Hi Monica,

SRAP just sent up this thank you cable and letter for Ambassador Munter that they would like S to approve this weekend. They would like the text of the cable to be read out aloud at Ambassador Munter's farewell ceremony on Monday; for the cable to arrive in time in Islamabad, it must go out this weekend. The hard copy of the letter can wait for S' signature on Monday.

Would it be possible to run the cable by S for her approval this weekend? Thanks!

RELEASE IN FULL

Dear Mr. Ambassador:

I want to express my deep appreciation for your exceptional service as U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan during two of the most challenging years in the history of our bilateral relationship. During my visits to Islamabad over the past two years, I saw first-hand the great regard that your staff, colleagues, and Pakistani counterparts have for you. It is a testament to your leadership, exemplary service, and commitment to our Mission.

The work you and Mission Pakistan have done to further U.S. policy, under very difficult circumstances, is truly remarkable. Your efforts have helped to guide the bilateral relationship toward a more stable, realistic future. As I look back on the past year's challenges – including the May 2 raid in Abbottabad that killed Osama bin Laden, the November 26 cross-border incident, and the closure of the ground lines of communication – your efforts were instrumental in resolving each crisis and maintaining our relations with a country that is vital to our national security interests.

As you return to Washington, I want to extend to you my personal thanks for your contributions to our nation. We are all the better for your service to our country. I wish you all the best in your retirement.

With appreciation and best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

July 20, 2012

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

ACTION MEMO FOR THE SECRETARY

FROM: S/SRAP – Marc Grossman

SUBJECT: (SBU) Thank You Letter to Ambassador Munter

Recommendation

(SBU) That you sign the attached letter, which will also be sent as a cable, to Ambassador Cameron Munter, thanking him for his service and dedication to our Mission in Pakistan. The letter will be presented to him during your upcoming meeting in Washington. The text of the cable will be read aloud during his July 23 farewell ceremony at post.

Approve _____ Disapprove _____

Background

(SBU) Ambassador Cameron Munter will depart post early morning July 24. The letter recognizes his leadership and dedication as U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan. Under difficult circumstances, Ambassador Munter helped to further our bilateral relationship with Pakistan through his sustained efforts to encourage Pakistani counterterrorism cooperation, support for the NATO campaign in Afghanistan, robust people-to-people ties, and religious tolerance. Ambassador Munter is requesting a meeting with you when he is in Washington for outgoing consultations.

For your situational awareness, we've included a note below from Ops:

Spain's king ousted as WWF honorary president

MADRID - (AP) The World Wildlife Fund's branch in Spain says it has ousted King Juan Carlos as its honorary president, a title he'd held since 1968, because the monarch's recent elephant hunting safari was incompatible with the group's goal of conserving endangered species.

The fund said in a statement that "although such hunting is legal and regulated" it had "received many expressions of distress from its members and society in general." It says members voted in a meeting in Madrid on Saturday to "to get rid of the honorary President."

News of the king's April elephant hunting trip in Botswana upset many Spaniards who considered it an opulent extravagance at a time of economic distress in the country.

The Royal Palace declined immediate comment on the WWF announcement.

SECRETARY OF STATE HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
REMARKS AT THE 2012 INTERNATIONAL AIDS
CONFERENCE
WASHINGTON, DC
MONDAY, JULY 23, 2012

It has been far too long since anyone could say these five words at the International AIDS Conference: "Welcome to the United States." I'm delighted that we finally have you all back.

I want to thank the leaders of the many countries who have joined us today. I also want to acknowledge my colleagues from Congress who have contributed so much to the fight against AIDS. And finally, let me salute all of the people here who actually do the work. On behalf of all Americans, thank you.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

Think how far we've come since the last time this conference was held in the United States. It was 1990, in San Francisco. Dr. Eric Goosby, who's now our Global AIDS Ambassador, ran a triage center for all the HIV-positive people who became sick during the conference. They set up IV drips to rehydrate patients. They gave antibiotics to people with AIDS-related pneumonia. Many had to be hospitalized, and a few died.

Even at a time when the world's response to the epidemic was sorely lacking, there were places and people of caring, where people with AIDS found support. But, tragically, there was so little that could be done medically. Thankfully, that has changed. Caring brought action, and action has made an impact.

