and other events in 14 cities around the country. I personally participated in these meetings in Chicago, Columbus, Ohio, Minneapolis, Boston and Los Angeles.

If You See Something Say Something™

[slide 24] We are doubling-down on our "If You See Something Say Something" campaign. Yesterday at a pre-Super Bowl press conference in Phoenix I rolled out this new, enhanced program. This must be more than a slogan.

Aviation security

[slide 25] Our counterterrorism efforts also include continued vigilance in aviation security. Last summer I directed that we enhance aviation security at overseas airports with flights directly to the United States. Several weeks ago

FINAL

TSA made further enhancements, and we are reviewing whether more is necessary.

[slide 26] As Secretary I have made it a DHS priority to establish pre-clearance by Customs and aviation security personnel at overseas airports, before a passenger gets on a flight bound for the United States. At present, we have pre-clearance in 15 overseas airports at which we have screened more than 16 million passengers before they arrived in the United States. The newest of these pre-clearance operations, at Abu Dhabi in the UAE, opened early last year. Since that time, at Abu Dhabi alone, we have already screened 364,000 passengers and crew bound for the U.S., and denied boarding to 571 individuals, including a number who were in the terrorist screening database.

[slide 27] We want to build more of these, at overseas airports where it makes sense from a homeland security point of view, and in a way that U.S. air carriers will support. Last year we put out a solicitation and received 25 letters of interest from airports around the world.

Fixing our Broken Immigration System

[slide 28] We are taking steps to fix our broken immigration system. Some say we should have waited for Congress to act. Let's not forget that we did wait, for years, and Congress did not act. The President continues to urge Congress to finish the job and pass a comprehensive, bipartisan immigration bill. He is willing to work with any serious partner – Democrat, Republican or Independent – who wants to fix the system. In the meantime, we must improve the system within our existing legal authorities. We did that, and the President announced these set of reforms on November 20, 2014.

[slide 29] We've established a new program of deferred action for undocumented adults. Those who have committed no serious crimes, have been in this country since January 1, 2010, and have children here who are citizens or lawful permanent residents, are eligible to be considered for this program. The reality is that these immigrants are not enforcement priorities. Therefore, we want to encourage these people to come out of the shadows, be accountable, pay taxes, and get on the books, so we know who they are.

Our executive actions also prioritize the removal of felons over families, includes a number of measures to further secure the border, discontinue the Secure Communities program, streamline legal immigration to boost the economy and promote naturalization, support military families, and enhance options for foreign-born high-skilled workers, entrepreneurs and businesses.

FINAL

Strengthening Border Security

[slide 30] We are taking a number of steps to further secure the border. I'm on a mission to strengthen border security, and to also replace public misperception with the facts.

[slide 31] In June 2013, Pew Research conducted a survey and asked the following question: "Just your best guess -- compared with ten years ago, do you think the number of immigrants entering the U.S. illegally today is higher, lower, or about the same?" Amazingly, 55% of respondents answered higher, and only 15% answered lower.

[slide 32] The reality is on this slide. In the year 2000, apprehensions on the southern border-- which are a direct indicator of total attempts to cross the border -- exceeded 1.6 million. Apprehensions on the southern border have dropped considerably since then, to around 400,000 a year in recent years. Apprehensions are in fact at their lowest rate since the 1970s.

These numbers are no doubt partially due to economic conditions and trends in the U.S., Mexico and Central America, but also due to the very large investment this Nation has made in border security over the last 15 years.

[slide 33] Today's Border Patrol has the largest deployment of people, vehicles, aircraft, boats and equipment along the southwest border in its 90-year history. This includes a budget of $3.5 billion, a total of 23,000 personnel, and 20,833 border patrol agents.

[slide 34] Without a doubt, we had a challenge last summer, with the unprecedented number of unaccompanied children and others who crossed a narrow area of our southern border into the Rio Grande Valley, in search of a family member and a better life in this country. We responded aggressively with more people and resources on the southern border. [slide 35] Beginning in mid-June the numbers of unaccompanied children crossing the southern border declined sharply, and are now at far lower levels.

