General Questions:

- How to best communicate this with other jurisdictions?
- How does this effect current contracts in place?
- So the Mayor has to write the Surveillance Use Policy (who is writing it for her?) (as specified on page 2 of JM memo)
- Will the Council be providing templates for the required approval request documents? If not, I can work on shaping those (might help put us in the best light possible and show our willingness to comply)

  6. Should any School Safety Specialist be found to have violated this policy, the Superintendent will instruct the Chief of Safety Services to suspend all authorization of School Safety Specialists report submissions to BPD pending a full investigation of such violation.
- i) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent or restrict reporting requirements around sexual assault, sexual abuse, and child abuse in accordance with Massachusetts General Laws.

16-63.5      Annual Surveillance Report

- a) Applicability: This section shall apply to the following City departments and agencies: the Boston Police Department, Boston Parks Department Park Rangers, Boston Public Schools, Boston Public Health Commission, Boston Housing Authority, Boston Municipal Protection Services, and the Office of Emergency Management.

For the purpose of this section, the word "City" shall mean the City departments and agencies listed above.

- b) Within 18 months of the effective date, and annually thereafter, all applicable City departments shall submit to the Mayor an Annual Surveillance Report pertaining to each City department for which approval for the use of Surveillance Technology or Surveillance Data has been obtained under Sections 16-63.3c and 16-63.3d of this ordinance. Upon receipt of such reports, the Mayor shall promptly submit them to the City Council. Any Annual Surveillance Report submitted under this section shall be made publicly available on the City's website upon submission to the council.
- c) The Annual Surveillance Report submitted pursuant to this section shall include all of the following:
  - 1. A description of how Surveillance Technology has been used, including whether it captured images, sound, or other information regarding members of the public who are not suspected of engaging in unlawful conduct;
  - 2. Whether and how often data acquired through the use of the Surveillance Technology was shared with local, state, and federal, the name of any recipient entity, the type(s) of data disclosed, any legal standard(s) under which the information was disclosed, and the justification for the disclosure;
  - 3. A summary of community complaints or concerns about the Surveillance Technology, if any;
  - 4. The results of any internal audits, any information about violations of the Surveillance Use Policy, and any actions taken in response other than to the extent that such inclusion would violate the privacy rights of an employee of the City;
  - 5. A detailed accounting of whether the Surveillance Technology has been effective at achieving its identified purpose;
  - 6. The number of public records requests received by the City seeking documents concerning Surveillance Technologies approved during the previous year;
  - 7. An estimate of the total annual costs for the Surveillance Technology, including personnel and other ongoing costs, and what source(s) of funding will fund the technology in the coming year, if known;
  - 8. Whether the civil rights and liberties of any communities or groups, including communities of color or other marginalized communities in the City are disproportionately impacted by the deployment of the Surveillance Technology; and
  - 9. A disclosure of any new agreements made in the past 12 months with non-City entities that may include acquiring, sharing, or otherwise using Surveillance Technology or the Surveillance Data it provides.

- d) Based upon information provided in the Annual Surveillance Report, the City Council shall determine whether the benefits to the applicable, impacted City department(s) and the community of the Surveillance Technology outweigh the financial and operational costs and whether reasonable safeguards exist to address reasonable concerns regarding privacy, civil liberties, and civil rights impacted by the deployment of the Surveillance Technology. If the benefits or reasonably anticipated benefits do not outweigh the financial and/or operational costs or civil liberties or civil rights are not reasonably safeguarded, the City Council may recommend modifications to the Surveillance Use Policy that are designed to address the City Council's concerns to the Mayor for their consideration; withdraw authorization for continued use of Surveillance Technology by a majority vote of the City Council; and/or request a report back from the Mayor regarding steps taken to address the City Council's concerns. Should the Council withdraw authorization for a previously approved surveillance technology, the Mayor may request that the Surveillance Oversight Advisory Board meet to discuss the City Council's concerns and provide recommendations to the Mayor. The mayor at their discretion may resubmit a modified request to the City Council for approval.
- e) Nothing in this ordinance shall prohibit the City Council from enacting a separate ordinance to ban or otherwise regulate any Surveillance Technology, whether previously approved or not.
- f) No later than May 31 of each year, the City Council shall hold a meeting to discuss the applicable City departments' Annual Surveillance Reports, and shall publicly release a report that includes a summary of all requests for approval of Surveillance Technology received by the City Council during the prior year, including whether the City Council approved or denied the City's request for acquisition or use of the Surveillance Technology.

16-63.6 Enforcement

- a) Enforcement officials: This ordinance shall be enforced by the Mayor's office or the Mayor's designee.
- b) Suppression: No data collected or derived from any use of Surveillance Technology in violation of this ordinance and no evidence derived therefrom may be received in evidence in any proceeding in or before any department, officer, agency, regulatory body, legislative committee, or other authority subject to the jurisdiction of the City of Boston.

- c) Cause of action: Any violation of this ordinance constitutes an injury and any person may institute proceedings for injunctive relief, declaratory relief, or writ of mandate in any court of competent jurisdiction to enforce this ordinance. An action instituted under this paragraph shall be brought against the City and, if necessary to effectuate compliance with this ordinance, any other governmental agency with possession, custody, or control of data subject to this ordinance.
- d) The City will address alleged violations of this ordinance in accordance with its usual practices, applicable law, and contractual obligations.
- e) Whistleblower protections. Subject to the limitations and requirements set forth in G. L. c. 149, §185 (the “Massachusetts Whistleblower Statute” or “Section 185”) as it may be amended from time to time, any City employee as defined in Section 185 who reports an alleged violation of this ordinance, shall be afforded protections against retaliation if applicable pursuant to Section 185, as set forth in and subject to the limitations and requirements of Section 185.
- f) Nothing in this ordinance shall be construed to limit or affect any individual’s rights under state or federal laws.

16-63.7 Severability

- a) The provisions in this ordinance are severable. If any part or provision of this ordinance, or the application of this ordinance to any person or circumstance, is held invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, the remainder of this ordinance shall not be affected by such holding and shall continue to have full force and effect.

16-63.8 Effective Date and Implementation

The effective date and implementation of the ordinance shall be as follows.

- a) The ordinance shall take effect and be implemented in the manner and ways described in this section.
- b) The ordinance shall take effect notwithstanding any other provision of law and shall supersede any prior law and regulation enacted by the City of Boston and/or any agreement entered into by the City of Boston or any of its agencies that are interpreted to be in conflict with its provisions.
- c) Sections 16-63.1, 16-63.2, 16-63.4, 16-63.6, and 16-63.7 shall take effect one month after its adoption in accordance with the following provisions:
  - 1. Every School Safety Specialist shall create a record of Historic Student Reports
  - 2. Within four months of the Effective Date:

The Head of the School Safety Specialists as well as individual School Safety Specialists shall be present at such public hearing.
- d) Sections 16-63.3 and 16-63.5 shall take effect nine months after their adoption.

16-63.9 Establishment of a Surveillance, Data, and Privacy Working Group

- a) The Working Group shall be tasked with identifying a set of priorities and implementable objectives to increase the transparency, accountability, and engagement around the public deployment of technology and use of data within City of Boston Departments not covered by this ordinance.
- b) The Working Group will move forward sustainable policies to increase engagement on the topic of privacy and supply recommendations on professional development opportunities and training for City staff.
- c) The Working Group must produce recommendations for implementation within one year from the date of adoption to the Mayor and City Council.

- d) The Working Group shall comprise a representative from the Mayor's Office of New Urban Mechanics, a representative from the Department of Innovation and Technology, a representative from the City Council to be chosen by the Boston City Council President, a representative from the Massachusetts American Civil Liberties Union, a representative from the community-at-large to be chosen by SIM, and a representative appointed by the Mayor.

Summary:

On 04/01/2022, at approximately 7:15 am, protesters began arriving at the corner of Crandall and Augustus Av. The number increased to approximately 6-8 protesters. The protesters began yelling in the direction of the Mayor's house relative to the Vax Mandate and City Ordinances. These protesters were, also, waving flags and holding signs. Sgt Det. Jason

Gilmore of the Mayors Security Team approached the group and advised them of the City Ordinance 16-63 regarding Targeted Residential Picketing.. After advising the group of the ordinance, I (E901) provided, a copy of the CITY ORDINANCE to each protester in hand. Sgt. Cottone was present for Sgt Det Gilmore's reading of the ordinance and I personally handed Sgt Cottone a copy of the new city ordinance. A short time later, Sgt. Cottone approached me and notified me that she was leaving the area. Later, I heard someone using an amplification device further down Crandall St. After several outbursts form down the street it was determined that Sgt. Cottone was now on Crandall St. street broadcasting from her personal vehicle at least two times. Finally, when the Mayor exited her house and entered the security teams vehicle, I observed that a motor vehicle began to follow the Mayor's vehicle at a close distance down Augustus onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq, The vehicle was, also, using a amplification device to broadcast anti Wu statements , This vehicle was the same vehicle that was parked down the street on Crandall and previously using an amplification device to broadcast ant Wu sentiments. The vehicle was identified as being owned and operated by Sgt, Shana Cottone, The incident was captured by BWC worn officers on scene .

NARRATIVE

At about 7:45 AM on Monday April 25, 2022 Officer Pieroway in the E626D Unit, while on a fixed post at 17 Augustus Ave, did arrest Shannon Llewellyn DOB 7/12/76 for willful violation of City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing.

At about 7:30 AM on the above date, Officer Pieroway in the E626D, while on a fix post at 17 Augustus Ave was speaking with a known neighbor, observed 1 unidentified male and 2 unidentified females as well as the Suspect, later identified as Shannon Llewellyn DOB 7/12/76, walk towards the corner of Augustus Ave and Crandell St. The Suspect was holding 2 signs a cooking pot with a cooking utensil. Officer Pieroway then contacted the Patrol Supervisor E901 Sgt. O'Brien of the protestors.

Sgt. O'Brien then arrived on scene and handed the protestors a copy of the City of Boston Ordinance 16-63 Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing. Officer Pieroway at this time activated his body worn camera.

Sgt. O'Brien then explained the ordinance to the protestors and informed them they would be subject to arrest if they did not leave. One of the unidentified females stated she was a member of the press and was documenting the incident. The second female along with unidentified male then stated they could not get arrested and stated they were leaving. The Suspect then continued to argue with officers stating this was unconstitutional. Sgt. O'Brien then stated to the Suspect that she had five minutes to leave or she would be arrested for willful violating City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing pursuant to Mass General Law Chapter 272 Section 59. The Suspect was then given ample time to leave but she refused and began to banging the cooking utensil against the pot in a disturbing manner. Sgt. O'Brien then directed Officer Pieroway and Barboza to place the Suspect under arrest due to the Suspect knowing and willfully violating City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing.

The Suspect then put both of her arms out as Officer Pieroway and Officer Barboza (ET55) placed her into custody. Officer Barboza transported the Suspect to Area E5 while Officer Pieroway followed behind. The Suspect was then transported without further incident.

Further investigation revealed the Suspect was at West Roxbury District Court on April 15, 2022 for a Clerks hearing and was advised by Clerk Magistrate Sean Murphy of the City Ordinance and MGL 272 59 (specifically of the time of 9:00AM to 9:00PM restriction in the ordinance). Also present at the hearing was Sgt. Brian Waters representing the City of Boston. It should be noted that this is the second time the Suspect has been charged with this offense.

Shannon Llewellyn is to be charged willful violation of City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing in West Roxbury District Court.

Upon physical receipt of the city ordinance Shana Cottone acknowledged the ordinance and informed Sgt. O'Brien she would be leaving the scene. Cottone then walked to her car which was parked down the road on Crandall Street where she remained and intermittently used an amplifying device to yell.

Sgt. Detective Gilmore did issue Robert Burke City of Boston Ordinance Violation notice number 1007601 for the violation of city ordinance 16-63.

Mayor Wu was picked up at her residence by her security detail and when the Mayors car began to drive off, Cottone in her personal vehicle, began following the Mayors car while using an amplifying device to yell and harass the Mayor. Sgt. Detective Chin, of the Mayors security detail, observed Cottone following the Mayors vehicle and heard her yelling at the mayor using an amplifying device.

Officer did seek civil complaints at West Roxbury District Court against [REDACTED] and Shana Cottone for violation of city ordinances 16-63 and 16.88.

As the identity of the other protesters become known to officers civil complaints will be sought against them for the city ordinance violation.

Summary:

On 04/01/2022, at approximately 7:15 am, protesters began arriving at the corner of Crandall and Augustus Av. The number increased to approximately 6-8 protesters. The protesters began yelling in the direction of the Mayor's house relative to the Vax Mandate and City Ordinances. These protesters were, also, waving flags and holding signs. Sgt Det. Jason

Gilmore of the Mayors Security Team approached the group and advised them of the City Ordinance 16-63 regarding Targeted Residential Picketing.. After advising the group of the ordinance, I (E901) provided, a copy of the CITY ORDINANCE to each protester in hand. Sgt. Cottone was present for Sgt Det Gilmore's reading of the ordinance and I personally handed Sgt Cottone a copy of the new city ordinance. A short time later, Sgt. Cottone approached me and notified me that she was leaving the area. Later, I heard someone using an amplification device further down Crandall St. After several outbursts form down the street it was determined that Sgt. Cottone was now on Crandall St. street broadcasting from her personal vehicle at least two times. Finally, when the Mayor exited her house and entered the security teams vehicle, I observed that a motor vehicle began to follow the Mayor's vehicle at a close distance down Augustus onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq, The vehicle was, also, using a amplification device to broadcast anti Wu statements , This vehicle was the same vehicle that was parked down the street on Crandall and previously using an amplification device to broadcast ant Wu sentiments. The vehicle was identified as being owned and operated by Sgt, Shana Cottone, The incident was captured by BWC worn officers on scene .

Hi Jeanne

We are doing the interview on Wednesday, April 20 at 10:00 for Augustus Ave. The Superintendent wants the letter the attorney offered that day regarding her Carney Form and if she doesn't present a letter on April 20th she will be interviewed about Penguin Pizza and anything non-criminal she will be ordered by a LT to answer. If you could pass that on to her. Thank you

I (Sergeant O'Brien) respectfully report that on 03/14/2022, at approximately 7:15 AM, I responded to 17 Augustus Av, relative to an active protest taking place in front of the Mayor's residence. I requested Area EDT's from E-5, E18 and E13 to assist at 17 Augustus Av. Upon arrival I observed approximately six protesters with signs standing at the intersection of Crandall Street at Augustus Av. These individuals were, also, yelling their grievances towards the Mayor's residence. I further observed one (1) female banging a on container. I approached this female and advised her not to bang on the "drum". I then began to advise the protesters that they can hold signs and yell but they can no longer use amplification devices and Bull Horns, bells and whistles. I further stated that if they continued using these items that there is possibility of a criminal complaint application being sought for disturbing the peace. I further advised the protesters that no one would be arrested and no devices would be seized. Several times during my statement, Sgt. Shana Cottone interrupted me and stated her displeasure with what I stated previously about amplification devices and other noise devices. Shana Cottone then advised me and both officers and protesters on scene that my statement was unlawful and violates free speech. As time passed, several more protesters arrived on scene till there were now approximately 16. It should be noted that with the arrival of more protesters, the use of Bull Horns and whistles took place. I observed several protesters including Sgt Cottone using the "Bull Horn" when directing their grievances at the Mayor's residence. Finally, The Mayor and her husband along with their two young children exited their residence and proceeded to walk down Augustus Av onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq. Some of the protesters began to follow the Mayor and her family down the street. At this point, I directed several officers to walk with the Mayor and her family. A short way down Poplar Street, the protesters stopped following the Mayor and returned to 17 Augustus Av. At no point was there any physical contact between the Mayor, her family and the protesters. The entire incident was captured by the BWC of the Police with J201 & J416A ) A incident report was written by P.O. Daveiga.

Hi Patrick

This is another complaint issued against her where she does not have a 5th, the charges are all rule violations. We can do that interview first then move on to the next one and I will read her the questions from Penguin pizza (as instructed by my supervisors) and she can just assert her 5th again. Thanks

I, Sergeant Erin Schroeder, respectfully submit the following investigative report regarding IAD Complaint No IAD2022-0103. The following paragraphs are synopses and not verbatim accounts of the recorded interviews.

Summary of Complaint:

I respectfully report that on 03/14/2022, at approximately 7:15 AM, I responded to 17 Augustus Av, relative to an active protest taking place in front of the Mayor's residence. I requested Area EDTs from E-5, E18, and E13 to assist at 17 Augustus Av. Upon arrival I observed approximately six protesters with signs standing at the intersection of Crandall Street at Augustus Av. These individuals were, also, yelling their grievances towards the Mayor's residence. I further observed one (1) female banging on a container. I approached this female and advised her not to bang on the "drum". I then began to advise the protesters that they can hold signs and yell but they can no longer use amplification devices and Bull Horns, bells, and whistles. I further stated that if they continued using these items that there is a possibility of a criminal complaint application being sought for disturbing the peace. I further advised the protesters that no one would be arrested and no devices would be seized. Several times during my statement, Sgt. Shana Cottone interrupted me and stated her displeasure with what I stated previously about amplification devices and other noise devices. Shana Cottone then advised me and both the officers and protesters on the scene that my statement was unlawful and violates free speech. It should be noted that with the arrival of more protesters, the use of Bull Horns and whistles took place. I observed several protesters including Sgt Cottone using the "Bull Horn" when directing their grievances at the Mayor's residence. Finally, The Mayor and her husband along with their two young children exited their residence and proceeded to walk down Augustus Av onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq. A few of the protesters began to follow the Mayor and her family down the street. At this point, I directed several officers to walk with the Mayor and her family. A short way down Poplar Street, the protesters stopped following the Mayor and returned to 17 Augustus Av. At no point was there any physical contact between the Mayor, her family, and the protesters. The entire incident was captured by the BWC of the Police with J201 & J416A). An incident report was written by P.O. Daveiga.

Officer Callahan was accompanied by Union Representative Officer Pokrant. Officer Callahan was provided with a copy of the Commissioner's Memorandum #10-007, concerning truthfulness. Officer Callahan acknowledged his understanding of the document. The following is a synopsis of the recorded interview, not a verbatim account.

Officer Callahan stated he has been assigned to 17 Augustus Avenue, Roslindale many times on his day shift. He stated he looked at his BWC footage and acknowledged he was present on March 14, 2022. Officer Callahan stated he has never met Sergeant Cottone personally or professionally. He stated he only has encountered her while assigned to the Mayor's house. Officer Callahan stated he has never been addressed by any of the protesters. Officer Callahan stated that no protesters have ever been rude or disrespectful towards him. Officer Callahan stated Sergeant O'Brien has them stand opposite the protesters and keep their BWC activated at all times. Officer Callahan did remember Sergeant Cottone unfolding a lawn chair and sitting in the middle of the street on the chair. He stated he does not remember any neighbor coming outside on March 14, 2022, but acknowledged neighbors have come out in the past to complain to officers about the noise. Officer Callahan was asked if he had been more than 100 feet from the area around the Mayor's house would he have been able to hear the noise the protesters were making, to which he replied that absolutely the noise could be heard. The interview concluded at that time.

Summary of Interview:

Sergeant Stephen O'Brien

A recorded interview was conducted with Sergeant Stephen O'Brien on April 2, 2022, at the Internal Affairs Division of the Boston Police Department located on the 3rd floor of BPD Headquarters. Sergeant O'Brien was provided with a copy of the Commissioner's Memorandum #10-007, concerning truthfulness. Sergeant O'Brien acknowledged his understanding of the document. The following is a synopsis of the recorded interview, not a verbatim account.

Sergeant O'Brien stated he is assigned to the Mayor's home all four days he is the Patrol Supervisor. On March 14, 2022, Sergeant O'Brien stated that the protest started with approximately 6 protesters and was pretty quiet. He stated that after a few minutes approximately 9-10 more people showed up. Sergeant O'Brien stated he approached the crowd, Sergeant Cottone came to the front and he informed them they were not allowed to use amplification devices, whistles, or bang the "drums" they have been banging. Sergeant O'Brien stated at that time Sergeant Cottone began to interrupt him and say things like "Steve I don't think that's the law" and "I don't think he knows what he's talking about" and let the protesters know they did not have to abide by that because it isn't a law. Sergeant O'Brien stated Sergeant Cottone informed him he wasn't being honest and he was breaking the law and violating the 1st Amendment rights of the protesters. Sergeant O'Brien stated Sergeant Cottone was not overly disrespectful, in his opinion, but felt it was rude and embarrassing because they are co-workers. Sergeant O'Brien stated he informed the officers to not engage with any of the protesters who were yelling at them and asking questions about the Constitution. He stated that at one point a neighbor came down the street wearing a mask and the protesters surrounded him and began to yell at him to take off his mask. Sergeant O'Brien stated the male took off his mask and engaged in a "friendly" debate with one of the protesters he knows as Karina. Sergeant O'Brien stated he walked over to intervene but saw the male was talking politics and mandates with them so he went back to the opposite side of the street. Sergeant O'Brien stated he observed Sergeant Cottone use the bull horn 2 times. He explained the first use she was saying something out loud and another protester, Sergeant O'Brien identified as Ms. Scott, put the bullhorn in front of Sergeant Cottone's mouth. Sergeant O'Brien stated that on the second use she grabs the bullhorn and starts making statements about Mayor Wu and her mandates. I asked Sergeant O'Brien about a moment in the BWC footage where Sergeant Cottone goes to a car and gets a working bullhorn to switch out for Ms. Scott after the one she is using appears to break. Sergeant O'Brien stated he did not specifically remember that. The BWC footage shows a female protester screaming "Mayor Wu you're a cunt" while Sergeant Cottone is standing near her. I asked Sergeant O'Brien if he had any memory of that and he stated the protesters are there so often and yell profanity that all the days seem to blend into each other. Sergeant O'Brien stated the Mayor's 97-year-old neighbor comes out daily asking him to ask the protesters to stop making so much noise. Sergeant O'Brien stated the elderly neighbor has told him he is physically tired because the protesters are there so early every morning. I asked Sergeant O'Brien if a person was more than 100 feet away from the Mayor's house could they hear the protest and he stated absolutely. Sergeant O'Brien stated that when Mayor Wu and her family came out of the house to walk down Poplar Street Sergeant Cottone followed her for approximately 2 steps then broke off. Sergeant O'Brien stated that Sergeant Cottone has informed him on at least 2 occasions that she does not want to have to sue him but that it's business and not personal. The interview concluded at that point.

Summary of Interview:

Police Officer Luis Rivera

A recorded interview was conducted with Officer Rivera on April 4, 2022, at the Internal Affairs Division of the Boston Police Department located on the 3rd floor of BPD Headquarters. Officer Rivera was accompanied by Union Representative Officer Ho. Officer Rivera was provided with a copy of the Commissioner's Memorandum #10-007, concerning truthfulness. Officer Rivera acknowledged his understanding of the document. The following is a synopsis of the recorded interview, not a verbatim account.

Officer Rivera stated he is the last half wagon in area E-5. He stated he and his partner are sent to the Mayor's house almost daily. Officer Rivera stated he did remember a conversation between Sergeant Cottone and Sergeant O'Brien where she was overheard loudly telling Sergeant O'Brien that he was stepping on her 1st Amendment privileges. Officer Rivera stated he knows Sergeant Cottone professionally from working in Area E-5 for 14 years. He stated at no time during any of the protests has she said anything to him or any officers in his presence. Officer Rivera stated that when Sergeant O'Brien is on-scene he tells the officers to stand across the street from the protesters and keep their BWC activated. Officer Rivera was asked if he was more than 100 feet away from the Mayor's house did he think he would be able to hear the protest, to which he stated he did believe that he would be able. Officer Rivera stated he did remember the Mayor and her family leaving their home unannounced that morning and one of the female protesters chasing them down the street yelling on a bullhorn. The interview concluded at that time.

Summary of Interview:

Police Officer Curtis Jones

A recorded interview was conducted with Officer Jones on April 5, 2022, at the Internal Affairs Division of the Boston Police Department located on the 3rd floor of BPD Headquarters. Officer Jones acknowledged his understanding of the document. The following is a synopsis of the recorded interview, not a verbatim account.

informing the group about the noise ordinance and the use of devices, whistles, and buckets. He stated he never saw Sergeant Cottone on the bullhorn but did observe her yelling at Sergeant O'Brien. Officer Jones stated Sergeant Cottone was loud when she was yelling at Sergeant O'Brien. He stated he did not remember Sergeant Cottone in a lawn chair that particular day. He then went on to explain that he is assigned to the Mayor's house daily so some of the days seem to blend. Officer Jones stated Sergeant Cottone seems to be a leader of the group and one of the loudest and angriest when they are yelling. The interview concluded at that time.

Summary of Interview:

Police Officer Peter Giannopoulos

A recorded interview was conducted with Officer Giannopoulos on April 5, 2022, at the Internal Affairs Division of the Boston Police Department located on the 3rd floor of BPD Headquarters. Officer Giannopoulos acknowledged his understanding of the document. The following is a synopsis of the recorded interview, not a verbatim account.

Officer Giannopoulos stated he was present at the beginning of the morning on March 14, 2022. He stated he was relieved when the day shift responded to their posts at 17 Augustus Ave. Officer Giannopoulos stated he had no memory of Sergeant Cottone using a bull horn or sitting in a lawn chair in the middle of the street. The interview concluded at that time.

Officer Dasilva stated he was working the last half on March 13, 2022, into March 14, 2022, but was not at the Mayor's house after his 2:00 am-4:00 am Code 19. The interview concluded at that time.

Summary of Interview:

Sergeant Shana Cottone

Investigation:

- The following observations are from BWC footage 17_Augustus_Ave
- Immediately as the audio begins Sergeant Cottone, upon seeing all the police officers on their post, states loudly “who’s on overtime?”
- The complaint written by Sergeant O’Brien states on March 14, 2022, at approximately 07:15 am Sergeant Cottone was advised by Sergeant O’Brien about the noise ordinance regarding the use of amplification devices. A review of BWC shows Sergeant O’Brien approaching the group of 12-15 protesters (10:10 on 17_Augustus_Ave BWC footage) and attempting to explain the ordinance (Ordinance 714 section 354) and Sergeant Cottone continuously interrupting him. Sergeant Cottone can be heard stating “Steve it’s a law, law, law, not a rule you’re not being honest.” After that statement, the protesters begin to surround Sergeant O’Brien and scream at him. Sergeant Cottone can be heard in the background yelling “Wu shame on you how dare you use the police to do this. Do you know what the Constitution is?” The other protesters begin to ask the police officers if protesting is against the Constitution and what has changed since last week. Sergeant Cottone begins to yell “I’ll tell you, she changed her mind she changed her mood.”
- The BWC footage shows Sergeant O’Brien being surrounded by the protesters who are yelling at him because he will not allow them on the sidewalk in front of Mayor Wu’s house. Sergeant Cottone can be seen standing in the middle of the street not moving out of the street and heard saying “this is not good, this is not good” to Sergeant O’Brien. Sergeant Cottone is having an off-camera conversation with someone and someone asks Sergeant O’Brien why they can’t go on the sidewalk he says they aren’t allowed and Sergeant Cottone states “yes they do have a right to go on the sidewalk” which makes the protesters begin yelling louder at the officers and Sergeant O’Brien.
- The following observations are from BWC Protest_AT-17_Augustus_Ave
- At 00:39, when the audio kicks in, Sergeant Cottone is yelling the definition of an amplification device in Sergeant O’Brien’s face. This is in response to Sergeant O’Brien
- When a protester, identified as Shannon, is swearing Sergeant Cottone yells at Sergeant O’Brien “can she swear?” then tells Shannon not to swear.
- Sergeant Cottone can be heard stating “This is a lawsuit for telling us you’re going to arrest us.” Sergeant O’Brien tells her “Shana don’t lie I never said arrest” and she states, “you said criminal complaint Steve” and goes on to explain that they (protesters) would have to go to court and when they don't show up warrants will be issued. Sergeant Cottone then says "not cool dude" to Sergeant O'Brien after he explains that a criminal complaint could result based on the new ordinances. The group of protesters all begin to berate Sergeant O'Brien with someone calling him a fascist and another calling him a criminal. The group begins to say "shame on Steve."

- Sergeant Cottone can be seen talking to the group asking if the same standard was used for demonstrations in the past. The group then begins to yell about a protest from the Copley Marriott that Mayor Wu is alleged to have participated in. The group then begins to chant multiple variations of "Shame on Wu."
- At certain points Sergeant Cottone is sitting in a lawn chair she set up on Crandall Street, in the road.
- Sergeant Cottone can be seen looking at her phone and reading the ordinance out loud and saying the device must be electronic, not a bell, not a whistle, an electronic device.
- At 7:07 she addresses Sergeant O'Brien saying "it's good to know the rule and regs you know?" while making a face at Sergeant O'Brien.
- Sergeant Cottone can be heard off-camera explaining to Sergeant O'Brien that the protest is a 1st Amendment protest and the lawsuit won't be worth it. In my recorded interview with Sergeant O'Brien he addresses the fact that Sergeant Cottone has told him on a couple of occasions she doesn't want to sue him but it's business not personal.
- At 12:56 one of the protesters can be heard yelling "Go back to China" after the group is chanting "go back to Chicago" and Sergeant Cottone states "alright alright stop" which does make the woman stop saying that. In the recorded interviews Sergeant O'Brien, and other officers, stated they can see that Sergeant Cottone is the ring leader and has influence over the group.
- At 23:55 a male protester says "we need clarification on this sidewalk issue, Steve." Sergeant O'Brien is seen talking with the protester and the other protesters begin to push against the line the officers had created in front of Mayor Wu's house. Sergeant Cottone can be heard stating "taxpayers own the sidewalks, not you Wu." This prompts the protesters to begin to yell more at Sergeant O'Brien. A blonde woman can be seen sticking her cell phone in Sergeant O'Brien's face and yelling about the Constitution. Sergeant O'Brien asks the officers to have the group go back across the street. Sergeant Cottone asks Sergeant O'Brien "why are you pushing them back?" he states "to get them out of the street" and she states "you just put them in the street." She then turns and makes a face and a hand motion towards Sergeant O'Brien, which makes the group start to laugh.

- At 30:32 Sergeant Cottone can be seen and heard yelling “Hey Wu come on down girlfriend, come violate our rights in person you big tough guy.”
  - The group can be seen blocking traffic making cars wait to continue down Augustus Ave or turning onto Crandall Street. The officers on the scene have to ask numerous times for people to step out of the street.
  - At 1:18:34 Sergeant Cottone grabs the bullhorn and yells “We are not your subjects Queen Wu.”
  - At 1:22:00 a protester’s bullhorn, identified as Ms. Scott, stops working and Sergeant Cottone walks down the street to a car and comes back with a working one and switches it out.
  - At 1:30:00 Sergeant Cottone is on the bullhorn yelling for the Mayor to resign.
  - The protest and BWC footage end when Mayor Wu and her family leave the house on foot. Ms. Scott can be seen walking after the Mayor yelling at her with the bullhorn. This pursuit continues for a couple of streets.

I (Sergeant O'Brien) respectfully report that on 03/14/2022, at approximately 7:15 AM, I responded to 17 Augustus Av, relative to an active protest taking place in front of the Mayor's residence. I requested Area EDT's from E-5, E18 and E13 to assist at 17 Augustus Av. Upon arrival I observed approximately six protesters with signs standing at the intersection of Crandall Street at Augustus Av. These individuals were, also, yelling their grievances towards the Mayor's residence. I further observed one (1) female banging a on container. I approached this female and advised her not to bang on the "drum". I then began to advise the protesters that they can hold signs and yell but they can no longer use amplification devices and Bull Horns, bells and whistles. I further stated that if they continued using these items that there is possibility of a criminal complaint application being sought for disturbing the peace. I further advised the protesters that no one would be arrested and no devices would be seized. Several times during my statement, Sgt. Shana Cottone interrupted me and stated her displeasure with what I stated previously about amplification devices and other noise devivces. Shana Cottone then advised me and both officers and protesters on scene that my statement was unlawful and violates free speech. As time passed, several more protesters arrived on scene till there were now approximately 16. It should be noted that with the arrival of more protesters, the use of Bull Horns and whistles took place. I observed several protesters including Sgt Cottone using the "Bull Horn" when directing their grievances at the Mayor's residence. Finally, The Mayor and her husband along with their two young children exited their residence and proceeded to walk down Augustus Av onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq. Some of the protesters began to follow the Mayor and her family down the street. At this point, I directed several officers to walk with the Mayor and her family. A short way down Poplar Street, the protesters stopped following the Mayor and returned to 17 Augustus Av. At no point was there any physical contact between the Mayor, her family and the protesters. The entire incident was captured by the BWC of the Police with J201 & J416A ) A incident report was written by P.O. Daveiga.

I (Sergeant O'Brien) respectfully report that on 03/14/2022, at approximately 7:15 AM, I responded to 17 Augustus Av, relative to an active protest taking place in front of the Mayor's residence. I requested Area EDT's from E-5, E18 and E13 to assist at 17 Augustus Av. Upon arrival I observed approximately six protesters with signs standing at the intersection of Crandall Street at Augustus Av. These individuals were, also, yelling their grievances towards the Mayor's residence. I further observed one (1) female banging a on container. I approached this female and advised her not to bang on the "drum". I then began to advise the protesters that they can hold signs and yell but they can no longer use amplification devices and Bull Horns, bells and whistles. I further stated that if they continued using these items that there is possibility of a criminal complaint application being sought for disturbing the peace. I further advised the protesters that no one would be arrested and no devices would be seized. Several times during my statement, Sgt. Shana Cottone interrupted me and stated her displeasure with what I stated previously about amplification devices and other noise devices. Shana Cottone then advised me and both officers and protesters on scene that my statement was unlawful and violates free speech. As time passed, several more protesters arrived on scene till there were now approximately 16. It should be noted that with the arrival of more

I requested Area EDT's from E-5, E18 and E13 to assist at 17 Augustus Av. I approached this female and advised her not to bang on the "drum". I then began to advise the protesters that they can hold signs and yell but they can no longer use amplification devices and Bull Horns, bells and whistles. I further stated that if they continued using these items that there is possibility of a criminal complaint application being sought for disturbing the peace. I further advised the protesters that no one would be arrested and no devices would be seized. Several times during my statement, Sgt. Shana Cottone interrupted me and stated her displeasure with what I stated previously about amplification devices and other noise devivces. Shana Cottone then advised me and both officers and protesters on scene that my statement was unlawful and violates free speech. As time passed, several more protesters arrived on scene till there were now approximately 16. It should be noted that with the arrival of more protesters, the use of Bull Horns and whistles took place. I observed several protesters including Sgt Cottone using the "Bull Horn" when directing their grievances at the Mayor's residence. Finally, The Mayor and her husband along with their two young children exited their residence and proceeded to walk down Augustus Av onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq. Some of the protesters began to follow the Mayor and her family down the street. At this point, I directed several officers to walk with the Mayor and her family. A short way down Poplar Street, the protesters stopped following the Mayor and returned to 17 Augustus Av. At no point was there any physical contact between the Mayor, her family and the protesters. The entire incident was captured by the BWC of the Police with J201 & J416A ) A incident report was written by P.O. Daveiga.

If we have protestors show up at the Mayor's house the Patrol Supervisor will respond. Please have Area E EDT's every morning and release if no protestors show up.

PUT ON BODY CAMERAS!

The District 5 Patrol Supervisor will utilize the sound meter. There is a brand new one in the District 5 DS office. VIOLATION IS ABOVE 70 decimals. PLEASE MAKE SURE IT IS WELL ABOVE 70 decimals AND HAVE IT RECORDED ON AN OFFICERS BODY CAMERA.

The Patrol Supervisor will notify protestors with Officers present with their body cameras on and video the Patrol Supervisor give an oral warning to protestors - READ CITY ORDINANCE TARGETED PROTESTING and to not use amplified devices and if it is before 9:00 AM that it is in violation of City Ordinance 16.63 for protesting before 9:00 AM. If the protestors fail to comply with his oral warning to leave and to not use bull horns, drums etc then please have the officers with their body cameras activated, ask for the protestors identification. The COMPLAINT FORM will be FILLED OUT, City Ordinance Violation - 16.63 Targeted residential picketing and 16.26.8 - loud amplification device in public space. The Civil hearing will be at West Roxbury District Court. The Patrol Supervisor will make sure the incident report has all elements of violation and tag all body cameras and attempt to identify all suspects. We have a master list of protesters that will help with identification.

If the protestors fail to give identification then please have them on body camera decline. We will identify through previous encounters and booking photos etc.

West Roxbury Court will handle all civil complaints in Clerks Hearing and issue fines, warnings etc. We will follow the policy and guidelines of the Court and if an arrest is to be determined it will be by the Court for violations of the ordinance.

Hello All,

The Captain asked me to resend his prior email regarding morning coverage at Augustus Ave. As a reminder, the EDT's from 13 & 18 MUST be called every morning and be on scene. The PS on scene can make a determination when to release units as they see fit. Thanks...

(Bosses, the protests at the Mayor's house were quite a bit more active today with more protesters getting in the way of the Mayor's security and actively blocking the street. We needed more Officers to assist.

From today going forward we will at 6:30 AM call in the EDT's from Districts 13 and 18. That should give us 11 Officers along with a District 5 Patrol Supervisor. I have asked the Mayor's security detail to have the Mayor get into the back seat and get out quicker.

For any Sgt. working that day or the Duty Supervisor please inform any outside Sgt doing overtime and assigned to the Mayor's house that we want to actively warn the protestors to not block the street or get within arms distance of the Mayors vehicle (Safety Reasons). Failure to abide by the commands may result in arrest. Please inform all Officers assigned to this task to work together to get the Mayor out of the residence as quickly as possible. The sooner this is done then we can release District 13 and 18 EDT's.

The last thing we want is arrests but this may be our only option, Officer safety along with the Mayor and her security detail is paramount!

Any questions please call me.)

Captain,

Based on this update the PS only responds if protestors show up but the EDTs Areawide do automatically. Maybe it should be written PS is to arrive prior to 7 as they were doing before it slowed down.

Without the PS on scene prior to any protestors showing up there is no way for PS to know if protestors or EDTs showed up in real time. Could cause a long delay and your phone would blow up by the time they did. In other words, I would suggest having the PS go up before 7 and then assess.

Also, allowing the PS to release EDTs if no protestors show up leaves PS in a quandary. What time is a good time to release EDTs? 7:30 sounds good until protestors show up at 7:45 and then the proverbial phone blowing up occurs.

Maybe it should be written that areawide EDTs can be released at discretion of PS at a certain time while E5 EDTs remain until further notice. This way our numbers will be good until day tour EDTs from 13 and 18 show up.

Just some thoughts.

If we have protestors show up at the Mayor's house the Patrol Supervisor will respond. Please have Area E EDT's every morning and release if no protestors show up.

PUT ON BODY CAMERAS!

TARGETED PROTESTING 16.63 - 9:00 PM to 9:00 AM

The District 5 Patrol Supervisor will utilize the sound meter. There is a brand new one in the District 5 DS office. VIOLATION IS ABOVE 70 decibels. PLEASE MAKE SURE IT IS WELL ABOVE 70 decibels AND HAVE IT RECORDED ON AN OFFICERS BODY CAMERA.

The Patrol Supervisor will notify protestors with Officers present with their body cameras on and video the Patrol Supervisor give an oral warning to protestors - READ CITY ORDINANCE TARGETED PROTESTING and to not use amplified devices and if it is before 9:00 AM that it is in violation of City Ordinance 16.63 for protesting before 9:00 AM. If the protestors fail to comply with his oral warning to leave and to not use bull horns, drums etc then please have the officers with their body cameras activated, ask for the protestors identification. The COMPLAINT FORM will be FILLED OUT, City Ordinance Violation - 16.63 Targeted residential picketing and 16.26.8 - loud amplification device in public space. The Civil hearing will be at West Roxbury District Court. The Patrol Supervisor will make sure the incident report has all elements of violation and tag all body cameras and attempt to identify all suspects. We have a master list of protesters that will help with identification.

If the protestors fail to give identification then please have them on body camera decline. We will identify through previous encounters and booking photos etc.

West Roxbury Court will handle all civil complaints in Clerks Hearing and issue fines, warnings etc. We will follow the policy and guidelines of the Court and if an arrest is to be determined it will be by the Court for violations of the ordinance.

PLEASE POST AT E-5 DS DESK for anyone on overtime from outside the District.

Hey all,

Another question on this. My understanding from earlier this month was that nine fines had been issued to eight individuals (one person given two fines). But I just spoke with someone in the clerk's office in West Roxbury who said that the protesters had not been fined, but had been charged criminally for violating the city ordinance. Can you clarify what has happened to other protesters outside the mayor's home since the new picketing ordinance went into effect?

Thanks,

NARRATIVE

At about 7:45 AM on Monday April 25, 2022 Officer Pieroway in the E626D Unit, while on a fixed post at 17 Augustus Ave, did arrest Shannon Llewellyn DOB [REDACTED] for willful violation of City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing.

At about 7:30 AM on the above date, Officer Pieroway in the E626D, while on a fix post at 17 Augustus Ave was speaking with a known neighbor, observed 1 unidentified male and 2 unidentified females as well as the Suspect, later identified as Shannon Llewellyn DOB [REDACTED] walk towards the corner of Augustus Ave and Crandell St. The Suspect was holding 2 signs a cooking pot with a cooking utensil. Officer Pieroway then contacted the Patrol Supervisor E901 Sgt. O'Brien of the protestors.

Sgt. O'Brien then arrived on scene and handed the protestors a copy of the City of Boston Ordinance 16-63 Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing. Officer Pieroway at this time activated his body worn camera.

Sgt. O'Brien then explained the ordinance to the protestors and informed them they would be subject to arrest if they did not leave. One of the unidentified females stated she was a member of the press and was documenting the incident. The second female along with unidentified male then stated they could not get arrested and stated they were leaving. The Suspect then continued to argue with officers stating this was unconstitutional. Sgt. O'Brien then stated to the Suspect that she had five minutes to leave or she would be arrested for willful violating City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing pursuant to Mass General Law Chapter 272 Section 59. The Suspect was then given ample time to leave but she refused and began to banging the cooking utensil against the pot in a disturbing manner. Sgt. O'Brien then directed Officer Pieroway and Barboza to place the Suspect under arrest due to the Suspect knowing and willfully violating City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing.

The Suspect then put both of her arms out as Officer Pieroway and Officer Barboza (ET55) placed her into custody. Officer Barboza transported the Suspect to Area ES while Officer Pieroway followed behind. The Suspect was then transported without further incident.

Further investigation revealed the Suspect was at West Roxbury District Court on April 15, 2022 for a Clerks hearing and was advised by Clerk Magistrate Sean Murphy of the City Ordinance and MGL 272 59 (specifically of the time of 9:00AM to 9:00PM restriction in the ordinance). Also present at the hearing was Sgt. Brian Waters representing the City of Boston. It should be noted that this is the second time the Suspect has been charged with this offense.

Shannon Llewellyn is to be charged willful violation of City of Boston Ordinance 16-63, Regarding Targeted Residential Picketing in West Roxbury District Court.

The first few rows show messages from 'Stephen O'Brien' to 'Louis Madeira' with subjects related to 'BWC 17 Augustus Av'. The messages are dated 'April 12, 2022'.

Requesting the arrest report for 17 Augustus Avenue this morning -Event P #220177673

Can you also confirm:

-Is this the first protester arrested outside the mayor's home?

-How many citations have been issued at or near that address for violating the city's new targeted picketing ordinance?

Thanks,

Hey all,

Another question on this. My understanding from earlier this month was that nine fines had been issued to eight individuals (one person given two fines). But I just spoke with someone in the clerk's office in West Roxbury who said that the protesters had not been fined, but had been charged criminally for violating the city ordinance. Can you clarify what has happened to other protesters outside the mayor's home since the new picketing ordinance went into effect?

Thanks,
Emma

Hi there, any word on this arrest report? And can you confirm that this is the first arrest of a protester outside Mayor Wu's home?

I see a case filed against Shannon Llewellyn, is that the woman who was arrested this morning?

Subject: FOIA Request
Date: Saturday, April 2, 2022 3:20:12 AM

April 2, 2022

Good Morning,

I submitted a FOIA request to the Boston Mayor's Office and Boston Police Dept on March 12, 2022. The original FOIA request is included in full at the bottom of this email.

I inquired about it first on 3/23 in the email below, as the Boston FOIA site had my request marked as "complete":

Good Evening,

I'm writing in regards to the status of this FOIA request.
The site states the request is completed.
It has been 11 days today.

I greatly appreciate your assistance in this matter,
-Michelle Frigon
774-276-7618

On 3/24, I received this response:

The public records law states: The RAO must respond to requests without unreasonable delay and within ten business days.<sup>13</sup> The RAO may offer to provide records; provide a fee estimate, where applicable; or deny access to records in a manner consistent with G. L. c. 66, § 10(a-b).

Your request will receive a response by March 28th which will then be 10 business days after your original request on March 12th.
This request is also a duplicate request to B000625-031222. Please refer to this request for further communications.

Very truly yours,
Eva Scapicchio

eva.scapicchio@boston.gov
03/24/2022

On 3/28 I inquired after not receiving:

Good Afternoon,

I'd greatly appreciate any insight into why this request has not been fulfilled on the Mayor's Office end.
Much of this information would originate there.

It's been the legally noted 10 business days. Is there a reason this FOIA was marked in process and then complete, yet not completed?

Thank you for your attention,
-Michelle Frigon
774-276-7618

And the reply:

I see that a response to this request is due today. I have alerted a representative from the Boston Police Department in an effort to obtain an update on the status of your March 12, 2022 public records request. I will provide an update to you once additional information is provided to me by the department.

On 3/29 I received another reply:

Dear Michelle Frigon:

Sir:

Please have the following Sergeant report to IAD for a scheduled interview, the summary of the complaint is as follows:

On 04/01/2022, at approximately 7:15 am, protesters began arriving at the corner of Crandall and Augustus Av. The number increased to approximately 6-8 protesters. The protesters began yelling in the direction of the Mayor's house relative to the Vax Mandate and City Ordinances. These protesters were, also, waving flags and holding signs. Sgt Det. Jason Gilmore of the Mayors Security Team approached the group and advised them of the City Ordinance 16-63 regarding Targeted Residential Picketing. After advising the group of the ordinance, I (E901) provided, a copy of the CITY ORDINANCE to each protester in hand. Sgt. Cottone was present for Sgt Det Gilmore's reading of the ordinance and I handed Sgt Cottone a copy of the new city ordinance. A short time later, Sgt. Cottone approached me and notified me that she was leaving the area. Later, I heard someone using an amplification device further down Crandall St. After several outbursts from down the street it was determined that Sgt. Cottone was now on Crandall St. street broadcasting from her vehicle at least two times. Finally, when the Mayor exited her house and entered the security teams vehicle, I observed that a motor vehicle began to follow the Mayor's vehicle at a close distance down Augustus onto Poplar Street towards Roslindale Sq. The vehicle was, also, using an amplification device to broadcast anti-Wu statements, This vehicle was the same vehicle that was parked down the street on Crandall and previously using an amplification device to broadcast anti Wu sentiments. The vehicle was identified as being owned and operated by Sgt, Shana Cottone, The incident was captured by BWC worn officers on the scene.

Respectfully

Sir,

I, Sergeant Roberto Paulino, respectfully submit the following investigative report in regards to IAD complaint #IAD2022-0003. The following is a synopsis, not a verbatim account of recorded interviews. It is a summary of the investigation.

Summary of the Complaint:

The complaint reads as originally recorded:

I respectfully report, on Tuesday, January 4, 2022, at 8:06 AM I was informed by Lieutenant Michael Hegarty, the duty supervisor at District 5 that Sgt. Shana Cottone responded to a radio call as the patrol supervisor for a group protesting in front of Mayor Wu's house located at 17 Augustus Ave, Roslindale. Lieutenant Hegarty informed me Officer Anne Maher, was assigned to the mayors' house and requested a patrol supervisor to respond. I requested the radio transmissions from the Operations Division for a follow-up report because Officer Maher was informed to not activate her Boston Police issued body camera. After reviewing the audio transmissions from channel 4 and channel 7, I found Sgt. Cottone did respond via radio transmission that she was around the corner from the incident and told Officer Maher not to activate body camera because it is against the Body Worn Camera Policy of the Department.

Officer Maher should have activated her department issued body camera due to the fact it was the mayors house and the were 5 protestors in front of her house protesting against vaccine mandates. Also, another group of neighbors showed up who were counter protesting the original protestors. Sgt. Cottone also stated to Officer Maher on channel 7 that “this is what democracy looks like”.

Interview with Lieutenant Michael J. Hegarty ID# 11209:

On Wednesday, February 15, 2022, at around 10:13 AM, an audio-recorded interview was conducted with Lieutenant Michael J. Hegarty, assigned to District E5, within the office of the Internal Affairs Division, at Boston Police headquarters. Sgt. Det. Charlie Moore assisted during the interview.

Lt. Hegarty has been a sworn member of the Boston Police Department for approximately 24 years. Lt. Hegarty acknowledged working an overtime day shift on Tuesday, January 4, 2022, as the duty supervisor in District E5, and Sgt. Shana Cottone was assigned as the patrol supervisor. Lt. Hegarty explained that he assigned an Officer to a fixed post at 17 Augustus Ave. for the fact that it is Mayor Michelle Wu’s home residence. 24-hour police security is assigned to this address.

Lt. Hegarty continued to state that at one point he learned that Officer Anne Maher requested a patrol supervisor to 17 Augustus Ave. over channel 4. Lt. Hegarty explained that he was made aware that there were a few protesters at the address as well as counter-protesters. The dispatcher subsequently requested for the patrol supervisor to respond. To the best of Lt. Hegarty’s knowledge, prior to this incident, there was no additional police response to this location other than the unit regularly assigned to the fixed post.

After the patrol supervisor responded to the address, Lt. Hegarty stated that he spoke with Officer Maher to inquire about the status of the situation. Officer Maher explained that there were a couple of neighbors that were counter-protesting but everything was fine. Lt. Hegarty instructed Officer Maher to assist the mayor’s security detail. Lt. Hegarty proceeded to state that he also spoke with Sgt. Cottone, via cell phone, confirmed that everything was fine at the location, and once again reiterated to her to help the mayor’s security detail in facilitating Mayor Wu into the car safely.

Lt. Hegarty never discussed the activation of Officer Maher's body camera. However, Lt. Hegarty later informed the district commander, Captain Greeley of the event, and that Sgt. Cottone was the supervisor on the scene.

Interview with Police Officer Anne Maher, ID# 157688

On Wednesday, February 16, 2022, at around 10:45 AM, an audio-recorded interview was conducted with Officer Anne Maher. The interview was conducted within the office of the Internal Affairs Division, at Boston Police headquarters. Sgt. Det. Charles Moore assisted during the interview. Officer Maher was accompanied by Officer Michael Durant, who was acting as her union representative.

Officer Maher has been a sworn member of the Boston Police Department since 2019 and is currently assigned to District E5. Officer Maher reported working on the morning of Tuesday, January 4, 2022. Officer Maher continued to report that during the morning roll call she was informed that there were protesters at Mayor Wu's house (17 Augustus Ave.). Officer Maher, who was assigned a code 19, fixed post, observed a group of protesters upon arrival. Officer Maher recalls observing less than 10 protesters. At one point Officer Maher recalls observing a group of individuals which she perceived as residents, walking in the area. Officer Maher mentioned that these people spoke to the protesters, but was unsure if they were counter-protesters or not. Officer Maher made this observation from inside her cruiser and described the incident as verbal in nature.

Officer Maher, when asked if she has encountered protesters in the past at this address, replied by stating that she has not personally encountered protesters, but has been assigned to this location where protesters have been present in the past. Officer Maher indicated that her primary concern was the noise that the crowd was making, and subsequently called the patrol supervisor via radio. Sgt. Shana Cottone was the patrol supervisor who responded. According to Officer Maher, Sgt. Cottone instructed her not to turn on her body-worn camera because the protesters were peaceful in nature. The communication between Officer Maher and Sgt. Cottone was conducted via department radio and cell phone. Sgt. Cottone later arrived on the scene and further instructed Officer Maher to remain in her cruiser. Officer Maher could not recall whether Sgt. Cottone remained on the scene or not. In conclusion, the mayor left her house, and Officer Maher was subsequently relieved. Officer Maher finally mentioned that as a result of the incident, she wrote a form 26 as directed by Captain Greeley.

Interview with Captain Darrin Greeley, ID# 9748

On Tuesday, March 1, 2022, at around 12:03 PM, an audio-recorded interview was conducted with Captain Darrin Greeley, within the office of the Internal Affairs Division, at Boston Police headquarters. Sgt. Det. Juana Hernandez assisted during the interview.

Capt. Greeley has been a sworn member of the Boston Police Department for over 35 years and is currently the commander of district E5. Capt. Greeley reported that Lt. Michael Hegarty, Sgt. Shanna Cottone and Officer Anne Maher are all currently under his command.

Capt. Greeley explained that 17 Augustus Ave. is a two-family home, and is the residence of the Mayor of the City of Boston, Michelle Wu, who resides on the second floor, and her mother lives on the first floor. Officers are assigned to a fixed post at a mayor's residence on a 24-hour basis, traditionally for every mayor of the City of Boston according to Capt. Greeley.

On Tuesday, January 4, 2022, Capt. Greeley was working his tour of duty. Capt. Greeley continued to explain what led him to file an internal affairs complaint. Capt. Greeley reported that on Tuesday, January 4, 2022, there were protesters in front of the mayor's residence. Capt. Greeley reported that normally protesters would arrive at approximately 6:30 AM and would stay for an hour or two with loudspeakers, whistles, and bells, in turn upsetting the neighbors. These amplifying devices, which could become rather loud, were curtailed according to Capt. Greeley. This was an ongoing issue. According to Capt. Greeley, some counter-protesters were also present on the day in question.

Capt. Greeley learned about the protest when Lt. Hegarty informed him of what occurred in front of the mayor's house. Capt. Greeley also learned that Sgt. Cottone had responded to the scene. According to Capt. Greeley learned from Lt. Hegarty that Officer Maher was instructed not to turn on her body-worn camera. These instructions were concerning Capt. Greeley, as well as Sgt. Cottone's comments, "this is what democracy looks like", therefore he requested a copy of the radio transmission between Officer Maher and Sgt. Cottone. Capt. Greeley felt that it was unprofessional of Sgt. Cottone, and wanted to address it with her.

During the interview, Capt. Greeley referenced the body-worn camera policy. Capt. Greeley did acknowledge that the body-worn cameras are not activated for every incident of public protest. However, Capt. Greeley felt that this incident was different due to the fact that there were some counter-protesters present, and there was an objective to protect the mayor. Capt. Greeley described it as a public safety issue therefore the body-worn camera should have been on.

After learning what occurred at the scene, from Lt. Hegarty, and having an opportunity to listen to the radio transmission from the scene, Capt. Greeley reported that he spoke with Officer Maher and had her write a form 26. Officer Maher reported to him that Sgt. Cottone instructed her to sit in her car and not activate her body-worn camera. Capt. Greeley expressed that he did not want that to happen and wanted the body-worn cameras on. Since the incident, Capt. Greeley has made it a requirement for officers to activate their body-worn cameras. Capt. Greeley has also requested additional resources such as EDTs and a rapid. At times, up to 12 officers every day are present as the mayor is ready to depart her residence. This measure was to make sure that everyone can protest, that the mayor remains safe, and the body cameras are activated at all times.

Based on the conditions that Officer Maher was facing, Capt. Greeley felt that Officer Maher should have had her body-worn camera on. Capt. Greeley felt that duty called for it, and that it was not just a general protest, due to the fact that the mayor was the target of public displeasure as a result of the Covid-19 vaccine mandate therefore it was the duty of the police to have the body-worn cameras on. Capt. Greeley expressed that in his opinion that Sgt. Cottone was wrong when she instructed Officer Maher not to activate her body-worn camera.

During the interview, when asked if he had an opportunity to speak with Sgt. Cottone regarding the instructions, she gave to Officer Maher, Capt. Greeley initially replied that he did. Sgt. Cottone did not want to talk about it according to Capt. Greeley. Captain Greeley, immediately clarifies that he did not speak with Sgt. Cottone after reviewing his submitted form 26 and refreshing his memory (7:09 min mark of the interview).

Regarding past issues with Sgt. Cottone supervisory style in district E5, Capt. Greeley reported that he has had issues in the past with her. Capt. Greeley expressed that Sgt. Cottone has extended roll call with officers, as she discussed the vaccine mandate policy. Capt. Greeley reported that he has counseled her many times regarding political beliefs on duty. Capt. Greeley stated that he advised her to stay neutral, follow the rules and procedure, and let the unions debate the policy in court. Capt. Greeley proceeded to state that he referred her to peer support because it appeared that this matter was causing Sgt. Cottone emotional distress.

Interview with Sgt. Shana Cottone, ID# 106714

On Thursday, March 10, 2022, an audio-recorded interview was conducted with Sgt. Shana Cottone within the office of the Internal Affairs Division, at Boston Police headquarters. Lt. Henry Staines and Sgt. Det. Juana Hernandez assisted me during the interview. Sgt. Cottone was accompanied by her private attorney William Gentz, Superior Officers Federation attorney Patrick Bryant, Sgt. Jeanne Carroll and Lt. Timothy Kervin as her union representatives.

At the commencement of the interview, Lt. Staines reminded all attendees that no external recordings were permitted during the course of the interview. Sgt. Cottone is a 14-year veteran, and a sworn member of the Boston Police Department, and is currently assigned to District E5 day shift. Sgt. Cottone acknowledged working a day shift on Tuesday, January 4, 2022, as the patrol supervisor.

Sgt. Cottone continued to report her knowledge of 17 Augustus Ave. and recognized it as Mayor Michelle Wu's residence. Sgt. Cottone also stated that officers assigned to this address are on a code 19 fixed post for 2 hours at a time. On the morning in question, Sgt. Cottone mentioned that she was aware of a protest at 17 Augustus Ave. Sgt. Cottone mentioned that to the best of her knowledge, she believes this was the first protest that occurred at this location. Sgt. Cottone reported that she was first made aware of a protest by a last-half officer (Francis Garcia). Sgt. Cottone mentioned that she evaluated the situation and observed a peaceful protest consisting of about 4-5 people on the sidewalk. Sgt. Cottone ensured that Officer Garcia was not recording the protesters.

Sgt. Cottone stated that she remained in the area, monitoring, and once again was informed of a protest by Officer Maher who had relieved Officer Garcia after the last half shift. Sgt. Cottone again responded to 17 Augustus Ave., instructed Officer Maher to remain in her cruiser, monitor the situation, and if things change it will get addressed. Sgt. Cottone again stated that it was a peaceful demonstration, and felt that Officer Maher did not have to activate her body-worn camera to record the incident.

Sgt. Cottone at one point during the interview explained what she meant by the statement she transmitted over the radio, “this is what democracy looks like”. Sgt. Cottone elaborated by stating, this is what peaceful demonstrations look like, as opposed to a violent demonstration, the democratic process of getting your concerns heard in a peaceful way without breaking the law. According to Sgt. Cottone responded twice to speak with Officer Maher, observing both times a peaceful protest.

Sgt. Cottone later references Rule 405 (September 8, 2021) Body-Worn Camera Policy, Sec.1 general considerations, “The Department prohibits recording civilians based solely upon the civilian’s political or religious beliefs or upon the exercise of the civilian’s constitutional rights, including but not limited to freedom of speech, religious expression, and lawful petition and assembly.” Sgt. Cottone continued to reference Rule 405, sec. 2.2, 9, 10, when an officer shall record:

- 9, when an officer reasonably believes a crowd control incident may result in unlawful activity;
- 10, Any contact that becomes adversarial, including a Use of Force incident, when the officer has not already activated the BWC; or

Sgt. Cottone acknowledged that some neighbors (3 women exercising) did walk by the area and said something to the protesters, but felt that it did not qualify as an adversarial interaction.

After the incident occurred, Sgt. Cottone stated that she could not recall any superior supervisors approaching her regarding the event, other than possibly the captain (Captain Darrin Greeley, E5 Commander). However, Sgt. Cottone sighted blurred memory and was not able to provide further detail regarding being approached by a superior. Sgt. Cottone reported that she has read rule 405 as it has been released by the department.

Reflecting on the incident, Sgt. Cottone reported that she felt satisfied with her response due to the fact that she remained on scene to monitor. Sgt. Cottone reported multiple times that this was the first day of protest at 17 Augustus Ave, and if this was a repeated event, she would have called a different supervisor to handle it. Sgt. Cottone explained that on this day she remained on scene until the mayor left.

Sgt. Cottone at one point admitted that she has participated in a protest at 17 Augustus Ave. and reported that the one she has participated in have been conducted peacefully. Sgt. Cottone continued to state “I have no room for anything that is not peaceful, that is not how I operate.” Prior to the interview with Sgt. Cottone, a group of protesters gathered in front of 1 Schroeder Plaza around 10:00 AM. The protesters consisted of about 8-10 people and were standing on the island, on Tremont St. in front of Boston Police headquarters. The protesters, although nonviolent, created enough noise with megaphones and drums that were audible from the hallway outside of the Internal Affairs Division. Sgt. Cottone denied inviting these protesters to headquarters and explained that group size and the noise level was not comparable. Sgt. Cottone described the group in question on January 4, 2022, consisting of approximately 5 people, standing on the corner with signs. Sgt. Cottone acknowledges that the protest has morphed since the first day.

Sgt. Det Hernandez inquired with Sgt. Cottone about the second time Officer Maher reached out to her regarding the protesters at 17 Augustus Ave. Sgt. Cottone could not recall exactly why Officer Maher reached out to her. Lt. Staines inquired regarding the first time Sgt. Cottone was called to the scene, to which Sgt. Cottone explained that it was by a last half officer (Francis Garcia) past 7:00 AM. Sgt. Cottone further explained that the activity did not appear to be disturbing. Sgt. Cottone insisted that the group was engaging in first amendment protected activity, there was no interruption of traffic flow, nor interruption for pedestrians. Despite being requested to respond multiple times, Sgt. Cottone reported that the conditions of the protest did not change.

Towards the conclusion of the interview, Attorney Gentz had an opportunity to ask Sgt. Cottone some questions. Attorney Gentz, referenced the original complaint submitted by Capt. Greeley. He proceeded to question Sgt. Cottone about any stipulations in rule 405 regarding recording at the mayor's residence to which Sgt. Cottone replied "not that I recall." Attorney Gentz, again while referring to Capt. Greeley's complaint also questioned if there were any stipulations in the rule regarding recording a protest for vaccine mandates opposed to others exercising their rights of assembly. Sgt. Cottone replied, "not that I'm aware of."

Interview with Officer Francis Garcia, ID# 10955

On Tuesday, March 29, 2022, an audio-recorded interview was conducted with Officer Francis Garcia within the offices of the Internal Affairs Division at Boston Police headquarters. Sgt. Det. Juana Hernandez assisted me during the interview. Officer Garcia was accompanied by his union representative Officer Kevin Rooney.

Officer Garcia has been a sworn member of the Boston Police department for 29 years and is currently assigned to District E5, last half. Officer Garcia was working a last half tour of duty on Monday, January 3, 2021, and performed a code 19 fixed post in front of 17 Augustus Ave towards the end of his shift. 17 Augustus Ave. is the home of the mayor for the city of Boston (Michelle Wu).

Officer Garcia mentions that at around 7:00 AM he observed people gathering in front of 17 Augustus Ave. He mentions that he spoke with the group who explained to him that they were going to protest the mayor. Officer Garcia stated that he has never seen anyone protest before at this location. He expressed that he was shocked and did not expect that. Officer Garcia continued to report that he summoned a supervisor, and activated his body-worn camera.

Officer Garcia reported that the group consisted of 4-5 people, equipped with a megaphone, and were actively using it by speaking on it. Officer Garcia described the group as loud and felt that they were disturbing the peace, but no one confronted the protesters. Officer Garcia stated that he activated his body-worn camera because the event was unexpected and did not know how things were going to develop.

Sgt. Shana Cottone subsequently responded to the scene at the request of Officer Garcia over the radio. Upon Sgt. Cottone's arrival, Officer Garcia mentioned that he indicated to her that he was recording, to which Sgt. Cottone had him turn off his camera. According to Officer Garcia, Sgt. Cottone explained to him that these people have the right to protest and there is no need to record it. Sgt. Cottone remained in the area according to Officer Garcia. Officer Garcia was eventually relieved by Officer Maher at around 8:00 AM.

Summary of the Investigation

On Tuesday, January 4, 2022, Sgt. Cottone was listed on the District E5 BAT as the patrol supervisor (E913). Captain Greeley, Lt. Hegarty, and Officer Maher (E417D) were also listed as working a day tour of duty. Officer Maher was assigned to a fixed post at 17 Augustus Ave (Mayor Michelle Wu's residence) and relieved Officer Garcia.

Prior to Officer Maher relieving Officer Garcia. Officer Garcia had observed protesters in the area of 17 Augustus Ave. and called it to the attention of Sgt. Cottone. According to the Boston Police incident history, Officer Garcia was on a fixed post at the location as of 6:00 AM. A review of Officer Garcia's body-worn camera history revealed 3 minute and 51 seconds video of the protest in front of Mayor Wu's home that immediately concluded upon Sgt. Cottone's arrival. The video displayed a small group consisting of 4-5 people, holding signs, megaphones in possession, activating a siren (T12:24:51z) chanting "Wu has no heart." Sgt. Cottone instructed Officer Francis to shut his camera off because it was a protest towards the end of the video (T12:28:12Z). During Sgt. Cottone's audio-recorded interview, she mentioned no laws being broken, no violence or disorder. Therefore, she ensured that Officer Francis was not capturing video of the protest (4:15 mark of the audio recorded interview with Sgt. Cottone). Officer Francis was later relieved by Officer Maher at around 7:44 AM. The pedestrians did not appear to interrupt the flow of pedestrians or motor vehicle traffic.

Officer Maher reported on her 1.1 police report (I#222000673) observing a group of 5 individuals standing at the corner of Augustus Ave. and Crandall St. Officer Maher mentioned in her report that the group held signs and were in possession of 3 bullhorns. She continued to mention in the report that Sgt. Cottone was previously made aware of the group's presence. At one point a separate group of 3 individuals approached the protesters and displayed their middle finger before departing the area. When a resident of 17 Augustus Ave. exited the home, the protesters activated the siren feature of the bullhorn. The protest never turned violent, and Officer Maher was later instructed to complete a 1.1 report per order of Lt. Hegarty (EA02).

Officer Maher also wrote a form 26 further documenting the incident. Again, Officer Maher mentions the protest at 17 Augustus Ave. Officer Maher mentions that the signage held by the protesters made reference to the COVID-19 vaccine and that the group had 3 bullhorns (megaphones). Officer Maher mentions in her form 26 that the 3 individuals who displayed the middle finger to the protesters, did engage in a verbal altercation, therefore Sgt. Cottone was once again updated on the incident. Sgt. Cottone advised Officer Maher to stay in the cruiser and not activate her body-worn camera unless the protest turned violent. When Mayor Wu stepped out of her home at around 8:00 AM, the group activated the siren features of the bullhorn. Officer Maher reports notifying Sgt. Cottone and once again was instructed to remain in her cruiser. According to Officer Maher's form 26, Sgt. Cottone subsequently responded to the scene, however, Mayor Wu had already departed, and the group began to disperse. Officer Maier was later relieved at 9:30 AM (9:28 AM per the incident history) and notified Lt. Hegarty of what had transpired.

Lt. Hegarty reported on his form 26, that at approximately 8:00 AM he notified Captain Greeley of the protest at Mayor Wu's residence. He also informed the captain that Sgt. Cottone was the patrol supervisor and responded to the scene. Lt. Hegarty, during the interview, stated that he did not recall prior incidents at 17 Augustus Ave. that required a police response other than the regular fixed post (Code 19). Lt. Hegarty did advise both Sgt. Cottone and Officer Maher to assist that mayor's security detail while on scene. Lt. Hegarty never discussed the activation of the body-worn camera with Officer Maher.

Captain Greeley, the complainant, submitted a form 26 as a result of this investigation. Captain Greeley reported in his form 26 that on the day in question at around 8:06 AM he learned from Lt. Hegarty that Sgt. Cottone, upon the request of Officer Maher, had responded to 17 Augustus Ave. due to a protest. Captain Greeley requested the radio transmission from the Operations Division for a follow-up report and discovered that Sgt. Cottone did instruct Officer Maher not to activate her body camera because it was against the Body-Worn Camera Policy of the department.

Operations Transmission:

- Sgt. Cottone to operations: "yes sir, this is a very peaceful group here exercising their rights... you can give it a 14 Paul if you even opened a ticket on it."
- Operations: "Ok, I have it thank you."

Sgt. Cottone later goes to channel 7 and speaks with Officer Maher who reports the following:

- Officer Maher: "Good morning Serg, we have a group of local residents that are coming out with a counter stance to the group of individuals that are here now, just wanted to give you a heads up"
- Sgt. Cottone: "Yup, I'm at the bottom of Augustus and Poplar, I'll swing around and take a look but nope, this is what democracy looks like."
- Officer Maher: "Yeah it looks like they are actually moving along now, just wanted to give you a heads up"
- Sgt. Cottone: "Alright, I'll swing by anyways, just ah, per rules and regs, remember we don't ah, body camera, ah record any ah protest demonstrations unless they, we have a reason such as you know violence or something that is necessary for recording, ok."
- Officer Maher: "Ok, I have that".

Sgt. Cottone was not present in real-time to observe the activity of the counter-protesters that Officer Maher was making her aware of. These counter-protesters, according to Officer Maher, did showcase their middle fingers and engaged in a verbal exchange.

Captain Greeley cited in his form 26, rule 405, Body-Worn Camera Policy section 2.2, highlighting bullet points 3 and 9. He continued to reiterate that Officer Maher should have activated her body-worn camera due to the fact that it was the mayor's house and that there were 5 protesters in front of her house protesting against vaccine mandates. Captain Greeley also mentioned the fact that neighbors were also present as counter-protestors.

During the interview Capt. Greeley expressed that the instructions that Sgt. Cottone gave Officer Maher was concerning, and felt that her comment “this is what democracy looks like” was unprofessional. Capt. Greeley did acknowledge that although the body-worn cameras are not activated for every incident, this particular event was different due to the fact that there were counter-protesters and the objective was to protect the mayor. It was a public safety issue according to Capt. Greeley. Therefore, since the incident on January 4, 2022, he has made it a requirement for officers to activate their body-worn cameras during those events. Captain Greeley concluded the interview by stating that he has counseled Sgt. Cottone regarding her political views on duty, and extending roll calls to discuss the vaccine mandates. He advised her to let the unions handle the matter, stay neutral, and follow the rules. Capt. Greeley also mentioned referring her to the Peer Support Unit because the subject appears to cause Sgt. Cottone emotional stress.

During the interview Sgt. Cottone revealed that she first learned about the protest from Officer Garcia who was the last officer on the last half, and who was subsequently relieved by Officer Maher. Officer Garcia did record a portion of the event with his body-worn camera, until Sgt. Cottone’s arrival instructed Officer Garcia to seize the recording. Sgt. Cottone evaluated the situation and described the protest (consisting of 4-5 people) as peaceful. Sgt. Cottone, who remained in the area, was once again notified of the protester by Officer Maher. Officer Maher (as captured in the radio transmission) informed Sgt. Cottone of counter-protesters on scene. Which Sgt. Cottone during the interview expressed that she felt that the neighbors/counter-protest did not equate to an adversarial interaction. Sgt. Cottone reference rule 405 sec. 1, and sec. 2.2 bullets 9 and 10 as her guidance.

After the incident Sgt. Cottone cited blur memory regarding whether a superior officer (Capt. Greeley) approached her concerning the event. She later admitted to having participated in a protest in front of the mayor’s house and denied inviting protesters on the day of her IAD interview (March 10, 2022), which ultimately altered the meeting from the conference room to the IAD locker room due to the noise from the protesters in front of 1 Schroeder Plaza. The protesters in front of 1 Schroeder Plaza were peaceful and ceased their protest around the time Sgt. Cottone’s IAD interviews were concluded. Sgt. Cottone reported that despite responding to 17 Augustus Ave. multiple times the conditions of the protest did not change and remained peaceful.

Captain Greeley ultimately filed an IAD complaint.

Two Boston Police officers to receive Schroeder Brother Memorial Medal, a medal in honor of two officers slain in 1970s

Schroeder descendants toured Boston Police HQ ahead of ceremony

Boston Police headquarters sits at 1 Schroeder Plaza, named in honor of two Boston Police brothers who died three years apart in the 1970s while responding to robberies.

On Sunday, Boston Police officers William Hull and Mark Whalen will be honored with the Schroeder Brother Memorial Medal in the 150th Boston Police Relief Organization's Awards Ball. The pair also received the Trooper George Hanna Memorial Award, the state's highest law enforcement honor for bravery, in a ceremony last year, according to the Boston Police Patrolmen's Association.

On Feb. 22, 2019, Whalen and Hull were checking on a man slumped over in a minivan, which they found out had a recent conviction for unlawful possession of a firearm. When they questioned him, according to a release from the governor's office, he shot at them. Whalen was shot in the right hand and forearm and the suspect died after crashing into a parked vehicle several blocks away.

On Saturday, descendants of the great-grandchildren of one of the Schroeder brothers, John, visited the inside of HQ for the first time a day ahead of the ball, where the award is handed out yearly by John's grandchildren Amy Mulrenan, of Winchester, and Beth Schroeder, of Agawam.

"The Schroeder medal is the highest medal they give out, so it's truly an honor to us and our kids to come every year to do this," Beth Schroeder said as she and her sister stood in front of the HQ memorial wall.

On Sept. 23, 1970, Patrolman Walter Schroeder, 42, lay in critical condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston "by a bullet fired into his back by bandits fleeing from a $26,000 holdup" at a Brighton bank, the Herald reported the next morning.

"Gunplay was a subject he never cared to discuss" the family of the recipient of four commendations for bravery told the Herald as they waited for news as Walter underwent surgery and Bostonians rushed to donate blood in an effort to save his life. He died that day.

Detective John Schroeder, 55, “was shot to death in cold blood shortly before noon” Nov. 30, 1973 “while attempting to thwart three armed men during the holdup of a Roxbury pawn shop,” the Herald reported.

John, a 24-year member of the police department, had been at the pawn shop conducting a background check when the gunmen entered, the paper reported. He ordered the men to stand down but was shot in the temple.

“As Schroeder lay mortally wounded on the floor, his blood staining a wide area, the bandits proceeded with the robbery,” the paper wrote, adding they even stole John’s service revolver.

Police work lives on in the family, sisters Amy and Beth said, with at least one of Walter’s grandsons, Paul, serving as a police officer, and John’s first grandson, Chris, serving out in Utah.

There may be yet another generation, as Beth’s son Rhein Ingham, 15, said he’d like to be a police officer.

“It’s a big honor,” he said. “I want to live up to the name.”

Gravestone stolen in Boston as advocates fear escalation in gang dispute

A stolen gravestone has reinvigorated a rivalry between two Mission Hill-area gangs, according to police and community sources, worrying advocates about potentially escalating violence in a city that’s otherwise largely been able to avoid recent surges.

The Heath Street and the Annunciation Street gangs, which both have a history of violence, are taking issue with each other. The venues right now, oddly, are the internet and graveyards, with competing posts, according to community sources, circulating on social media of people kicking over gravestones in Boston cemeteries, and one headstone actually being stolen.

Here’s the background, according to a police source and community sources: The Heath Street gang is thought to have knocked over a gravestone of an Annunciation Road gangmember recently. Then, some Annunciation-affiliated people went to the Oak Lawn Cemetery along Cummins Highway and knocked over the gravestone of Gerrod Brown Jr., a local teenager who was shot to death in 2017 — and then carried it off.

The gravestone ended up in the first block of Annunciation Road, in the Alice Taylor public housing complex on the Roxbury-Mission Hill border behind Boston Police headquarters. That’s where cops found it, according to a police report that the department provided to the Herald when asked about the gravestone incident.

The report provides a few more details about the theft, reported this past Tuesday. On that day, someone — police redacted the name, as is common for them to do for witnesses — called the cops and said she’d seen photos from social media of Brown’s gravestone somewhere in Mission Hill. So, she said, she’d headed down to the Oak Lawn Cemetery, according to the report — and found that the headstone was in fact gone.

When the officers on scene called it in, the police Youth Violence Strike Force let them know they’d found the headstone, picking it up on Annunciation Road.

“Due to the cemetery facilities being closed and ongoing issues involving the theft of the head stone and other instances of vandalism inside the cemetery, the decision was made to transport the head stone to Dist. 18 where it was placed in the wagon bay for safekeeping,” police wrote, referring to the E-18 precinct in Hyde Park. The cops checked off the box on police reports that suggests the incident is gang-related.

Matt Parker of the Union of Minority Neighborhoods said, “This is just something that can escalate so easily.”

“We need cooler heads, mentorship and availability of services” to try to disrupt these cycles of violence, he added.

The 16-year-old Brown’s slaying, on Halloween night in 2017, has long been tied to gang violence. A crackdown of the Heath Street gang the following year mentioned that killing as feds arrested multiple alleged gangmembers in the Jamaica Plain Mildred C. Hailey public housing complex — formerly Bromley-Heath, the home of the Heath Street gang, just under a mile as the crow flies from Annunciation Road.

Cops at the time said Brown was a bystander to a fight between two groups that escalated into a shooting.

Domingos DaRosa, another longtime youth activist who coached Brown in Pop Warner football and spoke at his funeral, told the Herald he was a good kid who other young people looked up to. He first met Brown when the young man brought over a group of kids and asked if they all could be on DaRosa’s team, even though they weren’t technically in the right area — the kids were looking for something positive to do with their free time, so the answer was yes.

That’s what makes Brown’s killing doubly tragic, in DaRosa’s estimation. A young man was slain, but also a peer pillar of his friends’ lives was gone, likely bringing some of the other kids back into the arms of the streets, answering violence with violence that begets more violence.

“Kids keep inheriting street drama,” DaRosa said, adding that the city and its school district have to do a better job in supporting kids and equipping them in how to deal with life. “Now it’s two groups of young people who are knee deep in all this.”

Asked about the gang conflict, Mayor Michelle Wu’s administration said, “The City is taking an intensive approach across departments to end and prevent violence in our neighborhoods. Our thoughts are with the families touched by these traumatic acts, and we will continue to work relentlessly to support youth development, safe streets, and violence intervention across our agencies.”