The ability to prevent and treat the disease has advanced beyond what anyone might have reasonably hoped 22 years ago. AIDS is still incurable, but it no longer has to be a death sentence.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

This is a tribute to the work of countless people around the world—many of whom are here at this conference. And for decades, the United States has played a key role. Starting in the 1990s under the Clinton Administration—we helped make HIV treatment drugs more affordable in sub-Saharan Africa. And then in 2003, President Bush launched PEPFAR with strong bipartisan support from Congress, and this country began treating millions of people.

Today, we're building on this legacy. PEPFAR is shifting out of emergency mode and starting to build sustainable health systems that will help win this fight and deliver an AIDS-free generation. It's hard to overstate how sweeping—or how crucial—this change is. When President Obama took office, we knew that if we were going to win the fight against AIDS, we couldn't keep treating it as an emergency. We had to fundamentally change the way we, and our global partners, did business.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

We've engaged diplomatically—with Ministers of Finance and Health, but also with Presidents and Prime Ministers—to listen and learn about their priorities and needs in order to chart the best way forward together. That's required difficult conversations about issues that some leaders don't want to face—like government corruption, or injecting drug users. But it has been an essential part of helping more countries manage more of their own response to the epidemic.

We've also focused on supporting high-impact interventions, making tough decisions driven by science about what we will and will not fund. We're delivering more results for the American taxpayer's dollar by taking simple steps like switching to generic drugs, which saved more than $380 million in 2010 alone.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

And, crucially, we've vastly improved our coordination with the Global Fund; where we used to work independently of each other, we now sit down together to decide, for example, which of us will fund AIDS treatment, and which of us will fund the delivery of that treatment. That's a new way of working together for both of us.

All these strategic shifts have required a lot of heavy lifting. But it only matters if it means we're saving more lives. And we are.

Since 2009, we've more than doubled the number of people who get treatment that keeps them alive. We're also reaching far more people with prevention, testing, and counseling.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

I want to thank Dr. Eric Goosby, who has been on the front lines of all this work since the 1980s. More than anyone else, he had a vision for what PEPFAR needed to become and the tenacity to make it happen. And I want also to thank his extraordinary partners Dr. Tom Frieden at CDC and Dr. Raj Shah at USAID.

Now, with the progress we have made together, we can look ahead to a historic goal: creating an AIDS-free generation.

This is part of President Obama's call to make fighting global HIV/AIDS at home and abroad a priority for his administration. In July 2010, he launched the first comprehensive National HIV/AIDS Strategy, which has reinvigorated the domestic response to the epidemic.

FINAL (Daniel)

And last November, at the National Institutes of Health, I spoke in depth about the goal of an AIDS-free generation. I laid out some of the ways we are advancing it through PEPFAR, USAID, and the CDC. On World AIDS Day, President Obama announced an ambitious commitment to reach 6 million people globally with lifesaving treatment.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

Since that time, I've heard people raising questions about America's commitment to an AIDS-free generation. They wonder whether we're really serious about achieving it.

I am here today to make it clear: The United States is committed, and will remain committed, to an AIDS-free generation. We will not back off. We will not back down. We will stand up and fight for the resources necessary to achieve this historic milestone.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

I know many of you are passionate about achieving this goal. In fact, some would say I'm preaching to the choir. But right now, I think we need a little preaching to the choir. We need the choir and the congregation to keep singing, lifting their voices up, and spreading our message to everyone who's still standing outside.

So while I want to reaffirm my government's commitment, I'm also here to boost yours. This is a fight we can win. We've come so far already—too far to stop now.

Today I want to describe some of the progress we've made toward that goal and some of the work ahead.

FINAL (Daniel)

Let me begin by defining what we mean by an AIDS-free generation. It is a time when, first, virtually no children are born with the virus; second, as these children become teenagers and adults, they are at significantly lower risk of becoming infected than they would be today; and third, if they do acquire HIV, they have access to treatment that helps prevent them from developing AIDS and passing the virus on to others.