But, we are not declaring "mission accomplished."

The President and I are committed to building an even more secure border, and a smart strategy to get there. Much of illegal migration is seasonal. The poverty and violence that are the "push factors" in Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador still exist. The economy in this country -- a "pull factor" -- is getting better. [slide 36] There is still more we can and should do.

FINAL

[slide 37] We are pursuing a risk-based strategy for border security. This means focusing resources where our intelligence and our surveillance tell us the threats exist. This is a smart, effective and efficient use of taxpayer resources.

[slides 38, 39, 40, 41, 42] There are more aircraft, surveillance, radar technology and other equipment that our experts have determined we need, which we have requested for FY 2015.

[slide 43] In December we opened a new family facility in Dilley, Texas that will house up to 2,400 individuals.

[slide 44] We are continuing aggressive public awareness messaging in Central America and elsewhere. This "know the facts" campaign was launched on January 5th. [slide 45] On January 21, I wrote another open letter in the Spanish language press to repeat the message.

[slide 46] Finally, we have launched a Department of Homeland Security-wide Southern Border Campaign Plan. [slide 47] We are doing away with the stove-piped approach to border security. [slide 48] Instead, we are putting to use, in a combined and coordinated way, the assets and personnel of CBP, ICE, CIS, the Coast Guard, toward the goal of border security.

[slide 49] We have established three new Department task forces, each headed by a senior official of this Department, to direct the resources of CBP, ICE, CIS and the Coast Guard in three discrete areas. The first, Joint Task Force-East, will be responsible for our maritime ports and approaches across the southeast. The second, Joint Task Forces-West, will be responsible for our southwest land border and the West coast of California. And the third will be a standing Joint Task Force for Investigations to support the work of the other two Task Forces.

Lawful trade and travel

[slide 50] A key part of our mission is to facilitate lawful trade and travel. This is vital to commerce and our economy. President Obama is committed to this.

[slide 51] Last year TSA continued to expand the very popular TSA Pre-check program, enrolling 800,000 new participants. At the same time, TSA screened 653 million total air passengers -- 14 million more than the year before -- 443 million checked bags, and 1.7 billion carry-on bags.

FINAL

[slide 52] Last year CBP screened 374 million passengers at land, sea and airports, an increase of 4% from the year before, and enrolled an additional 1.25 million travelers in the various Trusted Traveler Programs, to bring total enrollment to 3.3 million members. In 2014, CBP also processed $2.4 trillion in trade, an increase of 4% from the year before, and 25.7 million cargo containers through ports of entry, a 4.5% percent increase from the year before.

We are working with Canada and Mexico on programs and initiatives to facilitate the lawful and secure movement of goods and people between our countries. In response to President Obama's executive order, DHS is leading a 47-agency effort to create a national, electronic "Single Window" trade processing system for importers and exporters to do business with the United States. We are working to modernize in other areas to promote lawful trade and travel.

Cybersecurity

[slide 53] We need to make strides in cybersecurity.

Through our National Cybersecurity and Communications Integration Center, or "NCCIC," DHS is responsible for assisting and sharing information with the private sector concerning cyberattacks and threats, and for securing the civilian .gov networks.

[slide 54] I was pleased that, last year, Congress provided bipartisan support for our efforts, with the passage of legislation which codifies DHS's authority to assist the private sector, codifies DHS's authority to assist other federal agencies, and legislation to enhance DHS's ability to hire cyber talent.

[slide 55] We need to go further. On January 14, President Obama came to the NCCIC and announced his Administration's support for more cybersecurity legislation that will ensure our economic prosperity, national security and individual civil liberties. We are proposing legislation to (1) encourage the private sector to share cyber threat indicators with the NCCIC, (2) protect the private sector with limits on civil and criminal liability when they do, (3) require businesses to notify victims and the government when there is a data breach at that company, and (4) enhance criminal penalties for cybercrime.

