RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

Holiday Memo 2009

1. 2008 Lists

The attached excel list is broken up into 3 sections, based on last year's list. You can print out each of the 3 tabs and edit. Groups include:

- Friends
- Personal Staff
- State Dept Staff (this includes immediate staff as well as former staff who have moved to State)

2. State Department Holiday Cards

- Protocol will send out Secretary of State cards to the Diplomatic Corps, FM and Chiefs of Missions (abt 400 people). These cards will be pouched to the recipient and sent along with POTUS' Cards.
- SES-EX can pay for Secretary of State Cards sent to Members of Congress, State State/local gov't officials, businessmen, journalists, academics, NGOs, and all non-executive branch employees. Please note that each card is about $8 and we are in charge of addressing and mailing these out – not Protocol.
- HRC can also send these cards to her personal contacts, but she will have to pay for those out of her own pocket Same price – abt $8 a card – and we are in charge of addressing and mailing these out as well.
- Natalie told me that H is working on their lists for Members of Congress. Let us know if you would like any other official or personal groups of people to receive Secretary of State cards. Protocol would like to order HRC's additional Secretary of State Cards – those paid for by either SES-EX or personally - by this Friday.

3. Other groups for your consideration

Please let us know if you would like to review any of the groups below to consider for gift/card/party:

- Speechwriters who were not former staff (eg: )
- Protocol officers who were not former staff (eg: )
- SES-EX (eg: )
- PA who were not former staff (eg: )
- Deputy Secretaries
- Executive Secretariat Office (eg: )
- A/S, U/S, Special Envoys, others (look at Staff retreat list?)
- 8th Floor Staff (eg: )
- WH Staff/NSC (eg: )
- Ops Center
- Former Senate Staff
- D(S) Agents
- USSS Agents
- Development Groups/State Dept affiliations (eg: )

Colleagues-

Attached is a copy of the signed El Salvador package for your situational awareness.

This is DOD's approval of the ExecSec that was sent up earlier in the week for SOUTHCOM's El Salvador disaster recovery efforts. SOUTHCOM deployed four helicopters for immediate life-saving relief efforts, $50K in humanitarian assistance, an engineering assessment team and a medical consultation team. I believe the whole package is $3 mil.

Regards,

-Phill

Huma, Jake, Joc,

Here is the vote on the Iran human rights resolution at UNGA. I briefed the S during the retreat coffee break. She asked for the text of the resolution. The link is below. Do you want a hard copy here at the retreat?

2009 FINAL VOTE (3C): 74 YES (US) – 48 NO (Iran) – 59 (ABSTAIN)

Wider margin than last year:

2008 FINAL VOTE (3C): 70 YES (U.S.) – 51 NO (Iran) – 60 (ABSTAIN).

The bad news is, it's a sizable call

But I think we need to let them brief her as they want, because if she says something they don't like, we won't hear the end of it

Any updates to this? We would have to get the voiceover done tomorrow to lock it in. We can again work from location but we are so close on a great video but we really need a great voice to make this go far.

I told katie his passion is water, and he wasn't inclined to change his schedule for food security in kenya with us so I'm not very confident but have tried. I didn't know about others, only other I have contact with is clooney.

Cheryl

Richard and I have been discussing voices again in the last hour and if we could secure someone with a recognizable voice, this would really help push this. We could then work on subtitling this and making it available for people around the world -regardless of their native language.

Would any of these be possible to secure? Again, Richard could do this for anyone almost anywhere where they are located but the key is to be able to schedule this before Tuesday.

Here is the list:

1. Matt Damon
2. George Clooney
3. Morgan Freeman
4. Kiefer Sutherland

Here is a draft write up if this helps - not sure if it does:

The State Department is producing a short video to educate audiences about the critical issue of food security, hunger, and poverty. President Obama, Secretary Clinton and the entire Administration have made reducing hunger and poverty globally a main focus of their term. We are seeking a way to engage audiences worldwide on this issue and to help educate them about the crisis at hand and more importantly to convey that this is a problem, together we can solve

The video is educational, thought provoking, and emotional. I would like to ask that you lend your voice to this issue by helping to narrate this short film. In three minutes we are seeking to grab audiences attention and convey the impact this will have on children and families for generations to come if we do not do something soon to fix it. Your voice and your narration would be instrumental in driving this point home.

Together we can reduce poverty and hunger, and we can help feed the world by investing in agriculture and working to counteract climate change. We can lift economic statuses and reduce violence because we can make a difference and make change.

Your help by adding your voice, can help ensure audiences around the world hear our message and hear our call.

We would only need moments of your time and your impact have a ripple effect.

 Subject: FW: May 9 event in New York City with Pakistani Foreign Minister

Colleagues,

I've received your contact information from various colleagues and friends of mine. I am working on a project related to the Pakistani American community for Ambassador Holbrooke and Secretary Clinton, and am seeking your participation in an upcoming event.

During a recent conversation Secretary Clinton had with Pakistani Foreign Minister Qureshi, she pushed the Pakistani Government to reach out to its diaspora community in the United States and encourage it to create a Pakistani American Foundation, based on the model of the American Irish Foundation (now known as the Ireland Funds). The idea is that this Foundation would be a not-for-profit philanthropic organization not involved in lobbying or policy promotion.

The Pakistani Government has followed up on this idea and is hosting a "brainstorming session", led by Qureshi, in New York on May 9 at 3pm at the Roosevelt Hotel. I am attaching the invitation that the Pakistani Government has sent out to Pakistani American community members, based on lists compiled by its consulates/Embassy. The Pakistani Government is hosting and organizing the event, but the US government plans to send a strong delegation to represent our views. I will be participating along with Ambassador Nick Platt (head of del), Ambassador Frank Wisner, and Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee. Others are to be confirmed – Ambassador Anne Patterson and Congressmen Burton.

I am reaching out to you to ask if you are interested in participating in this event, if you haven't already been invited. I understand it is short notice. If you are interested, please contact me and I am happy to pass your name on to the Pakistani Government. We would like a diversity of representation from the community and the current list begs for more.

Some have asked why the Government is involved in this effort – my answer is that they are responding directly to an idea the Secretary passed to them. In my conversations with Qureshi's office, all indications show that they plan to have the Pakistani American community take the lead on this effort – the way the meeting goes on Saturday, of course, will depend on if this actually becomes a reality. Your participation is crucial towards meeting this end. If you cannot join, please give me a call either way to share your ideas – our work on this Foundation idea is just beginning.

Many thanks,

Shamila N. Chaudhary

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you on behalf of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

In the Foreign Minister's regular interaction with the Secretary of State, Ms. Hillary Rodham Clinton and Mr. Richard Holbrooke, it was suggested that an organization which could promote the interests of Pakistan in the US is the need of the hour. The new administration in the US is very keen to help Pakistan to overcome the present state of crisis. There are many influential, powerful and resourceful Americans of Pakistani origin in the US who are passionate about helping their country. We need a powerful lobby which has access to both Congress and the State Department. Such an organization is envisaged as being non partisan and its members would not be expected to promote the government, any particular political party or individual. The ir sole interest would be in promoting Pakistan. It would also be institutionalized in a way that it continued to exist despite changes in government. The group may be envisaged on the model of the Irish-American Foundation, for instance.

All these issues will be discussed in a brainstorming session that the Foreign Minister intends to hold in New York City on Saturday, May 9, 2009 at 3pm. The venue for the meeting is the Roosevelt hotel.

You are invited to kindly attend this meeting and engage with the Foreign Minister and senior officials of the US State Department in this regard. I realize that this may be short notice but this will be an ongoing process and the initial meeting needs to take place as early as possible, considering the gravity of the situation. Kindly confirm your participation as soon as possible.

My very best regards,

Nasir Ali Khan

Hello Jake and Huma,
 Sen Mitchell mentioned the news story below in his conversation with the Secretary today but he was not sure if she had seen it. Mara asked that I send it to you to pass on to her.