HIV may be with us well into the future. But the disease that it causes need not be.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

As of last fall, every agency in the U.S. government involved in this effort is working to get us on the path to an AIDS-free generation. We're focusing on what we call combination prevention. Our strategy includes condoms, counseling, and testing, and places special emphasis on three other interventions: treatment as prevention; voluntary medical male circumcision; and stopping the transmission of HIV from mothers to children.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, ComplexScript Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

Since November, we have elevated combination prevention in all our HIV/AIDS work—including right here in Washington, which still has the highest HIV rate of any large city in our country. Globally, we have supported our partner countries' shifting their investments toward the specific mix of prevention tools that will have the greatest impact for their people. For example, Haiti is scaling up its efforts to prevent mother-to-child transmission, including full treatment for mothers with HIV, which will in turn prevent new infections. And for the first time, its Ministry of Health is committing its own funding to provide anti-retroviral treatment.

We're also making notable progress on the three pillars of our combination-prevention strategy.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

On treatment as prevention, the United States has added funding for nearly 600,000 more people since September, which means we're reaching nearly 4.5 million people now and are closing in on our national goal of 6 million by the end of next year. That's our contribution to the global effort to reach universal coverage.

On male circumcision, we've supported more than 400,000 procedures since last December alone. And I'm pleased to announce that PEPFAR will provide an additional $40 million to support South Africa's plans to provide voluntary medical circumcisions for almost a half million boys and men in the coming year. This procedure reduces the risk of female-to-male transmission by more than 60 percent, for the rest of the man's life—so the impact is phenomenal.

FINAL (Daniel)

In Kenya and Tanzania, mothers asked for circumcision campaigns during school vacations so their teenage sons could participate. In Zimbabwe, some male lawmakers wanted to show their constituents how safe and virtually painless this procedure is—so they went to a mobile clinic and got circumcised. That’s the kind of leadership we welcome.

We’re also seeing the development of new tools that would allow people to perform the procedure with less training and equipment than they need today, without compromising safety. When such a device is approved by the World Health Organization, PEPFAR is ready to support it right away.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

On mother-to-child transmission, we're committed to eliminating it by 2015—getting the number to zero. Over the years, we've invested more than $1 billion for this effort. In the first half of this fiscal year, we reached more than 370,000 women globally, and we're on track to hit PEPFAR's target of reaching an additional 1.5 million women by next year.

We're also setting out to overcome one of the biggest hurdles in getting to zero. When women are identified as HIV-positive and eligible for treatment, they're often referred to another clinic—one that may be too far away for them to reach. As a result, too many women never start treatment.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

Today I am announcing that the United States will invest an additional $80 million to fill this gap. These funds will support innovative approaches to ensure that HIV-positive pregnant women get the treatment they need to protect themselves, their babies, and their partners.

So let there be no mistake: The United States is accelerating its work on all three of these fronts in the effort to create an AIDS-free generation.

Let's look at how all these elements can come together to make a historic impact.

In Zambia, we're supporting the government as they step up their efforts to prevent mother-to-child transmission. Between 2009 and 2011, the number of new infections went down by more than half. Half!

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

And we're just getting started. Together, we're going to keep up our momentum on mother-to-child transmission. In addition, we will help many more Zambians get on treatment and support a massive scale-up of male circumcision as well—two steps that, according to our models, will drive down the number of new sexually transmitted infections there by more than 25 percent over the next five years. As the number of new infections in Zambia goes down, it will be possible to treat more people than are becoming infected each year. We will, for the first time, get ahead of the pandemic there. And eventually, an AIDS-free generation of Zambians will be in sight.

Think of the lives we can touch in Zambia alone—all the mothers, fathers, and children who will never have their lives ripped apart by this disease. Now multiply that across the many other countries we're working with. If you're not getting excited, please raise your hand and we'll have someone come check your pulse.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

Now, creating an AIDS-free generation takes more than the right tools, as important as they are. Ultimately, it's about people—the people who have the most to contribute to this goal, and the most to gain from it. That means, for example, embracing the essential role that communities play—especially people living with HIV—and the critical work of faith-based organizations. We also need to make sure we're looking out for orphans and vulnerable children, who are too often overlooked in this epidemic.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

I want to highlight the particular role that women play. In sub-Saharan Africa, women account for 60 percent of those living with HIV. Women want to protect themselves from HIV, and they want access to adequate health care. We need to answer their call. PEPFAR is part of our comprehensive effort to meet the health needs of women and girls, working across the U.S. government and with our partners on HIV, maternal and child health, and reproductive health—including voluntary family planning and the Child Survival Call to Action.