Boston is largely alone among big cities in having avoided major surges of violence over the past couple of years. The police department counted five homicides as the start of the week. That’s down from 10 at that point last year and from the five-year average of 16, though the number of shootings this year as compared to last is about the same.

DaRosa said he hopes the powers that be figure out how to short-circuit the simmering gang conflict, but he’s not optimistic.

“It’s only going to get worse, and it’s going to involve a lot of younger people,” DaRosa predicted. “This summer is going to be on fire.”

Police responded to a call for assistance at 11:05 p.m. on 17 Abbot St. and found the woman with her leg pinned under her car, police said in a statement.

Officers used a car jack from their cruiser to lift the car off the woman's leg so she could be pulled from underneath, the statement said.

She was then transported to a local hospital to be treated, police said

The woman's car had rolled forward and pinned her leg underneath after she had gotten out of the car, police said.

Ramón man shot by Boston police arraigned from hospital bed for allegedly firing at officers

A Ramón man shot by Boston police after he allegedly fired at them early Thursday was arraigned from his hospital bed Friday on charges stemming from the case.

Jeff Anilus, 31, appeared remotely in West Roxbury Municipal Court from his bed at Brigham and Women's Hospital. A not guilty plea was entered for him on two counts each of assault to murder and assault with a dangerous weapon, as well as sole counts of possession of a firearm without an FID card, possession of ammunition without an FID card, operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, and failing to stop for police.

Anilus was ordered held without bail pending a dangerousness hearing April 6.

Judge John E. Garland noted during the brief arraignment Friday that Anilus has had difficulty communicating with his court-appointed lawyer, Francis X. Sacco.

"He's in a medical condition that doesn't allow him to communicate directly with you," Garland said to Sacco from the bench, referring to Anilus. "However, I'll note for the record that you did say that you were able to communicate with Mr. Anilus by him nodding his head or shaking his head."

Sacco also addressed his client's medical condition during the hearing.

"As I stated, he wasn't able to talk," Sacco said. "It does seem that he's still heavily medicated as a result of his injuries."

No details of the case were discussed during Friday's hearing.

Officers shot Anilus following a foot pursuit into the wooded area around the Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain, according to Boston police Superintendent-in-Chief and acting Police Commissioner Gregory Long.

Shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday, police attempted to pull over a vehicle near the hospital on Morton Street, Long said previously.

Officers followed the car until it crashed near the hospital entrance, where Anilus got out and ran into the woods, officials have said. The officers then called for reinforcements, and began pursuing Anilus through the trees as additional officers flooded the area.

During the chase, Anilus allegedly turned and fired a gun at the officers, Long said, at which point "several officers" fired back, "striking the suspect multiple times" and severely wounding him.

The confrontation is the first time a Boston police officer has shot a suspect this year, according to police spokesman Sergeant Detective John Boyle. None of the officers were struck by gunfire, he said.

Demonstrators fined near Wu's home after new protest restrictions take effect

One day after Mayor Michelle Wu signed a controversial proposal that curtailed the hours protesters could target a private home, five demonstrators were fined near Wu's Roslindale home for violating the new rules.

Wu signed the city ordinance into law on Thursday, a day after the Boston City Council approved it. Wu, who was sworn in in November, introduced the hotly debated proposal following months of near daily anti-vaccination protests outside the two-family house she shares with her husband, two children, and mother.

The new rule bars demonstrations at any private home between 9 p.m. and 9 a.m. Previously, Boston's restrictions on noise effectively restricted demonstrators from loud protests before 7 a.m. or after 11 p.m.

Boston police confirmed that five people were fined for violating the new ordinance at about 7:30 a.m. Friday.

Under the new rules, there are fines of $50 for a first offense, $150 for a second offense within a 12-month period, and $300 for a third and subsequent offenses. The fine structure resets after 12 months. According to the city, the ordinance does not affect marches or protests passing through residential areas, just demonstrations that are directed at individual residences or residents. It applies to any residence, not just the homes of elected officials.

One of those who have protested outside Wu's home, Catherine Vitale, said in a Friday statement that police found out the ordinance was in effect moments before they notified protesters they were in violation of the new rules.

"Therefore it is impossible for protesters to have known the unconstitutional ordinance was in effect, too," she said.

The protesters, she said, "have retained an attorney and will be suing Mayor Wu yet again."

Wu has framed the consistent, early-morning ruckus as harassment, a feeling many of her neighbors in the usually quiet part of the city share. But critics of the new rules, including several who routinely picket outside the mayor's home, say the restrictions would unfairly curb First Amendment rights.

Wu has argued the ordinance would preserve peace and quiet without infringing on protesters' right to demonstrate. In an earlier letter to the council, her legal team asserted that the ordinance "will be in conformance with law."

Some city councilors raised concerns over the proposal. Councilor Frank Baker, who opposed the measure, said it was a direct response to demonstrations targeting Wu and worried that the city was infringing on First Amendment rights. Another councilor who voted against it, Kendra Lara, said in a statement that the ordinance "could have unintended consequences for marginalized communities who use protest and direct action as a tactic to secure rights for themselves and resources for their community,"

For weeks, a small group of protesters who opposed Wu's COVID-19 vaccine requirement for city workers gathered outside her home, banging drums, blowing whistles, and shouting starting at 7 a.m. Wu has said she tries not to take the protests personally, but laments the disruption for her neighbors and family.

Some of the pushback to Wu's attempts at a vaccination mandate for the city workforce has been racist and misogynistic. Wu became the first woman and first person of color elected mayor of Boston last fall.

The battle over the workforce vaccination mandate has also spilled into the courts, with her administration in February appealing a court ruling that blocked enforcement of the requirement for a trio of public safety unions.

Mass. high court places limits on police access to cellphone data

The state's highest court on Friday for the first time extended privacy protections to "tower dumps" of cellphone data, requiring police to get a search warrant for the novel technique, which was used by Boston police to pinpoint two men out of 50,000 people as suspects in a 2018 Boston murder and several robberies.

The Supreme Judicial Court said in a unanimous opinion it was responding to 21st-century technology that has "resulted in a quantity and quality of surveillance that never could have been imagined, let alone realized, at the time of the founding."

Writing for the court, Justice Frank M. Gaziano said cellphone technology used in the Boston area can allow police to track thousands of individuals "precisely, down to the specific floor of a particular building." Like privacy rights for an individual inside their home, cellphone data must now be shielded from unfettered intrusion by law enforcement, the court concluded.

Gaziano noted that using the tower dumps — the sharing of identifying information by a cell tower operator — "investigators were able to compile and catalogue the locations of more than 50,000 individuals at varying points over more than one month, without any one of them ever knowing that he or she was the target of police surveillance."

"Privacy in one's associations, whether political, religious, or simply amicable, plays a crucial role in maintaining our democracy, and therefore is protected" under Article 14 of the state constitution, he wrote. "Providing law enforcement with such personal information is of particular concern because it risks chilling the associational and expressive freedoms that our State and Federal Constitutions strive to protect."

The ruling stems from the pending Suffolk Superior Court prosecution of Jerron J. Perry for the Oct. 6, 2018, slaying of 62-year-old Jose Luis Williams. Williams was working at the Fabian Gas Station on Washington Street in Dorchester when he was killed by a single shot from a .45-caliber handgun, records show.

Perry is also charged with committing five armed robberies in Boston, Cambridge, and Canton in September and October 2018. A codefendant, Gregory H. Williams III, is charged with being an accessory to Williams's murder — and five counts of armed robbery, records show.

Both men have pleaded not guilty and are being held without bail, records show.

Victims of the robberies provided broadly similar descriptions of the robber, the gun used, and the getaway car sometimes used, according to the SJC. But the two men were not linked to the crimes — or each other — until the FBI and Boston police collected data through seven tower dumps around the dates and times of the crimes, the SJC said.

Tower dumps "provided investigators with highly personal and previously unknowable details" of Perry's life," Gaziano wrote. "An owner's location and associations are tied to his or her telephone number and unique identifier, which, here, were used to discern the defendant's identity and that of his suspected accomplice."

The SJC said that some of the data seized by police cannot be used against Perry. "The Commonwealth's use of the seven tower dumps intruded upon the defendant's reasonable expectation of privacy," Gaziano wrote.

Perry's defense attorney, Eric Tennen, said Friday that he was reviewing the 51-page ruling to determine the precise impact the court's decision will have on the case.

Suffolk District Attorney Kevin R. Hayden said the SJC ruling would not impact the prosecution of the two men.

"Criminal investigations, as with all aspects of modern life, are affected by constant advancements in technology," Hayden said in a statement. The SJC decision "brings clarity to how law enforcement agencies can go about collecting technological evidence they deem important to an investigation. We welcome that clarity."

In its decision, the SJC issued new, stricter rules police must follow before they can conduct tower dumps. Police must get a search warrant justifying their request for information on thousands of people who have no idea their data is being examined by police and have no tie to the crime being investigated.

Search warrants can be approved by a clerk magistrate or a judge — but not for tower dumps. For tower dumps, only a judge can approve the warrant. Moreover, the SJC said, police must also spell out how they will delete data collected from the thousands of people who weren't involved in the crime.

The court said its ruling is not retroactive.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the ACLU of Massachusetts, the Electronic Frontier Foundation, Massachusetts Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, and the Committee for Public Counsel Services submitted a joint amicus brief to the SJC.

"This is a groundbreaking decision that provides crucial privacy protections for people in Massachusetts," Jessie Rossman, managing attorney at the ACLU of Massachusetts, said in a statement. "The message is clear: If the police use tower dumps over multiple days to identify someone they believe to have committed crimes, they must first get a warrant, and they must promptly discard any data they acquire from those tower dumps about people other than the target."

Two Boston Police officers to receive Schroeder Brother Memorial Medal, a medal in honor of two officers slain in 1970s

Schroeder descendants toured Boston Police HQ ahead of ceremony

Boston Police headquarters sits at 1 Schroeder Plaza, named in honor of two Boston Police brothers who died three years apart in the 1970s while responding to robberies.

On Sunday, Boston Police officers William Hull and Mark Whalen will be honored with the Schroeder Brother Memorial Medal in the 150th Boston Police Relief Organization's Awards Ball. The pair also received the Trooper George Hanna Memorial Award, the state's highest law enforcement honor for bravery, in a ceremony last year, according to the Boston Police Patrolmen's Association.

On Feb. 22, 2019, Whalen and Hull were checking on a man slumped over in a minivan, which they found out had a recent conviction for unlawful possession of a firearm. When they questioned him, according to a release from the governor's office, he shot at them. Whalen was shot in the right hand and forearm and the suspect died after crashing into a parked vehicle several blocks away.

On Saturday, descendants of the great-grandchildren of one of the Schroeder brothers, John, visited the inside of HQ for the first time a day ahead of the ball, where the award is handed out yearly by John's grandchildren Amy Mulrenan, of Winchester, and Beth Schroeder, of Agawam.

"The Schroeder medal is the highest medal they give out, so it's truly an honor to us and our kids to come every year to do this," Beth Schroeder said as she and her sister stood in front of the HQ memorial wall.

On Sept. 23, 1970, Patrolman Walter Schroeder, 42, lay in critical condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston "by a bullet fired into his back by bandits fleeing from a $26,000 holdup" at a Brighton bank, the Herald reported the next morning.

"Gunplay was a subject he never cared to discuss" the family of the recipient of four commendations for bravery told the Herald as they waited for news as Walter underwent surgery and Bostonians rushed to donate blood in an effort to save his life. He died that day.

Detective John Schroeder, 55, "was shot to death in cold blood shortly before noon" Nov. 30, 1973 "while attempting to thwart three armed men during the holdup of a Roxbury pawn shop," the Herald reported.

John, a 24-year member of the police department, had been at the pawn shop conducting a background check when the gunmen entered, the paper reported. He ordered the men to stand down but was shot in the temple.

"As Schroeder lay mortally wounded on the floor, his blood staining a wide area, the bandits proceeded with the robbery," the paper wrote, adding they even stole John's service revolver.

Police work lives on in the family, sisters Amy and Beth said, with at least one of Walter's grandsons, Paul, serving as a police officer, and John's first grandson, Chris, serving out in Utah.

There may be yet another generation, as Beth's son Rhein Ingham, 15, said he'd like to be a police officer.

"It's a big honor," he said. "I want to live up to the name."

Gravestone stolen in Boston as advocates fear escalation in gang dispute

A stolen gravestone has reinvigorated a rivalry between two Mission Hill-area gangs, according to police and community sources, worrying advocates about potentially escalating violence in a city that's otherwise largely been able to avoid recent surges.

The Heath Street and the Annunciation Street gangs, which both have a history of violence, are taking issue with each other. The venues right now, oddly, are the internet and graveyards, with competing posts, according to community sources, circulating on social media of people kicking over gravestones in Boston cemeteries, and one headstone actually being stolen.

Here's the background, according to a police source and community sources: The Heath Street gang is thought to have knocked over a gravestone of an Annunciation Road gangmember recently. Then, some Annunciation-affiliated people went to the Oak Lawn Cemetery along Cummins Highway and knocked over the gravestone of Gerrod Brown Jr., a local teenager who was shot to death in 2017 — and then carried it off.

The gravestone ended up in the first block of Annunciation Road, in the Alice Taylor public housing complex on the Roxbury-Mission Hill border behind Boston Police headquarters. That's where cops found it, according to a police report that the department provided to the Herald when asked about the gravestone incident.

The report provides a few more details about the theft, reported this past Tuesday. On that day, someone — police redacted the name, as is common for them to do for witnesses — called the cops and said she'd seen photos from social media of Brown's gravestone somewhere in Mission Hill. So, she said, she'd headed down to the Oak Lawn Cemetery, according to the report — and found that the headstone was in fact gone.

When the officers on scene called it in, the police Youth Violence Strike Force let them know they'd found the headstone, picking it up on Annunciation Road.

"Due to the cemetery facilities being closed and ongoing issues involving the theft of the head stone and other instances of vandalism inside the cemetery, the decision was made to transport the head stone to Dist. 18 where it was placed in the wagon bay for safekeeping,” police wrote, referring to the E-18 precinct in Hyde Park. The cops checked off the box on police reports that suggests the incident is gang-related.

Matt Parker of the Union of Minority Neighborhoods said, “This is just something that can escalate so easily.”

“We need cooler heads, mentorship and availability of services” to try to disrupt these cycles of violence, he added.

The 16-year-old Brown’s slaying, on Halloween night in 2017, has long been tied to gang violence. A crackdown of the Heath Street gang the following year mentioned that killing as feds arrested multiple alleged gangmembers in the Jamaica Plain Mildred C. Hailey public housing complex — formerly Bromley-Heath, the home of the Heath Street gang, just under a mile as the crow flies from Annunciation Road.

Cops at the time said Brown was a bystander to a fight between two groups that escalated into a shooting.

Domingos DaRosa, another longtime youth activist who coached Brown in Pop Warner football and spoke at his funeral, told the Herald he was a good kid who other young people looked up to. He first met Brown when the young man brought over a group of kids and asked if they all could be on DaRosa’s team, even though they weren’t technically in the right area — the kids were looking for something positive to do with their free time, so the answer was yes.

That’s what makes Brown’s killing doubly tragic, in DaRosa’s estimation. A young man was slain, but also a peer pillar of his friends’ lives was gone, likely bringing some of the other kids back into the arms of the streets, answering violence with violence that begets more violence.

“Kids keep inheriting street drama,” DaRosa said, adding that the city and its school district have to do a better job in supporting kids and equipping them in how to deal with life. “Now it’s two groups of young people who are knee deep in all this.”

Asked about the gang conflict, Mayor Michelle Wu’s administration said, “The City is taking an intensive approach across departments to end and prevent violence in our neighborhoods. Our thoughts are with the families touched by these traumatic acts, and we will continue to work relentlessly to support youth development, safe streets, and violence intervention across our agencies.”

Boston is largely alone among big cities in having avoided major surges of violence over the past couple of years. The police department counted five homicides as the start of the week. That’s down from 10 at that point last year and from the five-year average of 16, though the number of shootings this year as compared to last is about the same.

DaRosa said he hopes the powers that be figure out how to short-circuit the simmering gang conflict, but he’s not optimistic.

“It’s only going to get worse, and it’s going to involve a lot of younger people,” DaRosa predicted. “This summer is going to be on fire.”

Randolph man shot by Boston police arraigned from hospital

bed for allegedly firing at officers

A Randolph man shot by Boston police after he allegedly fired at them early Thursday was arraigned from his hospital bed Friday on charges stemming from the case.

Jeff Anilus, 31, appeared remotely in West Roxbury Municipal Court from his bed at Brigham and Women's Hospital. A not guilty plea was entered for him on two counts each of assault to murder and assault with a dangerous weapon, as well as sole counts of possession of a firearm without an FID card, possession of ammunition without an FID card, operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, and failing to stop for police.

Anilus was ordered held without bail pending a dangerousness hearing April 6.

Judge John E. Garland noted during the brief arraignment Friday that Anilus has had difficulty communicating with his court-appointed lawyer, Francis X. Sacco.

"He's in a medical condition that doesn't allow him to communicate directly with you," Garland said to Sacco from the bench, referring to Anilus. "However, I'll note for the record that you did say that you were able to communicate with Mr. Anilus by him nodding his head or shaking his head."

Sacco also addressed his client's medical condition during the hearing.

"As I stated, he wasn't able to talk," Sacco said. "It does seem that he's still heavily medicated as a result of his injuries."

No details of the case were discussed during Friday's hearing.

Officers shot Anilus following a foot pursuit into the wooded area around the Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain, according to Boston police Superintendent-in-Chief and acting Police Commissioner Gregory Long.

Shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday, police attempted to pull over a vehicle near the hospital on Morton Street, Long said previously.

Officers followed the car until it crashed near the hospital entrance, where Anilus got out and ran into the woods, officials have said. The officers then called for reinforcements, and began pursuing Anilus through the trees as additional officers flooded the area.

During the chase, Anilus allegedly turned and fired a gun at the officers, Long said, at which point "several officers" fired back, "striking the suspect multiple times" and severely wounding him.

The confrontation is the first time a Boston police officer has shot a suspect this year, according to police spokesman Sergeant Detective John Boyle. None of the officers were struck by gunfire, he said.

Demonstrators fined near Wu's home after new protest restrictions take effect

One day after Mayor Michelle Wu signed a controversial proposal that curtailed the hours protesters could target a private home, five demonstrators were fined near Wu's Roslindale home for violating the new rules.

Wu signed the city ordinance into law on Thursday, a day after the Boston City Council approved it. Wu, who was sworn in in November, introduced the hotly debated proposal following months of near daily anti-vaccination protests outside the two-family house she shares with her husband, two children, and mother.

The new rule bars demonstrations at any private home between 9 p.m. and 9 a.m. Previously, Boston's restrictions on noise effectively restricted demonstrators from loud protests before 7 a.m. or after 11 p.m.

Boston police confirmed that five people were fined for violating the new ordinance at about 7:30 a.m. Friday.

Under the new rules, there are fines of $50 for a first offense, $150 for a second offense within a 12-month period, and $300 for a third and subsequent offenses. The fine structure resets after 12 months. According to the city, the ordinance does not affect marches or protests passing through residential areas, just demonstrations that are directed at individual residences or residents. It applies to any residence, not just the homes of elected officials.

One of those who have protested outside Wu's home, Catherine Vitale, said in a Friday statement that police found out the ordinance was in effect moments before they notified protesters they were in violation of the new rules.

"Therefore it is impossible for protesters to have known the unconstitutional ordinance was in effect, too," she said.

The protesters, she said, "have retained an attorney and will be suing Mayor Wu yet again."

Wu has framed the consistent, early-morning ruckus as harassment, a feeling many of her neighbors in the usually quiet part of the city share. But critics of the new rules, including several who routinely picket outside the mayor's home, say the restrictions would unfairly curb First Amendment rights.

Wu has argued the ordinance would preserve peace and quiet without infringing on protesters' right to demonstrate. In an earlier letter to the council, her legal team asserted that the ordinance "will be in conformance with law."

Some city councilors raised concerns over the proposal. Councilor Frank Baker, who opposed the measure, said it was a direct response to demonstrations targeting Wu and worried that the city was infringing on First Amendment rights. Another councilor who voted against it, Kendra Lara, said in a statement that the ordinance "could have unintended consequences for marginalized communities who use protest and direct action as a tactic to secure rights for themselves and resources for their community,"

For weeks, a small group of protesters who opposed Wu's COVID-19 vaccine requirement for city workers gathered outside her home, banging drums, blowing whistles, and shouting starting at 7 a.m. Wu has said she tries not to take the protests personally, but laments the disruption for her neighbors and family.

Some of the pushback to Wu's attempts at a vaccination mandate for the city workforce has been racist and misogynistic. Wu became the first woman and first person of color elected mayor of Boston last fall.

The battle over the workforce vaccination mandate has also spilled into the courts, with her administration in February appealing a court ruling that blocked enforcement of the requirement for a trio of public safety unions.

INTRODUCTION

This course, Introduction to the Legal Process, is brief in comparison to other courses at the Academy. Although it is brief, it is vital that you master its subject matter. This course forms the basis of many other courses a Recruit Officer will study. The concepts discussed here will be repeated constantly in other subject areas in the weeks to come. You will be required to memorize basic definitions in order to be able to comprehend the legal principles addressed in other courses.

This course was revised and compiled by Lieutenant James A. Moore, and members of the Academy Staff past and present. Sources of some of the material are Criminal Law for Policeman, Chamelin & Evans, Prentice Hall, 1977; Constitutional Law for Police Officers, Attorney James A. Moore, 1996; and the work of Deputy Superintendent William J. Hogan.

Learn as much as you can each day. Take advantage of all study time available, whether at the Academy or at home. Be attentive. Be respectful to yourself, your fellow recruits, and the Academy Staff. This will enable you to acquire one of the most important tools a police officer can have: knowledge.

INSTRUCTOR INTRODUCTION(S)

My name is Police Officer Yong Lee and I have been with the Boston Police Department since 2006. Prior to my assignment at the academy, I held assignments in District D14 (Brighton), District B2 (Roxbury) and M.O.P (Mobile Operations Patrol) as a member of the BPD Special Weapons and Tactics Team (S.W.A.T. Team). I am excited to be teaching Constitutional Law to you and to help you understand everything we do as police officers. From making an arrest to the use of lethal force, it is all shaped by the U.S. Constitution.

My name is Police Officer Ciro Feliciano. I have been with the Boston Police Department since 2008. I started my career with the department as a Boston Police Cadet prior to becoming a Police Officer in 2010. Prior to my assignment at the academy, I held assignments in District E13 (Jamaica Plain), District C11 (Dorchester) and the District B2 Drug Control Unit (Roxbury). I am a veteran of the United States Armed Forces. I have a strong passion for teaching and hope to become a college professor in the near future. The U.S Constitution is the foundation of everything we do as Police Officers.

I. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF CRIMINAL LAW

A. The Nature of Law

The question "what is law?" invites many answers, for "law" is a broad concept with many definitions. For the purposes of this course, law can be defined as a group of rules governing interactions. Law is a set of regulations governing the relationship between man and his fellow men, and between man and the state. Law is a necessary means of social control attempting to either alleviate conflicts or settle them in a manner most advantageous to the group.

B. Law as Language

Law is nothing more than language. Just as a carpenter uses a hammer, a police officer uses his ability to communicate. Communication is the ability to make another understand one's self. Law strives for uniformity of interpretation. It is important that both the sending and receiving parties to a communication use terms that mean the same thing to both parties. Throughout this course, the student will be presented with terms that require memorization. This will assure uniformity of interpretation as much as humanly possible.

C. Crime Defined

Not all violations of the law are crimes. Some violations of the law are civil infractions. They are private in nature, involving only the parties and not the state. A police officer has no power in civil matters in Massachusetts. The legislature makes some violations of the law criminal in nature. It is these violations with which a police officer must concern himself. A crime is an act committed or omitted in violation of public law, either forbidding it or commanding it to be done. Crimes are prosecuted in the name of the Commonwealth. The state is a party to the action. There are two purposes of criminal law. First, it attempts to control behavior of human beings. Second, it attempts to sanction uncontrolled behavior by punishing the violator.

D. Early Developments of Criminal Law

Criminal law developed from the personal vendetta. When one individual harmed another, it became the responsibility of the victim or his family to seek redress. Eventually society began to treat certain offenses as crimes against the sovereign, and that state began to punish violators. This practice developed into modern criminal law.

E. Common Law

Common law began as a result of habits of individuals and the customs of groups. They became accepted as norms of behavior. When courts developed violations of these customs produced the cases heard. As the courts recorded their decisions, other judges looking for assistance followed previous court decisions, and precedents developed. The English colonists who settled Massachusetts brought with them a large part of the body of law to which they were accustomed. Common law has been defined as that body of law that derives its authority from judicial decision and ancient statutes and usage, as distinguished from statute law that is enacted by the legislature or congress. Common law derives its authority solely from the usage and customs of antiquity, or from judgements and decrees of the courts recognizing, affirming, and enforcing such uses and customs. Massachusetts embraced this unwritten law of England. Examples of common law crimes, which still exist today are: affray and criminal libel. They have never been made punishable by statute. If no punishment is provided by statute, "the court shall impose such sentence according to the nature of the crime, as conforms to the common usage and practice of the Commonwealth." M.G.L. C. 279, S.5.

F. Statute Law

Statute law has been defined as that law effected by legislative enactment. The reading of a statute must be construed strictly. If a statute sets forth a series of acts and proscribes their commission, the wording is critically important. Some examples of statutes are: armed robbery, breaking and entering, and motor vehicle violations.

1. Ordinance

An ordinance is an enactment by a legislative body of a municipal corporation. A rule proposed by a city, establishing when properly enacted. An ordinance has the full force and effect of law.

2. By-Laws

Laws, rules, or regulations adopted by a town for its government are known as by-laws.

3. Rules & Regulations

Park rules, traffic rules, etc. are laws that are a formal means of social control that are interpreted and enforced by the courts of a political community.

G. Case Law

The role of court decisions and their relationship to the law is known as case law. It is a term commonly used to describe the rule of law announced in court decisions. The rule announced in a court decision will reflect the court's reading of a constitutional, statutory, or administrative action. Thus case law merges with other forms of law. Although the wording of a statute may suggest a different meaning to the ordinary reader, it is the interpretation of the courts, the case law, that governs.

Points to remember

Rules of conduct at the different levels of government are known as the following:

1. Federal. ....laws
2. State ..... statutes
3. City .....ordinances, rules & regulations
4. Town .....by-laws, rules & regulations

II. FUNDAMENTALS OF CRIMINAL LAW

Students beginning the study of criminal law must be able to approach the subject with an open mind. They must be objective as possible. Very often there is a difference between what is morally wrong and what is legally prohibited. Personal emotion can play no part in influencing an officer's decision in settling legal problems. Those who resort to emotion will not solve the problem correctly.

An act, which may obviously be wrong to most people, may be committed, but there is no legal penalty. If an officer responded with emotion and made an arrest in such a Situation, the arrest would be unlawful. This would result in the officer's exposure to civil liability. Officers must approach each situation with an analytical mind, and make judgments based on his training.

A. Classifications of Crimes

Crimes are classified in many ways. There is a distinction made between crimes that are mala in se and mala prohibita. Those classified as mala in se are those that are bad in themselves, murder and rape for example. Those classified as mala prohibita are those that are wrong simply because the legislature has prohibited them. Examples would be: operating a motor vehicle without being licensed or selling alcohol to a minor.

States are free to classify crimes in any way they choose, and to impose any punishment it desires. However, the punishment cannot violate the Eighth Amendment by being cruel and unusual. In Massachusetts crimes are classified in two categories: felonies and misdemeanors. A felony is any crime punishable by death or imprisonment in the state prison. A misdemeanor is any crime less than a felony.

It is important to know the distinction between a felony and a misdemeanor. Whether or not to arrest may be made, whether or not an arrest warrant is required, how much force may be used, are a few of the questions that can only be determined by the maximum penalty that can be imposed as stated by statute. It does not depend on the sentence actually handed out by the court. For example, Anthony commits a larceny from the person, a crime punishable by five years in state prison. He has committed a felony. This is so even if the court only sentences him to six months in the House of Correction.

B. Role of the Court

By establishing the Federal and State Constitutions, the people have both granted and forbidden the legislatures of both governments the power to do certain things. When the legislature acts, it is the role of the courts to determine if this action is in accordance with the constitutions. Any law that is contrary to the provisions of either constitution will be declared unconstitutional. In addition, since people are entitled to know what conduct is prohibited, statutes cannot be written in broad terms so that they become unclear. In our system of government, the benefit of the doubt goes to the defendant. Criminal laws are construed strictly, when they work against the defendant and they are construed liberally when they work in his favor. In the law, as in baseball, the tie goes to the runner.

III. A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of the United States is the political foundation of our nation. It was written and adopted after careful consideration, and after experiments had been made with other forms of alliances among the colonies. The main body of the Constitution is composed of seven articles. The first three define the legislative, executive and judicial branches of government and outline their duties. Shortly after this segment of the Constitution was written, leaders decided that it placed too much power in a central government. It was this type of government that the colonies originally rebelled against.

A solution to this concern was reached on December 15, 1791, when the first ten Amendments, popularly known as the Bill of Rights, were adopted and added to the Constitution. At that time, the Amendments only applied to the federal government. It was not until 1858 that the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted. It provides that due process standards apply to the states.

In order to understand the applicability of the Bill of Rights to law enforcement, one must first grasp the concept of "due process." In a simplistic way, it means that no person may be deprived of any rights unless law enforcement action is in accordance with the proper criminal procedures.

Those failing to respect these Constitutional standards are subject to severe criminal and civil penalties. Police Officers must operate within certain boundaries. They can accomplish this task by using proper criminal procedure. Concepts of arrest, search and seizure, the privilege against self-incrimination, and the right to counsel are included in this body of law.

The United State constitution is the supreme law of the land and it prevails over all other kinds of law, both federal and state. States may grant citizens greater protection under the state constitution than may be granted under the federal, but may not grant less. Any law in conflict with the federal constitution is without legal force, and will not be enforced by the courts. At the state level, the state constitution rules are supreme as compared to rules coming from other state sources (e.g., state statutes), and prevail over such laws in cases of conflict.

In order to avoid government tyranny, the founding fathers decided to implement a series of checks and balances by putting executive, legislative and judicial powers in separate departments. These checks and balances are included in the U.S. Constitution. There are three (3) distinct branches of government: legislative, executive and judicial. The executive branch is the enforcement branch, and police are part of the executive branch.

The judicial branch may check the other two branches by ruling on the constitutionality of their actions. The legislative branch can check the other two by using its power to appropriate funds. The executive branch can check the other two by using its power of veto.

IV. IMPORTANT LEGAL CONCEPTS

A. Probable Cause to Arrest

Probable cause is a level of proof. It is the amount of proof necessary to justify an arrest. Probable cause exists if, based on facts sufficiently strong in themselves, it causes a reasonable and prudent person to believe that the accused committed the crime with which he is charged. It is reasonable grounds for belief in guilt.

Whether an arrest is valid or not depends upon, if at the moment of arrest, the officer had probable cause to make it, that is whether, at the moment the facts within the arresting officer's knowledge and of which he had reasonable trustworthy information, were sufficient to warrant a prudent man in believing that the defendant had committed, was committing the offense. The officer's knowledge is the sum total of what he learns through his five senses. The Fourth Amendment requires that probable cause exist for an arrest with or without a warrant, if it is to be a legal arrest.

Arrest on just suspicion is illegal. The amount of evidence needed to establish probable cause for an arrest need not be sufficient to establish guilt; but it must be more than mere suspicion.

Example: A robbery took place and one of the suspects was described as a black male, wearing a trench coat; black male fled from a taxi; a black male was walking down the street 1 ½ miles from where the robbery took place. Is there probable cause to arrest?

Good faith on the part of an officer is not sufficient to withstand the attack on lack of probable cause. A police officer must have probable cause at the exact moment of arrest. However, it is not necessary for the officer to make an arrest at the moment he has the minimum amount of evidence to establish probable cause, unless a delay in executing an arrest warrant deprives the defendant of a constitutional right.

An exception for the arresting officer to have probable cause can occur when the collective knowledge of the organization as a whole can be imputed to the individual. An example would be if an officer is authorized or requested by his supervisors to arrest.

If three are three police officers, one with probable cause, and he points out a suspect to the other two officers to make the arrest, then there is probable cause for the arrest, because the knowledge of one was the knowledge of all when engaged in a joint effort. Commonwealth v. McDermott, 347 Mass 246, 197 N.E.2d 668 (1964), Commonwealth v. Zirpolo 37 Mass App Ct. 307, 639 N.E. 2d 1083 (1994).

Example: An officer transmits over the radio that two white males in tan suits, driving a brown Ford, license number 123456 have just committed an armed robbery. This information could provide probable cause to arrest.

Factors for probable cause must be determined by the facts of a particular case. Generally, no one factor circumstance is enough to establish probable cause, unless the officer observed the offense. On many occasions, probable cause is established by a series of facts, some innocent in themselves, which are known to the arresting officer, and of which he has reliable knowledge at the time of arrest. Prior criminal record, reputation for criminal activity, flight, furtive gestures, evasive answers, conflicting stories, are all factors to be considered. No one factor alone is sufficient to establish probable cause, but a combination of them or other specific knowledge on the part of police officers relating the accused to evidence of a crime are proper factors to be considered in the decision to make an arrest. (See Lawton case).

The word "arrest" is derived from the French word "arreter" meaning to stop or stay; it signifies the restraint of a person. Arrest has been defined a taking under real or assumed authority, custody of another person for the purpose of holding him to answer to a criminal charge, or to prevent harm to himself or others. Clearly, police officers must be guided by the intent and the purpose of the law. There are however, limited circumstances in the discretion of the officer involved. When public interest would be better served by not making an arrest, even though the officer could lawfully make the arrest.

In Massachusetts a police officer has the right of arrest in the following circumstances:

FELONY ..... IN PRESENCE

FELONY ..... PROBABLE CAUSE

MISDEMEANOR ..... IN PRESENCE AND A BREACH OF THE PEACE

MISDEMEANOR ..... IN PRESENCE – STATUTORY RIGHT

MISDEMEANOR ..... PROBABLE CAUSE – STATUTORY RIGHT

ARREST WARRANT

B. Breach of the Peace

The term "Breach of the Peace" has been troublesome, and in some instances, misinterpreted by police officers. For one thing it is not the name of a crime, but rather may be referred to as a "descriptive term" one that describes criminal offenses that effect public peace, for example, the common type of misdemeanor offense of "assault and battery." There is no statutory right of arrest for Assault and Battery, as indicated by item #4 or #5 on the arrest chart. However, every crime of violence against another is by tradition and practice a "Breach of the Peace." Therefore, it is arrestable under item #3 on the arrest chart, if committed in the officer's presence.

You will find that most misdemeanor offense do not provide for an arrest without a warrant, even if committed in the officer's presence additionally, the commission of any offense, whether it is a felony or misdemeanor is a "Breach of the Law," that is breaking the law, but not necessarily a breaking of the peace. On the other hand, certain offenses such as a riot, unlawful assembly, disturbing a public assembly, etc. would by their very nature, amount to a breach of the peace, and thus be arrestable, if committed in the officer's presence. There is no problem with factor of Breach of the Peace in matters concerned with felony arrests under either item #1 and #2 on the arrest chart if probable cause exists for such warrantless arrests. No doubt most felonies would also be breaches of the peace, but the right to make an arrest under either item #1 or #2 on the arrest chart is completely devoid of any reference to Breach of the Peace as a prerequisite thereof.

The police student should at this point concentrate on items #3, #4, and #5 on the arrest chart. The police student will be amazed no doubt to learn, that there are practically hundreds of misdemeanor offenses that are not arrestable without a warrant, even if committed in the officer's presence. From day one you will be exposed to the definition of a misdemeanor. Now project your thinking to #3, #4 and #5 misdemeanor arrests. The occasions under which you may lawfully arrest without a warrant as follows:

- a. Item #3 - Misdemeanor Arrests, when the offense amounts to a Breach of the Peace, and is committed in the officer's presence, or there is a present criminal offense, the Breach of the Peace may be in the future. Item # 3 is the old common law right of arrest for Misdemeanor arrest, developed in early England and is not found in Massachusetts statutes. It should be remembered as well, that the term "Breach of the Peace" does not have to be alleged in the formal complaint in court. It is merely the legal means of making an arrest, however, it should be explained fully in an officer' s complaint in court to justify the arrest, as no statutory right of arrest exists under item #3.
- b. Items #4 & #5 - Statutory Right of Arrest. This is the most common type of warrantless arrest made in practice. It is purely a right given by the legislature, and has no relation to the common law rule previously covered. Not to confuse the sensitive area of warrantless arrest, but we do have a few isolated examples of instances whereby there are actually two authorities for making misdemeanor arrests, one of which is, the case of Commonwealth v. Gorman, 288 Mass 294 (1934). The Supreme Judicial Court ruled that operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, was offense amounting to a breach of the peace, thus immediately creating a new right of arrest under item #3. In later years the Legislature created new statutory right of arrest for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of intoxicating liquor under section 21 of Chapter 90 of the general laws. This is a rarity of course, and the statutory right of arrest is used more commonly.

As an added reminder, the term "Breach of the Peace" is not the specific name of a crime in the Commonwealth, as it may be in some other states. Most of the misunderstanding of this subject in the past stemmed from this area. A person is not arrested and formally charged with a "Breach of the Peace", although this has been frequently quoted as such in news media. It is not the subject of a criminal charge, but the reasons justifying a warrantless arrest, when these facts are present. Not all misdemeanor offenses involve a "Breach of the Peace," because if they did, all would be arrestable, and we would not use item #4.

As a final example, the term "Breach of the Peace" may be equated with terms "vandalism," "white collar crime," "corruption," etc., which in and of themselves do not spell out a crime, but rather are descriptive of acts that, in fact, do spell out crimes. The rationale of the Gorman case clearly indicates that it is not only loud, boisterous action that may involve "Breach of the Peace." Gorman was arrested for operating under the influence of liquor, while seated at the wheel of a parked motor vehicle, and the major thrust of the decision was that if he continued to operate the motor vehicle, he could create a "Breach of the Peace" by endangering lives and safety of the public. The Breach of the Peace may be prospective and/or anticipated, as long as there is present criminal activity.

C. In Presence of an Officer

The term "in presence of an officer" is of great importance to police officers particularly in the matter of lawful warrantless arrests for offense in the misdemeanor class. With very limited exceptions, misdemeanors must be committed in the presence of an officer to justify a warrantless arrest.

The substance of various court decisions on the subject of "in presence" is that it means what comes to an officer's attention through one or more of his five senses (sight, hearing, touch, taste, smell). An offense is committed "in presence" or "in view" of an officer, within the rule authorizing an arrest without a warrant, when an officer sees an act constituting the offense, though at a distance, or when circumstances with his observation give probable cause for belief that the defendant has committed an offense, or when he hears a disturbance created by the offense, and proceeds at once to the scene, or if the offense is continuing, or has not been fully consummated when the arrest is made. An offense is taking place within the "view" of an officer so as to authorize an arrest without a warrant, when the officer's senses afford him knowledge that the offense is being committed. What is required is that the officer, by use of his senses, has reason to believe the misdemeanor is now occurring before him. The offense must be occurring while the officer is on the scene. Officers who are working together on a case may combine their collective perception so that if the composite otherwise satisfies the presence requirement that requirement is deemed satisfied although the arresting officer does not himself witness all the elements of the offense. (See W.LaFave, Search and Seizure. A Treatise on the Fourth Amendment, s.5.1 © at 28 (1996); Commonwealth v. Zirpolo, 37 Mass App. Ct. 307, 639 N.E. 2d 1083 (1994).

This of course does not mean arriving at the scene and being told about some misdemeanor that happened before your arrival. In the old English case of Regina v. Tooley, 2 Ld. Haynes 296(1301), Lord Chief Justice Holt states the rule as follows: A constable cannot arrest, but when he sees an actual breach of the peace, and, if the affray be over, he cannot arrest."

The case of Commonwealth v. Thomas R. Conway, 316 N.E. 2d 757 (1974) illustrates this point. The defendant was arrested for knowingly using a motor vehicle without authority of the owner. The court ruled the arrest unlawful because the officers arrived on the scene fifteen minutes after the automobile had been in use, the officers did not see the defendant in the vehicle, and the offense is a misdemeanor.

V. POWERS & DUTIES OF POLICE OFFICERS

Chapter 41, Section 98 of the Massachusetts General Laws (M.G.L.), is that part of the law where police officers obtain their powers and duties.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98.

The chief and other police officers of all cities and towns shall have all the powers and duties of constables except serving and executing civil process. They shall suppress and prevent all disturbances and disorder. They may carry within the commonwealth such weapons as the chief of police or the board or officer having control of the police in a city or town shall determine; provided, that any law enforcement officer of another state or territory of the United States may, while on official business within the commonwealth, carry such weapons as are authorized by his appointing authority. They may examine all persons abroad whom they have reason to suspect of unlawful design, and may demand of them their business abroad and whither they are going; may disperse any assembly of three or more persons, and may enter any building to suppress a riot or breach of peace therein. Persons so suspected who do not give a satisfactory account of themselves, persons so assembled and who do not disperse when ordered, and persons making, aiding and abetting in a riot or disturbance may be arrested by the police, and may thereafter be safely kept by imprisonment or otherwise unless released in the manner provided by law, and taken before a district court to be examined and prosecuted.

Whoever is arrested and charged with any offense committed during a riot, disturbance or mass demonstration may be fingerprinted, in accordance with the protocol of the identification system of the department of the state police and may be photographed.

If a police officer stops a person for questioning pursuant to this section and reasonably suspects that he is in danger of life or limb, he may search such person for a dangerous weapon. If he finds such weapon or any other thing the possession of which may constitute a crime, he may take and keep it until the completion of the questioning, at which time he shall return it, if lawfully possessed, or he shall arrest such person.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98A.

A police officer of a city or town who is empowered to make arrests within a city or town may, on fresh and continued pursuit, exercise such authority in any other city or town for any offence committed in his presence within his jurisdiction for which he would have the right to arrest within his jurisdiction without a warrant. Said officer may return any person so arrested to the jurisdiction wherein said offence was committed. Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as limiting the powers of a police officer to make arrests and in so far as possible this section shall be deemed to be declaratory of the common law of the commonwealth.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98C.

In any city or town which accepts the provisions of this section no uniformed police officer, and no other uniformed person empowered to make arrests, employed by such city or town shall be required to wear a badge, tag or label of any kind which identifies him by name, but any such officer or other person employed by such city or town who does not wear any such badge, tag or label shall wear a badge, tag or label which identifies him by number.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98D.

Each city or town shall issue to every full-time police officer employed by it an identification card bearing the officer's photograph and identifying information. The secretary of public safety and security may adopt regulations relative to the form, content and issuance of such identification cards and to the carrying thereof by municipal police officers. Such identification card shall be carried on the officer's person and shall be exhibited upon lawful request for purposes of identification.

348 Mass. 129

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Middlesex.
COMMONWEALTH

v.

John D. LAWTON (and a companion case).

Argued Oct. 5, 1964. Decided Dec. 1, 1964.

Defendants were convicted of breaking and entering in the nighttime and possessing burglarious instruments. The Superior Court, Gourdin, J., entered judgments and defendant appealed. The Supreme Judicial Court, Wilkins, C. J., held that officer who had learned of recent break and at once went to house involved, was told that occupant had seen man in heavy dark coat run out of back door and onto and across adjacent golf links toward designated street, who soon afterwards came upon defendant attired in heavy dark coat when temperature was between 85 and 90 degrees and who was rebuffed by obscene replies and outright refusal to answer when he attempted to interrogate defendant by way of brief threshold inquiry had reasonable cause to arrest on charge of breaking and entering, and defendant was not entitled to have evidence obtained in incidental search suppressed.

Judgments affirmed.

Before *129 WILKINS, C. J., and SPALDING, WHITTEMORE, CUTTER, KIRK, SPIEGEL and REARDON, JJ.

Opinion

WILKINS, Chief Justice.

These two indictments, respectively for breaking and entering in the nighttime and for possession of burglarious implements (G.L. c. 266, §§ 15, 49), were tried before a judge sitting without jury. At the trial, which was made subject to G.L. c. 278, §§ 33A-33G, as amended, the defendant was convicted of both crimes, and has appealed. The errors assigned and argued are (1) to the denial of a motion to suppress evidence made before trial and heard by the same judge who presided at the trial; (2) to the denial of the same motion when renewed at the trial; and (3) to the denial of the defendant's request in each case for a finding of not guilty on all the evidence as matter of law.

* 131 1. We summarize the evidence at the hearing of the motion to suppress before trial. The only witness was Officer Fitzsimmons of the Newton Police. On July 24, 1963, about 10:30 P.M. he was in a cruising car when he received information that a break had taken place at 67 Dorset Road, Waban. He learned this from a police radio dispatch to the effect that a woman had just called and reported that, as she entered her house, a man wearing a dark jacket ran out the back door toward the Braeburn Golf Course, which was right in back of the house. Officer Fitzsimmons went to the house where inspectors were interviewing the occupants. Officer Fitzsimmons learned from other officers that the man had run across the golf course toward Fuller Street. About 11:20 P.M. Officer Fitzsimmons, alone in the cruising car, saw the defendant standing at a bus stop at the corner of Commonwealth Avenue and Washington Street,

West Newton. This was about two blocks from the Fuller Street entrance of the golf course and a mile from the house where the break occurred. The temperature was very hot, between eighty-five and ninety degrees. The defendant was wearing a heavy black jacket. Officer Fitzsimmons asked him why he was standing there. The defendant in obscene language replied that it was none of the officer's business. Upon being asked his name, the defendant made the same answer. To a question as to where he was coming from, the defendant said 'the Newton-Wellesley Hospital,' and that if the bus should come, he was going to get on it. Officer Fitzsimmons called by radio for the sergeant in charge at the station, who arrived in a 'cruiser' with another officer. Officer Fitzsimmons then arrested the defendant for being abroad in the nighttime. See G.L. c. 41, § 98, as amended through St.1957, c. 688, § 1, entitled 'Powers and duties of police officers,' which reads **826 in part: 'During the night time they may examine all persons abroad whom they have reason to suspect of unlawful design, and may demand of them their business abroad and whether they are going * * *. Persons so suspected who do not give a satisfactory *132 account of themselves*** maybe arrested * * *.' The unlawful design of which Officer Fitzsimmons suspected the defendant was breaking and entering, but he was not charged with that until after he had been booked at the police station and searched. Officers there took from him a silver dollar in a plastic case which the lieutenant in charge knew had come from a break and was later identified as coming from 67 Dorset Road. The officers also took from the defendant a bag which contained a claw hammer, punch set, screw driver, chisel, a pair of gloves, a pair of rubber-soled shoes, and two flashlights, one a wink light identified as taken in a previous break in Waban. The defendant did not answer any of the 'regular booking questions,' and did not give his name until after two hours, namely, at 1:30 A.M.

12 The defendant argues that the denial of the motion was error, because G.L. c. 41, § 98, is unconstitutional in so far as it authorizes a police officer to make an arrest for being abroad in the nighttime. This, it is contended, is contrary to the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as permitting an arrest 'on suspicion.' It is also argued that § 98 is unconstitutionally vague 'as affording no guidance to the police officer, who is the sole judge as to whether a person gives a satisfactory account of himself. We shall not decide these questions because there was probable cause for arrest for breaking and entering. To be sure, the police officer, who was a layman and not a legal technician, did not state this to be the ground of arrest during the nighttime encounter on the city streets. But the citizens of the Commonwealth, whom the police are organized and exist to protect, and the Commonwealth should not be conclusively bound or limited by the officer's choice of words made subjectively in the active execution of his duties. A police officer in the solution of a crime and in the presence of one he thinks committed it is not a judge with time for mature consideration. On the contrary, his position more nearly resembles that of a sentry at his post in time of war. Upon his alertness and judgment depends the *133 safety of the many. Officer Fitzsimmons was confronted by a practical problem calling for an immediate exercise of judgment. Without delay he had to reach a decision as to whether he had probable cause to hold the defendant or whether he must let the defendant go, an action which might finally and conclusively eliminate the defendant from the case. If the facts known to the officer reasonably permitted a conclusion that probable cause existed for a charge of breaking and entering, the arrest should be treated as legal even though he at first assigned another ground. Sec Brinegar v. United States, 338 U.S. 160, 174-176, 69 S.Ct. 1302, 93 L.Ed. 1879.

3 We are of opinion that the combination of facts known to Officer Fitzsimmons reasonably permitted such a conclusion. He had learned of a recent break from his superiors and at once went to the house. He was told that a female occupant had seen a man in a heavy dark coat run out of the back door and onto and across the adjacent golf links toward Fuller Street. Soon after, while searching in the vicinity of the Fuller Street entrance to the golf course, he had come upon the defendant attired in a heavy dark coat. He could reasonably conclude that not many men would be abroad that night in that vicinity attired in an article of clothing so unsuited to a temperature of eighty-five to ninety degrees. He followed the elementary and highly reasonable course of attempting to interrogate the defendant by way of a brief threshold inquiry. See **827 Commonwealth v. Lehan, Mass., 196 N.E.2d 840.1 He was rebuffed by obscene replies and outright refusals to answer. This reception by the defendant was much more suspicious than that of the 'unconvincing reply' (p. 87) which was made to the police officer in Bell v. United States, 102 U.S.App.D.C. 383, 254 F.2d 82, cert. den. 358 U.S. 885, 79 S.Ct. 126, 3 L.Ed.2d 113. For other Federal cases of unsatisfactory replies to police officers, see Ellis v. United States, 105 U.S.App.D. C. 86, 264 F.2d 372, cert. den. 359 U.S. 998, 79 S.Ct. 1129, 3 L.Ed.2d 986; Robinson v. United States, 109 U.S.App.D.C. 22, 283 F.2d 508, cert. den. 364 U.S. 919, 81 S.Ct. 282, 5 L.Ed.2d 259, cert. den. sub nom. Dawson v. United States, 365 U.S. 827, 81 S.Ct. 716, 5 L.Ed.2d 707, cert. den. sub nom. Williams v. United States, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S.Ct. 718, 5 L.Ed.2d 708; Campbell v. United States, 110 U.S.App.D.C. 109, 289 F.2d 775.

*134 2. The evidence at the trial was not substantially different from that at the hearing on the motion before trial. The defendant does not argue that it was. In fact he argues both motions simultaneously.

The renewed motion was rightly denied.

45 3. The bag, the articles in it, and the silver dollar were discovered in a reasonable search incident to a lawful arrest. Commonwealth v. Holmes, 344 Mass. 524, 525, 183 N.E.2d 279, and cases cited. They were admissible in evidence and with the other testimony were ample to prove the crimes charged.

6 4. The defendant contends that Marjory M. Alberts testified that the house and the articles taken were hers. The indictment for breaking and entering charges that the house and articles belonged to Sidney Alberts, her husband. This was not a variance. See G.L. c. 277, §§ 25, 35; c. 278, § 9. The property, both real and personal, could be found to have been in the actual or constructive possession of the husband. Commonwealth v. Binkiewicz, 342 Mass. 740, 748-749, 175 N.E.2d 473. See Commonwealth v. McLaughlin, 103 Mass. 435, 436.

5. The requests for findings of not guilty were rightly denied.

Judgments affirmed.

v.

GORMAN

288 Mass. 294

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Worcester.

Nov. 2, 1934.

Report from Superior Court; Worcester County; Buttrick, Judge.

T. Francis Gorman was convicted of operating a motor vehicle on a way while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. On report by a judge of a district court sitting in the Superior Court under statutory authority.

Verdict to stand.

LUMMUS, Justice .

The defendant, having in his possession a license to operate motor vehicles, was arrested without a warrant by a state police officer, who found the defendant in the act of operating a motor vehicle upon a way while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. G.L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 90, § 24, as amended by St. 1932, c. 26. After being committed to the lockup, the defendant gave bail for his appearance before the District Court. The recognizance, we assume, conformed to G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 276, § 65. After complaint against the defendant had been made to the District Court, the arresting officer failed to 'endorse upon the complaint a statement of his doings,' as required by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) *296 c. 218, § 34. No warrant was issued, an arrest on which might have validated the continuance of a custody invalid before. Kelly v. Griffin, 241 U. S. 6, 36 S. Ct. 487, 60 L. Ed. 861; Stallings v. Splain, 253 U. S. 339, 343, 40 S. Ct. 537, 64 L. Ed. 940.

In the District Court, before pleading to the merits of the complaint, the defendant made a motion to quash the complaint and also filed a 'plea to the jurisdiction,' based on the alleged unlawfulness of the arrest and of the procedure in bringing him before the court.' These were overruled, and the defendant was convicted. On appeal to the Superior Court, he renewed the motion and the plea. These were again overruled, and after trial a verdict of guilty was returned.

A fine was imposed (see Commonwealth v. McCan, 277 Mass. 199, 200, 178 N. E. 633, 78 A. L. R. 1208 ; Commonwealth v. Boston & Maine Transportation Co., 282 Mass. 345, 346, 185 N. E. 40; compare Commonwealth v. Baldi, 250 Mass. 528, 537, 146 N. E. 11), the execution of the sentence was suspended, and the judge reported the questions which the defendant sought to raise by the motion and the plea, namely, whether the arrest was unlawful and whether any illegality in the arrest and in the failure to indorse a return upon the complaint entitled the defendant to be discharged instead of being tried and convicted.

1 The defendant contended that the right of an officer to arrest without warrant for an offence relating to the operation or control of motor vehicles is limited by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 90, § 21, to the arrest of an operator who does not have in his possession a license to operate motor vehicles; and that only an investigator or examiner appointed by the registrar of motor vehicles may arrest without a warrant, for the offence of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, one who possesses such a license .

We think, however, that the statute relied on does not by implication, cut down the common law authority of an officer. State police officers have throughout the Commonwealth 'all the powers of constables, except the service of civil process, and of police officers and watchmen.' G.L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 22, § 9A. Constables have common *297 law power as peace officers to make arrests without warrant in cases in which such arrests are permitted by law. Hartley v. Inhabitants of Granville, 216 Mass. 38, 102 N. E. 942, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 392, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 725; Commonwealth v. Hastings, 9 Metc. 259. In Sharrock v. Hannemer, Cro. Eliz. 375, 376, Beaumont [Beaumont], J., said, 'A constable and sheriff are conservators of the peace at the common law.'

The offence of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor is classified by our statute as a misdemeanor, G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 274, § 1; chapter 90, § 24, as amended by St. 1932, c. 26. For the common law, see Commonwealth v. Carey, 12 Cush. 246, 252; Jones v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 329, 347-350 ; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 499, 6 S. Ct. 148, 29 L. Ed. 458. A peace officer, in the absence of statute (Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 159, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475; Creeden v. Boston & Maine Railroad, 193 Mass. 280, 79 N. E. 344, 9 Ann. Cas. 1121), may arrest without warrant for a misdemeanor which (1) involves a breach of the peace (2) is committed in the presence or view of the officer (Commonwealth v. McLaughlin, 12 Cush. 615; McLennan v. Richardson, 1k Gray, 74, 77 Am. Dec. 353; Commonwealth v. Ruggless 6 Allen, 588, 590; Carroll v. United States, 267 U. S. 132, 156, 157, 45 S. Ct. 280. 69 L. Ed. 543, 39 A. L. R. 790), and (3) is still continuing at the time of the arrest or only interrupted, so that the offence and the arrest form parts of one transaction (Commonwealth v. Hastings, 9 Mete. 259, 263; Leddy v. Crossman, 108 Mass. 237; Scott v. Eldridge, 154 Mass. 25, 27 N. E. 677, 12 L. R. A. 379; Eldredge v. Mitchell, 214 Mass. 480, 483, 102 N. E. 69; Price v. Seeley, 10 CL & F. 28; R. v. Light, 7 Cox C. C. 389. See, also, Am. Low Inst. Restatement, Torts, §§ 119, 121, 140, 141). In R. v. Tooley, 2 Ld. Ray. **620 1296, 130 l; Id., 11 Mod. 242, 250, Lord Holt states the rule as follows; A constable cannot arrest but where he sees an actual breach of the peace; and if the affray be over,*** he cannot arrest.' In the same case, reported in Holt 485, 490, sub-nomine. The Case of the Reforming Constables, his statement reads, 'A constable may arrest a man that breaks the peace in his view, but if it be done out of his view, he cannot.' In the present case the only point upon which there can be doubt as to the right to arrest without warrant, is whether the offence involves a breach of the peace.

298 The breach of the peace that justifies arrest for a misdemeanor without warrant must be something more than that which used to be alleged in indictments and complaints as a legal incident of every criminal offence. See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 277, § 33. Not every misdemeanor involves a breach of the peace. For example, the possession of short lobster involves none, Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 159, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475; Voluntary drunkenness in private, though a crime (Commonwealth v. Conlin, 184 Mass. 195, 68 N. E. 207), is not of itself a breach of the peace (Commonwealth v. O'Connor, 7 Allen, 583). Compare statutory rights of arrest for drunkenness. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 272, § 44; Commonwealth v. Cheney, 141 Mass. 102, 6 N. E. 724, 55 Am. Rep. 448; Trebeck v. Croudace, [1918] 1 K. B. 158. On the other hand, an affray or assault is a typical breach of the peace. Commonwealth v. Tobin, 108 Mass. 426, 429, 11 Am. Rep. 375; Leddy v. Crossman, 108 Mass. 237. In Ford v. Breen, 173 Mass. 52, 53 N. E. 136, violent, profane and obscene language used in a dwelling to the annoyance of persons outside was deemed a breach of the peace. See, also, Commonwealth v. Foley, 99 Mass. 497; Commonwealth v. Oaks, 113 Mass. 8. This case does not require us to draw the line among conflicting decisions in other jurisdictions for the purpose of classifying offences as involving a breach of the peace, or not. It is worth notice, however, that in United States v. Hart. Fed. Cas. No. 15,316, Pct. C. C. 390, Washington, J., held that driving a carriage at an immoderate rate of speed through a principal street was a breach of the peace, justifying an arrest by a constable without a warrant.

If there is a present criminal offence (Quinn v. Heisel, 40 Mich. 576), the breach of the peace that justifies arrest without a warrant may be a prospective or anticipated one. An officer, who sees a person committing a misdemeanor of such a sort that a breach of the peace is likely to follow unless the offender be restrained, need not delay an arrest until the harm has been done, nor limit his acts of restraint or detention to those which may be necessary merely to prevent the expected breach. Commonwealth v. Hastings, 9 Mctc. 259, 263. We think that the dictum of Banks, L. J., in *Trebeck v. *299 Croudace*, [1918] 1 K. B. 158, 166, states the common law. He said: 'From the very nature of things the arrest of a drunken person in the street may very frequently be justified on the ground of an anticipated breach of the peace, and particularly so when the alleged offender is in charge either of a loaded gun, or of a motor vehicle, both very dangerous instruments from the point of view of the public safety when in the hands of a drunken person.' The only difference between the case so stated, and the present case, is that the charge against the present defendant was not that he was intoxicated or in a drunken condition, but merely that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Commonwealth v. Lyseth, 250 Mass. 555, 558, 146 N. E. 18; State v. Rodgers, 91 N. J. Law, 212, 215, 102 A. 433. But even that milder degree of alcoholic effect is likely to make an operator of a motor vehicle a public menace, and to induce in him such reckless conduct as may make him criminally responsible for unintended assault and even manslaughter. Banks v. Braman, 188 Mass. 367, 369, 74 N. E. 594; Commonwealth v. Arone, 265 Mass. 128, 163 N. E. 758. In our opinion, the offence involves a breach of the peace, and justifies an officer in arresting without a warrant a person whom he sees in the act of committing it.

Because of its public importance, we have dealt with the lawfulness of the arrest. But there is another answer.

Mr. Justice Holmes said, in Michigan Trust Co. v. Ferry, 228 U. S. 346, 353, 33 S. Ct. 550, 552, 57 L. Ed. 867: 'Ordinarily jurisdiction over a person is based on the power of the sovereign asserting it to seize that person and imprison him to await the sovereign's pleasure.' In criminal cases, an arrest, upon a warrant or without warrant, is the usual means of bringing defendants before the court, and the alternative method of summons in minor cases is comparatively new. St. 1881, c. 127, § 1, G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 276, § 24. In the eighteenth century, civil actions were regularly begun, in practice if not in theory, by arrest upon a capias writ. 9 Holdsworth, Hist.

Eng. Law, 250 et seq. In carefully restricted **621 form this practice still survives. G.L. (Ter. Ed.) cc. 224, 226. When the court has jurisdiction over the case, and the defendant is physically *300 before the court to answer to the plaintiff a possible view is that the unlawfulness of the arrest that brought the defendant there is immaterial in that case, and that the court will proceed to try the merits, leaving the defendant to the remedy of an action against the arresting officer. This view has been taken in some jurisdictions even in civil cases. More v. Earl Rivers, Style, 222; O'Keefe v. Delaney, 31 New Brunswick, 299, 303; McNab v. Bennett, 66 Ill. 157, 161; Compare, however, Willington v. Steams, 1 Pick. 497; Illsley v. Nichols, 12 Pick. 270, 275 et seq., 22 Am. Dec. 425; Baker v. Copeland, 140 Mass. 342, 4 N. E. 606. This view is not necessarily inconsistent with the doctrine that an arrest or other service obtained through the act of the plaintiff in bringing the defendant into the State by force or fraud will not give the court jurisdiction over him, the reason given being that the plaintiff will not be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong. Ex parte Johnson, 167 U.S. 120, 126, 17 S. Ct. 735, 42 L. Ed. 103; Ex parte Taylor, 29 R. I. 129, 69 A. 553. See, also, Paine v. Kelley, 197 Mass. 22, 83 N. E. 8; Diamond v. Earle, 217 Mass. 499, 105 N. E. 363, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1178, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 984; Lamb v. Schmitt, 285 U. S. 222, 52 S. Ct. 317, 76 L. Ed. 720.

Even though the view just stated be not taken in civil cases, it may nevertheless be adopted in criminal cases. The latter concern directly the public peace and order, and are prosecuted by the Commonwealth, to which the wrongdoing of its officers cannot be attributed. It is true that earlier cases in this court are not fully decisive, for in them the defendant had waived the point by pleading to the merits and going to trial, instead of saving the point by a plea such as was filed in the present case. Commonwealth v. Oakes, 151 Mass. 59, 60, 23 N. E. 660, and cases cited. Commonwealth v. Murphy, 155 Mass. 284, 286, 29 N. E. 469; Commonwealth v. Tay, 170 Mass. 192, 48 N. E. 1086; Commonwealth v. Conlin, 184 Mass. 195, 68 N. E. 207; Flito's Case, 210 Mass. 33, 95 N. E. 971. See, also, Ford v. United States, 273 U.S. 593, 606, 47 S. Ct. 531, 71 L. Ed. 793; State v. Rosenblum, 102 N. J. Law, 125, 130 A. 614; State v. Baker, 102 N. J. Law, 349, 133 A. 785; State v. McClung, 104 W. Va. 330, 140 S. E. 56 A. L. R. 260. But it is intimated in Commonwealth v. Wait, 131 Mass. 417, 419, Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 155, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475, and Commonwealth v. Tay, 170 Mass. 192, 48 N. E. 1086, and we think it is the law, that where a defendant is physically before the court upon a complaint or indictment, *301 either because he is held in custody after an arrest or because he has appeared in person after giving bail, the invalidity of his original arrest is immaterial, even though seasonably raised. 2 Hawk. P. C., c. 27, § 102; Starkie, Crim. Pl. (2d Ed.) 297; Hawkins, J., in R. v. Hughes, 4 Q. B. D. 614, 625, et seq.; People v. Eberspacher, 79 Hun, 410, 29 N. Y. S. 796; People v. Snell, 216 N. Y. 527, 111 N. E. 50, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 222. Compare Albrecht v. United States, 273 U.S. 1, 8-11, 47 S. Ct. 250, 71 L. Ed. 505. It has even been held that a defendant brought within the jurisdiction by unlawful force or fraud may be tried for crime. Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 27 S. Ct. 111, 51 L. Ed. 148, 7 Ann. Cas. 1047; 18 A. L. R. 509, note. See, also, Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475; Lascelles v. State of Georgia, 148 U.S. 537, 13 S. Ct. 687, 37 L. Ed. 549; Morse v. United States, 267 U. S. 80, 45 S. Ct. 209, 69 L. Ed. 522.

In reaching this result we have not relied upon any condition in the recognizance requiring the defendant to appear and abide the sentence. See Brown v. Getchell, 11 Mass. 11; Baker v. Copeland, 140 Mass. 342, 4 N. E. 606; Lane v. Holman, 145 Mass. 221, 223, 13 N. E. 602; Everett v. Henderson, 146 Mass. 89, 14 N. E. 932, 4 Am. St. Rep. 284; Simmons v. Richards, 171 Mass. 281, 50 N. E. 617; Washington National Bank v. Williams, 188 Mass. 103, 106, 74 N. E. 470; Mann v. Cook, 195 Mass. 440, 81 N. E. 286; People v. Shaver, 4 Park. Cr. R. (N. Y.) 45; Sedgewick v. Houston, 9 Houst. (Del.) 113, 32 A. 12, 43 Am. St. Rep. 165; Dickinson v. Farwell, 71 N. H. 213, 51 A. 624; Albrecht v. United States, 273 U. S. 1, 9, 47 S. Ct. 250, 71 L. Ed. 505.

5 The return which should be indorsed upon the complaint in the case of an arrest without a warrant (G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 218, § 34), is not essential to the validity of the complaint. It relates only to the service or means by which the defendant is brought before the court. Where, as in this case, the defendant is physically before the court for trial, an omission to make return of the arrest avails him no more than illegality in the arrest itself.

Verdict to stand.

First Amendment

United States Constitution Amendment I

Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances

Massachusetts Declaration of Rights

Article XVI

The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a state: it ought not, therefore, to be restrained in this commonwealth. The right to free speech shall not be abridged.

Article XIX

The people have the right, in an orderly and peaceable manner, to assemble to consult the common good: give instructions to their representatives, and request the legislative body, by way of addresses, petitions, or remonstrance's, redress the wrongs done them, and grievances they suffer.

The four freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment are: speech, press, assembly and religion. In the course of their duties police officers generally deal with issues regarding freedom of speech, assembly and on a limited basis, press. Police Officers have the difficult duty of achieving the balance between protecting these rights and maintaining order in the community. In maintaining order in the community nothing can replace the sound judgment of a reasonable, prudent and well-trained police officer. Using this judgment the officer simply has to balance the context of the activity with its likely result. Therefore conduct that would fall short of death, injury or property damage should be tolerated. Riot, mob-rule and malicious destruction should not. Civil disobedience may be tolerated, but criminal disobedience is not.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

Protected Activity

Speech -

Freedom of speech means that individuals have the right to advocate their ideas. No matter how unpopular that idea is, it is protected by the First Amendment. Case law has developed the proposition that speech alone, without more, is protected. Words which some may consider to be crude, offensive, abusive or vulgar, cannot be made the subject of criminal sanctions.<sup>1</sup> Although certain four-letter words may be distasteful, "one man's vulgarity is another man's lyric,"<sup>2</sup> and no arrest can be made for the use of such words. One of the hallmarks of a free society is tolerance for the expression of ideas that may seem undemocratic or even dangerous. So it is that "freedom to think as you will and speak as you think are means indispensable to the discovery of and spread of political truth."<sup>3</sup> The short of it is, if all we have is going on is "words" the speaker will be protected. Generally, a person cannot be arrested for making a speech, or for his choice of words. There are exceptions to this general rule, which will be discussed shortly. Additionally peaceful begging has been ruled a communicative activity protected by the First Amendment in Massachusetts.<sup>4</sup>

Symbolic Speech - Symbolic speech is also protected. It has been defined as acts which communicate ideas.<sup>5</sup> Various hand gestures, such as thumbs up, thumbs down, raising the middle finger, etc. come to mind. The wearing of black armbands to protest a war,<sup>6</sup> swastikas,<sup>7</sup> and burning a flag<sup>8</sup> are all forms of protected of symbolic speech and are protected. The First Amendment protects not only speech itself, but also other expressive conduct that is "intended to convey a particular message" under circumstances in which "the likelihood is great that the message would be understood by those who view it".<sup>9</sup>

Unprotected Activity

Fighting Words - One form of speech that is not protected is "fighting words."<sup>10</sup> This concept is defined as words, which by their very nature tend to inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace. The test for fighting words is the effect that they have on an ordinary citizen. They must be a personally abusive epithet which, when addressed to the ordinary citizen, are as a matter of common knowledge, likely to provoke a violent reaction.<sup>11</sup> In order to arrest a speaker under these circumstances an officer must be prepared to show that a violent reaction was likely. If a fight does occur, constitutional issues can be avoided by charging the combatants with assault and battery. An officer need not wait until the fight is in progress. When there is an immediate threat to public safety, peace or order, the power of the State to prevent or punish it is obvious.

The fighting word concept does not apply when they are addressed to a police officer. This is so because an officer is trained to exercise a higher degree of restraint than the average citizen.<sup>12</sup> On the other hand, conduct accompanied by speech directed to police officers that actually disrupts or obstructs them in the performance of their duty is not protected by the First Amendment.

Speech Plus - Another form of speech not protected by the First Amendment is "speech plus." This is defined as speech, which will incite immediate criminal activity.<sup>13</sup> When words are used in such circumstances and are of a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about substantive evils, the government may act.<sup>14</sup> An officer must be able to show either that an immediate serious violence was to be expected or was advocated or that past conduct furnished reason to believe that such advocacy was then contemplated.<sup>15</sup> We are not talking about speech that causes unrest, dissatisfaction or that stirs people to anger. Such speech is protected. We are talking about speech that advocates violence. Such speech can be prohibited only when it is directed to inciting imminent lawless action and is likely to produce such action.<sup>16</sup> We are talking about speech that is likely to produce imminent disorder, speech that incites lawless action, speech that will result in violence. A spectator who says "we'll take the fucking streets later" is protected.<sup>17</sup> For his speech to reach the "speech plus" category, the speaker must be inciting lawless action.

FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY

When you think about it, the right to assembly is the right to free speech in a group. People have a right to gather and discuss their ideas and advocate those ideas jointly. As long as this is done in a peaceful manner, it is of no concern to the police. When the exercise of the right to assembly comes into conflict with the enjoyment of other well recognized rights: the police are often called to resolve the conflict. Some give and take is expected. Participants in the Boston Marathon, the Patriot' Super Bowl celebration, various parades and walks for charities , have all gathered and no doubt have annoyed non-participants. People also gather for political purposes.

City streets, sidewalks and parks are public forums. They are recognized as normal places for exchange of ideas. This does not mean that the freedom is beyond all control. Government may regulate the time, place and manner of assembly if there is a strong rational reason, unrelated to the suppression of free expression.<sup>18</sup> Such as traffic flow and public safety.

Public property, which is not a traditional forum for public discussion and which is used for government business can be regulated to a greater degree. In addition to time, place and manner regulations, the state may reserve the forum for its intended purposes. When government property is not dedicated to open communication the government may restrict its use to those on official business.<sup>20</sup> The state has the power to preserve the property under its control to the use for which it was lawfully dedicated. Thus, conduct which interferes with the activity of a draft board, welfare office, school or court proceeding can be prohibited. Obviously, there is no right to uninvited access to private property, even business property. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has stated that the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights allows limited access to common areas of shopping malls for election related activity (distribution of campaign literature, gathering signatures) only. The management of the shopping malls may place reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on this activity.<sup>21</sup>

Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 269, sections 1, 2, and 4 make it a crime for five or more persons, being armed with clubs or other dangerous weapons, or ten or more persons, whether armed or not, to unlawful, riotously or tumultuously assemble. If they do not immediately and peacefully disperse upon command of the police or other officials in the name of the commonwealth, they may be arrested and charged with unlawful assembly. These statutes have their origin in common law. They contemplate a meeting with intent to commit a crime by open force, or to execute a common design, lawful or unlawful, in an unauthorized manner likely to cause courageous people to apprehend a breach of the peace. It must be such to alarm reasonable persons.

DISTURBING THE PEACE, DISORDERLY PERSONS, RESISTING ARREST

I. Introduction.

The right of the people to express their views openly, no matter how unpopular they may be is undeniable. Freedom of speech is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and Article 16 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights. Equally undeniable is the right of the people to assemble in an orderly and peaceable manner. Freedom of assembly is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and Article 19 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights. When the right of the people to express their views openly comes into conflict with the enjoyment of other well recognized rights of individuals, however, the police are often called to the scene to resolve the conflict. Three options that may be used to resolve such conflicts are discussed below.

II. Disturbing the Peace.

Disturbing the peace is a common law crime, which has an express statutory penalty under G.L. c. 272, s. 53. This crime prohibits activities which:

1. Most people find to be unreasonably disruptive; and
2. Which do in fact infringe on someone's right not to be disturbed.

This crime carries a right of arrest, if it occurs in the officer's presence and in a public place under G.L. c. 272, s. 54. Under common law, this crime is a misdemeanor, which amounts to a breach of peace, in either a public or private place, for which an officer would have an in presence right of arrest. This charge would be appropriate in every case in which a "disorderly" arrest could also be made, and would be the required charge when disruptive activity could not be properly charged as "disorderly."

Example: Those who block a public street or highway to which the public has an easement of passage, and thereby interfere with this easement are creating a nuisance. Those blocking the street would be considered disturbers of the peace under the common law, since their conduct tends to annoy anyone present and not favoring it, and they could be so charged. The fact that the police are called to the scene is indicative that citizens are annoyed.

III. Disorderly Persons.

This crime is punishable under G.L. c. 272, s. 53. The elements of the crime of a disorderly person are defined as

Persons who, with purpose to cause public inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating the risk thereof:

1. Engage in fighting or threatening, or in violent or tumultuous behavior, or
2. Create a hazardous or physically offensive condition by any act which serves no legitimate purpose of the actor.

This statute carries both a common law, and statutory right of arrest under G.L. c. 272, s. 54. It must occur in the officer's presence and on a public way or other public place. A charge of disorderly person can only be applied to conduct which involves no lawful exercise of the federal or state constitutional rights noted above in Section I.

Generally speaking, if a person's activity consists of speech alone, it will be protected. However, speech might be prohibited if it consists of "fighting words" that by their very utterance inflict injury; or "speech plus" words that tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace.

IV. Resisting Arrest.

Persons commit the crime of resisting arrest, under G.L. c. 268, s. 32B, if they knowingly prevent or attempt to prevent a police officer from effecting an arrest by:

1. Using or threatening to use physical force or violence against the police officer or another or:
2. Using any other means which creates a substantial risk of causing bodily injury to such police officer or another.

Those who physically interfere would also be subject to arrest as a Disorderly Person.

Fourth Amendment

Amendment IV.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Article XIV, Declaration of Rights, Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Every subject has a right to be secure from all unreasonable searches and seizures, of his person, his houses, his papers, and all his possessions. All warrants, therefore, are contrary to this right, if the cause or foundation of them be nor previously supported by oath or affirmation; and if the order in the warrant to a Civil Officer, to make search in suspected places, or to arrest one or more suspected persons, or to seize their property, be not accompanied with a special designation of the persons or objects of search, arrest, or seizure; and no warrant ought to be issued but in cases, and with the formalities prescribed by the laws.

Introduction

The Fourth Amendment comes into play daily as perform the functions of a police officer. The freedom against unreasonable searches and seizures will apply to almost every action that we take as a police officer. In the course of applying principles of criminal procedure we must analyze what course of action would be reasonable given all the facts of a certain situation.

Exclusionary Rule and Fruit of the Poisonous Tree

The United States Supreme Court created the exclusionary rule in Weeks v. United States, 232 US 383 (1914) and applied the rule to the states in Mapp v. Ohio, 367 US 643 (1961). The exclusionary rule was created to deter improper police procedures and is used to remedy violations of the Fourth Amendment by police officers. Any evidence that is discovered by police in violation of an individual's rights granted by the Fourth Amendment is considered Fruit of the Poisonous Tree and will be suppressed in a court of law. In other words, any evidence obtained illegally by police officers will be excluded from use in the trial and prosecution of the arrested person.

ARREST

The Fourth Amendment states "the right of people to be secure in their persons, house, papers and effect". The following discussions on Arrest and Threshold Inquiries will focus on that right of individuals to secure in their persons. When police officers seize an individual, either during an arrest or while conducting a threshold inquiry, the principles of the Fourth Amendment apply and must be followed.

During the Introduction to the Legal Process course an arrest was defined as the taking under real assumed authority, custody of another person for purposes of holding him to answer to a criminal charge or from preventing harm to himself or others. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has ruled that there are three elements that must be present in order for an arrest to occur (Mass General Hospital v. Revere, 385 Mass 772, 1982):

Intent - The court will use an objective test to determine if the police officer had the intent to arrest. Would a reasonable person feel free to leave under the circumstances? Based on the police officers words and actions if a reasonable person feels free to leave - there is no intention to arrest. If the reasonable person does not feel free to leave - there is an intention to arrest.

Communication - The second element in the definition of an arrest will be satisfied if based on the officer's words and actions that the person understands that he is being arrested. As human beings we communicate both verbally and non-verbally. Both forms of our communication process will be taken into account by the courts. Generally, we clearly state to the individual that they are under arrest. But our intent may be communicated non-verbally by placing the person in handcuffs and seating them in the back seat of our cruiser.

Control - There must be some type of physical restraint of the individual to satisfy the third element of an arrest. The physical constraints can be an actual seizure - some type of physical restraint (holding onto an individual, handcuffing, placing in the rear of the police cruiser). The control also can be constructive where an individual obeys the Officer's verbal commands and submits to their authority.

The exact moment of arrest is extremely important to police officers as certain rights may attach to the arrested person (right to use the telephone, right to know true grounds for the arrest, right to be examined for injuries, Jenkins hearing etc.). In order for an arrest to be lawful a police officer must have probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed, the offense must be arrestable and the officer must be within his jurisdiction.

Lawful Arrests consist of:

I. Probable Cause - Probable cause has been defined as the level of proof more than reasonable suspicion but less than proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Probable cause exists if a reasonable and prudent person would believe the arrested committed the crime charged. Police officers establish probable cause by personal observations and information received during the course of the investigation. In Massachusetts, police officers must satisfy a two prong test in order to use information received as a basis of probable cause - RELIABILITY & BASIS OF KNOWLEDGE.

In Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, (1964), and in Spinelli v. United States, 394 U.S. 410 (1969), the US Supreme Court stated that if an informant's tip is to be used as the basis for establishing probable cause, then two factors must be demonstrated.