Thank you,
 Julia Reed

Ma'ariv (p. 5) by Amit Cohen et al. — A Palestinian press agency claims that the surprising decision by Palestinian Authority officials to postpone the discussion of the Goldstone report in the UN Human Rights Council is the result of an Israeli threat. According to a report by Shihab, the Palestinian Authority refused Israel's demand that it withdraw its support for the harsh report, which Israel considered one-sided. Following this, Israeli figures showed the PA a series of tapes in which Palestinian Authority officials could be heard urging Israel to continue the operation in Gaza. Israel threatened to reveal the material to media outlets as well as to the UN and this, in turn, resulted in the Palestinian retreat. It was further claimed that the Palestinians were shown footage showing a meeting between Abu Mazen, Defense Minister Ehud Barak and then foreign minister Tzippi Livni. In the course of the meeting, according to the report, Abu Mazen attempted to convince Barak to continue the operation. Barak appeared hesitant whereas Abu Mazen was enthusiastic. In addition, a telephone conversation recording between Abed Al-Rahim, secretary general of the Palestinian Authority and director of Gen. Gabi Ashkenazi's bureau was presented. The Palestinian senior official can be heard saying that now is the time to bring ground forces into the Jabalya and Shati refugee camps. "The fall of these two camps will bring about the fall of the Hamas regime in Gaza, and will cause them to wave a white flag," says Abed Al-Rahim. According to the report, Dov Weissglas told Abed Al-Rahim that such a move could result in the deaths of thousands of civilians. "They all voted for Hamas," says Abed Al-Rahim, "they chose their fate, not us." Following Hamas's allegations against him, Abu Mazen ordered the establishment of an investigative committee to examine the cause for the postponement of the discussion of the Goldstone report, which sparked a furor and much criticism in the Palestinian street. Officially, Israel argues that Abu Mazen withdrew his request for the discussion as a result of Netanyahu making it clear that such a move would greatly harm the peace process. Moreover, Israel prefers to keep quiet since it has no desire to harm Abu Mazen any more than he has already been harmed and thus play into Hamas's hands. "Abu Mazen did the correct thing on his part," says a political source. "Had he insisted on pushing through the proposal, he would have badly harmed the peace process." In addition, the Palestinian Authority has attempted over the last year to establish an additional cellular network in the West Bank—Wataniya, to be directed by Abu Mazen's son. "The IDF had opposed the new cellular network, claiming that this would clash with its frequencies, and it was proposed to the Palestinians the minimum frequency allocation, which the Palestinians did not accept," explained a senior security source. "It would be fairly correct to state that it was hinted to Palestinian senior officials that if they would withdraw their endorsement of the Goldstone report, they would get help in promoting their interests to form a second cellular network in the West Bank."

 Subject: RE: Room decor and lists

Hi, and amazing how fast you can get somewhere in this town at night, since everyone goes to bed so early.

So, I am attaching the most current list of those invited. You will see that we are over our allowed capacity should everyone from whom we have not heard yet accept. So, we will need to address this at some point. Generally speaking there are a few regrets to come I would guess... simply because it does happen, even when someone is expected to come. Also, please note the small a's are assumptions on our part because of who the person is.

Then, I realize from the subject of your email that you were inquiring about the décor. Liz Stevens handles this, and she has chosen a purple bengaline cloth, and the floral arrangement which I believe Natalie saw, is comprised of anemones and hydrangea. I couldn't go to the walkthrough, so I have not seen the floral arrangement yet. I am well-acquainted with the florist however, and she does beautiful work.

So, let's plan to talk tomorrow. Best, Carolyn

Dear Carolyn -
 Wondered when we can see what the plan is for the room and see a list? Can we talk tomorrow?
 Thanks -hope you had a great turkey day!

Folks,

We found out this evening that the Secretary's SASC testimony will be about twice as long as originally thought. I've attached a new, unabridged draft. I expect we'll make some further revisions to the structure, but the substance should be relatively firm from here on out. Again, please submit any edits by 10 AM tomorrow.

Thanks,
Tomicah

Hi Huma, today I had lunch with the media assistant to Angela Merkel, Eva Christiansen. She told me, that chancellor
Merkel is happy to receive the media prize and is really looking forward to meeting with Hillary.
She wants me to ask you when HRC will be in Europe the next time. Maybe in Davos? Merkel will be in Davos on January 30/31. Would there be any chance to schedule Friday, January 29th in your plans?

For your own use and organization here is the direct and informal contact to Eva Christiansen..media-assistent of chancellor merkel..in the office of the chancellor berlin

Hi Huma,

Here is a draft ...please could you have a look at it and tell us if there is anything we should change?

Yours, Karlheinz

Dear Madam Secretary Clinton,

The "Deutsche Medienpreis" honours outstanding personalities who combine extraordinary accomplishments, leadership qualities and visionary talents in the public eye.

You are already familiar with the award , having yourself been honored with it in 2004 thus joining an illustrious list of former recipients such as François Mitterrand , Helmut Kohl, Kofi Annan, King Juan Carlos of Spain and also Nelson Mandela.

This year the "Deutsche Medienpreis" will be presented to chancellor Angela Merkel. Here is a short excerpt from the jury's statement :

"Chancellor Merkel countability and reliability to stand up for and protect basic Human rights, free economic and democratic social order as well as the historical responsibility of the Germany."

During your speech upon accepting the award in 2004 in the presence of Angela Merkel, who at the time held very little hope of ever governing Germany, you emphasised the ever increasing and important role of women in politics and stated to the audience: " One day I will come back to this stage to see you again as the chancellor of Germany".

We made the suggestion to chancellor Merkel that you Madam Secretary would be the perfect choice to hold the eulogy at the ceremony. Chancellor Merkel enthusiastically accepted the suggestion and recommended January 26th, 27th and 31st as possible dates for the ceremony to take place in Baden-Baden.

We would be very grateful if you would be able to agree to chancellor Merkels wish. The direct contact in the chancellor's office is: Eva Christiansen, media consultant to chancellor Merkel:

Mme Secretary:

I hope you've been well and had a nice Thanksgiving. You're getting very positive coverage out of your trip to Brussels. The new NATO troop commitments will give people more hope and confidence about the strategy. It's a great story to come right after the speech.

I just wanted to let you know I've pitched in to help Raj Shah with prep and planning for USAID. I worked with him at the Gates foundation to package and launch their new global development portfolio.

He's a good pick - his youth and enthusiasm will be a breath of fresh air in a pretty stale environment. He's a very capable manager and a visionary who knows how to get things done.

As you know, for him to be successful in creating change he will need to be seen as having a seat at the table. A main concern in the development community is USAID's lack of a voice in the larger foreign policy dialogue.

The optics of that are easily accomplished with some visible interaction with you early on, as well as ongoing participation in senior-level meetings at State and NSC.

He's got good ideas for policy and personnel moves in the first 100 days, so I think he'll get off to a strong start.

Hope all's well with you.

All the best, Doug

RELEASE IN PART
B5

NOTE FOR THE SECRETARY

FROM: S/P – Director Anne-Marie Slaughter
G – Under Secretary Maria Otero
DRL – Assistant Secretary Michael Posner

SUBJECT: Developments and Opportunities on International LGBT Issues
DATE: December 23, 2009

B5

Overview/ Context

The State Department has demonstrated unprecedented commitment to LGBT human rights over the past year, including supporting a UN General Assembly statement on the fundamental rights of LGBT citizens in March and decrying LGBT-directed violence at an OSCE conference in Poland in October, signifying a dramatic shift from the Bush Administration.

LGBT individuals and groups remain vulnerable around the globe, encountering pervasive violence, victimization, and discrimination. In Iran, eight teenagers are currently awaiting execution on sodomy or related charges. Pride marches are often met with active government resistance and violence counter-protests throughout Central and Eastern Europe, particularly in the Balkans, Poland, and Russia. The Lithuanian Parliament recently overrode a presidential veto and passed legislation that could greatly restrict any public discussion of homosexuality. Burundi criminalized homosexuality in April and the Rwandan Parliament is currently debating similar legislation, which is likely to pass.

The Ugandan Parliament is considering a law that would increase penalties for homosexuality, including hanging, and criminalize the "promotion of homosexuality," targeting LGBT Ugandan citizens and their defenders inside or outside the country. Although President Museveni has indicated privately to Assistant Secretary Carson that he may not sign the bill, it is strongly supported by leaders in both the ruling party, the National Resistance Movement, and the opposition party, the Forum for Democratic Change. Human rights organizations in Uganda have extensively documented cases of torture or other ill-treatment against lesbians and gay men in detention because of their sexual orientation. Canada and the United Kingdom have spoken out against this proposal and Sweden is considering cutting $50 million in aid to Uganda. As you noted on World AIDS Day, legislation of this nature also has the potential to dramatically impact the Obama Administration's global health agenda by limiting health services and stigmatizing vulnerable communities.

Congressional Perspective

There is growing interest on the Hill about the status and rights of the international LGBT community. Representatives Baldwin, Polis, Frank, Berman, Ackerman, Engel, Wexler, Gutierrez, Nadler, Ellison, McGovern, Israel, and Ros-Lehtinen, as well as Senators Feingold, Wyden, and Gillibrand have all written to the State Department urging engagement on international LGBT issues. Specifically, members of Congress expressed concern on the treatment of LGBT Iraqis, including those seeking refugee status, and the Ugandan Parliament's "Anti-Homosexuality" bill. The House of Representatives also included four LGBT-related provisions in the State Department Authorization bill. The provisions instruct the State Department to:

- Create one or more positions in DRL to monitor international LGBT human rights concerns;
- Work through U.S. embassies to encourage countries to repeal or reform laws that criminalize homosexuality and address these actions in mission strategic plans;
- Substantially improve LGBT reporting in the annual human rights and international religious freedom reports, with a new requirement to include transgender concerns;

- Include LGBT issues in human rights training courses for Foreign Service Officers coupled with an additional one day LGBT human rights course for officers writing the human rights reports.