Every woman should be able to decide when and whether to have children. This is true whether she is HIV-positive or not. I agree with the strong message that came out of the London summit on family planning earlier this month. There should be no controversy about this. None.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

Across all our health and development work, the United States is emphasizing gender equality because women need and deserve a voice in the decisions that affect their lives. We're working to prevent and respond to gender-based violence, which puts women at higher risk for contracting the virus. And because women need more ways to protect themselves from HIV infection, last year we invested more than $90 million in research on microbicides. All these efforts will help close the health gap between women and men, and lead to healthier families and communities as well.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

If we're going to create an AIDS-free generation, we also need to address the needs of the people who are at the highest risk of contracting HIV. One recent study of female sex workers and those trafficked into prostitution in low- and middle-income countries found that, on average, 12 percent of them were HIV-positive—far above the rates for women at large. People who use injecting drugs account for about one third of all the people who acquire HIV outside sub-Saharan Africa. And in low- and middle-income countries, studies suggest that HIV prevalence among men who have sex with male partners could be up to 19 times higher than among the general population.

Over the years, I have seen how difficult it can be to talk about a disease that is transmitted the way AIDS is. But if we're going to beat AIDS, we can't afford to avoid sensitive conversations, and we can't fail to reach the people who are at the highest risk.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

Unfortunately, today, very few countries monitor the quality of services delivered to key populations. Fewer still rigorously assesses whether the services actually prevent transmission, or do anything to ensure that HIV-positive people in these groups get the care and treatment they need. Even worse, some take actions that—rather than discouraging risky behavior—actually drives more people into the shadows, where the epidemic is that much harder to fight.

The consequences are devastating—for the people themselves, and for the fight against HIV. When key groups are marginalized, the virus spreads rapidly within those groups, and also in the lower-risk general population. We're seeing it happen right now in eastern Europe and southeast Asia. Humans might discriminate, but viruses do not.

FINAL (Daniel)

There's an old saying that goes: "Why rob banks? Because that's where the money is." If we want to save more lives, we need to go where the virus is.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

That means science should guide our efforts. Today I am announcing three new efforts by the United States government to reach key populations. We will invest $15 million in implementation research to identify the specific interventions that are most effective for each key population. We are also launching a $20 million challenge fund that will support country-led plans to expand services for key populations. Finally, through the Robert Carr Civil Society Network Fund, we will invest $2 million to bolster the efforts of civil society groups to reach key populations.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

Americans are rightly proud of the leading role that our country plays in the fight against HIV/AIDS. The world has learned a great deal through PEPFAR about what works, and why. We've also learned a great deal about the needs that aren't being met, and how everyone can work together to meet those needs.

For our part, PEPFAR will remain at the center of America's commitment to an AIDS-free generation. I have asked Ambassador Goosby to take the lead on developing and sharing our blueprint of the goals and objectives for the next phase of our effort, and to release this blueprint by World AIDS Day this year. We want the next Congress, the next Secretary of State, and our partners around the world to have a clear picture of everything we've learned and a roadmap that shows what we will contribute to an AIDS-free generation.

FINAL (Daniel)

Reaching this goal is a shared responsibility. It begins with what we can all do to help break the chain of mother-to-child transmission. This takes leadership at every level, from investing in health care workers to removing the registration fees that discourage women from seeking care. And we need community and family leaders, from grandmothers to religious leaders, to encourage women to get tested and demand treatment if they need it.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

We also all have a shared responsibility to support multilateral institutions like the Global Fund. In recent months, as the United States has stepped up our commitment, so have Saudi Arabia, Japan, Germany, the Gates Foundation, and others. I encourage other donors—especially emerging economies—to increase their contributions to this essential organization.

FINAL (Daniel)

Finally, we all have a shared responsibility to get serious about promoting country ownership—the end state where a nation’s efforts are led, implemented, and eventually paid for by its government, communities, civil society and private sector.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

I spoke earlier about how the United States is supporting country ownership. We also look to our partner countries to do their part. They can follow the example of South Africa, Namibia, Botswana, India, and others, who are able to provide more and better care for their people because they’re committing more of their own resources to HIV/AIDS. Partner countries also need to take steps like fighting corruption and making sure their systems for approving drugs are as efficient as possible.

FINAL (Daniel)

I began today by recalling the last time we met here in the United States. I want to close by recalling another symbol of our cause: the AIDS Memorial Quilt.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

For a quarter-century, this quilt has been a source of solace and comfort for people around the world. A visible way to honor and remember and mourn husbands and wives, brothers and sisters, partners and friends.

