Re civil testimony. [redacted]

Thomas Fitton, the president of Judicial Watch, who took part in Mr. Lukens's deposition, said afterward that he could not discuss the substance of the testimony because of the ground rules set by Judge Sullivan.

But Mr. Fitton predicted that once the testimony is publicly released — perhaps as early as next week — it would show “why the State Department and Mrs. Clinton have slow-rolled this and withheld a complete explanation of what went on with her email system. What we learned is going to be embarrassing to Mrs. Clinton and the administration — maybe more than embarrassing.”

He refused to elaborate, citing the court's restrictions.

After the deposition, State Department lawyers invoked a procedure to review Mr. Lukens's testimony for three days before deciding whether to ask the judge to keep any parts of it confidential for security or legal reasons.