In addition, the Appropriations Committee report instructs the State Department to include LGBT groups in civil society support programs and in our larger development assistance priorities.

Nora, if you could make sure Cheryl sees this at some point when she has a moment

Cheryl, this is a unique moment in time for you to be a more public face of the USG and State Department. There are many options and ways - everything from you standing behind the podium, to doing radio to a conference call, or an email to Embassy staff - for you to reinforce what we have discussed over the last year; that you are playing an important and substantive role at State, not just an enforcer.

Nora, please bear this in mind in the coming days, as well as keeping track of color for Lois Romano

GPS says 1:15pm arrival. That doesn't take into account any adverse road conditions we may face in DC or if we take another bathroom break. We're making good time though.

Starting one email chain here since many of us have been discussing individually.
 As some people know, rashad will be announced by potus as oic envoy in video saturday night in doha.

Want to make sure:

1. Everyone knows that.
  2. That there has been some coordination with press teams. Will there be a simultaneous press release that goes out?
  3. That there are prepared talking points to share with people, particularly posts in doha and saudi so they know what they can tell people about his role. Especially imp if hrc goes to oic headquarters in jeddah.
- Anything more you guys need from us?

Office of the Press Secretary

RELEASE IN

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

February 13, 2010

PRESIDENT OBAMA ANNOUNCES SPECIAL ENVOY TO THE ORGANIZATION OF THE ISLAMIC CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON - Today, President Obama appointed Rashad Hussain to serve as his Special Envoy to the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC). Comprised of over 50 member states, the OIC is the second largest inter-governmental organization in the world. As Special Envoy to the OIC, Rashad Hussain will deepen and expand the partnerships that the United States has pursued with Muslims around the world since President Obama's speech in Cairo last June.

President Obama said, "I'm proud to announce today that I am appointing my Special Envoy to the OIC—Rashad Hussain. As an accomplished lawyer and a close and trusted member of my White House staff, Rashad has played a key role in developing the partnerships I called for in Cairo. And as a hafiz of the Qur'an, he is a respected member of the American Muslim community, and I thank him for carrying forward this important work."

Rashad Hussain

Rashad Hussain is presently Deputy Associate Counsel to President Obama. His work at the White House focuses on national security, new media, and science and technology issues. Mr. Hussain has also worked with the National Security Staff in pursuing the New Beginning that President Obama outlined in his June 2009 address in Cairo, Egypt. Mr. Hussain previously served as a Trial Attorney at the U.S. Department of Justice. Earlier in his career, Mr. Hussain was a legislative assistant on the Judiciary Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives, where he focused on national security-related issues. Mr. Hussain received his J.D. from Yale Law School, where he served as an editor of the Yale Law Journal. Upon graduation, he served as a Law Clerk to Damon J. Keith on the U.S. Court of Appeals. Mr. Hussain also earned Master's degrees in Public Administration and Arabic and Islamic Studies from Harvard University. He completed his undergraduate education at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Subject: IMPORTANT TRIP INFO: Staff Memo for SecState Departure on Fri, Feb 12

Attached is the guest/staff memo plus weather forecast for travelers on the Secretary's plane for the trip to NEA on February 12-16, 2010.

- 1) Attached is information on staff vans on Friday, Feb 12. The vans will leave no later than 1:00pm and we strongly encourage all travelers to take the staff vans, especially if you are not familiar with driving to Andrews. Please respond to me and let me know if you will take the staff van or if you plan to self-drive. Please allot extra time if you are self-driving. Again, we strongly encourage everyone take the vans.
- 2) For those self-driving, please bring your personal baggage with you to the DV Lounge. For State Travelers: you may place your official and personal baggage behind the Line/Ops Center no later than 10:00am tomorrow for loading. Please send an email to me and SES-EX_GSO if you place any baggage behind the Line. Please ensure that each of your checked and carry-on bags is tagged both inside and outside with your name.
- 3) Special Note for the Riyadh day stop: bags will not/not be off-loaded in Riyadh so please bring any needed personal items in your cabin bag. There will be no/no offices to drop your cabin bags so you can leave these items in the cabin or take these items with you throughout the day's events.
- 4) We will not/not have access to classified processing at the hotel in Jeddah.

Please confirm your method of transportation to AAFB and let me know if you have any questions.
 Thanks!

To: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Feb 12 11:04:07 2010
Subject: 2/12/10 Senior Staff Meeting

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

SENIOR TRAVEL

- Jack noted that both he and the Secretary are scheduled to leave tomorrow for overseas travel. He will be going to Jordan, Egypt, Croatia (for the inauguration) and Israel. He will return next Monday, February 22. Bill Burns leaves on Monday for a trip to Beirut, Damascus, Baku and Ankara, returning next Saturday. Jim Steinberg will be here all next week.

HAITI

- Jack noted that the Haiti supplemental will not go to the Hill today, but the domestic supplemental will. The hope is that the two will eventually merge once the Haiti request is introduced next week. Jack said he was somewhat cautious about the delay, hoping that it did not mean more review of the Haiti supplemental.
- PA noted continued intense interest in the fate of the ten Americans being held on suspicion of kidnapping, especially whether they would soon be released either in Haiti or the U.S. [REDACTED]
- Rich Verma is on the way to Haiti with an eleven-member CODEL led by Speaker Pelosi.

B5

BLACKWATER

- The article in today's Washington Post on whistleblower allegations against Blackwater is not good, Jack observed. PJ said that we had received advance warning late yesterday that the article was coming, adding that it stemmed from the Justice Department's decision not to join the lawsuit, which led to its being unsealed. Among the most troubling allegations were charges that a Filipino prostitute was on the payroll Blackwater submitted to the State Department under one of its contracts in Afghanistan. (Note: this is separate from trafficking allegations involving a KBR subcontractor in Iraq that was the subject of a note yesterday to the Secretary from Anne-Marie, G/TIP and Melanne Verveer.) Jack said he would follow up with Pat to see what we knew about the facts of the Blackwater allegations.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

- Ken Merten will give a briefing for our press corps on Haiti this afternoon.

LEGAL ISSUES

- [REDACTED] Meanwhile, former Vice President Cheney will be on ABC on Sunday.

Doug,

Wadah Khanfar, director general of the Al Jazeera network, will be in the US later this month. He has asked me whether President Clinton would be interested and willing to meet with him on Wednesday March 24th or the morning of the 25th in NYC.

I don't have to tell you about Al-Jazeera and how influential it's become, but (unlike during Bush administration) this one appears to be taking an open approach. Khanfar was here in July and met with Dennis McDonough and Ben Rhodes) and, two weeks ago, he had a pretty long meeting with Secretary Clinton in Doha (which, according to Khanfar, went extremely well).

This would not be an interview but a private, off the record meeting. I think it could be quite interesting.

Anyway, let me know what you think and if I can help in any way

Take care

All,

Here is the state of the art version – taking account of all of Jake's comments from the most recent round as well as a final round of comments on goals going forward from Raj, Jack, and Cheryl. Pat Kennedy and Bill Burns saw a previous draft (Jim – that is the same draft that we sent you – it came directly from Karen). We REALLY have to get this into [REDACTED] tomorrow, because Jim Michel and I are supposed to be briefing the PSD on it tomorrow afternoon (we will not be handing out any paper, however).

Huma,
Attached is an updated version of the materials previously sent via Jenn and Melanne. Can you please confirm when you've received this?
Thanks so much. Bobbiexox

Dear Hillary,

First and foremost, thank you for doing such a magnificent job last night. We are all in your footsteps and we are all in your debt.

As you requested, I'm attaching updated versions of the materials we sent you originally. I've added a profile of the California preservation community, including all the SAT projects. Perhaps the most important point to make, however subtly, is that YOU still really care about this program. You started it, not just to celebrate the millennium, but to address a genuine and undiminished need. What we are seeking is restored funding at this year's level— $25 million.

Love,
Bobbie

B6

Dear Hillary,

Given your gigantic workload, I've been very reluctant to alert you to what's transpired with your legacy program, but Melanne and Jenn assure me that you'd want to know. In short, the President's 2011 budget provides zero funding for SAT. The only up-side to this crisis has been the outpouring of shock and outrage from people across the country who've reached out by phone and email with offers to "do anything" to help reverse this mistaken or misguided decision..