FINAL (Daniel)

Formatted: Font: (Default) Times New Roman, 17 pt, Complex Script Font: Times New Roman, 17 pt

Some of you have seen the parts of the quilt that are on view in Washington this week. I still remember the moment in 1996 when Bill and I went to the National Mall to see the quilt for ourselves. When we saw how enormous it was, we were heartbroken. It covered acres of ground. It stretched from the Capitol building all the way to the Washington Monument. And in the months and years that followed, the quilt kept growing. In fact, that was the last time it could be displayed all at once. It just got too big. Too many people died.

We are all here because we want to bring about the day when we stop adding names. When we can come to a gathering like this one and not talk about the fight against AIDS—but instead celebrate the birth of a generation that is free of AIDS.

FINAL (Daniel)

That moment is still in the distance. But we know what road we need to take. And we're closer to the destination than we've ever been. As we continue on this journey, we should be encouraged and inspired by the knowledge of how far we've already come. Today, and this week, let us restore our faith and renew our purpose, so we may reach that goal of an AIDS-free generation together.

Thank you very much.

- as you know, ghanaiian president mills is dead. not sure if that means we might need to stop in ghana given how soon your visit is. there is no word on funeral etc.
- also, johnnie feels strongly about going to kenya given the 2013 elections. can be a quick stop but you were amenable to this last time we spoke. Johnnie was recommending dropping namibia in order to do this. i am leaving namibia on schedule so you can see what it looks like.
- lastly, mandela is switching days on us which makes cape town quite a liesurely stop. it does tighten up the joburg/pretoria schedule but it works out.
i will be in the office tomorrow and thursday fyi.

tonite: foreign minister has insisted on greeting you personally on arrival which means there will be cameras. we requested closed press but we have lost that battle.

tomorrow: Melanne has asked for a photo with Binta Diop who you know and other senegalese women leaders. they are coming to speech anyway so we will organize a photo at the beginning.

molly melching is in town and looking forward to seeing you. if you want to have drinks or dinner with her, there is a nice outdoor restaurant at the hotel you can go to. lew lukens is in touch with her. monica is looped and can take care of it.

you will notice some downtime in the middle of the day, before the meet and greet. i am not sure you need it but its there. we can always try and do meet and greet earlier so then you are just done with the day.

I know this wasn't intentional but now that everyone has been looped into the additional stops, posts and press are asking questions. So I'd like to suggest the following.

Pick what you prefer between what we discussed. If you decide you don't want to add any or all of these countries, ideally we pull the plug so the speculation stops. We can also ask Jonathan when he will be in Abuja. Benin will make anything work.

Both options are feasible. Option 1 preserves your time in Capetown. You get home the same time

Option 1: Capetown, Abuja, Accra, Cotonou, Ankara

August 9th

9am depart Cape Town ert Abuja, Nigeria, flight time 6+15 hrs, time change - 1 hour

3pm-6pm Meetings in Abuja

7pm depart Abuja ert Accra, Ghana, flight time 1+30 hrs, time change - 1 hour

7:30pm Arrive Accra and RON

August 10th

9am-12pm Funeral for President Mills

1pm depart Accra ert Cotonou, Benin, flight time 0+50, time change + 1 hour

3-5pm Events in Cotonou

5:30pm Depart Cotonou ert Ankara, flight time 6 hours, time change +2

1am Arrive Ankara and Ron

August 11th

10am-3pm Meetings with PM, FM, Opposition leaders.

4pm Depart Ankara ert AAFB, flight time (with refuel) 13 hours, time change -7

10pm Arrive AAFB

This is the option you asked about last night.

Option 2: Capetown, Cotonou, Abuja, Accra, Turkey

August 8th

9am-2pm PEPFAR, Speech, Ann Curry Interview

3pm depart Cape Town ert Cotonou, Benin, flight time 6+00 hrs, time change - 1 hour

8pm Arrive Cotonou and RON

August 9th

9am-11am Events in Cotonou

12pm Depart Cotonou ert Abuja, Nigeria, flight time 1+15 hrs, no time change

1:30-4:30pm Meetings in Abuja

5pm Depart Abuja ert Accra, Ghana, flight time 1+30 hrs, time change - 1 hour

5:30pm Arrive Accra and RON

August 10th

9am-12pm Funeral for President Mills

1pm Depart ert Ankara, flight time 6 hours, time change +3

10pm Arrive Ankara and RON

August 11th

10am-3pm Meetings with PM, FM, Opposition leaders

Dear Hillary,

Not sure if Kenya is on your itinerary, but the Acumen East African Fellows program is incredible -- would love to tell you about it. Definitely worth meeting them if you will be there, because this is a very significant investment in building human capital, and networks that cross the economic, tribal, cultural and other divides that hobble inclusive development. It was a big gamble to organize this, but the first cohort has completed their year with amazing results.