The Secret Service

[slide 56] The Secret Service is the finest protection service in the world. No other agency of any government in the world could protect 135 world leaders all at once when they gather for the UN General Assembly. The Secret Service does this each year with great professionalism and without incident. The Secret Service continues to enjoy the President's trust and confidence, as it protects him and his family. It has built tremendous talent and capability to pursue cyber and financial crimes.

FINAL

However, recent events have highlighted the need for change. In October I appointed an independent panel to take a hard look at the Secret Service. In December the panel reported its findings back to me. Those recommendations were astute, thorough and fair. A number of security enhancements have already been implemented by Acting Director Clancy, but the Secret Service must also commit to longer term and more systemic change. For my part, I am committed to sustained and engaged oversight of the Secret Service, to ensure that it has what it needs to get the job done.

FLETC

[slide 57] Last year our Federal Law Enforcement Training Center trained over 59,000 officers and agents from federal, state, local, tribal and international law enforcement.

The Coast Guard

[slide 58] We are ensuring that the Coast Guard has what it needs to get its job done. These are exciting times for the Coast Guard, as it is replacing its aging fleet with new vessels. Four new National Security Cutters are in service and a fifth will be commissioned this summer. Twelve new Fast Response Cutters have been delivered and are making a difference every day in south Florida, and we are more than halfway to completing the replacement of our fleet of aged patrol boats. Meanwhile, the Coast Guard is in the design phase of a new mid-size Offshore Patrol Cutter. I am committing to ensuring this project is affordable before going forward with the selection of a general contractor and production.

FEMA

[slide 59] FEMA has become the premier emergency management agency in the country and has earned the confidence of federal, state and local leaders throughout. In the year I've been in office, I have personally had the opportunity to observe this.

Support from Congress

[slide 60] Finally, DHS cannot pursue all these important missions alone. I cannot print money. I cannot appropriate money. We need a continued partnership with Congress. We need an FY 2015 appropriations bill.

FINAL

At present DHS is operating on a continuing resolution which expires February 27. As long as we are on CR, we are restricted to last year's spending levels, and cannot engage in any new spending and activities.

That means we cannot pay for the added border security that I talked about.

That means we cannot invest in the things the independent panel recommended to improve the Secret Service; we cannot hire new Secret Service agents for the coming presidential election cycle.

That means we cannot fund new non-disaster grants for state and local governments that mayors, police chiefs, and governors depend on.

Our ability to fund aviation security, maritime security, port security and homeland security is severely constrained.

As originally introduced by the House Appropriations Committee, the FY 2015 appropriations bill for the Department of Homeland Security was a good bill. It appropriated $39.7 billion for the Department and funded many of the things we need. On the House floor the bill was amended to include politically-charged language to defund all our executive actions to fix the immigration system. The President has vowed to veto any bill that includes this language.

The clock to February 27 is ticking. In these times, the homeland security budget of this government should not be a political football. I urge Congress to pass an appropriations bill for DHS, free and clear of politically-charged amendments.

Conclusion

[slide 61] I will end with the very last two words I ended last year's speech with. Last year, I said that, in the name of homeland security, we should not sacrifice our values as a Nation of people who cherish privacy and freedom, celebrate diversity, and are not afraid. Fear is corrosive.

[slides 62, 63, 64, 65, 66] In the final analysis, courage and resolve in the face of challenge are the greatest strengths of any nation. Terrorism cannot advance if we refuse to be terrorized. Whether in response to a terrorist threat, a natural disaster, a deadly virus, or in the pursuit of a more perfect union, courage and resolve will always prevail.

Thank you for listening [slide 67].

Subject: Fw: Jan 24-25 draft of Wilson speech

Here is a draft of the Jan 29 speech. Ashley has done a great job on the slides, and she will fill in some of the missing information in the draft speech where indicated. My goal is to get this out tomorrow afternoon for WH clearance.