Perhaps most personally disappointing is the careless and, frankly, uninformed manner in which the elimination of this program is presented in the budget and the media. For instance, the language used to criticize SAT in the press release comes directly from an old entry in the Congressional Record about another program! The "justification" below claims there are no "metrics" to show the program's effectiveness -- yet no one who maintains the program "metrics" at the National Park Service or the National Trust was asked to provide information or data -- or alerted to the cuts before they appeared in the press.

It's hard to understand why the administration would want to eliminate the program you created to address the very serious (and ongoing) deterioration of so many of our national landmarks, a program that is now widely recognized as the most successful preservation effort in American history -- and one that drives economic development and creates jobs in rural areas, small towns, and big cities in every state and territory. And, I might add, for which there is absolutely no replacement -- if this money is no longer available, our historic legacy and the communities in which it's located will be the big losers. Ironically, just last March, President Obama signed the law permanently authorizing SAT to ensure its long term viability (H.R. 164/S.22).

SAT has invested almost $294 million in federal funds to preserve nearly 1,200 nationally significant properties and collections, including the icons of our democracy. As you know, these are challenge grants which means they must be matched dollar for dollar with non-federal funds, so $294 million in federal grants has generated at least $294 million in non-federal funds. In fact, the record shows that the government's investment often jump-starts the fundraising and leverages support many times over the required match. And every year, we have to disappoint hundreds of applicants who seek grants from a very modest pool of funds.

Since the budget justification claims that SAT is not consistent with Interior's core mission, it's worth noting that the program has dispensed $12 million in federal funds to our national parks -- these grants have been matched with another $12 million in private support raised by my office, including Gettysburg, Valley Forge, Ellis Island, Mesa Verde, Edison's Invention Factory, Martin Luther King's Ebenezer Baptist Church, Longfellow's House, Eleanor Roosevelt's Val Kill Cottage, White Grass in Montana, George Washington's Tents at Yorktown, and the Sewall Belmont House.

To qualify, these must be "shovel-ready" projects, and by their very nature, they employ large numbers of manual labor and skilled artisans. When finished, they often become the spark plug for community revitalization. The construction and other building trades jobs generated by SAT fit hand in glove with the administration's "Middle Class" initiative that the VP is leading. If this country could get as much bang for its national buck across the board, we'd be in much better shape than we are now.

I've alerted the Vice President and his office has been in touch with Secretary Salazar. I also thought you'd be interested in the (confidential) letter Dick sent to Rahm and Valerie Jarett (attached above). In my 12-years of working with him, I've never seen "Minnesota Nice" so angry. So far, the response has been perfunctory.

Here's an interesting historic footnote you may recall -- it provides a useful precedent: in the earliest days of the Bush administration, I was meeting with Laura Bush's Chief of Staff and Deputy COS about the possibility of Mrs Bush becoming SAT's Honorary Chair. I told them something I had just learned that they had not yet heard -- the President's budget for FY2002, which had just been released, did not include SAT. They were very surprised, to say the least, and said they would let Mrs. Bush know right away. Not long thereafter, the administration sent Congress a supplemental funding request asking that full funding for SAT be restored. As reported in the Wall Street Journal -- and confirmed later by Mrs. Bush -- the reversal was the result of her personal intervention with the President.

I realize this is a tricky for you, so I don't know what if anything you'd be comfortable doing to address the situation, but your friends and fans at the Trust and around the country would be grateful for any expression of dismay and concern you can appropriately convey. The Trust and the larger history/preservation community are mobilizing for a major effort aimed at the administration and the Hill -- it would be wonderful if we could render it unnecessary with a budget amendment à la 2002.

Ironically, isn't it that this program you created and still consider an important legacy of your time as First Lady, that thrived in the big, bad Bush Administration, is being eviscerated in this one.

Warmest best,
Bobbie

TERMINATION: SAVE AMERICA'S TREASURES AND PRESERVE AMERICA (NPS)

Department of the Interior

The Administration proposes to eliminate the Save America's Treasures (SAT) and Preserve America

(PA) grant programs so the National Park Service can focus resources on managing national parks and other activities that most closely align with its core mission. The SAT and PA programs have not demonstrated how they contribute to nationwide historic preservation goals.

Funding Summary

(in millions of dollars)

2010 Enacted 2011 Request 2011 Change from 2010

Budget Authority..... 30 0 -30

Justification

SAT and PA are National Park Service matching grant programs that support historic preservation efforts. SAT was started in 1999 as a two-year initiative to commemorate the Millennium by restoring historic buildings and collections. PA was started in 2003 to promote heritage tourism.

Although SAT and PA programs use merit-based criteria to evaluate annual nominations for projects, the programs have not demonstrated how they contribute to National historic preservation goals. The programs lack rigorous performance metrics and evaluation efforts, so benefits remain unclear. At least half of SAT funding is provided without using merit-based criteria.

Dear Rahm -

I have held my fire for almost a week but I have to tell you now that I'm still extremely upset that the administration should propose eliminating Save America's Treasures, Hillary's signature program and one of her chief legacies as First Lady. You will recall that she and I established it as a run-up to the Millennium but it became so popular that it has since been authorized and proven to be a great bipartisan success. It has effectively leveraged between $20M and $35M/year in grants that must be matched by the local recipients, in the process creating jobs and strengthening communities all over the country. Aren't those the goals of the Obama administration? SAT is a model for how other federal grant programs should be run.

The fact is there is a budget officer at OMB named [REDACTED] who has never liked historic preservation and who has never missed an opportunity to stick the knife in. That we knew, but what we didn't know was that there is no one in the White House who would catch this and push back. I've worked in the White House and have a pretty good idea how it works, and I don't recall even the Carter White House failing to alert its friends--and believe me we have been very good friends--that its key programs are in trouble.

B6

And it's not just SAT. Laura Bush's signature program, Preserve America, is complimentary to SAT and it too was zero funded. Other preservation programs were cut back grievously.

Part of the problem here is that we have been totally unable to identify anyone in the WH with whom we can talk on these issues. We're not looking for hand-outs and are fully prepared to defend our programs, but we need someone to talk to. I would appreciate it if you or Valerie could identify someone who could serve as a liaison for us.

Needless to say, we plan to go all out to overturn the administration's decision on the Hill, where we have good bipartisan support. Still, I would appreciate it if you could have someone give us a rationale for this bizarre decision. Our constituency is hopping mad and demanding to know how our friends could do this to us.

As I hope you know, I have been a big defender of the administration and what it is trying to do and remain so, but as you can tell this one hits close to home. I look forward to hearing from you.

Best, Dick

Jake and Huma,

Just got your email. YYou may already have from other sources but in case not, here's text of Clinton parameters as delivered in IPF speech on January 8, 2001 (got the date wrong in my last email to you). (First attachment.)

Also attached is a different document out there which is what Israeli negotiators released as the parameters has given to them... But the speech is the more authoritative text in that it is what Pres Clinton decided to publicly put out there himself on the topic.

Sending to Mike as well since not clear on what your direct access is.
Mike can you make sure they have?
Thanks,

EXT: CLINTON SPEECH ON MIDEAST PEACE PARAMETERS

(Says reaching final agreement will not get easier with time)

January 8, 2001

Following is the text of President Clinton's speech on Middle East peace at the Israel Policy Forum in New York January 7:

(Begin text)

THE WHITE HOUSE Office of the Press Secretary

January 7, 2001

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT AT ISRAEL POLICY FORUM GALA

The Waldorf Astoria Hotel New York, New York

9:45 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.) I want to thank all of you for making me feel so welcome tonight, and also for making Hillary and Chelsea feel welcome. I thank Michael Sonnenfeldt who, like me, is going out after eight years -- (laughter) -- and will doubtless find some other useful activity. But he has done a superb job, and I'm very grateful to him. (Applause.)

I thank my friend, Jack Bendheim, for his many kindnesses to me and to Hillary. Yesterday, he had a birthday and now, like me, he's 54. Unlike me, he has enough children to be elected President of the United States. (Laughter.) And he's had a wonderful family and a wonderful life, and I'm delighted that he's so active in the Israel Policy Forum. (Applause.) I'd like to thank Judith Stern Peck for making me feel so welcome and for her leadership.

I thank Lesley Stahl; it's good to see you, and thank you for your kind remarks. I thank the many members of Congress who are here; and also the members of my Middle East peace team, Secretary Albright and Sandy Berger and others have been introduced. But Secretary Dan Glickman is here and Kerry Kennedy Cuomo is here, and I thank them for being here. (Applause.)

I want to thank the New York officials who are here -- Carl McCall, Mark Green and any others who may be in the crowd for your many kindnesses to me over the last eight years. New York has been great to me and Al Gore and even greater to my wife on Election Day, so I thank you for that. (Applause.)