I'm actually thinking of going on this trip -- taking over your travel shoes as you hang them up for awhile! Just wish I could have traveled with you while you've been at State, but look forward to times when your life is not so completely officially orchestrated!

addition, for those interested there is an option to extend this trip with a safari through our partner Elevate Destinations.

All details on the trip can be found here, and we will take RSVPs on a first-come first-serve basis.

East Africa has been the fastest-growing region for Acumen over the past five years, with a portfolio that's grown to $18.5 million in 13 companies across our sectors. We've seen particular growth in agriculture and renewable energy access, which will be the primary focus of this trip, and we are learning so much about how these issues directly impact the lives and well-being of our customers.

For any questions about the trip please reply to this note or contact Megan Beck at  or

We hope you can join us!

Warm regards,

Today should be ok.

Just a warning, nairobi schedule has come together very very late. So as a result, there are the expected unknowns. We thought kibaki and odinga would be joint but they refused to do that so the day has ended up you shuttling from meeting to meeting. Everyone has asked for 30 min but we padded all meetings. Reminder the somalis are fasting so we aren't serving anything even though we host.

After all the discussion about election commission, its only 8 people between the 2 groups. When they met with post, both sides say they aren't in "crisis" mode so they all expected for this to be a cordial meeting contrary to reports AF gave us last week.

Sunday is Malawi. Banda meeting is set even though they continue to say no press avail. Still working on press since otherwise you have no press conf 2 days in a row. The feed the future event is not visually mind-blowing but its a successful program and you are giving the farmers a bull which is like giving them gold! Johnnie, who has been very laid back about canceling things on this trip has begged us to keep the girls camp glow event. Its quick, its apparently a big success story in malawi. You would spend 20 min at this school. Our advance apparently left the walk through in tears cause the girls were so emotional and inspiring.

South Africa is ok, I might need to update you on some issues later today but ok for now.

Istanbul is coming together. Pm confirmed. Dav too. and looks like gul might be surfacing for too. Fred Hof has concerns about selecting specific opposition group given how cairo opposition meeting this week. Thinks too sensitive. So we will come back to you when we agree. But maybe one meeting with syrian civil society including staff who work in syran opposition support office. And one meeting with small group of refugees.

Will keep sending updates.

- Flagging that we still dont have a Zuma bilat in SA. They are still saying hes out of town and wont be back till the 9th . will keep you updated.
- for Turkey hotel: Four seasons is lovely and has options but doesnt have enough rooms. Ciragan has rooms but its expensive so we have to do split-ron. we can get enough rooms there so you have your senior team there and everyone else at conrad. Other option is everyone at Conrad. their presidential is being renovated so would be next size suite. Frank ricciardone thinks you were happy at the conrad on your last visit.

NYT reporting that Marvin Hamlisch died. I assume HRC will want to send a note to his next of kin?

August 7, 2012, 9:39 AM

Marvin Hamlisch, Composer of 'A Chorus Line,' Dies at 68

By DAVE ITZKOFF

Marvin Hamlisch, the singularly productive and sensationally decorated composer of musicals like "A Chorus Line" and songs like "The Way We Were," has died, The Associated Press reported. A family spokesman told The A.P. that Mr. Hamlisch died in Los Angeles on Monday after a brief illness but did not provide additional details. Mr. Hamlisch was 68.

In a career that spanned film, television, theater and recorded music, Mr. Hamlisch won seemingly every award available in each medium. He was a 12-time Academy Award nominee, for his score and song contributions to films like "The Spy Who Loved Me" and "Sophie's Choice," and a three-time Oscar winner for the score of "The Sting" as well as the score from "The Way We Were" and its title song (with lyrics by Alan and Marilyn Bergman). He won four Emmy Awards and four Grammy Awards, as well as a Tony Award for his score to the musical "A Chorus Line." That musical, which blended bouncy, brassy songs like "One" and "Dance: Ten; Looks: Three" with melancholy numbers like "At the Ballet," also won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1976.