First, the informant must be shown to be reliable. Some informants are considered to be reliable in themselves, i.e. police officers, known victims, or known witnesses to a crime. Another type of reliable informant is one who has given information in the past, which information has resulted in convictions, or an arrest and the seizure of contraband. Similarly, an informant who makes a declaration against penal interest (admits his own involvement in a crime) is also considered reliable.

Second, the informant must be shown to have a basis of knowledge concerning the information which he claims to possess. There must be facts to support his conclusions. These are the underlying facts upon which a neutral magistrate could determine the existence of probable cause.

If either "prong" of this two part test is missing, probable cause will not exist, unless the information is supplemented by other facts, such as corroboration by the officer's observations.

In Illinois v. Gates, 103 S.Ct. 2317 (1983), the US Supreme Court found this test to be too rigid, and adopted a "totality of the circumstances" test to determine probable cause. However, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Commonwealth v. Upton, 476 N.E.2d 548 (1985) held that the Gates test was "unacceptably shapeless and permissive" to satisfy the substantive protection required by article 14 of the Declaration of Rights of the Massachusetts Constitution.

Plainly speaking, officers in Massachusetts are required by the State Constitution to continue to apply the two-prong Aguilar-Spinelli test when using an informant's tip as the basis for probable cause. This test applies to arrest warrants and search warrants, as well as warrantless arrests, searches and/or seizures. If an officer is going to use an informant's tip as the basis for establishing probable cause, he must be prepared to show that the informant is reliable, and has a basis of knowledge.

2. Arrestable Offenses -As we learned in Intro to the Legal Process (Hogan's hand) a police officer has the right of arrest for:

- A. Felony - committed in his presence
- B. Felony - based on probable cause
- C. Misdemeanor - committed in his presence AND amounts to a breach of the peace
- D. Misdemeanor - the offense has a statutory right of arrest if committed in his presence
- E. Misdemeanor - the offense has a statutory right of arrest based on probable cause
- F. Arrest Warrant - An arrest warrant is an order by the court to arrest an individual and bring him to court to answer to a criminal charge. An arrest warrant must be based on probable cause - the judge or magistrate will make a probable cause determination after reviewing the written statement police officer applying for the warrant. The person's name, address, physical address and offense charged should be listed on the warrant. If the subject's name is not known, a detailed description must be included on the warrant. The suspect must be able to be identified with reasonable certainty. Officers do not need to have the warrant in their possession in order to make the arrest. Rather the officer must have knowledge that the warrant is in full force and effect. Police Officers must have an arrest warrant in order to enter a person's dwelling for a crime that has been completed. An officer must also have a reasonable belief that the location is the suspect's dwelling and that the suspect is present when the arrest warrant is executed. Exceptions to the requirement of an arrest warrant are: consent, fresh and continuous pursuit and exigent circumstances.

In order to fall under the fresh pursuit theory officer must be able to show the arrest in the dwelling resulted from pursuing the suspect into the dwelling and that getting an arrest warrant would not be practical. The pursuit must be part of a continuing investigation with no break

Exigent Circumstances are present if taking the time to get a warrant would be unreasonable and there is a necessity for immediate entry. Examples of exigent circumstances include injury, violence and destruction of evidence. The court has noted several factors when deciding on the issue of exigent circumstances (Comm v Vz iriyahiranpaiboon, 412 Mass 224, 1992 & Comm v. Forde, 367 Mass 798, 1975):

- 1. Crime involved violence/suspect was armed
- 2. Probable Cause has been established
- 3. Strong reason to believe suspect is in the dwelling
- 4. Suspect may escape if apprehension is delayed
- 5. Evidence will be destroyed, lost or moved

There may be situations that police officers have to enter a third party dwelling in order to arrest a person named in an arrest warrant. Without consent, exigency or fresh pursuit being present, officers must obtain a search warrant to enter the dwelling as well as the arrest warrant for the suspect.

3. Jurisdiction - Police officers may arrest a person named in an arrest warrant anywhere in Commonwealth. As a general rule police officer may exercise their police powers for warrantless arrests within their geographic boundaries. In order for a warrantless arrest to be valid outside these geographic boundaries it must fall within one of the following categories:
  - A. Fresh and continuous pursuit outside the Commonwealth - Mass General Law Chapter 276, Sections 10A-10D allows a police officer in fresh pursuit of a person wanted for a felony to continue into a bordering state to make the arrest. The person arrested must be brought in front of the court in the county where the arrest is made.
  - B. Fresh and continuous pursuit into other cities and towns - Mass General Law Chapter 41, Section 98A allows police officers to arrest an individual in any city or town for an offense that was committed in the officer's presence, occurred in his jurisdiction and was arrestable in his jurisdiction.
  - C. Boston, Brookline and Newton - Officers in Boston, Brookline and Newton have full police powers up to 500 yards into the territory of each others departments (Acts & Resolves of 1998, chapter 212).
  - D. Mutual Aid Agreements - Cities and towns may enter into mutual aid agreements (Mass General Laws Chapter 40, Section 8G). These agreements give the police officers the same powers of arrest that they have in their own municipality.
  - E. Request for Police Officers - Mass General Law Chapter 41, Section 99 authorizes the Chief or commander of a police department in one town to request that the Chief in another town send police officers to assist them. There does not have to be a written agreement in place between the two jurisdictions. The request for assistance must be made by the Officer-in-Charge to the Officer-in-Charge.
  - F. Transferred Authority - If an officer observes a crime being committed outside his jurisdiction he should contact the local police department and request and obtain permission to make the stop. (Comm v. Morrissey 422 Mass 1, 1996).

Use of Force - Police Officers are authorized to use a reasonable amount of force when effecting an arrest. The amount of force used must be reasonably necessary to make the arrest, overcome resistance and protect others present. Officers should be guided by their Department Policies governing the use of lethal and non-lethal force.

THRESHOLD INQUIRY

One of the most valuable procedures available to police officers in performing their duties is the Threshold Inquiry. This procedure is a very useful tool, and when properly understood and utilized, it can be effective against the criminal suspect, yet protective of the citizen's state and federal Constitutional guarantees. Police Officers are authorized to conduct threshold inquiries by both statute and case law.

Mass General Law Chapter 41, Section 98 states in part "They may examine all persons abroad whom they have reason to suspect of unlawful design." "If a police officer stops a person for questioning pursuant to this section and reasonably suspects that he is in danger of life or limb, he may search such person for a dangerous weapon." The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court stated "we are of the opinion that MGL c 41, s. 98 constitutionally permits a brief threshold inquiry where suspicious conduct gives the officer reason to suspect the questioned person of unlawful design that is, that the person has committed, is committing, or about to commit a crime. What is reasonable within the principle of threshold inquiry must be decided in each case." (Comm v. Lehan, 347 Mass 197, 1964).

The United States Supreme Court addressed the issue in Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1 (1968). In Terry a 39 year veteran detective of the Cleveland Police Department was working in the downtown area, where he had worked for many years. He observed two men "that didn't look right." He continued to watch the men and saw walking back and forth looking in a jewelry store window several times. After one of the men looked in the window the men engaged in a conversation. After a while a third man entered the conversation. Believing they were about to rob the store the detective approached the men and asked some questions. Their responses to him were mumbled. He conducted a limited search of the outer clothing of each man and found a firearm on two of them. They were arrested and convicted of carrying concealed weapons. The Court stated in their opinion, "where a police officer observes unusual conduct which leads him reasonably to conclude in the light of his experience that criminal activity maybe afoot and that the persons whom he is dealing with may be armed and presently dangerous he is entitled for the protection of himself and others in the area to conduct a carefully limited search of the outer clothing of such person in an attempt to discover weapons which might be used to assault him.

STOP

An officer may not stop every person whom he sees, but may stop those about whom he has a reasonable suspicion of unlawful design. Simply stated this means if an officer observes activity, which based on his training and experience, leads him to reasonable suspect that a person has, is, or is about to commit a crime, the officer may briefly detain that person to investigate.

This detention may be based on less than probable cause, but reasonable suspicion is more than a hunch or mere suspicion, or a good faith belief. Reasonable suspicion may be founded on an officer's personal observations, or may be based on information received, together with the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from those observations and/or information.

Because the stop is based on less than probable cause, it must be brief and not turn into a custodial situation normally associated with an arrest. There are no specific time limits as to how long a Threshold Inquiry may last. Such will be determined on a case by case basis as dictated by the total situation, what the courts call "the whole picture." The officer should make a common sense objective determination as to how he may quickly, yet thoroughly, confirm or dispel his suspicions.

An officer may use a reasonable amount of force while making the stop. The amount of force must only what is reasonably necessary to bring to suspect to a stop.

REASONABLE SUSPICION

An officer may use the same facts and inferences in which he forms probable cause to form reasonable suspicion. The officer's suspicions must be based on specific and articulable facts. While one of the following examples alone is sufficient to rise to the level of reasonable suspicion, a combination of these examples may allow an officer to conduct a stop of a person.

- high crime area
- matches the description of a suspect
- in the area of a recently committed crime
- criminal record/reputation
- apprehension at the sight of police
- evasive answers
- flight from police
- unusual behavior
- time of day
- furtive gestures

FRISK

Reasonable suspicion to conduct a threshold inquiry does not automatically allow police officers to conduct a frisk of the suspect. The officer must have objective articulable facts which lead him to believe that the person with whom he is dealing may be armed, and thus posed a threat to the officer or others, the officer may frisk that person. Generally, a frisk is limited to a pat down of the outer clothing, and the area within the immediate control of the person. The purpose of the frisk is for PROTECTION. It is done to discover weapons. A FRISK MAY NEVER BE CONDUCTED TO FIND EVIDENCE. During the course of a lawful frisk on officer feels an object and it is immediate apparent that the object is contraband, the officer may seize it under the "plain feel" doctrine. If the officer has to manipulate the object in any way to determine what the object is, a search has taken place and will be judged on the higher level of proof - probable cause.

The frisk, like the initial stop, is based on a standard which is less than probable cause, it must not turn into a search. A frisk cannot extend into a pocket or inside articles carried by a person, except for unlocked hard containers (i.e. brief cases) which are incapable of being squeezed.

PURSUIT

In Massachusetts "the stop starts when pursuit begins." Officers must have reasonable suspicion at the beginning of the pursuit in order to justify it. Officers cannot use any facts or evidence that are obtained after they have initiated pursuit of a suspect. A pursuit is the functional equivalent of a seizure if the officer asserts his authority and a reasonable person would not feel free to leave without answering the officer's inquiry.

Officers may not seize a person by running after him. "Observation without activation of sirens or flashers, without command to halt, without display of weapons and without operation of the police cruiser to block a citizen's course or otherwise control the direction or speed of his movement is not pursuit." (Michigan v. Chesternut, 486 U.S. 567, 1988). A Boston case provides further illustration of this point - officers responding to a gun call saw a suspect running from the area, he quickly turned around and ran back into a tunnel. The officer broadcast a description and ran after him. A second officer was at the other end of the tunnel and observed the suspect dropping a shotgun into the bushes and commanded him to stop. The SJC ruled that the first officer was merely following the suspect and made no show of authority that communicated to the suspect that he had to stop.

MOTOR VEHICLES

The Threshold Inquiry may extend to people in motor vehicles, as long as an officer has reasonable suspicion that the occupants are of unlawful design. A vehicle, as well as its occupants may be frisked if the officer has articulable facts which lead him to believe that a weapon may be present. An officer must remember that he is looking only for weapons, and may not look inside containers which could not hold a weapon. Unlocked glove boxes and consoles may be opened. The trunk may not.

In Massachusetts, an officer must have a reasonable belief that his safety or the safety of others is at risk before he orders the occupant from the vehicle. Automatic exit orders are not permitted.

SEARCH WARRANTS

1. Definition: A search warrant is an order in writing in the name of the Commonwealth, signed and issued by a duly authorized person. It is directed to a person authorized to serve search warrants, ordering him to search in the daytime and/or nighttime, designated premises or persons for described articles, and to bring those described articles or persons in whose possession they are found before a court having jurisdiction.

2. Purpose of Search Warrant: The purpose of a search warrant is to ensure that any government intrusion is justified by a careful prior determination of probable cause and necessity. Anytime an officer wishes to intrude into a place or thing in which a citizen has a reasonable expectation of privacy, he should obtain a search warrant prior to conducting the search. The bottom line is that courts allow more leeway when reviewing searches conducted pursuant to a warrant than they do when reviewing warrantless searches. Warrantless searches will be discussed in sections which follow.

3. Curtilage: The area around a dwelling house that is normally associated with domestic use is known as curtilage. A reasonable expectation of privacy exists within the curtilage. The curtilage generally includes garages, sheds or other areas used with the dwelling. In United States v. Dunn, 480 U.S. 294 (1987), the court listed four factors that they will use to determine if an area is considered part of the curtilage:
  - A. closeness to the home
  - B. is the area surrounded by a fence, wall etc.?
  - C. is the area used for domestic purposes?
  - D. Did the resident protect the area from view of others?

4. Procedure to Obtain a Search Warrant: The person seeking a search warrant must personally appear before a person authorized to issue search warrants. Only law enforcement officials may seek search warrants. The application must be made in writing in the form of an affidavit. The affidavit must contain all facts, information and circumstances upon which a finding of probable cause depends. The affidavit cannot be supplemented by oral testimony. All information that supports a probable cause determination must be contained within "the four corners of the affidavit." If the issuing party finds probable cause, the warrant will issue. The courts have found that it is not necessary to name an informant in order to establish probable cause. This protects the government's interest in encouraging communication with law enforcement agencies. Only in situations where non-disclosure would be totally unfair to the defendant would an informant have to be named.

5. Issuing Authority: Courts that are authorized to issue warrants in criminal cases may issue search warrants. This means that judges, and clerks of court of the District Court, as well as assistant and temporary district court clerks can issue search warrants. Only a Judge may issue a body cavity search warrant.

6. The Affidavit: To ensure that the Commonwealth can demonstrate in writing that any given search is reasonable and based on probable cause an affidavit is required. The affidavit is held by the issuing party, and within three days after issuance of the warrant, it is delivered to the court where the warrant is returned. When the warrant is returned, the affidavit is attached and becomes a public document.

7a. Contents: An affidavit must contain the facts, information and circumstances upon which the affiant relies to establish probable cause. It cannot be based on rumor, suspicion, or strong belief. It cannot merely state the conclusions of the affiant. The two-prong test, reliability and basis of knowledge, will be used by the issuing person to determine probable cause.

b. Personal observations: It is more desirable, when possible, for an officer to include his observations in the affidavit. When an officer's observations are included in an affidavit, the affidavit must so state.

c. Description of Persons to be Searched: If a person is to be searched, that person must be described as particularly as possible. In most cases warrants permitting the search of "any person present" will be invalid. Such searches are only valid where the underlying circumstances presented in the affidavit demonstrate probable cause to search the premises, and that all persons present are engaged in criminal activity.

d. Description of Things to be Seized: Items to be seized must be described with particularity. This is to prevent general searches. The items can either be spelled out in the warrant or incorporated by reference to an attached description. For example, if a search warrant reads "all papers and files", the court will determine whether or not the affidavit provides probable cause to seize all such evidence. A warrant describing "all stolen goods" will not be sufficient. A more detailed description will be required.

e. Staleness: Probable cause must exist at the time that the search warrant is issued. Officers cannot rely on old or "stale" information. The court will consider the type of crime involved, the type of evidence (perishable, transferable, disposable).

8. Categories of Seizable Evidence: M.G.L. Chapter 276 Section 1 identifies the types of evidence that may be seized pursuant to a search warrant.

- A. Contraband - items that are not lawfully possessed (cocaine, heroin etc.)
- B. Instrumentalities - items that are used to commit a crime (firearm used in a shooting, knife used in a robbery, etc.)
- C. Fruits - property or articles that were obtained as a result of a crime
- D. Mere Evidence - anything that may connect a suspect to the crime
- E. Living Person - who has a current arrest warrant outstanding
- G. Dead Body of a Human Being

9. Seizure of Items Not Mentioned in Warrant: As long as officers respect Scope and Intensity boundaries, any seizable evidence found in plain view will be admitted. Such evidence would consist of contraband, instrumentalities, fruits of a crime, mere evidence of a crime, the living person on whom there is an outstanding arrest warrant, and the dead body of a human being.

10. Scope and Intensity: Scope is the areas to be searched. Intensity is any place within the scope where the object being sought could be located.

11. Service of the Search Warrant: M.G.L. c. 276, s. 3A requires that search warrants must be served within a reasonable time, but never more than seven days after issuance. This time clock begins to run the day after the warrant issued. Officers must have the search warrant in hand when executing it. They must present it to the resident if requested.

a. Knock and Announce Rule: Generally, police officers are required to knock and announce their office and purpose before crossing the threshold. An exception to this rule would be in circumstances where officers have reason to fear for their own safety, or that of others. Another exception would be in situations where the person inside has knowledge of the officer's presence and purpose, and making an announcement would facilitate the destruction of evidence and/or escape. If officers anticipate either situation, they should request a "no-knock" warrant from the issuing authority at the time of application. Officers must conduct a reappraisal of the factors that led to the issuance of a "no-knock" warrant prior to executing the warrant. If they determine a "no-knock" entry is no longer necessary they must comply with the knock and announce requirement. The opposite may also occur. Officers may have no reason to apply for a "no-knock" warrant but be confronted with facts and circumstances at the scene that would justify a "no-knock" entry. Officers may also use a ruse or trick such as stating they are from the utility company or are collecting for a youth sports organization, in order to gain entry to the dwelling instead of using a forced entry. The use of a trick or ruse will be valid as long as the officers have a valid search warrant.

b. Day or Nighttime Service: Ordinarily, search warrants should be served in the daytime. Sometime officers will want to serve the warrant in the nighttime, either because that is the only time the evidence will be in a certain location or because of public safety reasons. Officers desiring to execute a search warrant at night must obtain prior judicial approval. For search warrant purposes, the Supreme Judicial Court has determined nighttime to be between the hours of 10:00PM to 6:00AM.

c. Searching "All Persons Present": On older versions of the search warrant form there is a section that authorizes searching "all persons present". Evidence that is discovered while searching all persons present will be suppressed unless probable cause exists that the person searched is involved in the criminal activity.

12. Challenge to Facts in Affidavit: If a defendant is able to make a substantial preliminary showing that an affidavit contained a false statement that was made either intentionally or with deliberate disregard for truth or falsity, the court will conduct a hearing. Innocent mistakes will not be enough to disallow the affidavit. Administrative or technical errors will not invalidate an affidavit. If an untruthful statement is discovered it will be redacted from the affidavit. If probable cause still exist without the untruthful statement, then the affidavit will stand. The officer's credibility will be in serious question.

13. The Return: Within seven days of the issuance of the warrant, it must be served. Officers must make a return of his doings, meaning an inventory of items seized must be submitted. The officer applying for the warrant need not be the one that executes it. It is preferable that an officer who served the warrant make the return. However, if the return is made by a non-executing officer the inventory from must reflect that fact.

14. Anticipatory Warrants: Police Officers may seek a search warrant if probable cause exists that seizable evidence will be at a certain place at the time the warrant will be executed.

15. Body Cavity Warrants: A search warrant must be obtained to search for evidence that is located in a body cavity. A body cavity warrant must be issued by a JUDGE and must be based on a "high degree" of probable cause. After a body cavity warrant is obtained, the search will be conducted by qualified medical personnel.

16. Exceptions to Search Warrant Requirement: No search warrant is required to conduct a search under the following recognized exceptions: consent; abandonment; plain view; incident to a lawful arrest; booking search; exigent circumstance; motor vehicle inventory; motor vehicle exception; fresh and continuous pursuit.

17. The Search Warrant Form: The Trial Court of Massachusetts has promulgated a form to be used when seeking a search warrant. The form is designed as a packet which consists of an instruction sheet, an affidavit, an application, and the search warrant. Each will be briefly discussed.

a. Instruction Sheet: Before an officer writes anything, the instruction sheet should be read in its entirety. The instructions are in simple straight-forward language. By carefully following these instructions, officers can avoid making clerical errors that have been subject to litigation.

b. Affidavit in Support of Application for Search Warrant: Simply stated, in order for an officer to obtain a search warrant, he must submit a written application. In order to show that he is entitled to get an application, the officer must show, in writing, that he has probable cause to believe that seizable evidence can be found in a specific location. This proof is provided by filling out the affidavit. It is here that the officer identifies himself, his assignment, and clearly lists all the facts and observations in chronological order, on which he relies to demonstrate his probable cause. It is in the affidavit that the officers list his source(s) of information. If his source is an informant, the officer must include facts and circumstances that show the informant's reliability and basis of knowledge. Use as many pages as necessary. The affidavit form is easily photocopied, and Boston Police Form 1.1.1 is readily adaptable for this purpose. Each page should be numbered, and while it is not required, it is advisable to initial or sign each page. The last page should be signed.

c. Application for Search Warrant: The form comes complete with carbon paper. By leaving the packet together, information is transferred from the application to the warrant itself, saving considerable time. Make sure that any corrections made on the application are also made on the warrant. To fill out the application, fill in the blanks. The numbers below correspond to the numbers on the form on the following page.

- #1--Superior, District, or Boston Municipal.
- #2--Your name.
- #3--Rank and assignment (i.e. specialized squad).
- #4--Filled in by Court personnel.
- #5--Self explanatory.
- #6--Check appropriate box.
- #7--Self explanatory.
- #8--As in #7.
- #9--through #13 self explanatory.

d. Search Warrant: The information from Items #1, 4, through 8, is already on the warrant, because the carbon transferred the information from the application. Check for any corrections.

At the bottom of the warrant are three blocks to be check by the issuing magistrate. Be sure that the appropriate blocks are checked, and that you have provided probable cause to support these items in your affidavit. Be sure that the issuing magistrate signs the warrant.

e. Return: On the reverse s ide of the warrant is the Return. The date that the warrant was issued is listed here, as is the date that the search was made. Remember that a search warrant is valid only for seven (7) days. It is here that the executing officer makes his inventory. List all the items seized pursuant to the warrant. DO NOT INCLUDE items seized under plain view. List plain view items on a separate sheet of paper. Sign the Return in the presence of the clerk of court.

WARRANTLESS SEARCHES

Introduction

Neither the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, nor article 14 of the Declaration of Rights of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts prohibit all searches and seizures. Both, however, prohibit unreasonable searches and seizures. Generally, searches and seizures conducted pursuant to a valid search warrant are presumed to be reasonable. Those not so conducted are presumed to be unreasonable, and, thus, prohibited. To overcome this presumption, a warrantless search must fall under one of the recognized exceptions to the warrant requirement. Some of these exceptions are discussed below.

Both the 4th Amendment and article 14 protect people against intrusions by the government and its agents into areas that have a reasonable expectation of privacy. "the 4th Amendment's origin and history show that it was intended as a restraint upon activities of sovereign authority." (Burdeau v. McDowell, 256 U.S. 465, 1921). "The 4th Amendment prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures does not extend to a search and seizure conducted by a private party. (Comm v. Jung, 420 Mass 675, 1995). In other words - there must be some type of state action."

The Inevitable Discovery Exception

If officers obtain evidence in violation constitutional requirements, this evidence may still be admitted under the so-called inevitable discovery exception. In order to invoke this exception the Commonwealth must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the material in question would have been certainly discovered by lawful means as a particle matter. For example statements obtained from a suspect in violation of Miranda requirements led to the discovery of the body of a murder victim. Because the police were able to show that a search team already in the area would have found the body without the statements, the body's discovery was admissible. Similarly, drugs which were illegally seized could be admitted, because they would have been found during a routine booking search. If the constitutional violation is egregious, the evidence will not be admitted. Bad faith on the part of the officer shown by such activities as conducting an unlawful search in order to accelerate the discovery of evidence will be relevant in assessing the constitutional violation.

Consent

The consent search is an effective and efficient tool that is available to aid an officer in the performance of his duties. It is effective because it enables an officer to conduct a search for a suspect and/or evidence, generally, in the same manner as if he had a search warrant. It is efficient in that there is no probable cause requirement, and the time needed to obtain a warrant is saved.

The consent search is reasonable, because it is obtained as a result of a voluntary waiver of a known right. Any constitutional right may be waived by the person possessing that right. In order for consent to be valid it must be voluntarily, intelligently, and knowingly given. Police officers are not required to inform the person that he has the right to refuse consent, but the better practice is to do so. Any evidence of coercion will invalidate the consent. The courts will look at the totality of the circumstances surrounding the interaction with the police. Officers should also factor in the age, intelligence, understanding, and mental condition of the person giving consent.

Consent must be granted by the person who has the reasonable expectation of privacy in the place or thing to be searched. Usually, this will be the owner, but this is not a requirement. The person in control, the one who has apparent authority over the subject matter, the one who could lawfully admit or exclude others, is the person from whom the consent must be obtained. If there are two people who have joint access and control of an area present at the scene and one gives consent and the other objects to the search and denies consent to search, officers must consider this a denial of consent.

The person who gives the consent can limit the scope. Intensity is always governed by the size of the object sought. Consent can be revoked at any time, absent some exigency.

Consent may be given orally or in writing. Written consent is not required, but may assist an officer later in court when trying to prove the waiver was voluntary, knowingly and intelligently given. The burden of proving voluntary consent rests with the Commonwealth by clear and convincing evidence. This can be a difficult task in the face of a subsequent denial. This risk should be considered, and in a doubtful case, a search warrant should be obtained.

Abandonment

When an individual voluntarily gives up possession or control of their property they have also given up a reasonable expectation of privacy for that property. With no reasonable expectation of privacy, police may examine that property without a warrant without the examination being considered a search for constitutional purposes.

In order to determine if an item has been abandoned police should consider the suspect's words and actions. A denial of ownership can be an indication that the item has been abandoned. Throwing or discarding items during a pursuit in a public place will also indicate the voluntary abandonment of property. When a police pursuit is involved the courts will begin the analysis by determining whether or not the police had reasonable suspicion to pursue the suspect (remember the stop starts when pursuit begins). If reasonable suspicion existed any items discarded during the pursuit will be admissible under the theory of abandonment. If there was not sufficient proof to make the stop any items discarded will be suppressed.

Another time abandonment comes into the picture is with searching an individual's trash to obtain evidence. The main question here is the location of the trash. If the trash has been placed on the sidewalk for pick up - outside the curtilage - then a reasonable expectation of privacy does not exist. Any person walking past could examine the contents of the trash. However, if the trash is still located within the curtilage of a person's dwelling then the reasonable expectation of privacy exists and a search warrant must be obtained prior to the search.

Plain View

Police Officers may use information that comes to them through their own senses, most frequently through direct observations. Anything within the officer's view can be used by police under the plain view theory as long as the following three elements are satisfied:

Lawful Presence: In order for an officer to use the information that he has observed he must be lawfully present where he made the observations. The suspect's reasonable expectation of privacy cannot be compromised. For example, if an officer enters a third-party dwelling without consent or a search warrant to execute an arrest warrant and observes evidence of illegal narcotics on the table the drugs will be suppressed in court because the officers were not legally present inside the home.

Inadvertence: The Massachusetts Declaration of Rights requires that the discovery of the evidence is inadvertent or simply stated that police did not have prior probable cause that evidence was present and did not obtain a search warrant.

Seizable Evidence: An officer must be reasonably certain upon making the observation that the item is a form of seizable evidence - contraband, instrumentality, fruit or mere evidence.

Police Officers may use devices that extend or enhance their observation abilities such as flashlights, binoculars, alley lights and police dogs. Additionally, random checking of license plates by an officer on patrol does not violate constitutional principles and is an accepted practice.

Search Incident to Lawful Arrest

One of the most commonly used warrantless searches is the search incident to a lawful arrest. The reason that this type of search is reasonable is because the probable cause to arrest the prisoner supplies the probable cause to conduct the search.

Three questions should come to mind whenever discussing this type of search. When? An officer who has developed probable cause to arrest has at that same moment concurrent cause to search. Who? An officer may always search every person whom he arrests. Where? In addition to the prisoner, the officer may also search the area under the person's control. That area is sometimes referred to as the "lunging distance". This is anyplace to which a prisoner could lunge to get a weapon and/or evidence.

M.G.L. c. 276, s.1: Massachusetts officers are more limited in conducting this type of search because of this statute. Under the provisions of this statute, officers may conduct a search incident to a lawful arrest to discover weapons, which could be used to avoid arrest or effect an escape. They may also search for evidence of the crime for which the arrest was made. Thus, a person arrested for a simple assault and battery could only be searched for weapons, since there is usually no physical evidence associated with a simple assault and battery. Containers and places which could hold a weapon/evidence could also be searched, if they are open, closed, or unlocked. Locked items may not be searched because the prisoner could not obtain control of the contents. Due to the strict construction of this part of the statute by the Supreme Judicial Court, this search must be done at a time when a prisoner is in a position to obtain a weapon and/or destroy evidence. Once a prisoner has been adequately secured or removed from the scene, a search under the "incident to arrest" exception to the warrant requirement can no longer be made. If a prisoner has been handcuffed and placed in a cruiser, or taken to the station, the room or vehicle in which he was arrested could not now be searched under this exception. To avoid this problem, the search of the area immediately around the prisoner should be made about the same time that other officers are securing the prisoner. Of course, if the officers have developed probable cause that the vehicle contains seizable evidence, and the vehicle is on a public way, then the vehicle may be searched under the "motor vehicle exception". To date the Supreme Judicial Court has not addressed the ninth paragraph of c. 276, s. 1, which reads: "Nothing in this section shall be construed to abrogate, impair or limit powers of search and seizure granted under other provisions of the General Laws or under common law". This provision appears to negate the strict construction given to the previous part of the section by the Supreme Judicial Court. In an appropriate case this provision should be brought to the attention of the prosecuting Assistant District Attorney in order that the issue may be addressed. The reader's attention is also directed to the "inevitable discovery" section.

Booking Searches

The purpose of a booking search is NOT TO FIND EVIDENCE but to conduct a proper inventory of the arrested persons property in order to protect their property, prevent against false claims against officers, to prevent suicides and to assist in the identification of the offender. Boston Police Officers should refer to BPD Rule 318 for specific guidelines. A booking search will be conducted on any person being placed in police custody. Any seizable evidence found during the course of the booking procedure would be admissible under the theory of plain view. Strip searches at the booking desk cannot be part of the "routine" booking procedure. In order to strip search and arrested person the officer must have probable cause to believe evidence is concealed under the last layer of clothing. If the Duty Supervisor determines probable cause exists the search will be done by an officer of the same gender. (Please refer to BPD Rule 318D).

Exigent Circumstances

When there is a compelling need for immediate action, then exigent circumstances exist. Due to the emergency nature of the event, there is no time to obtain a search warrant and/or an arrest warrant. Officers may respond and make an initial entry to the emergency situation when they reasonably believe that immediate aid is needed. After entering, they may make a prompt warrantless search for suspects or victims. Evidence in plain view may be seized. The suspect, if any, may be searched as well as the area within his control. Once the exigency ends, so should the search. Any further search must be conducted pursuant to a search warrant. Contrary to the belief of some, there is no such thing as a "murder scene exception" which justifies a prolonged warrantless search.. Exigent circumstances could justify fire officials to enter a burning building without a warrant. They may remain there for a reasonable time to determine the cause of the blaze. Entries at a later date must be supported by a warrant or consent.

Protective Sweeps

There are times when a police officers enters a building or residence (fresh pursuit, arrest warrant etc.) that they make a limited search of other areas if there is reason to believe that there are other person present that would present a danger to themselves or assist the offender in avoiding arrest and effecting an escape. The protective sweep should be limited to areas in which an accomplice could be.

School Searches

Police officers routinely respond to incidents at schools which involve IV Amendment issues relative to search and seizure. Generally, the usual procedures regarding searches apply. In order for a search to be reasonable under the IV Amendment, it must be conducted pursuant to a search warrant which is supported by probable cause. The usual exceptions to the warrant requirement discussed earlier apply, as well as a unique exception in the public school environment. Two exceptions will be discussed here.

Consent can be given by either the owner, or the person in apparent control of the property. If two students share a locker, desk, school bag, etc., then either may give valid consent. Similarly, if the school administration has assigned lockers and given the keys and/or combination numbers, and retained a key and/or combination number, then the school administration can give valid consent to a search by law enforcement personnel

A special situation applies to searches of students in a school environment. If school administrators have reasonable suspicion that a student is in violation of a statute or school rule, the administrators may conduct a warrantless search to obtain evidence of the infraction. Any evidence of a crime discovered during such a search may be turned over to the police and may be admitted in evidence during a criminal trial. The Supreme Court has accorded deference to the school environment due to the need to maintain order and discipline in order to foster education. The search must be reasonable at its beginning, and must be conducted in a manner reasonably related to its purpose. It must take into account the age and sex of the student, and the nature of the infraction. NOTE: This should be an administrative search conducted by school authorities without police involvement. If the police conduct the search, normal IV Amendment factors would then be in force.

MOTOR VEHICLE SEARCHES

The Motor Vehicle Inventory Search:

The Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, Article XIV of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts permit law enforcement officers to conduct searches and seizures only if they are reasonable. Generally, this means only with a search warrant. Both Constitutions consider some warrantless searches and seizures to be reasonable. One such search is the Motor Vehicle Inventory Search. The reason that this is so is because the purpose of the inventory search is one of protection and not one of criminal investigation.

Officers engaged in such a search are performing their community caretaking function of protecting the vehicle owner's property, preventing false claims against the officers and their department, and protecting the public from dangerous instrumentalities (weapons, dynamite, propane gas, etc.) often left in vehicles. The courts will recognize the validity of such a search, if the officers can show that they had lawful custody of the vehicle, and that they were acting pursuant to written department guidelines.

CUSTODY OF THE MOTOR VEHICLE.

Motor vehicles come into police custody in many ways. Vehicles might be involved in accidents, towed for parking violations, or following the arrest of the owner. Whether the vehicle is towed or secured on the street, once it has come under the control of the officer, it is in his custody, and he is responsible for the safekeeping of it, and its valuables. If the vehicle is left with a person having apparent authority to assume control over, no inventory search is necessary, because the officer never had custody of the vehicle.

WRITTEN DEPARTMENT PROCEDURES.

In order to conduct a lawful inventory search, there must be written department procedures. Boston Police officers are referred to Special Order 05-013, dated April 19, 2005. This Order requires that all motor vehicles secured by Boston Officers be searched. In addition to looking for and noting any damage, officers are to search the passenger compartment and any containers therein, whether open or closed. Officers are to also search glove boxes, consoles, and the trunk of the vehicle, whether locked or unlocked, if they have the keys, or access to these areas by automatic opening devices. The reason for these instructions is that valuables are often kept in such places, and they must be accounted for to effectuate the purpose of the search.

Locked containers such as luggage, briefcases, etc., WILL NOT be searched. The reason for this is that the locked container protects any valuables inside such containers.

Therefore, securing the container itself, and recording that fact will effectuate the purpose of the search. In the course of conducting the Motor Vehicle Inventory Search, officers sometimes encounter criminal evidence. Such evidence may be seized and properly admitted into evidence in a criminal prosecution under the Plain View exception to the search warrant requirement. Officers faced with a challenge to the admissibility of such evidence should refer the Assistant District Attorney to the references listed below. Officers should give a copy of S.O. 05-013 to the Assistant District Attorney prosecuting a case involving an inventory search.

Search Incident to Arrest

As stated above an officer can conduct a search incident to arrest of the arrested person and any area under his immediate control. This search extends to a motor vehicle when a person is arrested in or near a vehicle. The lunging distance has been defined as the passenger compartment and any container within the passenger compartment, open or closed (Comm v. Bongarzone, 390 Mass 326, 1983).

MGL 276 section 1 applies and limits the search to weapons that can be used to avoid arrest and effect escape or evidence of the crime for which the arrest was made.

Motor Vehicle Exception

The motor vehicle exception search is similar to exigent circumstances. Due to the inherent mobility of vehicles often there is no time to get a warrant, the courts has recognized and has established a bright line rule of the motor vehicle exception. Two factors must be present in order to justify the exception search: PROBABLE CAUSE AND PUBLIC WAY. If an officer has probable cause that seizable evidence is located in a motor vehicle and that vehicle is on a public way, a warrantless search may be conducted. The scope of the search would be the entire vehicle, any container open or closed. Locked or unlocked. The intensity of the search will be limited to places within the vehicle that may contain that evidence.

Fifth Amendment

Amendment V.

No person shall be held to answer for a capital or other infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

Article XII. Declaration of Rights, Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

No subject shall be held to answer for any Crimes or offence, until the same is fully and plainly, substantially and formally, described to him; or be Compelled to accuse, or furnish evidence against himself. And every subject shall have a right to produce all proofs that may be favorable to him; to meet the witnesses against him face to face, and to be fully heard in his defence by himself; or his council, at his election. And no subject shall be arrested, imprisoned, despoiled, or deprived of his property, immunities, or privileges, put out of protection of the law, exiled, or deprived of his life, liberty, or estate, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land. And the legislature shall not make any law that shall subject any person to a capital or infamous punishment, excepting for the government of the army and navy, without trial by jury.

MIRANDA WARNINGS

Both the 5th Amendment and Article XII provide individuals protection against self-incrimination. No person can be compelled to give testimonial evidence against himself. In addition individuals have the right for counsel to be present at any custodial interrogation by law enforcement officer and their agents (state action).

Prior to "custodial interrogation" Miranda warnings must be administered to the suspect. The content of those warnings are now familiar to law enforcement personnel, and need not be repeated here. The law does not require that the warnings be given verbatim as long as the substance of each is explained to the suspect. It is not essential that the warnings be given orally. They can be administered in a variety of ways. The better practice is recitation by the officer, who reads the warnings from his card. If the suspect is able to read and write, a signed written copy could also be used in addition to the oral recitation. Police officers must be able to determine the exact moment at which the warnings must be given. The general rule requires that Miranda be given when a suspect is in custody and is to be subjected to interrogation. Both of these elements must be present.

Custody: Custody is defined as a significant deprivation of freedom. While a lawful arrest would certainly be custody, an arrest is not the test. Custody is determined by examining the whole picture. Based on location, degree of suspicion, number of officers, style of questioning, etc. If the suspect would feel that he was free to end the encounter and walk away, no custody exists. If, however, a reasonable person would feel that his freedom to leave has been significantly curtailed he is in custody.

Interrogation: Interrogation is defined as express questioning likely to result in an incriminating response. If the purpose of the question is to get the suspect to admit his own guilt, or involvement in a crime, then it is interrogation.

Functional Equivalent: Interrogation can also occur when police use any words or actions, which they know, or should be reasonably aware, are likely to elicit an incriminating response. This is what is known as the functional equivalent of interrogation.

Waiver: As with any other constitutional right, a suspect may waive those enumerated in the Miranda warnings. The normal standards apply to determine valid waiver. However, interrogations must be recorded to avoid a jury instruction that the jury may find that voluntariness was not proven beyond a reasonable doubt. (Boston Officers see BPD Rule 332)

Invocation of Rights: If a suspect invokes his right to silence, then all questioning must cease, unless the suspect initiates, or the attorney is present. Officer could, under certain conditions, question about other crimes. If the suspect invokes his right to counsel, then all questioning must cease, unless the suspect initiates, or the attorney is present. However, no interrogation concerning any crime may now be conducted while the suspect remains in custody.

CASE EXAMPLE

Suspect was arrested for indecent assault and battery and brought to an interrogation room. Suspect was given a Miranda Waiver form and began to sign it. Detective Smith stopped him saying that he wanted to review it with him first.

Commonwealth v. Clarke (2012)

Juveniles: Before custodial interrogation takes place of a child between the ages of seven and seventeen, police must provide for the presence of an interested adult. Both have to be informed of Miranda, both have to understand it, and there has to be a time for a meaningful consultation. If the juvenile is under fourteen, this process is a must. Once the juvenile reaches age fourteen, he may waive the presence of the adult.

Booking the Deaf and Hearing Impaired: Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 221, section 92A provides in part that whenever a deaf or hearing-impaired person is arrested for any crime, the arresting officer must arrange for a qualified interpreter to assist such person regarding any interrogation warning, notification of rights, or taking of a statement. Unless this procedure is complied with, or waived by the suspect, the fruits of any custodial interrogation will be suppressed. Additionally, M.G.L. c. 263, 5A requires advising prisoners charged with OUI: alcohol of the right to an independent physical examination, and c. 276, s. 33A requires the notification of the prisoner of his right to use the telephone. To satisfy the requirements of these statutes, a qualified interpreter must be obtained, unless validly waived by the suspect. Boston officers should contact the Duty Supervisor, Operations Division, at 4680 to request an interpreter.

Massachusetts Six Hour Interrogation Rule. After being informed of the right to use the telephone (M.G.L. c. 276, s. 33A) and the usual Miranda warnings, a person who has been arrested, with or without an arrest warrant, but not yet arraigned, may only be interrogated during a six-hour period. This six hour "time clock" begins to tick at the time of arrest. This rule applies without regard to the crime or crimes being discussed. It also applies whether or not court is in session. A violation of this rule will result in the suppression of the statement and its fruits. A valid written or recorded waiver, a self-induced disability, a natural disaster or emergency will provide exceptions.

Sixth Amendment

Amendment VI.

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

The Sixth Amendment guarantees a person accused of a crime the right to counsel if law enforcement officers are going to interrogate them (i.e. attempt to obtain a confession). As stated in the previous section, the right to counsel is also guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment. However, there is a significant difference between the two of them. As a review, the right to counsel under the Fifth Amendment attaches to an individual when they are subject to custodial interrogation. The Sixth Amendment right to counsel has nothing to do with whether a person is in custody. It attaches to an individual at a critical stage. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has defined "critical stage" as at and after arraignment or after indictment by the Grand Jury.

If the accused has been arraigned or indicted the Sixth Amendment right to counsel has attached. As with any other constitutional right the accused may waive or invoke it. One the accused invokes his right to counsel, police officers, or their agents, may not interrogate him unless his attorney is present. The accused invokes his right to counsel at the arraignment when he accepts the appointment of counsel. If an individual gets indicted by the Grand Jury, they may not be aware of the indictment. When police officers come across this situation and want to conduct an interrogation, they must inform the suspect of the indictment and inform the suspect of his right to counsel in order to obtain a voluntary, intelligent and knowing waiver of this right.

The Sixth Amendment right to counsel is offense specific and applies only to charges for which the accused has been arraigned or indicted. This does not preclude police officers from asking questions about another crime that is under investigation (5th Amendment right to counsel may apply if individual is in custody). The Sixth Amendment right to counsel remains with the accused from arraignment or indictment until the judicial proceedings are finished.

Entrapment

Because entrapment is a complete defense to a criminal prosecution, officers must be aware of activities which could result in such a defense being raised and subsequently allowed by the court. The defense merely has the burden of producing enough facts to raise the issue. At that point the prosecution must prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that entrapment did not occur.

In order to understand entrapment, three basic definitions must be understood.

- 1. Entrapment: The inducement by a government agent of an otherwise innocent person to commit a crime.
- 2. Innocent Person: One who has no predisposition to commit a crime.
- 3. Predisposition: The suspect is ready and willing to commit a crime, whenever the opportunity presents itself. It does not mean that the suspect might commit the crime under some conceivable set of circumstances.

If the defendant can show that he had committed all the elements of the offense, but would not have done so but for the inducement of the government agent, then he will prevail with the defense of entrapment.

If the prosecution can show that the defendant has prior convictions for similar crimes; or had a reputation for the commission of similar crimes; or made statements indicating that he had been involved in similar crimes; or made first contact in reference to this crime; or had prepared for this crime, before police involvement, then the prosecution will prevail.

Officers assigned to undercover operations should be acutely aware of the pitfall of entrapment and avoid it. The use of decoys, false pretenses, ruses, tricks, etc. is permissible. Mere solicitation to commit a crime is not entrapment. It is also not entrapment to provide contraband or the opportunity to commit a crime. There must be predisposition before these activities occur. Even if there is predisposition, the police may not engage in conduct that is "shocking and outrageous." In other words, the government cannot involve itself directly and continuously over a long period of time in criminal activity. The police cannot corrupt the defendant and then arrest him.

MURDER

Chapter 265, Section 1

Definition:

Murder committed with deliberately premeditated malice aforethought or with extreme cruelty or atrocity, or in the commission or attempted commission of a crime punishable by death or life imprisonment = MURDER 1.

Any murder that does not appear to be murder in the first degree is murder in the second degree = MURDER 2

Com. v. Fleury, 64 Mass. App. Ct. 282, 832 N.E.2d 1145 (2005)

Second-degree murder was unlawful killing with malice aforethought, but without deliberate premeditation. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 1

Malice aforethought includes any unexcited intent to kill, to do grievous bodily harm or to do any act creating plain and strong likelihood that death or grievous harm will follow and it may be inferred from intentional use of a deadly weapon.

Elements:MURDER 1.

1. Death of another human being.
2. No legal excuse or justification
3. Deliberately premeditated malice aforethought (knowledge of such circumstances that according to common experience, there is a plain and strong likelihood that death will follow the contemplated act), or
4. Extreme atrocity or cruelty (use of means which are extreme as compared with ordinary means of producing death), or
5. Committed in the commission or attempted commission of a crime punishable by death or life imprisonment.

Right of Arrest:

This life felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or on PROBABLE CAUSE

Com. v. Gibson, 424 Mass. 242, 675 N.E.2d 776 (1997)

Deliberate premeditation for purposes of first-degree murder offense requires either specific intent to kill that equates with express malice or intent to kill, combined with planning how to effectuate that desire and evaluation of the pros and cons of proceeding.

Com. v. Linton, 456 Mass. 534, 924 N.E.2d 722 (2010)

To convict a defendant of murder in the first degree based on extreme atrocity or cruelty, a jury is to consider the following factors: (1) whether defendant was indifferent to or took pleasure in victim's suffering; (2) consciousness and degree of suffering of victim; (3) extent of victim's physical injuries; (4) number of blows inflicted on the victim; (5) manner and force with which the blows were delivered; (6) nature of the weapon, instrument, or method used in the killing; and (7) the disproportion between the means needed to cause death and those employed.

Com. v. Gunter, 427 Mass. 259, 692 N.E.2d 515 (1998)

To make out case of felony murder, prosecutor need only establish that defendant committed a homicide while engaged in commission of felony; effect of felony murder rule is to substitute intent to commit underlying felony for the malice aforethought required for murder, and thus rule is one of constructive malice. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 1.

Manslaughter

Chapter 265, Section 13

Definition:

Unlawful killing of another human being which is caused by an act which constitutes such disregard of probable harmful consequences to another as to constitute wanton or reckless conduct.

VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER: A killing occurring in sudden transport of passion upon reasonable provocation and without malice or upon sudden combat. It is characterized by a real design or purpose to kill but without malice.

Com. v. Kane, 388 Mass. 128, 133, 445 N.E.2d 598, 601 (1983)

Murder is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought, and the distinction between murder and manslaughter is the presence or absence of malice

Elements:

1. Death of another person.
2. By an act which constitutes such disregard of probable harmful consequences to another as to constitute wanton and reckless conduct although not committed with the intention of causing death.

OR

1. Death of another person
2. In a sudden transport of passion or heat of blood
3. Upon reasonable provocation
4. Without malice

Right of Arrest:

Whoever commits manslaughter shall, except as hereinafter provided, be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than twenty years or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars and imprisonment in jail or a house of correction for not more than two and one half years. Whoever commits manslaughter while violating the provisions of sections 102 to 102C, inclusive, of chapter 266 shall be imprisoned in the state prison for life or for any term of years.

Com. v. Life Care Centers of Am., Inc., 456 Mass. 826, 926 N.E.2d 206 (2010)

“Involuntary manslaughter” is an unlawful homicide unintentionally caused by an act which constitutes such a disregard of probable harmful consequences to another as to amount to wanton or reckless conduct. M.G.L.A, c. 265, § 13.

Wanton or reckless conduct for purposes of involuntary manslaughter generally involves a wilful act that is undertaken in disregard of the probable harm to others that may result.

Reckless conduct for purposes of involuntary manslaughter does not require that the actor intend the specific result of his or her conduct, but only that he or she intended to do the reckless act

INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER:

So called involuntary manslaughter is unlawful homicide unintentionally caused by an act which constitutes such a disregard and probable harmful consequences to another as to constitute wanton and reckless conduct.

•MANSLAUGHTER –

Com. v. Acevedo, 446 Mass. 435, 845 N.E.2d 274 (2006)

Voluntary manslaughter” is an unlawful killing arising not from malice, but from sudden passion induced by reasonable provocation, sudden combat, or excessive force in self-defense.

Reasonable provocation” such as would support instruction on voluntary manslaughter is provocation that would have been likely to produce in an ordinary person such a state of passion, anger, fear, fright, or nervous excitement as would eclipse his capacity for reflection or restraint.

- Unlawful -- without justification or excuse
- There is no statutory definition of manslaughter.
- Malice either expressed or implied, distinguishes murder from manslaughter.
- While manslaughter requires an intentional act of omission, it is not necessary to prove that the defendant intended to kill. It is sufficient that the defendant intended the act that resulted in death.
- Defendant is guilty of manslaughter if victim of robbery dies from fright inflicted in robbery.
- There is no distinction between "voluntary" or "involuntary" manslaughter by statute.
- Manslaughter is also the unlawful killing without malice in the commission of an unlawful act, malum in se, which is not a felony.
- A lawful act accomplished in a wanton or reckless manner and resulting in death is sufficient basis for manslaughter.
- Comm. v. Persampieri - A husband who taunted his wife, already under the influence of depression, to commit suicide, who told her where the gun was located, loaded it for her and instructed her in its operation, was properly convicted of manslaughter.
- Comm. v. Atencio -- participants in a game of Russian Roulette in which the victim killed himself, were convicted of manslaughter.
- No manslaughter in a drag race where one of the participants was killed without collision with the other because much was left to the skill of the competitors. In "Russian Roulette", it is a matter of pure chance.
- Comm. v. Mink -- defendant was attempting suicide -- her boyfriend attempted to intervene and was killed. The court upheld her conviction for manslaughter because the defendant's act which caused the homicide was an act malum in se.

Assault-Common Law

Section 13A. (a) Whoever commits an assault or an assault and battery upon another shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 2 1/2 years in a house of correction or by a fine of not more than $1,000.

Right of Arrest:

This misdemeanor is arrestable IN PRESENCE since it amounts to a breach of the peace.
(There is no statutory right of arrest.)

Two types of Assault

1. In the case of an Attempted Battery type of assault, although the commonwealth must prove that the defendant attempted to do bodily harm, there is no requirement that the victim be aware of the attempt or be put in fear by it.

EXAMPLE-THROWING A PUNCH AT SOMEONE

2. In the case of a Threatened Battery type of assault, the commonwealth must prove that the defendant engaged in objectivity menacing conduct with the intent to put the victim in fear of immediate bodily harm.

EXAMPLE SHAKING A FIST AT SOMEONE AND SAYING I GOING TO PUNCH YOU IN THE FACE

JURY INSTRUCTIONS-ASSAULT

An assault may be committed in either of two ways. It is either an attempted battery or an immediately threatened battery. A battery is a harmful or an unpermitted touching of another person. So an assault can be either an attempt to use some degree of physical force on another person — for example, by throwing a punch at someone — or it can be a demonstration of an apparent intent to use immediate force on another person — for example, by coming at someone with fists flying. The defendant may be convicted of assault if the Commonwealth proves either form of assault. In order to establish the first form of assault — an attempted battery — the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to commit a battery — that is, a harmful or an unpermitted touching — upon [alleged victim], took some overt step, and came reasonably close to doing so.

With this form of assault, it is not necessary for the Commonwealth to show that [alleged victim] was put in fear or was even aware of the attempted battery.

In order to prove the second form of assault — an imminently threatened battery — the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to put [alleged victim] in fear of an imminent battery, and engaged in some conduct toward [alleged victim] which [alleged victim] reasonably perceived as imminently threatening a battery

COMMONWEALTH vs PURRIER

As to attempted battery, it is established that the defendant must undertake "some overt step towards accomplishing [a harmful or an unpermitted touching] and [that he] came reasonably close to doing so." Model Jury Instructions for Use in the District Court § 5.402 (1997). See Commonwealth v. Dixon, 34 Mass. App. Ct. 653, 655 (1993) (elements of an attempted crime consist, in part, of "some overt act towards its commission, and failure or interruption"). Put somewhat differently, the evidence must establish that the defendant's conduct "approach[ed] the achievement of the substantive crime attempted near enough to warrant criminal liability in view of such circumstances as the gravity of the crime, the uncertainty of the result, and the seriousness of any threatened danger." Commonwealth v. Gosselin, 365 Mass. 116, 121 (1974). It is immaterial whether or not the victim was put in fear.

COMMONWEALTH v RUMKIN

Argument about a minor collision between an automobile and the defendant's cab burst into violence. A Boston police officer happened on the defendant, kicking the driver's door and side mirror of the automobile, now stopped on School Street in Boston near the Omni Parker House Hotel. In the driver's seat was Nancy Bulger, whose husband, William, had just left the car to call the police. Their teenaged son sat in the back. According to the officer's testimony at a bench trial in the Boston Municipal Court, Nancy was screaming and upset. William quickly returned to assist his wife and wrestled the defendant to the hood of the car. The officer intervened, separated the combatants, and after assessing the situation, arrested the defendant.

Commonwealth's proof that the defendant committed a simple assault.

On the evidence, the judge, as trier of fact, was not solely confined to evidence of the kicking. There was unrefuted evidence that the defendant tried to open the door while Nancy sat in the driver's seat awaiting the return of her husband -- and that she was fearful -- screaming and trying to lock the doors. See Commonwealth v. Richards, 363 Mass. 299, 303 (1973). Of the two variations in the assault theme, e.g., an attempted battery or an imminently threatened battery, see Commonwealth v. Gorassi, 432 Mass. 244, 247-248 (2000); Commonwealth v. Purrier, 54 Mass. App. Ct. 397, 400-403 (2002), the evidence is more akin to the latter than the former.

Assault and Battery(Misdemeanor)

Chapter 265, Section 13A

Two Types

1. INTENTIONAL A&B
2. RECKLESS A&B

Definition:

Misdemeanor portion:

The intentional and unjustified use of force upon the person of another, however slight, or the intentional doing of a wanton or grossly negligent act causing personal injury to another.

Elements:

1. Intent to place another in apprehension of an imminent battery
2. Intentional and unlawful use of force on the person of another
3. Lack of consent
4. Intent to touch

Right of Arrest:

This misdemeanor is arrestable IN PRESENCE since it amounts to a breach of the peace.
(There is no statutory right of arrest.)

JURY INSTRUCTION- INTENTIONAL A&B

First: That the defendant touched the person of [alleged victim] , without having any right or excuse for doing so;

Second: That the defendant intended to touch [alleged victim] ; and

Third: That the touching was either likely to cause bodily harm to [alleged victim] , or was done without his (her) consent., to prove an intentional assault and battery, the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to touch [alleged victim] , in the sense that the defendant consciously and deliberately intended the touching to occur, and that the touching was not merely accidental or negligent. The Commonwealth is not required to prove that the defendant specifically intended to cause injury to [alleged victim]

JURY INSTRUCTION- RECKLESS A&B

In order to prove that the defendant is guilty of having committed an assault and battery by reckless conduct, the Commonwealth must prove two things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant intentionally engaged in actions which caused bodily injury to victim. The injury must be sufficiently serious to interfere with the alleged victim's health or comfort. It need not be permanent, but it must be more than trifling. For example, an act that only shakes up a person or causes only momentary discomfort would not be sufficient.

And second: The Commonwealth must prove that the defendant's actions amounted to reckless conduct.

COMMONWEALTH V. COHEN

A District Court jury found the defendant guilty of assault and battery for intentionally spitting on a young woman with whom he had a disagreement outside a convenience store. See G. L. c. 265, § 13A. On appeal, the defendant contends that spitting on another, intentionally and without consent, does not amount to a prohibited touching under the statute. To the contrary, we conclude that such conduct does constitute an assault and battery.

"Assault and battery is a common law crime now set forth in G. L. c. 265, § 13A. An assault is an offer or attempt to do a battery. See Commonwealth v. Shaffer, 367 Mass. 508, 515 (1975). Every battery includes an assault. Commonwealth v. Stratton, 114 Mass. 303 (1873). Hence we need only consider the elements of criminal battery.

"The law of criminal battery protects society's interest in ensuring that its members are free from harmful and offensive touchings. Because there are harmful batteries and offensive batteries, there is a bifurcation in the law of battery. . . . In short, a physically harmful touching is so regardless of consent. But an offensive touching is so only because of lack of consent. . . . A consensual, offensive touching is a contradiction in terms. Hence consent is always at issue, and evidence thereof is material, when the alleged battery is not of the physically harmful type."

COMMONWEALTH v. BURKE

Here, the Commonwealth needed to prove that, without justification or excuse, and without consent, the defendant intentionally committed a touching, however slight, that was offensive to the victim. See id. at 481; Commonwealth v. Pease, 49 Mass. App. Ct. 539, 543 (2000). The Commonwealth presented sufficient evidence to establish that the defendant had intentionally spat on the victim without her consent, and that she found it offensive.

The absence of such a decision speaks to the self-evident nature of the conclusion. "The offensive touching may be direct, as by striking another, or it may be indirect, as by setting in motion some force or instrumentality with the intent to cause injury." Commonwealth v. Dixon, 34 Mass. App. Ct. 653, 654 (1993). "The affront to the victim's personal integrity is what makes the touching offensive." Commonwealth v. Burke, 390 Mass. at 483. It cannot be gainsaid that intentionally spitting on someone is an indirect touching that is repulsive, physically offensive, and violates the victim's personal integrity. We are in accord with other jurisdictions holding that an intentional and unconsented spitting on another constitutes a criminal battery.

Assault and Battery(Felony)

Chapter 265 Section 13A

(b) Whoever commits an assault or an assault and battery:

1. upon another and by such assault and battery causes serious bodily injury;
2. upon another who is pregnant at the time of such assault and battery, knowing or having reason to know that the person is pregnant; or
3. upon another who he knows has an outstanding temporary or permanent vacate, restraining or no contact order or judgment issued pursuant to section 18, section 34B or 34C of chapter 208, section 32 of chapter 209, section 3, 4 or 5 of chapter 209A, or section 15 or 20 of chapter 209C, in effect against him at the time of such assault or assault and battery; shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 5 years or in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years, or by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(c) For the purposes of this section, “serious bodily injury” shall mean bodily injury that results in a permanent disfigurement, loss or impairment of a bodily function, limb or organ, or a substantial risk of death.

Commonwealth v Jean-Pierre

Loss or impairment of bodily function did not have to be permanent to meet definition of serious bodily injury, under statute defining and providing penalties for assault and battery causing “serious bodily injury,” and thus defendant who landed blow to victim's jaw which broke jaw and required victim to be fed through tube for six weeks pending recovery could be convicted of assault and battery causing serious bodily injury. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 13A.Com. v. Jean-Pierre, 65 Mass. App. Ct. 162, 837 N.E.2d 707 (2005)

Commonwealth v Marinho

Evidence was sufficient to establish that victim suffered serious bodily injury as result of his altercation with defendant, thus supporting conviction for assault and battery causing serious bodily injury; medical records stated that victim presented with “blurred vision” and “vision changes,” victim testified that he had to return to the hospital multiple times after undergoing facial reconstruction surgery to ensure that his vision kept improving, and stated that he experienced double vision for three or four months following the altercation and that he still was having trouble seeing at the time of trial, which was over a year after the fight. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 13A(c).Com. v. Marinho, 464 Mass. 115 (2013)

Commonwealth v Scott

Evidence that victim had suffered a “grade II” laceration of her liver as a result of assault by defendant in itself was insufficient to allow jury to conclude that victim had suffered an impairment of an organ, as required to support defendant's conviction for assault and battery causing serious bodily injury, as medical evidence concerning relative severity of injury was required for jury to determine effect of injury on victim without speculation. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 13A(b)(i), (c).Com. v. Scott, 464 Mass. 355 (2013)

Commonwealth v Johnson-2017 Appeals Court

We conclude that the grand jury readily could have found probable cause that the victim suffered serious bodily injury. Indeed, probable cause was established for all of the “three distinct routes for establishing serious bodily injury.” Scott, supra at 357. First, the grand jury could have found probable cause that the attack caused the victim to have a permanent disfiguring scar on his head. Second, the grand jury could have found probable cause that the victim suffered impairment of a bodily function, such as the vision problems that the victim was experiencing. See Commonwealth v. Marinho, 464 Mass. 115, 118-119 (2013) (recognizing that significant vision impairment can constitute serious bodily injury). Third, in light of the evidence that the victim bled so profusely from his injuries, the grand jury could have found probable cause that the injury caused a substantial risk of death.

Evidence showed that defendant intended to kill one or both of his attackers when he accidentally killed victim, and mere fact that Commonwealth failed to prove identity of defendant's intended victim did not preclude instruction on transferred intent; after defendant was beaten by three men, defendant fired into automobile in which two of the men were seated along with victim, killing victim.

Indecent Assault and Battery on a Child Under 14 Years
Chapter 265, Section 13B

Definition:

Indecently committing an assault and battery on a child under 14 years.

Elements:

Same elements as:

1. Assault and battery [where battery is defined as the intentional and unjustified use of force, however slight, upon the person of another] (touch - grope)
2. On a child under 14 years

Right of Arrest:

This ten year felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or on PROBABLE CAUSE.

Note:

This type of assault and battery involves intentional acts which are indecent. The main focus here is defining the term "indecent."

The general interpretation of indecent is: any touching that involves the breasts, buttocks, and genital areas.

“In a prosecution under this section, a child under the age of fourteen years shall be deemed incapable of consenting to any conduct of the defendant for which said defendant is being prosecuted.” Com. v. Davidson, 68 Mass. App. Ct. 72,(2007)

COMMONWEALTH vs. MIOZZA

The complainants were sisters. During the period alleged in the amended complaints (1997 to 1999), Mary [FN2] was between eight and ten years of age, and Jane [FN3] was between six and eight years of age. Mary testified that she was between ten and eleven when the incidents occurred, while Jane did not testify specifically regarding the time frame. The defendant was a friend of the complainants' parents. He visited often with the complainants' family and, on more than one occasion, had lived with the family for several months in their Fall River apartment. *569 The defendant would occasionally babysit for the complainants, at which times they were allowed to play with the family's PlayStation video game console. When the defendant began babysitting, the PlayStation was located in the living room of the family's apartment; by the time that most of the alleged incidents occurred, the family had moved to another apartment where the PlayStation was kept in the complainants' parents' bedroom. When babysitting at the second apartment, the defendant often entered the parents' bedroom because he was permitted to smoke there.

During the period in question, Mary, the older sister, would on occasion ask the defendant for permission to play with the PlayStation in her parents' bedroom, and in reply the defendant would ask Mary to kiss him. At these times, the defendant would lie on the bed and hold Mary on top of him as he kissed her on the lips. As they kissed, the defendant placed his hands on Mary's back or buttocks, or sometimes on the back of her head. The defendant often asked Mary to kiss him with an open mouth, but she refused and pushed him away.

Likewise, the defendant asked Jane, the younger sister, for kisses when she asked to play with the PlayStation. He put Jane on top of him while he lay on the bed and kissed her on the lips with a closed mouth. In one instance, the defendant held the door to the bedroom closed with his foot while he held Jane on top of him. On another occasion, he locked the bedroom door while he was inside the room with Jane; Mary was able to pick the lock with her thumbnail and observed the defendant holding Jane on top of him with his hands on her back.

When Jane was in the fourth grade, she attended a program at her school where physical and sexual abuse were discussed. After the last class, Jane wrote a note that disclosed the defendant's conduct with her. The program's director then contacted Sally, [FN4] the complainants' mother, and told her what Jane had reported. Sally approached each of her children separately and received confirmation directly from each.

After talking to her daughters, Sally called the police, who brought the defendant to the police station for an interview. The *570 defendant signed a Miranda waiver and admitted to asking the girls for hugs and kisses before they could use the PlayStation. He stated that he was wrestling with Jane when Mary saw her on top of him in the bedroom. He admitted to drinking four to five beers while babysitting, and stated that if he were drinking alcohol, there was a seventy-five percent chance that he did ask the girls whether he could put his tongue in their mouths because, when he drinks, "he does stupid things" that he later regrets.

3. Sufficiency of the evidence. The defendant argues separately that, assuming that the statute defines the crime adequately, the evidence was insufficient to convict him. He contends first that the touchings of which he is accused do not constitute indecent assault and battery. Case law on the subject of indecent assault and battery has established that "[a] touching is indecent when, judged by the 'normative standard' of societal mores, it is 'violative of social and behavioral expectations,' in a manner 'which [is] fundamentally offensive to contemporary moral values . . . [and] which the common sense of society would regard as immodest, immoral and improper.'" Commonwealth v. Rosa, 62 Mass. App. Ct. at 625, quoting from Commonwealth v. Lavigne, 42 Mass. App. Ct. 313, 314-315 (1997)

Applying this definition, we have held that the "intentional, unjustified touching of private areas such as 'the breasts, abdomen, buttocks, thighs, and pubic area of a female' " is "indecent" as contemplated by the statute. Commonwealth v. Mosby, 30 Mass. App. Ct. at 184-185, quoting from Commonwealth v. De La Cruz, 15 Mass. App. Ct. 52, 59 (1982). However, a touching need not be confined to these listed areas of the body to be deemed indecent. See Commonwealth v. Vazquez, 65 Mass. App. Ct. 305, 307 (2005). "In certain circumstances, the touching of other intimate parts -- including the mouth and its interior -- may violate contemporary views of personal integrity and privacy." Ibid.

We have held that an unwanted kiss on the mouth may constitute indecent conduct, where it involves forced insertion of the tongue. See Commonwealth v. Castillo, 55 Mass. App. Ct. 563, 566-567 & n.2 (2002). While a brief kiss not involving the insertion of the tongue is not generally criminally indecent, see Commonwealth v. Vazquez, 65 Mass. App. Ct. at 309, we do not "requir[e] that there always be tongue involvement for an act that might be characterized as a kiss to be found indecent, [as the attendant circumstances] may allow the trier of fact rationally to determine that the kiss was an indecent act." Id. at 307.

In the present case, the evidence, if believed, demonstrates both suggestive touchings and behavior with sexual overtones that together warranted the jury's finding that indecent assault and battery had taken place. Improper sexual overtones "violative of social and behavioral expectations" can explain physical contact that may otherwise be ambiguous. See Commonwealth v. Vazquez, 65 Mass. App. Ct. at 309. As in the Vazquez case, the defendant in this case was an adult in his thirties, while the complainants were children; the defendant, as a close family friend, sometime resident of the complainants' house, and babysitter, occupied a position of authority with respect to the children; and the defendant's kissing and fondling was surreptitious, occurring only when he was alone with either complainant and sometimes behind a locked or held-closed door. The evidence showed also that the defendant attempted to entice Mary into kissing him with an open mouth, thus transforming what in another context could be seen as an innocent expression of affection into a sexual overture. Compare Commonwealth v. Rosa, 62 Mass. App. Ct. at 625-627.

Com. v. Davidson, 68 Mass. App. Ct. 72, 74-75, 860 N.E.2d 24, 26 (2007)

In those less frequent situations, however, our cases do not require that the defendant himself perform the touching. Thus in Commonwealth v. Nuby, 32 Mass.App.Ct. 360, (1992), we held that a defendant who forced the victims "to fondle their mother's breasts" was guilty of indecent assault and battery upon two children under the age of fourteen under G.L. c. 265, § 13B. We also held adequate the judge's instruction that the perpetrator need not himself perform the indecent touching if he directs or commands the victim to touch a third person in a manner that would be offensive.

Assault and Battery to Collect Money

Chapter 265, Section 13C

Definition:

Whoever commits an assault and battery upon another for the purpose of collecting a loan shall for the first offense be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not less than three nor more than five years or by imprisonment for not more than two and one-half years in a jail or house of correction; and for a second or subsequent offense, by imprisonment in the state prison for not less than five nor more than ten years. Except in the case of a conviction for the first offense for violation of this section, the imposition or execution of the sentence shall not be suspended and no probation or parole shall be granted until the minimum imprisonment herein provided for the offense shall have been served.

Elements:

1. Same as assault and battery
2. Specific purpose of collecting a loan

Right of Arrest:

This is (for the first offense) a five year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

The key here is that there is an actual battery with the purpose of collecting money. Because this involves collecting on a loan, it changes from a simple misdemeanor charge of assault and battery to a felony, which of course gives the officer a right of arrest. A closely related crime is Extortion.

Com. v. Thompson, 56 Mass. App. Ct. 710 (2002)

In essence, what happened here is that Luciano purchased the drugs on “credit”: “G” gave Luciano drugs on the understanding that Luciano would pay him back with money. Perfectly legal transactions along the same lines, where goods are provided on the understanding that payment will later be made for them, are everyday occurrences. Such credit transactions, we think, fall squarely within the established meaning of “loan.” See *In re **98 DePasquale*, 225 B.R. 830, 832 (Bankr.1st Cir.1998), quoting from In re Johnson, 215 B.R. 750, 752 (Bankr.E.D.Mo.1997), aff’d, 218 B.R. 449 (Bankr.8th Cir.1998) (test for loan is “whether the creditor extended credit to the [d]ebtor ... and whether the [d]ebtor promised to repay the amount of credit advanced”). See also Firststar Eagan Bank, N.A. v. Marquette Bank Minneapolis, N.A., 466 N.W.2d 8, 11 (Minn.Ct.App.1991) (loan requires “an actual delivery of something to another and a promise of repayment”).

Providing another with drugs on the condition that payment for those drugs be made at a later date surely fits within these definitions. Accordingly, the statute encompasses the transaction shown by sufficient evidence to have occurred and we affirm the defendant's conviction of assault and battery for the purpose of collecting a loan.

Assault and Battery Upon Public Employees

Chapter 265, Section 13D

Attempt to Disarm(F)

Definition:

Whoever commits an assault and battery upon any public employee when such person is engaged in the performance of his duties at the time of such assault and battery, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ninety days nor more than two and one-half years in a house of correction or by a fine of not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars.

An officer authorized to make arrests may arrest any person upon probable cause and without a warrant if the person has committed an offense under this section upon a public employee when the public employee was operating a public transit vehicle and the officer may keep the person in custody during which period the officer shall seek the issuance of a complaint and request a bail determination with all reasonable promptness.

NEW-Attempt to Disarm(F)

Whoever commits an offense under this section and which includes an attempt to disarm a police officer in the performance of the officer's duties shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 10 years or by a fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment in a jail or house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years.

Elements:

1. Assault and battery
2. on any public employee
3. must be engaged in the performance of duty at the time of the assault and battery

Right of Arrest:

This is a misdemeanor that carries no statutory right of arrest. However, this would be arrestable in presence because it amounts to a breach of the peace.

Com. v. Correia, 50 Mass. App. Ct. 455, 737 N.E.2d 1264 (2000)

Conviction for assault and battery on a public employee does not require a showing of specific intent to strike a public employee, and may be based on either the intentional and unjustified use of force upon the person of another, however slight, or the intentional commission of a wanton or reckless act causing physical or bodily injury to another. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 13D.

St.1983, c. 100, approved May 17, 1983, substituted "firefighter, correction officer, sheriff, deputy sheriff, court officer, parole officer, parole supervisor, constable, an employee of the registry of motor vehicles having police powers, a public school teacher, a public school administrator or any person in a public school system having duties similar to a teacher or administrator when any such person is engaged in the performance of his duty at the time of such assault and battery," for "a fire fighter, a correction officer or an employee of the registry of motor vehicles having police powers, or a public...

Court officer's testimony that he had seen defendant in prisoner's dock in district court on numerous occasions was relevant to proving that defendant attacked court officer in his capacity as public employee, in trial for assault and battery on public employee, especially since officer had testified that he was wearing winter coat over uniform....

Notes:

Officers should be aware that although this covers any public employee, many times it involves a police officer, firefighter, and/or teacher. REMEMBER: in order for this statute to apply, the employee must be performing their official duties at the time of the assault. The suspect must be aware that he is assaulting a public employee. An example of this would be an officer verbally identifying himself. FYI: E.M.T's and Corrections officers are covered under a separate statute.

- This only covers assault and battery. The appropriate charge for assault is still under c. 265, s. 13A.
- This statute replaces assault and battery on a police officer, etc.
- According to Com. v. Moreira, 447 N.E. 2d 244, a person has no right to resist arrest, even a false arrest. A person does have a right to resist the use of excessive force.

Injury to Firefighter Resulting from Property Crime

Chapter 265, Section 13D 1/2

Definition:

Whoever commits an offense set forth in section one, two, five or seven of Chapter Two Hundred and Sixty-six where said offense results in injury to a firefighter in the performance of his duty, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years, or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars and imprisonment in a jail or house of correction for not more than two and one-half years.

Elements:

1. commits one of the offenses under 266: 1, 2, 5 or 7
2. resulting in an injury
3. to a Firefighter
4. in the performance of his duty

Result of Arrest:

This is a ten year felony. Therefore it is arrestable in presence or on probable cause.

Note:

- Ch. 266: 1 Arson/Dwelling
- Ch. 266: 2 Arson/other buildings, etc.
- Ch. 266: 5 Arson/motor vehicle, personal property valued over $25, etc.
- Ch. 266: 7 Injury or destruction of woods by fire

Indecent Assault and Battery on a Mentally Retarded Person and Assault and Battery on a Mentally Retarded Person
Chapter 265, Section 13F

Chapter 265, Section 13F has been amended to include simple assault and battery on a mentally retarded person, effective April 13, 1993.

INDECENT ASSAULT AND BATTERY ON A MENTALLY RETARDED PERSON

Elements:

1. commits an indecent assault and battery
2. on a mentally retarded person
3. knowing such person is mentally retarded

Right of Arrest:

This is a ten year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause

SIMPLE ASSAULT AND BATTERY ON A MENTALLY RETARDED PERSON

Elements:

1. commits an assault and battery
2. on a mentally retarded person
3. knowing such a person to be mentally retarded

Right of Arrest:

This is a five year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

This section shall not apply to the commission of an indecent assault and battery or a simple assault and battery by a mentally retarded person upon another mentally retarded person.

Chapter 123, Section 1 defines "mentally retarded person" as a person who, as a result of inadequately developed or impaired intelligence, as determined by clinical authorities as described in the regulations of the Department of Mental Health is substantially limited in his ability to learn or adapt, as judged by established standards available for the evaluation of a person's ability to function in the community.

Com. v. Aitahmedlamara, 63 Mass. App. Ct. 76, 823 N.E.2d 408 (2005)

Sufficient evidence supported conviction for indecent assault and battery on a mentally retarded person; service coordinator from Department of Mental Retardation (DMR) testified that victim had been eligible to receive services from DMR, and that only persons with an IQ level below 76 were so eligible, victim's IQ was significantly below that threshold, victim required assistance with virtually all basic life skills, and defendant knew that victim was retarded, given that he worked at group home managed by DMR where victim lived.

Indecent Assault and Battery
Person who has attained Age Fourteen
Chapter 265, Section 13H

Definition:

Whoever commits an indecent assault and battery on a person who has attained age fourteen shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years, or by imprisonment for not more than two and one-half years in a jail or house of correction.

Elements:

1. Same as assault and battery only done indecently (touch-grope)
2. Upon a person (either male or female)
3. Victim is age 14 or older

Right of Arrest:

This is a five-year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

This type of assault and battery involves intentional acts which are indecent. The main focus here is defining the term "indecent." The general interpretation of indecent is: any touching that involves the breasts, buttocks, and genital areas.

Com. v. Mosby, 30 Mass. App. Ct. 181 (1991)

The type of conduct that constitutes indecent assault and battery on a person over fourteen years of age is not defined in G.L. c. 265, § 13H. A definition adopted by this court provides: "[a]n indecent assault and battery is essentially an act or series of acts which are fundamentally offensive to contemporary moral values.... [I]t is behavior which the common sense of society would regard as immodest, immoral and improper.... Thus, in order to prove indecent assault and battery, the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed an intentional, unprivileged and indecent touching of the victim." Commonwealth v. Perretti, 20 Mass.App.Ct. 36, 43–44, 477 N.E.2d 1061 (1985). It has been held that the intentional, unjustified touching of private areas such as "the breasts, abdomen, buttocks, thighs, and pubic area of a female" constitutes an indecent assault and battery. Commonwealth v. De La Cruz

Com. v. Lavigne, 42 Mass. App. Ct. 313, 316, 676 N.E.2d 1170, 1173 (1997)

The judge was entitled to find, on the evidence he heard and viewed, that the defendant's touching had not merely involved the inner thigh but, because of the proximity of the defendant's fingers to Erik's genitals, had actually extended to the "genital area," the "pubic area," or the "groin" area, as commonly understood.

The judge weighed both the manner of the physical contact—a pressing of the thigh with the defendant's entire hand that felt to Erik like an intimate massage rather than a fleeting, casual, innocuous brush or bump—and the defendant's sexually suggestive inquiries accompanying the contact, which were immediately understood by Erik to be an invitation to a sexual encounter.

Com. v. Lavigne, 26 Mass. App. Ct. 262 (1988)

The conduct engaged in by the defendant falls within the boundaries of conduct found to constitute an unnatural and lascivious act by decisions prior to the dates of the incidents in this case. See Commonwealth v. LaBella, 364 Mass. 550 , 551 (1974) ("oral contact with . . . genital area"); Commonwealth v. Balthazar, [\[Note 4\]](#)366 Mass. at 303 ("mouth on . . . genitals and on . . . buttocks or anus"). The conduct also conforms to lexical definitions of the term cunnilingus, [\[Note 5\]](#) which Massachusetts decisions include in the term unnatural and lascivious act. See Commonwealth v. Manning, 367 Mass. 605 , 609, 611 (1975); Commonwealth v. Hill, 377 Mass. 59 (1979); Commonwealth v. Deschamps, 1 Mass. App. Ct. 1 , 2 (1972). Moreover, as stated above, general mores condemn engaging in this act with a child under sixteen. Therefore, "[w]e find it impossible to believe that any competent adult would be surprised at the conclusion that the conduct . . . found [by the jury in this case] was prohibited." Commonwealth v. Hill.

(F) Indecent Assault and Battery on Elder with a Disability

Whoever commits an indecent assault and battery on an elder or person with a disability, as defined in section 13K, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 10 years, or by imprisonment in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years, and whoever commits a second or subsequent such offense shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 20 years. A prosecution commenced under this paragraph shall not be placed on file nor continued without a finding.

Assault or Assault and Battery on E.M.T.
Chapter 265, Section 13I

Definition: Section 13I.