We just reenacted her swearing-in at Madison Square Garden. And I was reminded of one of the many advantages of living in New York -- Jessye Norman sang, Toni Morrison read and Billy Joel sang. Meanwhile, at least at half time, the Giants were ahead. (Laughter and applause.) And so I said, I felt sort of like Garrison Keillor did about Lake Wobegone. I was glad to be in New York where all the writers, artists and sports teams were above average - (laughter) -- and all the votes were always counted. (Applause.)

Let me also say a word of warm welcome and profound respect to the Speaker of the Knesset, Speaker Burg, for his wonderful and kind comments to me. (Applause.) And to Cabinet Secretary Herzog, for his message from the government of Israel. I want to say a little more about that in a moment.

I want to congratulate Dwayne Andreas, my good friend -- I wish he were here tonight -- and thank him for his many kindnesses to me. Congratulations, Louis Perlmutter; Susan Stern who has been such a great friend to Hillary, and you gave a good talk tonight, I think you've got a real future in this business. And your mother sat by me and she gave you a good grade, too. (Laughter.)

And Alan Solomont, who has done as much for me as I suppose any American, and he and Susan and their children have been great friends, and I thank you for what you've done, sir. I thank all of you. (Applause.)

I'd also like to say how much I appreciated and was moved by the words of Prime Minister Barak. He was dealt the hard hand by history. And he came to office with absolute conviction that in the end, Israel could not be secure unless a just and lasting peace could be reached with its neighbors, beginning with the Palestinians. That if that turned out not to be possible, then the next best thing was to be as strong as possible and as effective in the use of that strength.

But his knowledge of war has fed a passion for peace. And his understanding of the changing technology of war has made him more passionate, not because he thinks the existence of Israel is less secure -- if anything, it's more secure -- but because the sophisticated weapons available to terrorists today mean even though they still lose, they can exact a higher price along the way.

I've been in enough political fights in my life to know that sometimes you just have to do the right thing -- and it may work out and it may not. Most people thought I had lost my mind when we passed the economic plan to get rid of the deficit in 1993. And no one in the other party voted for it, and they just talked about how it would bring the world to an end and America's economy would be a disaster. I think the only Republican who thought it would work was Alan Greenspan. (Laughter.) He was relieved of the burden of having to say anything about it.

But no dilemma I have ever faced approximates in difficulty or comes close to the choice that Prime Minister Barak had to make when he took office. He realized that he couldn't know for sure what the final intentions of the Palestinian leadership were without testing them. He further realized that even if the intentions were there, there was a lot of competition among the Palestinians and from outside forces, from people who are enemies of peace because they don't give a rip how the ordinary Palestinians have to live and they're pursuing a whole different agenda.

He knew nine things could go wrong and only one thing could go right. But he promised himself that he would have to try. And as long as he knew Israel in the end could defend itself and maintain its security, he would keep taking risks. And that's what he's done, down to these days. There may be those who disagree with him, but he has demonstrated as much bravery in the office of Prime Minister as he ever did on the field of battle and no one should ever question that. (Applause.)

Now, I imagine this has been a tough time for those of you who have been supporting the IPF, out of conviction for a long time. All the dreams we had in '93 that were revived when we had the peace with Jordan, revived again when we had the Wye River accords -- that was, I think, the most interesting peace talks I was ever involved in. My strategy was the same used to break prisoners of war, I just didn't let anybody sleep for nine days and, finally, out of exhaustion, we made a deal -- just so people could go home and go to bed. (Laughter.) I've been looking for an opportunity to employ it again, ever since.

There have been a lot of positive things, and I think it's worth remembering that there have been positive developments along the way. But this is heartbreaking, what we've been through these last few months, for all of you who have believed for eight years in the Oslo process; all of you whose hearts soared on September 19, 1993, when Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rabin signed that agreement.

For over three months we have lived through a tragic cycle of violence that has cost hundreds of lives. It has shattered the confidence in the peace process. It has raised questions in some people's minds about whether Palestinians and Israelis could ever really live and work together, support each other's peace and prosperity and security. It's been a heartbreaking time for me, too. But we have done our best to work with the parties to restore calm, to end the bloodshed and to get back to working on an agreement to address the underlying causes that continuously erupt in conflicts.

Whatever happens in the next two weeks I've got to serve, I think it's appropriate for me tonight, before a group of Americans and friends from the Middle East who believe profoundly in the peace process and have put their time and heart and money where their words are, to reflect on the lessons I believe we've all learned over the last eight years, and how we can achieve the long sought peace.

From my first day as President, we have worked to advance interests in the Middle East that are long standing and historically bipartisan. I was glad to hear of Senator Hagel's recitation of President-elect Bush's commitment to peace in the Middle East. Those historic commitments include an ironclad commitment to Israel's security and a just, comprehensive and lasting agreement between the Palestinians and Israelis.

Along the way since '93, through the positive agreements that have been reached between those two sides, through the peace between Israel and Jordan, through last summer's withdrawal from Lebanon in which Israel fulfilled its part of implementing U.N. Security Council resolution 425 -- along this way we have learned some important lessons, not only because of the benchmarks of progress, because of the occasional eruption of terrorism, bombing, death and then these months of conflict. I think these lessons have to guide any effort, now or in the future, to reach a comprehensive peace. Here's what I think they are. Most of you probably believed in them, up to the last three months. I still do. First, the Arab-Israeli conflict is not just a morality play between good and evil. It is a conflict with a complex history, whose resolution requires balancing the needs of both sides, including respect for their national identities and religious beliefs.

Second, there is no place for violence, and no military solution to this conflict. The only path to a just and durable resolution is through negotiation. Third, there will be no lasting peace or regional stability without a strong and secure Israel, secure enough to make peace, strong enough to deter the adversaries which will still be there, even if a peace is made in complete good faith. And clearly that is why the United States must maintain its commitment to preserving Israel's qualitative edge in military superiority.

Fourth, talks must be accompanied by acts -- acts which show trust and partnership. For goodwill at the negotiating table cannot survive forever ill intent on the ground. And it is important that each side understands how the other reads actions.

For example, on the one hand, the tolerance of violence and incitement of hatred in classrooms and the media in the Palestinian communities, or on the other hand, humiliating treatment on the streets or at checkpoints by Israelis are real obstacles to even getting people to talk about building a genuine peace.

Fifth, in the resolution of remaining differences; whether they come today or after several years of heartbreak and bloodshed, the fundamental, painful, but necessary choices will almost certainly remain the same whenever the decision is made. The parties will face the same history, the same geography, the same neighbors, the same passions, the same hatreds. This is not a problem time will take care of.

And I would just like to go off the script here, because a lot of you have more personal contacts than I do with people that will be dealing with this for a long time to come, whatever happens in the next two weeks.

Among the really profound and difficult problems of the world that I have dealt with, I find that they tend to fall into two categories. And if I could use sort of a medical analogy, some are like old wounds with scabs on them, and some are like abscessed teeth.

What do I mean by that? Old wounds with scabs eventually will heal if you just leave them alone. And if you fool with them too much, you might open the scab and make them worse. Abscessed teeth, however, will only get worse if you leave them alone, and if you wait and wait and wait, they'll just infect the whole rest of your mouth.

Northern Ireland, I believe, is becoming more like the scab. There are very difficult things. If you followed my trip over there, you know I was trying to help them resolve some of their outstanding problems, and we didn't get it all done. But what I really wanted to do was to remind people of the benefits of peace and to keep everybody in a good frame of mind and going on so that all the politicians know that if they really let the wheel run off over there, the people will throw them out on their ears.

Now, why is that? Because the Irish Republic is now the fastest-growing economy in Europe, and Northern Ireland is the fastest-growing economy within the United Kingdom. So the people are benefiting from peace, and they can live with the fact that they can't quite figure out what to do about the police force and the reconciliation of the various interests and passions of the Protestants and Catholics. And the other three or four things. Because the underlying reality has changed their lives.

So even though I wish I could solve it all, eventually it will heal, if it just keeps going in the same direction. The Middle East is not like that. Why? Because there are all these independent actors -- that is, independent of the Palestinian Authority and not under the direct control of any international legal body -- who don't want this peace to work. So that even if we can get an agreement, and the Palestinian Authority works as hard as they can, and the Israelis works as hard as they can, we're all going to have to pitch in, send in an international force like we did in the Sinai, and hang tough, because there are enemies of peace out there, number one.

Number two, because the enemies of peace know they can drive the Israelis to close the borders if they can blow up enough bombs. They do it periodically to make sure that the Palestinians in the street cannot enjoy the benefits of peace that have come to the people in Northern Ireland. So as long as they can keep the people miserable, and they can keep the fundamental decisions from being made, they still have a hope, the enemies of peace, of derailing the whole thing. That's why it's more like an abscessed tooth.

The fundamental realities are not going to be changed by delays. And that's why I said what I did about Ehud Barak. I know that -- I don't think it's appropriate for the United States to deal with anybody else's politics, but I know why -- you can't expect poll ratings to be very good when the voters in the moment wonder if they're going to get peace or security, and think they can no longer have both and may have to choose one. I understand that.