As recently as last month, Mr. Hamlich was working on a musical adaptation of the Jerry Lewis comedy "The Nutty Professor," for which he wrote the score. According to his biography at his official Web site, he held the title of principal pops conductor for the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra, the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, the Pasadena Symphony and Pops, the Seattle Symphony and the San Diego Symphony.

In an interview in July, Mr. Hamlich talked about the emotional investment he put into each piece of music he composed.

"I'm not one of those people who says, 'I never read reviews,' because I don't believe those people," Mr. Hamlich said. "I think they read 'em. These songs are my babies. And I always say, it's like having a baby in a hospital, taking a Polaroid and going up to someone and saying, 'What do you think?' And he goes, 'I give you a 3.' That's what criticism is like. You've worked on this thing forever - 'I give you a 3.' And it's part of you. That's the bargain you've made."

Subject: Next trip

We've had a few meetings on the next trip.

Cook Islands is locked. Think we finally found a perfect house. McCully was great but his suggestion didn't afford much privacy on the beach, although the beach is spectacular! All the houses are lovely. They are not out of this world amazing, but cozy and quaint and unbelievable views of water. Ill have pictures of the best house for you when you come back.

Vladivostock is a moving target. They moved the date earlier so you need to be there by the 6th. Accommodations and food less than ideal and only one choice. They are building a dorm on the russiky island for the forum and it will have a cafeteria that will provide food for all delegations.

Brunei and Timor Leste still on list.

China is on list as well. I know Jake already talked to you but since we skipped it last trip, Kurt strongly endorses.

There has been some talk about doing a south china sea stop in Indonesia.

So that's how its shaping out to be. I'd like to lock countries soon since this is a summer trip.

Dear Huma

Here is the invitation . it seems it was sent to HRC already . hoping she will make it to this event . I know it means a lot to all of them . of course I know it all depends on many things .

Please let me know when you feel it is right to tell me yes or no .

Regards

Reem

PS I am not involved in any political aspect . I am just friends with a lot of people .

RELEASE IN PART B6

Date : May 26 , 2012

*Her Excellency Mrs. Hillary Rodham Clinton
The Secretary of States
The United States of America
Room 7226 Harry S. Truman Building
2201 C Street, NW
Washington, DC 20520
202-647-9572*

Subject: *RAFIK HARIRI UN-HABITAT
MEMORIAL AWARD
Personal Invitation*

Dear Excellency,

It is with great pleasure and friendship that I cordially invite you to honor us with your attendance at the Rafik Hariri UN-HABITAT Memorial Award gala dinner and presentation that takes place in conjunction with the United Nations General Assembly in New York on September 28, 2012.

The Memorial Award was established to commemorate the late Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and his achievements in leading national efforts to re-build his war-torn country after the ravages of civil war.

In September 2004, shortly before his assassination, Prime Minister Hariri was awarded the UN-Habitat Scroll of Honour, the highest United Nations award granted for achievements in the field of human settlement. The Special Citation was presented to Prime Minister Hariri for his outstanding and visionary leadership in the post-conflict reconstruction of Lebanon.

UN-HABITAT and the Rafik Hariri Foundation established a Memorial Award in the name of Rafik Hariri in March 2009. This award recognizes and rewards efforts and contributions to the development of human settlement as well as economic and social advances in step with the vision and work of my dearly loved husband.

The Award shall be given to individuals or institutions anywhere in the world, which show significant accomplishments in the areas of:

- 1. Leadership, statesmanship and good governance;*
- 2. Construction and reconstruction of settlements and communities; and*
- 3. Human resources development and benevolent activities in fighting urban poverty and the implementation of the Habitat Agenda.*

This year's winner will be honored during a presentation dinner and lecture in New York on September 28, 2012.

Venue: New York Public Library, New York.
Location: Stephen A. Schwarzman Building,
Located at Fifth Avenue and Forty-Second Street.
Date: Friday, September 28, 2012.
Time: Between 7:00 PM and 11:00 PM.

As the courtesy of your response is much appreciated, kindly accept my appreciation and the assurances of my highest consideration.

Nazek Rafik Hariri