Whoever commits an assault or assault and battery on an emergency medical technician, an ambulance operator, or an ambulance attendant, while said technician, operator or attendant is treating, transporting, in the line of duty, a person, shall be punished by imprisonment in the house of correction for not less than ninety days nor more than two and one-half years, or by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, or both.

Elements:

1. assault or assault and battery
2. committed on an E.M.T., an ambulance driver or an ambulance attendant
3. while treating or transporting a person
4. in the line of duty

Right of Arrest:

This is a misdemeanor that would be arrestable only if committed in your presence.

Note:

This involves both an assault and an assault and battery on an E.M.T. You can distinguish this crime from A & B on a public employee, for example, because you can use this statute based on an assault alone. For instance, a man takes a swing at an EMT, but misses. He can still be charged under this statute.

Com. v. Robinson, 74 Mass. App. Ct. 752, 910 N.E.2d 911 (2009)

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction for recklessly permitting substantial bodily injury to a child; defendant's 13-year-old daughter became sick, she lost 34 pounds during her illness, she stopped eating and was dehydrated, her abdomen was swollen and pus and stool oozed from a hole in her abdomen below her navel, she had bed sores, she could no longer walk to the bathroom and had to wear diapers, and defendant failed to get medical attention for her daughter until daughter was unresponsive. ## Reckless Endangerment to a Child 265, Section 13L

JURY INSTRUCTION RECKLESS ENDANGERMENT OF A CHILD UNDER 18

A person may violate G.L. c. 265, § 13L either (I.) by wanton or reckless conduct creating a substantial risk to a child or (II.) by wantonly and recklessly failing to take reasonable steps to alleviate such a risk. The defendant is charged with wanton or reckless conduct creating a substantial risk of (serious bodily injury) (sexual abuse) to a child under the age of eighteen. In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove three things beyond a reasonable doubt:

- First: That the defendant engaged in conduct which created a substantial and unjustifiable risk of (serious bodily injury) (sexual abuse) to [alleged victim] ;
Second: That the defendant's conduct was wanton or reckless; and Third: That [alleged victim] was under the age of eighteen years.

COMMONWEALTH v. David A. COGGESHALL 473 Mass 665(2016)

On August 19, 2013, at about 2:15 p.m., two Halifax police officers were sent to investigate a report of two individuals walking on the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) train tracks. They saw the defendant and his eleven year old son walking along the train tracks. The MBTA was notified, and it slowed the scheduled train to allow the police time to get the defendant and his son off the tracks.

The defendant was holding his son's hand for balance. The boy made several efforts to keep his father from falling, but at one point the defendant fell on his back and landed between the tracks. The officers noted that the defendant was visibly intoxicated. A heavy odor of alcohol was detected on his breath.

There is no dispute that the defendant was adequately identified, or that his son was under age eighteen at the time. The disputed issues are the sufficiency of the evidence of a substantial risk of serious bodily injury, and the sufficiency of the evidence that the defendant wantonly or recklessly engaged in conduct that created such substantial risk.

We conclude that the evidence supports probable cause to believe that the defendant exposed his son to a risk that no reasonable person would have permitted, namely, a substantial risk of serious personal injury.

Domestic Assault and Battery-Intimate Partner Violence 265, Section 13M

Section 13M. (a) Whoever commits an assault or assault and battery on a family or household member shall be punished by imprisonment in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years or by a fine of not more than $5,000, or both such fine and imprisonment.

This 2014 law does not override 209A but should be used for Intimate Partners

Right of Arrest:

This is a 20 year felony arrestable IN PRESENCE or on PROBABLE CAUSE

Com. v. Drew, 67 Mass. App. Ct. 261, 853 N.E.2d 215 (2006)

Evidence was sufficient to show that defendant intended to maim or disfigure victim during course of sustained attack, as required to support conviction for mayhem; defendant struck victim repeatedly with baseball bat even after victim became unconscious and fell to floor, defendant could have appreciated that blows he inflicted were causing victim's face to move closer to space heater, attack continued until victim's face pressed against space heater and burned face, and defendant then left victim in that position, pausing only to kick him before he left. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 1

Specific intent to maim the victim, as required to support a charge for mayhem, may be inferred from the nature of the injuries as well as evidence that the injuries arose from a sustained or atrocious attack. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 14

Although assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon is a lesser included offense of second branch mayhem, this is not the case when the two offenses derive from separate and distinct acts. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 14

Com. v. Ormonde, 55 Mass. App. Ct. 231, 231–37, 770 N.E.2d 36, 37–41 (2002)

On September 11, 1998, a Friday, Sally Paine was on duty, alone, as night auditor at a Susse Chalet motel in Seekonk. In that capacity, she attended to the reception desk. At about 11:50 p.m., a man, dried blood on his face, walked in and asked for an inexpensive room. Paine registered the guest, who was the defendant David Ormonde; he had presented a driver's license as identification. Paine assigned Ormonde to room 121, and gave him a plastic card key to that room. Paine gave Ormonde instructions on how to use the key and demonstrated its use as well.

Moments later, Ormonde returned to the front desk to say he could not make the key open the door to his room. Paine demonstrated a second time how the card key worked. Ormonde *233 asked Paine to come and show him how to open the door. She declined. Soon thereafter, Ormonde reappeared in the lobby, complaining that he still could not get the key to work and importuning Paine once again to go down to his room to show him how the key worked. Again Paine declined to leave her post to accompany Ormonde. Instead, she switched him to a different room, room 201, closer to the reception lobby, and issued him a new key.

Ormonde apparently found his way into his newly assigned room because, before long, a telephone call from room 201 lit up on Paine's switchboard. Paine told Ormonde, whose voice she recognized, that she could not leave her work station to help him. After a second, similar phone call, Ormonde resurfaced in the lobby. His television set was not working, he complained, and he was having fresh trouble with his card key. Vexed by Ormonde's repeated interruptions of her work, Paine walked in front of him to room 201, demonstrated use of the card key, and opened the door for him. Ormonde said he could not remember where the light switch was. Paine pointed to where it was and, at that, Ormonde put his hands around her throat and tightened them to a chokehold. While choking her, Ormonde dragged Paine into the room and forced her onto a bed.

As Paine struggled, Ormonde murmured, “You're going to be good. You're going to be nice. You're going to give me what I want.” Paine could not scream because her “throat was totally closed off.” For a brief period, Paine lost consciousness. She reawakened to a beating around the head, particularly the ears. Ormond then forced Paine on the floor by pulling on her throat. With his pants pushed down, Ormonde tore off Paine's pantyhose. He made contact with his penis against her buttocks and vaginal area. He continued saying, “Be good” and “You're going to be nice.” There was no penetration. After concluding this sexual assault, Ormonde warned Paine, “You're not going to tell anybody. I'll let you go if you don't tell anybody.” He repeated that demand several times. Just as Paine thought her assailant was leaving, he seized her pantyhose and, using it as a ligature, choked her. Again Paine lost consciousness. When she awoke, Ormonde was gone. Paine made her way to her work station in the lobby and called 911.

Missing from the record, Ormonde argues, is any evidence that warrants a finding that he had formed the specific intent to rape Paine or to kill her. Intent, of course, is a factor that a jury more often than not must find by making inferences. Commonwealth v. LaPerle, 19 Mass.App.Ct. 424, 427, 475 N.E.2d 81 (1985). A defendant seldom accommodates the finder of fact with a declaration that he intended to rape or kill. Contrast Commonwealth v. Beattie, 29 Mass.App.Ct. 355, 357, 560 N.E.2d 714 (1990), S.C. 409 Mass. 458, 567 N.E.2d 206 (1991) (defendant told his girl friend that he was going to kill his wife). The inferences that jurors may draw need not be inescapable; it is sufficient if they are reasonable in the sense of being rationally derived from the evidence. Commonwealth v. Beckett, 373 Mass. 329, 341, 366 N.E.2d 1252 (1977). Commonwealth v. Russell, 46 Mass.App.Ct. at 308, 705 N.E.2d 1144.

As to Ormonde's intent to rape, that inference on the basis of the circumstantial evidence was not only reasonable, it verges on the inescapable: the dragging of Paine to the bed and to the floor; the pulling up of her skirt; Ormonde's lowering his pants; the pulling off of Paine's pantyhose; and the contact of his genitalia with hers. What Ormonde said to Paine as he dragged and choked her was verbal confirmation of his intent to rape her.

In the case of the attempted murder, Ormonde's intent to kill Paine is less obvious, but, on the record, may nevertheless be fairly inferred. There was evidence that, after warning Paine to say nothing, Ormonde choked her with the pantyhose until she lapsed into unconsciousness, and then left her in a locked room. Jurors could rationally and reasonably have inferred that Ormonde wanted Paine silent—therefore dead—and left her for dead. See Commonwealth v. Grogan, 11 Mass.App.Ct. 684, 686–687, 418 N.E.2d 1276 (1981) (evidence that defendant had put hands around victim's neck, with thumbs on the front of her neck, “in itself would warrant the jury in concluding that he intended to strangle her”); Commonwealth v. Shea, 38 Mass.App.Ct. 7, 14, 644 N.E.2d 244 (1995) (intent to kill could be inferred from throwing women overboard five miles off-shore). How to weigh the evidence was for the jury. Commonwealth v. Beattie, 409 Mass. at 460, 567 N.E.2d 206. Commonwealth v. Lydon, 413 Mass. at 312, 597 N.E.2d 36. Commonwealth v. Coleman, 434 Mass. 165, 169, 747 N.E.2d 666 (2001). Inferring Ormonde's intent to kill, given the circumstances, was not just conjecture.

Assault and Battery by Means of A Dangerous Weapon

Chapter 265, Section 15A

Definition:

Assaulting and beating another by means of a dangerous weapon.

Elements:

1. A + B -- i.e., the intentional and unjustified use of force.
The law recognizes an alternative form of assault and battery in which proof of a willful, wanton, and reckless act that results in personal injury to another can substitute for intentional conduct.
Commonwealth v. Welch
2. Through the instrumentality of a dangerous weapon, by means of a dangerous weapon, not with a dangerous weapon.

Right of Arrest:

This 10 year felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE and on PROBABLE CAUSE

NOTE:

Jury instructions given to jurors regarding dangerous weapons: the definition of a dangerous weapon also includes any instrument or instrumentality which, because of the manner in which it is used or attempted to be used, endangers the life or inflicts great bodily injury, or is reasonably capable of causing death or serious bodily injury. Thus, even if an instrument in its ordinary use is not designed to produce death or serious bodily injury, it may qualify as a dangerous weapon if it is so used as to be likely to produce death or great bodily harm.

An instrumentality is not dangerous when used for the purposes for which it was intended but may become a dangerous weapon by the manner in which it is used.

Comm. v. Farrel -- DW: lighted cigarette

Comm. v. Tarant -- DW: a dog

Comm. v. Barrett -- DW: aerosol spray when sprayed in face of automobile driver

*No part of the human body is a dangerous weapon (including human teeth).

Com. v. Lednum(75 Mass.App.Ct. 722)

The term "dangerous weapon" encompasses two categories:

(1) weapons that are dangerous per se, "instrumentalities designed and constructed to produce death or great bodily harm," e.g., firearms, daggers, and brass knuckles; and

(2) objects that are dangerous as used.

COMMONWEALTH v CRUZADO

Appeal from his convictions of unarmed robbery and assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon and from his sentence of life in prison on the charge of unarmed robbery, imposed as a habitual criminal under G. L. c. 279, § 25. He argues that the Commonwealth failed to prove all essential elements of the unarmed robbery and the assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon charges

Facts. We summarize the facts the jury could have found. See Commonwealth v. Latimore, 378 Mass. 671, 678-679 (1979). Christopher Adams, an employee of Jack's Gas, a gasoline station in Cambridge, was not on duty at the time of the events in question, but was at the station working on his own vehicle. Tommy Tompkins, also an employee, had parked his white Honda Civic automobile in front of the station on Massachusetts Avenue. A sign indicating that Jack's Gas performed State vehicle inspections was leaning against the rear of Tompkins's Honda. Adams was eating lunch inside the station with other employees when he heard a loud slapping noise that turned out to be the sign falling over. As Adams and others ran out of the station they saw that Tompkins's Honda had been taken and that it was two blocks away. Adams and another employee jumped in a truck and gave chase.

The driver of the Honda, the defendant, stopped at a traffic light, and Adams jumped out of the truck, ran up to the Honda, and "ripped" the door open. The defendant stepped on the acceleration pedal and drove through the red light. After proceeding through the intersection, the Honda was traveling thirty to forty miles per hour. Adams's foot was stuck next to the seat, and he held onto the Honda by putting one hand on the inside of the roof of the Honda and holding onto the door with the other.

While driving, the defendant kept trying to grab Adams's hands to push him off the Honda. As the defendant proceeded through the intersection, another vehicle pulled in front of the Honda, and the defendant swerved out into oncoming traffic, crossing the solid double yellow line in the road. When the Honda swerved, the door swung completely open and then swung back. Adams's foot became dislodged, and he could only hold onto the door. The defendant traveled three to four blocks with Adams continuing to hold onto the Honda. Seeing a gap between vehicles in the oncoming traffic lane, Adams jumped from the Honda to the side of the road, slid across the pavement, hit the front left tire of a parked vehicle, and spun around. [FN1] Police were called and gave chase. The defendant was apprehended after he drove in the wrong direction around a rotary, struck an automobile, and crashed into a guardrail.

Unarmed robbery. The unarmed robbery statute draws substantially from the common law of robbery and requires a showing of a larceny from a person by force and violence or by assault and putting in fear. Robbery is distinguished from larceny by its requirement of actual or constructive force.

The defendant claims that the Honda was not taken from Adams's person or from an area within his control, and thus no robbery was established. In essence he alleges that he was not in the "presence" of Adams until "well after the theft was complete" when Adams "ripped" open the door to the Honda after pursuit.

"While the statute . . . speaks of a taking from the victim's 'person,' the offense is understood 'to include the common law conception of taking in a victim's 'presence' . . . and . . . cover[s] cases where the victim could have prevented the taking had he not been intimidated.' " Commonwealth v. Lashway, 36 Mass. App. Ct. 677, 679-680 (1994), quoting from Commonwealth v. Rajotte, 23 Mass. App. Ct. 93, 95-96 (1986). A larceny may be converted to a robbery where the assault is committed on a victim who has a protective concern for the goods and where the victim interferes with the completion of the theft. See Commonwealth v. Mavredakis, 430 Mass. 848, 854-855 (2000). Here, a rational jury could have found that the Honda was taken from Adams's person as the robbery was not complete when the defendant was still fleeing the scene while being pursued by Adams. The defendant accelerated the car and pushed at Adams's hands to attempt to remove the car from Adams's grasp and to complete the theft.

We also reject the defendant's argument that the element of force was not proved beyond a reasonable doubt. "Robbery includes all of the elements of larceny and in addition requires that force and violence be used against the victim or that the victim be put in fear." Commonwealth v. Goldstein, 54 Mass. App. Ct. 863, 867 (2002). In Goldstein, the defendant argued that *806 because a knife was brandished after control of the shopping cart holding the stolen merchandise had been relinquished, only larceny could be established. As we said there, "[a] larceny may be converted into a robbery where . . . a person who has protective concern for the goods taken interferes with the completion of the robbery." Ibid. See Commonwealth v. Rajotte, supra at 94. "[T]he nexus between the force or fear and the taking may be relatively loose and yet encompass a robbery." Commonwealth v. Goldstein, supra at 868, quoting from Commonwealth v. Lashway, supra at 680. See Model Penal Code § 222.1 & comment 2 (1980) (robbery includes force or threat of force occurring "in the course of committing a theft," as well as period of flight after commission).

The jury here could have found that Adams's chase of the defendant and his attempt to recover the Honda by jumping onto it occurred in the course of the theft. Accordingly, the defendant's use of force -- by accelerating the Honda with Adams still holding on and by attempting to dislodge Adams's hands from the Honda -- was employed to perpetrate that theft.

We also reject the defendant's argument that the Commonwealth failed to show that Adams had a "protective interest" in the Honda. "The essence of robbery is the exertion of force, actual or constructive, against another in order to take personal property of any value whatsoever, with the intention of stealing it, from the protection which the person of that other affords. . . . It is not affected by the state of the legal title to the goods taken." Adams had an adequate protective concern for Tompkins's car, which was stolen from outside their place of employment.

2. Assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon. As provided by G. L. c. 265, § 15A(b), as appearing in St. 2002, c. 35, § 2:

"Whoever commits assault and battery upon another by means of a dangerous weapon shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or in a house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years, *807 or by a fine of not more than $5,000, or both such fine and imprisonment."

A weapon can be dangerous per se -- "an instrumentality designed and constructed to produce death or great bodily harm" -- or dangerous as used, where the object is capable of inflicting serious bodily injury or causing death. Commonwealth v. Appleby, 380 Mass. 296, 303-304 (1980). See People v. Buford, 69 Mich. App. 27, 30 (1976) (automobile may be dangerous weapon as used). It is a question for the fact finder whether an instrument is used as a dangerous weapon. Commonwealth v. Appleby,

The defendant argues that his conviction of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, the Honda, must be reversed as the Commonwealth did not prove all elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt. "[T]he offense of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon under G. L. c. 265, § 15A, requires that the elements of assault be present, that there be a touching, however slight, that that touching be by means of the weapon, and that the battery be accomplished by use of an inherently dangerous weapon, or by use of some other object as a weapon, with the intent to use that object in a dangerous or potentially dangerous fashion." Id. at 308 (citations omitted). The second theory of assault and battery is that it is "the intentional commission of a wanton or reckless act (something more than gross negligence) causing physical or bodily injury to another." Commonwealth v. Burno, 396 Mass. 622, 625 (1986). The jury were instructed on both theories.

The defendant contends the battery was not accomplished because it was Adams who brought himself into contact with the Honda. The evidence was sufficient to sustain the conviction of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon under either theory.

Supporting conviction under the intentional theory of battery, the jury could have found that the defendant intended to use both the Honda and his hands in a dangerous or potentially dangerous fashion. While driving he intentionally accelerated the Honda as Adams was holding onto it, drove the Honda through a red light, swerved in traffic, and traveled several *808 blocks at a speed of thirty to forty miles per hour. At the same time, the defendant used his hands to attempt to dislodge Adams from the Honda.

Alternatively, the defendant's conviction can be upheld under a wanton and reckless theory of battery. The jury could have found that the defendant's decision to accelerate with a person holding onto the door and frame of the Honda was heedless of the potential danger to Adams. Not only was the defendant driving the Honda in a dangerous fashion, but he was also attempting to push Adams from the Honda with his hands. The reckless conduct resulted in Adams jumping from the moving Honda and suffering injuries. [FN2]

Adams suffered "road rash" to his ankles, hands, palms, and left leg; the skin on the palms of his hands was peeled back and his left leg was bleeding.

Because we decide as we do, we reject the defendant's claim that the asserted failure of the Commonwealth to prove all elements of unarmed robbery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon beyond a reasonable doubt deprived him of his due process rights.

COMMONWEALTH v. Kenneth A. APPLEBY.
Com. v. Appleby, 380 Mass. 296, 402 N.E.2d 1051 (1980)

On November 22, 1978, a Superior Court jury convicted Kenneth A. Appleby of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, to wit: a riding crop. G.L. c. c. 265, s 15A.1 The judge sentenced Appleby to eight to ten years in the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Walpole. Appleby appealed pursuant to G.L. c. 278, ss 33A-33G, and we granted his petition for direct appellate review. He alleges error in (1) the judge's denial of a directed verdict, and (2) the judge's instructions to the jury on the issues of consent and intent. We affirm the conviction.

Kenneth Appleby and Steven Cromer were engaged in a homosexual, sadomasochistic relationship for over two years, during most of which period they lived together. Appleby frequently beat Cromer. Appleby's general defense to the indictments was that Cromer had consented to the beatings, and that he, Appleby, had intended them for Cromer's sexual gratification. In addition to pressing his arguments on consent and intent in this appeal, he maintains that he should have had a directed verdict because the Commonwealth failed to present a prima facie case of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon as set forth in G.L. c. 265, s 15A.

By far the major portion of the Commonwealth's case consisted of the testimony of the alleged victim, Steven Cromer. There follows a summary of his testimony; material from other sources is so noted. The summary continues to the point where we first mention Appleby's motion for a directed verdict.

Cromer lived with Appleby during most of the period from June, 1974, until August 31, 1976 (the date of the incident for which Appleby was convicted). His entire relationship *298 with Appleby, including the homosexual acts, was forced upon him; he lived with Appleby as a "servant," performing household and other duties. Appleby beat him when he was dissatisfied with Cromer's performance of these duties. Their residence was like a "military camp," with Appleby owning a variety of weapons and employing them on persons in his "torture chamber," which Cromer was forced to help design.

In October, 1975, an enraged Appleby beat Cromer badly with a bullwhip and baseball bat, fracturing his kneecap. Cromer was hospitalized for this injury until December 4. He received surgery to repair the kneecap, and he spent several weeks on crutches thereafter.

En route to the hospital, Appleby suggested to Cromer that they tell hospital personnel that Cromer had had an epileptic seizure and fallen down some stairs, and Cromer, who had had seizures before, agreed and maintained the story throughout the hospital stay. They fabricated the story "(t)o cover things up." When he left the hospital, Cromer returned to Appleby's residence in West Springfield, where he resumed his "duties" as best he could.

When asked what distinguished this October, 1975, incident from other beatings, Cromer stated that it was "going a little over what I was used to." The October, 1975, incident formed the basis of the first indictment, on which the jury acquitted Appleby.

A second incident, the subject of the second indictment, allegedly occurred on February 28, 1976, when Appleby beat Cromer with a bullwhip because of displeasure with a sandwich Cromer had prepared. A friend of Appleby was outside at the time, and Appleby called to this person to bring snow to apply to Cromer's wounds. Cromer liked this "attention": "Other beatings I had, nothing came. No attention was made to me like that. It was unusual in that respect." The jury acquitted Appleby on this indictment as well.

The third incident occurred on August 31, 1976. Cromer served Appleby some ice cream which had melted. This enraged *299 Appleby, who reached for a riding crop with which he hit Cromer. Cromer described the blow as follows: "He just connected on the back. . . . He was sitting down.

(H)e just lashed with it like that (Indicates.) And it just barely connected with my back. There were some thongs at the end and I just felt them hit me, and he was losing his temper. . . . I felt the whip hit me. A glancing blow.” Cromer, in his underwear, ran from the house and to a monastery, where a priest encouraged him to telephone his relatives. His brother and sister-in-law came to the monastery for him, and later helped him to remove his personal belongings from Appleby's residence. Cromer never returned to Appleby's place thereafter. The jury convicted Appleby on the indictment involving the riding crop incident.

Cromer maintained that Appleby was sadistic, but denied that he was engaged in a sadomasochistic relationship with Appleby. He denied that he was a homosexual, and he claimed the homosexual acts were forced upon him from the beginning. He said he could not recall whether violence and sexual activity with Appleby occurred close in time. Cromer said “Mr. Appleby explained later that he delighted in violence to an extent that he said it was almost sexual or sexual.”

Cromer acquiesced in this relationship because Appleby “took me over in a way . . . . He had convinced me that people were constantly following me and observing my every action and reporting to him.” Cromer told no one about the relationship, and sought aid from no one, because Appleby told him no one would believe him, that he was a “hippie,” a “weirdo,” and on drugs. He thought that even the police could not “stop” Appleby. He was under “duress” the entire time because he feared that Appleby would harm him or members of his family if he did not continue in their relationship.

At one point Cromer stated that he never protested or told Appleby to stop, because he was afraid to do so. At *300 another point he stated that he did protest Appleby's sadistic activity.

Cromer had a low opinion of himself for having got into the situation, and he “lost” himself in his functions at the Appleby residence. He said that after the bullwhip incident, “I felt that I was just a joke that I had taken the beating and had done nothing about it. Just took the beating, and when he told me to clean up the food off the floor after that, I did, and Jay Robbins **1055 (Appleby's friend) came in and saw me on my hands and knees doing this.”

At the close of the Commonwealth's case in chief, which covered almost 700 pages of the trial transcript, Appleby moved for a directed verdict on the basis that the Commonwealth had failed to establish a prima facie case. The judge denied the motion. The defendant then presented evidence which, including his own testimony, covered almost 600 pages of the transcript. The defendant renewed his motion for a directed verdict at the end of the trial, and it was again denied.

Since the principal question for the jury was one of the credibility of the two main witnesses, Cromer and Appleby, we also summarize Appleby's account of his relationship with Cromer. This summary will continue to the point where we refer to the defense witness Webster.

Appleby's general defense to the three charges was that Cromer had consented to their sadomasochistic relationship. He admitted that he had whipped or beaten Cromer almost daily. He denied, however, that the fractured kneecap was caused by a beating; rather, he asserted the truth of the story of the epileptic seizure and fall down the stairs. (He also testified to witnessing a prior seizure and presented medical evidence of Cromer's epilepsy.) As to the second incident, he denied that he ever beat Cromer severely and said that February 28, 1976, did not stick out in his mind as involving any incident different from the usual daily whippings. Regarding the riding crop incident, Appleby testified that Cromer ran out of the house in his underwear on a rainy night, but said that this occurred on July 24, *301 1976, after a conversation, and that there was no beating or whipping of any kind that evening.

Appleby trained attack dogs for a living, and kept whips in his house for that purpose. He ascribed the initiation of the sadomasochistic activities entirely to Cromer. He met Cromer while the latter was “hustling” sex for money on a Springfield street. At that time Appleby was a “conventional” homosexual. The first night they met, Cromer showed him a braided rope he had made from clothesline, and said he liked to be beaten with that. Appleby refused to engage in beatings. Cromer beat himself with the clothesline, and Appleby told him not to use it. In the months before Cromer moved in, their “regular sexual ritual” consisted solely of fellatio and anal intercourse. Cromer told Appleby that he took drugs, and Appleby saw Cromer injecting himself and taking pills.

One evening, Cromer asked to go home with Appleby; the latter assented on the condition that Cromer not bring any drugs. Shortly after they arrived, Cromer spotted one of the whips Appleby used to train dogs. Cromer asked Appleby to beat him with the whip, but the latter refused.

The next day, Cromer telephoned Appleby and asked if he could come to live with him, because some people were following him and trying to kill him. Appleby told Cromer he had taken too many pills. Shortly thereafter, Cromer arrived at Appleby's home and begged to be let in. Appleby told him he could move in if he fulfilled four conditions; Cromer balked at the condition that he give up drugs, but finally acquiesced, and moved all of his belongings into Appleby's home. One of the other conditions was that there would be no beatings, but within two weeks Appleby reneged on this condition and agreed to strike Cromer for the latter's sexual fulfillment.<sup>2</sup> He did this because Cromer begged for it, and because he, Appleby, had a sexual reaction to the sexual effect of the beatings on Cromer.

After this, their relationship became a sadomasochistic one, as well as homosexual, and involved daily beatings of Cromer. At first, Cromer was able to attain sexual satisfaction with only a few strokes of a whip, but gradually he began to require more variety. Together they acquired or constructed **1056 leg irons, handcuffs, a torture rack, several other implements of torture, and a room which Cromer liked to call the “torture chamber.”

When shown the riding crop on direct examination, Appleby denied ever using it on Cromer. On cross-examination, however, he admitted that the riding crop “was employed many times,” and said that Cromer “favored” the crop, that “he would be whipped until he reached sexual orgasm.” The riding crop never caused “welts,” but only “redness;” in fact none of the beatings caused more than “redness.” Appleby never enjoyed whipping Cromer; he enjoyed the sexual effect it had on Cromer and the fact that Cromer allowed him to have anal intercourse after each beating. When asked if he intended to strike Cromer, he said, “I did it with the intent to turn him on sexually.” Appleby had several other sadomasochistic relationships after Cromer left, and used the implements he had purchased or made for Cromer. All of the implements, including the riding crop, were found at Appleby's house in 1978.

Appleby presented as part of his case expert testimony of Dr. John Peter Webster, a minister and psychotherapist. Webster, who had counseled Appleby after his arrest, also had some knowledge of sadomasochism. We summarize his testimony. He defines sadomasochism as involving a fusion of the sexual and aggressive drives, and said the masochist may need to be “punished” in order to release inhibited sexual feelings. He said that the beatings are generally inseparable from the sexual part of the relationship, and that typically the masochist needs to feel helpless and dependent. Cromer's staying with Appleby under fear of harm to himself or his family “would certainly fit the pattern of masochism.”

The propriety of the denial of the motions for a directed verdict and the correctness of the judge's instructions to the jury both turn on certain questions of law, and we therefore address them first. Those questions are: (1) whether the riding crop was a “dangerous weapon” for purposes of G.L. c. 265, s 15A, (2) what sort of criminal intent is required by said s 15A, and (3) what role Appleby's consent defense should play in this case.

1. General Laws c. 265, s 15A reads: “Whoever commits assault and battery upon another by means of a dangerous weapon shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or imprisonment in jail for not more than two and one half years.” Courts have classified dangerous weapons into two categories: those dangerous per se and those dangerous as used. See Commonwealth v. Farrell, 322 Mass. 606, 615, 78 N.E.2d 697 (1948).

1 (a) A “dangerous weapon per se” is an instrumentality designed and constructed to produce death or great bodily harm. State v. Luckey, 69 Ohio Op.2d 111, 113, 322 N.E.2d 354 (Ohio App.1974). See also Farrell, supra. Thus, for example, firearms, daggers, stilettos and brass knuckles are usually classified as dangerous per se, because they are designed for the purpose of bodily assault or defense. On the other hand, pocket knives, razors, hammers, wrenches and cutting tools are not so classified. People v. Vaines, 310 Mich. 500, 505, 17 N.W.2d 729 (1945) (dictum). In one case dealing with a “driving whip,” the court held that the whip was not dangerous per se because it was not designed for the offense or defense of persons.

2 A riding crop is not designed to inflict death or serious bodily harm upon either persons or animals. It is designed *304 to inflict temporary pain in order to cause an animal to move. Therefore it is not dangerous per se.

3 (b) Weapons which are not dangerous per se, but which may be used in a dangerous fashion, may also be “dangerous weapons.” See Farrell, supra (lighted cigarette); Commonwealth v. LeBlanc, 3 Mass.App. 780, 780, 334 N.E.2d 647 (1975) (automobile door used to strike police officer); Commonwealth v. Tarrant, 2 Mass.App. 483, 486-487, 314 N.E.2d 448 (1974) ( “kitchen-type” knife and German shepherd dog may both be used as “dangerous weapons”), S.C., 367 Mass. 411, 326 N.E.2d 710 (1975); United States v. Loman, 551 F.2d 164, 169 (7th Cir.) (walking stick used with enough force to break it), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 912, 97 S.Ct. 2982, 53 L.Ed.2d 1097 (1977); United States v. Johnson, 324 F.2d 264, 266 (4th Cir. 1963) (chair brought down upon victim's head); Bennett v. State, 237 Md. 212, 216, 205 A.2d 393 (1964) (microphone cord tied around victim's neck, causing inability to speak and marks on throat); Vaines, supra at 505-506, 17 N.W.2d 729 (ordinary jackknife); People v. Buford, 69 Mich.App. 27, 30, 244 N.W.2d 351 (1976) (dictum) (automobile, broomstick, flashlight and lighter fluid may all be dangerous as used); State v. Howard, 125 N.J.Super. 39, 45, 308 A.2d 366 (1973) (straight razor). Generally it is held to be a question for the fact finder whether the instrument was so used in a particular case. Farrell, supra at 614-615, 78 N.E.2d 697. Tarrant, 2 Mass.App. at 487, 314 N.E.2d 448. Vaines, supra at 505, 17 N.W.2d 729. Buford, supra at 32, 244 N.W.2d 351. Howard, supra at 47, 308 A.2d 366.

A riding crop, such as the one involved in this case, is capable of being used to inflict serious bodily harm, and possibly even to cause death. The riding crop Cromer identified as that which Appleby used on August 31, was admitted in evidence. We have examined it. It is approximately eighteen inches in length, and constructed of heavy braided leather wrapped around a solid leather core. At its thickest point, it is slightly less than one inch in diameter, tapering off to a diameter of about one-third of an inch. Cromer and Appleby both testified that leather thongs were missing from the end by the time of the trial. The riding crop is more substantial than one might anticipate an ordinary riding crop to be. It resembles instead a short whip. We *305 are satisfied that it could be employed to inflict serious bodily harm. Therefore, we cannot hold as a matter of law that it can never be a dangerous weapon as used.

(c) The jury in this case had to find that the riding crop was in fact dangerous as used in order to convict Appleby under s 15A. Whether they could lawfully have done so depends on the gravamen of the offense of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon as set forth in s 15A. The meaning of “dangerous weapon” depends to a certain extent on the context in which it is used. We have held that the thrust of the offense of assault with a dangerous weapon, for example, is the outward demonstration of force which breaches the peace, and therefore even an unloaded gun (known only by the defendant to be unloaded) may be a dangerous weapon in that context. Commonwealth v. Henson, 357 Mass. 686, 692, 259 N.E.2d 769 (1970). See also United States v. Maynard, 452 F.2d 1087, 1088 (1st Cir. 1971) (assault with dangerous weapon does not require proof gun was loaded). The gist of the offense of armed robbery is robbery “while armed,” and thus there is no need to prove the defendant used a weapon other than to threaten. Henson, supra at 690, 259 N.E.2d 769. Commonwealth v. Tarrant, 367 Mass. 411, 415-416, 418, 326 N.E.2d 710 (1975) (dog may be “dangerous weapon” for armed robbery, G.L. c. 265, s 17, and Commonwealth need not prove actually dangerous or used in harm-inflicting manner).

4 Thus the relevant behavior for the offense of assault with a dangerous weapon, G.L. c. 265, s 15B, is an outward demonstration of force, and s 15B requires only apparent ability to injure. Henson, supra at 692-693, 259 N.E.2d 769. The behavior for robbery while armed with a dangerous weapon, G.L. c. 265, s 17, which distinguishes it from unarmed robbery, G.L. c. 265, s 19, is the objectively menacing behavior of the defendant with the instrumentality **1058 causing fear in his victims. Tarrant, 367 Mass. at 415, 326 N.E.2d 710. Whether a weapon not dangerous per se qualifies for either of these statutory crimes is a question of fact to be decided “by objective standards *306 and not by the victim's subjective apprehension.” Tarrant, 367 Mass. at 416, 326 N.E.2d at 714. Henson, supra at 693, 259 N.E.2d 769.

One of the principal distinctions between assault by means of a dangerous weapon and assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon is in the punishment. The maximum penalty for the former is five years, G.L. c. 265, s 15B, and for the latter is ten years, G.L. c. 265, s 15A. We must therefore ask what behavior distinguishes the two crimes, and whether the meaning of “dangerous weapon” is different.

5/6 “The definition of an assault is, an attempt or offer with force and violence to do injury to a person either from malice or wantonness; and a battery is where an injury is actually inflicted under such circumstances.” Commonwealth v. Ruggles, 6 Allen 588, 590-591 (1863). “An assault and battery is the intentional and unjustified use of force upon the person of another, however slight . . .” (emphasis supplied). Commonwealth v. McCan, 277 Mass. 199, 203, 178 N.E. 633, 635 (1931).<sup>4</sup> Under s 15A, the battery must be accomplished by means of the dangerous weapon, and not merely while possessing the weapon. Salemme v. Commonwealth, 370 Mass. 421, 424, 348 N.E.2d 799 (1976). Commonwealth v. Manning, —Mass.App. —, — - —, —a, 376 N.E.2d 885 (1978). Commonwealth v. Jacobs, — Mass.App. —, —b, 381 N.E.2d 1109 (1978).

Therefore, s 15A requires an assault by means of a dangerous weapon, see Henson, supra, and also an intentional, unjustified touching, however slight, by means of that dangerous weapon. The criminal law of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon expresses society's desire to punish *307 the use of an instrument which is capable of producing serious bodily harm. We hold that there was sufficient evidence for the jury to find that the riding crop, used as it was by Appleby in this case, was a dangerous weapon.<sup>5</sup> The law need not wait until the instrument actually does cause serious bodily harm in order to classify the weapon as dangerous. Any touching with a potentially dangerous weapon can be assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon for purposes of s 15A, provided that the assault element and the intentional application of force are established. Commonwealth v. Hawkins, 157 Mass. 551, 553, 32 N.E. 862 (1893), and cases cited.

78 2. We next examine the type of criminal intent necessary for the crimes punishable under G.L. c. 265, s 15A. It has been held that assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon (G.L. c. 265, s 15A) is a general intent crime in Massachusetts. See **1059 Commonwealth v. Randall, 4 Gray 36, 38-39 (1855); Commonwealth v. Jones, — Mass.App. —, — n.8c, 383 N.E.2d 527 n.8 (1978). Compare G.L. c. 265, s 15A, with G.L. c. 265, s 14 (mayhem: “with malicious intent to maim or disfigure” and “by such assault disfigures . . .”) and G.L. c. 265, s 15 (assault with intent to murder or maim); cf. Commonwealth v. Hogan, — Mass. —, —d, 396 N.E.2d 978 (1979). Section 15A does not require specific intent to injure; it requires only general intent to do the act causing injury. Hawkins, supra. See generally, W. Lafave & A. Scott, Criminal Law s 28 (1972).<sup>6</sup> *308 910 The required intent is satisfied by proof of intent to commit the lesser included crime of assault with a dangerous weapon. See Henson, supra; Commonwealth v. Slaney, 345 Mass. 135, 137-139, 141, 185 N.E.2d 919 (1962). Once an actor intends to commit assault with an object capable of causing bodily harm,<sup>7</sup> he is threatening to use the instrumentality in a dangerous fashion. The offense of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon is complete once the threat is consummated by the application of any force upon the victim by means of the instrumentality. Hawkins, supra. This effectuates the policy of s 15A to deter the use of “neutral” objects in a dangerous fashion.

11 In sum, the offense of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon under G.L. c. 265, s 15A, requires that the elements of assault be present (see Henson, supra; Slaney, supra ), that there be a touching, however slight (McCan, supra ), that that touching be by means of the weapon (Salemme, supra ), and that the battery be accomplished by use of an inherently dangerous weapon, or by use of some other object as a weapon, with the intent to use that object in a dangerous or potentially dangerous fashion.

3. The evidence in this case must be viewed in a strained manner in order to support Appleby's argument that the jury were required to find that Cromer consented to be hit with the riding crop. Cromer testified that he did not consent to any of the beatings, that the riding crop incident occurred *309 after an argument over melted ice cream, and that he immediately ran from the house when Appleby “lost his temper” and struck him. Appleby did not testify that there was any beating that evening which related to sexual activity or to which Cromer otherwise consented; he flatly denied that a beating had occurred on the night Cromer ran to the monastery. He further said this night was July 24, but Father Murray (from the monastery), Leon Cromer (Cromer's brother), and Mary Cromer (Cromer's sister-in-law) all testified that the monastery incident occurred on August 31. Furthermore, the riding crop incident was remote in time from the earlier alleged incidents, when a claim that Cromer consented to the relationship might have received more support in the evidence.

The only conceivable way that consent by Cromer on August 31 could be raised by the evidence is by inferences that a) Cromer consented to the relationship generally, and b) Appleby subjectively believed on the night in question that Cromer would consent **1060 to be hit with the crop on the basis of his past behavior. Giving Appleby the benefit of this rather strained construction, we shall briefly discuss the legal viability of Appleby's contention that as a matter of law Cromer could consent to their sadomasochistic relationship.

(a) Assuming that the riding crop incident occurred in relation to sexual behavior, the question is whether the State can regulate, by the law of assault and battery, violent behavior which occurs in private, consensual sexual relationships.

We held in Commonwealth v. Balthazar, 366 Mass. 298, 302, 318 N.E.2d 478 (1974), that G.L. c. 272, s 35, prohibiting “unnatural and lascivious” acts, “must be construed to be inapplicable to private, consensual conduct of adults. We do so on the ground that the concept of general community disapproval of specific conduct, which is inherent in s 35, requires such an interpretation. We do not decide whether a statute which explicitly prohibits sexual conduct, even if consensual and private, would be constitutionally infirm.”

*310 After Balthazar, consent is a defense to a charge of “unnatural and lascivious” acts under c. 272, s 35. See also Commonwealth v. Hill, —Mass. —, — - —e, 385 N.E.2d 253 (1979) (applying Balthazar retroactively); Balthazar v. Superior Court, 573 F.2d 698, 699 (1st Cir. 1978) (dictum); New York v. Onofre, App.Div.2d, 424 N.Y.S.2d 566 (1980).f Appleby has cited no case, and we are aware of none, extending protection on either statutory or constitutional grounds beyond the sexual acts and to accompanying force or violence by means of dangerous weapons. See generally Cotner v. Henry, 394 F.2d 873 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 847, 89 S.Ct. 132, 21 L.Ed.2d 118 (1968); Towler v. Peyton, 303 F.Supp. 581 (W.D.Va.1969) (defendant may constitutionally be convicted of forced acts of sodomy with wife). Any right to sexual privacy that citizens enjoy, and we do not here decide what the basis for such a right would be if it exists,8 would be outweighed in the constitutional balancing scheme by the State's interest in preventing violence by the use of dangerous weapons upon its citizens under the claimed cloak of privacy in sexual relations. See generally Balthazar v. Superior Court, supra at 701 (dictum) (sadomasochistic behavior “universally condemned”); Onofre, supra (dictum) (privacy right not absolute; State may regulate conduct which “has the potential for working harm”; prevention of “physical violence and disorder” probably valid State interest).

General Laws c. 265, s 15A, is not aimed at regulating sexual conduct. Appleby was in no way charged with a crime for committing homosexual acts. Rather he was tried for violating a statute that implies, as a matter of public policy, that one may not consent to become a victim of an assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. Farrell, supra at 620-621, 78 N.E.2d 697. See also Commonwealth v. Collberg, 119 Mass. 350 (1876).

*311 1213 (b) The fact that violence may be related to sexual activity (or may even be sexual activity to the person inflicting pain on another, as Appleby testified) does not prevent the State from protecting its citizens against physical harm. The invalidity of the victim's consent to a battery by means of a dangerous weapon would be the same, however, whether or not the battery was related to sexual activity. The general rule is: “It is settled that to commit a battery upon a person with such violence that bodily harm is likely to result is unlawful, and consent thereto is immaterial.” Farrell, supra at 620, 78 N.E.2d at 705.9 **1061 Regardless of whether sexual activity was involved in the incident in question, Cromer's consent to assault and battery upon him by Appleby by means of a dangerous weapon cannot absolve Appleby of the crime charged punishable under G.L. c. 265, s 15A.

4. Appleby alleges that the judge erred in denying his motions for a directed verdict.<sup>10</sup> The standard we apply is whether there was enough evidence in the case-in-chief, when taken in the light most favorable to the Commonwealth, “that could have satisfied a rational trier of fact of each (essential element of the offense) beyond a reasonable doubt.” Commonwealth v. Latimore, — Mass. —, —g, 393 N.E.2d 370, 375 (1979). Commonwealth v. Rosenberg, — Mass. —, —h, 398 N.E.2d 451 (1979).

14 We hold that the Commonwealth presented in its case-in-chief enough evidence of the elements of assault and battery *312 with a dangerous weapon, to which Cromer by law could not consent, to support the denial of the motion. We have already said that an assault with a dangerous weapon coupled with slight, intentional touching can qualify for assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon under G.L. c. 265, s 15A. Even if Appleby subjectively intended to use the crop for his own sexual purposes, the evidence was sufficient to permit the jury to find that he possessed the requisite intent to use the riding crop in a dangerous manner and thereby commit a battery.

The evidence both at the close of the Commonwealth's case and after both sides had rested, supports a jury finding that Appleby intentionally placed Cromer in fear and struck him with the riding crop, an instrumentality which was then being used as a dangerous weapon. There was no error in the denial of the directed verdict.

1516 5. Appleby alleges error in the jury instructions, and in the denial of his request for instructions that (a) intent to cause sexual gratification precludes a finding of guilty of the offense charged, and (b) private, consensual sadomasochistic behavior is an “absolute defense to the charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.” We have reviewed the judge's charge, and find no error. Appleby's requested instructions squarely conflict with our holdings today and with the holdings of Farrell, supra.

For all the foregoing reasons, we affirm Appleby's conviction. While we express some reservation on the severity of the sentence imposed for the particular assault and battery on August 31, 1976, as established by the jury verdict, albeit an assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, that subject is not open to review by this tribunal. See G.L. c. 278, ss 28A-28C.

Judgment affirmed.

HENNESSEY, Chief Justice (concurring).

I concur with the result and the reasoning of the court's opinion. I add these few *313 words to bring emphasis to the court's expressed “reservation” as to the severity of the sentence imposed. The only incident which resulted in a guilty verdict was minor. It was a blow which “barely connected” with the victim's back; it was a “glancing blow,” with no evidence of visible injury or after effects. We may speculate that the sentencing process was perhaps influenced by the indictments as to two more serious episodes of violence. However, the **1062 jury, by their not guilty verdicts, rejected those charges, and as a consequence they would have no proper bearing on the sentence. Perhaps the sentence here was unduly influenced by knowledge of other charges pending against the defendant at the time of this trial. Perhaps, also, the sentence was influenced by certain related circumstances which are abhorrent to most persons, but the defendant was not charged with those circumstances in any indictment. In sum, the sentencing result here is one which focuses on the compelling need for reasoned application of the broad sentencing discretion ordinarily available to our trial court.

Footnotes

The jury acquitted Appleby on two other indictments charging assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, to wit: a bat; and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, to wit: a whip. The two other conditions were that Cromer (a) attend church every Sunday with Appleby, and (b) not engage in any “hustling.”

The judge in Appleby's case charged the jury that a battery “is the intentional and unjustified use of force, however slight, upon the person of another. Now, not every touching or brushing is a battery. It must be intentional touching or brushing. Everyday social intercourse of urban and suburban life in shopping and public assemblies, in sporting events, persons in crowds are subject to a certain amount of jostling, pushing and shoving while these contacts may be somewhat offensive, they do not constitute battery because they enjoy a measure of justification if they're not excessive. So there can be a touching or brushing and that can be a battery if it's intentional.”

Of course, the question whether a weapon is dangerous as used is always one for the fact finder. “In resolving this issue the jury may consider the nature, size, and shape of the object as well as the way in which it is handled or controlled.” Commonwealth v. Tarrant, 367 Mass. 411, 416, 326 N.E.2d 710, 714 (1975). Thus the holding of the present case should not be construed to mean that any intentional unjustified touching with an object previously held in a different case to have been capable of being a dangerous weapon constitutes a crime under G.L. c. 265, s 15A. A reasonable jury might well reach a different conclusion as to a riding crop when used in different circumstances.

Weapons which are dangerous per se will qualify for s 15A convictions when used to commit an assault and a battery of any kind, and without a jury determination that the weapon was dangerous as used. This is because public policy discourages the use of such weapons, and persons are charged with knowledge of their inherently dangerous nature. See Commonwealth v. Smith, 312 Mass. 557, 558-560, 45 N.E.2d 742 (1942); Commonwealth v. Jones, — Mass.App. —, — (Mass.App.Ct.Adv.Sh. (1978) 1218, 1229-1230), 383 N.E.2d 527 (1978). See also Tarrant, 367 Mass. at 416, 326 N.E.2d 710 (for armed robbery, where weapon not dangerous per se, potential danger must be assessed by fact finder using objective standards and not victim's subjective apprehension).

“Bodily harm” is defined as “any hurt or injury calculated to interfere with the health or comfort of the (victim).” Commonwealth v. Farrell, 322 Mass. 606, 621, 78 N.E.2d 697, 705 (1948), quoting from Rex v. Donovan, 2 K.B. 498, 507 (1934).

Farrell involved a female victim who had gone to a hotel room with the defendant, apparently for the purpose of having sexual intercourse, although this is not clearly stated in the review of the evidence. The defendant cut her with a razor and disfigured her body with lighted cigarettes. It appears from the facts that she neither knew this would occur nor consented to it, but this court held that as a matter of law she could not have consented.

The Commonwealth argues that the classification of the riding crop as a dangerous weapon is not properly before this court because Appleby did not state grounds for his motion for directed verdict and the thrust of his defense was consent. The motion for a directed verdict raises the question of the sufficiency of the evidence as to all essential elements of the offense, however.

Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon

Chapter 265, Section 15B

Definition:

Assaulting another by means of a dangerous weapon.

Elements:

1. Assaulting another (outward gesture menacing no fear needed)
2. By means of a dangerous weapon

Right of Arrest:

This 5 year felony is arrestable upon PROBABLE CAUSE or IN PRESENCE.

NOTE:

Com. v. Lednum(75 Mass.App.Ct. 722)

The term “dangerous weapon” encompasses two categories:

- (1) weapons that are dangerous per se, “instrumentalities designed and constructed to produce death or great bodily harm,” e.g., firearms, daggers, and brass knuckles; and
- (2) objects that are dangerous as used.

COMMONWEALTH v. Lajuan MELTON

The defendant was convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm and ammunition, malicious damage to a motor vehicle, and four counts of assault by means of a dangerous weapon. On appeal, he contends that the evidence was insufficient to convict him of all four assaults because the perpetrator, *292 by firing only a single shot into a vehicle occupied by four persons, could not have intended to commit more than a single battery by means of that shot. He also contends that there was insufficient evidence to convict him either as a joint venturer or as a principal for the assaults and the malicious damage to a motor vehicle.<sup>1</sup> The Appeals Court affirmed the convictions. Commonwealth v. Melton, 50 Mass.App.Ct. 637, 741 N.E.2d 69 (2001). We granted the defendant's application for further appellate review. For the following reasons, we affirm the convictions.

1. Facts. Viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the Commonwealth, see Commonwealth v. Latimore, 378 Mass. 671, 677-678, 393 N.E.2d 370 (1979), the jury could have found as follows. On the evening of April 1, 1998, David Benedict, the defendant and two other companions were standing outside a bar on Main Street in Brockton. Another group of young men drove by in a Honda Accord. Among that group was Daniel Marcellus, who had had previous disputes with both the defendant and Benedict. The defendant's group gestured at the passing vehicle in a manner that suggested a desire to fight. The vehicle turned around; Marcellus and his companions got out; and ultimately it was decided that Marcellus and the defendant would fight "one on one." The defendant then removed a gun from his pants. Marcellus recognized the gun as one that he had seen Benedict use during a confrontation a few weeks earlier. The defendant wrapped the gun in his sweatshirt, went into the bar or an adjacent alley momentarily, and then returned **1095 without the bundled clothing (and presumably without the gun). No one saw Benedict with a gun.

The defendant and Marcellus proceeded with their fight while the others watched. After some period, the two combatants separated. The defendant was "winded" and "tired," but his friends were encouraging him to resume the fight. He appeared reluctant to do so. At that point, the police arrived. The participants were questioned, but no one was arrested. After the police advised the young men to go their separate ways, Marcellus and his group left in their car, with Marcellus seated in the back seat, behind the driver.

*293 Marcellus and his companions dropped off one member of their group at his home. At that point, Marcellus took over driving. One passenger was seated in the front seat, and the other two were in the back seat. The driver's side rear passenger seat, which Marcellus had occupied when they left the scene of the fight, was now occupied by his brother.

Driving along, approximately twenty minutes after the conclusion of the fight, Marcellus noticed another vehicle, an older model blue Chrysler, approaching rapidly. (The same vehicle had been seen at the site of the earlier fight.) The Chrysler pulled alongside, and a hand reached out the rear passenger side window pointing a gun at the Honda. Marcellus described the hand as "light-skinned." He recognized the weapon as the one that the defendant had possessed at the start of their fight.

A single shot was fired, shattering the rear driver's side window of the Honda. None of the occupants of the vehicle was hit by the bullet. They were hit by fragments of broken glass. Marcellus looked over at the Chrysler and saw Benedict in the rear driver's side seat and the defendant in the rear passenger side seat. The driver and the front seat passenger were the other two young men who had been with the defendant at the time of the earlier fight. After the one gunshot, the Chrysler sped away. Marcellus attempted pursuit, but was convinced by his companions to go to the police instead. They proceeded to the police station, where Marcellus told the police that he thought the defendant was the shooter.

At school the next day, Marcellus spoke with the defendant's girl friend. She told him that Benedict was the shooter, not the defendant. Marcellus heard similar rumors from other classmates. Marcellus then began to doubt his identification of the defendant as the shooter because the hand he had seen holding the gun out the window was "light-skinned," whereas the defendant was more "dark-skinned." By the time of his grand jury testimony, Marcellus told the investigating officers that he was not sure of the identity of the shooter, but that it probably was Benedict, not the defendant. At trial, Marcellus testified that what he heard from others concerning Benedict's identity as the shooter made "more sense" to him, and he opined that it "probably really wasn't" the defendant who shot at the car. He *294 did, however, confirm that he had initially identified the defendant as the shooter.

1 2. Intent to batter four victims. The defendant was charged with a separate count of assault by means of a dangerous weapon committed on each of the four occupants of the Honda. The defendant argues that he cannot be found guilty of four counts of assault by means of a dangerous weapon because there was not sufficient evidence of any intent to batter all four alleged victims. Because it would have been physically impossible to hit all four victims with a single shot, he contends that the perpetrator could not have had **1 the intent to batter four people.<sup>2</sup> The defendant's argument misapprehends our jurisprudence on the element of intent.

Under the common law, an assault may be perpetrated in either of two ways.<sup>3</sup> The crime may consist of "an attempted battery" or "an immediately threatened battery." Commonwealth v. Gorassi, 432 Mass. 244, 247, 733 N.E.2d 106 (2000), and cases cited. Commonwealth v. Musgrave, 38 Mass.App.Ct. 519, 521, 649 N.E.2d 784 (1995), S.C., 421 Mass. 610, 659 N.E.2d 284 (1996). The crime of assault by means of a dangerous weapon adds one additional element, namely, that the assault was perpetrated by means of a dangerous weapon. G.L. c. 265, § 15B (b ). The judge instructed the jury on both types of assault, and, if the defendant were found guilty, the judge's instructions required the jury to specify on the verdict slip which type of assault had been proved. See Commonwealth v. Accetta, 422 Mass. 642, 646-647, 664 N.E.2d 830 (1996). On each of the four indictments for assault by means of a dangerous weapon, the jury returned a verdict that the defendant was guilty, specifying *295 that they had based each verdict on the "attempted battery" form of assault.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>567</sup> Under the attempted battery theory, the Commonwealth must prove that the defendant intended to commit a battery, took some overt step toward accomplishing that intended battery, and came reasonably close to doing so. See Commonwealth v. Musgrave, supra at 520 n. 2, 649 N.E.2d 784, quoting Model Jury Instructions for Criminal Offenses Tried in the District Court Department § 5.402 (1988). The defendant concedes, as he must, that a single act can result in multiple convictions if there are multiple victims. "[T]he appropriate 'unit of prosecution' for such crimes [of violence] is the person assaulted or killed, not the underlying criminal act." Commonwealth v. Crawford, 430 Mass. 683, 686-687, 722 N.E.2d 960 (2000), quoting Commonwealth v. Donovan, 395 Mass. 20, 31, 478 N.E.2d 727 (1985). See Commonwealth v. Gordon, 41 Mass.App.Ct. 459, 465, 671 N.E.2d 972 (1996); Commonwealth v. Dello Iacono, 20 Mass.App.Ct. 83, 89-90, 478 N.E.2d 144 (1985).

<sup>8</sup> Rather, the defendant challenges the sufficiency of the evidence only with respect to the element of intent. He contends **1097 that the single shot could not hit all the occupants of the car, and asks us to hold that his intent cannot have exceeded what the laws of physics would permit that single shot to accomplish.<sup>5</sup> Of course, while the laws of physics may determine the extent of injury or physical damage accomplished by a person's act, the perpetrator's intent is not necessarily so constrained. A *296 person can intend things that are hopelessly unrealistic or even absurd. In that sense, we reject the fundamental premise of the defendant's argument. The impossibility of particular consequences may be argued as a basis for concluding that a defendant did not harbor the requisite intent, but it does not compel the jury to reach that conclusion.<sup>6</sup> More fundamentally, however, the defendant's argument erroneously assumes that the intent element requires the Commonwealth to prove an intent to batter each and every one of the victims in order for there to be multiple assaults. That assumption is inconsistent with our treatment of intent in other contexts. We have never required that a defendant's intent be directed at the precise victim of the crime. Rather, we have long recognized the concept of "transferred intent" in situations where the defendant's conduct harms a person other than the intended victim. See Commonwealth v. Fisher, 433 Mass. 340, 345-346, 742 N.E.2d 61 (2001), and cases cited.

In most other jurisdictions, the same principle of transferred intent applies to satisfy the element of intent when a defendant harms both the intended victim and one or more additional but unintended victims. See, e.g., United States v. Sampol, 636 F.2d 621, 674 (D.C.Cir.1980) (evidence sufficient to support two convictions of murder in the first degree where defendant killed two people, even though defendant only intended to kill one of them, noting that "[t]here are even stronger grounds for applying the principle [of transferred intent] where the intended victim is killed by the same act that kills the unintended victim"); State v. Worlock, 117 N.J. 596, 616-617, 569 A.2d 1314 (1990) (same); State v. Hinton, 227 Conn. 301, 306-311, 630 A.2d 593 (1993) (transferred intent doctrine applicable to support three counts of murder even if defendant only intended to kill one victim); State v. Fennell, 340 S.C. 266, 276, 531 S.E.2d 512 (2000) (where defendant shot and killed intended victim but one bullet struck and seriously *297 injured an unintended victim, doctrine of transferred intent supported convictions of both murder of intended victim and assault and battery with intent to kill unintended victim); Ochoa v. State, 115 Nev. 194, 981 P.2d 1201, 1205 (1999) (same); State v. Gillette, 102 N.M. 695, 705, 699 P.2d 626 (N.M.App.1985) (defendant, who delivered poisoned drink to one intended victim, guilty of three counts of **1098 attempted murder when intended victim and two others consumed it); State v. Henley, 141 Ariz. 465, 467, 687 P.2d 1220 (1984) (transferred intent doctrine would support two counts of aggravated assault where single shot intended for one victim struck two persons); Mordica v. State, 618 So.2d 301, 303 (Fla.Dist.Ct.App.1993) (where defendant kicked fellow inmate and inadvertently kicked officer who was attempting to break up fight, defendant's convictions of two batteries upheld); State v. Livingston, 420 N.W.2d 223, 229 (Minn.Ct.App.1988) (where defendant commanded his dog to bite intended victim and dog attacked two other persons as well, transferred intent applicable to support three counts of assault). See also State v. Wilson, 125 Wash.2d 212, 217-218, 883 P.2d 320 (1994) (where defendant shot at and missed both intended victims but struck and injured two unintended victims, he committed four assaults because he met the statutory requirement that he act "with intent to inflict great bodily harm" and statute did not require that "the specific intent match a specific victim").<sup>7</sup>

910 Thus, a defendant's intent is deemed to extend to others *298 beyond the actual intended victim. It is not exhausted or depleted based on the perpetration of the crime on the intended victim, but encompasses completely unintended victims (including victims of whom the defendant was unaware) who happen to suffer along with the intended victim. See State v. Hinton, supra at 306 n. 8, 630 A.2d 593 (defendant's intent to harm one victim "is not regarded as a limited commodity that, once satisfied, is totally expended"). Thus, the requisite mens rea must be shown, but it does not need to be shown separately or independently for each victim. Rather, once established as to any victim, it satisfies that element with respect to all other victims, even if those victims are unintended or even unknown to the defendant.

We recognize that, in most of the cases cited above, the unintended victims were actually struck, injured, or killed by the defendant.<sup>8</sup> That fact, however, has nothing to do with intent or with transferred **1099 intent. It merely affects whether the crime is one of assault and battery or only assault. If the bullet apparently intended for Marcellus had struck one of the other occupants of the car, either in addition to or instead of Marcellus himself, the doctrine of transferred intent would have made the unintended victim a victim of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon. Where, as it happened, the bullet narrowly missed Marcellus and the other occupants, they are victims of assault by means of a dangerous weapon. Both crimes require a showing of intent, and the doctrine of transferred intent applies without regard to whether the attempted battery was successful.

There was abundant evidence of an intent to batter at least one person, most likely Marcellus.<sup>9</sup> An overt act was taken in furtherance of that intent, and it came reasonably close to *299 succeeding. All persons within close proximity to that shot suffered equally with the intended victim. All four were imperiled by the shot, to at least the same extent as the intended victim. While the Commonwealth does not have to prove that an attempted battery actually instilled fear in the victim, see Commonwealth v. Gorassi, 432 Mass. 244, 248, 733 N.E.2d 106 (2000), all four victims here were aware of the shot, several of them were struck by shattered glass from the bullet piercing the rear window, and all suffered at least the same fear as the intended victim.<sup>10</sup> They were all victims of the attempted battery, even if the perpetrator's intent focused on only one of them.<sup>11</sup> Beyond the metaphysics of transferred intent, we note that treating the defendant's actions as four assaults by means of a dangerous weapon is consistent with the purposes underlying the common law of assault. An attempted but unsuccessful battery is criminal not because it actually harms the victim—indeed, the victim can be completely unaware of the attempt—but rather because it imperils the victim. The conduct here (a shot into a car full of people, fired at point blank range from a passing vehicle traveling at high speed) placed four people in equally grave peril. Limiting the number of convictions to the precise number of victims the defendant intended to hit ignores the additional persons whose lives were placed at risk by the defendant's attempt to batter his intended victim. The suggestion that they were not victims of any crime, when they all suffered the very peril that the crime of assault by means of a dangerous weapon is intended to address, is contrary to common sense.

Similarly, it would be anomalous to hold that, had the *300 defendant merely waved the gun in the direction of the Honda with **1100 a menacing gesture or remark, he would be guilty of four assaults by means of a dangerous weapon (because his intentionally menacing conduct would have been directed at and instilled fear in four people), but that an actual shot at those same four people could only constitute a single assault. Rather, a person is a victim of assault if he is at risk of battery from the defendant's attempted battery on anyone, just as the person would be a victim of assault if he were placed in fear of battery from the defendant's intentionally threatened battery on anyone. The peril and the fear inflicted by such conduct is what makes one a victim of assault, and, as long as the defendant has the requisite mens rea with regard to any person, the defendant may be convicted of as many separate assaults as there are victims.

Therefore, we conclude that there was sufficient evidence to prove four counts of assault by means of a dangerous weapon on a theory of attempted battery.

11 3. Sufficiency of the evidence as to principal or joint venturer liability. The defendant contends that, in light of Marcellus's effective retraction of his earlier identification of the shooter, there was not sufficient evidence to convict him as the principal. We agree with the Appeals Court's analysis on this point. See Commonwealth v. Melton, 50 Mass.App.Ct. 637, 643-646, 741 N.E.2d 69 (2001). Marcellus acknowledged that he had originally identified the defendant as the shooter; he acknowledged that his retraction of that identification was based at least in part on rumor and hearsay from persons who were partial to the defendant; and the jury could have been skeptical of his claimed ability to distinguish subtle differences in skin tone (the ostensible basis for his retraction) when he had seen only the perpetrator's hand briefly as the car sped by on a foggy night. Meanwhile, there was circumstantial evidence pointing to the defendant as the likely perpetrator. He had the strongest motive to attack Marcellus (hostility from the earlier fight); the weapon used to perpetrate the assaults had been seen in his possession earlier that evening; and he was seated closest to the window from which the shot was fired.

12 We also agree with the Appeals Court that there was sufficient evidence to submit the case to the jury on the alternative *301 theory of joint venture. Id. at 646-647, 741 N.E.2d 69. The defendant was present at the scene; the jury could infer the requisite shared intent from both Benedict's and the defendant's hostility toward Marcellus; and, based on the defendant's supplying a weapon to Benedict (if Benedict were in fact the shooter), the jury could infer the defendant's willingness to assist Benedict in perpetrating the crimes.

Judgments affirmed.

The defendant raises no issue with respect to the convictions of unlawful possession of a firearm and ammunition.

The argument now raised by the defendant was not presented below in support of his motion for required finding of not guilty. We therefore review to determine whether there was error and, if so, whether such error created a substantial risk of a miscarriage of justice. Convictions based on insufficient evidence "are inherently serious enough to create a substantial risk of a miscarriage of justice." Commonwealth v. McGovern, 397 Mass. 863, 867-868, 494 N.E.2d 1298 (1986).

The statute sets forth the punishment for the crime of assault by means of a dangerous weapon, but does not define the crime. G.L. c. 265, § 15B (b ). Commonwealth v. Slaney, 345 Mass. 135, 138, 185 N.E.2d 919 (1962). Commonwealth v. Musgrave, 38 Mass.App.Ct. 519, 521, 649 N.E.2d 784 (1995), S.C., 421 Mass. 610, 659 N.E.2d 284 (1996). Therefore, we look to the common law for the definition of the crime of assault. Commonwealth v. Slaney, supra.

The defendant concedes that the evidence was sufficient to establish the "immediately threatened battery" form of assault as to all four victims. To establish that form of assault, the Commonwealth must prove that the defendant intentionally engaged in menacing conduct that reasonably caused the victim to fear an imminent battery. Commonwealth v. Musgrave, supra at 520 n. 2, 649 N.E.2d 784, quoting Model Jury Instructions for Criminal Offenses Tried in the District Court Department § 5.402 (1988). A single shot in the direction of a group of people is intentionally menacing conduct that can cause each person reasonably to fear an imminent battery.

While the defendant is correct that the single shot could not have hit all four occupants, he is incorrect in his assertion that the single shot could not have hit more than one occupant. The apparent path of the bullet was straight across the back seat, entering at one rear window and continuing out the opposite rear window. Two persons were in that back seat at the time. Both could have been hit by a single bullet traveling along that path. The defendant's argument, even if correct, would reduce the number of assault convictions to two, not to one.

Here, an intention to harm persons in addition to Marcellus could be inferred from the evidence, notwithstanding the physical impossibility of hitting all of them with a single shot. While Marcellus was presumably the principal object of the defendant's vengeance, the jury could infer that the defendant bore ill will to Marcellus's companions as well. They were affiliated with Marcellus, and all of them had just witnessed the defendant's unwillingness to continue fighting Marcellus.

A minority of jurisdictions refuse to apply the doctrine of transferred intent if the defendant has succeeded in perpetrating the intended crime on the intended victim. See People v. Birreuta, 162 Cal.App.3d 454, 460, 208 Cal.Rptr. 635 (1984); Ford v. State, 330 Md. 682, 710-715, 625 A.2d 984 (1993). Under that analysis, the doctrine of transferred intent is used only to prevent a defendant from obtaining a windfall due to his own poor aim or other miscalculation, and its sole purpose "is to insure the adequate punishment of those who accidentally kill innocent bystanders, while failing to kill their intended victims." People v. Birreuta, supra. Thus, as long as the crime is completed against the intended victim, the minority is of the view that "there is no need for such an artificial doctrine" in order to obtain a conviction. Id. Like the majority of courts that have considered the issue, we are not persuaded by this analysis. The doctrine of transferred intent is not simply a pragmatic device to make sure that a culpable defendant does not avoid all prosecution. Rather, it also serves to recognize that everyone injured or killed by the defendant, whether they were the intended object of his intentional crime or not, are in fact victims. The defendant has acted with the requisite intent as to at least one person, but all persons injured or killed are appropriately viewed as victims of that crime. To hold that a defendant who succeeds in perpetrating a crime on his intended victim cannot commit any form of intentional crime against anyone who is not his actual intended victim fails to recognize the harm perpetrated on others who are unfortunate enough to be injured or killed by the defendant's criminal conduct.

The doctrine has been applied to purely attempt crimes in at least one case. See State v. Gillette, 102 N.M. 695, 705, 699 P.2d 626 (Ct.App.1985) (three counts of attempted murder even though defendant only intended to poison one person).

Although the shot was fired into the back seat when Marcellus was in the driver's seat, Marcellus had been sitting in the back seat at the time the defendant and his companions had seen Marcellus leave the scene of the fight. Driving up rapidly from behind on what some witnesses described as a misty night, the perpetrator may well not have realized that it was Marcellus's brother, not Marcellus, in the back seat.

10

The passengers in the car advised Marcellus not to follow the defendant's car because they were afraid that another shot would be fired if Marcellus maintained the pursuit.

11

The judge did not instruct the jury on transferred intent. There was no objection by either side. The absence of such an instruction did not create a substantial risk of a miscarriage of justice. To the contrary, the absence of an instruction on transferred intent can only help a defendant, as the jury may then mistakenly assume that the Commonwealth has to prove intent specifically directed at each actual victim. An instruction on transferred intent clarifies that the Commonwealth need only prove intent as to one of the victims.

Assault by means of Hypodermic Syringe or Needle

Chapter 265, Section 15C

Section 15C. (a) Whoever commits an assault upon another, by means of a hypodermic syringe, hypodermic needle, or any instrument adapted for the administration of controlled or other substances by injection, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 10 years or in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years, or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(b) Whoever commits an assault and battery upon another, by means of a hypodermic syringe, hypodermic needle, or any instrument adapted for the administration of controlled or other substances by injection, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 15 years or in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years, or by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Armed Robbery

Chapter 265, Section 17

Definition:

Section 17

Whoever, being armed with a dangerous weapon, assaults another and robs, steals or takes from his person money or other property which may be the subject of larceny shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of years; provided, however, that any person who commits any offence described herein while masked or disguised or while having his features artificially distorted shall, for the first offence be sentenced to imprisonment for not less than five years and for any subsequent offence for not less than ten years. Whoever commits any offense described herein while armed with a firearm, shotgun, rifle, machine gun or assault weapon shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not less than five years. Any person who commits a subsequent offense while armed with a firearm, shotgun, rifle, machine gun or assault weapon shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not less than 15 years.

Elements:

1. armed with a dangerous weapon
2. larceny
3. from the person of another
4. by force and violence or by putting in fear

Right of Arrest:

This life felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or on PROBABLE CAUSE.

Note:

Officers should remember the definition of dangerous weapon for the first element. In order to use the armed robbery statute, a larceny must occur. (A larceny is defined as an unlawful taking of the property of another.) The last element involves force and violence which, even if slight, will be enough. See Comm. v. Zingari, 42 Mass. App. Ct. 931.) It also may involve putting the victim in fear.

Armed robbery may be made out by proof that defendant was in possession of weapon in course of robbery, although he did not display or use it.

Com. v. Tarrant, 367 Mass. 411, 326 N.E.2d 710 (1975)

It is not only actual use of weapon in sense of harm in fact inflicted that makes crime of armed robbery aggravated; rather it is more importantly potential for injury and tendency toward resistance, conflict, and violence in result which exists where robbery is perpetrated with use of dangerous weapon. M.G.L.A. c. 265 § 17.

Evidence in armed robbery prosecution, including fact that German shepherd dog entered victim's bedroom with defendant, roamed around room while defendant searched for goods, moved within close proximity to victim and answered to defendant's orders, supported finding that dog was dangerous weapon within purview of armed robbery statute. M.G.L.A. c. 265 § 17.

COMMONWEALTH vs. KING

Robbery & Intimidation of Witness.

The defendant, Michael King, was convicted by a Superior Court jury of one count of armed robbery, G. L. c. 265, § 17 [FN1]; one count of assault and battery, G. L. c. 265, § 13A; *114 and one count of intimidation of a witness, G. L. c. 268, § 13B, following the robbery of a convenience store. On appeal, he argues that the judge erred in denying his motion for a required finding of not guilty because the evidence was insufficient to establish either that he was armed with a dangerous weapon at the time of the robbery, or that he interfered with the victim's furnishing of information to a criminal investigator. we affirm the convictions.

1. Facts. We summarize the evidence presented at trial in a light most favorable to the Commonwealth. See Commonwealth v. Latimore, 378 Mass. 671, 676-677 (1979). On September 9, 2003, the victim, Michael Jacques, was working alone on a 5:00 P.M. to 12:00 A.M. shift as a clerk at the DB Mart, a convenience store located in Springfield. At approximately 11:30 P.M., the defendant, a frequent patron of the store, entered and left without incident. At midnight, the victim closed the store and began the tasks that had to be completed before he could leave.

Moments later, the defendant returned. He knocked on the locked doors and requested that he be let in to retrieve a pager he had misplaced in the store during his earlier visit. After a brief discussion, the victim allowed the defendant to enter to search for the item. Both men scoured the aisles for several minutes to no avail. When the search proved fruitless, the victim requested that the defendant leave for the night and return in the morning to consult with the store's manager.

Suddenly the defendant struck the victim on the left side of the face with his fist. He followed by tackling the victim and placing him in a "choke hold." The defendant then knocked the victim to the floor and up against his bicycle, which the victim had parked inside the store. With the victim subdued, the defendant proceeded to the cash register.

As the defendant attempted to open the cash register, the victim began to get up from the floor. The defendant warned immediately, "I'm going to blow a hole in your head if you get up and move." Believing the defendant had a gun, the victim heeded the warning and returned to the floor. He did not, however, actually see the defendant with a weapon at any time.

The defendant then demanded that the victim tell him how to open the cash register. The victim complied, and the defendant removed approximately $1,400. He then took the victim's bicycle but, before leaving, inquired as to the location of the videotapes from the store security camera. The victim replied that the videotapes were maintained in the manager's office, and he did not have access to them. The defendant then stated that, "[i]f he saw [the victim] on 22 News [a Springfield television program] he was going to come back and kill [him], [his] whole family, [his] buddy Ben, all of that. The defendant again ordered the victim to remain on the floor, and departed the premises.

A few minutes after, the victim got up from the floor and contacted the police. Responding officers searched the store's immediate surrounding area, but could not locate an individual matching the victim's description of the defendant. An investigation led to apprehension of the defendant on September 11, 2003, one day after the robbery. No weapon was found in his possession or in the vicinity of his person at the time of his arrest.

2. Armed robbery. To obtain a conviction of armed robbery under G. L. c. 265, § 17, the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed a robbery while "armed with a dangerous weapon." Commonwealth v. Smiley, 431 Mass. 477, 490 (2000). Convictions are not limited to instances in which a defendant actually uses or displays the weapon. "In the Massachusetts decisions to date applying G. L. c. 265, § 17, armed robbery may be made out **116* by proof that the defendant was in possession of a weapon in the course of a robbery but did not display or use it." Commonwealth v. Simpson, 54 Mass. App. Ct. 477, 479 (2002). This does not mean, however, that the Commonwealth may satisfy its burden merely by showing that a defendant was "apparently armed." Commonwealth v. Howard, 386 Mass. 607, 608 (1982). There must instead be evidence from which a jury could permissibly conclude that the defendant was actually armed at the time of the robbery with some instrumentality which presents an objective threat of danger. Id. at 611.

Applying these criteria, we conclude that a jury finding that the defendant actually possessed a gun at the time of the robbery was warranted.

The defendant relies on Commonwealth v. Howard, supra, in which a defendant approached the victim on the street, did not display a weapon, but, with his hand in his right pocket, stated: "Walk straight, look down, and don't try anything foolish or I'll pull the trigger." No weapon was visible. The police arrested the defendant at the scene, but a search of his person and the immediate vicinity disclosed that he in fact carried no weapon. A divided Supreme Judicial Court reversed his conviction, concluding that "where a robber had no instrumentality at all, although he said he had a gun, a conviction of armed robbery is not warranted." Howard, 386 Mass. at 608. The court stated further that G. L. c. 265, § 17, "should not be read as including **117* a robbery while apparently armed with a dangerous weapon when in fact the defendant was unarmed." Ibid.

The defendant argues correctly that the Howard case stands for the proposition that an armed robbery conviction requires that the jury find that the defendant actually carried a dangerous weapon at the time of the robbery and, further, that the burden of proof is not satisfied by the defendant's statement that he is armed without more. However, in deciding what evidence additional to the defendant's statement is necessary, Howard must be read in conjunction with Commonwealth v. Delgado, 367 Mass. 432, 436-437 (1975), decided seven years earlier.

In Delgado, as a robbery of a convenience store was in progress, the defendant stated to an accomplice, "[h]old him [the store manager] or I'm going to shoot him." Id. at 436. The victim never observed a weapon. At the conclusion of the robbery, the thieves fled. The defendant was arrested away from the crime scene at a later date. No weapon was found on his person or nearby. Although the Supreme Judicial Court acknowledged that "as a general rule words are not sufficient to constitute an assault, simple or aggravated, and would therefore not usually be sufficient to meet the robbery requirement," ibid., the court affirmed the armed robbery conviction.

The court clarified the apparent inconsistency by explaining that, in the Howard case, there "is the absence of any basis to infer that the defendant may have had a gun that distinguishes [Howard] from [Delgado]." Commonwealth v. Howard, 386 Mass. at 610. In the Delgado case, on the other hand, the defendant, unlike the defendant in Howard, was arrested and searched some time after the robbery and away from the crime scene. "In those circumstances, it was possible that Delgado had a gun and disposed of it. . . . [T]he jury would have been warranted in finding beyond a reasonable doubt that Delgado had a gun." Ibid.

It remains a requirement that the Commonwealth prove actual possession of a weapon at the material time, and it remains the law that that burden is not satisfied merely by evidence that the robber said he was armed. Reading Delgado and Howard together, however, the Commonwealth may obtain a verdict by proof of such a statement together with evidence that the *118 defendant had an opportunity to dispose of the weapon prior to his arrest. It is that latter evidence that permits the jury to draw the inference that the defendant should be taken at his word. See Commonwealth v. Delgado, 367 Mass. at 437. Such a case is distinguished from a case in which the defendant is apprehended at the scene and found to have no weapon. In such a situation, there is no basis on which a juror could rationally conclude that the defendant was armed.

The distinction has been criticized. In a concurring opinion in Howard, Justice O'Connor stated, "we have never held, and we should not announce now, that a defendant's statement, in the course of a robbery, that he has a gun, together with evidence that he could have disposed of one, warrants a finding that he actually had a gun." Commonwealth v. Howard, 386 Mass. at 615. This is so, he reasoned, because the subsequent apprehension of the defendant without a weapon in his possession is as consistent with the fact that he never had one as it is with the fact that he had one and disposed of it. Whatever the merit of this analysis, it has not been adopted, and the distinction based on an opportunity to dispose of a weapon has governed proceedings in the twenty-five years since Howard was decided. See Commonwealth v. Jackson, 419 Mass. 716, 723-725 (1995); Commonwealth v. Powell, 433 Mass. 399, 403 n.3 (2001); Commonwealth v. Johnson, 27 Mass. App. Ct. 746, 748-749 (1989).