But I'm telling you, the reason he has continued to push ahead on this is that he has figured out, this is one of those political problems that is like the abscessed tooth. The realities are not going to change. We can wait until all these handsome young people at this table are the same age as the honorees tonight, and me, we can wait until they've got kids their age, and we've got a whole lot more bodies and a lot more funerals, a lot more crying and a lot more hatred, and I'll swear the decisions will still be the same ones that will have to be made that have to be made today.

That's the fundamental deal here. And this is a speech I have given, I might add, to all my Israeli friends who question what we have done, and to the Palestinians. And in private, God forgive me, my language is sometimes somewhat more graphic than it has been tonight. But anybody that ever kneeled at the grave of a person who died in the Middle East knows that what we've been through these last three months is not what Yitzhak Rabin died for and not what I went to Gaza two years ago to speak to the Palestinian National Council for either, for that matter.

So those are the lessons I think are still operative, and I'm a little concerned that we could draw the wrong lessons from this tragic, still relatively brief, chapter in the history of the Middle East. The violence does not demonstrate that the quest for peace has gone too far or too fast. It demonstrates what happens when you've got a problem that is profoundly difficult and you never quite get to the end, so there is no settlement, no resolution, anxiety prevailed, and at least some people never get any concrete benefits out of it.

And I believe that the last few months demonstrate the futility of force or terrorism as an ultimate solution; that's what I believe. (Applause.) I think the last few months show that unilateralism will exacerbate, not abate, mutual hostility. I believe that the violence confirms the need to do more to prepare both publics for the requirements of peace, not to condition people for the so-called glory of further conflict.

Now, what are we going to do now? The first priority, obviously, has got to be to drastically reduce the current cycle of violence. But beyond that, on the Palestinian side, there must be an end to the culture of violence and the culture of incitement that, since Oslo, has not gone unchecked. (Applause.) Young children still are being educated to believe in confrontation with Israel, and multiple militia-like groups carry and use weapons with impunity. Voices of reason in that kind of environment will be drowned out too often by voices of revenge.

Such conduct is inconsistent with the Palestinian leadership's commitment to Oslo's nonviolent path to peace and its persistence sends the wrong message to the Israeli people, and makes it much more difficult for them to support their leaders in making the compromises necessary to get a lasting agreement.

For their part, the Israeli people also must understand that they're creating a few problems, too; that the settlement enterprise and building bypass roads in the heart of what they already know will one day be part of a Palestinian state is inconsistent with the Oslo commitment that both sides negotiate a compromise. (Applause.)

And restoring confidence requires the Palestinians being able to lead a normal existence, and not be subject to daily, often humiliating reminders that they lack basic freedom and control over their lives.

These, too, make it harder for the Palestinians to believe the commitments made to them will be kept. Can two peoples with this kind of present trouble and troubling history still conclude a genuine and lasting peace? I mean, if I gave you this as a soap opera, you would say they're going to divorce court. But they can't, because they share such a small piece of land with such a profound history of importance to more than a billion people around the world. So I believe with all my heart not only that they can, but that they must.

At Camp David, I saw Israeli and Palestinian negotiators who knew how many children each other had, who knew how many grandchildren each other had, who knew how they met their spouses, who knew what their family tragedies were, who trusted each other in their word. It was almost shocking to see what could happen and how people still felt on the ground when I saw how their leaders felt about each other and the respect and the confidence they had in each other when they were talking.

The alternative to getting this peace done is being played out before our very eyes. But amidst the agony, I will say again, there are signs of hope. And let me try to put this into what I think is a realistic context.

Camp David was a transformative event, because the two sides faced the core issue of their dispute in a forum that was official for the first time. And they had to debate the tradeoffs required to resolve the issues. Just as Oslo forced Israelis and Palestinians to come to terms with each other's existence, the discussions of the past six months have forced them to come to terms with each other's needs and the contours of a peace that ultimately they will have to reach.

That's why Prime Minister Barak, I think, has demonstrated real courage and vision in moving toward peace in difficult circumstances while trying to find a way to continue to protect Israel's security and vital interests.

So that's a fancy way of saying we know what we have to do and we've got a mess on our hands. So where do we go from here? Given the impasse and the tragic deterioration on the ground, a couple of weeks ago both sides asked me to present my ideas. So I put forward parameters that I wanted to be guide toward a comprehensive agreement; parameters based on eight years of listening carefully to both sides and hearing them describe with increasing clarity their respective grievances and needs.

Both Prime Minister Barak and Chairman Arafat have now accepted these parameters as the basis for further efforts. Both have expressed some reservations. At their request, I am using my remaining time in office to narrow the differences between the parties to the greatest degree possible. (Applause.) For which I deserve no applause. Believe me, it beats packing up all my old books. (Laughter.)

The parameters I put forward contemplate a settlement in response to each side's essential needs, if not to their utmost desires. A settlement based on sovereign homelands, security, peace and dignity for both Israelis and Palestinians. These parameters don't begin to answer every question, they just narrow the questions that have to be answered.

Here they are. First, I think there can be no genuine resolution to the conflict without a sovereign, viable, Palestinian state that accommodates Israeli's security requirements and the demographic realities. That suggests Palestinian sovereignty over Gaza, the vast majority of the West Bank, the incorporation into Israel of settlement blocks, with the goal of maximizing the number of settlers in Israel while minimizing the land annex for Palestine to be viable must be a geographically contiguous state. (Applause.)

Now, the land annexed into Israel into settlement blocks should include as few Palestinians as possible, consistent with the logic of two separate homelands. And to make the agreement durable, I think there will have to be some territorial swaps and other arrangements.

Second, a solution will have to be found for the Palestinian refugees who have suffered a great deal -- particularly some of them. A solution that allows them to return to a Palestinian state that will provide all Palestinians with a place they can safely and proudly call home. All Palestinian refugees who wish to live in this homeland should have the right to do so. All others who want to find new homes, whether in their current locations or in third countries, should be able to do so, consistent with those countries' sovereign decisions. And that includes Israel.

All refugees should receive compensation from the international community for their losses, and assistance in building new lives.

Now, you all know what the rub is. That was a lot of artful language for saying that you cannot expect Israel to acknowledge an unlimited right of return to present day Israel, and at the same time, to give up Gaza and the West Bank and have the settlement blocks as compact as possible, because of where a lot of these refugees came from. We cannot expect Israel to make a decision that would threaten the very foundations of the state of Israel, and would undermine the whole logic of peace. And it shouldn't be done. (Applause.)

But I have made it very clear that the refugees will be a high priority, and that the United States will take a lead in raising the money necessary to relocate them in the most appropriate manner. (Applause.) If the government of Israel or a subsequent government of Israel ever -- will be in charge of their immigration policy, just as we and the Canadians and the Europeans and others who would offer Palestinians a home would be, they would be obviously free to do that, and I think they've indicated that they would do that, to some extent. But there cannot be an unlimited language in an agreement that would undermine the very foundations of the Israeli state or the whole reason for creating the Palestinian state. (Applause.) So that's what we're working on.

Third, there will be no peace, and no peace agreement, unless the Israeli people have lasting security guarantees. (Applause.) These need not and should not come at the expense of Palestinian sovereignty, or interfere with Palestinian territorial integrity. So my parameters rely on an international presence in Palestine to provide border security along the Jordan Valley and to monitor implementation of the final agreement. They rely on a non-militarized Palestine, a phased Israeli withdrawal, to address Israeli security needs in the Jordan Valley, and other essential arrangements to ensure Israel's ability to defend itself.

Fourth, I come to the issue of Jerusalem, perhaps the most emotional and sensitive of all. It is a historic, cultural and political center for both Israelis and Palestinians, a unique city sacred to all three monotheistic religions. And I believe the parameters I have established flow from four fair and logical propositions.

First, Jerusalem should be an open and undivided city, with assured freedom of access and worship for all. It should encompass the internationally recognized capitals of two states, Israel and Palestine. Second, what is Arab should be Palestinian, for why would Israel want to govern in perpetuity the lives of hundreds of thousands of Palestinians? Third, what is Jewish should be Israeli. That would give rise to a Jewish Jerusalem, larger and more vibrant than any in history. Fourth, what is holy to both requires a special care to meet the needs of all. I was glad to hear what the Speaker said about that. No peace agreement will last if not premised on mutual respect for the religious beliefs and holy shrines of Jews, Muslims and Christians.

I have offered formulations on the Haram Ash-Shareef, and the area holy to the Jewish people, an area which for 2,000 years, as I said at Camp David, has been the focus of Jewish yearning, that I believed fairly addressed the concerns of both sides.

Fifth and, finally, any agreement will have to mark the decision to end the conflict, for neither side can afford to make these painful compromises, only to be subjected to further demands. They are both entitled to know that if they take the last drop of blood out of each other's turnip, that's it. It really will have to be the end of the struggle that has pitted Palestinians and Israelis against one another for too long. And the end of the conflict must manifest itself with concrete acts that demonstrate a new attitude and a new approach by Palestinians and Israelis toward each other, and by other states in the region toward Israel, and by the entire region toward Palestine, to help it get off to a good start.

The parties' experience with interim accords has not always been happy -- too many deadlines missed, too many commitments unfulfilled on both sides. So for this to signify a real end of the conflict, there must be effective mechanisms to provide guarantees of implementation. That's a lot of stuff, isn't it? It's what I think is the outline of a fair agreement. (Applause.)

Let me say this, I am well aware that it will entail real pain and sacrifices for both sides. I am well aware that I don't even have to run for reelection in the United States on the basis of these ideas. I have worked for eight years without laying such ideas down. I did it only when both sides asked me to, and when it was obvious that we had come to the end of the road, and somebody had to do something to break out of the impasse.

Now, I still think the benefits of the agreement, based on these parameters, far outweigh the burdens. For the people of Israel, they are an end to conflict, secure and defensible borders, the incorporation of most of the settlers into Israel, and the Jewish capital of Jerusalem, recognized by all, not just the United States, by everybody in the world. It's a big deal, and it needs to be done. (Applause.)

For the Palestinian people, it means the freedom to determine their own future on their own land, a new life for the refugees, an independent and sovereign state with al Quds as its capital, recognized by all. (Applause.) And for America, it means that we could have new flags flying over new embassies in both these capitals. (Applause.)

Now that the sides have accepted the parameters with reservations, what's going to happen? Well, each side will try to do a little better than I did. (Laughter.) You know, that's just natural. But a peace viewed as imposed by one party upon the other, that puts one side up and the other down, rather than both ahead, contains the seeds of its own destruction.

Let me say those who believe that my ideas can be altered to one party's exclusive benefit are mistaken. I think to press for more will produce less. There can be no peace without compromise. Now, I don't ask Israelis or Palestinians to agree with everything I said. If they can come up with a completely different agreement, it would suit me just fine. But I doubt it.

I have said what I have out of a profound lifetime commitment to and love for the state of Israel, out of a conviction that the Palestinian people have been ignored or used as political footballs by others for long enough, and they ought to have a chance to make their own life with dignity. (Applause.) And out of a belief that in the homeland of the world's three great religions that believe we are all the creatures of one God, we ought to be able to prove that one person's win is not, by definition, another's loss; that one person's dignity is not, by definition, another's humiliation; that one person's work of God is not, by definition, another's heresy. There has to be a way for us to find a truth we can share. (Applause.)

There has to be a way for us to reach those young Palestinian kids who, unlike the young people in this audience, don't imagine a future in which they would ever put on clothes like this and sit at a dinner like this.

There has to be a way for us to say to them, struggle and pain and destruction and self-destruction are way overrated, and not the only option. There has to be a way for us to reach those people in Israel who have paid such a high price and believe, frankly, that people who embrace the ideas I just outlined are nuts, because Israel is a little country and this agreement would make it smaller; to understand that the world in which we live and the technology of modern weaponry no longer make defense primarily a matter of geography and of politics and the human feeling and the interdependence and the cooperation and the shared values and the shared interests are more important and worth the considered risk, especially if the United States remains committed to the military capacity of the state of Israel. (Applause.)

So I say to the Palestinians: there will always be those who are sitting outside in the peanut gallery of the Middle East, urging you to hold out for more, or to plant one more bomb. But all the people who do that, they're not the refugees languishing in those camps -- you are. They're not the ones with children growing up in poverty whose income is lower today than it was the day we had the signing on the White House Lawn in 1993 -- you are.

All the people that are saying to the Palestinian people: Stay on the path of no, are people that have a vested interest in the failure of the peace process that has nothing to do with how those kids in Gaza and the West Bank are going to grow up and live and raise their own children. (Applause.)

To the citizens of Israel who have returned to an ancient homeland after 2,000 years, whose hopes and dreams almost vanished in the Holocaust, who have hardly had one day of peace and quiet since the state of Israel was created, I understand, I believe, something of the disillusionment, the anger, the frustration that so many feel when, just at the moment peace seemed within reach, all this violence broke out and raised the question of whether it is ever possible.

The fact is that the people of Israel dreamed of a homeland. The dream came through; but when they came home, the land was not all vacant. Your land is also their land, it is the homeland of two people. And, therefore, there is no choice but to create two states and make the best of it.

If it happens today, it will be better than if it happens tomorrow, because fewer people will die. And after it happens, the motives of those who continue the violence will be clearer to all than they are today.

Today, Israel is closer than ever to ending a 100-year-long era of struggle. It could be Israel's finest hour. And I hope and pray that the people of Israel will not give up the hope of peace.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C06016675 Date: 04/12/2017

Now, I've got 13 days and I'll do what I can. We're working with Egypt and the parties to try to end the violence. I'm sending Dennis Ross to the region this week. I met with both sides this week. I hope we can really do something. And I appreciate more than I can say the kind, personal things that you said about me.

But here's what I want you to think about. New York has its own high-tech corridor called "Silicon Alley." The number one foreign recipient of venture capital from Silicon Alley is Israel. Palestinians who have come to the United States, to Chile, to Canada, to Europe, have done fabulously well -- in business, in the sciences, in academia.

If we could ever let a lot of this stuff go and realize that a lot of -- that the enemies of peace in the Middle East are overlooking not only what the Jewish people have done beyond Israel, but what has happened to the state of Israel since its birth, and how fabulously well the people of Palestinian descent have done everywhere else in the world except in their homeland, where they are in the grip of forces that have not permitted them to reconcile with one another and with the people of Israel-- listen, if you guys ever got together, 10 years from now we would all wonder what the heck happened for 30 years before.

And the center of energy and creativity and economic power and political influence in the entire region would be with the Israelis and the Palestinians because of their gifts. It could happen. But somebody has got to take the long leap, and they have to be somebodies on both sides.

All I can tell you is, whether you do it now or whether you do it later, whether I'm the President or just somebody in the peanut gallery, I'll be there, cheering and praying and working along the way. (Applause.) And I think America will be there. I think America will always be there for Israel's security. But Israel's lasting security rests in a just and lasting peace. I pray that the day will come sooner, rather than later, where all the people of the region will see that they can share the wisdom of God in their common humanity and give up their conflict.

Thank you and God bless you. (Applause.)

RELEASE IN FULL

The Clinton Peace Plan, 23 December 2000

In a last ditch effort to revive the peace process, the United States invited Israeli and PA negotiators back to Washington, D.C. for separate talks with the American peace teams. They came on 18 December and met for two days separately with the American officials. On 20 December, Foreign Minister Ben-Ami and PA negotiator Saeb Erekat met in the White House with President Clinton and Secretary Albright. These talks had not yielded much progress, and at one time the PA walked out. On 23 December, Clinton presented the sides with his parameters for a final status agreement. He asked that the sides respond to him by 27 December if these parameters were acceptable as a basis for further negotiations. Following are the proposals as given to the Israeli media by various sources:

Territory:

Based on what I heard, I believe that the solution should be in the mid-90 percents, between 94-96 percent of the West Bank territory of the Palestinian State

The land annexed by Israel should be compensated by a land swap of 1-3 percent in addition to territorial arrangements such as a permanent safe passage.

The parties also should consider the swap of leased land to meet their respective needs...

The Parties should develop a map consistent with the following criteria:

- 80% of settlers in blocks
- contiguity
- Minimize the annexed areas
- Minimize the number of Palestinians affected

Security:

The key lies in an international presence that can only be withdrawn by mutual consent. This presence will also monitor the implementation of the agreement between both sides.

My best judgment is that the Israeli presence would remain in fixed locations in the Jordan Valley under the authority of the international force for another 36 months. This period could be reduced in the event of favorable regional developments that diminish the threat to Israel.

On early warning stations, Israel should maintain three facilities in the West Bank with a Palestinian liaison presence. The stations will be subject to review every 10 years with any changes in the status to be mutually agreed. (According to the Israeli version of the minutes, Clinton said the stations would be subject to review after 10 years).

Regarding emergency developments, I understand that you will still have to develop a map of the relevant areas and routes. I propose the following definition: imminent and demonstrable threat to Israel's national security of a military nature that requires the activation of a national state emergency. Of course, the international forces will need to be notified of any such determination

On airspace, I suggest that the state of Palestine will have sovereignty over its airspace but that the two sides should work out special arrangements for Israeli training and operational needs.

I understand that the Israeli position is that Palestine should be defined as a "demilitarized state" while the Palestinian side proposes "a state with limited arms." As a compromise, I suggest calling it a "non-militarized state."