In the light of these decisions, we conclude that the jury's inference that the defendant actually carried a dangerous weapon at the time of the robbery was permissible. The evidence supported findings that the defendant threatened to shoot the victim, and that he was arrested a day later without a weapon. Thus, the jury could, if they wished, find that he in fact had a weapon when he made the threat. Contrary to the defendant's argument, the making of a threatening or menacing gesture is not required in order to permit an inference that the defendant carried a dangerous weapon at the time of the robbery. The defendant relies on cases in which gestures or objects consistent with the possession of weapons were involved. [FN4] None of these cases state that such evidence is necessary for a finding that a defendant possessed a dangerous weapon at the material time.

Intimidation of Witness.

Intimidation of a witness. The defendant was convicted of intimidating a witness pursuant to G. L. c. 268, § 13B. At the time of the armed robbery, [FN5] that section provided for criminal penalties with respect to two different forms of witness intimidation. In the present case, the Commonwealth proceeded under that portion of the statute that prohibits wilful interference "with any person furnishing information to a criminal investigator relating to a violation of a criminal statute of the commonwealth." G. L. c. 268, § 13B, as amended by St. 1970, c. 177. A "criminal investigator" is defined in the same section as "an individual or a group of individuals lawfully authorized by a department or agency of the commonwealth or any political subdivision thereof to conduct, or engage in, an investigation of, or prosecution for, a violation of the laws of the commonwealth in the course of his official duties." [FN6] "The purpose of the statute, rather obviously, is to protect witnesses from being bullied or harried so that they do not become reluctant to testify or to give truthful evidence in investigatory or judicial proceedings." Commonwealth v. McCreary, 45 Mass. App. Ct. 797, 799 (1998).

The defendant challenges his conviction on grounds of sufficiency of the evidence. He argues first that his statement that he did not wish to see the victim on television news relates only to the possibility that the victim might describe the events of the robbery to the news media, and does not qualify as interference with the "furnishing [of] information to a criminal *120 investigator." He contends also that there was no evidence that he interfered with a present or ongoing intention or effort on the part of the victim to provide information with respect to the robbery. In a related argument, he challenges as erroneous, and likely to cause a substantial risk of a miscarriage of justice, the judge's failure to instruct that the victim must, at a minimum, actually be in the process of furnishing information to a criminal investigator or have expressed an intention to do so.

In aid of his first argument on the subject, the defendant construes his statement that, "[i]f he saw [the victim] on 22 News he was going to come back and kill [him], [his] whole family, [his] buddy Ben, all of that," as an attempt to interfere only with the victim's contact with the news media. If so, his argument continues, the evidence is insufficient to convict because the statute requires that there be interference with a person's communication with a criminal investigator, and the news media are not criminal investigators (either as defined in G. L. c. 268, § 13B, or in common parlance). The argument divorces the statement from its context, and assigns it an eccentric interpretation.

General Laws c. 268, § 13B, does not require that a defendant specifically articulate a threat not to speak to the police or other criminal investigator. See Commonwealth v. Burt, 40 Mass. App. Ct. 275, 277 (1996). A fact finder may evaluate the circumstances in which the statement was made, including its timing, to determine whether the defendant in fact intended to intimidate the victim. See Commonwealth v. Robinson, 444 Mass. 102, 109 (2005). Doing so, this jury could reasonably infer that the defendant's reference to television news was a shorthand recognition that a broadcast featuring the victim would most likely come about if the victim reported the robbery to the police. That it was the defendant's purpose to prevent that communication on the part of the victim by means of a threat seems clear, and such a finding by the jury was plainly warranted. See Commonwealth v. Henault, 54 Mass. App. Ct. 8, 11-13 & n.6 (2002) (intent can be gleaned from reasonable inferences drawn from circumstantial evidence).

The defendant contends also that the evidence was insufficient to permit a finding that the victim was presently engaged in furnishing information to a criminal investigator or attempting to do so. He argues in this regard that the statute does not proscribe conduct that may only theoretically interfere with a person's communications to law enforcement personnel in the future. Thus, there being no evidence that, at the time of the defendant's statement, the victim was engaged in such a communication, or making an attempt to communicate, the jury could not reasonably find that there was an attempt on the defendant's part to interfere in the sense contemplated by G. L. c. 268, § 13B.

The defendant construes the statute too narrowly, thereby frustrating its purpose of "detering interference with future communication of information." Commonwealth v. Burt, 40 Mass. App. Ct. at 278, quoting from United States v. San Martin, 515 F.2d 317, 320 (5th Cir. 1975). A criminal investigation need not have commenced. See Commonwealth v. Belle Isle, 44 Mass. App. Ct. 226, 229 (1998). Nor must the victim be furnishing information on the day that the intimidating action is taken or statement made. Commonwealth v. Burt, supra. It is enough that the jury reasonably conclude from the surrounding circumstances that it was likely that the victim would furnish to an official investigating authority information pertaining to the crime and that the defendant intended to discourage such communication

We are not persuaded by the defendant's application of Commonwealth v. Belle Isle, supra. There, the defendant was convicted under G. L. c. 268, § 13B, and his conviction was affirmed, after he attacked his brother-in-law in the presence of other family members. The victim's wife announced that she was going to call the police, whereupon the defendant cut the telephone wire. That evidence supported a finding that the defendant forcibly and intentionally interfered with an attempt to provide information to a criminal investigator. Id. at 230. The decision was not intended to suggest that an attempt to communicate to authorities must be underway in order for there to be a violation of G. L. c. 268, § 13B, a proposition that we rejected in Commonwealth v. Burt, 40 Mass. App. Ct. at 277-278. Here, the jury could rationally find that the victim, once *122 assured that the defendant had left, would report the robbery, thus qualifying under the statute as a "person 'furnishing information' to a criminal investigator" (a purpose of statute is to deter interference with future communication of information). Ibid.

He argues, as before, that a conviction under G. L. c. 268, § 13B, cannot be predicated upon a possibility that a victim will provide information in the future. As we stated above, the statute does not require that a victim actually be in the process of furnishing information (enough that evidence indicated that the witness's furnishing of additional information would be "forthcoming"). It follows that there was no error and consequently no ineffective assistance of counsel for failure to object.

Judgments affirmed.

Assault while Armed with Intent to Rob or Murder
Chapter 265, Section 18

Definition:

While being armed with a dangerous weapon, assaulting another with intent to rob or murder.

Elements:

1. Being armed
2. Assault
3. Another person
4. Specific intent to rob or murder

Right of Arrest:

Felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE and on PROBABLE CAUSE

If the victim is 60 years of age or older and the individual is armed with a firearm, shotgun, rifle, machine gun or assault weapon, the punishment is increased to include a mandatory minimum of 10 years imprisonment.

Com. v. Rivera, 445 Mass. 119, 833 N.E.2d 1113 (2005)

The elements of armed assault with intent to rob are that the defendant, armed with a dangerous weapon, assaults a person with a specific or actual intent to rob the person assaulted. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 18.

Assault to Rob, Unarmed
Chapter 265, Section 20

Definition:

Being unarmed, assaulting another with intent to rob or steal.

Elements:

1. unarmed
2. forceful and violent assault
3. specific intent to rob

Right of Arrest:

This ten year felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or upon PROBABLE CAUSE

Com. v. Correia, 17 Mass. App. Ct. 233, 457 N.E.2d 648 (1983)

Intent generally can be proven only by inferences from facts and those inferences need only be reasonable.

Armed Assault in Dwelling House

Chapter 265, Section 18A

Definition:

Being armed with a dangerous weapon, enters a dwelling house and while therein assaults another with intent to commit a felony.

Elements:

1. Being armed with a dangerous weapon
2. Entering a dwelling house
3. While therein assaults another
4. With intent to commit a felony

Right of Arrest:

This life felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or upon PROBABLE CAUSE.

Note:

The suspect must be armed prior to entering the dwelling. Additionally, the suspect must intend to commit a felony.

Com. v. Fleming, 46 Mass. App. Ct. 394, 706 N.E.2d 1138 (1999)

Conviction for armed assault in a dwelling requires government to prove (1) entry of a dwelling while armed, (2) an assault on someone in the dwelling, and (3) a purpose accompanying the assault to commit a felony. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 18A.

A “dwelling”, for purposes of crime of armed assault in a dwelling, is a place of habitation. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 18A.

Entry by armed person into a dwelling in response to an invitation from person living there is not an “armed entry” which may sustain conviction for armed assault in a dwelling

An entry, i.e., going in, by an armed person into a dwelling<sup>4</sup> in response to an invitation from a person living there rather obviously is not a violation of the statute. Similarly, an armed policeman with probable cause to think that a crime has been committed in a dwelling who enters it to go about his policing duties has not violated the statute because the entry is privileged. Inherent in the idea of criminal trespass is an unwarranted intrusion, one that the actor was not privileged or licensed to make. Commonwealth v. Ricardo, 26 Mass.App.Ct. 345, 355, 526 N.E.2d 1340 (1988). Commonwealth v. Dunn, 43 Mass.App.Ct. 58, 60, 680 N.E.2d 1178

COMMONWEALTH v. PUTNAM

Home Invasion. Armed Assault in a Dwelling. Practice, Criminal, Instructions to Jury, Duplicative convictions.

Having been convicted by a Superior Court jury of home invasion, in violation of G.L. c. 265, § 18C; and armed assault in a dwelling, in violation of G.L. c. 265, § 18A, the defendant Steven M. Putnam now appeals.<sup>1</sup> He contends *473 that the convictions must be reversed because the evidence was insufficient to prove that he entered the alleged victim's home unlawfully, and because the instruction on consent to enter was erroneous. He also claims that his conviction of armed assault in a dwelling must be reversed because it was duplicative of the home invasion conviction. We affirm.

We view the evidence in the light most favorable to the Commonwealth. Commonwealth v. Nolin, 448 Mass. 207, 215, 859 N.E.2d 843 (2007). The victim, a self-employed counseling psychologist, lived on Old Mill Road in Harvard. Old Mill Road is a two-lane road with fields and woods, as well as isolated houses in the surrounding area. The victim's nearest neighbors were Anne Marie Arnold and Hank Emerson, who lived together about one-eighth of one mile down the road, on a working farm. The defendant lived on Arnold's property in an apartment across from the main house. He worked on the farm as a handyman and a helper.

The victim first met the defendant in 2001 at a block party. In 2002, the victim paid the defendant to clean leaves from her roof and her gutters. Around the same time, they had a few brief conversations. The victim occasionally saw the defendant on Arnold's property.

The day after Thanksgiving in 2003, in the early evening, the defendant knocked on the victim's front door and asked to come into her house. He appeared upset and intoxicated. After she allowed him in, the defendant asked the victim for help; he told her that he had been drinking and doing drugs and that he was not taking his medication. The victim told the defendant to stop drinking, to stop doing drugs, and to take his medication. The defendant then rambled on for about one-half hour; the victim thought the defendant was asking for her professional opinion but she did not give him one. The victim tried to bring the conversation to a close; the defendant eventually left. The next day, the victim called Emerson and told him that she was concerned about the defendant, that she thought he was in bad shape and doing drugs, and that he seemed mentally unstable.

On January 18, 2004, Arnold asked the defendant to leave the property because he had not performed any work on the farm for the prior two months. Arnold suspected that the defendant was drinking and doing drugs.

On January 26, 2004, around 8:30 p.m., while the victim was on the telephone, the defendant knocked on her door. The victim opened the door a few inches and saw the defendant. The defendant said that he wanted to come in and speak with her. She told him to go home and to telephone her in one-half hour, and she would speak to him on the telephone. She then closed the door and returned to her telephone conversation. Around 8:55 p.m., the victim finished her conversation and telephoned Emerson to inform him that the defendant had been to her house and that "he might be in bad shape." She also told Emerson that if he received a telephone call from her that evening, he should telephone the police and have them come to her house no matter what she said.

Shortly after speaking with Emerson, the victim heard a knock on her door. When she went to the door, the defendant was standing there and appeared distressed. She opened the door because the door had glass in it and she "thought it would be better to open the door than to try and keep him on the other side."

The defendant came into the house and the victim told him to sit at the dining room table. She sat at the table with him and noticed that he was disturbed, and that he had blood on his left hand. She asked the defendant if he was suicidal, to which he replied that he was not. The defendant began to talk to the victim, mumbling to the point that she "had trouble understanding him."

During this conversation, the victim got up, picked up the telephone, and told the defendant that she did not think he was all right, that she thought they should telephone Emerson, and that she thought he needed some help. The defendant then grabbed her around her back, shoved her, punched her face, and violently knocked the telephone out of her hand, throwing it on the floor where it broke. He then began to punch the victim, pull her hair, and maneuver her around. As he was beating the victim, he asked, "Why did you call Hank?"

At some point, the defendant pulled a knife out of his pocket. He said, "You can make this hard or you can make this easy." He then tried to force the victim to go upstairs. When they got to the bottom of the stairs, the victim sat "heavily" and resisted. *475 After the defendant's attempts to push the victim up the stairs failed, he threw her on a couch located **972 near the stairs in her living room and ripped off the clothing she wore on the bottom of her body.<sup>3</sup> He then pulled his pants down and lay on top of the victim. He put his finger into the victim's vagina and began thrusting.<sup>4</sup> The victim kept telling the defendant that "this ... was not good," that it was "not going to happen," and that it was something she "didn't want to do." Nonetheless, the defendant continued raping her.

The defendant then sat up and told the victim to take her top off. She sat up and made a gesture as though she was going to comply. When the defendant began to pull his own shirt over his head, the victim ran toward the front door. She ran outside, naked from the waist down and not wearing shoes, towards Arnold's farmhouse. Arnold and Emerson let her into their house and the victim, who was hysterical and sobbing, told them that the defendant "had tried to rape" her. Emerson immediately called the police and they arrived at the house within ten minutes. The police proceeded to the victim's residence and conducted a preliminary search. The police found a knife outside the victim's house.

The defendant testified in his own defense. He admitted to having had a long-term alcohol problem. When he moved into Arnold's apartment in 2000 he had been sober for eleven years; however, he did not remain sober. The defendant testified that he came to the victim's house on the day of the incident because he knew that the victim was a doctor and he thought she could help him in some way, such as getting him into a detoxification program. When he came to the victim's home, she invited him into the house. After some conversation, the victim told the defendant that she was going to telephone Emerson, and that Emerson would telephone the police. The defendant became afraid; he recently had been involved in two "DUI" (driving under the influence) cases and had been warned that if he was convicted of a third offense he would go to jail for six months.

The defendant testified that he then grabbed the victim and tried to persuade her not to telephone Emerson. Next, he kissed her, and he thought that she kissed him back. The defendant then offered to the victim to go upstairs but she refused. Next, they were on the couch; the defendant thought that the victim went to the couch willingly. He thought they were engaged in a consensual activity until the victim asked the defendant to stop. In response, the defendant stopped. He then sat up, the victim sat up, and, then, the victim ran out the door.

The defendant denied putting his finger in the victim's vagina. Although the defendant had a knife, he did not threaten the victim with it. He tried to give the victim his knife because he was afraid that he was going to cut his wrists.

A few minutes after the victim ran out of her house, the defendant returned to his apartment, grabbed "a bunch of beers," and walked out into the woods. The next day, he found himself in Leominster, walking down the railroad tracks. His mother picked him up at the Leominster Public Library and brought him to Emerson Hospital, where he was arrested.

A. Convictions of home invasion and of armed assault in a dwelling. The defendant claims that there was insufficient evidence of an unlawful entry to sustain convictions of home invasion and of armed assault in a dwelling. The crime of home invasion, G.L. c. 265, § 18C, requires that the defendant “(1) ‘knowingly enter[ed] the dwelling place of another’; (2) ‘knowing or having reason to know that one or more persons are present within’ (or entered without such knowledge but then remained in the dwelling place after acquiring or having reason to acquire such knowledge); (3) ‘while armed with a dangerous weapon’; and (4) ‘use[d] force or threaten [ed] the imminent use of force upon any person within such dwelling place whether or not injury occur[red], or intentionally cause[d] any injury to any person within such dwelling place.’ ” Commonwealth v. Doucette, 430 Mass. 461, 465–466, 720 N.E.2d 806 (1999), quoting from G.L. c. 265, § 18C. See Commonwealth v. Brown, 451 Mass. 200, 205, 884 N.E.2d 488 (2008). See also Commonwealth v. Stokes, 440 Mass. 741, 746–747, 802 N.E.2d 88 (2004). “Conviction under G.L. c. 265, § 18A, of armed assault in a dwelling requires proof of three elements: (1) entry of a dwelling while armed[:]; (2) an assault on someone in the dwelling; and *477 (3) a specific intent, accompanying the assault, to commit a felony.” Commonwealth v. Donoghue, 23 Mass.App.Ct. 103, 111–112, 499 N.E.2d 832 (1986).

In short, entry is an element that must be proven by the Commonwealth for the offenses of both home invasion and armed assault in a dwelling. An entry into a dwelling is not unlawful if it is consensual, in response to an invitation, or privileged. See Commonwealth v. Mahar, 430 Mass. 643, 646–647, 722 N.E.2d 461 (2000). See also Commonwealth v. Dunn, 43 Mass.App.Ct. 58, 60, 680 N.E.2d 1178 (1997); Commonwealth v. Fleming, 46 Mass.App.Ct. 394, 396, 706 N.E.2d 1138 (1999). “A consensual entry, however, does not always correlate with a lawful entry.... [P]urported consent [to entry] cannot be considered legally significant unless the occupant has been made aware that the person at the door is armed with a dangerous weapon and is about to commit an assault once inside.” Mahar, supra at 652–653, 722 N.E.2d 461. See Commonwealth v. Morris, 64 Mass.App.Ct. 51, 54, 831 N.E.2d 338 (2005). Thus, the Mahar court affirmed the defendant's home invasion conviction, concluding that the entry was unlawful where the defendant was admitted into the home by a person who was unaware that the defendant entered the home while armed, with the intent to commit an assault upon that person in the dwelling. Mahar, supra at 647, 651–653, 722 N.E.2d 461.

In this case, the jury's determination was based largely on a credibility evaluation of the testimony of the victim and of the defendant. While the crime of home invasion “is not intended to encompass situations where an invited guest in a home suddenly turns violent,” id. at 652 n. 6, 722 N.E.2d 461, this is not the evidence here. Here, the victim became disturbed and frightened by the defendant's visit earlier on the day of the incident; she telephoned her neighbor to warn him of the defendant's “bad shape” and instructed him to telephone the police if she telephoned him back. As in Mahar, while the victim initially permitted the defendant's entry, a jury permissibly could find that she did not know he was armed with a knife and that he intended to attack her once inside. Additionally, here, when the defendant arrived at the victim's house, she let him in her house because she “thought it would be better to open the door than to try and keep him on the other side.” From all this evidence, the jury could infer that the defendant **974 had instilled fear in the victim, who only allowed *478 him into her house because she felt that she had no other choice. Moreover, there was no evidence that the defendant was a frequent visitor at the victim's house, that he was accustomed to entering without explicit permission, or that the defendant and the victim were in any type of ongoing relationship. See generally id. at 647, 722 N.E.2d 461. Contrast Commonwealth v. Fleming, 46 Mass.App.Ct. at 396–397, 706 N.E.2d 1138 (defendant entitled to jury instruction on consensual entry where defendant was frequent visitor at facility); Commonwealth v. Simmarano, 50 Mass.App.Ct. 312, 314–316, 737 N.E.2d 488 (2000) (defendant entitled to jury instruction on consent where there was evidence that defendant and victim had been in some form of ongoing relationship and that defendant was frequent visitor at victim's house). The evidence showed that, once inside the house, the defendant pulled out a knife, and ultimately dragged the victim to the couch and raped her. The totality of the evidence warranted the jury's determination that the defendant's entry into the victim's dwelling was unlawful.

Jury instructions. In defining home invasion, the judge first read to the jury the pertinent text of G.L. c. 265, § 18C, and then gave an almost verbatim recital of the model jury instruction on home invasion. See Massachusetts Superior Court Criminal Practice Jury Instructions § 2.31 (Mass. Continuing Legal Educ.1999 & Supp.2003). Because an issue in the case was whether the defendant lawfully entered the victim's home, in keeping with Morris, 64 Mass.App.Ct. at 54, 831 N.E.2d 338, the judge included in his instruction guidance regarding consensual entry. The judge instructed:

“The first element which the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt is that the defendant entered the dwelling of another. An entry is the unlawful, unconsented making of one's way into a dwelling.... The Commonwealth must also prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant had no right of habitation or occupancy at the time of entry, that the defendant made a nonconsensual entry into the dwelling place. While consent to enter may be considered as evidence that the entry was lawful, consent may be negated if the person giving consent is unaware of the defendant's being armed with a dangerous weapon or of an intent to commit a crime while inside

The defendant asserts that the judge erred and that the error created a substantial risk of a miscarriage of justice when he instructed that consent to enter a dwelling “may be negated if the person giving consent is unaware of the defendant's being armed with a dangerous weapon or of an intent to commit a crime while inside” (emphasis supplied).<sup>5</sup> He points to the court's holding in Mahar, 430 Mass. at 652–653, 722 N.E.2d 461, that “consent [to entry] cannot be considered legally significant unless the occupant has been made aware that the person at the door is armed with a dangerous weapon and is about to commit an assault once inside.” The defendant claims that the jury should have been instructed that consent may be negated if the person giving consent is unaware that the defendant is armed and intends to commit a crime once inside the dwelling.

The defendant's argument is unpersuasive because the judge's instruction is indeed consistent with Mahar, which requires both elements for consent to be valid. The instruction, conversely, properly informs the jury, that the absence of either element will negate consent. Mahar does not require that the Commonwealth prove that the occupant has been made aware both that defendant was armed with a dangerous weapon and that he intended to commit an assault once inside the dwelling. That is to say, if the Commonwealth shows that either element was not present, then there was no consent. Consistent with a commonsense understanding, the law protects the sanctity and the safety of the occupant within her dwelling, and reflects the view that the entry by an outsider can be considered permissive only if the occupant, with relevant information, is aware of the risks to her safety, yet freely allows the entry. Thus, permissive entry, premised on consent to enter, is negated if the occupant purportedly giving consent is not aware that the person who is entering is armed. Alternatively, if the occupant is aware that the person is armed, but unaware that he intends to commit a crime once inside, permissive entry also is negated. “[A]s a matter of public policy, ... an occupant of a dwelling cannot consent to allow an armed intruder ... inside to *480 commit an assault.” Id. at 653, 722 N.E.2d 461. See Morris, 64 Mass.App.Ct. at 54 n. 4, 831 N.E.2d 338. There was no error here.<sup>6</sup>

Duplicative convictions. Finally, the defendant asserts that while armed assault in a dwelling is not a lesser included offense of home invasion, because the defendant was convicted of both offenses on the basis of the same act, and the two crimes are so closely related, the defendant should not be subject to punishment for both

The traditional rule, embodied in Morey v. Commonwealth, 108 Mass. 433, 434 (1871), and employed by Massachusetts courts on the issues of double jeopardy and duplicative offenses, provides that “a defendant may properly be punished for two crimes arising out of the same course of conduct provided that each crime requires proof of an element that the other does not.”

Commonwealth v. Keohane, 444 Mass. 563, 574, 829 N.E.2d 1125 (2005), quoting from Commonwealth v. Arriaga, 44 Mass.App.Ct. 382, 385–386, 691 N.E.2d 585 (1998).<sup>7</sup> The vitality of that elements-based rule was affirmed in Commonwealth v. Vick, 454 Mass. 418, 910 N.E.2d 339 (2009). There, the Supreme Judicial Court stated, “This elements-based approach remains the standard for determining whether multiple convictions stemming from one criminal transaction are duplicative. See **976 Commonwealth v. Cabrera, 449 Mass. 825, 827, 874 N.E.2d 654 (2007); Commonwealth v. Gallant, 65 Mass.App.Ct. 409, 413, 840 N.E.2d 998 (2006); ... Arriaga, supra at 386–389, 691 N.E.2d 585.” Vick, supra at 431, 910 N.E.2d 339. “It bears repeating that, where ... neither crime is a lesser included offense of the other, multiple punishments are permitted *481 even where the offenses arise from the very same criminal event. See Morey v. Commonwealth, [supra ].” Vick, supra at 436, 910 N.E.2d 339.<sup>8</sup>

Here, the two crimes in question have mutually exclusive elements; specifically, the requirement of scienter distinguishes these two offenses. Commonwealth v. Ruiz, 426 Mass. 391, 393 & n.3, 688 N.E.2d 963 (1998).<sup>9</sup> As such, and under the Morey rule, the defendant can be prosecuted for, and convicted of, both offenses simultaneously, even though they arise from the single course of conduct. The convictions of armed assault in a dwelling and of home invasion are not duplicative, and, therefore, the defendant properly is subject to punishment for both offenses.

The defendant does not appeal his convictions of rape, in violation of G.L. c. 265, § 22(a ); and assault and battery, in violation of G.L. c. 265, § 13A.

After hanging up with the victim, Emerson telephoned the police, alerted them to the situation, and provided the victim's address, in case he telephoned back with an emergency.

A chemist at the Massachusetts State police crime laboratory analyzed the victim's pants and located several tears on the exterior and the interior crotch area. The chemist testified that the pants were torn in a manner different from normal wear and tear such as when a person sits down and tears her pants.

The defendant was unable to penetrate the victim with his penis.

Because the defense counsel did not object to the jury instructions at trial, we examine the alleged error, if any, for whether it created a substantial risk of miscarriage of justice. See Commonwealth v. Noble, 429 Mass. 44, 45–47, 707 N.E.2d 819 (1999).

Even if the instruction were erroneous, as discussed, supra, there was ample evidence to warrant the jury's conclusion that the entry was not consented to, and therefore was unlawful. Hence, even if error, the error did not create a substantial risk of a miscarriage of justice.

Regarding entry as relating to armed assault in a dwelling, the judge instructed: “The second element which the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt is that the defendant entered the dwelling. It is not necessary, as I said before, that the entry be complete. It would be sufficient if any part of the defendant's body physically enters the building.” The instruction was not error.

“So long as each offense includes an additional element that the other does not, ‘neither crime is a lesser-included offense of the other, and convictions on both are deemed to have been authorized by the Legislature and hence not duplic[ative].’ ” Arriaga, supra at 386, 691 N.E.2d 585, quoting from Commonwealth v. Jones, 382 Mass. 387, 393, 416 N.E.2d 502 (1981).

Discussing cases relied on by the defendant here, including Commonwealth v. Keohane, supra at 574–575, 829 N.E.2d 1125, the Vick court noted, supra at 433–434, that “it may appear that our well-established, elements-based approach to analyzing purported duplicative convictions, as first articulated in Morey, has been expanded over the years to permit a conduct-based analysis of the facts of a particular case to determine whether a defendant's acts in one criminal event are so closely related as to constitute in substance a single crime such that the defendant can be punished only for the greater offense.... That was not our intention.”

“Both §§ 18A and 18C require the Commonwealth to prove that the defendant was armed with a dangerous weapon at the time of entry into a dwelling house. If the Commonwealth seeks, however, to impose the more severe penalties of § 18C it must establish either that a defendant knew or had reason to know that one or more persons were present within the dwelling house at the time of entry or that the defendant gained such knowledge after entry but nevertheless remained there for some period of time prior to attacking or threatening the person. These scienter requirements distinguish § 18C from § 18A.” Commonwealth v. Ruiz, supra (footnote omitted).

Home Invasion

Chapter 265, Section 18c

Definition:

“Whoever knowingly enters the dwelling place of another knowing or having reason to know that one or more persons are present within or knowingly enters the dwelling place of another and remains in such dwelling place knowing or having reason to know that one or more persons are present within while armed with a dangerous weapon, uses force or threatens the imminent use of **794 force upon any person within such dwelling place whether or not injury occurs, or intentionally causes any injury to any person within such dwelling place shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of not less than twenty years.” G.L. c. 265, § 18C, as amended through St.2004, c. 150, § 17. Notably, the 2004 amendment removed all references to probation *534 in the section, even the one that was in § 18C as originally enacted in 1993. See St.1993, c. 333.

Elements:

1. knowingly enters the dwelling of another
2. knowing person(s) present within or
3. knowingly enters and remains
4. knowing person(s) present within
5. while armed with a dangerous weapon
6. uses force or threatens the imminent use of force
7. whether or not injury occurs, or
8. intentionally causes any injury

Right of Arrest

This is a life felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

The suspect must be armed prior to entering the dwelling. Unlike "Armed Assault in a Dwelling", there is no requirement that entry into the dwelling be made with specific intent to commit a felony.

Com. v. Marshall, 65 Mass. App. Ct. 710, 843 N.E.2d 685 (2006)

Evidence was sufficient in home invasion action to support finding that defendant did not have a right of habitation or occupancy in victim's apartment at time when alleged crime was committed, although he had spent the previous night there and had contributed to household expenses; previous overnight stay was one of only several such instances in the prior three months, all of defendant's clothes and most of his personal effects had been removed months earlier, with the exception of clothes he no longer wore and one tie, there was evidence that victim had asked defendant to leave the apartment months earlier and that he complied with her request when he packed up his things, gave victim his keys, and moved in with his brother, and there was evidence that defendant thereafter visited the apartment only with victim's permission or at her request. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 18C.

Unarmed Robbery

Chapter 265, Section 19

Definition:

By force and violence, or by assault and putting in fear, robbing, stealing, and taking from the person of another, money or other property which may be the subject of larceny.

Elements:

1. not being armed with a dangerous weapon
2. larceny
3. from the person of another
4. by force and violence or by putting in fear

Right of Arrest:

This life felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or upon PROBABLE CAUSE.

Com. v. Zangari, 42 Mass. App. Ct. 931, 677 N.E.2d 702 (1997)

Force that defendant applied in snatching victim's purse was sufficient to satisfy "force and violence" prong of offense of unarmed robbery of person over age of 65. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 19(a).

RAPE

Chapter 265, Section 22

Definition:

(a) Whoever has sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse with a person, and compels such person to submit by force and against his will, or compels such person to submit by threat of bodily injury and if either such sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse results in or is committed with acts resulting in serious bodily injury, or is committed by a joint enterprise, or is committed during the commission or attempted commission of an offense defined in section fifteen A, fifteen B, seventeen, nineteen or twenty-six of this chapter, section fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, or eighteen of chapter two hundred and sixty-six or section ten of chapter two hundred and sixty-nine shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of years.

No person serving a sentence for a second or subsequent such offense shall be eligible for furlough, temporary release, or education, training or employment programs established outside a correctional facility until such person shall have served two-thirds of such minimum sentence or if such person has two or more sentences to be served otherwise than concurrently, two-thirds of the aggregate of the minimum terms of such several sentences.

(b) Whoever has sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse with a person and compels such person to submit by force and against his will, or compels such person to submit by threat of bodily injury, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than twenty years; and whoever commits a second or subsequent such offense shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of years.

No person serving a sentence for a second or subsequent such offense shall be eligible for furlough, temporary release, or education, training or employment programs established outside a correctional facility until such person shall have served two-thirds of such minimum sentence or if such person has two or more sentences to be served otherwise than concurrently, two-thirds of the aggregate of the minimum terms of such several sentences.

For the purpose of prosecution, the offense described in subsection (b) shall be a lesser included offense to that described in subsection (a).

Subparagraph (a) of this section deals with aggravated rape.

Com. v. Lopez, 433 Mass. 722, 745 N.E.2d 961 (2001)

For purposes of a rape prosecution, sexual intercourse is defined as penetration of the victim, regardless of degree. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 22(b). Unless the putative rape victim has been rendered incapable of consent, the prosecution must prove that the defendant compelled the victim's submission by use of physical force, nonphysical, constructive force, or threat of force. Com. v. McCourt, 438 Mass. 486, 781 N.E.2d 808 (2003)

GREANEY, J.

The defendant was tried before a jury in the Superior Court on indictments charging him<sup>1</sup> with aggravated rape, attempted murder, assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon (a shod foot), and indecent assault and battery. The charges stemmed from a rape and beating that occurred in Chicopee in the early morning hours of February 1, 1997. The jury found the defendant guilty on all charges.

The Appeals Court vacated the defendant's conviction of aggravated rape, concluding that the statute punishing aggravated rape, G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a), requires that the aggravating factors that transform rape into aggravated rape must play a facilitating role in the rape, and that the Commonwealth's evidence showed that the defendant had savagely beaten the victim after the rape occurred, but not before.<sup>2</sup> See Commonwealth v. McCourt, 54 Mass.App.Ct. 673, 681, 767 N.E.2d 1067 (2002). We allowed the Commonwealth's application for further appellate review solely to decide whether proof of the offense of aggravated rape requires a causal or facilitating connection between the aggravating act or acts and the rape.<sup>3</sup> We conclude that such proof is not required. Consequently, we affirm the defendant's conviction of aggravated rape.

We set forth the facts that could have been found by the jury based on the Commonwealth's evidence, in slightly more detail than did the Appeals Court. A few minutes after midnight on February 1, 1997, the victim drove to an American Legion Post in Chicopee (post), to see a man, the post's bartender (whose first name was Steve), whom she had dated during the preceding month. Outside, snow had begun to fall. At about 1:30 a.m., the defendant, whom Steve knew, but whom the victim had never met, entered the post and sat down at the bar near to where the victim was seated. Steve, the defendant, and the victim conversed briefly, and the defendant showed the victim a game involving finding an owl on a five dollar bill. The victim was polite to the defendant, but found his behavior "odd." *488 After about twenty minutes, the defendant got up and left the post. The victim remained with Steve while he closed up. At about 2:15 a.m., Steve and the victim said goodbye in the post's parking lot and the victim got in her automobile to drive home. By that time it was snowing hard, and a substantial amount of snow had accumulated. The victim, who lived in a different part of Chicopee from where the post was located, soon became confused on the unfamiliar streets and took a wrong turn. She eventually found herself at the end of a cul-de-sac in a residential neighborhood, her car stuck in the snow at the end of a driveway. It was now snowing heavily. Stepping out of her automobile intending to push it out of the snow, the victim saw the defendant walking around the back of her vehicle. The defendant chuckled and said, "What's the matter, you're stuck." Feeling slightly afraid, the victim asked the defendant whether he lived there, and the defendant responded affirmatively.<sup>4</sup> The victim then asked the defendant to help free her vehicle. She testified that **811 she "just wanted to get the hell out of there and leave." The defendant approached the passenger's side and began to push, although, in the victim's view, without a great deal of effort. The victim moved to open the driver's side door, telling the defendant that she was going to shift into a forward gear (but really intending to get in for her safety), when the defendant ran over, grabbed her arm, and instructed her to unlock the vehicle's back door.

Frightened, the victim stood still. The defendant moved his hand up to her shoulder, blocked the victim's entrance to the vehicle, and repeated his order to unlock the back door. This time, the victim obeyed. Still grasping the victim, the defendant opened the back door and pushed her into the rear seat. Her daughter's car seat was in the way, and the defendant yelled at the victim to remove it. The victim unbuckled the car seat, but did not remove it. The defendant became angry and threw the car seat into the front seat. He then grabbed the victim, hit her chest, forced her into the back seat, squeezed her breasts hard, and tried to kiss her. The victim was crying and begged him, "Why are you doing this? What are you doing?"

Certain that the defendant was going to rape her, and uncertain whether he had a weapon, the victim felt frightened for her life. She testified that, aware that he was becoming angry, she "just turned to jelly, and ... let him do what he wanted to do." As the victim lay crying, the defendant first inserted snow into her vagina, and then had sexual intercourse with her. Afterward, the defendant looked at the victim with an "evil look that just came over his face" and said, "You don't expect me to let you leave now, do you, not after I just raped you? You have all the evidence on me.... You can get me arrested in a heartbeat.... I can't let you go."

At that point, the defendant put his hands together in a fist and hit her on the back of her head, knocking her to the side of the road. When the victim asked why he had hit her, the defendant became extremely angry, made a "growling noise," and charged at the victim's throat. He grabbed the victim's windpipe, completely cutting off her air. While holding her throat, the defendant told the victim, "Since I just got out of jail, I can't expect you to live. I'm not going back, so I'm not going to let you live." The victim struggled and managed to get the defendant's hands off her throat, but he soon regained his grip and squeezed again. He immobilized the victim on her back on the ground by holding her throat and grabbing her hair, all the while making growling noises. The victim repeatedly begged the defendant to let her go, so that she could see her daughter "one more time." Repeatedly, the defendant responded that he could not let her go home. He finally released her and the victim was able to roll over and stand up.

Playing for time, she walked slowly down the street. She again said to the defendant, "Please let me go home." When the victim told the defendant that her daughter was in Springfield, he became enraged, charged at her, and accused her of lying, because the victim earlier had told him that she lived in Chicopee.<sup>5</sup> He grabbed her by the hair and throat and, twisting her neck, threw her to the ground. The victim testified that *490 she "was screaming for [her] life." Each time the victim attempted to stand up, the defendant **812 knocked her to the ground. The victim eventually remained on her knees and looked up. At this point, the defendant "twirled his boot" and kicked her in the face four times.<sup>6</sup> As the victim begged for her life, the defendant told her, "Quit crying." Still on her knees, the victim held snow to her face because she felt hot. When she pulled the snow away, she saw that her hand was full of blood. The defendant found her pack of cigarettes lying in the snow and tossed it to her. As she put a cigarette to her lips, the defendant again kicked her in the face. The victim asked, "What the hell did you do that for? ... I thought you were going to let me have a cigarette," to which the defendant replied, "You don't deserve anything." He then tossed the victim to the ground on her stomach and began pounding on her back "like [she] was a piece of dirt."

In an effort to pacify the defendant, the victim looked him right in the eye and spoke softly, saying, "Somebody must have hurt you in your past [and o]bviously, you don't know me. Why are you taking it out on me?" The defendant finally calmed down and began crying. He helped her free her automobile, and the victim quickly got in. Immediately, the defendant moved to the driver's side, stuck his arm through the partially opened front window, and pressed an electronic button to open the window fully. He then leaned through the window and asked, "Why are you leaving?" Fearful that he might hurt her again, the victim replied that she had to go to work and gave the defendant her telephone number. To appease his concerns about her bloody clothing or that she would notify the police, the victim told the defendant that she would "go home and throw [her sweater] in the wash, and my mother will be sleeping. No one will know." At this point, the defendant said he was sorry, that the victim was "a nice person," and that he "shouldn't have done it." At the moment the defendant stepped away from the car, the victim drove away. She arrived home ten minutes *491 later, at approximately 5 a.m., and immediately told her mother what had happened. Her mother telephoned 911, and the victim was taken by ambulance to the emergency room of a hospital. The victim's injuries included swelling of her lips and face; an abrasion or laceration on her lower lip; a two-inch laceration on her chin; bruising on the upper part of her throat and neck; a four-inch abrasion on the right side of her neck; bruising on her upper front chest and neck and across the top of her back; abrasions on her left knee and the back of her calf; and swelling of her left wrist; swelling and redness of her external genitalia; mild swelling of her anus; and a possible tear in the vaginal wall. Her clothing was wet and stained with blood. Blood covered her face and there were flecks of dried blood on her inner thighs.

The defendant was arrested later that same day. At trial, at the close of the Commonwealth's evidence and again after the close of all the evidence, the defendant moved for a required finding of not guilty on the indictment charging him with aggravated rape, asserting that any physical violence that occurred, "occurred after, separate and distinct from the issue of the sexual intercourse," and, as a consequence, the Commonwealth had failed to show an aggravating factor in the rape itself, as *813 required by G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ). The trial judge denied the motions, stating that "a rational trier of the fact could conclude ... that in the entire transaction, which included sexual assault as well as a physical assault at the same location and within a relatively discrete period of time without any intervening additional events, that all elements of [aggravated rape] had been proven beyond any reasonable doubt."

The judge instructed the jury, along the lines of G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), that, in order to convict the defendant of aggravated rape, they must find beyond a reasonable doubt that the rape either was "committed along with or resulted in serious bodily injury" to the victim, or that it was "committed during the commission of the crime of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon." With respect to the first basis for conviction, the judge advised the jury that the acts that result in serious bodily injury need not occur at the precise moment of vaginal penetration, but that they must occur as part of "one *492 continuous episode and course of conduct during the course of the rape."

With respect to the second basis, the judge instructed that the rape and the assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon need not occur at the same time, but that the offenses must constitute "one continuous episode and course of conduct." At the defendant's request, the judge further instructed the jury that they could find the defendant guilty of rape, and of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, without finding him guilty of aggravated rape, if they determined the offenses constituted "two separate events that [were] not part of a continuous episode." The jury convicted the defendant of aggravated rape on the basis of both theories on which the judge had instructed.

The defendant concedes, for purposes of this appeal, that he committed the offenses of rape and of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon.<sup>7</sup> He argues, nevertheless, that his conduct did not constitute aggravated rape because the acts constituting the assault and battery (and which resulted in the victim's injuries) did not begin until after the rape. The defendant asserts that "the essence of the crime of rape is the use of force or threat of bodily injury in order to overcome the victim's will to resist and to compel the victim to submit to nonconsensual sexual intercourse."

Thus, the defendant reasons, the elements that transform the crime of rape into the crime of aggravated rape under G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), must be used to facilitate the rape or to overcome the victim's will to resist being raped. This analysis is incorrect.

General Laws c. 265, § 22 (a ), set forth below,<sup>8</sup> on its face, does not require that the aggravating factor or factors be used to *493 facilitate the unlawful sexual intercourse. When a rape victim sustains serious bodily injury, the pertinent statutory language requires only that the intercourse have been "committed with" the acts that resulted in the victim's injuries.

While the language "committed with," of course, implies some logical nexus between time and place, the words do not specifically require that the physical force precede the rape or that the injuries be inflicted to overcome a victim's will to resist. If this were true, a person who savagely beat his victim following a sexual attack, as here, would be punished less severely than one who inflicted the beating before penetration, even though both rape victims sustained identical injuries.

There is no indication that the Legislature intended such an anomalous result. In 1974, the Legislature revised G.L. c. 265, § 22, defining the crime of rape as “sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse with a person” who is compelled to submit either “by force and against his will” or “by threat of bodily injury.” St.1974, c. 474, § 1. In 1980, the Legislature again revised § 22, leaving unchanged the description of rape, but setting forth, in § 22 (a ), a heightened penalty when specified aggravating factors are present. See St.1980, c. 459, § 6. See also Aldoupolis v. Commonwealth, 386 Mass. 260, 267 n. 10, 435 N.E.2d 330, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 864, 103 S.Ct. 142, 74 L.Ed.2d 120 (1982). The Legislature's choice of the flexible terms “committed with” and “committed during,” rather than terms indicating a restrictive causal relationship, such as “accomplished by” or “facilitated by,” demonstrates its intent to avoid a limiting temporal distinction.

This commonsense interpretation of G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), is consistent with the manner in which we have interpreted other *494 statutes punishing violent crimes. For example, under G.L. c. 265, § 19, a person may be convicted of robbery, even though the use of force occurred after the taking of the property. See Commonwealth v. Sheppard, 404 Mass. 774, 778, 537 N.E.2d 583 (1989); Commonwealth v. Jones, 362 Mass. 83, 89–90, 283 N.E.2d 840 (1972). See also Model Penal Code § 222.1 and comment 2 (Official Draft 1980) (force or threat of force may occur “in the course of committing a theft,” even in the period of flight after the commission). Likewise, the felony-murder rule applies to killings that occur “in the commission of” the underlying felony, regardless whether the killing occurs before or after that felony. G.L. c. 265, § 1. See Commonwealth v. Ortiz, 408 Mass. 463, 466, 560 N.E.2d 698 (1990) (“It would be enough if the homicide[ ] occurred as part of the defendant's effort to escape responsibility for the underlying felony”). The two offenses must be linked, but the timing is not critical, because “[a]s a matter of logic and policy, those who inflict bodily injury on their victims before they complete their crimes are not treated more leniently than those who do not.” Commonwealth v. Christian, 430 Mass. 552, 557, 722 N.E.2d 416 (2000). See also G.L. c. 265, § 18B (imposing heightened penalties for felonies committed while in possession of firearm [regardless whether firearm was used to commit felony] ).

Our interpretation also is consistent with the approach taken by the Model Penal Code, the provisions of which have guided our interpretation of our rape statutes in the past. See Commonwealth v. Gallant, 373 Mass. 577, 588–589, 369 N.E.2d 707 (1977). The Model Penal Code divides the offense of rape into three felony levels, with the most serious category (corresponding to the offense of aggravated rape) reserved for those instances in which the victim is “not a voluntary social companion” of the defendant and “had not previously permitted him sexual liberties,” or when the actor inflicts serious bodily injury on anyone “in the course thereof.” Model Penal Code, supra at § 213.1.9

We repeatedly have stated that “[t]he essence of the crime of rape, whether aggravated or unaggravated, is sexual intercourse with another compelled by force and against the victim's will or compelled by threat of bodily injury.” Commonwealth v. Guisti, 434 Mass. 245, 248, 747 N.E.2d 673 (2001), quoting Commonwealth v. Sherry, 386 Mass. 682, 687, 437 N.E.2d 224 (1982). See Commonwealth v. Lopez, 433 Mass. 722, 726–729, 745 N.E.2d 961 (2001); Commonwealth v. Caracciola, 409 Mass. 648, 651, 569 N.E.2d 774 (1991); Commonwealth v. Helfant, 398 Mass. 214, 220, 496 N.E.2d 433 (1986). It does not follow, however, as the defendant contends, that the conduct that raises the felony of rape to one of aggravated rape must also be used to overcome the victim's will to resist the rape. As stated in the opinion of the Appeals Court, rape is “a crime involving not simply sex but ‘violence and domination ‘calculated to humiliate, injure and degrade.’ ” ” Commonwealth v. McCourt, supra at 681, 767 N.E.2d 1067, quoting People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 372, 585 P.2d 275 (1978).<sup>10</sup> The Legislature's clear purpose in creating the offense of aggravated rape was to protect victims of violent sex offenders, by punishing more severely perpetrators (i) who inflict serious bodily injury on a victim, in addition to the bodily harm from the act of rape itself; (ii) who commit rape by joint venture; or (iii) who commit other felonies against the victim in addition to the rape.<sup>11</sup> The critical point is not whether the aggravating acts served to compel a victim's submission, but whether the rape victim sustained serious bodily injuries, or was subjected to other felonious conduct, <sup>**816</sup> during the same criminal episode. The <sup>*496</sup> Legislature, by enacting G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), intended that rapists who inflict serious bodily injury or commit other crimes against their victims, will be dealt with severely. It is neither appropriate nor consistent with the Legislature's purpose to draw an artificial bright line between the ending of the sexual offense and aggravating conduct that occurs immediately thereafter. We conclude that the language of G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), is sufficiently broad to encompass a rape that precedes a brutal beating that inflicts serious bodily injury on the victim, so long as the rape and the beating “constituted one continuous episode and course of conduct.” See Commonwealth v. Moreschi, 38 Mass.App.Ct. 562, 569–570, 649 N.E.2d 1132 (1995).<sup>12</sup>

It remains for the jury to consider each case on its own facts and to determine whether there is an adequate nexus between the unlawful sexual intercourse and the serious bodily injury or the acts constituting one of the enumerated offenses. This is a task jurors commonly are called to make. The jury are entitled to consider the entire sequence of events in making their determination whether the aggravating acts occurred in the course of the rape, or whether, because of intervening time or events, the rape and the aggravating acts cannot be viewed as one continuous course of criminal conduct directed at the victim, and so may find the defendant guilty of two separate offenses, but not of aggravated rape.

Caracciola, supra at 654, 569 N.E.2d 774, quoting Commonwealth v. McMenimon, 295 Mass. 467, 470, 4 N.E.2d 246 (1936). No reasonable person reading G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), in light of the Commonwealth's evidence, would claim surprise on learning that the defendant was guilty of aggravated rape. See Perry v. Commonwealth, 438 Mass. 282, 288, 780 N.E.2d 53 (2002); Commonwealth v. Gallant, 373 Mass. 577, 580–581, 369 N.E.2d 707 (1977).

2. The judgment of conviction of aggravated rape is affirmed.

So ordered.

AGGRAVATED RAPE

Elements:

1. having sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse*
  2. with a person (can be male or female)
  3. and compels such person to submit by force and against his will
- OR
4. by threat of bodily injury

AND

This rape is combined with one of the three following conditions:

1. the rape results in serious bodily injury (NOT mental.)
  2. is committed by a joint enterprise (more than one assailant)
- OR
3. during the commission or attempted commission of one of the following crimes:

Ch. 265:15A Assault and Battery by means of a Dangerous Weapon

Ch. 265:15B Assault by means of a Dangerous Weapon

Ch. 265:17 Armed Robbery

Ch. 265:19 Unarmed Robbery

Ch. 265:26 Kidnapping

Ch. 266:14 Armed Breaking and Entering of a Dwelling House

Ch. 266:15 Unarmed Breaking and Entering of a Dwelling in the Nighttime (burglary)

Ch. 266:16 Breaking and Entering, a Building or Ship; Intent to Commit a Felony

Ch. 266:17 Building or Ship; Nighttime Entry; Daytime Breaking and Entering

Ch. 266:18 Dwelling House; Nighttime Entry; Daytime Breaking and Entering Ch. 269:10 Dangerous Weapons, Unlawfully Carrying

Punishment:

Aggravated rape is punishable by life or any term of years.

Com. v. McCourt, 438 Mass. 486, 781 N.E.2d 808 (2003)

The legislature's clear purpose in creating the offense of aggravated rape was to protect victims of violent sex offenders, by punishing more severely perpetrators who (1) inflict serious bodily injury on a victim, in addition to the bodily harm from the act of rape itself; (2) commit rape by joint venture; or (3) commit other felonies against the victim in addition to the rape. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 22(a). Evidence supported conclusion that the sexual assault and the subsequent physical assault were one calculated and continuous episode and that defendant committed aggravated rape; the defendant followed the victim in a snowstorm, approached her when she became stranded, forced her into the backseat of her automobile, raped her, informed her of need to kill her, began striking her in the head and back, and, finally, kicked her with his boot as she lay on the ground, and the defendant inflicted the serious bodily injuries with the explicit goal of killing the victim, thereby concealing the rape and avoiding punishment for his crime. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 22(a).

RAPE

Subparagraph (b) of this section deals with rape.

Elements:

1. having sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse*
2. with a person
and compels such person to submit
3. by force and against his will
- OR
4. by threat of bodily injury

Punishment:

Rape is punishable by a term in the state prison for not more than twenty years. Second and subsequent offense punishable by state prison for life or any term of years.

"Unnatural sexual intercourse" includes the following:

1. oral intercourse
  - a. fellatio -- oral sex performed on a man
  - b. cunnilingus -- oral sex performed on a woman
2. anal (rectal)intercourse
3. digital penetration
  - a. placing of a finger in the anal or vaginal orifice
  - b. placing of an object in the anal or vaginal orifice

Notes:

Corroboration of victim's testimony is not required by law.

Penetration is required, but emission is not required. There is no requirement that the suspect perform the penetration. The charge of rape is appropriate even if the suspect forces two other individuals to engage in sexual penetration.

There is no common law spousal exclusion; a husband can be convicted of raping his wife.

If the victim is under the disabilities of intoxication, helplessness, unconsciousness, idiocy, stupification or sleep, the only force necessary is the minimal force for penetration.

Rape of a Child

Chapter 265, Section 22A

Definition:

Whoever has sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse with a child under 16, and compels such child to submit by force and against his will or compels such child to submit by threat of bodily injury, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of years. A prosecution commenced under this section shall neither be continued without a finding nor placed on file.

Elements:

1. Having sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse
2. against the will
3. of a child UNDER sixteen (16)
4. by force or threat of bodily injury

Right of Arrest:

This life felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or upon PROBABLE CAUSE.

Proof of the force element of rape under G.L. c. 265, § 22A, may be established by physical force or constructive force. “[I]n this Commonwealth, unless the putative victim has been rendered incapable of consent, the prosecution must prove that the defendant compelled the victim's submission by use of physical force; nonphysical, constructive force; or threat of force” (emphasis added). Commonwealth v. Lopez, 433 Mass. 722, 728–729, 745 N.E.2d 961 (2001). See Commonwealth v. Helfant, 398 Mass. 214, 220–222, 496 N.E.2d 433 (1986); Commonwealth v. Caracciola, 409 Mass. 648, 653, 569 N.E.2d 774 (1991). In this case, the rape convictions are sustainable on both the physical **113 force and constructive force theories of proof.

8 a. Physical force. The evidence demonstrated actual physical force inflicted upon the victim by the defendant in those digital rapes during which the physical intrusion of penetration was perpetrated while the young victim was asleep. “[I]t has been held that, if a man has carnal intercourse, using so much force as is necessary, with a woman who is incapable of consenting, by reason of sleep ... he may be convicted of rape.”

Commonwealth v. Roosnell, 143 Mass. 32, 40, 8 N.E. 747 (1886). Accord Commonwealth v. Fionda, 33 Mass.App.Ct. 316, 321–323, 599 N.E.2d 635 (1992) (correct jury instruction that if, by reason of sleep, victim is incapable of *255 consenting, then sexual act is done without valid consent of victim); Commonwealth v. Moniz, 43 Mass.App.Ct. 913, 913–914, 683 N.E.2d 703 (1997) (sufficient force where penetration was accomplished without opportunity for victim to resist). See Commonwealth v. Feijoo, 419 Mass. 486, 493, 646 N.E.2d 118 (1995); Commonwealth v. Vasquez, 55 Mass.App.Ct. 523, 534–536, 772 N.E.2d 60 (2002).

Actual force was also present in the oral rapes, where the defendant pulled the victim's legs apart and positioned himself against her spread legs while he engaged in oral sex.

910 b. Constructive force. The convictions would be sustainable in any event under the alternative theory of proof of nonphysical constructive force. See Commonwealth v. Lopez, supra. Among the spectrum of factors which may be considered on the question of the sufficiency of the evidence proving constructive force in accomplishing a rape against a child is the historical and contextual relationship between the victim and the defendant, as well as the manner and means by which the rape is perpetrated, which factors, among others, bear on whether the victim's ability to resist the rape was overborne or negated. In essence, the focus is on the circumstances "in which the victim is placed, the impact of those circumstances ... on the victim's power to resist and the defendant's conduct[,] all [of which] are relevant to the determination whether conduct complained of by the victim was accomplished by force and against the victim's will." Caracciola, 409 Mass. at 651, 569 N.E.2d 774.

In this case, a confluence of circumstances yielded sufficient evidence of constructive force upon the vulnerable victim who was the object of the defendant's digital and oral intercourse against her will and without any meaningful power to resist. The defendant took advantage of the young victim as she slept in his house, where the defendant was an authority figure, and the victim was in the care of the defendant and his wife. The defendant gained an additional advantage over the victim because the victim was his step-niece, and she trusted him. There was a great disparity in age between the defendant and the young victim, and the defendant, a much larger person than the victim, would have a commanding physical presence. "By looking to the child's age and size, a [fact finder] could reasonably have inferred that the sexual intercourse took place by force and against her consent." Commonwealth v. Melchionno, 29 Mass.App.Ct. 939, 941, 558 N.E.2d 18 (1990).

*256 The defendant argues that such factors still do not add up to the level of constructive force, because the victim stated that she was not threatened by the defendant and was not scared by him. However, that the young victim denied fear, and instead sought to suppress the effects of the rapes by pretending to sleep during the rapes, professing to accept the **114 continual assaults as acts which "didn't affect me" because she was so young that she "didn't think anything was wrong with it [and] just accepted it," does not mean that the evidence was not sufficient to show that the rapes were committed against the victim's will, or that her power to resist was not overborne by the defendant. See Commonwealth v. Sherry, 386 Mass. 682, 688, 437 N.E.2d 224 (1982); Commonwealth v. Caracciola, supra. Indeed, that the victim endured the rapes with resignation and with no will to resist the defendant's sexual exploitation is reflective of the very nature of the application of constructive force with respect to the crime of rape of a young person.

Rape of a Child/Statutory Rape

Chapter 265, Section 23

Definition:

Section 23. Whoever unlawfully has sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse, and abuses a child under 16 years of age, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of years or, except as otherwise provided, for any term in a jail or house of correction. A prosecution commenced under this section shall neither be continued without a finding nor placed on file.

Elements:

The elements of statutory rape are:

- (1) sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse with
- (2) a child under 16 years of age. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 23

Right of Arrest:

This life felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or upon PROBABLE CAUSE.

Notes:

Provides a second and subsequent offense punishment.

NO FORCE -- "STATUTORY RAPE"

Mistaken belief as to the age of the victim in no defense to statutory rape.

Statutory rape is a strict liability crime. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 23

Com. v. Knap, 412 Mass. 712, 592 N.E.2d 747 (1992)

Reasonable mistake of fact as to identity. We have held that a reasonable mistake as to the age of the victim is not a defense to the crime of statutory rape. Commonwealth v. Miller, 385 Mass. 521, 522, 432 N.E.2d 463 (1982). The defendant argues that a reasonable mistake of fact as to identity, unlike a reasonable mistake of fact as to age, should be a defense to a charge of statutory rape and indecent assault and battery with a child under fourteen because if the facts were as the defendant believed, he would have committed no crime. We see no reason to differentiate between a mistake as to age, and a mistake as to identity. As we stated in Miller, supra, a "mistake of fact will not avail the defendant here. Strict criminal liability is not necessarily a denial of due process of law, and in the case of statutory rape it is not. The defendant argues that ... a reasonable mistake ... should be a valid defense to a charge of statutory rape.... This argument should be addressed to the Legislature."

Strict liability. The defendant argues that neither statutory rape nor indecent assault and battery on a child under fourteen are strict liability crimes. We pass over the question whether this issue is properly preserved merely by the defendant's objection to the judge's refusal to charge as requested. Statutory rape is a **749 strict liability crime.

Commonwealth v. Miller, supra. The only elements the Commonwealth must prove are (1) sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse with (2) a child under sixteen years of age

Aggravated Rape and Abuse of Child

Chapter 265, Section 23A

Section 23A. Whoever unlawfully has sexual intercourse or unnatural sexual intercourse, and abuses a child under 16 years of age and:

(a) there exists more than a 5 year age difference between the defendant and the victim and the victim is under 12 years of age;

(b) there exists more than a 10 year age difference between the defendant and the victim where the victim is between the age of 12 and 16 years of age; or

(c) at the time of such intercourse, was a mandated reporter as defined in section 21 of chapter 119, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for any term of years, but not less than 10 years. The sentence imposed on such person shall not be reduced to less than 10 years, or suspended, nor shall any person convicted under this section be eligible for probation, parole, work release, or furlough or receive any deduction from his sentence for good conduct until he shall have served 10 years of such sentence. Prosecutions commenced under this section shall neither be continued without a finding nor placed on file.

Com. v. Simmons, 88 Mass. App. Ct. 1114 (2016)

Based on the testimony of the victim, a reasonable juror would be entitled to infer the penetrations necessary to constitute the rapes. The Supreme Judicial Court has stated that, “when young children testify about sexual assault, their description of penetration need not be precise.” Commonwealth v. King, 445 Mass. 217, 224 (2005), citing Commonwealth v. Moniz, 43 Mass.App.Ct. 913, 914 (1997) (jury could find penetration from seven year old victim's testimony that defendant “licked her pee pee”), Commonwealth v. Nylander, 26 Mass.App.Ct. 784, 785–787 (1989) (jury could infer penetration from evidence including testimony of young child that defendant touched her “bum” and “private spot” with his “private spot”), and Commonwealth v. Thomas, 19 Mass.App.Ct. 1, 5 (1984) (jury entitled to infer penetration from six year old's testimony that defendant made her “privacy” feel bad by lying on top of her). The defendant's motions were properly denied.

Assault with Intent to Commit Rape

Chapter 265, Section 24

Definition:

Assaulting a person with intent to commit rape.

Elements:

1. Commits assault (actually touching)
2. a person
3. specific intent (to commit rape)

Right of Arrest:

This 20 year felony is arrestable IN PRESENCE or upon PROBABLE CAUSE.

Com. v. Oliveira, 53 Mass. App. Ct. 480, 480–81, 760 N.E.2d 308, 309 (2002)

Following a two-day jury trial, the defendant was convicted on charges of indecent exposure, lewd and lascivious behavior, indecent assault and battery of a person fourteen or over, and assault with intent to rape. On appeal he claims (i) that the judge failed to give timely instructions to the jury regarding the permissible use of fresh complaint testimony, and (ii) that there occurred violations of the defendant's Federal *481 constitutional right not to be subjected to double jeopardy<sup>1</sup> and his common law right not to be sentenced on both the assault with intent to rape charge and the indecent assault and battery charge.<sup>2</sup> We affirm the judgments.

The material facts which the jury could have found are these: the victim, then seventeen years old, was employed at Burger King in North Dartmouth. On April 24, 1996, she was walking to work on Route 6. A stranger in a black vehicle offered her a ride; she accepted. The defendant drove five miles past Burger King, down a dirt road, parked the car, shut off the ignition, and took a condom out of his wallet. The victim protested, but her effort to exit the vehicle was frustrated by a power lock on the passenger door controlled by the defendant.

The defendant persisted, but the victim rejected his advances and insisted that she had to get to work. The defendant offered money; that, too, was rejected. Then the defendant reclined the victim's seat and succeeded in "leaning" on top of her. He attempted to unbutton her pants, and eventually succeeded in doing so. At that point the victim told the defendant that she would have her uncle kill him.

The defendant, frightened, backed off. He returned to his own seat, unzipped his pants, exposed his penis, and proceeded to masturbate. Then he drove the victim to work, telling her that he was sorry and asking that she not tell anybody. When the victim finally left the defendant's vehicle, she noted the defendant's license plate number. She gave that information, together with a complete statement of events, to the police, and she called her mother.

COMMONWEALTH v. BERENDSON

Assault with Intent to Rape.

The defendant, Jamie P. Berendson, was convicted of two counts of unarmed robbery, G. L. c. 265, § 19B; aggravated rape, G. L. c. 265, § 22; kidnapping, G. L. c. 265, § 26; and assault and battery. The defendant was also convicted of assault with intent to rob, G. L. c. 265, § 20; assault with intent to rape, G. L. c. 265, § 24; and assault and battery arising*396 from a separate incident involving a different victim that occurred on the same day.

On appeal, the defendant argues that (1) his motion for a required finding of not guilty on the charge of assault with intent to rape should have been allowed; (2) the trial judge committed reversible error because he prevented the defendant from cross-examining one of the victims to determine whether she had taken her prescribed methadone medication; and (3) the prosecutor's argument that rape is a crime of violence and not sexual pleasure was impermissible and not based on expert testimony. We affirm.

Facts. The convictions arose from two separate incidents on the same day, first at Cumberland Farms in Pittsfield and later at the Lipton Mart in Lee. A lone female clerk at each store was assaulted during the respective events.

The evidence presented at trial showed that the defendant entered the Pittsfield Cumberland Farms around 4:30 A.M. on September 22, 2002. After using the restroom, the defendant left the store, returning a short while later through a back door to wait for the victim in the back room. The victim testified at trial that she heard a noise in the back of the store and went to investigate. When she walked into the back hallway, she testified that the defendant attacked her, choked her until she became unconscious, locked her in the store bathroom, and then beat and sexually assaulted her. A surveillance videotape from Cumberland Farms presented at trial shows, in part, the defendant entering the camera's view from the rear of the store, briefly interacting with a female patron, and then returning toward the rear of the store and out of view, where he was again alone with the victim in the bathroom. The videotape then shows the defendant returning to the register, emptying the cash, and leaving the store with the victim's pocketbook shortly after 5:00 A.M. Police officers testified that when they arrived on the scene, the victim's pants were undone and she appeared to be in shock.

The second victim testified that the defendant entered the *397 Lipton Mart in Lee roughly twelve hours following the Cumberland Farms incident and remained there for about an hour as he bought gasoline, filled out an employment application using a false name, and talked with the clerk. The defendant then left. The victim testified that a few hours later, at about 10:30 P.M., she was ambushed by the defendant as she was wringing out a mop in the rear of the store. As the defendant choked her and pulled her to the ground, the victim grabbed the alarm which alerted the police. When she informed the defendant that the police were on their way, he immediately let her go and ran out of the store.

In his testimony at trial, the defendant conceded that he had robbed or attempted to rob both convenience stores. He admitted to choking and beating the Pittsfield victim but denied that he sexually assaulted or intended to sexually assault either victim.

Assault with intent to rape. The defendant first argues that his motion for a required finding on the charge of assault with intent to rape the Lee victim should have been allowed because the evidence, even including evidence that the defendant raped the Pittsfield victim, was insufficient to prove that he intended to rape the Lee victim. In considering such an argument, the court must examine the evidence in the light most favorable to the Commonwealth to determine whether any rational jury could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. Commonwealth v. Latimore, 378 Mass. 671, 676-677 (1979).

The essential elements of the crime of assault with intent to rape are "(1) an assault upon the victim, and (2) a specific intent by the defendant at the time of the assault to rape the victim." Commonwealth v. Fulgham, 23 Mass. App. Ct. 422, 427 (1987), quoting from Commonwealth v. Nickerson, 388 Mass. 246, 253 (1983). See G. L. c. 265, § 24.

To establish specific criminal intent, the Commonwealth may rely wholly on circumstantial evidence. Commonwealth v. Degro, 432 Mass. 319, 325 (2000). The inferences drawn need only be "reasonable and possible." Commonwealth v. O'Laughlin, 446 Mass. 188, 198-199 (2006), quoting from *Commonwealth v. *398 Longo*, 402 Mass. 482, 487 (1988). In Commonwealth v. Martin, 447 Mass. 274, 291 (2006), the Supreme Judicial Court concluded that an attack on a teenage girl coupled with violent sexual notes found on the defendant at the time of his arrest were sufficient evidence to support the defendant's conviction for assault with intent to rape. While there was no evidence that the victim was actually touched in a sexual manner, the testimony of witnesses who observed the defendant grab the victim from behind and drag her off a beach path, and the discovery of sexually explicit notes on the defendant's person, allowed the jury to reasonably infer that the attack was sexual in nature. Ibid. Similarly, in the instant case, the Commonwealth relied on evidence of the prior rape of the Pittsfield victim, coupled with evidence of the interrupted assault of the Lee victim, to support its theory that the defendant intended to rape the Lee victim. [FN3]

It is well settled that while the prosecution may not rely on evidence of prior "bad acts" for the purposes of showing the defendant's bad character or propensity to commit the crime charged, such evidence may be admissible for some other purpose. Commonwealth v. Helfant, 398 Mass. 214, 224 (1986). For example, such evidence may be admissible to show a "common scheme, pattern of operation, . . . intent, or motive." Ibid. In Helfant, the defendant appealed from convictions of rape and drugging a person for unlawful sexual intercourse. Id. at 215. The trial judge allowed testimony from previous patients of the defendant who allegedly were offered the same drug as the victim in Helfant prior to having been sexually assaulted. Id. at 224. The evidence was admissible to show "the existence of a plan or scheme or state of mind on the part of the defendant" in order to prove an "intent to stupefy or overpower [the complainant]" with drugs, an essential element of the crime. Id. at 219, 226. Similarly, in Commonwealth v. Rancourt, 399 Mass. 269, 276 (1987), the Supreme Judicial Court upheld the admission of a prior act in which the defendant attempted, and failed, to forcibly enter a car in which two women were riding shortly before he entered the rape victim's car. The evidence was admissible because "[t]he defendant's attempt to enter forcibly the two women's automobile a half hour prior to the incident . . . bears on the issues of intent, the defendant's state of mind, and consent." Id. at 276 n.9.

Based on the totality of evidence, we agree with the trial judge that the similar behavior of the defendant prior to and during each incident allowed the jury to reasonably infer the defendant intended to rape the Lee victim. In both instances the defendant selected convenience stores with lone, female clerks. Prior to each assault, the defendant examined the layout of the store before returning to commit the crime. Each time, the defendant hid in the back of the store, away from the register, waiting for the victim to leave the view of customers and surveillance. Each assault began with the defendant placing the victim in a choke hold. The two attacks were virtually identical and only seventeen hours apart. The defendant had ample opportunity to immediately demand cash from the register when the store had no customers and the clerk was alone at the counter, but he instead hid and waited in the rear of the store, away from the cash register. The Lee assault only ended because the victim was able to pull the alarm. The evidence supports the existence of a "distinctive pattern of conduct" where the defendant investigated, isolated, and then sexually attacked his victims. See Commonwealth v. Helfant, 398 Mass. at 227.

Carjacking

Chapter 265, Section 21A

Definition:

Whoever, with intent to steal a motor vehicle, assaults, confines, maims or puts any person in fear for the purpose of stealing a motor vehicle shall, whether he succeeds or fails in the perpetration of stealing the motor vehicle shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than fifteen years or in a jail or house of correction for not more than two and one-half years and a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than fifteen thousand dollars; provided, however, that any person who commits any offense described herein while being armed with a dangerous weapon shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than twenty years or in a jail or house of correction for not less than one year nor more than two and one-half years and a fine of not less than five nor more than fifteen thousand dollars.

Elements:

1. with specific intent to steal a MOTOR VEHICLE
2. assaults or confines or maims or puts any person in fear
3. whether he succeeds or fails in the perpetration of stealing a MOTOR VEHICLE
4. unarmed

Right of Arrest:

This "unarmed carjacking" is a 15 year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Elements:

1. with specific intent to steal a MOTOR VEHICLE
2. assaults or confines or maims or puts any person in fear
3. whether he succeeds or fails in the perpetration of stealing a MOTOR VEHICLE
4. while being armed with a dangerous weapon

Right of Arrest:

This "armed carjacking" is a twenty year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Notes:

This statute applies to MOTOR VEHICLE as defined in c. 90, s.1, not just automobiles

The "armed" portion states "while being armed with a dangerous weapon." The case law that applies to the armed robbery statute is applicable here. The suspect can violate the being armed portion without ever showing the victim the weapon.

Com. v. Kemp, 46 Mass. App. Ct. 902, 702 N.E.2d 817, 818 (1998)

The defendant appeals from convictions of armed robbery, G.L. c. 265, § 17; assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, G.L. c. 265, § 15A(b); carjacking, G.L. c. 265, § 21A; and larceny of a motor vehicle, G.L. c. 266, § 28. The jury could have found that the defendant, acting with others, lured the victim by chicanery to an unfamiliar place in Brockton and then pulled him from his vehicle while simultaneously beating him with a metal object with the intent to steal the vehicle. The defendant continued to beat the victim severely, and, after the victim complied with the defendant's order to give him money, the defendant hit the victim with a metal object again before driving away in the victim's vehicle

5. who verbally, or by written or printed communication
6. maliciously and unlawfully uses or threatens to use against another the power of authority vested in him,
7. with intent to extort money, or compel a person to do any act against his will.

Right of Arrest:

This fifteen-year felony is arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Threats to Commit a Crime

Evidence was sufficient to support finding that juvenile's drawing depicted juvenile pointing a gun at teacher constituted a "threat," for purposes of threat statute. M.G.L.A. c.275, § 2. Com. v. Milo M., 433 Mass. 149, 740 N.E.2d 967 (2001) Defendant who left a message on victim's voicemail implying a threat against victim's daughter could be convicted on threatening to commit a crime, even though threat did not convey a threat against victim herself, since statute governing offense did not require that threat be conveyed to intended victim of threatened crime. M.G.L.A. c. 275, § 2. Com. v. Hamilton, 459 Mass. 422, 945 N.E.2d 877 (2011)

Com. v. Miller, 385 Mass. 521, 525–27, 432 N.E.2d 463, 466–67 (1982)

Extortion

The Commonwealth introduced evidence of two threats by the defendant. One was to expose his sexual relationship with the victim to her parents and the other was to circulate in her neighborhood pictures of her in a posture of dishabille unless she gave him money. The defendant argues that neither of these threats brings his behavior within the extortion statute, G.L. c. 265, s 25,<sup>6</sup> and *526 that therefore the judge should have allowed his motion for a directed verdict on the extortion indictments. We do not agree.

9 The elements of the crime are (1) a malicious threat (2) made to a named person (3) to accuse someone of a crime or to injure someone's person or property (4) with intent to extort money. Commonwealth v. DeVincent, 358 Mass. 592, 595, 266 N.E.2d 314 (1971), quoting from Commonwealth v. Snow, 269 Mass. 598, 608, 169 N.E. 542 (1930); Commonwealth v. Pelligrini, 283 Mass. 300, 303, 186 N.E. 552 (1933); Commonwealth v. Corcoran, 252 Mass. 465, 483-484, 148 N.E. 123 (1925). The defendant maintains that there was no evidence that he threatened to accuse anyone of a crime or to injure anyone's person or property.

Neither of these threats amounts to a threat to accuse another of a crime. The Commonwealth presented no evidence that the victim may have reasonably understood the threats “to embrace criminal prosecution.” See Commonwealth v. Bacon, 135 Mass. 521, 525-526 (1883). Nor did the defendant threaten to go to a prosecuting or police authority. See **467 Commonwealth v. Corcoran, supra, 252 Mass. at 478-481, 148 N.E. 123; Commonwealth v. Dorus, 108 Mass. 488 (1871). In fact, no threat to accuse another of a crime was ever made.

We turn to the other type of threat embraced in the statute-injury to another's person or property. The Commonwealth argues that, as a result of publication of her sexual activities and the photograph of her, the victim would have suffered a blow to her reputation of such magnitude as to cause her severe mental anguish which would constitute injury to the person. We agree.

In construing a predecessor to G.L. c. 265, s 25, this court held that a “threat to injure the person of another *527 naturally means a threat to use actual physical force upon the person of another.” Commonwealth v. Mosby, 163 Mass. 291, 294, 39 N.E. 1030 (1895). Similarly, several jurisdictions have held that a threat to expose another to disgrace and to injure his reputation was not a threat of “injury to the person or property of another” which was made unlawful by a State extortion statute.

Kidnapping

Chapter 265, Section 26

Definition:

Whoever, without lawful authority, forcibly or secretly confines or imprisons another person within this Commonwealth against his will, or forcibly carries or sends such person out of this Commonwealth or forcibly seizes and confines or inveigles or kidnaps another person, with intent to cause him to be secretly confined or imprisoned in this Commonwealth against his will, or to cause him to be sent out of this Commonwealth against his will or in any way held to service against his will, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars and imprisonment in jail for not more than two years. The provisions of the preceding sentence shall not apply to the parent of a child under eighteen years of age who takes custody of such child. Whoever commits any offense described in this section with the intent to extort money or other valuable thing thereby shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for life or any term of years.

Elements:

1. Without lawful authority
  2. Forcibly or secretly confines or imprisons
  3. Another person
  4. Within the Commonwealth
  5. Against his (the victim's) will
- OR
1. Forcibly carries or sends
  2. Another person
  3. Out of this Commonwealth
- OR
1. Forcibly seizes and confines
  2. Or inveigles (lead astray or win over by deceitful flattery: entices)
  3. Or kidnaps
  4. Another person
  5. With the specific intent
  6. Either to cause him to be sent out of this Commonwealth against his will or in any way held to service against his will

Right of Arrest:

This is ordinarily a 10 year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause. If a violation of this section is committed with the specific intent to extort money or other valuable thing (ransom), then this felony is punishable by imprisonment for up to life.

Notes:

THIS SECTION DOES NOT APPLY to the parent of a child under 18 years of age. (Chapter 265, Section 26A would apply in that case.)

Evidence that defendant showed victim a gun, placing her in fear as result, and also pulled victim by her jacket and constrained her by holding on to her backpack while they walked toward his truck, demonstrated that victim's movements were restrained and was sufficient to permit inference that defendant forcibly confined victim against her will, as required to support conviction for kidnapping. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 26.

Com. v. Colon, 431 Mass. 188, 726 N.E.2d 909 (2000)

IRELAND, J.

The defendant, Antonio Colon, was indicted for kidnapping a twelve year old girl in violation of G.L. c. 265, § 26. He moved to dismiss the indictment, contending that the Commonwealth failed to present evidence that the kidnapping was “against her will.” A Superior Court judge denied the motion and concluded that a twelve year old has “no authority or capacity, as a matter of law,” to leave the legal custody of her parents without their consent. At the parties' request, the judge reported questions to the Appeals Court. Mass. R.Crim. P. 34, 378 Mass. 905 (1979). We transferred the case to this court on our own motion.<sup>1</sup> The reported questions asked whether the judge's ruling was correct and, if so, whether the evidence presented to the grand jury was sufficient to support the indictment.<sup>2</sup> We conclude that the judge was correct and affirm that a twelve year old is unable to consent to kidnapping as a matter of law, answering both questions “Yes.”

We summarize the stipulated facts. The thirty year old defendant first met the then eleven year old girl in the summer of 1996. After a few months, the defendant began to spend a considerable amount of time alone with her. He bought presents for her, and she developed a “little crush” on him. The girl's father became concerned and confronted his daughter about her relationship with the defendant. She broke down in tears and told her father she had had sexual relations with the defendant, but recanted the next day and has subsequently denied the existence of any such relationship.

On September 19, 1997, the girl's parents contacted the Springfield police department to report that she was missing. On that same date, the twelve year old and the defendant separately purchased bus tickets to Ormond Beach, Florida. The girl claimed that she traveled alone and that the first time she saw the defendant was in the parking lot of a Florida motel as the bus passed by. On December 5, 1997, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation found the defendant and the twelve year old in a motel room in Ormond Beach, where they had been staying since the girl's disappearance. In subsequent testimony, the twelve year old has always maintained that she left her parents' custody of her own free will and that the defendant did not force her or promise her anything to entice her to follow him.

On April 21, 1998, the defendant was indicted for kidnapping in violation of G.L. c. 265, § 26. He moved to dismiss the indictment, claiming that the Commonwealth had failed to present evidence that the twelve year old girl was kidnapped against her will. After arguments, a Superior Court judge denied the motion. The judge ruled that the Commonwealth did not have to present such evidence because a twelve year old “had no authority or capacity, as a matter of law,” to leave the legal custody of her parents without their consent.

1. Capacity to consent.

1 Question A asks us to determine whether the judge was correct in concluding that a twelve year old lacks the capacity to “consent” to kidnapping. Ordinarily, the Commonwealth must prove that a victim was kidnapped “against [her] will”; in other words, without consent. **911 G.L. c. 265, § 26.<sup>3</sup> The statute is silent, however, on whether, or when, children can form the will to be able to consent to kidnapping.

The defendant concedes that very young children are incapable, as a matter of law, of consenting to leave their parents' custody.<sup>4</sup> Citing to cases interpreting other criminal statutes, the defendant argues that when a statute does not specify an age of consent, whether a child can consent is a question of fact for *191 children seven years and older. See Commonwealth v. Burke, 390 Mass. 480, 457 N.E.2d 622 (1983); note 7, infra. We disagree.

23 Criminal statutes are to be strictly construed. See Commonwealth v. George, 430 Mass. 276, 278, 717 N.E.2d 1285 (1999). However, statutes are to be construed in light of preexisting common law, and we frequently look to the common-law definition of crimes to construe criminal statutes. See Commonwealth v. Cass, 392 Mass. 799, 801–802, 467 N.E.2d 1324 (1984) (adopting common-law definition of “person” in vehicular homicide statute); Commonwealth v. Burke, 392 Mass. 688, 690, 467 N.E.2d 846 (1984) (common-law roots of “breaking and entering”); Commonwealth v. Slaney, 345 Mass. 135, 138, 185 N.E.2d 919 (1962) (“For definition of the crime of assault, resort must be had to the common law”); Commonwealth v. Correia, 17 Mass.App.Ct. 233, 235, 457 N.E.2d 648 (1983) (“burglary” at common law meant invasion of place of habitation).

The roots of the common law of kidnapping provide guidance here as well, in light of the absence of legislative history of G.L. c. 265, § 26, or a clearly expressed legislative intent to abrogate the common law. See, e.g., Commonwealth v. Burke, supra.

At common law, a child of “tender years,” defined as a child under fourteen years of age, was incapable of consenting to kidnapping. See Chatwin v. United States, 326 U.S. 455, 461, 66 S.Ct. 233, 90 L.Ed. 198 (1946), citing 9 J. Wigmore, Evidence § 2514 (3d ed.). We have long recognized that a child of tender years is “incapable of assenting to forcible removal” from the legal custody of his or her parents. Commonwealth v. Nickerson, 87 Mass. 518, 5 Allen 518, 526 (1863). In that case the defendants, acting on behalf of the mother, were convicted of kidnapping a nine year old boy.<sup>5</sup> In affirming the convictions, we recognized the tender years doctrine and held that a nine year old did not have the capacity to consent to being taken from his father's custody against his father's will.<sup>6</sup> Id. at 527. We **912 concluded that such a taking “away from the lawful custody and against the will of his rightful custodian ... is in law deemed to be forcible and against the will of the child.” Id. at 526. See *192 Commonwealth v. Moyles, 45 Mass.App.Ct. 350, 354, 698 N.E.2d 408 (1998) (three year old cannot consent to kidnapping as a matter of law).

In light of this common-law background, we hold today that twelve year old children fall within the tender years doctrine and, as a matter of law, cannot consent to leaving the custody of their parents or legal guardians. This rule recognizes the importance of protecting young children who are particularly vulnerable to kidnappings, and acknowledges the parents' role as the legal custodians of their children.

The defendant argues that Commonwealth v. Burke, 390 Mass. 480, 457 N.E.2d 622 (1983), expressly rejects the “dictum” of Commonwealth v. Nickerson, supra. In Commonwealth v. Burke, supra at 487, 457 N.E.2d 622, we declined to establish a specific age of consent for indecent assault and battery because there was no age of consent for that crime at common law. In contrast, common-law kidnapping did have an age of consent.<sup>7</sup>

We conclude that the motion judge ruled properly in holding that a twelve year old lacks the capacity, as a matter of law, to consent to a kidnapping, and we therefore answer question A, “Yes.”<sup>8</sup>

2. Sufficiency of the evidence.

456 In reported question C, we are asked whether the evidence presented to the grand jury was sufficient to support the indictment.<sup>9</sup>] *193 In general, “a court will not review the competency or sufficiency of the evidence before a grand jury.” Commonwealth v. O'Dell, 392 Mass. 445, 451, 466 N.E.2d 828 (1984). We have reviewed the evidence before the grand jury and dismissed indictments, however, when the grand jury have not heard at least “sufficient evidence to establish the identity of the accused ... and probable cause to arrest him.” Commonwealth v. McCarthy, 385 Mass. 160, 163, 430 N.E.2d 1195 (1982). This standard is considerably less exacting than the sufficiency of evidence required to warrant a guilty finding. See Commonwealth v. O'Dell, supra, and cases cited.

**913 In addition to presenting evidence that the girl was twelve years old and that she had left her parents custody without their consent, the Commonwealth presented evidence to the grand jury that the defendant spent a great deal of time with her; that he bought her numerous and expensive gifts; that the girl admitted to her father that she had had sexual relations with the defendant; that the defendant left for Florida on the same day as the girl; and that law enforcement officials found the defendant and the girl in a Florida motel room where the two had been living for nearly three months. Moreover, the defendant was evasive with his sister about his location and had taken steps to alter his and the girl's appearances, including cutting and dyeing their hair, in order to avoid detection. This evidence is sufficient to sustain the indictment, and we therefore answer question C, “Yes.”

We answer reported questions A and C in the affirmative.

The trial judge has discretion to report questions of law that are deemed to be “so important or doubtful” as to require the decision of the Appeals Court. Mass. R.Crim. P. 34, 378 Mass. 905 (1979).

The reported questions were as follows:

“A. Whether this Court's Memorandum Decision and Order on the Defendant's Motion to Dismiss is correct as a matter of law?

“B. If not, given the recent case of Commonwealth v. Moyles, 45 Mass.App.Ct. 350, 354, 698 N.E.2d 408 (1998) in which the court stated: ‘if the kidnapping victim is of such an age as to be incapable of having a “recognizable will,” the confinement must then be against the will of the parents or legal guardian of the victim’, is there, as a matter of law, an age below which a minor is incapable of having a recognizable will and which would thus require, as a matter of law, that any confinement or inveigling be against the will of the parents or legal guardian?

“C. If so, was the Commonwealth's presentation of evidence to the grand jury sufficient to support the indictment?”

Because we answer question A in the affirmative, we need not reach question B.

General Laws c. 265, § 26, reads: “Whoever, without lawful authority, forcibly or secretly confines or imprisons another person within this commonwealth against his will, or forcibly carries or sends such person out of this commonwealth, or forcibly seizes and confines or inveigles or kidnaps another person, with intent either to cause him to be secretly confined or imprisoned in this commonwealth against his will, or to cause him to be sent out of this commonwealth against his will or in any way held to service against his will, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars and imprisonment in jail for not more than two years.”

Alternatively, the defendant has argued that, because nonconsent is an element of the crime of kidnapping, reading any age of consent into the statute would, in effect, strike the element of consent from the statute and create a strict liability crime. By concluding that a twelve year old cannot consent to kidnapping as a matter of law, however, we do not “strike” the element of consent from the kidnapping statute. Instead, we merely substitute the parents' consent for that of a twelve year old child.

With minor exceptions, G.L. c. 265, § 26, contains language identical to its predecessor Gen. St. 1860, c. 160, § 30, under which the defendants in Commonwealth v. Nickerson, 87 Mass. 518, 5 Allen 518 (1863), were convicted.

Though in Commonwealth v. Nickerson, supra at 527, we discussed the tender years doctrine in the context of forcible removal, the crucial part of our holding was that the taking was against the father's will and deemed in law to be against the will of the child. The same principle applies to kidnapping by “inveiglement” without the use of force.

The other cases that the defendant cites may be distinguished in a similar manner. Three of the cited cases, Commonwealth v. Feijoo, 419 Mass. 486, 646 N.E.2d 118 (1995); Commonwealth v. Maloney, 23 Mass.App.Ct. 1016, 505 N.E.2d 552 (1987); and Commonwealth v. Askins, 18 Mass.App.Ct. 927, 465 N.E.2d 1224 (1984), all involve the crime of indecent assault and battery. As in Commonwealth v. Burke, 390 Mass. 480, 457 N.E.2d 622 (1983), these cases rest on the absence of a common-law age of consent for indecent assault and battery. The other cases cited by the defendant are equally inapplicable. In Commonwealth v. Benoit, 26 Mass.App.Ct. 641, 644, 531 N.E.2d 262 (1988), the Appeals Court declined to establish nonconsent as an element of G.L. c. 272, § 35A, unnatural and lascivious acts with a child under sixteen years, where the statute made no mention of consent and in the absence of clear common-law history. Here, though nonconsent is established as an element of kidnapping, the common law provides an age at which a child is incapable of consenting. Similarly, Matter of Rena, 46 Mass.App.Ct. 335, 705 N.E.2d 1155 (1999), does not apply because its holding applies only to a minor's competence to refuse medical treatment.

The defendant also argues that if the court affirms that a twelve year old cannot consent to kidnapping as a matter of law, such a rule should be applied only prospectively. Because we merely restate the long-standing tender years doctrine, there is no injustice worked on the defendant by applying it today.

It is ordinarily “improvident for a judge to report to the Appeals Court pursuant to rule 34 the issue of what inferences a finder of fact would be entitled to draw from the evidence.” Commonwealth v. Giang, 402 Mass. 604, 608, 524 N.E.2d 383 (1988). However, when the parties have fully briefed and argued the matter before this court, and when an interlocutory appeal has delayed a defendant's criminal trial, we have addressed the reported questions. See id. Both parties here have fully briefed and argued question C and, in the interest of the efficient administration of justice, we answer the question.

Kidnapping of Minor or Incompetent by Relative

Chapter 265, Section 26A

Definition:

Whoever, being a relative of a child less than eighteen (18) years old, without lawful authority, holds or intends to hold such a child permanently or for a protracted period, or takes or entices such a child from his lawful custodian, or takes, or entices from lawful custody any incompetent person or other person entrusted by authority of law to the custody of another person or institution, shall be punished by imprisonment in the house of correction for not more than one year or by a fine of up to one thousand dollars, or both. Whoever commits any offense described in this section by taking or holding said child outside the Commonwealth or under circumstances which expose the person taken or enticed from the lawful custody to a risk which endangers his safety, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Elements: (Misdemeanor portion)

1. Being a relative of a child less than eighteen (18)
  2. Without lawful authority
  3. Holds or intends to hold such a child permanently or for a protracted period
  4. Or takes or entices such a child from his lawful custodian
- OR
1. Takes or entices from lawful custody
  2. Any incompetent person or other person
  3. Entrusted by authority of law to the custody of
  4. Another person or institution

Right of Arrest:

This portion of the statute is a misdemeanor with no statutory right of arrest provided. If a violation of this section was committed in your presence and amounted to a breach of the peace, then you would have a right to arrest.

Elements: (FELONY PORTION)

1. Commit any offense described in this section
2. By taking or holding said child outside of the Commonwealth
3. Or under circumstances which expose the person taken or enticed from lawful custody to a risk that endangers his safety.

Right of Arrest:

This portion of the statute is a felony which would be arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

NOTE:

"Relative" is defined by Black's Law Dictionary as "a kinsman; a person connected with another by blood or affinity."

Com. v. Decosta, 78 Mass. App. Ct. 1107, 936 N.E.2d 452 (2010)

The defendant was convicted by a jury of violating G.L. c. 274, § 6 (the attempt statute), by attempting to commit parental kidnapping, G.L. c. 265, § 26A (the custodial interference statute). On appeal, the defendant raises four arguments: (1) that the indictment was insufficient to charge attempted parental kidnapping under the “felony branch” of the custodial interference statute; (2) that police officers violated her statutory right, pursuant to G.L. c. 276, § 33A, to make a telephone call; (3) that the trial judge erred in admitting excessive evidence of prior bad acts; and (4) that she was entitled to an instruction on the necessity defense. We affirm.

1. Sufficiency of the indictment. The custodial interference statute, G.L. c. 265, § 26A, has two “branches.” The “misdemeanor branch” requires proof of the basic elements of custodial interference and permits incarceration for no more than one year in a house of correction. The “felony branch” permits imprisonment for up to five years in a State prison if the crime was committed “by taking or holding [the] child outside the commonwealth or under circumstances which expose the person taken or enticed from lawful custody to a risk which endangers his safety.” G.L. c. 265, § 26A, as amended by St. 1983, c. 175. Relying largely on Commonwealth v. Williams, 73 Mass.App.Ct. 833, 903 N.E.2d 222 (2009), the defendant argues that, if the Commonwealth seeks to prosecute an individual for committing a felony branch violation of the custodial interference statute, the Commonwealth is required to so state in the indictment and also to specify the felonious act relied on. The defendant’s argument rests on a flawed premise. She was not charged with violating the custodial interference statute; rather, she was charged with attempt.

A criminal attempt has two elements, both of which must be specified in the indictment: (1) a specific intent to commit the substantive offense, see Commonwealth v. Ware, 375 Mass. 118, 120, 375 N.E.2d 1183 (1978), and (2) an overt act towards its commission. Commonwealth v. Gosselin, 365 Mass. 116, 121, 309 N.E.2d 884 (1974). “The overt act is a requirement of the attempt statute, G.L. c. 274, § 6, and the overt act relied on must be set out in the indictment or complaint.” Commonwealth v. Foley, 24 Mass.App.Ct. 114, 115, 506 N.E.2d 1160 (1987).

COMMONWEALTH v. Mohammad BACHIR.

A jury found the defendant guilty of parental kidnapping and of violating G.L. c. 209A, and not guilty of intimidation of a witness. The defendant was sentenced to M.C.I., Cedar Junction, on the parental kidnapping conviction. On the conviction of violating the G.L. c. 209A order, the defendant received a sentence to a house of correction, to be served on and after the other sentence. He filed a timely notice of appeal. Later, he filed a motion to vacate his convictions and sentences, pursuant to Mass.R.Crim.P. 30\(a\), 378 Mass. 900 (1979), claiming that his convictions were duplicative. The trial judge denied the motion, and the defendant filed a notice of appeal from the denial. The defendant’s two appeals have been consolidated.

On appeal, the defendant claims that the judge committed error in denying his motion to suppress. He also contends that his conviction and sentence for violating the G.L. c. 209A order should be vacated because the elements of that crime were included in the parental kidnapping indictment. Finally, the defendant claims that he was denied the effective assistance of counsel because his trial attorney failed to file a motion for a required finding of not guilty on both indictments.

We summarize, as background, the facts introduced by the Commonwealth, reserving further details for discussion with the relevant issues. Molly Scharlach and the defendant are the parents of Michael, born on April 21, 1986. The defendant and Molly moved constantly during their relationship, including several moves to Lebanon, as well as to Egypt, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Greece, and various locations in the United States. In September, 1992, while they lived in Cambridge, Molly left the defendant and she and Michael moved to Quincy.

On September 24, 1992, Molly obtained a restraining order against the defendant pursuant to G.L. c. 209A. Molly received temporary custody of Michael, and the defendant was ordered to refrain from contacting Michael or Molly, either in person or by telephone, at home or at work. The order was extended on October 2, 1992, for a year, until September 28, 1993.

After Molly left the defendant, he repeatedly telephoned Molly's mother in California in an attempt to learn where Molly was living. Because the defendant called as many as thirty times a day, Molly's mother installed an answering machine. *206 The mother gave law enforcement officers tapes from the answering machine which had been recorded immediately preceding Michael's disappearance. On a tape recorded November 12, 1992 (one day before Michael's abduction), the defendant called Molly's mother and asked what Molly's intentions were. The mother told him that there was a restraining order against him and that Molly was not going back to him. The defendant replied, "I don't know what I'm going to do. I'm going to do something very bad. I'm not going to let nobody take my son...."

The next day (November 13, 1992), the defendant hired a taxi driver whom he directed to drive to Quincy. There, they stopped at a Dunkin Donuts and waited for fifteen to **950 twenty minutes. A school bus then drove by, and the defendant directed the taxi driver to follow the bus. When the bus stopped at an elementary school, the defendant got out and told the driver that he was going to pick up his son. A short time later, he returned with a child who was holding his hand. The child was Michael, then six years old.

The defendant directed the taxi driver to proceed to Rhode Island. There, the defendant telephoned Molly's aunt. He told her that he was taking Michael "to where people love him." He allowed Michael to talk to her. After stops in Connecticut and New York, the defendant directed the driver on to Atlantic City. Upon arrival, he discharged the taxi driver, who returned to Massachusetts and later identified the defendant as the person who had hired him and had taken the child from school. The Federal Bureau of Investigation, the State Department, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and Interpol became involved in the investigation into the abduction of Michael. Despite their efforts, neither the defendant nor the child were located for a number of months. At the time of trial, the son was living in a Palestinian refugee camp in southern Lebanon.

On December 4, 1992, Molly's mother received two telephone calls from the defendant, who said he was in Lebanon with Michael. The defendant said Michael was in a Palestine Liberation Organization refugee camp. In February, 1993, the defendant called Molly to say that their son was seriously ill and could not walk. Molly went to Lebanon with the goal of bringing her son home, but the defendant's family stopped her. After a year of living in Lebanon, Molly returned home without her son.

*207 On August 29, 1994, the defendant arrived at John F. Kennedy (JFK) airport in New York and was arrested on a Massachusetts fugitive warrant for parental kidnapping. A New York Port Authority police officer transported the defendant to the JFK airport police station. The officer read the defendant the Miranda warnings and the defendant responded that he understood those warnings and was willing to answer questions. The defendant admitted that he had taken his son to Lebanon and that he was making arrangements with the FBI to return him.<sup>1</sup>

At trial, the defendant testified in his own defense and denied that he had taken his son from school. He testified that, instead, he was in California on the day that his son disappeared and that he later travelled to Lebanon, where he found the boy.

1. Denial of the defendant's suppression motion. The defendant filed a motion requesting, among other things, that certain statements he made to two Massachusetts State troopers be suppressed. The defendant argued that admission of his statements violated his right to have counsel present as guaranteed by the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution and art. 12 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights. After an evidentiary hearing, a Superior Court judge allowed the motion in part<sup>2</sup> and denied it in regard to his statements to the troopers.

We summarize the judge's findings of fact. After the defendant was arrested at JFK airport, two State troopers were sent from Massachusetts to bring the defendant back to the Commonwealth. At his rendition hearing in New York, the defendant was represented by counsel who advised him not to speak to the troopers about the case on **951 the ride to Massachusetts. *208 The judge presiding at the rendition hearing also ordered the troopers not to discuss the case with the defendant while transporting him.

After the hearing the troopers brought the defendant by automobile to Massachusetts. While travelling through Connecticut, the defendant began conversing with the troopers. First, he asked them why he was being transported by automobile rather than by air. One of the troopers responded that the defendant was not a candidate to fly because of his recent suicide attempt and his resulting admission to Bellevue Hospital for a psychiatric examination.<sup>3</sup>

When the defendant proceeded to give the details of his hospitalization, one of the troopers immediately stopped him and told the defendant that they could not speak to him about his case. The defendant informed the troopers that he did not have any problems talking about the case and that anything he was going to tell them would be the same "thing" he would testify to in court. At this point, one of the troopers repeated the Miranda warnings to the defendant. The defendant indicated that he understood the warnings and that he wished to talk. One of the troopers asked the defendant where Michael was, and the defendant replied that his son was fine and that arrangements were being made for Michael to be sent to California. The defendant also told the troopers that he was not aware that a restraining order was in effect when he left Massachusetts. When asked why he had not informed anyone that he was taking the child from the school, the defendant replied that he had told the school principal.

In denying the defendant's suppression motion, the judge ruled that the defendant had been informed of his Miranda rights, that he had made a voluntary, knowing waiver of those *209 rights, and that his waiver of his Miranda rights did not result in a violation of his Sixth Amendment rights.

On appeal, the defendant argues that the judge's ruling was erroneous, because (1) the defendant, through his New York lawyer and the New York State judge, had invoked his right to counsel; (2) the troopers deliberately created a situation (by transporting him by automobile rather than airplane) designed to give them an opportunity to confront the defendant without counsel; and (3) the defendant did not validly waive his right to counsel. Accordingly, the defendant claims that his right to counsel guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment and by art. 12 of the Declaration of Rights was violated.

1 Some of the statements made by the defendant to the troopers were voluntary and, therefore, admissible, see Maine v. Moulton, 474 U.S. 159, 176, 106 S.Ct. 477, 88 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985), while others were made as a result of questions from the troopers. We need not sort out which statements were admissible and which were not, because, even if we assume that the defendant's Sixth Amendment rights were violated, the admission of his statements was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Chapman v. California, 386 U.S. 18, 24, 87 S.Ct. 824, 17 L.Ed.2d 705 (1967). The statements were “merely cumulative” of the far more incriminating statements the defendant made to Molly's mother, her aunt, and to the New York Port Authority police officer, all of which were properly before the jury. See Commonwealth v. Perrot, 407 Mass. 539, 548–549, 554 N.E.2d 1205 (1990).

Enticement of a Child

Chapter 265, Section 26C

Section 26C. (a) As used in this section, the term "entice" shall mean to lure, induce, persuade, tempt, incite, solicit, coax or invite. (b) Any one who entices a child under the age of 16, or someone he believes to be a child under the age of 16, to enter, exit or remain within any vehicle, dwelling, building, or other outdoor space with the intent that he or another person will violate section 13B, 13B1/2, 13B3/4, 13F, 13H, 22, 22A, 22B, 22C, 23, 23A, 23B, 24 or 24B of chapter 265, section 4A, 16, 28, 29, 29A, 29B, 29C, 35A, 53 or 53A of chapter 272, or any offense that has as an element the use or attempted use of force, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than 5 years, or in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years, or by both imprisonment and a fine of not more than $5,000.

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Enticement

Commonwealth v. Michael D. Buswell, 468 Mass 92 (2014)

We conclude in this case that there was sufficient similarity in act and pattern of Internet chat between this other conduct evidence and the indicted crimes being tried. The defendant's other sexually based online communications and his transmission of sexually explicit images demonstrated an abiding intent and desire on the defendant's part to engage in sexual acts with young girls and a willingness to act on that desire, if given the opportunity. For example, in one online chat, the defendant asked a fifteen year old female for a "good bj" (meaning blow job by oral sex, the same act referred to by the defendant in Internet chat in the instant case). In another Internet chat, the defendant told a sixteen year old female that he was sexually excited by her because she was under the age of legal consent. The defendant also told the sixteen year old that he would send her a vibrator and that he would come to her house naked. The defendant offered to let the sixteen year old watch him masturbate via a Webcam transmission. The defendant then conducted a role play, wherein the sixteen year old played an eight year old girl and the defendant played her "horny father." In an online chat, the defendant told a seventeen year old girl that he became sexually excited by the age of girls when it was illegal for them to have sex. The defendant also made other evocative references to sexual activity with the seventeen year old, including references to her "tight virgin pussyness," and his own "rock-hard cock." In addition, the defendant sent the seventeen year old images of himself masturbating in the nude.

The case of Commonwealth v. Disler, supra, further supports admission of the other bad act evidence in this case. In Disler, a woman reported the forty-three year old defendant to the police after an online conversation with him, during which the defendant admitted to having had sexual contact with children in the past and invited the woman to participate in sexual acts with young children. An undercover officer then entered the chat room, pretended to be a fourteen year old girl, and initiated a conversation with the defendant. Over multiple conversations, the defendant discussed provocative sexual topics, including the specific sexual acts he intended to perform on her once they met. 451 Mass. at 218-220. On appeal, the court held that the Commonwealth's burden of proving predisposition was "easily met" because "[t]he defendant's Internet exchanges with the woman who brought him to the attention of police, in which the defendant admitted to molesting children and invited the woman to share in his sexual exploits with children, was enough to show that the defendant had a predilection for the crime."

4. Conclusion. The judgments on the indictments charging enticement of a child under age sixteen, attempted rape of a child, and attempted indecent assault and battery on a child under age fourteen are affirmed. The judgments on the indictments charging attempted dissemination of materials harmful to a minor are reversed, the verdicts are set aside, and the indictments on those counts shall be dismissed.

So ordered.

Interfering with any Right or Privilege
Secured by Constitution or Laws of Commonwealth
Chapter 265, Section 37

CIVIL RIGHTS VIOLATIONS-JURY INSTRUCTIONS

The defendant is charged with having violated the Massachusetts Civil Rights Act, which is found as section 37 of chapter 265 of our General Laws. It provides that:

“No person . . . shall by force or threat of force, willfully injure, intimidate or interfere with, or attempt to injure, intimidate or interfere with, or oppress or threaten any other person in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him [or her] by the constitution or laws of the commonwealth or by the constitution or laws of the United States.”

In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove four things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That [alleged victim] was exercising a right or privilege protected by the Constitution or laws of the Commonwealth of United States;

Second: That the defendant either injured, intimidated, interfered with, oppressed or threatened the exercise or enjoyment of that legally protected right by [alleged victim] , or attempted to do so;

Third: That the defendant did so by using force or by threatening to use force; and Fourth: That the defendant did so wilfully.

No person, whether or not acting under color of law, shall by force or threat of force, willfully injure, intimidate or interfere with, or attempting to injure, intimidate or interfere with, or oppress or threaten any other person in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the constitution or laws of the Commonwealth or by the constitution or laws of the United States. Any person convicted of violating this provision shall be fined not more than $1,000.00 or imprisoned not more than one year or both; and if bodily injury results, shall be punished by a fine or not more than ten thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not more than ten years, or both.

Elements:

1. Whether or not acting under color of law
2. by force or threat of force
3. willfully injures, intimidates or interferes with
4. or attempts to do so
5. any other person
6. in the free exercise or enjoyment of
7. any right or privilege
8. secured by the constitution or laws of the commonwealth
9. or by the laws or constitution of the U.S..

Right of Arrest:

If no bodily injury, this is one (1) year misdemeanor with no right of arrest (could however, amount to a breach of the peace).

If bodily injury results, then this is a ten year felony.

Assault and Battery due to Race, Color, Religion or National Origin

Chapter 265, Section 39

Definition:

Whoever commits an assault or a battery upon a person or damages the real or personal property of another for the purpose of intimidation because of said person's race, color, religion, or national origin, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars or not more than three times the value of the property destroyed or damaged, whichever is greater, or by imprisonment in a house of correction for not more than two and one-half years, or both.

Elements:

1. Same as simple assault and battery, or
2. Damages real or personal property of another
3. Specific intent to intimidate
4. Because of victim's race, color, religion or national origin.

Right of Arrest:

This is a misdemeanor, arrestable IN THE PRESENCE since it amounts to a breach of peace.

Note:

Clearly, an assault and battery committed in your presence would amount to a breach of the peace, however, not every destruction of property would be a breach of the peace.

If bodily injury results, this statute is a felony.

Com. v. Barnette, 45 Mass. App. Ct. 486, 699 N.E.2d 1230 (1998)

Essential elements of the crime of assault and battery for purpose of intimidation are: (1) the commission of an assault or battery (2) with the intent to intimidate (3) because of a person's race, color, religion, or national origin. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 39. In general, a "hate crime" is a crime in which the defendant's conduct was motivated by hatred, bias, or prejudice, based on the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, ethnicity, gender, or sexual orientation of another individual or group of individuals.

Defendant's repetition of phrase "damn Mexican" accompanied by his request that Mexican-American victims "Get out of here," during confrontation in which defendant threatened to kill and beat up victims, was sufficient to establish that defendant had intent to intimidate because of victims' national origin, so as to sustain conviction for assault and battery for purpose of intimidation. M.G.L.A. c. 265, § 39.

Transgender Bill

Chapter 121 of the Acts of 2016

An owner, lessee, proprietor, manager, superintendent, agent or employee of any place of public accommodation, resort or amusement that lawfully segregates or separates access to such place of public accommodation, or a portion of such place of public accommodation, based on a person's sex shall grant all persons admission to, and the full enjoyment of, such place of public accommodation or portion thereof consistent with the person's gender identity.

The Crime of Stalking

Chapter 265, Section 43

STALKING-Jury Instruction

The defendant is charged with stalking [alleged victim] . Section 43 of chapter 265 of our General Laws provides as follows:

“Whoever . . . willfully and maliciously engages in a knowing pattern of conduct or series of acts over a period of time directed at a specific person which seriously alarms or annoys that person and would cause a reasonable person to suffer substantial emotional distress, and makes a threat with the intent to place the person in imminent fear of death or bodily injury, shall be guilty of the crime of stalking . . . .”

In order to prove the defendant guilty of stalking, the Commonwealth must prove five things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That over a period of time the defendant knowingly engaged in acts, involving at least three incidents, directed at [alleged victim] ;

Second: That those acts were of a kind that would cause a reasonable person to suffer substantial emotional distress;

Third: That those acts did cause [alleged victim] to become seriously alarmed or annoyed;

Fourth: That the defendant took those actions wilfully and maliciously.

An act is “willful” if it is done intentionally and by design, and not out of mistake or accident.

An act is done with “malice” if the defendant’s conduct was intentional and without justification or mitigation, and any reasonable prudent person would have foreseen the actual effect on [the alleged victim] .

And Fifth: The Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant also made a threat with the intention of placing [alleged victim] in imminent fear of death or bodily injury.

RIGHT OF ARREST:

Five year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Discussion. 1. Stalking. A person is guilty of stalking if he or she “(1) willfully and maliciously engages in a knowing pattern of conduct or series of acts over a period of time directed at a specific person which seriously alarms or annoys that person and would cause a reasonable person to suffer substantial emotional distress, and (2) makes a threat with the intent to place the person in imminent fear of death or bodily injury”; the conduct, acts, or threats may be accomplished by means of electronic communication. G.L. c. 265, § 43 (a ). The defendant challenges the sufficiency of the evidence presented with respect to both the “threat” and “pattern of conduct or series of acts” components of stalking. We focus on the threat component.

The Commonwealth contends that the defendant's Facebook page containing the photograph of himself holding a gun, and, in a space labeled “[f]avorite [q]uotations,” the words, “Make no mistake of my will to succeed in bringing you two idiots to justice,” satisfied the threat element set out in § 43 (a ) (2).<sup>25</sup> The defendant disagrees, arguing that because the Facebook page was ambiguous and temporally remote from the alleged harassment, the First Amendment to the United States Constitution dictates that the page could not qualify as a “threat” under § 43 (a ) (2), but was instead protected speech. We agree with the defendant's contention that there was insufficient evidence for a rational jury to find that the defendant made such a threat.

Finally, although communication of a threat to its intended victim is not expressly required under § 43 (a ) (2), we agree with the Appeals Court that evidence of the defendant's intent to communicate the threat through direct or indirect means is necessary. See Commonwealth v. Hughes, 59 Mass.App.Ct. 280, 281–282, 795 N.E.2d 594 (2003). Where communication of the threat is indirect—for example, through an intermediary—the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended the threat to reach the victim. See id. at 283, 795 N.E.2d 594 (jury could have found that defendant intended his brother to convey threat to victim). Compare Commonwealth v. Meier, 56 Mass.App.Ct. 278, 279–282, 776 N.E.2d 1034 (2002) (defendant's **994 letter to victim indicating belief that victim was responsible for recent collection efforts against defendant, combined with threatening statement to collection attorney regarding victim, supported inference that defendant intended statement to reach victim), with Commonwealth v. Troy T., 54 Mass.App.Ct. 520, 527–528, 766 N.E.2d 519 (2002) (where third party overheard putative threat, but there was no evidence of defendant's intent that third party would hear threat, jury could not infer *694 intent to communicate threat to target). Applying these principles to the defendant's Facebook profile page, although the victim testified that she was terrified when she viewed the page, her subjective reaction is not the crux of the inquiry. Rather, it is necessary to focus on the content of the page in the context of the past and present relationship between the defendant and the victim to determine whether there was sufficient evidence of the defendant's intent to threaten the victim and whether the victim's fear was reasonable.

Com. v. McGhee, 472 Mass. 405, 406–12, 35 N.E.3d 329, 333–37 (2015)

In this case, we are asked to consider, for the first time, the constitutionality of the Massachusetts sex trafficking statute. On November 21, 2011, the Legislature approved “An Act relative to the commercial exploitation of people,” which criminalized sexual servitude, forced labor, and organ trafficking as of its effective date of February 19, 2012. St. 2011, c. 178, §§ 1–31. The portions of the enactment at issue here, pertaining to the *407 trafficking of persons for sexual servitude, were codified at G.L. c. 265, §§ 49, 50. See St. 2011, c. 178, § 23.

General Laws c. 265, § 50 (a ), states, in relevant part:

“Whoever knowingly: (i) subjects, or attempts to subject, or recruits, entices, harbors, transports, provides or obtains by any means ... another person to engage in commercial sexual activity ... or causes a person to engage in commercial sexual activity ... or (ii) benefits, financially or by receiving anything of value, as a result of a violation of clause (i), shall be guilty of the crime of trafficking of persons for sexual servitude and shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not less than [five] years but not more than [twenty] years and by a fine of not more than $25,000.”

The phrase “[c]ommercial sexual activity” is defined as “any sexual act on account of which anything of value is given, promised to or received by any person.” G.L. c. 265, § 49.

On December 19, 2012, a Suffolk County grand jury indicted each defendant, Tyshaun McGhee and Sidney McGee, on nine counts of aggravated rape, G.L. c. 265, § 22 (a ), three counts of trafficking persons for sexual servitude, G.L. c. 265, § 50, and two counts of deriving support from the earnings of a prostitute, G.L. c. 272, § 7. The charges arose from allegations by three women (C.C., S.E., and B.G.<sup>2</sup>) that the defendants approached them, took their photographs to post as advertisements on a Web site called Backpage.com, drove them to various locations to have sex with men who responded to the advertisements, and then retained some or all of the money that the women received as payment from these men. The defendants filed a joint pretrial motion to dismiss the sex trafficking charges on the grounds that G.L. c. 265, § 50, is unconstitutionally vague and overbroad, both on its face and as applied to them. A judge of the Superior **334 Court denied the motion. Following a jury trial, Tyshaun was convicted on all three indictments charging him with trafficking persons for sexual servitude (C.C., S.E., and B.G.),<sup>3</sup> and both indictments charging him with deriving support from the earnings *408 of a prostitute (C.C. and S.E.). He was found not guilty on the indictments charging him with aggravated rape. Sidney was convicted on all three indictments charging him with trafficking persons for sexual servitude (C.C., S.E., and B.G.),<sup>4</sup> and he was found not guilty on the remaining indictments. Each defendant filed a timely notice of appeal, and we granted their subsequent applications for direct appellate review.

The defendants contend on appeal that (1) G.L. c. 265, § 50, is unconstitutionally vague as applied to them and, therefore, violated their rights to due process under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution and art. 12 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights; (2) G.L. c. 265, § 50, is unconstitutionally overbroad on its face in violation of their right to freedom of association under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution; (3) the phrase “commercial sexual activity” is unconstitutionally overbroad; (4) the judge erred in allowing the substantive admission of grand jury testimony from one of the Commonwealth's witnesses; and (5) the judge violated their right to confrontation by hindering their cross-examination of C.C. with respect to several pending criminal charges against her and her purported history of prostitution. In addition, Tyshaun contends that the sentences imposed for his convictions of deriving support from the earnings of a prostitute were illegal. For the reasons that follow, we conclude that G.L. c. 265, § 50, is constitutional, that the sentences challenged by Tyshaun were illegal, and that the defendants' remaining claims of error have no merit.

Accordingly, the judgments are affirmed. As to the indictments charging Tyshaun with deriving support from the earnings of a prostitute, those cases are remanded for resentencing in accordance with this opinion.<sup>5</sup>

1. Factual background. We summarize the facts the jury could have found, reserving certain details for our discussion of the issues raised. As mentioned, the charges against the defendants arose from their interactions with three women in the fall of *409 2012.<sup>6</sup> C.C., then approximately twenty-four years old, had a history of drug and alcohol use, and she had spent time in several treatment facilities. On September 7, 2012, as she left Boston Medical Center after having been treated for two drug overdoses within one twenty-four hour period, she encountered the defendants, who were standing outside the hospital. The defendants asked C.C. what she was doing, and she told them that she was interested in “party[ing].” After offering to give her a ride, the defendants walked C.C. to an apartment on Eustis **335 Street in Boston, where C.C. observed an older man standing outside. Tyshaun gave the man some money, and then Tyshaun proceeded inside with C.C. and Sidney. They went upstairs to a bedroom where all three drank from a bottle of alcohol, C.C. smoked some “crack” cocaine that had been given to her by Tyshaun, and the defendants purportedly raped C.C. as she cried.<sup>7</sup> Afterward, C.C. got dressed, all three individuals walked to an apartment on Dudley Street where Tyshaun's mother lived, and C.C. fell asleep on a couch. She did not attempt to run away because she was afraid of what might happen to her.

The next morning, the defendants and C.C. walked to a fast food restaurant where Tyshaun purchased some heroin from a friend and gave it to C.C., who proceeded to inject it into her foot. As they walked away from the restaurant, the defendants started talking with C.C. about a business arrangement whereby she could “make a lot of money,” “have a nice car,” and “have a nice apartment.” It was C.C.'s understanding that the defendants were talking about prostitution. They continued this conversation until they reached the Dudley Street apartment.

At the apartment, the defendants prepared to take photographs of C.C., which they planned to post as advertisements on the Web site Backpage.com. Tyshaun told C.C. that there would be a “rate,” which she understood as meaning that she would be having sex with people in exchange for money. Although “definitely hesitant,” C.C. agreed to proceed because she was “broke and homeless, and having a nice apartment and car and money seemed like the best option.” Tyshaun gave C.C. lingerie to wear, and he took photographs of her with a digital camera in the bathroom of the *410 apartment. C.C. started feeling “uncomfortable” and did not want to be in the situation in which she found herself. Nonetheless, the defendants transferred the photographs to Sidney's laptop computer and then posted them on Backpage.com. Tyshaun included his cellular telephone number with the photographs, and the name indicated on them was “Jamie Lynn.”

After about thirty minutes, Tyshaun's telephone started to ring. He answered it and handed the telephone to C.C., having told her what to say to the callers. C.C. would ask them “if they were a cop of any sort,” what they wanted, and whether they could meet at a particular location that had been chosen by Tyshaun and Sidney. Tyshaun established prices of one hundred dollars for thirty minutes of sex, and $150 for one hour of sex. When C.C. arranged to meet a man at the Eustis Street apartment for thirty minutes of sex, the defendants walked with her to that location, and Tyshaun again gave some money to the same older man who had been standing outside that location the previous day. C.C. was directed to a room, she had sex with the man she had arranged to meet, she was paid one hundred dollars, and she handed the money over to Tyshaun, keeping none of it for herself.

Over the course of the next three to four days, C.C. had sex with five or six other men in various locations. The defendants always accompanied C.C. to the designated meeting place and would wait for her until she had finished. She gave all of the money that she was paid to Tyshaun, who arranged the accommodations. At some point, Tyshaun stopped providing drugs and alcohol to C.C., telling her that she **336 was not making enough money to support her habits.

On September 12, 2012, roughly five days after having met the defendants, C.C. woke up alone in a hotel room. Although neither defendant was there, Tyshaun's cellular telephone was in the room. C.C. telephoned her father. He told her to leave the hotel room, and she jogged to a nearby pharmacy, where she telephoned her father again to pick her up. On the drive to her parents' home, C.C. told her father in response to his questioning that she had been raped. After she arrived home, C.C.'s mother took her to Brockton Hospital where she was interviewed by a sexual assault nurse examiner and diagnosed with pneumonia and cellulitis. During her examination, C.C. told the nurse that over the past several days she had engaged in sex with multiple men. At some point shortly thereafter, C.C. told Boston police officers that she had been sexually assaulted, but she did not disclose her *411 involvement in prostitution. On October 2, 2012, C.C. was shown a photographic array, and she identified the photograph of Sidney. Approximately one month later, C.C. told the police about her involvement with prostitution. On December 12, 2012, C.C. went to Boston police headquarters to view a live lineup, and she identified Tyshaun.

In the fall of 2012, S.E., then approximately twenty-six years old, was homeless, and had a history of drug use. S.E. met Sidney around September 18, when she was standing in line outside a homeless shelter near the Boston Medical Center. After asking S.E. several questions, Sidney told her that he could help her, and that she could earn enough money working as an "escort" to live a better life. S.E. accompanied Sidney to meet Tyshaun, and then the three of them went to the apartment on Dudley Street where Tyshaun's mother lived. Once there, the defendants told S.E. that they were going to take photographs of her and post them on the Web site Backpage.com. S.E. agreed, but "wasn't comfortable" with the arrangement. Tyshaun took the photographs using his cellular telephone, Sidney showed her how to pose, and the defendants posted the photographs online. Tyshaun included his cellular telephone number with the photographs, and the name indicated on them was "Natalia."

After a short period of time, calls and text messages started arriving on Tyshaun's telephone. S.E. realized that Tyshaun was conversing about sex, not merely escorting, only when she questioned him about the prices for her "services." Tyshaun told the callers that it would be $150 for "full service," which meant oral and vaginal sex, and fifty dollars for just oral sex. Shortly thereafter, a man arrived at the Dudley Street apartment, he and S.E. "engaged in sexual behavior," the man paid her some cash, and she gave it to Tyshaun so he could "put gas in the car," "rent a hotel room," and "keep posting the ad." S.E. subsequently met another individual at a different location that was a few blocks away from the Dudley Street apartment. She was unable to remember what happened at this second location. S.E. returned to the Dudley Street apartment with the defendants at around 3 a.m., she performed oral sex on each defendant at their behest because she "didn't want to get hurt," she had sexual intercourse with Tyshaun, and then the defendants fell asleep.

The next morning, after the defendants took S.E. to a methadone clinic, they proceeded to check Tyshaun's telephone for responses to the photographs they had posted on Backpage.com. *412 Over the next twenty-four hours, the defendants drove S.E. to different locations where she engaged **337 in various sexual acts with several different men. The defendants always remained nearby in their parked motor vehicle and, once S.E. had finished, Tyshaun demanded all of the cash that she had received.

On her third day with the defendants, Tyshaun again took S.E. to a methadone clinic where she chatted with B.G., a woman she had met during prior visits to the clinic. After their conversation, B.G. went outside and spoke with the defendants, whom she already had met. Eventually, all four of them returned to the Dudley Street apartment, where B.G. used a computer to repost photographs of herself that had been submitted to Backpage.com on an earlier occasion. The defendants also took new photographs of B.G. and posted them on the Web site. Later that same day, the defendants drove S.E. and B.G. some distance to a hotel where each woman had sex with two men for money. The defendants waited outside in their car. S.E. and B.G. received $250, which was split evenly, and S.E. gave her share to Tyshaun when he asked for it. B.G. kept some, if not all, of the money she had received. Eventually, the group drove back to Boston. Tyshaun and B.G. had an argument about sex and money; Tyshaun pulled the vehicle over to the side of the road, and the women got out. B.G. removed some personal belongings from the trunk, and the two women walked away. The defendants drove off.

S.E. and B.G. went to Boston Medical Center, and the police were called to the scene. In the waiting room, the women met with Officer Edward Fleming and told him that they had been forced into prostitution. Boston police officers subsequently interviewed S.E. and B.G. regarding the events that had transpired with the defendants. On September 26, 2012, S.E. went to a police station to view a photographic array. She identified Tyshaun, and he was arrested the next day. On September 28, 2012, S.E. returned to the police station to view another photographic array. She identified Sidney, and he was arrested that same day.

Com. v. Gordon, 42 Mass. App. Ct. 601, 678 N.E.2d 1341 (1997)

There can be only one conviction for one act of armed burglary that includes assault of persons within dwelling, regardless of how many people the perpetrator assaults once inside the dwelling; multiple indictments based on number of assault victims are duplicative and all but one indictment must be dismissed. M.G.L.A. c. 266, § 14.

COMMONWEALTH v. MITCHELL 67 Mass. App. Ct. 556, (2006)

Burglary. Statute, Construction. Assault and Battery

This case requires us to examine G.L. c. 266, § 14 (armed burglary), to determine whether it covers a breaking and entering of a dwelling with intent to commit a felony and a subsequent assault on a person lawfully therein even though that person arrived home after the break while the intruder was still present. We hold that it does.<sup>1</sup>

*557 Facts. The jury could have found the following facts. The victim and the defendant, Rudolph C. Mitchell, Jr., had an intermittent romantic relationship beginning in February, 2001. On October 8, 2002, the defendant telephoned the victim and asked her to pick him up from the mall. She refused, hung up the telephone, and left her home. While she was out, the defendant entered her home through the front door, which was locked. When she returned around 10:45 p.m., the victim and the defendant became involved in a violent struggle. The defendant repeatedly hit and kicked the victim. During the struggle, the defendant threw the victim's head against the refrigerator and cabinet doors, causing visible dents to both. The victim testified that the defendant repeatedly threatened to kill her. The defendant stood over the victim, began to strangle her, and pulled a telephone cord around her neck. When the police arrived, they found the defendant approximately fifteen feet from the victim. She was lying on the floor with her face and clothes covered in blood; her eyes were swollen and her nose appeared to be broken. In response to an officer's question, the victim told the police that the defendant had beaten her. The police arrested the defendant after a struggle, and he was subsequently indicted for, inter alia, armed burglary, assault with intent to murder, attempted murder, assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, assault and battery on a police officer, and violation of a restraining order, all based on the October 8, 2002, incident. The defendant was convicted of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, assault and battery on a police officer, violation of a restraining order, and armed burglary. He appeals the armed burglary conviction.

"Whoever breaks and enters a dwelling house in the night time, with intent to commit a felony, or whoever, after having entered with such intent, breaks such dwelling house in the night time, any person being then lawfully *558 therein, and the offender being armed with a dangerous weapon at the time of such breaking or entry, or so arming himself in such house, or making an actual assault on a person lawfully therein, shall be punished...."<sup>2</sup>

To interpret this statute it is also helpful to have in mind the terms of the unarmed burglary statute, G.L. c. 266, § 15:

**408 "Whoever breaks and enters a dwelling house in the night time, with the intent mentioned in the preceding section, or, having entered with such intent, breaks such dwelling house in the night time, the offender not being armed, nor arming himself in such house, with a dangerous weapon, nor making an assault upon a person lawfully therein, shall be punished...."

The defendant argues that his motion for a required finding of not guilty should have been allowed since the victim was not at home when he entered the dwelling. Thus, he argues, she was not, in the words of G.L. c. 266, § 14, "then lawfully therein." She was of course lawfully in her dwelling while the defendant was still there pursuant to his breaking and entering and subsequent assault on her, although she arrived after his entry. The simple answer to this argument is that the phrase "any person being then lawfully therein" does not refer to the moment of entry (or breaking, or becoming armed), but rather to the time during which the intruder is in the premises pursuant to his felonious entry.

We note that the Legislature distinguished two time periods when referring to the possession of a dangerous weapon: "at the time of such breaking or entry" or "so arming himself in such house." The Legislature could have similarly stated, "any person being lawfully therein at the time of such breaking or entry," but did not. Cf. Commonwealth v. Galvin, 388 Mass. 326, 330, 446 N.E.2d 391 (1983) (when a statute employs specific language in one portion, and excludes it in another, the language should not be implied where it is missing); 2A Singer, Sutherland Statutory *559 Construction § 46.06 (6th ed.2000). This implies a more general meaning for the indefinite reference "then," to include the span of time that follows the entry.

Although the point does not appear to have been specifically decided until now, there were similar facts in Commonwealth v. Goldoff, 24 Mass.App.Ct. 458, 510 N.E.2d 277 (1987). There, the defendant had entered the relevant space before the victim arrived, and then assaulted the victim as the defendant was making his escape. We only discussed the issue whether a common hallway in an apartment building was part of a dwelling for the purposes of burglary statutes, and concluded that it was. Id. at 462–464, 510 N.E.2d 277. We did not note any additional difficulties presented by the fact that the defendant arrived some time before the victim.

In Commonwealth v. Hallums, 61 Mass.App.Ct. 50, 53, 806 N.E.2d 965 (2004), we assumed that the armed burglary statute required that the victim be present at the time of entry, but held that the evidence permitted the jury to find that the victim was in his home at the time the defendant entered, even though the defendant gained entry by pushing the victim ahead of him through the door into the victim's house. Thus, it was not necessary to consider whether it would make any difference if the defendant had stepped through the door first.

Although it is possible to interpret the word “then” in our statute to refer to the moment of breaking or entering, the more logical reference is to the time during which the burglar is present in the dwelling as a result of his felonious breaking and entering. The aggravation of the crime is based on the lawful presence of a person in the dwelling during the time the burglar is present. Cf. Commonwealth v. Dunn, 43 Mass.App.Ct. 58, 64, 680 N.E.2d 1178 (1997) (home invasion statute, G.L. c. 265, § 18C, carries a harsher penalty than the armed burglary statute because of the additional element that “intruder knows, or should know, that an occupant is present before he enters the dwelling” and the presence of an occupant “heightens the risk of a potentially deadly encounter”). Where the crime is committed by one who has armed himself, before or after entering, the aggravation is based on the inherent threat to the occupant during the **411 event. See Commonwealth v. Claudio, 418 Mass. 103, 109, 634 N.E.2d 902 (1994) (“unlawful entry during the night time into a dwelling ... inevitably poses a high degree of danger to any and all occupants”). It should not depend on whether the occupant happens to arrive in the premises before or after the entry of the intruder. See State v. Reed, 8 Kan.App.2d at 616, 663 P.2d 680.

The case is even stronger where the aggravation is based upon an actual assault on a lawful occupant. See 12A C.J.S. Burglary § 8, at 175 (2004) (physical injury inflicted during the commission of the burglary elevates the burglary to first degree).<sup>11</sup> It makes no sense to regard an assault by a burglar on someone in her home as less of an aggravation merely because the victim happened to arrive home during the course of the burglary, and the statute should not be interpreted to require that result.

2 The point is made even clearer by observing that the defendant on these facts could not be convicted of unarmed *563 burglary. A plain reading of G.L. c. 266, § 15, specifically excludes the case (which we have here) in which an assault actually takes place. See Sullivan v. Brookline, 435 Mass. 353, 360, 758 N.E.2d 110 (2001) (“statutory language should be given effect consistent with its plain meaning”). Furthermore, the relationship between §§ 14 and 15 of G.L. c. 266 indicates that they should be interpreted together.<sup>12</sup> When “two or more statutes relate to the same subject ..., they should be construed together so as to constitute a harmonious whole consistent with the legislative purpose.” Board of Educ. v. Assessor of Worcester, 368 Mass. 511, 513–514, 333 N.E.2d 450 (1975). Evaluating §§ 14 and 15 together, it seems clear that the Legislature intended that when an assault takes place during a burglary, the offense should be charged as armed burglary, not as simple burglary. See Devoe v. Commonwealth, 44 Mass. 316, 3 Met. 316, 327 (1841). See also Commonwealth v. Powell, 10 Mass.App.Ct. 57, 59, 405 N.E.2d 991 (1980) (where there was a dispute whether the intruder armed himself in the dwelling, a jury could have acquitted the defendant of the greater offense of armed burglary and instead convicted the defendant of unarmed burglary).

We conclude that the phrase “any person being then lawfully therein” does not preclude a defendant from being convicted under G.L. c. 266, § 14, merely because the victim came home after the defendant broke and entered her home. Although the victim was not present in the dwelling at the time of the defendant's breaking and entry, she was lawfully present during the course of the burglary. The victim of an assault is “present” at the time of the assault, and it is the time of the assault that is relevant, not the time of the entry.<sup>13</sup>

Breaking and Entering a Building or Ship

Chapter 266, Section 16

Definition:

Whoever, in the nighttime, breaks and enters a building, ship, vessel or vehicle, with intent to commit a felony, or who attempts to or does break, burn, blow up or otherwise injures or destroys a safe, vault or other depository of money, bonds or other valuables in any building, vehicle or place, with intent to commit a larceny or felony, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than twenty years or in a jail house of correction for not more than two and one-half years.

Nighttime is defined by statute, (Ch. 278:10), as the time between one hour after sunset on one day and one hour before sunrise on the next day.

This section further refers to anyone who attempts to or does break, burn, blow up or otherwise injures or destroys a safe, vault or other depository of money, bonds or other valuables in a building, VEHICLE, or place WITH INTENT TO COMMIT A LARCENY or FELONY. Unfortunately, in my opinion, this section is also governed by the phrase, IN THE NIGHTTIME.

The word depository has been defined by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court to include:

- a) The trunk of an automobile -
Commonwealth v. Armenia, 340 N.E. 2d 901 (1976)
- b) The passenger compartment of a motor vehicle -
Commonwealth v. Dreyer, 468 N.E. 2d 862 (1984)

Note:

Com. v. Cextary, 68 Mass. App. Ct. 752 (2007)

Nonetheless, the statutory element of a “breaking” is broadly defined. Commonwealth v. Burke, 392 Mass. 688, 689–690, 467 N.E.2d 846 (1984). The classic requirement (relied on by the defendants) is proof of some physical act, however slight, to remove an obstacle to entry. See Commonwealth v. Hall, 48 Mass.App.Ct. 727, 730–731, 725 N.E.2d 247 (2000). Even at common law, however, an actual, physical breaking was not invariably required. There could be a breaking “either in fact or by implication,” a classic example of such an implied or constructive burglarious breaking was “to come down a chimney,” id. at 226. In response to hypertechnical quibbles that in such a case there was “no actual breaking,” Blackstone responded that “the law will not suffer itself to be trifled with by such evasions, especially under the cloak of legal process” (citation omitted). Ibid. Massachusetts law long has accepted the concept of “constructive breaking.” See Commonwealth v. Labare, 11 Mass.App.Ct. 370, 377–378, 416 N.E.2d 534 (1981) (involving entry gained through a false pretense). It also recognizes the so-called “open window” doctrine, which holds (analogously to the chimney situation) that entry through an opening not intended or ordinarily useable as a means of entry is within the scope of the statute. See Commonwealth v. Tilley, 355 Mass. 507, 509, 246 N.E.2d 176 (1969).

Com. v. Rudenko, 74 Mass. App. Ct. 396

After a jury-waived trial, a judge found the defendant guilty of breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony, see G.L. c. 266, § 16, and larceny over $250, see G.L. c. 266, § 30. On appeal from those convictions, the defendant argues that the Commonwealth (1) presented insufficient evidence, and (2) failed to prove that he broke and entered a “building” within the meaning of the statute. We disagree and affirm the convictions.

1. Sufficiency of the evidence. As related in the Commonwealth’s case at trial, Gary Coleman, a Home Depot employee, arrived at the West Springfield store at approximately 4 a.m. on *397 October 13, 2003, and soon noticed that two snow blowers were missing. Each weighed over 100 pounds and each was valued at $1,200. Prior to the store’s closing the previous day, another worker, Eugene Lefebvre, had wrapped the snow blowers, strapped them onto pallets, tagged and addressed them, and left them in the “delivery hall” where they were to be lifted by forklift onto delivery trucks the next day.

The delivery hall is a fenced-in storage area used to house overstocked items and items prepared for delivery; it connects directly with the roofed-in portion of the Home Depot store. An overhead door permits passage from the roofed-in portion of the store to the delivery hall, which is enclosed on its other three sides by a chain link fence of some height. Two gates on the fence provide access for delivery trucks to enter the delivery hall. The gates are secured by locks at all times except when opened for the delivery trucks. Home Depot's security procedures are strict and provide for perimeter checks of the entire facility when the store opens in the morning and closes at night. Likewise, security procedures regulate the opening and closing of the delivery hall gates, the entrance and exit of delivery trucks, and access by employees. The public is not permitted to access the delivery hall.

When the Home Depot store closed on October 12, the store and its contents were secure. The same appeared to be true when assistant manager Michael Masciadrelli performed the standard opening procedure on the morning of October 13. Masciadrelli did not initially observe anything suspicious as he drove around the **256 perimeter of the building. However, soon after arriving at work that morning, Coleman and other Home Depot employees informed him that two snow blowers scheduled for delivery were missing from the delivery hall where they had been placed the night before. In their search for the snow blowers, they discovered that the lock to the north end delivery hall gate had been bypassed, allowing the gate to be opened.<sup>1</sup> Inside the delivery hall, they found the empty pallets, shrink wrap, and banding, which appeared to have been cut with a sharp object. Upon arriving at the store at 4 a.m., neither Coleman nor *398 Masciadrelli had observed any vehicles in the parking lot. However, while searching for the snow blowers, some time after 4:30 a.m., Coleman and Lefebvre noticed a white pickup truck parked outside the gate in the parking lot next to a Pep Boys store. They notified Masciadrelli, who directed them to stay inside and not investigate further. Masciadrelli confirmed the presence of the white truck and called the police.

Officer Nelson Zayas of the West Springfield police arrived at the scene and saw a white pickup truck and a man, later identified as the defendant, standing between the truck and a tree. The truck's tailgate had been removed and was lying in the bed of the truck. As he walked behind the truck, Zayas observed a bright orange snow blower, partially wrapped in plastic, behind the tree that the defendant was standing next to. Zayas questioned the defendant, who appeared nervous.

The defendant initially claimed to be an employee of Home Depot, an assertion soon dispelled when Masciadrelli arrived. Masciadrelli also identified two snow blowers behind the tree as the property of Home Depot.

Zayas asked Oleg Yusenko, who appeared to be sleeping in the front passenger seat, to step out of the truck. When Yusenko complied, a small utility knife fell to the floor. Zayas also observed a “fresh trail” leading from the northern delivery hall gate (where the lock had been removed) to the location of the defendant. He also noticed that both the defendant and Yusenko had wet grass and dirt stuck to their shoes and pants.

the fenced-in delivery hall that is part of the Home Depot store and stole two snow blowers, each valued at $1,200. See Commonwealth v. Cabrera, 449 Mass. 825, 827, 874 N.E.2d 654 (2007); Commonwealth v. Vickers, 60 Mass.App.Ct. 24, 27, 798 N.E.2d 575 (2003). In the predawn hours, the defendant was found standing next to the empty flat bed of a truck capable of moving the heavy snow blowers that had been stolen some time the previous night; the truck's tailgate had been removed to facilitate loading. Inside the truck was a utility knife capable of cutting the strapping that bound the snow blowers to the pallets; *399 and a trail of wet grass and mud on the defendant's clothing corresponded to the trail leading from the delivery hall to the truck. The defendant's false explanation to Zayas provided further evidence of his guilt. See Commonwealth v. Stuckich, 450 Mass. 449, 453, 879 N.E.2d 105 (2008). The inference was strong that the defendant and Yusenko were in the **257 process of loading the snow blowers they had stolen onto the truck when the police arrived.<sup>2</sup> See Commonwealth v. Ronayne, 8 Mass.App.Ct. 421, 425–426, 395 N.E.2d 350 (1979).

2 2. “Building.” Whether the delivery hall is part of the Home Depot building is a closer question.

On the particular facts present, we conclude that the delivery hall is part of the Home Depot “building” for purposes of the first clause of G.L. c. 266, § 16.<sup>3</sup>

34 The crime of breaking and entering is an ancient one, and examination of its common-law roots provides guidance in discerning the reach of the statute in the instant case. See Commonwealth v. Burke, 392 Mass. 688, 690, 467 N.E.2d 846 (1984). The purpose of the burglary statutes is to protect the right of security in a place commonly associated with safety and refuge, the dwelling house. See Commonwealth v. Goldoff, 24 Mass.App.Ct. 458, 462, 510 N.E.2d 277 (1987). The statutes that prohibit the breaking and entering of a building serve a similar purpose, protecting the right of security in one's person and valuables, even when the building may not serve as a place of human habitation. The terms “dwelling” and “building” have generally been construed to further rather than frustrate these purposes. See id. at 459–460, 510 N.E.2d 277. See also Commonwealth v. Burke, supra at 689–690, 467 N.E.2d 846 (element of breaking broadly defined).

5 Where, as here, a statute does not define its terms, “we give them their usual and accepted meanings, as long as these meanings are consistent with the statutory purpose.” Commonwealth v. Goldoff, 24 Mass.App.Ct. at 460, 510 N.E.2d 277, quoting from Commonwealth v. Zone Book, Inc., 372 Mass. 366, 369, 361 N.E.2d 1239 (1977).

“[U]nlike *400 the term ‘dwelling house,’ which under certain criminal statutes has ‘acquired a peculiar and appropriate meaning in law,’ G.L. c. 4, § 6, ... the term ‘building’ carries no such baggage. Therefore, absent a contrary legislative intent, the term is to be given its common and accepted everyday meaning, ... as for example, ‘a structure or edifice inclosing a space within its walls and usually ... covered with a roof.’ Black's Law Dictionary 194–195 (6th ed. 1990).” (Emphasis added.) Commonwealth v. Jackson, 37 Mass.App.Ct. 940, 941, 641 N.E.2d 711 (1994). See Commonwealth v. McKinnon, 446 Mass. 263, 268, 843 N.E.2d 1020 (2006) (“dwelling” implies enclosed area).

With these principles in mind, we conclude that the locked, fenced-in delivery hall is part of the Home Depot building and under the protection of G.L. c. 266, § 16. See Commonwealth v. Willard, 53 Mass.App.Ct. 650, 654–655, 761 N.E.2d 971 (2002) (property secured within structure with expectation that it will be protected against theft is “under the protection of the building”). The delivery hall is an essential component of the Home Depot building. It shares a wall with the roofed portion of the building and is enclosed on its other three sides by a gated and locked fence that restricts access. An overhead door provides direct access between the roofed and fenced-in portions of the building. **258 The safety, security, and protection of valuable Home Depot merchandise is as much an issue in the delivery hall as in the roofed portion of the building, where customers complete their purchases.

The fact that the delivery hall lacks a roof is not determinative, where its other physical characteristics, including its contiguity to the roofed portion, shared wall, restricted access, and use for storage of valuable merchandise sold there, indicate that it is an integral part of the building proper. Nor should the protection of the statute turn on whether the defendant accomplished his breaking and entering of the building and larceny of the snow blowers by going through the front door of the roofed portion of the building rather than through the locked gate to the delivery hall.

Decisions from other States interpreting their burglary and breaking and entering statutes are of limited value given the differences in statutory expression. Supporting the view that we take is the decision in Garrett v. State, 259 Ga.App. 870, 578 S.E.2d 460 (2002). There, in similar circumstances, the Court of Appeals of Georgia *401 concluded that the defendant violated Georgia's burglary statute when he cut a chain link fence topped with barbed wire and removed a commercial grade lawn mower from a storage shelter attached to the rear of a farm and lawn business.<sup>4</sup> The court reasoned “that the contiguous nature of the storage shelter, as well as its accessibility from the main building renders it ‘a part’ of the main building for purposes of [Ga.Code Ann. § 16–7–1(a) (2007), the burglary statute]. Further, the purpose of the shelter as a storage structure for valuable goods, its relevance to the business, and its inaccessibility to the public when the business is secured render the shelter a ‘building’ under the statute...” Garrett v. State, supra at 871, 578 S.E.2d 460.

Such a view is not shared universally, and other State decisions interpreting their particular statutes support a contrary view, albeit on different facts. See In re E.S., 93 Ill.App.3d 171, 174, 48 Ill.Dec. 711, 416 N.E.2d 1233 (1981) (fenced-in area abutting automobile body shop containing customers' parked cars awaiting repair not “building”); State v. Gamble, 56 N.C.App. 55, 56, 59, 286 S.E.2d 804 (1982) (“partially” fenced area not “building” for purposes of statute prohibiting breaking and entering of building). In the particular factual context before us, we consider the conclusion that the delivery hall is part of the Home Depot building, notwithstanding its lack of a roof, to be more consonant with the purposes of G.L. c. 266, § 16, and accepted understanding.

At trial and in argument, the Commonwealth suggested as an alternative that the defendant was liable because the delivery hall is a “depository” within the meaning of the second clause of the statute that prohibits the breaking of a “depository of ... valuables in any building, vehicle or place, with intent to commit a larceny or felony.”<sup>5</sup> We view the facts as inapposite **259 *402 to such an interpretation. Because we have concluded that the delivery hall is part of the building, it follows that the delivery hall cannot also be a “depository of ... valuables in [a] building or place” (emphasis supplied). G.L. c. 266, § 16, as appearing in St.1985, c. 312, § 1.

Judgments affirmed.

Building or Ship; Nighttime Entry; Daytime Breaking and Entering

Chapter 266, Section 17

Definition:

Whoever, in the nighttime, enters without breaking, or breaks and enters in the daytime, a building, ship, vessel, or vehicle, with intent to commit a felony, the owner or any other person lawfully therein being put in fear, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years.

Note:

To convict under this section, someone lawfully therein must be put in fear. Application of this could include the smashing of a car window and stealing a purse while the driver is stopped for a red light. The felony intended here would be robbery since there would be both force and violence and the driver placed in fear. Either of these elements would suffice for a robbery conviction. This statute would be applicable whether the suspect succeeds or fails in getting the purse since it's his intention at the time of the crime that prevails.

Breaking and Entering a Building or Ship

With Intent to Commit a Misdemeanor

Chapter 266, Section 16A

Definition:

In the nighttime or daytime, breaks and enters a building, ship, vessel or vehicle with intent to commit a misdemeanor.

Elements:

1. In the daytime or nighttime
2. breaks and enters
3. building, ship, vessel, or vehicle
4. with specific intent (to commit a misdemeanor*.)

Right of Arrest:

This misdemeanor is NON-ARRESTABLE. There is no right of arrest given by statute and it does not normally amount to a breach of the peace.

Dwelling House – Night-time Entry
Daytime Breaking and Entering
Chapter 266, Section 18

Definition:

In the nighttime, enters a dwelling house without breaking OR breaks and enters in the daytime a building, ship, motor vehicle, or vessel, with intent to commit a felony, no person lawfully therein being put in fear.

Elements:

1. Enters a dwelling without breaking in the night
2. or breaks and enters in the daytime a building, ship, motor vehicle, or vessel
3. specific intent to commit a felony
4. no one put in fear.

Right of Arrest:

This 10 year felony is arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Notes:

Larceny in a building is always a felony.

Com. v. Cextary, 68 Mass. App. Ct. 752, 864 N.E.2d 1222 (2007)

Defendant's jumping onto top of vehicle and entry into vehicle through open sunroof, after owner of vehicle took action to secure doors and hatches and activate alarm to prevent entry by any customary means, was a "breaking," as required to support conviction for breaking and entering a motor vehicle with intent to commit a felony. M.G.L.A. c. 266, § 18.

Massachusetts law long has accepted the concept of "constructive breaking." See Commonwealth v. Labare, 11 Mass.App.Ct. 370, 377–378, 416 N.E.2d 534 (1981) (involving entry gained through a *757 false pretense). It also recognizes the so-called "open window" doctrine, which holds (analogously to the chimney situation) that entry through an opening not intended or ordinarily useable as a means of entry is within the scope of the statute. See Commonwealth v. Tilley, 355 Mass. 507, 509, 246 N.E.2d 176 (1969). See also Commonwealth v. Hall, 48 Mass.App.Ct. at 730–731, 725 N.E.2d 247 (involving entry through an open window almost five feet above the ground).<sup>7</sup> That doctrine finds clear and sensible application here. Scrambling onto the top of a car and slipping through an open sunroof<sup>8</sup> is as surreptitiously intrusive a violation of the security of one of the several physical spaces intended to be protected by G.L. c. 266, § 18, as is crawling down a chimney or scaling a wall to clamber through a window high above the ground.<sup>9</sup> Consequently the judge correctly submitted the breaking and entering charge to the jury.<sup>10</sup>

Breaking and Entering: Railroad Cars

Chapter 266, Section 19

Definition:

Whoever breaks and enters, or enters in the nighttime without breaking, a railroad car, with intent to commit a felony, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the house of correction for not more than two years.

Elements:

1. enters in the nighttime without breaking or
2. breaks and enters
3. a railroad car
4. with intent to commit a felony

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony and arrestable if committed in presence or upon probable cause.

Notes:

The entering without breaking element is applicable only to the nighttime. Whereas the breaking and entering element would apply either daytime or nighttime.

Be aware of felony of stealing in a railroad car under Chapter 266:20

Stealing in Building, Ship or Railroad Car

Chapter 266, Section 20

Definition:

Whoever steals in a building, ship, vessel or railroad car shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in jail for not more than two years.

Elements:

1. steals
2. in a building, ship, vessel or railroad car

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony, therefore it would be arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Notes:

This is an "aggravated" larceny, therefore it is always a felony regardless of the value of the property stolen.

Breaking and Entering;
Truck, Tractor/Trailer Unit, Trailer, Semi-Trailer or Freight Container
Chapter 266, Section 20A

Definition:

Whoever, breaks and enters, or enters without breaking, a truck, tractor/trailer unit, trailer, semi-trailer or freight container with intent to commit a felony, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the house of correction for not more than two years.

Elements:

1. breaks and enters, or
2. enters without breaking
3. truck, tractor/trailer unit, trailer, semi-trailer or freight container
4. with intent to commit a felony

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony, therefore it would be arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

The felony intended could be stealing in a truck (266:20B) among others.

Stealing in a
Truck, Tractor/Trailer Unit, Trailer, Semi-Trailer or Freight Container
Chapter 266, Section 20B

Definition:

Whoever steals in a truck, tractor/trailer unit, trailer, semi-trailer or freight container shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in jail for not more than two years.

Elements:

1. stealing
2. in a truck, tractor/trailer, semi-trailer or freight container

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony, therefore it would be arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Notes:

It is an "aggravated" larceny; it is always a felony regardless of the value of the property stolen.

Stealing in a Building on Fire

Chapter 266, Section 24

Definition:

Whoever steals in a building, which is on fire, or steals property, which has been removed in consequence of an alarm caused by fire, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and imprisonment in jail for not more than two years.

Elements:

1. steals
2. in a burning building

OR

1. steals
2. property that has been removed in consequence of an alarm caused by fire.

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony, therefore it would be arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

This is an "aggravated" larceny, therefore it is always a felony regardless of the value of the property stolen.

Larceny From the Person

Chapter 266, Section 25

Definition:

Committing larceny by stealing from the person of another

Elements:

1. commit larceny
2. by stealing
3. from the person of another

Right of Arrest:

This 5 year felony is arrestable in presence or on probable cause.

NOTE:

Pickpockets and some handbag snatches are covered by this statute.

This is always a felony regardless of the value of the property taken.

Must be from the person

Comm. v. Otis Jones states that the amount of force used to snatch a purse (if the woman is aware of it) is enough to make the crime unarmed robbery.

Com. v. Davis, 7 Mass. App. Ct. 9, 385 N.E.2d 278 (1979)

Ordinary pickpocket is guilty of larceny from the person rather than robbery because there is neither violence nor intimidation involved in the perpetration of the theft

Com. v. Moran, 387 Mass. 644, 646, 442 N.E.2d 399, 401 (1982)

Robbery may be punished more severely than larceny from the person. Compare G.L. c. 265, § 19, with G.L. c. 266, § 25. The principal policy served by this greater punishment is deterrence of the use of force (and the accompanying risk to human life) to obtain money or other property

This statute provides that a prosecution commenced under this subdivision shall not be placed on file or continued without a finding. It also provides for a mandatory minimum sentence of one year for a second and subsequent conviction.

Elements (subparagraph b):

1. whoever conceals
2. a motor vehicle or trailer thief
3. knowing him to be such

Rights of Arrest (b):

LARCENY

Chapter 266, Section 30

Definition:

Trespassory taking and carrying away the personal property of another with intent to deprive the owner permanently of its use.

Elements:

1. Trespassory taking
2. Carrying away
3. Personal property of another
4. Intent to steal

Right of Arrest:

If the value of the property taken is $250 or less the crime is a misdemeanor, if the value is over $250 or if a firearm or a trade secret then larceny under this section is a felony.

The statutory right of arrest for the misdemeanor portion of the statute is found under Chapter 276, Section 28. It would be a lawful arrest if it occurred in a officer's presence.

The right of arrest for the felony portion: This 5 year felony is arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Trespassory = unlawful -- doing an unlawful act.

THE ATTEMPT TO COMMIT ANY LARCENY UNDER 266:30 IS ALWAYS A NON-ARRESTABLE MISDEMEANOR.

Notes:

Statute encompasses stealing, obtaining property by false pretenses, embezzlement, and converting or secreting the property of another whether such property is or is not in the victim's possession at the time of such conversion or secreting.

- A thief can steal from a thief. (see receiving stolen property)
- Removing or carrying away -- piling at back door. (abandoned property)
- Property -- where special statute covers, it governs (trees)

Shoplifting

Chapter 266, Section 30A

Elements:

Whoever

1. intentionally takes possession of, carries away, transfers or causes to be carried away or transferred, or
2. intentionally conceals upon his person or otherwise, or
3. intentionally alters, transfers or removes any label, price tag marking indicia of value or any other markings which aid in determining value affixed and to attempt to purchase personally or in consort with another (at less than full retail value), or
4. intentionally transfer from one container to another container (which obviously must be marked with a lower price), or
5. intentionally records a value which is less than the actual retail value (false ring-ups by salesperson), or

Each of the preceding five elements refer to merchandise displayed, held, or offered for sale by any store or other retail mercantile establishment with the intent to deprive the merchant of all or some part of the retail value of the merchandise.

6. intentionally removes a shopping cart without permission with intent to deprive the merchant permanently of said cart

Right of Arrest:

This section is a misdemeanor with an in presence and a past misdemeanor probable cause right of arrest.

Note:

- This statute further states that the statement of a merchant or his employee or agent that a person has violated a provision of this section shall constitute probable cause for arrest by any law enforcement officer authorized to make an arrest in such a jurisdiction; However, police officers should be guided by their training as to whether probable cause legally exists.
- In the case of Com. v. Hudson, 535 N.E. 2d 208 (1989), the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court stated that the shoplifting statutes did not impliedly repeal the larceny statute as it relates to the theft of merchandise offered for sale. In other words, if the value of the merchandise stolen is over $250, the suspect could be charged with the felony section of the larceny statute (c. 226, Section 30) instead of the misdemeanor of shoplifting.

Com. v. Rogers, 459 Mass. 249, 945 N.E.2d 295 (2011)

Statute allows merchant's or innkeeper's employees with suspicion based on reasonable grounds to detain a suspected shoplifter for a reasonable time and by reasonable means; statute creates an affirmative defense to charges of false arrest and false imprisonment for merchants who detain suspected shoplifters in a reasonable manner. M.G.L.A. c. 231, § 94B.

Fraudulent Checks

Chapter 266, Section 37

6. shall if no money, property or services are received, be guilty of attempted larceny and if received, be guilty of larceny.

Right of Arrest:

The same as simple larceny -- no right for attempt -- over $250 felony right of arrest -- $250 even or under $250 arrestable in presence under statute.

Com. v. Ryan, 79 Mass. App. Ct. 179,

General Laws c. 266, §§ 37A–37C, render unlawful the misuse and fraudulent use of any instrument or device, however denominated, issued by a business organization or financial institution<sup>6</sup> to facilitate the movement of money, goods, services, or anything else of value without immediate payment. Section 37B prohibits the misuse of “credit cards” by applicants, holders, and those who furnish goods or other things of value to the holder of such a card, and § 37C prohibits the fraudulent use of such cards to obtain money, goods, or services or anything else of value. Overarching the statutory framework is the definition of “[c]redit card” in § 37A as “any instrument or device, whether known as a credit card, credit plate, or by any other name, issued with or without fee by an issuer for the use of the cardholder in obtaining money, goods, services *184 or anything else of value on credit.” (emphasis supplied).

For purposes of statutes prohibiting misuse of credit cards, debit card was the functional equivalent of a “credit card,” and, thus, evidence that defendant used victim's debit card to make unauthorized purchases of clothing, a mobile telephone, telephone services, food, and Registry of Motor Vehicle services, in excess of $250 was sufficient for fraudulent use of a credit card conviction; debit card transactions involved extension of credit at point of sale, at least until the funds were later deducted from victim's account by issuer and credited to merchant's account, debit cards and credit cards were virtually indistinguishable, and statute defined “credit card” as any instrument or device by any name issued for the procuring of goods on credit. M.G.L.A. c. 266, §§ 37A, 37C(e).

Identity Fraud

Chapter 266, Section 37

Com. v. Catalano, 74 Mass. App. Ct. 580, 908 N.E.2d 842 (2009)

The Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt the following four elements to support a conviction for identity fraud: specifically, that a defendant (1) posed as another person; (2) did so without that person's express authorization; (3) used the other person's identifying information to obtain, or attempt to obtain, something of value; and (4) did so with the intent to defraud

Right of Arrest:

This misdemeanor has a statutory right of arrest if committed in your presence.

Com. v. Thompson, 89 Mass. App. Ct. 456, 50 N.E.3d 845 (2016)

A conviction for credit card fraud over $250 requires proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant (1) represented himself as the person named on a credit card, (2) did so without the consent of the person named on the card, (3) by doing so obtained money, goods, or services or anything else of value in excess of $250, and (4) did so with the intent to defraud. M.G.L.A. c. 266, § 37C(e).

Fraudulently Obtaining Goods, Money or Services
Use of Credit Card
Chapter 266, Section 37C

Elements:

1. Whoever, with specific intent to defraud
  - (a) obtains control over a credit card as security for debt, or

Right of Arrest:

Violation of this section is a 5-year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Making, Holding, Using Burglarious Instruments

Chapter 266, Section 49

Elements:

First: That the defendant knowingly possessed a tool or implement,

Second: That such tool or implement could reasonably be used in (room) (vault or safe) (place for keeping valuables);

Third: That the defendant knew that the tool or implement could reasonably be used for that purpose;

Fourth: That the defendant intended to use the tool or implement for that purpose;

Fifth: That the defendant had the specific intention

Right of Arrest:

This 10 year felony is arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

Two or more defendants may have common possession of burglarious tools and a common intent to use them.

- the term depository has been held to include the trunk of an automobile
- the offense is complete when the tools are procured with a design to use them for a criminal purpose
- the making of a battering ram with the intent to commit a trespass is within the statute prohibiting possession of burglarious instruments
- the other crime must be committed in the building, vault, safe or other depository

Com. v. Faust, 81 Mass. App. Ct. 498

Evidence supported finding that defendant intended to use tools in his possession, including three screwdrivers, two flashlights and a folding knife, to break into a car, thus supporting conviction for possession of burglarious instruments; there was evidence that victims' vehicles were broken into, numerous stolen items, including victims' property, were found in the car that defendant was driving, and a backpack was found in the trunk that contained four global positioning system (GPS) units, two still in car mounts, with car charging adapters attached. M.G.L.A. c. 266, § 49.

While burglarious intent can be inferred from mere possession of tools uniquely or very highly adapted to burglarious purposes, common items can be burglarious tools if they can be used and are possessed for burglarious purposes. Commonwealth v. Dellinger, 10 Mass. App. Ct. 549, 561, 409 N.E.2d 1337, 1346 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 383 Mass. 780, 422 N.E.2d 1346 (1981). See Commonwealth v. Jones, 355 Mass. 170, 176-177, 243 N.E.2d 172, 176 (1969) (screwdriver and kitchen knife); Commonwealth v. Tivnon, 8 Gray 375, 380-381 (1857) (chisel). But see Commonwealth v. Purcell, 19 Mass. 1031, 1031, 477 N.E.2d 190, 192 (1985) (even if worn to facilitate burglary, gloves cannot be burglarious instruments). A burglarious instrument does not lose its character as such because it needs repair. Aleo, supra. Innocent tools are admissible in evidence when mixed with burglarious tools. Commonwealth v. Williams, 2 Cush. 582, 586 (1849).