This will be consistent with the fact that in addition to a strong Palestinian security force, Palestine will have an international force for border security and deterrent purposes.

Jerusalem:

The general principle is that Arab areas are Palestinian and Jewish ones are Israeli. This would apply to the Old City as well. I urge the two sides to work on maps to create maximum contiguity for both sides.

Regarding the Haram Temple Mount, I believe that the gaps are not related to practical administration but to symbolic issues of sovereignty and to finding a way to accord respect to the religious beliefs of both sides.

I know you have been discussing a number of formulations.... I add to these two additional formulations guaranteeing Palestinian effective control over the Haram while respecting the conviction of the Jewish People. Regarding either one of those two formulations will be international monitoring to provide mutual confidence.

1. Palestinian sovereignty over the Haram and Israeli sovereignty over a) the Western Wall and the space sacred to Judaism of which it is a part or b) the Western Wall and the Holy of Holies of which it is a part.

There will be a firm commitment by both not to excavate beneath the Haram or behind the Wall.

2. Palestinian sovereignty over the Haram and Israeli sovereignty over the Western Wall and shared functional sovereignty over the issue of excavation under the Haram and behind the Wall such that mutual consent would be requested before any excavation can take place.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C06016677 Date: 04/12/2017

Refugees:

I sense that the differences are more relating to formulations and less to what will happen on a practical level.

I believe that Israel is prepared to acknowledge the moral and material suffering caused to the Palestinian people as a result of the 1948 war and the need to assist the international community in addressing the problem.

The fundamental gap is on how to handle the concept of the right of return. I know the history of the issue and how hard it will be for the Palestinian leadership to appear to be abandoning the principle.

The Israeli side could not accept any reference to a right of return that would imply a right to immigrate to Israel in defiance of Israel's sovereign policies and admission or that would threaten the Jewish character of the state.

Any solution must address both needs.

The solution will have to be consistent with the two-state approach - the state of Palestine as the homeland of the Palestinian people and the state of Israel as the homeland of the Jewish people.

Under the two-state solution, the guiding principle should be that the Palestinian state should be the focal point for the Palestinians who choose to return to the area without ruling out that Israel will accept some of these refugees.

I believe that we need to adopt a formulation on the right of return that will make clear that there is no specific right of return to Israel itself but that does not negate the aspiration of the Palestinian people to return to the area.

I propose two alternatives:

1. Both sides recognize the right of Palestinian refugees to return to 'historic Palestine' or
2. Both sides recognize the right of Palestinian refugees to return to their homeland.

The agreement will define the implementation of this general right in a way that is consistent with the two-state solution. It would list the five possible homes for the refugees:

1. The State of Palestine

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2015-06322 Doc No. C06016677 Date: 04/12/2017

2. Areas in Israel being transferred to Palestine in the land swap
3. Rehabilitation in host country
4. Resettlement in third country
5. Admission to Israel

In listing these options, the agreement will make clear that the return to the West Bank, Gaza Strip and area acquired in the land swap would be right to all Palestinian refugees, while rehabilitation in host countries, resettlement in third countries and absorption into Israel will depend upon the policies of those countries.

Israel could indicate in the agreement that it intends to establish a policy so that some the refugees would be absorbed into Israel consistent with Israeli sovereign decision.

I believe that priority should be given to the refugee population in Lebanon.

The parties would agree that this implements Resolution 194.

The End of Conflict:

I propose that the agreement clearly mark the end of the conflict and its implementation put an end to all claims. This could be implemented through a UN Security Council Resolution that notes that resolutions 242 and 338 have been implemented and through the release of Palestinian prisoners.

Huma,

Not sure if this is a level of detail S would like, but in the interest of providing more information rather than less, I thought I'd pass along the following. Below are a couple of bullets on how the reconciliation bill makes a number of changes to the Senate health care bill. These are just some of the highlights:

- Increases the tax credits for middle-income families who buy insurance.
- Reduces the penalty for not buying insurance from $750 to $695. But the bill also requires some people to pay a share of their income as a penalty and that number was raised from 2 percent to 2.5 percent.
- It closes the gap in Medicare prescription drug coverage by 2011 and gives seniors who fall into the gap this year a $250 rebate.
- It eliminates the Cornhusker Kickback and covers 100 percent of the increased Medicaid costs of all states until 2016 and decreases each year thereafter.
- Requires that doctors that care for Medicaid patients be reimbursed at the full rate.
- Spends $250 million to fight waste, fraud and abuse.
- Delays and blunts the tax on high-end insurance plans in keeping with the deal Democrats struck with the labor unions. However, it does lower the index at which plans will be taxed, making it likely that more plans will be affected over time.
- Imposes a Medicare tax on unearned income for families making more than $250,000.
- Includes student loan reform.

Thanks and hope the trip is going well.

Subject: HC Update

Here's a brief update on today's health care developments.

The House is expected to vote Sunday on the final health care package, with floor action to follow in the Senate as early as next week. Just a moment ago, the reconciliation bill was posted on the House Rules website, meaning the 72-hour clock for public disclosure has started.

CBO Score and Deficit Reduction

CBO, in a preliminary score posted late Thursday morning, reported that the bill would cost $940 billion over 10 years, but thanks to reductions in Medicare spending and tax increases, it would reduce the deficit by a net of $138 billion during that period and by $1.2 trillion in its second decade. Leader Hoyer called the legislation the largest deficit-reduction legislation since 1993.

The bill as written would create state-based exchanges, or marketplaces, where individuals without employer-provided insurance could buy health coverage. Federal subsidies would be available to help cover the cost for many purchasers.

In the first five years of the exchanges, they would provide more generous subsidies for people buying policies than the Senate bill proposed. But in 2019, they propose to suddenly reduce the rate of growth of the subsidies to something closer to that of the Senate bill. The final measure would reportedly pare the annual growth in Medicare expenditures by 1.4 percentage points per year, while closing the "doughnut hole" gap in prescription drug coverage and extending the program's solvency by at least nine years. It also would extend health insurance coverage to about 32 million people who currently lack it, leading to coverage of an estimated 95 percent of Americans.

Senate Fight

Hoyer said he is confident, but not certain, the bill would survive parliamentary challenges in the Senate, where Democrats intend to pass it under budget reconciliation procedures.

Senate Republicans are expected to lodge points of order against provisions they suspect may not meet the strict budgetary rules of the reconciliation process. If their challenges are upheld by the chair (advised by the parliamentarian), it would require 60 votes to waive the point of order.

Hoyer said he has sought assurances from Leader Reid that the reconciliation measure can pass the Senate without changes.

"Deeming" Procedure

Hoyer dismissed Republican criticism of the "deeming" procedure Democrats are contemplating using in the House. In the context of health care reform, the idea is that the special rule for considering the reconciliation bill would also provide for passage of the Senate-passed health care bill. Upon adoption of the special rule, the House is simultaneously considered to have voted for and passed the Senate-passed health care bill (i.e., the Senate bill is "deemed" passed). Not surprisingly, Republicans are slamming the tactic as parliamentary gamesmanship. They are insisting they want an up or down vote on the Senate bill.

Speaker Pelosi still would not confirm (or deny) that she plans to use the self-executing rule to clear the Senate-passed health care bill and pass the accompanying reconciliation bill. It is worth noting that Republicans used the self-executing rule dozens of times when they were in control of the House.

Lona,

Contacts at Treasury believe (and are passing word) that Secretary Clinton will host dinner for the French delegation March 30 while the presidential couples are dining privately. I wanted to check that this indeed the case given the Secretary's schedule travel to Canada.

Many thanks,

Andrew

Subject: NATO Foreign/Defense Ministerial before Lisbon?

All,

When SYG Rasmussen met with Secretaries Gates and Clinton on the margins of the Feb 23 Strategic Concept seminar in Washington, there was talk of holding a joint meeting of foreign and defense ministers in the run up to the Nov 19-20 Lisbon Summit.

Rasmussen has since canvassed Allies and come up with the date of Oct 14 in Brussels.

0900-1200 Defense Ministers NAC

1300-1600 Foreign and Defense Ministers NAC

1645-1930 Foreign Ministers NAC

OSD is checking separately on the availability of Sec. Gates.

Would appreciate your feedback on whether this date is available for Secretary Clinton.

Thanks, Bruce

All,

Attached is the latest schedule. We have received revisions to the breakout session co-chairs from the Pakistani Embassy. Please continue to send me updates and corrections.

The next countdown meetings will be:

- 12:30-2 pm Monday, Room 1430A
- 2-3:30 pm Tuesday, Room 1430A

It is critical that all breakout session POCs and site officers attend these countdowns. If you have a conflict with either of these times, please let me know who will be coming in your place.

Have a great weekend!

John