NOTES:

1. Attempted break-in unnecessary. An attempted break-in is not a required element of this offense, since the offense is complete when tools are procured with a burglarious intent. Tivnon,

2. Breaking and entering is distinct offense. Possession of burglarious tools and breaking and entering (G.L. c. 266, § 18) are separate offenses, and neither is a lesser included offense of the other. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 406 Mass. 533, 535, 548 N.E.2d 1251, 1253 (1990).

3. "Depository". It is not necessary to prove that a depository was located within a building, Commonwealth v. Tilley, 306 Mass. at 412, 416, 28 N.E.2d 247, 247 (1940), or that the defendant intended to break into any particular depository, Tivnon, supra. A boat storage area open on one side is not a depository. Commonwealth v. Schultz, 17 Mass. App. Ct. 958, 458 N.E.2d 328 (1983). An auto trunk is a depository. Tilley, supra. A locked passenger automobile reasonably can be inferred to be a depository, even without proof that the particular vehicle was used to store valuables. Commonwealth v. Dreyer, 18 Mass. App. Ct. 562, 564-565, 468 N.E.2d 863, 865 (1984). A bolt cutter used to cut through a bicycle chain attaching a bicycle to a bicycle rack is not a burglarious tool, since it is not "adapted and designed for cutting through, forcing or breaking open a . . . depository." The chain itself cannot be a depository "as it has no capacity to hold property for safekeeping." Even if the rack is considered a depository, it is "highly implausible that a small pair of bolt cutters could be used to cut open the metal frames of a bicycle rack" and therefore the cutters were probably not intended for use on the rack. And "because the bicyclist furnishes the chain, . . . it requires a strained interpretation of the statute to conclude that the chain and rack together" constitute a depository. Commonwealth v. Antonio Ortiz, 38 Mass. App. Ct. 1107, 646 N.E.2d 435 (No.

4. Intended crimes. It is not necessary that burglary or theft be the intended crime. Commonwealth v. Krasner, 358 Mass.

Tilley, 306 Mass. at 414-415, 28 N.E.2d at 247 (stealing from auto trunk). However, if the complaint charges the defendant only with the first of the two intent alternatives in the statute ("to steal therefrom such money d therein") the Commonwealth is so limited in its proof, and may not convict upon proof of the second intent alternative ("to commit any other crime"). Commonwealth v. Graud, 8 Mass. App. Ct. 915, To satisfy the second intent alternative, the "any other crime" must be intended to be committed in the "building, room, vault, safe or other depository." Krasner, supra; Schultz, supra.

5. Motor vehicle master keys. Since the enactment of St. 1966, c. 269, the statute has also included a separate branch punishing possession of a motor vehicle master key, the effect of which is that possession of motor vehicle master keys can no longer be prosecuted under the generic branch of the statute. Commonwealth v. Collardo, 13 Mass. App. Ct. 1013, 1014, 433 N.E.2d 487, 489 (1982).

Buying, Receiving or Concealing Stolen Property

Chapter 266, Section 60

Elements:

First: That the property in question was stolen;

Second: That the defendant knew that the property had been stolen; and Third: That the defendant knowingly (had the stolen property in his [her] possession) (bought the stolen property) (aided in concealing the stolen property).

The Commonwealth must establish that the property was stolen — that is, that someone had taken and carried it away without right and of the owner, while intending to deprive the owner of it permanently. The Commonwealth is not required to prove who it was who stole the property.

Right of Arrest:

If the value of the property is $250 or less and it is the suspect's first offense, this is a NONARRESTABLE misdemeanor.

If the value of the property is over $250 or if it is the suspect's second offense this is a 5 year felony, arrestable in presence or on probable a cause.

Note:

Prove knowledge, $500 watch for $50 or bought at night in an alley

Com. v. Boris, 317 Mass. 309, 58 N.E.2d 8 (1944)

Instruction that it was enough if the commonwealth proved that a person of reasonable intelligence and caution would have believed that the property had been stolen and that, if the circumstances were such that a reasonably cautious and prudent man would have been satisfied that it had been stolen and would have refused to buy it or would have made further inquiry, then the defendants must be found guilty, was erroneous. M.G.L.A. c. 266 § 60

Com. v. Cromwell, 53 Mass. App. Ct. 662, 761 N.E.2d 530 (2002)

In order to be guilty of the crime of receiving stolen goods, (1) one must buy, receive or aid in the concealment of property which has been stolen or embezzled, (2) knowing it to have been stolen. M.G.L.A. c. 266, § 60.:

A person's knowledge is a question of fact. Because you cannot look directly into someone's mind, a person's knowledge is normally shown by inferences from all the facts and circumstances surrounding the event. You may infer that the defendant knew that the goods were stolen if the Commonwealth has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant (possessed) (bought) (helped to conceal) recently stolen goods, and if the facts and circumstances in this case support an inference that the defendant knew that those goods were stolen. You should consider all the facts and circumstances surrounding the defendant's alleged (possessionment) of stolen goods in deciding whether or not it is reasonable for you to draw such an inference, and in determining whether the Commonwealth has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knew that the goods he (she) allegedly (possessed) (bought) (concealed) were stolen. Remember: under such circumstances you may, but you are not required to, draw an inference that the defendant knew that the goods were stolen.)

Appeals Court of Massachusetts,
Essex.
COMMONWEALTH v Jesus VELASQUEZ, Jr.

No cocaine was found on the defendant's person. The government may, however, under the label "constructive possession," prove that the defendant had knowledge of the unlawful drugs found in the basement, coupled with the ability and intention to exercise dominion over them.

Here, the utility and rent receipts in the name of Velasquez proved his more than casual connection with the apartment.. As to the apartment, the traffic pattern that Detective Melanson had observed and the barricade at the rear door tended to establish that it was a drug trading post. See Velasquez's blocking Sergeant Leeman from the bathroom until drugs were beyond retrieval provides a basis for inferring that Velasquez was more than an unlucky occupant of the apartment but was himself involved in the drug selling operation. See Commonwealth v. James, supra at 497, 570 N.E.2d 168; Nor at the time of the bust did the defendant**402 disassociate himself from the drugs in the basement; rather he said he was going to jail for two years, a remark that can be taken as an expression of consciousness of guilt. The defendant's access to the basement area speaks to his ability to exercise dominion over the cocaine hidden there. See Commonwealth v. Gonzalez, 42 Mass.App.Ct. 235, 237, 675 N.E.2d 1177 (1997). That others in the building also had access to the basement and might have hidden drugs in the basement does not require a finding of not guilty in favor of Velasquez. Commonwealth v. Montanez, 410 Mass. 290, 306, 571 N.E.2d 1372 (1991). Compare (defendant did not constructively possess drugs in a common area of her apartment when no other evidence warranted an inference of her control over them)

Controlled Substances Act

Chapter 94C, Section 32

The following Sections of Chapter 94C deal with unlawful manufacturing, distributing, or possession with intent of controlled substances.

Manufacturing: the production, preparation, propagation, compounding, conversion or processing of a controlled substance, either directly or indirectly by extraction from substances of natural origin or independently by means of chemical synthesis.

Distribution: to deliver other than by administering or dispensing a controlled substance.

Administer is the direct application of a controlled substance whether by injection, inhalation, ingestion or any other means to the body of a patient or research subject by – a practitioner or a nurse at the direction of a practitioner in the course of his professional practice or an ultimate user or researcher subject at the direction of a practitioner in the course of his professional practice.

Dispensing is to deliver a controlled substance to an ultimate user or research subject or to the agent of an ultimate user or research subject by a practitioner or pursuant to the order of a practitioner, including the prescribing and administering of a controlled substance and the packaging, labeling, or compounding necessary for such delivery.

Possession with intent: to possess drugs with the purpose to distribute.

Some of the factors to be considered include quantity of drugs, packaging material, currency and drug paraphernalia.

Section 32 CLASS A:

- (a) 10 year felony (first offense)
- (b) a second or subsequent offense of any class drug, State Federal Law - not less than 5 years (mandatory minimum = 5 years) nor more than 15 years.

Section 32A CLASS B:

- (a) 10 year felony (first offense) SPECIAL SUBSECTION FOR P.C.P. AND COCAINE (Subsection C)
- (b) a second or subsequent offense not less than *3 years nor more that 10 years.
*(Mandatory minimum = 3 years)
- (c) for P.C.P. and Cocaine (first offense), not less than *1 year, nor more than 10 years.
*(Mandatory minimum = 1 year at House of Correction)
- (d) any conviction of subsection C after one or more prior convictions of distributing or possession with intent of any class controlled substance in violation of any law, state, federal, or territorial - state prison not less than five nor more than fifteen years.

Section 32B CLASS C:

- (a) 5 year felony (first offense)

Section 32C CLASS D(an ounce or more)

- (a) 2 year misdemeanor (includes cultivates)

Section 32D CLASS E:

- (a) 9 month misdemeanor

Appeals Court of Massachusetts, Middlesex.
v.
Walter G. SAUER.

Following denial of his motion to suppress evidence by the District Court Department, Middlesex County, Cambridge Division, Jonathan Brant, J., defendant was convicted in the same court, Mark S. Coven, J., of operating motor vehicle while under influence of drugs, operating with a suspended license and possession of class E substance with intent to distribute. Defendant appealed. The Appeals Court, Beck, J., held that: (1) defendant was not subjected to custodial interrogation for Miranda purposes during traffic stop; (2) there was sufficient evidence that pills found in defendant's pocket and in his car were not for personal use, but were to be distributed; and (3) there was sufficient evidence to support defendant's conviction for operating under influence of drugs.

Affirmed.

After the defendant was arrested, the police searched his car and found twenty-four bank envelopes in the middle of the front seats. One of the envelopes contained a pill identical to those the defendant had in his pocket. The pills were carisprodol, a Class E substance. The Commonwealth charged the defendant with possession with intent to distribute. The defendant claims there was insufficient evidence to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the pills were for anything other than personal use. We disagree. The police officers testified that based on their training and experience, including hundreds of drug arrests, they had seen drugs packaged for distribution in envelopes. The defendant's possession of thirty-one**13 loose pills in his pocket is at best an uncommon way to carry pills for personal use. The presence of one bank envelope with a pill identical to the other thirty-one is more than sufficient to support an inference that the defendant intended to place the rest of the pills in the remaining bank envelopes for distribution.

Com. v. Sepheus, 82 Mass. App. Ct. 765

The two basic elements for conviction of possession with the intent to distribute cocaine are (1) knowingly possessing the drug and (2) intending to transfer it physically to another person

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute; defendant was found by police with three individually wrapped rocks of crack cocaine, he had $312 in cash in his pocket, he carried no paraphernalia for ingesting the drugs, police expert testified that several of these facts suggested that defendant intended to distribute the drugs he possessed, and it could be inferred from the evidence that defendant had been located in an area known for drug sales for at least an hour, and was in the company of an individual who conducted a drug transaction in his presence

Trafficking in Controlled Substances
Chapter 94C Section 32E

- A. Marijuana or any mixture containing marijuana

50 lbs.

- B. Cocaine or any salt there of

18 grams

- C. Heroin, morphine, (or their salts) or opium (or any derivative) or any mixture containing one of these

- D. Fentanyl and derivatives

10 grams

Subsection (c1/2) inserted by 2015, 136 effective February 22, 2016

(c1/2) Any person who trafficks in fentanyl, by knowingly or intentionally manufacturing, distributing, dispensing or possessing with intent to manufacture, distribute or dispense or by bringing into the commonwealth a net weight of more than 10 grams of fentanyl shall be punished by a term of imprisonment in state prison for not more than 20 years.

For purposes of this subsection, "fentanyl" shall include any derivative of fentanyl and any mixture containing more than 10 grams of fentanyl or a derivative of fentanyl.

CARFENTANIL-any amount is trafficking

City Ordinance Prohibiting the Sale and/or Possession of Crack Pipes

16-51.1 Prohibition Against Sale

No person shall sell or display for sale a devise used to smoke freebase or crack cocaine known as a "crack pipe." A crack pipe is generally made from a small glass tube that is, on average, four (4") inches to five (5") inches in length and approximately one quarter (1/4") in diameter.

16-51.2 Prohibition Against Possession

No person shall possess a devise used to smoke freebase or crack cocaine known as a "crack pipe." A crack pipe is generally made from a small glass tube that is, on average, four (4") inches to five (5") inches in length and approximately one quarter (1/4") in diameter.

16-51.3 Penalty

A violation of these sections shall be punished by a fine in the amount of three hundred ($300.00) dollars. Each and every crack pipe shall be considered to be a separate and distinct violation.

M.G.L c. 94C § 32I prohibits possession of drug paraphernalia with the intent to sell. It does not prohibit mere possession. Commonwealth v. Jasmin, 396 Mass. 653 (1986). M.G.L. c. 40 § 21D allows the officer to summons the individual on the first offense. After the first offense, the officer may arrest for a subsequent, and thus willful, violation of the possession ordinance pursuant to M.G.L. c. 272 §59.

An Act Providing For Drug Free School Zones
Chapter 94C, Section 32J

G.L. c. 94C, § 32J

Effective August 2, 2012, St. 2012, c. 192, §§ 30-31 amended G.L. c. 94C, § 32J by reducing the size of the school zone area from 1,000 feet to 300 feet and by limiting the scope of the statute to offenses that occur between the hours of 5:00 AM and midnight. These changes apply to school zone drug violations committed on or after August 2, 2012.

For use with Instruction 7.800 (Distribution of, or Possession with Intent to Distribute, a Controlled Substance) or Instruction 7.840 (Sale of, or Possession with Intent to Sell, Drug Paraphernalia) where the complaint alleges that the violation occurred within 300 feet of school property.

First: That the offense was committed within 300 feet of the real property comprising (a public preschool, headstart facility, elementary, vocational or secondary school) (a private accredited preschool or private accredited headstart facility) (a private elementary, vocational or secondary school); and Second: That the offense was committed between five o'clock in the morning and twelve o'clock midnight.

It does not matter whether or not the school, preschool or headstart facility was in session, but the Commonwealth must prove beyond a at the offense occurred between five o'clock in the morning and twelve o'clock midnight.

It is not necessary for the Commonwealth to prove that the defendant knew that he (she) was within 300 feet of the real property of a school, preschool, or headstart facility.

Commonwealth v. Bell, 442 Mass. 118, 125-126, 810 N.E.2d 796, 801-802 (20

Right of Arrest

This is a fifteen year felony arrestable in presence or on probable cause.

Note:

- This section is only applicable if the defendant is found guilty of one of the listed drug offenses.
- The statute provides for mandatory minimum sentence to be served consecutively with whatever sentence is given for the other drug violation(s).
- The statute further provides that the district courts have jurisdiction over this section and clearly states that lack of knowledge of school boundaries shall not be a defense.

The Massachusetts Appeals Court in the case of Com. v. Gonzales, 604 N.E. 2d 1317, (Mass. App. Ct. 1992), The court stated that the Commonwealth is required to produce sufficient evidence to establish that the school is one of the types enumerated in the statute. They further held that whether a particular school is an elementary, vocational or secondary school, for the purposes of the school zone statute, is not a proper subject of judicial notice at trial level, as a matter of common knowledge. "The arresting officer or any other witness may testify that the school in question is an elementary, vocational or secondary school if he or she has personal knowledge of that fact. A principal of the school, an employee of the school, or anyone associated with the school may testify as to the type of school.

Drug Free Play Grounds & Parks

Chapter 94C Section 32J

PARK ZONE DRUG VIOLATION

G.L. c. 94C, § 32J

Jury Instruction

(Distribution of, or Possession with Intent to Distribute, a Controlled Substance) or (Sale of, or Possession with Intent to Sell, Drug Paraphernalia) where the complaint alleges that the violation occurred within 100 feet of a public park or playground.

If you find the defendant guilty of the charge of , you must go on to consider whether the Commonwealth has proven beyond a reasonable doubt that the offense was committed within 100 feet of a public park or playground.

It is not necessary for the Commonwealth to prove that the defendant knew that he (she) was within that distance from a public park or playground.

Commonwealth v. Taylor, 413 Mass. 243, 596 N.E.2d 333 (1992) (§ 32J creates distinct offense which can be charged separately from underlying drug offense, although § 32J seems to contemplate that it will normally be tried together with underlying charge); Commonwealth v. Lawrence, 69 Mass. App. Ct. 596, 600, 870 N.E.2d 636, 640 (2007) (defendant need not intend to distribute drugs within public park or playground); Commonwealth v. Davie, 46 Mass. App. Ct. 25, 703 N.E.2d 236, 238-239 (1998) (based on dictionary definitions, case law, and statutes, the word “park” as used in § 32J is sufficiently clear to permit a person of average intelligence to comprehend what conduct is made criminal); Commonwealth v. Ramos, 45 Mass. App. Ct. 1119, 708 N.E.2d 152 (1999) (No. 98-P-43, March 24, 1999) (unpublished opinion under Appeals Ct. Rule 1:28) (same as to “playground”).

Elements:

1. Any person
2. who violates:
3. sections
  - a. 32 to 32D inclusive ( distribution or possession with intent to distribute class A to class E controlled substances) or
  - b. 32E (trafficking) or
  - c. 32F (Distribution or possession with intent to distribute class A through class C controlled substances to persons under the age of 18 years) or

Initial Guidelines for the Implementation of MGL 94C-32L Non-Criminal Possession of an Ounce or Less of Marijuana.

- The new law takes effect at one second after midnight, 12:00am on Friday, January 2, 2009.
- The law decriminalizes possession of an ounce or less of Marijuana (under 94C class D) or THC, which, as a Class C drug, would then include one ounce or less of Hash and Hash Oil, provided they contain THC.
- Nothing contained within the language shall be construed to repeal or modify:
  - ➤ Existing laws, practices or policies concerning the operation of motor vehicles or other actions taken while under the influence of marijuana or THC;
  - ➤ Laws concerning the unlawful possession of prescription forms of marijuana or THC; or
  - ➤ Possession of more than one ounce of marijuana or THC, or knowingly or intentionally manufacturing, distributing, dispensing, cultivating, or trafficking in marijuana or THC, regardless of quantity.

1. Search Issues:

- • Police officers still have the right to search for evidence and contraband, the change in the disposition does not change the fact that it is still contraband.
- • Police have the authority to detain for a civil violation based on a reasonable suspicion.
- • Smell, smoke or vegetable matter constitutes reasonable suspicion in the ordinary sense re 94C or 90-24 (drugs).
- • Smell is probable cause where an officer can demonstrate familiarity with the smell of marijuana. (See Comm. v. Garden, 451 Mass. 43 (2008)).
- • If packaged for distribution, and if other evidence of distribution is present, then an arrest can still be made and charges for possession with intent to distribute, Distribution under 94C-32E, School Zone Violations would still apply. The seized marijuana would have to be submitted to the lab for analysis as criminal evidence.

- • Even small amounts of marijuana may still be the subject of a legitimate search warrant.
- • An encounter may occur when the offender is on foot, or in a vehicle.

2. Offender Identification Issues

- • With regard to requiring an individual possessing a “Non-Criminal” amount of marijuana, the language in the proposed law is deficient, and will need legislative correction as soon as possible, however legislative modifications will not be made prior to implementation and Officers should be aware of the following:
- • There is currently no requirement in the law that a person positively identify themselves, through accepted forms of identification such as a Mass Driver’s License or Mass ID, or that the officer be able to confirm the identity of the person through record checks available through Operations or other means.
- • The new M.G.L. c. 94C, § 32L does not provide officers with any explicit enforcement authority concerning the civil encounter;
- • An offender who refuses to identify themselves for an officer cannot be arrested for failure to produce a form of identification;
- • There is no authority to search for identification, however officers have a reasonable amount of time to identify an offender;
- • An officer may query the given name and info through CJIS in an attempt to verify the provided information;
- • This lack of authority given to officers to identify offenders will in certain cases, prevent officers from properly issuing citations to offenders (especially juveniles).

3. Issuing the Citation

- The current City of Boston Ordinance Violation ticket books issued under the guidelines of MGL Chapter 40, Section 21D will be utilized for issuing the $100.00 citations for possession of an ounce or less of marijuana.
- The citation forms will be upgraded in the future to reflect the Non-Criminal Marijuana Possession charge, for the time being, officers issuing a civil citation under 94C-Sec 32L should check off the “Other Ordinance” box on the upper right corner of the citation. The “Application for Complaint” portion of the citation on the lower left should contain the basic facts of the incident to sustain the charge, for example, “Violator was found in possession of one plastic bag of marijuana”, etc.
- The citation can be issued in hand or mailed to the offender.
- The procedure for processing the marijuana civil citation will remain the same as the procedure for processing any other City Ordinance Violations.
- The Boston Municipal Court (BMC) will receive a copy of the citation as well as the BPD Licensing Unit.
- The Licensing Unit will track and notify the BMC when the citation has been paid. Likewise, the Licensing Unit will notify the BMC when the fine has not been paid, so that a civil hearing can be scheduled by the court and the offender notified of the hearing date.

- The offender has a right to request a hearing at the BMC on the non-criminal marijuana possession charge. The decision of the Clerk Magistrate is final. There is no further right of appeal.

4. Issuing Citations to Youthful Offenders

- If the offender is under the age of 18, the new law mandates that the youthful offender must complete an approved drug awareness program or community service program within a year, or be subject to a fine of $1,000.00 that the youthful offender and his/her parents will be jointly liable for. DYS is to develop the drug awareness program.
- In addition to providing the youthful offender with a copy of the citation, the officer issuing a citation must also deliver or mail a copy of the citation to the parents of the youthful offender. The youthful offender is responsible for the initial $100 fine. A copy of a form letter to accompany the citation for the parent/guardian is attached to this memo. (See attached Appendix A)

5. Determining Weight of Seized Marijuana

- The Police Academy will prepare instruction for officers as to the size and appearance of an ounce of marijuana. An ounce equals 28 grams. The weight does not include weight of any container the marijuana may be in (baggie, tin canister, aluminum foil, Tupperware container, etc.). Officers should familiarize themselves with the size and appearance of an ounce of marijuana.
- Digital scales will be obtained and maintained in all district stations. In the event that there is a question as to the weight during a seizure of marijuana, it is suggested that the offender's information be taken, the offender be released and the seized drugs be taken to the station and weighed. Should the weight exceed an ounce then a criminal complaint shall be sought, if not, a non-criminal citation shall be prepared and mailed.

6. Processing Seized Marijuana

- As of this time, non-criminal seizures of marijuana will be processed in the same manner as other drug seizures.
- A BPD 1.1 will be generated. The citing officer shall include in the report all pertinent information that clearly states the reasons why the officer believes the contraband to be marijuana.
- The seized drugs will be logged in at the station and deposited in the District drug drop-safe in the same manner as accorded in rules and regulations, except that the non-criminal contraband will not be forwarded by the Drug Depository to the State Lab for analysis, the drugs will be held for sixty (60) days, pending appeal. After such time, the drugs will be marked for destruction by Drug Depository personnel and held pending drug destruction procedures.
- It is the opinion of the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security (EOPSS) that neither a laboratory analysis nor expert testimony is necessary to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence standard, that a substance is marijuana. EOPSS further opined that a detailed police report including the circumstances in which the substance was seized, the violator's statements and the officer's training and experience, together with presentation of the evidence in court, should suffice to be successful at the district court hearing on the matter.
- A sticker will be created by the Drug Depository to place on the outside of the Drug Depository Manila Envelope to identify that the contents of the envelope are contraband from a non-criminal drug seizure. This sticker will make non-criminal drug seizures easily identifiable for Drug Depository personnel and will prevent the drugs from being forwarded to the State Lab for analysis.

- Until these stickers are available, the officer should clearly mark the outside of the front of the manila envelope “Non-Criminal Seizure,” preferably with a black marker.
- If there are arrestable offenses as a result of a search pursuant to the seizure of marijuana, the non-criminal marijuana seized should be submitted to the State lab for analysis as evidence in support of the search that led to the arrestable charges. For example, if an officer seizes marijuana and a search for any other marijuana reveals the suspect in possession of a firearm, it will be important later in the criminal trial that the marijuana evidence be maintained and analyzed.

Appendix A

Notice to Parent/Guardian

A child under your guardianship, who is under 18 years old, has been cited as a civil offender for the possession of an ounce or less of marijuana pursuant to Section 32L of Chapter 94C. The civil penalty is $100, as indicated on the enclosed citation form. In addition, within one year of the date of the offense listed on the citation, the child must complete a drug awareness program, consisting of a minimum of four hours classroom instruction or group discussion and ten hours of community service, and file a certificate of completion of the program with the Clerk of the District Court listed on the enclosed citation.

If a certificate of completion is not filed within one year of the offense, the Clerk shall notify the offender, parent, or guardian and the enforcing person who issued the original notice to the offender of a hearing to show cause why the civil penalty should not be increased to $1000. Both the offender and the parents/guardians will be jointly and severally liable to pay any increased penalty.

Failure to complete a compliant drug awareness program and any required community service within one year may also lead to delinquency proceedings for offenders under the age of seventeen at the time of the offense. Please consult MGL 94C, sections 32L-32N for details.

For more information about drug awareness programs, please contact the Department of Youth Services at 617-727-7575.

Commonwealth v Humberto 466 Mass 562(Nov. 2013)*Case Summary

A juvenile had entered school late and a school administrator smelled a strong odor of marijuana. He was taken to school nurse where an administrative search was conducted. The administrator located five bags of marijuana in a “second pair of shorts under his pants”. Boston School police arrested the juvenile and charged him with Possession of Marijuana with intent to Distribute.

The defendant moved to dismiss the case at arraignment arguing the police lacked probable cause for Possession of Class D with Intent to Distribute. To establish probable cause, the complaint application must set forth “reasonably trustworthy information sufficient to warrant a reasonable or prudent person in believing that the defendant has committed the offense.”(Commonwealth v. Roman). The question was not whether they had probable cause for possession but probable cause for intent to distribute. Officers must keep in mind that the report writing is critical for probable cause regarding each element for each crime charged as well as courtroom testimony. The Massachusetts Supreme Court dismissed this case for lack of probable cause.

Take Home Points

Police Officer must answer the question in their police reports why the suspect is being charged with Possession with Intent to Distribute. This case is a good reminder that just a specific number of bags of marijuana may not make it past probable cause. Remember be specific because details are the most important aspect of a police report. For distribution of drugs make sure that certain items are included like the suspect’s actions prior to arrest. For example the suspect was in and out of an ally, walking up to several cars, the amount of drugs, the street value of the drugs recovered, drug paraphernalia like a scale, cutting agents, baggies, the amount of money recovered and communication methods like cellphones. The list can be extensive but officer must show why the suspect was intending to distribute the drugs in his possession.

Officers should also keep in mind that Possession with Intent to Distribute Heroin or Cocaine is different because straight possession of those substances are arrestable. Straight Possession of less than an ounce of marijuana is not an arrestable offense but a civil citation should be issued.

- Weight of the drugs
- Street value of the drugs *(include a value estimation in report)
- Possession of large amount of cash
- Packaging of the drugs
- Lack of personal use of paraphernalia
- Possession of scales
- Possession of multiple cell phones
- Air fresheners
- Books, ledgers, notes, records indicating sales, customers,
- Where the drugs are found
- Actions of the suspect

Protective Custody(Drugs)

Chapter 111E

Section 9A: Incapacitated persons placed into protective custody without consent for transport to appropriate emergency medical treatment

Text of section added by 2016, 161, Sec. 1 effective July 1, 2016. See 2016, 161, Sec. 2.

Section 9A. For purposes of this section, "incapacitated" shall mean the condition of a person who, by reason of the consumption of a controlled substance or toxic vapor or other substance other than alcohol is: (i) unconscious; (ii) in need of medical attention; (iii) likely to suffer or cause physical harm or damage property; or (iv) disorderly.

Any person who is incapacitated may be placed into protective custody by a police officer without the person's consent for the purpose of immediately transporting the person to an acute care hospital or satellite emergency facility as defined in section 51 1/2 of chapter 111 or otherwise immediately obtaining appropriate emergency medical treatment. For the purposes of this section, to determine whether or not a person is incapacitated, a police officer may request the person to submit to reasonable tests of coordination, coherency of speech and breath. A police officer may place the person into protective custody when such tests or other information or observations indicate that the person is incapacitated. Whenever a police officer places into protective custody a person under the age of 18 in accordance with this section, the police officer shall notify the parent or guardian of that person forthwith.

A person may not be held in protective custody against the person's will beyond the time required to complete the person's immediate transport to an acute care hospital or satellite emergency facility as defined in section 51 1/2 of chapter 111, or to otherwise immediately obtain appropriate emergency medical treatment.

A police officer acting in accordance with this section may use such force as is reasonably necessary to carry out the officer's authorized responsibilities. If the police officer reasonably believes that there may be a risk to the safety of the incapacitated person, the safety of the officer or the safety of other persons present, the police officer may search the person and the immediate surroundings of the person placed into protective custody but only to the extent necessary to discover and seize any items or weapons which may pose a danger. Any item taken shall be inventoried and, unless the item is contraband or otherwise unlawfully possessed, shall be returned to the person when the person is no longer incapacitated.

A person placed under protective custody in accordance with this section shall not be considered to have been arrested or to have been charged with any crime. An entry of custody shall be made indicating the date, time, place of custody, the name of the assisting officer and the name of the officer in charge. No such entry shall be treated as an arrest or criminal record for any purpose.

Restraint; Licensed Physician, Qualified Psychologist (in part)

If an examination is not possible because of the emergency nature of the case and because of the refusal of the person to consent to such an examination, the physician or qualified psychologist on the basis of the facts and circumstances may determine that hospitalization is necessary and may apply therefore, in an emergency situation, if a physician or qualified psychologist is not available, a police officer, who believes that failure to hospitalize a person would create a likelihood of serious harm by reason of mental illness may restrain such person and apply for the hospitalization of such person for a ten day period at a public facility or a private facility authorized for such purpose by the department. An application for hospitalization shall state the reasons for the restraint of such person and any other relevant information which may assist the admitting physician or physicians. Whenever practicable, prior to transporting such person, the applicant shall telephone or otherwise communicate with a facility to describe the circumstances and known clinical history and to determine whether the facility is the proper facility to receive such person and also to give notice of any restraint to be used and to determine whether such restraint is necessary.

NOTE:

This is the section that covers what is commonly known as the "PINK SLIP" commitment. In modern times, the chance of a physician or qualified psychologist not being available is remote. Officers should make themselves aware of the policy of their own department relative to this situation.

Definition:

Whoever, being under twenty-one years of age and not accompanied by a parent or legal guardian, knowingly possesses, transports or carries on his person, any alcohol or alcoholic beverages, shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars for a first offense and not more than one hundred and fifty dollars for a second or subsequent offense; provided, however, that this section shall not apply to a person between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one who knowingly possesses, transports or carries on his person, alcohol or alcoholic beverages in the course of his employment. A police officer may arrest without a warrant any person who violates this section. A conviction of a violation of this section shall be reported forthwith to the registrar of motor vehicles by the court if, at the time of the violation, the defendant was operating a motor vehicle upon a public way or a way to which the public had a right of access as invitees or licensees, and said registrar may suspend for not more than three months the license of such person to operate a motor vehicle.

Elements:

First: That the defendant knowingly or intentionally supplied, gave, or provided a beverage to someone, or allowed someone to possess a beverage on premises or property owned or controlled by the defendant;

Second: That the person to whom the beverage was furnished was under 21 years of age;

Third: That the beverage in question was alcohol or an alcoholic beverage; and Fourth: That the defendant knew that the beverage was alcohol or an alcoholic beverage.

Statute does not criminalize parent giving alcohol to own child in parent's own home. The legislative intent of G.L. c. 138, § 34 was to allow parents the freedom to decide whether they wish to provide alcohol to their own children without fear of criminal liability, "regardless whether that act is characterized as furnishing or delivering." Commonwealth v. Parent, 465 Mass. 395, 410 (2013).

Right of Arrest:

This misdemeanor has a statutory right of arrest, (in presence).

Note:

This section shall not apply to persons between the ages of 18 and 21 who knowingly possesses, transports or carries on his person, alcohol or alcoholic beverages in the course of his employment.

Alcohol as mentioned in this section would refer to drinking alcohol a.k.a. ethyl alcohol or ethanol. Alcoholic beverages are defined in section 1 of Chapter 138 "as any liquid intended for human consumption as a beverage and containing one half of one percent or more of alcohol by volume at sixty degrees Fahrenheit.

2. Defendant under age of 21 may be prosecuted under this statute. See Commonwealth v. Kneram, 63 Mass. App. Ct. 371, 375 (2005).

3. Knowledge of age is not required. "Generally, when age is a factor in an offense, the government is not required to prove that the offender knew the age of the person to whom age is relevant, whether that person be victim or collaborator." Commonwealth v. Montalvo, 50 Mass. App. Ct. 85, 87 (2000) (citing G.L. c. 138, § 34). The Supreme Judicial Court has held that the earlier versions of G.L. c. 138, § 34 imposed strict criminal liability with respect to the age of the person obtaining alcohol. Commonwealth v. Corey, 351 Mass. 331, 333 (1966); Commonwealth v. Gould, 158 Mass. 499, 507 (1893) ("Knowledge that the purchaser was a minor was not essential to the offense.").

4. "Furnish." This term is defined in G.L. c. 138, § 34 as "to knowingly or intentionally supply, give, or provide to or allow a person under 21 years of age except for the children and grandchildren of the person being charged to possess alcoholic beverages on premises or property owned or controlled by the person charged. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit any person licensed under this chapter from employing any person 18 years of age or older for the direct handling or selling of alcoholic beverages or alcohol. Notwithstanding the provisions of clause (14) of section 62 of chapter 149, a licensee under this chapter may employ a person under the age of 18 who does not directly handle, sell, mix or serve alcohol or alcoholic beverages."

5. "Alcohol." This term is defined in G.L. c. 138, § 1 as "all alcohol other than denatured alcohol or alcohol described in section three hundred and three A of chapter ninety-four." Section 303A of G.L. c. 94 provides:

"No person other than a registered druggist shall engage in the business of manufacturing, buying, selling, transporting, importing, exporting or dealing in methyl alcohol, or wood alcohol, so called, or any preparation, other than shellac varnish or shellac solvent or paint remover or varnish remover, used for manufacturing or commercial purposes which contains more than three per cent of methyl alcohol and is intended for use other than as a beverage, without being licensed so to do as provided in section three hundred and three B" (emphasis added).

6. "Alcoholic beverages." This term is defined in G.L. c. 138, § 1 as "any liquid intended for human consumption as a beverage and containing one half of one per cent or more of alcohol by volume at sixty degrees Fahrenheit."

Alcoholic Beverages; Rights of Arrest Under

and seize the said beverages or alcohol and any vessels and implements of manufacture or sale in the possession of such person and detain them until warrants can be procured against such person, and for the seizure of said beverages or alcohol, vessels and implements, under this chapter.

COMMONWEALTH vs. CHEVASSE WHITE

452 Mass. 133

A jury in the Superior Court convicted the defendant, Chevasse White, of unlawful possession of a firearm in violation of G. L. c. 269, § 10 (a).

Background. The charges against the defendant arose in connection with an apparent gun battle outside a building in the Jamaica Plain section of Boston that housed a laundromat and a car wash. Since sufficiency of the evidence is in issue and affects the challenged instruction as well, we summarize the trial testimony. An eyewitness, Alice McLaughlin, who was standing across the street from the building, heard numerous gunshots coming from the area of the car wash and saw people "diving on the ground, running for cover, hiding behind things." When the gunfire had died down, she saw two young black men in front of the laundromat. One of the men was holding a gun that she saw him put in the waistband of his pants. She described this man as wearing a "black Fubu jacket with white lettering on it." The men then walked toward the rear of the laundromat and car wash. At the time she saw the man with the gun, the witness was approximately twenty-five feet from the men, and her view of them was unobstructed.

Officer Edwin Guzman and his partner arrived at the scene in the immediate aftermath of the gunfire. They had been traveling on Washington Street in a police cruiser when they observed a man outside the car wash crouching down, nervously trying to signal them. When they stopped, the man told them that a shooting had just taken place and that the persons involved had run to the rear of the car wash. Guzman reported the shooting to the police operations division, and he and his partner headed on foot in the direction in which the men had fled. When they got to the rear of the car wash, they encountered the defendant and his cousin coming out of an exit door. The door was at the end of a narrow hallway that ran the length of the building.

The defendant was wearing a black jacket with the letters "FB" on the back. A pat-down of the defendant revealed that he was unarmed. The defendant and his cousin were brought to the front of the car wash, where McLaughlin, who by then had been interviewed by another officer, identified the man with the Fubu jacket as the man she had seen with the gun.

Approximately twenty minutes later, a working firearm was recovered from an air vent in the hallway from which the defendant and his cousin had exited. Another working firearm was found on a street near the car wash. No fingerprints were recovered from the weapons, however, and none of the bullets, bullet fragments, or shell casings from the scene could be linked to either weapon.

To sustain a conviction under G. L. c. 269, § 10 (a), the Commonwealth must prove that the defendant knowingly possessed a firearm without either being present in his residence or place of business or having in effect a license to carry firearms or a firearm identification card. The Commonwealth must prove that the gun the defendant possessed met the definition of a working firearm set forth in G. L. c. 140, § 121, that is, that it had a barrel less than sixteen inches long and was capable of discharging a bullet. G. L. c. 269, § 10 (a). Since McLaughlin did not describe the gun (and thereby potentially establish that the barrel was of the requisite length) or see the defendant fire it (and thereby potentially establish that it was capable of firing), the defendant could not be convicted unless the evidence was sufficient to establish that he had possessed one of the firearms recovered from the scene and later tested by the Commonwealth.

The evidence, and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, were sufficient to convict the defendant. An eyewitness observed a man, later identified as the defendant, holding a gun; the same man was seen coming from the hallway of the car wash, without the gun; a gun was discovered shortly thereafter in the area from which the defendant had recently emerged. A jury could reasonably infer that the defendant had placed the gun in the air vent while he was in the hallway.

License to Carry Class "A" and Class "B"
Chapter 140, Section 131

(a) A Class A license shall entitle a holder thereof to purchase, rent, lease, borrow, possess and carry: (i) firearms, including large capacity firearms, and feeding devices and ammunition therefor, for all lawful purposes, subject to such restrictions relative to the possession, use or carrying of firearms as the licensing authority deems proper; and (ii) rifles and shotguns, including large capacity weapons, and feeding devices and ammunition therefor, for all lawful purposes; provided, however, that the licensing authority may impose such restrictions relative to the possession, use or carrying of large capacity rifles and shotguns as it deems proper. A violation of a restriction imposed by the licensing authority under the provisions of this paragraph shall be cause for suspension or revocation and shall, unless otherwise provided, be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000; provided, however, that the provisions of section 10 of chapter 269 shall not apply to such violation.

Such club shall not permit shooting at targets that depict human figures, human effigies, human silhouettes or any human images thereof, except by public safety personnel performing in line with their official duties.

No large capacity weapon or large capacity feeding device shall be removed from the premises except for the purposes of: (i) transferring such firearm or feeding device to a licensed dealer; (ii) transporting such firearm or feeding device to a licensed gunsmith for repair; (iii) target, trap or skeet shooting on the premises of another club incorporated under the laws of the commonwealth and for transporting thereto; (iv) attending an exhibition or educational project or event that is sponsored by, conducted under the supervision of or approved by a public law enforcement agency or a nationally or state recognized entity that promotes proficiency in or education about semiautomatic weapons and for transporting thereto and therefrom; (v) hunting in accordance with the provisions of chapter 131; or (vi) surrendering such firearm or feeding device under the provisions of section 129D. Any large capacity weapon or large capacity feeding device kept on the premises of a lawfully incorporated shooting club shall, when not in use, be secured in a locked container, and shall be unloaded during any lawful transport. The clerk or other corporate officer of such club shall annually file a report with the colonel of state police and the commissioner of the department of criminal justice information services listing all large capacity weapons and large capacity feeding devices owned or possessed under such license. The colonel of state police or his designee, shall have the right to inspect all firearms owned or possessed by such club upon request during regular business hours and said colonel may revoke or suspend a club license for a violation of any provision of this chapter or chapter 269 relative to the ownership, use or possession of large capacity weapons or large capacity feeding devices.

(b) A Class B license shall entitle a holder thereof to purchase, rent, lease, borrow, possess and carry: (i) non-large capacity firearms and feeding devices and ammunition therefor, for all lawful purposes, subject to such restrictions relative to the possession, use or carrying of such firearm as the licensing authority deems proper; provided, however, that a Class B license shall not entitle the holder thereof to carry or possess a loaded firearm in a concealed manner in any public way or place; and provided further, that a Class B license shall not entitle the holder thereof to possess a large capacity firearm, except under a Class A club license issued under this section or under the direct supervision of a holder of a valid Class A license at an incorporated shooting club or licensed shooting range; and (ii) rifles and shotguns, including large capacity rifles and shotguns, and feeding devices and ammunition therefor, for all lawful purposes; provided, however, that the licensing authority may impose such restrictions relative to the possession, use or carrying of large capacity rifles and shotguns as he deems proper. A violation of a restriction provided under this paragraph, or a restriction imposed by the licensing authority under the provisions of this paragraph, shall be cause for suspension or revocation and shall, unless otherwise provided, be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000; provided, however, that the provisions of section 10 of chapter 269 shall not apply to such violation.

Electrical Weapons-Sale or Possession

Chapter 140, Section 131J

The United States Supreme Court remanded the Caetano case from Massachusetts that and found that an absolute ban on stun guns was unlawful. The SJC in Ramirez found that an absolute ban on stun guns violated the Second Amendment. On July 3, 2018, the Governor enacted the “Red Flag” legislation which establishes that stun guns will be regulated like firearms. The provisions related to these new regulations are contained in in the section under “Red Flag” legislation.

Electronic Control Weapons

Commonwealth v. Jorge Ramirez, 479 Mass. 331 (2018): The SJC held the absolute prohibition against civilian possession of stun guns pursuant to G.L. c. 140, § 131J, violates the Second Amendment and therefore the complaint against the defendant must be dismissed. The SJC also determined that the possession of stun guns may be regulated, but not absolutely banned. “Because this will invalidate the Legislature's absolute ban and leave no lesser restriction on the possession of stun guns in its place, and because the SJC recognizes that the Legislature may wish to do what it cannot (revise the statute in a manner that will preserve its constitutionality), the SJC will stay the judgment shall be stayed for sixty days after the date of the issuance of the rescript in this case in order to allow the Legislature adequate time to amend the statute in light of this opinion, if it so chooses.”

Elements:

NO person shall:

1. Sell, offer for sale, or possess
2. Portable device or weapon from which an electrical current, impulse, wave or beam may be directed
3. Which current, impulse, wave or beam is designed to incapacitate temporarily, injure or kill.

Right of arrest:

This statute is a misdemeanor with a statutory right of arrest.

Note:

The use of this weapon on a person would be assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, a 10 year. Felony under Chapter 265 Section 15A.

Security of Weapons: Criminal penalties:
Chapter 140, Section 131L:

Section 131L. (a) It shall be unlawful to store or keep any firearm, rifle or shotgun including, but not limited to, large capacity weapons, or machine gun in any place unless such weapon is secured in a locked container or equipped with a tamper-resistant mechanical lock or other safety device, properly engaged so as to render such weapon inoperable by any person other than the owner or other lawfully authorized user. For purposes of this section, such weapon shall not be deemed stored or kept if carried by or under the control of the owner or other lawfully authorized user.

(b) A violation of this section shall be punished, in the case of a firearm, rifle or shotgun that is not a large capacity weapon, by a fine of not less than $1000 nor more than $7,500 or by imprisonment for not more than 11/2 years or by both such fine and imprisonment and, in the case of a large capacity weapon or machine gun, by a fine of not less than $2,000 nor more than $15,000 or by imprisonment for not less than 1 1/2 years nor more than 12 years or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(c) A violation of this section shall be punished, in the case of a rifle or shotgun that is not a large capacity weapon and the weapon was stored or kept in a place where a person younger than 18 years of age who does not possess a valid firearm identification card issued under section 129B may have access without committing an unforeseeable trespass, by a fine of not less than $2,500 nor more than $15,000 or by imprisonment for not less than 11/2 years nor more than 12 years or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(e) A violation of the provisions of this section shall be evidence of wanton or reckless conduct in any criminal or civil proceeding if a person under the age of 18 who was not a trespasser or was a foreseeable trespasser acquired access to a weapon, unless such person possessed a valid firearm identification card issued under section 129B and was permitted by law to possess such weapon, and such access results in the personal injury to or the death of any person.

(f) This section shall not apply to the storage or keeping of any firearm, rifle or shotgun with matchlock, flintlock, percussion cap or similar type of ignition system manufactured in or prior to the year 1899, or to any replica of any such firearm, rifle or shotgun if such replica is not designed or redesigned for using rimfire or conventional centerfire fixed ammunition.

Chapter 140, Section 131L:

JURY INSTRUCTION

IMPROPER STORAGE OF A FIREARM

G.L. c. 140, § 131L

The defendant is charged with improperly storing a (firearm) (rifle)(shotgun).

In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove three things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant stored or kept a (firearm) (rifle) (shotgun);

Second: That the defendant was not carrying the (firearm) (rifle) (shotgun) or did not have the (firearm) (rifle) (shotgun) under (his) (her) immediate control; and

Third: That the (firearm) (rifle) (shotgun) was not secured in one of two ways — either by storing the (firearm) (rifle) (shotgun) in a locked container, or with a properly engaged tamper-resistant mechanical lock by any person other than the owner or other lawfully authorized user.

To qualify as a securely locked container, the container must be capable of being unlocked only by means of a key, combination, or other similar means.

Examples of securely locked containers may include safes, (firearm) (rifle) (shotgun) boxes, locked cabinets, gun cases, and lock boxes. In determining whether a particular storage container is a securely locked container, you may consider all the circumstances presented by the evidence including the nature of the locking mechanism, whether the container was itself within a place, a compartment, or a container that was itself locked and alarmed, and whether under all the circumstances it was secured adequately to deter all but the most persistent persons from gaining access.

NOTES:

1. A weapon not stored if “carried” or “under the control.” The weapon shall not be deemed stored or kept if carried by or under the control of the owner or other lawfully authorized user. G.L. c. 140, § 131L(a).

“Carried” requires actual physical possession of the firearm, and “under the control” requires that a person be sufficiently nearby the firearm to prevent immediately its unauthorized use.

Commonwealth v. Reyes, 464 Mass. 245, 258 n.19 (2013), citing Commonwealth v. Patterson, 79 Mass. App. Ct. 316, 319 (2011).

Com. v. Reyes, 464 Mass. 245, 982 N.E.2d 504 (2013)

Statute governing offense of unlawful storage of a firearm, stating that it was unlawful to store or keep any firearm in any place unless such weapon is secured in a locked container, was not unconstitutionally vague, although term “locked container” was not defined; legislative history, purpose of statute to prevent accidental injuries and deaths, and secondary materials such as Massachusetts and Federal statutes regulating the storage of firearms, showed existence of a common understanding of acceptable containers, including safes, weapon boxes, locked cabinets, gun cases, lock boxes, and locked trunks of vehicles.

*It shall be unlawful to store or keep any firearm, rifle or shotgun including, but not limited to, large capacity weapons, or machine gun in any place unless such weapon is secured in a locked container**508 or equipped with a tamper-resistant mechanical lock or other safety device, properly engaged so as to render such weapon inoperable by any person other than the owner or other lawfully authorized user. ## REYES-PATTERSON

Statutory and regulatory references to acceptable containers include safes, weapon boxes, locked cabinets, gun cases, lock boxes, and locked trunks of vehicles. Municipal Police Institute, Inc., states that a securely locked container can include a soft gun case secured with a padlock, “as well as an expensive gun safe,” and that even “glass front furniture style gun cabinets are acceptable providing that they are capable of being locked.”

Witness testimony, that defendant failed to lock glove compartment when he placed his handgun in the glove compartment and left the vehicle, was sufficient to show that defendant stored his loaded firearm in an unlocked container within a motor vehicle, as required to support conviction for unlawfully storing a firearm.

Possession of a Firearm, Rifle, or Shotgun,
Not at Home or Office
Chapter 269, Section 10(a)

JURY INSTRUCTION

POSSESSION OF A FIREARM WITHOUT A LICENSE OUTSIDE HOME OR BUSINESS

The offense found in G.L. c. 269, § 10(a) is commonly referred to as “carrying” a firearm, to distinguish it from the offense of “possession” of a firearm without a firearm ID card, found in § 10(h). The name is no longer really accurate, since St. 1990, c. 511 (effective January 2, 1991) eliminated movement of the firearm as an element of § 10(a).

I. FIREARM WITH BARREL UNDER 16 INCHES

The defendant is charged under section 10(a) of chapter 269 of our General Laws with knowingly possessing a firearm unlawfully. In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove the following (three) (four) things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant possessed a firearm (or) (that he [she] had a firearm under his [her] control in a vehicle);

Second: That what the defendant (possessed) (or) (had under his [her] control in a vehicle) met the legal definition of a “firearm”; (and)

Third: That the defendant knew that he (she) (possessed a firearm) (or) (had a firearm under his [her] control in a vehicle).

evidence of one of the statutory exceptions, use one of the following:

A. If there is evidence that it was in the defendant’s residence or place of business.
and

Fourth: that the defendant possessed the firearm outside of his (her) residence or place of business. A person’s “residence” or “place of business” does not include common areas of an apartment or office building, but only areas that are under that person’s exclusive control.

B. If there is evidence that the defendant had a license to carry firearms.

and Fourth: that the defendant did not have a valid license to possess a firearm outside his (her) home or office.

C. If there is evidence that the defendant was exempt from the licensing requirements of our General Laws c. 278, § 7 places on the defendant the burden of producing evidence of one of these exemptions; the Commonwealth must then disprove beyond a reasonable doubt the applicability of the claimed exemption. Until there is such evidence, the exemptions are not at issue. Commonwealth v. Seay, 376 Mass. 735, 738, 383 N.E.2d 828, 830 (1978) (former statute); Commonwealth v. Jones, 372 Mass. 403, 406-407, 361 N.E.2d 1308, 1310-1311 (1977) (same); Commonwealth v. Davis, 359 Mass. 758, 270 N.E.2d 925 (1971) (same); Commonwealth v. Baker, 10 Mass. App. Ct. 852, 853, 407 N.E.2d 398, 399 (1980) (lack of license need not be charged in complaint).

A “firearm” is defined in our law as: “a pistol, revolver or other weapon . . . loaded or unloaded, from which a shot or bullet can be discharged and . . . the length of [whose] barrel is less than sixteen inches . . .”

That definition can be broken down into three requirements: First, it must be a weapon; Second, it must be capable of discharging a shot or bullet; and Third, it must have a barrel length of less than 16 inches. The term “barrel length” refers to “that portion of a firearm . . . through which a shot or bullet is driven, guided or stabilized, and [includes] the chamber.”

G.L. c. 140, § 121. Commonwealth v. Williams, 422 Mass. 111, 120, 661 N.E.2d 617, 624 (1996) (not necessary that firearm be loaded); Commonwealth v. Bartholomew, 326 Mass. 218, 219, 93 N.E.2d 551, 552 (1950) (same); Commonwealth v. Tuitt, 393 Mass. 801, 810, 473 N.E.2d 1103, 1110 (1985) (jury can determine from inspection that “firearm”); Commonwealth v. Fancy, 349 Mass. 196, 204, 207 N.E.2d 276, 282 (1965) (same); Commonwealth v. Sampson, 383 Mass. 750, 753, 422 N.E.2d 450, 452 (1981); Commonwealth v. Sperrazza, 372 Mass. 667, 670, 363 N.E.2d 673, 675 (1977) (testimony about “revolver” or “handgun” will support inference that barrel was under 16 inches) to prove that the defendant knew that the item met the legal definition of a firearm.

Right of Arrest:

This is a five (5) year felony arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

FIREARM RIFLE SHOTGUN NOT HOME OR WORK

Note:

- A conviction under this section has a one year mandatory minimum sentence..
- No person having in effect a license to carry firearms for any purpose (such as hunting, target, employment, etc.) issued under c. 140, sec. 131 or sec. 131F shall be deemed to be in violation of this section.
- The provisions of this subsection shall not affect the licensing requirements of c. 140, 129C.
- The burden of proof relative to being licensed is on the defendant, c. 278, sec. 7.

This subsection is not applicable to:

- Flare Pistols - Comm. v. Samson, 422 N.E. 2d 450
- BB Pistols - Comm. v. Rhodes, 451 N.E. 1151
- CO2 Powered Pellet Pistols - Comm. v. Fenton, 478 N.E. 2d 949

II. RIFLE OR SHOTGUN

The defendant is charged under section 10(a) of chapter 269 of our General Laws with knowingly possessing a rifle or shotgun unlawfully. In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove the following (three) (four) things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant possessed a rifle or shotgun (or) (that he [she] had a rifle or shotgun under his [her] control in a vehicle);

Second: That what the defendant (possessed) (or) (had under his [her] control in a vehicle) met the legal definition of a “rifle” or a “shotgun”; (and)

Third: That the defendant knew that he (she) (possessed a rifle or shotgun) (or) (had a rifle or shotgun under his [her] control in a vehicle.

If there is evidence of one of the statutory exceptions, use one of the following:

- A. If there is evidence that it was in the defendant's residence or place of business. and Fourth: that the defendant possessed the rifle or shotgun outside of his (her) residence or place of business. A person's "residence" or "place of business" does not include common areas of an apartment or rtment or office building, but only areas that are under that person's exclusive control.
- B. If there is evidence that the defendant had a license to carry firearms.
and Fourth: that the defendant did not have a valid license to carry a firearm.
- C. If there is evidence that the defendant was exempt from the licensing requirement.
and Fourth: that the defendant did not qualify for one of the exemptions in the law that are a substitute for having a license to carry a firearm.

Commonwealth v. Chukwunoso Obiora 2013

Constructive Possession

:The Court found that defendant could be charged with constructive possession of the firearm and ammunition. The defendant argued the vehicle belonged to his girlfriend and that Trooper Mansi did not recover the firearm from his person. Trooper Mansi observed the firearm before she entered the vehicle and recovered the ammunition under the front passenger seat where the defendant was sitting. Although the car belonged to the defendant's girlfriend, there was sufficient evidence to support that Obiora had possession of the car for the previous twenty-four hours. Based on all these factors, it is reasonable for a fact finder to infer that Obiora, "had knowledge of the weapon [and ammunition], coupled with the ability and intention to exercise dominion and control over it."

Com. v. Powell, 459 Mass. 572, 573–74, 946 N.E.2d 114, 118 (2011)

On January 30, 2009, after a jury-waived trial in the Central Division of the Boston Municipal Court Department, the defendant, Aaron Powell,<sup>2</sup> was convicted of possession of a firearm<sup>3</sup> without a firearm identification card (FID card), in violation of G.L. c. 269, § 10 (h ); carrying a loaded firearm without a license, in violation of G.L. c. 269, § 10 (n ); carrying a firearm without a license, in violation of G.L. c. 269, § 10 (a ); and *574 resisting arrest, in violation of G.L. c. 268, § 32B.<sup>4</sup> He appeals from the denial of his pretrial motion to suppress evidence,<sup>5</sup> contending that the firearm recovered was the result of an unlawful seizure of his person under art. 14 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights.<sup>6</sup> In addition, he contends that there was insufficient evidence to support his convictions of resisting arrest and unlawful possession of a firearm, and that his counsel furnished him with constitutionally ineffective representation by failing to file a motion to suppress a statement made by him. Last, the defendant challenges his firearm convictions under the Second Amendment to the United States Constitution. We transferred the case here on our own motion. We affirm the denial of the defendant's motion to suppress and affirm his convictions.

Possession of Firearm (etc.)
Without A Firearm Identification Card
Chapter 269, Section 10 (h)

POSSESSION OF A FIREARM

The defendant is charged with unlawfully possessing a firearm.

Section 10(h) of chapter 269 of our General Laws provides as follows:

“Whoever . . . possesses . . . a firearm . . .

without complying with the requirements [of law] relating to [a] firearm identification card . . .

shall be punished . . . .”

In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove (three) (four) things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant possessed an item;

Second: That the item meets the legal definition of a “firearm”; (and)

Third: That the defendant knew that he (she) possessed that firearm.

If there is evidence of one of the statutory exceptions, use one of the following:

And Fourth: A. If there is evidence that the defendant had a firearm ID card.

that the defendant did not have a valid firearm ID card.

And Fourth: that the B. If there is evidence that the defendant was exempt.

defendant did not qualify for one of the exemptions in the law that are a substitute for having a valid firearm ID card.

See Instruction 3.160 (License or Authority).

G.L. c. 278, § 7; Commonwealth v. Jones, 372 Mass. 403, 406-407, 361 N.E.2d 1308, 1310-1311 (1977). The issuance of firearm identification cards is governed by G.L. c. 140, §§ 129B-129D. Section 129B also lists a number of exemptions from the requirement of a firearms identification card. See also Op. A.G. No. 86/87-4

(October 31, 1986) (18 U.S.C. § 926A provides a defense to a charge under §10[h] for a non-resident traveling through the Commonwealth with an unloaded and inaccessible handgun who is in compliance with the firearms laws of the states of origin and destination).

Elements:

Whoever,

1. Owns, or
2. possesses, or
3. transfers possession of a
4. firearm or a
5. rifle or a
6. shotgun or
7. ammunition
8. without complying with c. 140, sec. 129C relative to the F.I.D. card
9. (or without being the holder of a valid license to carry firearms)

Right of Arrest:

This is a misdemeanor with a statutory right of arrest in presence.

Commonwealth v Truong

The dictionary definitions of “cartridge” and “shell” indicate that the terms “cartridge case” and “shell casing” are both used to describe the item that contains the primer and charge for firearms ammunition

The statute criminalizes possession of cartridges and their component parts, including “cartridge cases, primers (igniter), bullets or propellant powder.”

Commonwealth v Johnson, 461 Mass. 44 (2011)

Defendant's conviction of unlawful possession of ammunition was duplicative of his conviction of unlawful possession of a loaded firearm arising from same conduct of possessing ammunition loaded inside handgun, in violation of prohibition on double jeopardy, requiring vacation of lesser included offense of unlawful possession of ammunition; to convict defendant of unlawful possession of a loaded firearm, commonwealth was required to prove that defendant knowingly possessed firearm loaded with ammunition and met legal requirements of a firearm, and to convict defendant of unlawful possession of ammunition, commonwealth was required to prove that defendant knowingly possessed ammunition that met legal definition of ammunition

COMMONWEALTH v BROWN, 91 Mass. App. Ct. 286 (2017)

During an inventory search of the car that the defendant had been driving, a State trooper discovered a loaded handgun. Based on this, the defendant was indicted on two related counts: unlawful possession of a firearm, and unlawful possession of a loaded firearm. See G. L. c. 269, § 10(a) & (n). A Superior Court jury convicted him of those charges.

His appeal primarily focuses on a question of law that the Supreme Judicial Court flagged without answering: "whether, to be convicted of unlawful possession of a loaded firearm, a defendant must know that the firearm he possessed was loaded." Commonwealth v. Jefferson, 461 Mass. 821 (2012). The Commonwealth maintains that proof of such knowledge is not required. Although we are not unsympathetic to the textual arguments on which the Commonwealth relies, existing case law requires us to conclude that the Commonwealth must prove that the defendant knew that the gun was loaded. We further conclude that the evidence here was legally insufficient to establish such knowledge, and that the defendant therefore is entitled to a judgment of acquittal on the indictment for unlawfully possessing a loaded firearm.

Firearms on School Property

Chapter 269: Section 10 (j)

Definition:

(j) For the purposes of this paragraph, "firearm" shall mean any pistol, revolver, rifle or smoothbore arm from which a shot, bullet or pellet can be discharged.

Whoever, not being a law enforcement officer and notwithstanding any license obtained by the person pursuant to chapter 140, carries on the person a firearm, loaded or unloaded, or other dangerous weapon in any building or on the grounds of any elementary or secondary school, college or university without the written authorization of the board or officer in charge of the elementary or secondary school, college or university shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years or both. A law enforcement officer may arrest without a warrant and detain a person found carrying a firearm in violation of this paragraph.

Any officer in charge of an elementary or secondary school, college or university or any faculty member or administrative officer of an elementary or secondary school, college or university that fails to report a violation of this paragraph shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not more than $500.

Elements:

Right of Arrest:

A law enforcement officer may arrest without a warrant and detain a person found carrying a firearm in otherwise it is a misdemeanor with not statutory right of arrest. This act could, however, amount to a breach of the peace in certain circumstances.

Note:

Clearly if the suspects were carrying a handgun without a license to carry, OR carrying a rifle or shotgun without a license to carry or a firearms identification card, we would arrest and charge him with the felony of Chapter 269: Section 10 (a)

Notice also that it is a misdemeanor if the officer-in-charge fails to report any violation of this sub-paragraph.

COMMONWEALTH vs. DOUGLAS T. SAYERS 438 Mass. 238

CORDY, J. In this case we hold that the prohibition against carrying a firearm on school grounds, set forth in G. L. c. 269, § 10 (j), applies to BB guns as well as other firearms. The only other element of § 10 (j) at issue in this case is whether the BB gun that the defendants possessed was a firearm as defined in § 10 (j). It was. As noted above, that definition of "firearm" includes any pistol or smoothbore arm "from which a shot, bullet or pellet can be discharged by whatever means" (emphasis added). G. L. c. 269, § 10 (j). This definition clearly includes a BB gun regardless whether it is specifically identified by name.

(chgd. by L. 1987, chap. 43, eff. 8/3/87)

Right of Arrest:

This is a three year felony and therefore would be arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Note:

Black's Law Dictionary defines lascivious as "tending to excite lust" or "lewd." It defines lewd as "obscene."

This crime is closely similar to indecent exposure and has been applied primarily to indecent exposure in front of, and sexual conduct with children. Further, the court has held that the defendant's act must be committed "in such a manner as to produce alarm or shock.":

In Comm. v. Fitta, 461 N.E. 2nd 820 (1984), the court held that if the defendant "intentionally, indecently, and offensively exposed himself . . . to a child of tender (under 12 years of age) years, without necessity or reasonable excuse, and in such a way as to produce alarm . . . (the defendant would be) guilty.

Chapter 272, s. 53 = misdemeanor.

JURY INSTRUCTION

OPEN AND GROSS LEWDNESS AND LASCIVIOUS BEHAVIOR

Elements

First: That the defendant exposed his (her) (genitals) (buttocks) (or)(female breasts) to one or more persons;

Second: That the defendant did so intentionally; In a prosecution for intentional exposure to a single person in a private setting, the following element may be rephrased by deleting the word "public" and replacing the word "others" with "another person."

Third: That the defendant did so "openly," that is, either he (she) intended public exposure, or he (she) recklessly disregarded a public exposure, to others who might be offended by such conduct;

Fourth: That the defendant's act was done in such a way as to produce alarm or shock; and Fifth: That one or more persons were in fact alarmed or shocked by the defendant's thus exposing himself (herself).

Commonwealth v. Fitta, 391 Mass. 394, (1984)

At approximately 9:25 P.M., the defendant was sitting in his parked car. Two ten-year-old boys were playing nearby. The defendant called out to one of them, "You have nice legs," and then asked what he was doing. When the children approached the defendant's vehicle, the defendant exposed his penis to the boys. To convict a defendant of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, the Commonwealth must prove that the conduct is committed in "such a way as to produce alarm" or shock. This element of the crime of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior is not required for indecent exposure. Thus, if the Commonwealth were to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant "intentionally, indecently, and offensively expos[ed] himself . . . to [a child] of tender years, without necessity or reasonable excuse, and in such a way as to produce alarm . . . [the defendant would be] guilty of gross lewdness and lascivious behavior." See Commonwealth v. Adams, 389 Mass. 265, 271 (1983); The defendant argues that, since G. L. c. 272, Section 53 ("indecent exposure"), and G. L. c. 272, Section 16 ("open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior"), could, on the facts of this case, be used to punish identical conduct, the disparity of their sentencing provisions makes them "constitutionally vague." [\[Note 4\]](#) Since Section 16 requires proof of an element not required for indecent exposure, the defendant's argument fails.

Commonwealth v. Maguire, 476 Mass. 156 (2017):

A MBTA detective observed the defendant rub his penis with his hand over the outside of his pant for about 30 seconds while sitting across from a college age female on the train. There were about 25 people on the platform and three women were sitting on a bench about five feet away from the defendant. The MBTA detective moved to see what the defendant was doing and from his vantage point he saw the defendant, who was still facing the women with his penis exposed. The detective stated that he was "disgusted and concerned that the women on the bench were being victimized." The issue on appeal concerned whether there was sufficient evidence to establish open, gross, lewd and lascivious behavior.

Pursuant to G.L. c. 272, § 16, open, gross, lewd and lascivious behavior requires the following elements:

1. Exposed genitals, breasts or buttocks
2. Intentionally
3. Openly or with reckless disregard of public exposure
4. In a manner to produce shock or alarm
5. Thereby actually shocking or alarming one or more persons.

The SJC found that there was insufficient evidence to establish that the defendant's conduct caused any person shock and alarm. As a result, the open and gross, lewdness and lascivious conviction was reversed. The SJC clarified in this decision the "shock" or "alarm" requirement in G.L. c. 272, § 16. With regard to the first part of its decision, the SJC held that the defendant's actions in this case do not rise to the level of open, gross, lewd and lascivious behavior. Rather the MBTA detective was the person who observed the defendant expose himself and he testified that he was 'disgusted' and concerned for others." However, there is no indication that anyone else personally experienced shock or alarm," key requirements to satisfy this charge. There was insufficient evidence that the police detective himself was "in fact" subjectively alarmed or shocked by the defendant's conduct. See Commonwealth v. Botev, 79 Mass. App. Ct. 281, 287 (2011).

The SJC announced that in future cases, it will be incumbent on the Commonwealth to demonstrate not only subjective "shock" or "alarm" on the part of a victim, but also that the victim's reaction was objectively reasonable. "A person's particular reaction — or the particular words used to characterize his or her emotional response — to the misconduct will not suffice to support a conviction under G.L. c. 272, § 16.

Dissemination of Obscenity to Minors

Chapter 272, Section 28

Section 28. Whoever disseminates to a minor any matter harmful to minors, as defined in section thirty-one, knowing it to be harmful to minors, or has in his possession any such matter with the intent to disseminate the same to minors, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years or in a jail or house of correction for not more than two and one-half years, or by a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than ten thousand dollars for the first offense, not less than five thousand nor more than twenty thousand dollars for the second offense, or not less than ten thousand nor more than thirty thousand dollars for the third and subsequent offenses, or by both such fine and imprisonment. A prosecution commenced under this section shall not be continued without a finding nor placed on file. It shall be a defense in any prosecution under this section that the defendant was in a parental or guardianship relationship with the minor. It shall also be a defense in any prosecution under this section if the evidence proves that the defendant was a bona fide school, museum or library, or was acting in the course of his employment as an employee of such organization or of a retail outlet affiliated with and serving the educational purpose of such organization.

Commonwealth v. Mienkowski, 91 Mass. App. Ct. 668 (2017): After a jury trial, the defendant was convicted of two counts of aggravated rape of a child, G. L. c. 265, c. § 23A, and one count each of posing a child in a state of nudity, G. L. c. 272, § 29A(a), and dissemination of matter harmful to minors, G. L. c. 272, § 28. The victim was thirteen when the rapes occurred and fourteen at the time of the incidents underlying the posing and dissemination charges. On appeal, the defendant argued that the dissemination conviction was based on a video the defendant recorded of himself masturbating and sent to the victim. The defendant challenges the conviction and argues that he cannot be convicted of disseminating "a video of something that the legislature has determined a minor is permitted to see and do in person." Additionally, he argues that the video qualifies as free speech.

The Legislature has defined "harmful to minors" as follows:

"matter is harmful to minors if it is obscene or, if taken as a whole, it (1) describes or represents nudity, sexual conduct or sexual excitement, so as to appeal predominantly to the prurient interest of minors; (2) is patently contrary to prevailing standards of adults in the county where the offense was committed as to suitable material for such minors; and (3) lacks serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value for minors."

The masturbation video unmistakably depicts both "nudity" and "sexual conduct." The video thus meets the just-stated statutory test if it "appeal[s] predominantly to the prurient interest of minors" and "is patently contrary to prevailing standards."

The court concluded that rational jurors could find that the video "appeal[s] predominantly to the prurient interest of minors" and "is patently contrary to prevailing standards."

The record illustrates how such material can be harmful to minors.

(d) In a prosecution under this section, a minor shall be deemed incapable of consenting to any conduct of the defendant for which said defendant is being prosecuted.

(e) Pursuant to this section, proof that dissemination of any visual material that contains a representation or reproduction of sexual conduct or of any posture or exhibition in a state of nudity involving the use of a child who is under eighteen years of age was for a bona fide scientific, medical, or educational purpose for a bona fide school, museum, or library may be considered as evidence of a lack of lascivious intent.

3. a school or other assembly of people
4. met for a lawful purpose

Right of Arrest:

There is no statutory right of arrest. However, with a complaint this would be a breach of the peace.

Alcohol on Public School Premises

Chapter 272, Section 40A

Elements:

1. Gives, sells, delivers, or has in his possession
2. any alcoholic beverage
3. except for medicinal purposes
4. in any public school building or any premises used for public school purposes or under the charge of school committee or other public board or officer.

Right of Arrest:

This is a thirty (30) day misdemeanor with no statutory right of arrest.

Note:

This can be authorized during non-school hours by a school committee if the public or nonprofit organization is properly licensed under C. 138, s. 14.

Disturbing the Peace

Chapter 272, Section 53

Disturbing the peace is one of the crimes listed in Chapter 272, section 53.

The elements of the crime have been loosely defined by case law. In the case of Commonwealth v. David Orlando, 359 N.E. 2d 310, (1977) the court said, "Disturbing the peace thus imposes a two-pronged test by proscribing activities which most people would find to be unreasonably disruptive and which do infringe on some one's right to be undisturbed; the first prong is normative and protects potential defendants from prosecutions based on individual sensitivities and the second prong that the crime has a victim and thus subjects potential defendant to criminal prosecution only when their activities have impact. A more specific standard is impractical because the conduct proscribed by this law necessarily varies according to its location and time."

As a result of that decision, most people that dealt with this section of the law felt that a civilian complainant or witness was required to successfully prosecute a disturbing the peace charge.

That requirement, if it ever existed, clearly ended with the case of Commonwealth v. Piscopo, 11 Mass. App. Ct., 414 N.E. 2d 630, (1981). In that case, the court said, "There was evidence that . . . the defendant was one of the group of twelve to fifteen people, male and female, who participated in yelling loudly and throwing beer bottles and cans on a public street in a residential neighborhood and that those acts were such as would tend to annoy all good citizens. The jury could also have inferred from the testimony that the police were called to the scene that residents of the neighborhood were annoyed."

There was no civilian complainant or witness involved in the Piscopo decision.

Police officers are often required to answer repeat radio calls of the group disturbance type.

Disturbing the peace could be the appropriate charge in many cases.

Disturbing the peace, like most misdemeanors, must be committed in the officer's presence to be arrestable. It has a statutory right to arrest under c. 272 sec. 54, if the offense is in a public way or other public place (and of course in the officer's presence). However, disturbing the peace is by definition a breach of the peace and would be arrestable in an officer's presence without the public way or other public place requirement. People have lawfully been arrested for disturbing the peace in their own home see Comm. v. Mullins, 31 Mass App Ct 954 (1991).

Training Bulletin 14-09
December 22, 2009

The purpose of this training bulletin is to update officers on recent changes to Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 272, §53 involving the crimes of Disorderly Conduct and Disturbing the Peace.

The changes in the law only relate to fines and imprisonment and distinguish between first time offenders and second or subsequent offenders.

The punishment for violating G.L. c. 272, §53 Disorderly Conduct or Disturbing the Peace is as follows:

- • First Offense:
  - ○ No longer punishable by imprisonment;
  - ○ First time offenders shall be punished by a fine of not more than $150
- • Second or Subsequent Offense:
  - ○ Punishable by imprisonment in a jail or house of correction for not more than 6 months, or
  - ○ By a fine of not more than $200, or
  - ○ By both such fine and imprisonment

These changes do not alter rights of arrest for the officer pursuant to G.L. 272 s54 which allows officers to arrest without a warrant any individual who commits the crime of Disorderly Conduct or Disturbing the Peace in a public way or other public place.

Officers should charge Disorderly Conduct Subsequent Offense and Disturbing the Peace Subsequent Offense for individuals who have prior convictions for these offenses and should specify the date of the prior conviction.

Training Bulletin 10-03
(Issued April 29, 2003)

DISORDERLY CONDUCT: A TOUR OF THE JUDICIAL CONSTRUCTION SITE

A frequently used, but constitutionally weak statute, M.G.L. c. 272, s. 53, can be traced to colonial and provincial acts. It is in need of legislative revision, but has been saved by judicial construction. This Training Bulletin is a tour of that construction site.

The definition of disorderly includes only those individuals who,

- "with purpose to cause public inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk thereof...engage in fighting or threatening, or in violent or tumultuous behavior; or
- create a hazardous or physically offensive condition by any act which serves no legitimate purpose of the actor."

Public is defined as "affecting or likely to affect persons in a place to which the public or a substantial group has access." The public element of the offense is readily satisfied where the prohibited conduct takes place on a public street or by the side of a highway. It may also be satisfied where the disturbance takes place in a more secluded environment, but only if members of the public are likely to be affected. Such a place would include the public area of a police station, or a public alley, but not in a car parked fifty feet from the street, up a driveway and on a lawn of a house. It would include stores, apartment houses, or theaters, a dormitory and abutting plaza, but not a backyard in a single-family house surrounded by an opaque fence. It may occur on purely private property, however, it must be shown that the conduct affected or was likely to affect persons on an adjacent or nearby place to which the public or a substantial group has access. Nothing less than a conscious disregard of a substantial and unjustifiable risk of public nuisance will suffice for liability. The "lewd, wanton, and lascivious" offense of s. 53 requires the public element to be proven. The "accosting and annoying" provision has been held to extend to conduct or language amounting to threatening activity that has only a personal and private impact, as well as a public one. Activity that involves protest or other expressive activities with a legitimate purpose cannot be prosecuted as disorderly.

In order to arrest for disorderly under s. 54, the crime must occur in and officer's presence, and in a public way or other public place.

Disorderly Person

Chapter 272, Section 53

Elements:

Whoever

1. with purpose to cause public annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk thereof, he:
  - a. engages in fighting or threatening, or in violent or tumultuous behavior or
  - b. creates a hazardous or physically offensive condition by any act which serves no legitimate purpose of the actor

Right of Arrest:

If committed in an officer's presence AND on a public way or other public place then there is a statutory right of arrest under ch. 272, section 54.

Disorderly person is also arrestable if committed in an officer's presence since it amounts to a breach of the peace.

Note:

The court has held that the only words that are considered criminal under this statute are "fighting words" which by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to excite an immediate breach of the peace.

If prosecution is under element (c), the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the hazardous or physically offensive condition was created by an act which serves no legitimate purpose of the actor. Com. V. Feigenbaum, 536 N.E. 2nd 325 (1989).

Indecent Exposure

Chapter 272, Section 53

Definition:

Exposing to the view of people the uncovered body in an indecent manner.

Elements:

1. Exposing to the view of people (if the intentional act of lewd exposure is offensive to one or more persons, it is sufficient)
2. the uncovered body
3. in an indecent manner

Right of Arrest:

This 6 month misdemeanor is arrestable (in public way or other public place) in presence. This crime has a statutory right of arrest -- Chapter 272, Section 54.

Note:

This crime may be committed in the defendant's home while he is alone if he intentionally exposes himself to a person outside his home.

Jury Instruction on INDECENT EXPOSURE

The defendant is charged with indecent exposure. In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove three things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant exposed his (her) (genitals) to one or more persons;

Second: That the defendant did so intentionally; and

Third: That one or more persons were offended by the defendant's thus exposing himself (herself).NOTE: 1. Limited to exposure of genitalia. The misdemeanor of indecent exposure (G.L. c. 272, § 53) is applicable only to exposure of the genitalia, and not to exposure of the genital area, pubic hair, buttocks, or female breasts. Commonwealth v. Arthur, 420 Mass. 535, 650 N.E.2d 787 (1995). By contrast, the separate felony offense of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior (G.L. c. 272, § 16), includes the intentional exposure of genitalia, buttocks, or female breasts, but has the additional element that it must be done in such a way as to produce actual alarm or shock. See Commonwealth v. Quinn, 439 Mass 492, 789 N.E.2d 138 (2003); Commonwealth v. Fitta, 391 Mass. 394, 396, 461 N.E.2d 820, 822 (1984) (unlike open and gross lewdness, the crime of indecent exposure does not require that it be done in such a way as to produce alarm or shock); Commonwealth v. Broadland, 315 Mass. 20, 21-22, 51 N.E.2d 961, 962 (1943) (indecent exposure involves "an intentional act of lewd exposure, offensive to one or more persons"); Commonwealth v. Bishop, 296 Mass. 459, 462, 6 N.E.2d 369, 370 (1937) (offense need not be in public place or involve exposure to more than one person)

COMMONWEALTH vs. RAYMOND L. BLACKMER, III.
77 Mass. App. Ct. 474 (2009)

Lewdness. Open and Gross Lewdness and Lascivious Behavior. Practice, Criminal, Required finding, Instructions to jury. Evidence, Prior misconduct, Identity, Relevancy and materiality.

At the trial of indictments charging open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, in violation of G.L. c.272, § 16, and lewd, wanton, and lascivious behavior, in violation of G. L. c.272, § 53, evidence that the defendant masturbated in public without undressing was insufficient to sustain his conviction of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, where a conviction of violating G. L. c. 272, § 16, requires exposure of the genitals or buttocks; the evidence, however, was sufficient to support the defendant's conviction of lewd, wanton, and lascivious behavior, where conviction of a violation of G. L. c. 272, § 53, does not require such exposure [477-480]; and where there was sufficient proof of the defendant's identity [483-484].

HANLON, J. The defendant appeals from his conviction after a Superior Court jury trial of one count of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, G. L. c. 272, § 16, and one count of being lewd, wanton, and lascivious in behavior, G. L. c. 272, § 53, for an incident that occurred on the Smith College campus. We are asked to consider whether public masturbation, without exposure of the defendant's genitalia or buttocks, is punishable under G. L. c. 272, § 16. Because we hold that it is not, we reverse the defendant's conviction for open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior only, and affirm his conviction for being lewd, wanton, and lascivious in behavior.

Background. The jury would have been warranted in finding the following facts. On February 15, 2007, a student at Smith College, a women's college in Northampton, was crossing the street at an intersection near the campus. She noticed a dark green van, which she described as being the same model as her parents' car, a Dodge Caravan, parked awkwardly and holding up traffic in a crosswalk on the other side of the intersection. As the student approached the car, she noticed the driver was moving "his arm and hand . . . up and down against his groin." He appeared to be masturbating; however, she did not observe that either his genitals or buttocks were exposed. [\[Note 1\]](#)

The victim continued walking toward the car so that she could describe it and the man to campus security officials. At the trial, she described the driver as a white male between the ages of thirty-five and forty with sandy brown hair, glasses, and a mustache. He was staring in her direction and appeared to be trying to make eye contact with her; he also spoke to her but she did not pay attention to what he said. She said that she was "shocked and alarmed" and immediately went to the campus center to report the incident to the campus police. At trial, she did not identify the defendant as the man she saw.

Five days later, on February 20, 2007, a second student was walking in the middle of the Smith College campus when she observed a middle-aged white male sitting in his car, masturbating, with his exposed penis in his hand. His car was parked in the crosswalk and he was looking in her direction. She called the campus public safety office to report the incident and the license plate number of the car.

Shortly afterwards, a campus police officer observed a brown sedan with the same license plate number. The officer testified that the driver of the car he observed was a white male in his mid-forties or early fifties who appeared to have graying hair and a beard. Information from the Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) indicated that a brown sedan with that license number was owned by the defendant, Raymond L. Blackmer, III. At the trial, the officer identified the defendant as the man he had seen, although he also described differences in his appearance.

Armed with a name, the campus police obtained a photograph of the defendant wearing glasses and a mustache, and included it in a photographic array shown to the second victim. At first, she did not recognize any of the photographs but, as she was leaving, "something clicked" and she identified the defendant's photograph as that of the man she had seen. (At trial, she did not make an identification of the defendant.)

The campus police then searched the RMV database using the defendant's surname and discovered a Joyce Blackmer in a nearby town who owned a green Plymouth Voyager that had at one time been registered to a Raymond Blackmer, Jr. The police officer testified at trial that other than "some grill work," a Plymouth Voyager looks no different from a Dodge Caravan, the vehicle that the first victim had described from the incident on February 15. [\[Note 3\]](#)

The defendant pleaded guilty to one count of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, G. L. c. 272, § 16, for the second, February 20, incident, and was sentenced to two and one-half to three years in prison. For the events of the first, February 15, incident, he was indicted on one count of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, G. L. c. 272, § 16, [\[Note 4\]](#) and one count of being a lewd, wanton, and lascivious person in behavior, G. L. c. 272, § 53. [\[Note 5\]](#) After a jury trial, the defendant was found guilty of both charges. [\[Note 6\]](#) On appeal, the defendant challenges the judge's denial of his motion for a required finding of not guilty and alleges several other errors in the trial.

Discussion. "In reviewing the denial of a motion for a required finding, we must determine 'whether the evidence, in its light most favorable to the Commonwealth . . . is sufficient . . . to permit the jury to infer the existence of the essential elements of the crime charged [beyond a reasonable doubt] . . . .'"

a. General Laws c. 272, § 16: open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior. The language of G. L. c. 272, § 16, does not define "open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior." However, "decisional law requires proof of five elements to support a conviction, i.e., that the defendant (1) exposed genitals, breasts, or buttocks; (2) intentionally; (3) openly or with reckless disregard of public exposure; (4) in a manner so 'as to produce alarm or shock'; (5) thereby actually shocking or alarming one or more persons."

In this case, the judge denied the defendant's motion for a required finding of not guilty, and instructed the jury that the first element that the Commonwealth was required to prove in establishing a violation of § 16 was that "Mr. Blackmer engaged in lewd and lascivious behavior. What is meant by lewd and lascivious behavior is conduct which involves touching of the buttocks or genitals, for the purposes of sexual arousal, gratification, or offense; or conduct which involves exposing one's genitals or buttocks to one or more persons" (emphasis added). [\[Note 7\]](#) The jury instruction thus added to the established definition an additional theory of guilt, one where the defendant touches his genitals or buttocks "for the purposes of sexual arousal, gratification, or offense." [\[Note 8\]](#)

The Commonwealth argues that the instruction was appropriate in light of the language in Commonwealth v. Quinn, 439 Mass. 492, 495 (2003), stating that "exposure of genitalia is not an essential element of the crime of open and gross lewdness." In Quinn, the court held that exposure of the buttocks, combined with the other elements listed above, was sufficient to sustain a conviction for open and gross lewdness, ibid., and certain language in Quinn appears to leave open the question whether unexposed masturbation may also be punished under § 16. See Commonwealth v. Quinn, 439 Mass. at 501 n.15. In addition, the Quinn court's citation to State v. Maunsell, 170 Vt. 543, 547 (1999), [\[Note 9\]](#) could also suggest that unexposed masturbation would constitute open and gross lewdness in Massachusetts. Commonwealth v. Quinn, 439 Mass. at 497 & n.10, 501 n.15.

Nevertheless, all of the other case law on the issue, including, as the defendant notes, cases decided subsequent to Quinn, indicates the necessity of exposure by the defendant of some body part to sustain a conviction under § 16. See Commonwealth v. Adams, 389 Mass. 265, 271 (1983) (defendant convicted of open and gross lewdness for driving down a public way, masturbating with penis exposed); Commonwealth v. Quinn, 439 Mass. at 498 ("A woman approaching a group of school children suddenly opening her blouse to expose her breasts may alarm or shock just as a man masturbating in a passing automobile might"); Commonwealth v. Kessler, 442 Mass. 770, 772-773 & n.4 (2004)

(utilizing Instruction 5.42 of the Model Jury Instructions for Use in the District Court [1988]); Commonwealth v. Ora, 451 Mass. at 126 ("conviction under the statute requires the display of nudity to be intentional, done in a manner to produce alarm or shock, and actually producing alarm or shock"); Commonwealth v. Swan, 73 Mass. App. Ct. at 261.

Despite the Commonwealth's contention, Commonwealth v. Perretti, 20 Mass. App. Ct. 36 (1985), is not to the contrary. In Perretti, we held that there was probable cause to arrest the defendant for open and gross lewdness where "he was standing at a rear, uncurtained, apartment window, at an early morning hour, with his trousers open, wearing no underwear, and his hands at his groin." Id. at 41. In the first place, those facts permit an inference that the defendant was intentionally exposing his genitals at the time of his arrest. Second, the issue in Perretti, supra, was whether those facts were sufficient to provide probable cause for arrest for the offense, not whether they were sufficient to sustain a conviction under § 16.

Finally, the Commonwealth argues that the defendant's public, unexposed masturbation, which shocked and alarmed the victim, was punishable conduct under § 16 in light of the legislative goal of G. L. c. 272 to create a "comprehensive and integrated approach" to the related offenses set out in its provisions. Commonwealth v. Sefranka, 382 Mass. 108, 116 (1980). In fact, however, the opinion in Sefranka makes it clear that the statute prohibiting the behavior that the Commonwealth was able to prove here, was the "lewd, wanton and lascivious persons" provision of G. L. c. 272, § 53. As construed in Sefranka, that provision prohibits "the commission of conduct in a public place . . . when the conduct committed . . . involves the touching of the genitals, buttocks, or female breasts, for purposes of sexual arousal, gratification, or offense, by a person who knows or should know of the presence of a person or persons who may be offended by the conduct." Commonwealth v. Sefranka, 382 Mass. at 117-118. Thus, unlike in § 16, exposure of the relevant anatomy is not required under § 53.

The defendant's motion for a required finding of not guilty on the charge of open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior under § 16 should have been allowed. His conviction on the charge of lewd, wanton, and lascivious behavior under § 53 is clearly supported by the evidence, see Commonwealth v. Nebel, 59 Mass. App. Ct. 316, 318-319 (2003), and he does not contend otherwise, except as described below.

b. Identity. The defendant also argues that the judge erred in denying his motion for a required finding of not guilty [\[Note 10\]](#) based on the Commonwealth's failure to prove that the man in the green van on February 15, seen masturbating by the first victim, was the defendant who had committed -- and pleaded guilty to -- the act alleged to have occurred on February 20.

As a preliminary question, we first consider the defendant's contention that the "bad act" evidence relating to the incident five days later was improperly admitted in the trial of the earlier incident. Then we turn to whether the Commonwealth sufficiently identified the defendant present in the courtroom as the person who committed the lewd, wanton, and lascivious behavior on February 15, the behavior for which he was on trial. [\[Note 11\]](#)

Conclusion. We reiterate the requirement that, in order to sustain its burden of proof for a conviction under G. L. c. 272, § 16, the prosecution must establish, in addition to the other elements enumerated in Quinn and described above, that "the defendant exposed his or her genitals, buttocks, or breasts to one or more persons." Commonwealth v. Quinn, 439 Mass. at 501. See Commonwealth v. Ora, 451 Mass. at 127. As a result, regarding so much of the indictment that charges this defendant with open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior on February 15, 2007, the judgment is reversed, the verdict is set aside, and judgment shall enter for the defendant. On the indictment charging the defendant with being a lewd, wanton, and lascivious person in behavior under G. L. c. 272, § 53, the judgment is affirmed.

So ordered.

Annoying and Accosting Persons of the Opposite Sex

Chapter 272, Section 53

ELEMENTS-JURY INSTRUCTION

First: That the defendant knowingly engaged in an offensive and disorderly act (or acts), or offensive and disorderly language;

Second: That the defendant intended to direct that conduct to [alleged victim] ;

Third: That [alleged victim] was aware of the defendant's offensive and disorderly conduct;

Fourth: That this conduct was offensive to a reasonable person; and Fifth: That [alleged victim] was a person of the opposite sex.

To prove the first element of the offense, the Commonwealth must prove beyond a reasonable doubt either that the defendant committed a disorderly act (or acts) or that (he) (she) used disorderly language. To be disorderly, the defendant's act (or acts) or language must involve one of the following four things without a legitimate reason:

- it must involve fighting or violent or tumultuous behavior; or
- it must create a hazardous condition; or
- it must create a physically offensive condition that amounts to an invasion of personal privacy; or
- it must be threatening.

A threat may take many forms. It may be an explicit threat, a comment, or an act that would make a reasonable person fearful, not just uncomfortable. The Commonwealth is not required to prove that the defendant intended any threat to be immediately followed by actual violence or the use of physical force. You may consider all of the evidence and any reasonable inferences you choose to draw from the evidence to determine whether any act or language was reasonably viewed as truly threatening.

Common Nightwalker Chapter 272, Section 53

JURY INSTRUCTION

COMMON NIGHTWALKER

Section 53 of chapter 272 of our General Laws provides that “common nightwalkers . . . shall be punished . . . .”

A common nightwalker is someone who is abroad at night, soliciting others to engage in unlawful sexual acts. Often it is a prostitute who solicits potential customers on the street.

Whether a continuing offense. The statutory charging language for this offense suggests that it maybe a continuing offense. G.L. c. 277, § 79 (sufficient form of complaint is “[t]hat A.B., during the three months next before the making of this complaint, was a common nightwalker, habitually walking in the streets in the night time for the purpose of prostitution”). Historically, cases of a similar nature have been viewed as continuing offenses. See Commonwealth v. McNamee, 112 Mass. 285 (1873) (common drunkard); Commonwealth v. Gardner, 73 Mass. 494 (1856) (common seller of spiritous and intoxicating liquor); Stratton v. Commonwealth, 51 Mass. 217 (1845) (common railer and brawler). This issue has not arisen in the nightwalking cases cited above. Conviction does not require multiple acts. Conviction does not require past or multiple acts. King, supra (this “is not a statute directed against recidivism and does not require proof of past convictions for prostitution to sustain a conviction for common night walking”). See Commonwealth v. Nellie Cruz, 30 Mass. App. Ct. 1113, 571 N.E.2d 435 (No. 90-P-894, May 9, 1991) (“where, as here, there is direct evidence of solicitation to engage in illicit sexual acts, additional evidence of ‘habitual’ activity is not necessary to establish guilt”

v.
Deborah A. PROCTOR.

April 17, 1986.
June 10, 1986.

Defendant was convicted in the District Court, Worcester County, of being a common night walker, habitually walking streets in nighttime for purpose of prostitution. The Appeals Court held that circumstantial evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction.

Affirmed.

Deborah Proctor was convicted in a District Court of being a common night walker, habitually walking the streets in the nighttime for the purpose of prostitution. G.L. c. 272, § 53.

[1] Here the attack is not on the statute's validity or unconstitutional application. Rather, the defendant urges that evidence of a specific and express act of solicitation is required to prove the offense. In the absence of such evidence, the defendant says she was entitled to a required finding of not guilty, an order for which she made timely motion. We read Commonwealth v. King, 374 Mass. at 14, 372 N.E.2d 196, as accepting circumstantial evidence to make out a case under § 53, and not requiring evidence of solicitation through testimony of the person propositioned or of someone who heard a proposition made. In King the court said that “[t]he time, place, and frequency of King's conduct warrant an inference that on each occasion observed by the police King was soliciting men for illicit sexual intercourse.” Ibid. That the court did not require evidence of a soliciting conversation with a prospective customer is established by note 7 appearing on page 14 of the King opinion. There the court noted that “[a]fter one arrest King's client apparently informed the arresting officer that King had solicited him for sex for hire. The other arrest had no evidence corroborating the solicitation aspect of this offense.” Ibid. The second arrest was determined, nevertheless, to be lawful.

[2] It is not, after all, extraordinary to have a charge of criminal conduct proved by circumstantial evidence. See Commonwealth v. Donovan, 395 Mass. 20, 25, 478 N.E.2d 727 \(1985\); Commonwealth v. Walter, 10 Mass.App.Ct. 255, 257, 406 N.E.2d 1304 \(1980\). The evidence received in the case at bar was that on repeated occasions, over a period of two or three months, the arresting officer had seen the defendant on the corner of Piedmont Street and Jacques Avenue in Worcester, an area frequented by prostitutes. Regularly, the officer testified, the defendant stands on the corner at **881 night, converses with male motorists, and gets into their vehicles. On the night of her arrest, the defendant was at the usual location; a car driven by a man pulled up and stopped by her; the defendant talked to the man and started to enter his car; as the police officer approached, she began to walk away. We think that evidence meets the time, place, and frequency criteria of Commonwealth v. King, 374 Mass. at 14, 372 N.E.2d 196.

It may well be that consistent failure of the police to produce, as witnesses or as defendants on a related charge, the men who have been approached is constitutionally offensive and would require dismissal of the complaints, as in Commonwealth v. An Unnamed Defendant, 22 Mass.App. 230, 492 N.E.2d 1184. In the instant case, however, that claim was not made, nor was that relief sought. On the record of this case, we have no basis for a disposition on the An Unnamed Defendant principle.

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Suffolk.

v.

Diane KING (and six companion cases [FN1]).

FN1. Of the companion cases four are against Diane King, one is against Barbara Astrofsky, and one is against Rebecca Jones.

Argued Feb. 7, 1977.

Decided Dec. 12, 1977.

After appealing their convictions in Municipal Court, defendants were convicted before the Superior Court, Suffolk County, Steele and Morrissey, JJ., of prostitution and one of the defendants was convicted of common night walking, and defendants appealed. After consolidation of the appeals, the Supreme Judicial Court, Hennessey, C. J., held that: (1) statute proscribing prostitution is intended to apply to conduct consisting of common indiscriminate sexual activity for hire, and, as so construed, statute is not unconstitutionally vague; (2) such statute was not unconstitutionally vague on its face in regard to its application to defendants; (3) evidence was sufficient to sustain the convictions of common night walking; (4) prostitution convictions did not implicate any constitutionally protected rights of privacy; (5) statute which proscribes prostitution but does not proscribe the conduct of persons who hire or seek to hire another to engage in sexual activity does not deny equal protection; (6) evidence failed, for purposes of proving discriminatory enforcement of the law, to establish that male prostitutes were not prosecuted for criminal offenses, but (7) statute proscribing prostitution cannot be enforced solely against female prostitutes unless Commonwealth can demonstrate a compelling interest requiring that it not be enforced against male prostitutes.

Exceptions overruled.

HENNESSEY, Chief Justice.

We have before us a broad scale attack on the Massachusetts law against prostitution. The defendants, Rebecca Jones, Barbara Astrofsky, and Diane King, all were convicted for violations of G.L. c. 272, s 53. Jones and Astrofsky were convicted in a Municipal Court, appealed, and then were tried and convicted by a judge in the *7 Superior Court on complaints of prostitution. **199 King, after appealing her Municipal Court convictions, was tried and convicted by judges in the Superior Court on three complaints of prostitution and two complaints of common night walking, all pursuant to s 53. Fines and thirty-day suspended sentences, with periods of probation, were imposed in all cases except one case against King, wherein a six-month sentence was imposed.

In each of the seven cases below, before conviction in the Superior Court, the defendant filed motions to dismiss the complaint and for the entry of a finding of not guilty on the complaint, alleging that c. 272, s 53, is unconstitutional on its face and as applied to the defendant in that case. The judge in each case denied both motions, and the defendant in each case took exceptions to the denial of her motions. Because the motions and exceptions in all the cases raise common issues, the defendants consolidated their cases for the purposes of appeal.[FN2] This court took jurisdiction of the consolidated appeal which is before us on bills of exceptions. Execution of the defendants' sentences was stayed pending appeal. We find no error and overrule the exceptions in all cases.

FN2. In addition, this court has before it a brief of amicus curiae, Boston University Student Defender Program. The facts underlying each conviction can be summarized as follows.

Jones.

In July, 1975, Officer McNelley of the Boston police department telephoned Jones, informing her that he had obtained her name from a male friend. When she said she could not remember this person, they arranged an appointment for the same afternoon. At that meeting, Jones informed Officer McNelley that she would perform various sexual acts with him for $50. He then arrested her and filed a complaint that "Rebecca Jones . . . , a female, was a prostitute offering her body to indiscriminate intercourse with men for hire." Officer McNelley testified that he has never *8 brought a similar complaint against a man and that it is the practice of the vice squad division of the Boston police department to file such complaints against only females.

Astrofsky.

In November, 1975, Officer Flemming of the Boston police department observed Astrofsky with another woman in a hotel bar being approached by men. He engaged them in conversation. According to his testimony, her companion asked him, in Astrofsky's absence, whether he "was interested in going out for $75.00 each." She informed Astrofsky of his interest in "going out" for this price, and Astrofsky volunteered the information that fellatio and sexual intercourse would be included. Officer Flemming then arrested both women. He filed a complaint that "Barbara Astrofsky . . . (b)eing a female, was a prostitute offering her body to indiscriminate intercourse with men for hire."

King Cases 1, 2, and 3 (prostitution).

In April, 1975, according to the testimony of Officer Milan of the vice control unit of the Boston police department, he observed King conversing with the operator of a motor vehicle. She entered the car; it drove away. Then he and a fellow officer stopped the car. The operator of the car informed the officers that King had solicited him for sexual intercourse for $20 and that the act was to take place in his car.[FN3] Thereupon the officers arrested King and filed a complaint that "Diane King . . . , being a female, was a prostitute offering her body to indiscriminate intercourse with men for hire." The record does not show whether the officers also arrested the operator of the car.

FN3. No objection was made in this case or case No. 3, at trial or on appeal, to the prosecutor's use of what appears to be hearsay evidence to convict King.

In May, 1975, Detective DeLuca of the Boston police department was approached by one Debbie Wilson, who offered to engage in fellatio and sexual intercourse for **200 $25. After he agreed to Wilson's terms, King approached the couple and offered, for an additional $25, to join Wilson in *9 performing sexual acts with Detective DeLuca. He then arrested both women and filed a complaint that "Diane King . . . , being a female, was a prostitute offering her body to indiscriminate intercourse with men for hire."

In July, 1975, Detective McCormick of the Boston police department observed King getting into a car, followed the car, and stopped it. The male occupant of the car informed Detective McCormick that King had offered to perform sexual intercourse with him for $25, and that they were en route to her apartment. Detective McCormick then arrested King and filed a complaint charging her with prostitution in language identical to Detective DeLuca's. The record does not show whether Detective McCormick also arrested the male occupant of the car.

King Cases 4 and 5 (common night walking).

On July 13, 1975, at approximately 11:30 P.M. Patrolman Fee of the Boston police department observed King on a Boston street corner approaching and conversing with males who were on foot and in cars. He ordered her to stop this activity and she complied. On two subsequent nights he observed King engaging in similar activity. On the first such occasion he ordered her to leave the area. On the second such occasion he arrested her and filed a complaint that "Dianne (sic ) King . . . was and now is a common night walker." After this arrest, Patrolman Fee in King's presence conversed with an unidentified male who informed him that King had asked whether he wanted to go out and whether he could spend $20.

On June 9, 1975, at 3 A.M. Detective Powers of the Boston police department observed King on a Boston street corner approaching cars with male occupants. He warned her to leave the area and she complied. On June 21, 1975, at 3:55 A.M. Detective Powers observed King entering a car, stopped the car and told her to leave the area. At 4:35 A.M. he observed her at the same location, entering a car. He followed the car to Atlantic Avenue in Boston, where the driver parked the car. Detective Powers arrested King, *10 charging her with common night walking in language identical to Patrolman Fee's.

1. The defendants assert that G.L. c. 272, s 53, in so far as it prohibits prostitution is facially unconstitutional because its definition of proscribed conduct is vague; because it prohibits the status of being a prostitute; because it discriminates against women; and because the statute proscribes conduct which is protected by the right of privacy. In addition, they argue that the s 53 proscription of prostitution was unconstitutionally applied in each of the five cases below because s 53 is enforced against female prostitutes but not against male prostitutes; because s 53 is enforced against female prostitutes but not against their male customers; because the Commonwealth failed to prove the necessary elements of the offense of prostitution in these cases; and because application of s 53 in these cases invaded the defendant's rights to privacy. Finally, the defendants maintain that s 53, in so far as it prohibits common night walking, is unconstitutionally vague as applied to King.[FN4]

FN4. General Laws c. 272, s 53, as amended through St.1973, c. 1073, s 20, reads as follows, in its entirety: "Common night walkers, both male and female, common railers and brawlers, persons who with offensive and disorderly act or language accost or annoy persons of the opposite sex, lewd, wanton and lascivious persons in speech or behavior, idle and disorderly persons, prostitutes, disturbers of the peace, keepers of noisy and disorderly houses and persons guilty of indecent exposure may be punished by imprisonment in a jail or house of correction for not more than six months, or by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

We hold that the prostitution provision of G.L. c. 272, s 53, as construed in this opinion, is not facially unconstitutional. In addition, we hold that the records do not show unconstitutional application of that provision**201 to the defendants. We also hold that the common night walking provision of s 53 was not unconstitutionally vague in its application to King. Finally, we hold that the Commonwealth here proved the essential elements of the charge of prostitution, since proof of solicitation by the defendants for such acts is sufficient.

Lewd Wanton and Lascivious Acts
Chapter 272, Section 53

JURY INSTRUCTION

This provision of our law is intended to punish the performance or solicitation of a sexual touching which does not rise to the level of a completed sexual act, and which is performed or intended to be performed in a public place where others may be offended by it.

In order to prove the defendant guilty of this offense, the Commonwealth must prove four things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant (committed) (publicly solicited another person to commit) a sexual act;

Second: That the sexual act involved touching the genitals or buttocks, or the female breasts;

Third: That the defendant did this either for the purpose of sexual gratification, or for the purpose of offending other people; and

Fourth: That the sexual act (was) (was to be) committed in a public place; that is, a place where the defendant either intended public exposure, or recklessly disregarded a substantial risk of public exposure at that time and under those circumstances, to others who might be offended by such conduct.

The defendant cannot be found guilty of this offense if he (she) desired privacy for a sexual act with another consenting adult. If relevant to evidence, and took reasonable measures in order to secure that privacy. Therefore the Commonwealth must prove that in choosing that particular locale, the defendant either intended public exposure or recklessly disregarded a substantial risk of public exposure at that place and time. Commonwealth v. Roy, 420 Mass. 1, 647 N.E.2d 1179 (1995) (statute cannot be applied to solicitation for sexual conduct where unclear whether it was to occur in a public or private place); Commonwealth v. Beauchemin, 410 Mass. 181, 183-184, 571 N.E.2d 395, 397 (1991) (statute cannot be applied to sexual conduct in location where little likelihood of being observed by casual passersby); Commonwealth v. Sefranka,

UPSKIRTING

Chapter 272, Section 105B

An Act Relative to Unlawful Surveillance

Section 105. (a) As used in this section, the following words shall have the following meanings unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

“Electronically surveils” or “electronically surveilled”, to view, obtain or record a person’s visual image by the use or aid of a camera, cellular or other wireless communication device, computer, television or other electronic device.

“Partially nude”, the exposure of the human genitals, buttocks, pubic area or female breast below a point immediately above the top of the areola.

(b) Whoever willfully photographs, videotapes or electronically surveils another person who is nude or partially nude, with the intent to secretly conduct or hide such activity, when the other person in such place and circumstance would have a reasonable expectation of privacy in not being so photographed, videotaped or electronically surveilled, and without that person’s knowledge and consent, shall be punished by imprisonment in the house of correction for not more than 2 1/2 years or by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(h) In a prosecution under this section, a justice of the superior court or district court may issue appropriate orders to restrain or prevent the unlawful dissemination of a person’s visual image in violation of this section.

Commonwealth v. Valdeir Aguiar Do Nascimento, 91 Mass. App. Ct. 665 (2017): The Court concluded that two teenage girls riding the ferry to Nantucket had a reasonable expectation of privacy in not having a stranger use his cell phone to secretly videotape under their sundresses.

Accessory Before the Fact

Elements:

1. aid, hire or procure such felony to be committed
2. completion of the felony
3. principal need not be already tried or on trial
4. although the procuring or counseling occurred outside of the county or state, it can be tried where the principal could be indicted

Right of Arrest:

This is a felony punishable the same as whatever felony they were the accessory to, therefore you can arrest on probable cause or in presence.

Accessory After the Fact

Chapter 274, Section 4

Elements:

- 1.felony has been committed
- 2.assist or conceal the principal or the accessory before the fact
- 3.knowledge that the person who is being assisted committed the felony or was an accessory before the fact
- 4.intend that the principal or accessory before the fact avoid arrest or prosecution
- 5.not be a spouse or be related by consanguinity, affinity or adoption, as parent, grandparent, child, brother, grandchild or sister to the principal or accessory before the fact.

Right of Arrest:

This 7 year felony is arrestable in presence or on probable cause

Attempting to Commit Crimes

Chapter 274, Section 6

ATTEMPT-JURY INSTRUCTION

First: That the defendant had a specific intent to commit _____; and

Second: That the defendant took an overt act toward committing that crime, which was part of carrying out the crime, and came reasonably close to actually carrying out the crime.

The essence of the crime of attempt is that a person has a specific intent to commit a crime and takes a specific step toward committing that crime.

Doing any act toward the commission of a crime, but failing in its perpetration or is intercepted or prevented.

Right of Arrest:

Felony portion arrestable in presence or upon probable cause.

Misdemeanor portion arrestable in presence.

The attempt to commit any larceny under Chapter 266, Section 30 is always a non-arrestable misdemeanor.

- Not every act done toward the commission of a crime qualifies as an attempt. Mere preparation is not enough.
- Impossibility of achievement is not a defense. Picking an empty pocket is attempted larceny from the person.
- However intent alone cannot be punished. Hence, if a man shoots a telephone pole thinking he's shooting a man, he can't be found guilty of attempted murder.

Note:

First, if the attempt is to commit a crime punishable by death, the penalty is imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years.

Second, if the attempt is to commit a crime, except any larceny under c.266s.30, punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for life or for five years or more.

Third, if the attempt is to commit a crime, except any larceny under c.266s.30, punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for less than five years or by imprisonment in a jail or house of correction or a fine.

Fourth, if the attempt is to commit a crime of any larceny punishable under c.266s.30 the penalty is imprisonment for not more than two and one half years in a jail or house of correction.

Conspiracy

Chapter 274, Section 7

CONSPIRACY-JURY INSTRUCTION

First: That the defendant joined in an agreement or plan with one or more other persons;

Second: That the purpose of the agreement was to do something unlawful

If raised by the evidence: (or to do something that was itself lawful, but by unlawful means);and Third: That the defendant joined the conspiracy knowing of the help carry it out.

It is not necessary that the conspirators formulated a formal agreement among themselves, or that they agreed on every detail of the conspiracy, or even that they met together. But the Commonwealth must prove that there was a joint plan among them, and that the defendant joined in that plan.

It is not always possible to prove a conspiracy by direct evidence. The law allows you, where it seems reasonable, to infer that there was a conspiracy from all of the circumstances. For example, if people who know each other or have been in communication with each other are shown to have been involved in concerted actions which all seem designed to accomplish a specific purpose, then it may be reasonable to conclude that those actions were not coincidental but were taken pursuant to a joint plan. However, remember that it is not enough that the defendant knew about the conspiracy or associated with conspirators. To be liable as a conspirator, the defendant must have actually joined in the conspiracy as something that he (she) wished to bring about.

Threats to Commit A Crime

Chapter 275, Section 2

THREAT TO COMMIT CRIME-JURY INSTRUCTION

The defendant is charged with having threatened to commit a crime against the person or property of another. Threatening [a person with a crime against his or her person or property] [a person by threatening a crime against someone else or their property] is itself a crime.

First: That the defendant expressed an intent to injure a person, or property of another, now or in the future;

Second: That the defendant intended that his (her) threat be conveyed to a particular person;

Third: That the injury that was threatened, if carried out, would constitute a crime; and Fourth: That the defendant made the threat under circumstances which could reasonably have caused the person to whom it was conveyed to fear that the defendant had both the intention and the ability to carry out the threat. See Commonwealth v. Chalifoux, 362 Mass. 811, 816-817, 291 N.E.2d 635, 639 (1973) (victim's testimony of prior assault relevant to issue of apprehension); Commonwealth v. DeVincent, 358 Mass. 592, 594-595, 266 N.E.2d 314, 315-316 (1971); Commonwealth v. Maiden, 61 Mass. App. Ct. 433, 436, 810 N.E.2d 1279, 1281 (2004) (actual receipt by victim of threat not a necessary element; intent that threat be conveyed to target is sufficient, whether or not it was successfully communicated); Commonwealth v. Hughes, 59 Mass. App. Ct. 280, 283, 795 N.E.2d 594, 596 (2003); Commonwealth v. Ditsch, 19 Mass. App. Ct. 1005, 475 N.E.2d 1235 (1985) (immediate or personal ability to carry out threat unnecessary, only "intention and ability in circumstances which would justify apprehension on the part of the recipient"); Commonwealth v. Daly, 12 Mass. App. Ct. 338, 424 N.E.2d 1138 (1981) (under Mass. R. Crim. P. 4[b], others beside victim may bring complaint). See also Wagenmann v. Adams, 829 F.2d 196, 207 (1st Cir. 1987); Robinson v. Bradley, 300 F.Supp. 665, 668 (D. Mass. 1969) (3-judge court); Commonwealth v. Kerns, 449 Mass. 641, 871 N.E.2d 433 (2007).

Right of Arrest:

The defendant, if convicted, can be sentenced up to 6 months or pay a fine of up to $100.00

THREATS AND ASSAULTS

THREATS

The statutory law concerning threats may be found in Chapter 275, sections 2-6. The term “threat” is not statutorily defined, but its elements have been held to include an expression of intention to inflict a injury or damage on another and an ability to do so in circumstances that would justify apprehension on the part of the recipient of the threat. Words must be viewed in the context of the actions and demeanor, which accompanied them in order to determine if they are objectively threatening. Not all noxious and disturbing remarks are criminal threats. The threat must be communicated in some manner, it need not be oral, verbal, or face to face. It may be communicated to the intended victim in writing, or by a third party, provided it can be proven that the person making the threat intended the third party to communicate the threat to the victim. Intent can be proven by circumstantial evidence. When a person utters a threat to a third party who would likely communicate it to the ultimate target, that action constitutes evidence of intent to communicate the threat to the intended victim. The Commonwealth need not show the suspect’s immediate ability to carry out the threat if the suspect might be able to carry out the threat at a later time.

A threat to commit a crime is a crime itself, but it is not arrestable without an arrest warrant. (M.G.L. c. 275, ss. 2, 3).

However, threatening behavior with purpose to cause public inconvenience, annoyance, or alarm, or recklessly creating the risk thereof, is disorderly conduct. (M.G.L. c. 272, s. 53). If committed in public and in an officer’s presence, it is arrestable. (M.G.L. c. 272, s. 54).

Threats may serve as the basis of a conviction under the accosting and annoying provision of c. 272, s. 53, whether the resulting harm is suffered in public by the public or in private by an individual. If committed in public and in an officer’s presence, it is arrestable. (M.G.L. c. 272, s. 54).

ASSAULTS

The statutory law concerning assault may be found in Chapter 265, section 13A.

The crime of assault has been variously described as an attempt (or offer) to do bodily harm to another by force and violence, or attempt to commit a battery. The principal element of the crime of assault is an overt, threatening or menacing gesture. Mere words generally, do not constitute assault unless accompanied by an overt act. It is not necessary to prove that the victim was actually apprehensive or fearful of immediate physical harm. It is sufficient to prove that the victim was placed in reasonable apprehension that force may be used. The court will look to the actions and words of the defendant in light of the attendant circumstances.

An assault is a misdemeanor that amounts to a breach of the peace. If it is committed in an officer's presence, it is arrestable.

In a 209A situation, an assault amounts to abuse. If a domestic assault occurs when no protective orders are in effect, this is a misdemeanor with a statutory right of arrest, either in presence or on probable cause. (M.G.L. c. 209A, s. 6(7)). However, whoever commits an assault upon another who he knows has protective orders under Chapter 208, sections 18, 34B or 34C; or Chapter 209, section 32; or Chapter 209A, section 3, 4, or 5; or Chapter 209C, sections 15 or 20 issued against him, commits a five-year felony, and may be arrested in presence or on probable cause.

Whoever commits an assault upon another who he knows, or has reason to know, is pregnant, commits a five-year felony, and may be arrested in presence or on probable cause.

THE DIFFERENCE

The difference between a threat to commit a crime, and an assault, is that a threat to commit a crime can be mere words about a present or future intent to commit a crime, coupled with the ability to carry out a crime. An arrest warrant is always required to arrest for threats. An assault requires that a person take either some overt step to commit a battery (a swing and a miss), or showing that a battery is imminent (words plus an overt threatening or menacing gesture). An assault, under certain conditions, may be arrestable without a warrant.

Arrest Without A Warrant

Chapter 276, Section 28

Any officer authorized to serve criminal process may arrest, without a warrant, and detain a person found in the act of stealing property in the presence of the officer regardless of the value of the property stolen and may arrest, without a warrant and detain a person whom the officer has probable cause to believe has committed a misdemeanor by violating a temporary or permanent vacate, restraining, or no-contact order or judgment issued pursuant to section eighteen, thirty-four B, or thirty-four C of chapter two hundred and eight, section three, four or five of chapter two hundred and nine A, section thirty-two of chapter two hundred and nine and section fifteen or twenty of chapter two hundred and nine C.

Said officer may arrest and detain a person charged with a misdemeanor, without having a warrant for such arrest in his possession, if the officer making such arrest and detention shall have actual knowledge that a warrant then in full force and effect for the arrest of such person has in fact been issued.

NOTE:

CASE LAW

Commonwealth v. Hyde (434 Mass. 594)

On October 26, 1998, an Abington police officer conducted a traffic stop of the defendant's white Porsche, because the automobile had an excessively loud exhaust system and an unlit rear registration plate light. Several other Abington police officers responded and the stop quickly became confrontational. Several days later, the defendant went to the Abington police station to file a formal complaint based on his unfair treatment during the stop. To substantiate his allegations, he produced the secret tape recordings he had made of the conversations that had taken place between the defendant and the police officers. The defendant was tried and convicted of violating the wiretap statute under G. L. c. 272, § 99.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts affirmed the defendant's conviction and stated the "defendant was not prosecuted for making the recording; he was prosecuted for doing so secretly". The court further stated "the problem here could have been avoided if, at the outset of the traffic stop, the defendant had simply informed the police of his intention to tape record the encounter, or even held the tape recorder in plain sight. Had he done so, his recording would not have been secret, and so would not have violated G. L. c. 272, § 99. See Commonwealth v. Jackson, (no "interception" when defendant was aware his voice was being recorded). Secret tape recording by private individuals has been unequivocally banned, and, unless and until the Legislature changes the statute, what was done here cannot be done lawfully".

Commonwealth v. Manzelli (68 Mass. App. Ct. 691)

During a political rally, the defendant secretly recorded his conversation with several MBTA officers as they had a discussion about the defendant taking pictures of the officers. This is how the Appeals Court described the event when the officer asked if the defendant was tape recording their conversation. "The defendant immediately took the microphone, along with a black bag containing a tape recorder and cassette tapes, and threw them among a nearby group of protestors. The defendant shouted for people to take the tapes. (Officer) Riel attempted to retrieve the recorder and tapes, but was thwarted by the crowd, which began to throng Riel. (Officer) Harer came to Riel's aid, and the two of them managed to recover an empty bag, the microphone, and a few tapes. Riel was punched in the eye by a protestor as she attempted to collect the items. Harer then attempted to arrest the defendant, who, by that time, had fled into a nearby subway station. After a brief chase, Harer took the defendant into custody". After trial, the jury convicted the defendant of unlawful electronic interception of an oral communication under G.L. c. 272, § 99.

The Appeals Court in Massachusetts stated "that despite the lack of a tapes, there was ample circumstantial evidence that the defendant made an unlawful secret recording, including (1) his possession of a device, together with the microphone secreted in his jacket, (2) the fact that the microphone was pointed in the direction of the officers during their conversation with the defendant, (3) the odd manner in which the defendant put his questions to police, and (4) the tapes he discarded into the crowd".

Public and open recordings are allowed under the Wiretap statute. There is no right of arrest for public and open recordings under this statute.

Police Commissioner's Memo

Number: CM 19-002

Date: 1/4/19

Post/Mention: Indefinite

SUBJECT: COURT DECISION REGARDING SECRET RECORDING OF POLICE OFFICERS

On December 10, 2018 the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts issued an order in the case of Martin v. Gross ruling that the First Amendment protects the right of individuals to openly or secretly record audio and/or video of government officials, including police officers, performing their duties in public spaces. The Court also held that the Massachusetts Wiretap Statute (Mass. Gen. Laws c. 272, §99) is unconstitutional when enforcement infringes upon this right.

This ruling applies only to the recording of government officials and law enforcement officers. The Wiretap Statute remains constitutional when enforced against individuals who secretly record conversations of private citizens.

The Court's decision does acknowledge certain exceptions. Officers may issue orders to restrict recording where they reasonably conclude the recording interferes or is about to interfere with their duties. Officers may take reasonable steps to preserve public safety. Officers may take all reasonable steps to maintain safety and control, secure crime scenes and accident sites, and protect the integrity and confidentiality of investigations. Moreover, if an officer needs to protect the safety of an informant or fellow officer, or seeks to preserve a victim's privacy, the officer may order the recording to stop or may conduct the conversation at a safe distance removed from the bystanders or in a private (i.e. non-public) location. However, officers are advised that the Court took the view that traffic stops generally take place in public spaces.

This Commissioner's Memo is to ensure that the Boston Police Department complies with the Court's decision. Therefore, all officers are advised NOT to enforce the Massachusetts Wiretap Statute against individuals for openly or secretly recording police officers or other government officials who are performing their duties in public spaces. This memo is also intended to make sure all officers are aware that they may be recorded openly or secretly while performing their duties in public spaces.

The Department will update its training materials to reflect the Court's holding in this case.

Police Commissioner

INTRODUCTION

This course, Introduction to the Legal Process, is brief in comparison to other courses at the Academy. Although it is brief, it is vital that you master its subject matter. This course forms the basis of many other courses a Recruit Officer will study. The concepts discussed here will be repeated constantly in other subject areas in the weeks to come. You will be required to memorize basic definitions in order to be able to comprehend the legal principles addressed in other courses.

This course was revised and compiled by Lieutenant James A. Moore, and members of the Academy Staff past and present. Sources of some of the material are Criminal Law for Policeman, Chamelin & Evans, Prentice Hall, 1977; Constitutional Law for Police Officers, Attorney James A. Moore, 1996; and the work of Deputy Superintendent William J. Hogan.

Learn as much as you can each day. Take advantage of all study time available, whether at the Academy or at home. Be attentive. Be respectful to yourself, your fellow recruits, and the Academy Staff. This will enable you to acquire one of the most important tools a police officer can have: knowledge.

INSTRUCTOR INTRODUCTION(S)

My name is Police Officer Yong Lee and I have been with the Boston Police Department since 2006. Prior to my assignment at the academy, I held assignments in District D14 (Brighton), District B2 (Roxbury) and M.O.P (Mobile Operations Patrol) as a member of the BPD Special Weapons and Tactics Team (S.W.A.T. Team). I am excited to be teaching Constitutional Law to you and to help you understand everything we do as police officers. From making an arrest to the use of lethal force, it is all shaped by the U.S. Constitution.

My name is Police Officer Ciro Feliciano. I have been with the Boston Police Department since 2008. I started my career with the department as a Boston Police Cadet prior to becoming a Police Officer in 2010. Prior to my assignment at the academy, I held assignments in District E13 (Jamaica Plain), District C11 (Dorchester) and the District B2 Drug Control Unit (Roxbury). I am a veteran of the United States Armed Forces. I have a strong passion for teaching and hope to become a college professor in the near future. The U.S Constitution is the foundation of everything we do as Police Officers.

I. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF CRIMINAL LAW

A. The Nature of Law

The question "what is law?" invites many answers, for "law" is a broad concept with many definitions. For the purposes of this course, law can be defined as a group of rules governing interactions. Law is a set of regulations governing the relationship between man and his fellow men, and between man and the state. Law is a necessary means of social control attempting to either alleviate conflicts or settle them in a manner most advantageous to the group.

B. Law as Language

Law is nothing more than language. Just as a carpenter uses a hammer, a police officer uses his ability to communicate. Communication is the ability to make another understand one's self. Law strives for uniformity of interpretation. It is important that both the sending and receiving parties to a communication use terms that mean the same thing to both parties. Throughout this course, the student will be presented with terms that require memorization. This will assure uniformity of interpretation as much as humanly possible.

C. Crime Defined

Not all violations of the law are crimes. Some violations of the law are civil infractions. They are private in nature, involving only the parties and not the state. A police officer has no power in civil matters in Massachusetts. The legislature makes some violations of the law criminal in nature. It is these violations with which a police officer must concern himself. A crime is an act committed or omitted in violation of public law, either forbidding it or commanding it to be done. Crimes are prosecuted in the name of the Commonwealth. The state is a party to the action. There are two purposes of criminal law. First, it attempts to control behavior of human beings. Second, it attempts to sanction uncontrolled behavior by punishing the violator.

D. Early Developments of Criminal Law

Criminal law developed from the personal vendetta. When one individual harmed another, it became the responsibility of the victim or his family to seek redress. Eventually society began to treat certain offenses as crimes against the sovereign, and that state began to punish violators. This practice developed into modern criminal law.

E. Common Law

Common law began as a result of habits of individuals and the customs of groups. They became accepted as norms of behavior. When courts developed violations of these customs produced the cases heard. As the courts recorded their decisions, other judges looking for assistance followed previous court decisions, and precedents developed. The English colonists who settled Massachusetts brought with them a large part of the body of law to which they were accustomed. Common law has been defined as that body of law that derives its authority from judicial decision and ancient statutes and usage, as distinguished from statute law that is enacted by the legislature or congress. Common law derives its authority solely from the usage and customs of antiquity, or from judgements and decrees of the courts recognizing, affirming, and enforcing such uses and customs. Massachusetts embraced this unwritten law of England. Examples of common law crimes, which still exist today are: affray and criminal libel. They have never been made punishable by statute. If no punishment is provided by statute, "the court shall impose such sentence according to the nature of the crime, as conforms to the common usage and practice of the Commonwealth." M.G.L. C. 279, S.5.

F. Statute Law

Statute law has been defined as that law effected by legislative enactment. The reading of a statute must be construed strictly. If a statute sets forth a series of acts and proscribes their commission, the wording is critically important. Some examples of statutes are: armed robbery, breaking and entering, and motor vehicle violations.

1. Ordinance

An ordinance is an enactment by a legislative body of a municipal corporation. A rule proposed by a city, establishing when properly enacted. An ordinance has the full force and effect of law.

2. By-Laws

Laws, rules, or regulations adopted by a town for its government are known as by-laws.

3. Rules & Regulations

Park rules, traffic rules, etc. are laws that are a formal means of social control that are interpreted and enforced by the courts of a political community.

G. Case Law

The role of court decisions and their relationship to the law is known as case law. It is a term commonly used to describe the rule of law announced in court decisions. The rule announced in a court decision will reflect the court's reading of a constitutional, statutory, or administrative action. Thus case law merges with other forms of law. Although the wording of a statute may suggest a different meaning to the ordinary reader, it is the interpretation of the courts, the case law, that governs.

Points to remember

Rules of conduct at the different levels of government are known as the following:

1. Federal. ....laws
2. State ..... statutes
3. City .....ordinances, rules & regulations
4. Town .....by-laws, rules & regulations

II. FUNDAMENTALS OF CRIMINAL LAW

Students beginning the study of criminal law must be able to approach the subject with an open mind. They must be objective as possible. Very often there is a difference between what is morally wrong and what is legally prohibited. Personal emotion can play no part in influencing an officer's decision in settling legal problems. Those who resort to emotion will not solve the problem correctly.

An act, which may obviously be wrong to most people, may be committed, but there is no legal penalty. If an officer responded with emotion and made an arrest in such a Situation, the arrest would be unlawful. This would result in the officer's exposure to civil liability. Officers must approach each situation with an analytical mind, and make judgments based on his training.

A. Classifications of Crimes

Crimes are classified in many ways. There is a distinction made between crimes that are mala in se and mala prohibita. Those classified as mala in se are those that are bad in themselves, murder and rape for example. Those classified as mala prohibita are those that are wrong simply because the legislature has prohibited them. Examples would be: operating a motor vehicle without being licensed or selling alcohol to a minor.

States are free to classify crimes in any way they choose, and to impose any punishment it desires. However, the punishment cannot violate the Eighth Amendment by being cruel and unusual. In Massachusetts crimes are classified in two categories: felonies and misdemeanors. A felony is any crime punishable by death or imprisonment in the state prison. A misdemeanor is any crime less than a felony.

It is important to know the distinction between a felony and a misdemeanor. Whether or not to arrest may be made, whether or not an arrest warrant is required, how much force may be used, are a few of the questions that can only be determined by the maximum penalty that can be imposed as stated by statute. It does not depend on the sentence actually handed out by the court. For example, Anthony commits a larceny from the person, a crime punishable by five years in state prison. He has committed a felony. This is so even if the court only sentences him to six months in the House of Correction.

B. Role of the Court

By establishing the Federal and State Constitutions, the people have both granted and forbidden the legislatures of both governments the power to do certain things. When the legislature acts, it is the role of the courts to determine if this action is in accordance with the constitutions. Any law that is contrary to the provisions of either constitution will be declared unconstitutional. In addition, since people are entitled to know what conduct is prohibited, statutes cannot be written in broad terms so that they become unclear. In our system of government, the benefit of the doubt goes to the defendant. Criminal laws are construed strictly, when they work against the defendant and they are construed liberally when they work in his favor. In the law, as in baseball, the tie goes to the runner.

III. A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of the United States is the political foundation of our nation. It was written and adopted after careful consideration, and after experiments had been made with other forms of alliances among the colonies. The main body of the Constitution is composed of seven articles. The first three define the legislative, executive and judicial branches of government and outline their duties. Shortly after this segment of the Constitution was written, leaders decided that it placed too much power in a central government. It was this type of government that the colonies originally rebelled against.

A solution to this concern was reached on December 15, 1791, when the first ten Amendments, popularly known as the Bill of Rights, were adopted and added to the Constitution. At that time, the Amendments only applied to the federal government. It was not until 1858 that the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted. It provides that due process standards apply to the states.

In order to understand the applicability of the Bill of Rights to law enforcement, one must first grasp the concept of "due process." In a simplistic way, it means that no person may be deprived of any rights unless law enforcement action is in accordance with the proper criminal procedures.

Those failing to respect these Constitutional standards are subject to severe criminal and civil penalties. Police Officers must operate within certain boundaries. They can accomplish this task by using proper criminal procedure. Concepts of arrest, search and seizure, the privilege against self-incrimination, and the right to counsel are included in this body of law.

The United State constitution is the supreme law of the land and it prevails over all other kinds of law, both federal and state. States may grant citizens greater protection under the state constitution than may be granted under the federal, but may not grant less. Any law in conflict with the federal constitution is without legal force, and will not be enforced by the courts. At the state level, the state constitution rules are supreme as compared to rules coming from other state sources (e.g., state statutes), and prevail over such laws in cases of conflict.

In order to avoid government tyranny, the founding fathers decided to implement a series of checks and balances by putting executive, legislative and judicial powers in separate departments. These checks and balances are included in the U.S. Constitution. There are three (3) distinct branches of government: legislative, executive and judicial. The executive branch is the enforcement branch, and police are part of the executive branch.

The judicial branch may check the other two branches by ruling on the constitutionality of their actions. The legislative branch can check the other two by using its power to appropriate funds. The executive branch can check the other two by using its power of veto.

IV. IMPORTANT LEGAL CONCEPTS

A. Probable Cause to Arrest

Probable cause is a level of proof. It is the amount of proof necessary to justify an arrest. Probable cause exists if, based on facts sufficiently strong in themselves, it causes a reasonable and prudent person to believe that the accused committed the crime with which he is charged. It is reasonable grounds for belief in guilt.

Whether an arrest is valid or not depends upon, if at the moment of arrest, the officer had probable cause to make it, that is whether, at the moment the facts within the arresting officer's knowledge and of which he had reasonable trustworthy information, were sufficient to warrant a prudent man in believing that the defendant had committed, was committing the offense. The officer's knowledge is the sum total of what he learns through his five senses. The Fourth Amendment requires that probable cause exist for an arrest with or without a warrant, if it is to be a legal arrest.

Arrest on just suspicion is illegal. The amount of evidence needed to establish probable cause for an arrest need not be sufficient to establish guilt; but it must be more than mere suspicion.

Example: A robbery took place and one of the suspects was described as a black male, wearing a trench coat; black male fled from a taxi; a black male was walking down the street 1 ½ miles from where the robbery took place. Is there probable cause to arrest?

Good faith on the part of an officer is not sufficient to withstand the attack on lack of probable cause. A police officer must have probable cause at the exact moment of arrest. However, it is not necessary for the officer to make an arrest at the moment he has the minimum amount of evidence to establish probable cause, unless a delay in executing an arrest warrant deprives the defendant of a constitutional right.

An exception for the arresting officer to have probable cause can occur when the collective knowledge of the organization as a whole can be imputed to the individual. An example would be if an officer is authorized or requested by his supervisors to arrest.

If three are three police officers, one with probable cause, and he points out a suspect to the other two officers to make the arrest, then there is probable cause for the arrest, because the knowledge of one was the knowledge of all when engaged in a joint effort. Commonwealth v. McDermott, 347 Mass 246, 197 N.E.2d 668 (1964), Commonwealth v. Zirpolo 37 Mass App Ct. 307, 639 N.E. 2d 1083 (1994).

Example: An officer transmits over the radio that two white males in tan suits, driving a brown Ford, license number 123456 have just committed an armed robbery. This information could provide probable cause to arrest.

Factors for probable cause must be determined by the facts of a particular case. Generally, no one factor circumstance is enough to establish probable cause, unless the officer observed the offense. On many occasions, probable cause is established by a series of facts, some innocent in themselves, which are known to the arresting officer, and of which he has reliable knowledge at the time of arrest. Prior criminal record, reputation for criminal activity, flight, furtive gestures, evasive answers, conflicting stories, are all factors to be considered. No one factor alone is sufficient to establish probable cause, but a combination of them or other specific knowledge on the part of police officers relating the accused to evidence of a crime are proper factors to be considered in the decision to make an arrest. (See Lawton case).

The word "arrest" is derived from the French word "arreter" meaning to stop or stay; it signifies the restraint of a person. Arrest has been defined a taking under real or assumed authority, custody of another person for the purpose of holding him to answer to a criminal charge, or to prevent harm to himself or others. Clearly, police officers must be guided by the intent and the purpose of the law. There are however, limited circumstances in the discretion of the officer involved. When public interest would be better served by not making an arrest, even though the officer could lawfully make the arrest.

In Massachusetts a police officer has the right of arrest in the following circumstances:

FELONY ..... IN PRESENCE

FELONY ..... PROBABLE CAUSE

MISDEMEANOR ..... IN PRESENCE AND A BREACH OF THE PEACE

MISDEMEANOR ..... IN PRESENCE – STATUTORY RIGHT

MISDEMEANOR ..... PROBABLE CAUSE – STATUTORY RIGHT

ARREST WARRANT

B. Breach of the Peace

The term "Breach of the Peace" has been troublesome, and in some instances, misinterpreted by police officers. For one thing it is not the name of a crime, but rather may be referred to as a "descriptive term" one that describes criminal offenses that effect public peace, for example, the common type of misdemeanor offense of "assault and battery." There is no statutory right of arrest for Assault and Battery, as indicated by item #4 or #5 on the arrest chart. However, every crime of violence against another is by tradition and practice a "Breach of the Peace." Therefore, it is arrestable under item #3 on the arrest chart, if committed in the officer's presence.

You will find that most misdemeanor offense do not provide for an arrest without a warrant, even if committed in the officer's presence additionally, the commission of any offense, whether it is a felony or misdemeanor is a "Breach of the Law," that is breaking the law, but not necessarily a breaking of the peace. On the other hand, certain offenses such as a riot, unlawful assembly, disturbing a public assembly, etc. would by their very nature, amount to a breach of the peace, and thus be arrestable, if committed in the officer's presence. There is no problem with factor of Breach of the Peace in matters concerned with felony arrests under either item #1 and #2 on the arrest chart if probable cause exists for such warrantless arrests. No doubt most felonies would also be breaches of the peace, but the right to make an arrest under either item #1 or #2 on the arrest chart is completely devoid of any reference to Breach of the Peace as a prerequisite thereof.

The police student should at this point concentrate on items #3, #4, and #5 on the arrest chart. The police student will be amazed no doubt to learn, that there are practically hundreds of misdemeanor offenses that are not arrestable without a warrant, even if committed in the officer's presence. From day one you will be exposed to the definition of a misdemeanor. Now project your thinking to #3, #4 and #5 misdemeanor arrests. The occasions under which you may lawfully arrest without a warrant as follows:

- a. Item #3 - Misdemeanor Arrests, when the offense amounts to a Breach of the Peace, and is committed in the officer's presence, or there is a present criminal offense, the Breach of the Peace may be in the future. Item # 3 is the old common law right of arrest for Misdemeanor arrest, developed in early England and is not found in Massachusetts statutes. It should be remembered as well, that the term "Breach of the Peace" does not have to be alleged in the formal complaint in court. It is merely the legal means of making an arrest, however, it should be explained fully in an officer' s complaint in court to justify the arrest, as no statutory right of arrest exists under item #3.
- b. Items #4 & #5 - Statutory Right of Arrest. This is the most common type of warrantless arrest made in practice. It is purely a right given by the legislature, and has no relation to the common law rule previously covered. Not to confuse the sensitive area of warrantless arrest, but we do have a few isolated examples of instances whereby there are actually two authorities for making misdemeanor arrests, one of which is, the case of Commonwealth v. Gorman, 288 Mass 294 (1934). The Supreme Judicial Court ruled that operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, was offense amounting to a breach of the peace, thus immediately creating a new right of arrest under item #3. In later years the Legislature created new statutory right of arrest for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of intoxicating liquor under section 21 of Chapter 90 of the general laws. This is a rarity of course, and the statutory right of arrest is used more commonly.

As an added reminder, the term "Breach of the Peace" is not the specific name of a crime in the Commonwealth, as it may be in some other states. Most of the misunderstanding of this subject in the past stemmed from this area. A person is not arrested and formally charged with a "Breach of the Peace", although this has been frequently quoted as such in news media. It is not the subject of a criminal charge, but the reasons justifying a warrantless arrest, when these facts are present. Not all misdemeanor offenses involve a "Breach of the Peace," because if they did, all would be arrestable, and we would not use item #4.

As a final example, the term "Breach of the Peace" may be equated with terms "vandalism," "white collar crime," "corruption," etc., which in and of themselves do not spell out a crime, but rather are descriptive of acts that, in fact, do spell out crimes. The rationale of the Gorman case clearly indicates that it is not only loud, boisterous action that may involve "Breach of the Peace." Gorman was arrested for operating under the influence of liquor, while seated at the wheel of a parked motor vehicle, and the major thrust of the decision was that if he continued to operate the motor vehicle, he could create a "Breach of the Peace" by endangering lives and safety of the public. The Breach of the Peace may be prospective and/or anticipated, as long as there is present criminal activity.

C. In Presence of an Officer

The term "in presence of an officer" is of great importance to police officers particularly in the matter of lawful warrantless arrests for offense in the misdemeanor class. With very limited exceptions, misdemeanors must be committed in the presence of an officer to justify a warrantless arrest.

The substance of various court decisions on the subject of "in presence" is that it means what comes to an officer's attention through one or more of his five senses (sight, hearing, touch, taste, smell). An offense is committed "in presence" or "in view" of an officer, within the rule authorizing an arrest without a warrant, when an officer sees an act constituting the offense, though at a distance, or when circumstances with his observation give probable cause for belief that the defendant has committed an offense, or when he hears a disturbance created by the offense, and proceeds at once to the scene, or if the offense is continuing, or has not been fully consummated when the arrest is made. An offense is taking place within the "view" of an officer so as to authorize an arrest without a warrant, when the officer's senses afford him knowledge that the offense is being committed. What is required is that the officer, by use of his senses, has reason to believe the misdemeanor is now occurring before him. The offense must be occurring while the officer is on the scene. Officers who are working together on a case may combine their collective perception so that if the composite otherwise satisfies the presence requirement that requirement is deemed satisfied although the arresting officer does not himself witness all the elements of the offense. (See W.LaFave, Search and Seizure. A Treatise on the Fourth Amendment, s.5.1 © at 28 (1996); Commonwealth v. Zirpolo, 37 Mass App. Ct. 307, 639 N.E. 2d 1083 (1994).

This of course does not mean arriving at the scene and being told about some misdemeanor that happened before your arrival. In the old English case of Regina v. Tooley, 2 Ld. Haynes 296(1301), Lord Chief Justice Holt states the rule as follows: A constable cannot arrest, but when he sees an actual breach of the peace, and, if the affray be over, he cannot arrest."

The case of Commonwealth v. Thomas R. Conway, 316 N.E. 2d 757 (1974) illustrates this point. The defendant was arrested for knowingly using a motor vehicle without authority of the owner. The court ruled the arrest unlawful because the officers arrived on the scene fifteen minutes after the automobile had been in use, the officers did not see the defendant in the vehicle, and the offense is a misdemeanor.

V. POWERS & DUTIES OF POLICE OFFICERS

Chapter 41, Section 98 of the Massachusetts General Laws (M.G.L.), is that part of the law where police officers obtain their powers and duties.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98.

The chief and other police officers of all cities and towns shall have all the powers and duties of constables except serving and executing civil process. They shall suppress and prevent all disturbances and disorder. They may carry within the commonwealth such weapons as the chief of police or the board or officer having control of the police in a city or town shall determine; provided, that any law enforcement officer of another state or territory of the United States may, while on official business within the commonwealth, carry such weapons as are authorized by his appointing authority. They may examine all persons abroad whom they have reason to suspect of unlawful design, and may demand of them their business abroad and whither they are going; may disperse any assembly of three or more persons, and may enter any building to suppress a riot or breach of peace therein. Persons so suspected who do not give a satisfactory account of themselves, persons so assembled and who do not disperse when ordered, and persons making, aiding and abetting in a riot or disturbance may be arrested by the police, and may thereafter be safely kept by imprisonment or otherwise unless released in the manner provided by law, and taken before a district court to be examined and prosecuted.

Whoever is arrested and charged with any offense committed during a riot, disturbance or mass demonstration may be fingerprinted, in accordance with the protocol of the identification system of the department of the state police and may be photographed.

If a police officer stops a person for questioning pursuant to this section and reasonably suspects that he is in danger of life or limb, he may search such person for a dangerous weapon. If he finds such weapon or any other thing the possession of which may constitute a crime, he may take and keep it until the completion of the questioning, at which time he shall return it, if lawfully possessed, or he shall arrest such person.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98A.

A police officer of a city or town who is empowered to make arrests within a city or town may, on fresh and continued pursuit, exercise such authority in any other city or town for any offence committed in his presence within his jurisdiction for which he would have the right to arrest within his jurisdiction without a warrant. Said officer may return any person so arrested to the jurisdiction wherein said offence was committed. Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as limiting the powers of a police officer to make arrests and in so far as possible this section shall be deemed to be declaratory of the common law of the commonwealth.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98C.

In any city or town which accepts the provisions of this section no uniformed police officer, and no other uniformed person empowered to make arrests, employed by such city or town shall be required to wear a badge, tag or label of any kind which identifies him by name, but any such officer or other person employed by such city or town who does not wear any such badge, tag or label shall wear a badge, tag or label which identifies him by number.

M.G.L. Chapter 41 Section 98D.

Each city or town shall issue to every full-time police officer employed by it an identification card bearing the officer's photograph and identifying information. The secretary of public safety and security may adopt regulations relative to the form, content and issuance of such identification cards and to the carrying thereof by municipal police officers. Such identification card shall be carried on the officer's person and shall be exhibited upon lawful request for purposes of identification.

348 Mass. 129

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Middlesex.

v.

John D. LAWTON (and a companion case).

Argued Oct. 5, 1964. Decided Dec. 1, 1964.

Defendants were convicted of breaking and entering in the nighttime and possessing burglarious instruments. The Superior Court, Gourdin, J., entered judgments and defendant appealed. The Supreme Judicial Court, Wilkins, C. J., held that officer who had learned of recent break and at once went to house involved, was told that occupant had seen man in heavy dark coat run out of back door and onto and across adjacent golf links toward designated street, who soon afterwards came upon defendant attired in heavy dark coat when temperature was between 85 and 90 degrees and who was rebuffed by obscene replies and outright refusal to answer when he attempted to interrogate defendant by way of brief threshold inquiry had reasonable cause to arrest on charge of breaking and entering, and defendant was not entitled to have evidence obtained in incidental search suppressed.

Judgments affirmed.

Before *129 WILKINS, C. J., and SPALDING, WHITTEMORE, CUTTER, KIRK, SPIEGEL and REARDON, JJ.

Opinion

WILKINS, Chief Justice.

These two indictments, respectively for breaking and entering in the nighttime and for possession of burglarious implements (G.L. c. 266, §§ 15, 49), were tried before a judge sitting without jury. At the trial, which was made subject to G.L. c. 278, §§ 33A-33G, as amended, the defendant was convicted of both crimes, and has appealed. The errors assigned and argued are (1) to the denial of a motion to suppress evidence made before trial and heard by the same judge who presided at the trial; (2) to the denial of the same motion when renewed at the trial; and (3) to the denial of the defendant's request in each case for a finding of not guilty on all the evidence as matter of law.

* 131 1. We summarize the evidence at the hearing of the motion to suppress before trial. The only witness was Officer Fitzsimmons of the Newton Police. On July 24, 1963, about 10:30 P.M. he was in a cruising car when he received information that a break had taken place at 67 Dorset Road, Waban. He learned this from a police radio dispatch to the effect that a woman had just called and reported that, as she entered her house, a man wearing a dark jacket ran out the back door toward the Braeburn Golf Course, which was right in back of the house. Officer Fitzsimmons went to the house where inspectors were interviewing the occupants. Officer Fitzsimmons learned from other officers that the man had run across the golf course toward Fuller Street. About 11:20 P.M. Officer Fitzsimmons, alone in the cruising car, saw the defendant standing at a bus stop at the corner of Commonwealth Avenue and Washington Street,

West Newton. This was about two blocks from the Fuller Street entrance of the golf course and a mile from the house where the break occurred. The temperature was very hot, between eighty-five and ninety degrees. The defendant was wearing a heavy black jacket. Officer Fitzsimmons asked him why he was standing there. The defendant in obscene language replied that it was none of the officer's business. Upon being asked his name, the defendant made the same answer. To a question as to where he was coming from, the defendant said 'the Newton-Wellesley Hospital,' and that if the bus should come, he was going to get on it. Officer Fitzsimmons called by radio for the sergeant in charge at the station, who arrived in a 'cruiser' with another officer. Officer Fitzsimmons then arrested the defendant for being abroad in the nighttime. See G.L. c. 41, § 98, as amended through St. 1957, c. 688, § 1, entitled 'Powers and duties of police officers,' which reads **826 in part: 'During the night time they may examine all persons abroad whom they have reason to suspect of unlawful design, and may demand of them their business abroad and whether they are going * * *. Persons so suspected who do not give a satisfactory *132 account of themselves*** maybe arrested * * *.' The unlawful design of which Officer Fitzsimmons suspected the defendant was breaking and entering, but he was not charged with that until after he had been booked at the police station and searched. Officers there took from him a silver dollar in a plastic case which the lieutenant in charge knew had come from a break and was later identified as coming from 67 Dorset Road. The officers also took from the defendant a bag which contained a claw hammer, punch set, screw driver, chisel, a pair of gloves, a pair of rubber-soled shoes, and two flashlights, one a wink light identified as taken in a previous break in Waban. The defendant did not answer any of the 'regular booking questions,' and did not give his name until after two hours, namely, at 1:30 A.M.

12 The defendant argues that the denial of the motion was error, because G.L. c. 41, § 98, is unconstitutional in so far as it authorizes a police officer to make an arrest for being abroad in the nighttime. This, it is contended, is contrary to the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as permitting an arrest 'on suspicion.' It is also argued that § 98 is unconstitutionally vague 'as affording no guidance to the police officer, who is the sole judge as to whether a person gives a satisfactory account of himself. We shall not decide these questions because there was probable cause for arrest for breaking and entering. To be sure, the police officer, who was a layman and not a legal technician, did not state this to be the ground of arrest during the nighttime encounter on the city streets. But the citizens of the Commonwealth, whom the police are organized and exist to protect, and the Commonwealth should not be conclusively bound or limited by the officer's choice of words made subjectively in the active execution of his duties. A police officer in the solution of a crime and in the presence of one he thinks committed it is not a judge with time for mature consideration. On the contrary, his position more nearly resembles that of a sentry at his post in time of war. Upon his alertness and judgment depends the *133 safety of the many. Officer Fitzsimmons was confronted by a practical problem calling for an immediate exercise of judgment. Without delay he had to reach a decision as to whether he had probable cause to hold the defendant or whether he must let the defendant go, an action which might finally and conclusively eliminate the defendant from the case. If the facts known to the officer reasonably permitted a conclusion that probable cause existed for a charge of breaking and entering, the arrest should be treated as legal even though he at first assigned another ground. Sec Brinegar v. United States, 338 U.S. 160, 174-176, 69 S.Ct. 1302, 93 L.Ed. 1879.

3 We are of opinion that the combination of facts known to Officer Fitzsimmons reasonably permitted such a conclusion. He had learned of a recent break from his superiors and at once went to the house. He was told that a female occupant had seen a man in a heavy dark coat run out of the back door and onto and across the adjacent golf links toward Fuller Street. Soon after, while searching in the vicinity of the Fuller Street entrance to the golf course, he had come upon the defendant attired in a heavy dark coat. He could reasonably conclude that not many men would be abroad that night in that vicinity attired in an article of clothing so unsuited to a temperature of eighty-five to ninety degrees. He followed the elementary and highly reasonable course of attempting to interrogate the defendant by way of a brief threshold inquiry. See **827 Commonwealth v. Lehan, Mass., 196 N.E.2d 840.1 He was rebuffed by obscene replies and outright refusals to answer. This reception by the defendant was much more suspicious than that of the 'unconvincing reply' (p. 87) which was made to the police officer in Bell v. United States, 102 U.S.App.D.C. 383, 254 F.2d 82, cert. den. 358 U.S. 885, 79 S.Ct. 126, 3 L.Ed.2d 113. For other Federal cases of unsatisfactory replies to police officers, see Ellis v. United States, 105 U.S.App.D. C. 86, 264 F.2d 372, cert. den. 359 U.S. 998, 79 S.Ct. 1129, 3 L.Ed.2d 986; Robinson v. United States, 109 U.S.App.D.C. 22, 283 F.2d 508, cert. den. 364 U.S. 919, 81 S.Ct. 282, 5 L.Ed.2d 259, cert. den. sub nom. Dawson v. United States, 365 U.S. 827, 81 S.Ct. 716, 5 L.Ed.2d 707, cert. den. sub nom. Williams v. United States, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S.Ct. 718, 5 L.Ed.2d 708; Campbell v. United States, 110 U.S.App.D.C. 109, 289 F.2d 775.

*134 2. The evidence at the trial was not substantially different from that at the hearing on the motion before trial. The defendant does not argue that it was. In fact he argues both motions simultaneously.

The renewed motion was rightly denied.

45 3. The bag, the articles in it, and the silver dollar were discovered in a reasonable search incident to a lawful arrest. Commonwealth v. Holmes, 344 Mass. 524, 525, 183 N.E.2d 279, and cases cited. They were admissible in evidence and with the other testimony were ample to prove the crimes charged.

6 4. The defendant contends that Marjory M. Alberts testified that the house and the articles taken were hers. The indictment for breaking and entering charges that the house and articles belonged to Sidney Alberts, her husband. This was not a variance. See G.L. c. 277, §§ 25, 35; c. 278, § 9. The property, both real and personal, could be found to have been in the actual or constructive possession of the husband. Commonwealth v. Binkiewicz, 342 Mass. 740, 748-749, 175 N.E.2d 473. See Commonwealth v. McLaughlin, 103 Mass. 435, 436.

5. The requests for findings of not guilty were rightly denied.

Judgments affirmed.

v.

GORMAN

288 Mass. 294

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Worcester.

Nov. 2, 1934.

Report from Superior Court; Worcester County; Buttrick, Judge.

T. Francis Gorman was convicted of operating a motor vehicle on a way while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. On report by a judge of a district court sitting in the Superior Court under statutory authority.

Verdict to stand.

The defendant, having in his possession a license to operate motor vehicles, was arrested without a warrant by a state police officer, who found the defendant in the act of operating a motor vehicle upon a way while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. G.L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 90, § 24, as amended by St. 1932, c. 26. After being committed to the lockup, the defendant gave bail for his appearance before the District Court. The recognizance, we assume, conformed to G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 276, § 65. After complaint against the defendant had been made to the District Court, the arresting officer failed to 'endorse upon the complaint a statement of his doings,' as required by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) *296 c. 218, § 34. No warrant was issued, an arrest on which might have validated the continuance of a custody invalid before. Kelly v. Griffin, 241 U. S. 6, 36 S. Ct. 487, 60 L. Ed. 861; Stallings v. Splain, 253 U. S. 339, 343, 40 S. Ct. 537, 64 L. Ed. 940.

In the District Court, before pleading to the merits of the complaint, the defendant made a motion to quash the complaint and also filed a 'plea to the jurisdiction,' based on the alleged unlawfulness of the arrest and of the procedure in bringing him before the court. These were overruled, and the defendant was convicted. On appeal to the Superior Court, he renewed the motion and the plea. These were again overruled, and after trial a verdict of guilty was returned.

A fine was imposed (see Commonwealth v. McCan, 277 Mass. 199, 200, 178 N. E. 633, 78 A. L. R. 1208 ; Commonwealth v. Boston & Maine Transportation Co., 282 Mass. 345, 346, 185 N. E. 40; compare Commonwealth v. Baldi, 250 Mass. 528, 537, 146 N. E. 11), the execution of the sentence was suspended, and the judge reported the questions which the defendant sought to raise by the motion and the plea, namely, whether the arrest was unlawful and whether any illegality in the arrest and in the failure to indorse a return upon the complaint entitled the defendant to be discharged instead of being tried and convicted.

1 The defendant contended that the right of an officer to arrest without warrant for an offence relating to the operation or control of motor vehicles is limited by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 90, § 21, to the arrest of an operator who does not have in his possession a license to operate motor vehicles; and that only an investigator or examiner appointed by the registrar of motor vehicles may arrest without a warrant, for the offence of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, one who possesses such a license .

We think, however, that the statute relied on does not by implication, cut down the common law authority of an officer. State police officers have throughout the Commonwealth 'all the powers of constables, except the service of civil process, and of police officers and watchmen.' G.L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 22, § 9A. Constables have common *297 law power as peace officers to make arrests without warrant in cases in which such arrests are permitted by law. Hartley v. Inhabitants of Granville, 216 Mass. 38, 102 N. E. 942, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 392, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 725; Commonwealth v. Hastings, 9 Metc. 259. In Sharrock v. Hannemer, Cro. Eliz. 375, 376, Beaumont [Beaumont], J., said, 'A constable and sheriff are conservators of the peace at the common law.'

The offence of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor is classified by our statute as a misdemeanor, G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 274, § 1; chapter 90, § 24, as amended by St. 1932, c. 26. For the common law, see Commonwealth v. Carey, 12 Cush. 246, 252; Jones v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 329, 347-350 ; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 499, 6 S. Ct. 148, 29 L. Ed. 458. A peace officer, in the absence of statute (Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 159, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475; Creeden v. Boston & Maine Railroad, 193 Mass. 280, 79 N. E. 344, 9 Ann. Cas. 1121), may arrest without warrant for a misdemeanor which (1) involves a breach of the peace (2) is committed in the presence or view of the officer (Commonwealth v. McLaughlin, 12 Cush. 615; McLennan v. Richardson, 1k Gray, 74, 77 Am. Dec. 353; Commonwealth v. Ruggless 6 Allen, 588, 590; Carroll v. United States, 267 U. S. 132, 156, 157, 45 S. Ct. 280. 69 L. Ed. 543, 39 A. L. R. 790), and (3) is still continuing at the time of the arrest or only interrupted, so that the offence and the arrest form parts of one transaction (Commonwealth v. Hastings, 9 Mete. 259, 263; Leddy v. Crossman, 108 Mass. 237; Scott v. Eldridge, 154 Mass. 25, 27 N. E. 677, 12 L. R. A. 379; Eldredge v. Mitchell, 214 Mass. 480, 483, 102 N. E. 69; Price v. Seeley, 10 CL & F. 28; R. v. Light, 7 Cox C. C. 389. See, also, Am. Low Inst. Restatement, Torts, §§ 119, 121, 140, 141). In R. v. Tooley, 2 Ld. Ray. **620 1296, 130 l; Id., 11 Mod. 242, 250, Lord Holt states the rule as follows; A constable cannot arrest but where he sees an actual breach of the peace; and if the affray be over,*** he cannot arrest.' In the same case, reported in Holt 485, 490, sub-nomine. The Case of the Reforming Constables, his statement reads, 'A constable may arrest a man that breaks the peace in his view, but if it be done out of his view, he cannot.' In the present case the only point upon which there can be doubt as to the right to arrest without warrant, is whether the offence involves a breach of the peace.

298 The breach of the peace that justifies arrest for a misdemeanor without warrant must be something more than that which used to be alleged in indictments and complaints as a legal incident of every criminal offence. See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 277, § 33. Not every misdemeanor involves a breach of the peace. For example, the possession of short lobster involves none, Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 159, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475; Voluntary drunkenness in private, though a crime (Commonwealth v. Conlin, 184 Mass. 195, 68 N. E. 207), is not of itself a breach of the peace (Commonwealth v. O'Connor, 7 Allen, 583). Compare statutory rights of arrest for drunkenness. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 272, § 44; Commonwealth v. Cheney, 141 Mass. 102, 6 N. E. 724, 55 Am. Rep. 448; Trebeck v. Croudace, [1918] 1 K. B. 158. On the other hand, an affray or assault is a typical breach of the peace. Commonwealth v. Tobin, 108 Mass. 426, 429, 11 Am. Rep. 375; Leddy v. Crossman, 108 Mass. 237. In Ford v. Breen, 173 Mass. 52, 53 N. E. 136, violent, profane and obscene language used in a dwelling to the annoyance of persons outside was deemed a breach of the peace. See, also, Commonwealth v. Foley, 99 Mass. 497; Commonwealth v. Oaks, 113 Mass. 8. This case does not require us to draw the line among conflicting decisions in other jurisdictions for the purpose of classifying offences as involving a breach of the peace, or not. It is worth notice, however, that in United States v. Hart. Fed. Cas. No. 15,316, Pct. C. C. 390, Washington, J., held that driving a carriage at an immoderate rate of speed through a principal street was a breach of the peace, justifying an arrest by a constable without a warrant.

If there is a present criminal offence (Quinn v. Heisel, 40 Mich. 576), the breach of the peace that justifies arrest without a warrant may be a prospective or anticipated one. An officer, who sees a person committing a misdemeanor of such a sort that a breach of the peace is likely to follow unless the offender be restrained, need not delay an arrest until the harm has been done, nor limit his acts of restraint or detention to those which may be necessary merely to prevent the expected breach. Commonwealth v. Hastings, 9 Mctc. 259, 263. We think that the dictum of Banks, L. J., in *Trebeck v. *299 Croudace*, [1918] 1 K. B. 158, 166, states the common law. He said: 'From the very nature of things the arrest of a drunken person in the street may very frequently be justified on the ground of an anticipated breach of the peace, and particularly so when the alleged offender is in charge either of a loaded gun, or of a motor vehicle, both very dangerous instruments from the point of view of the public safety when in the hands of a drunken person.' The only difference between the case so stated, and the present case, is that the charge against the present defendant was not that he was intoxicated or in a drunken condition, but merely that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Commonwealth v. Lyseth, 250 Mass. 555, 558, 146 N. E. 18; State v. Rodgers, 91 N. J. Law, 212, 215, 102 A. 433. But even that milder degree of alcoholic effect is likely to make an operator of a motor vehicle a public menace, and to induce in him such reckless conduct as may make him criminally responsible for unintended assault and even manslaughter. Banks v. Braman, 188 Mass. 367, 369, 74 N. E. 594; Commonwealth v. Arone, 265 Mass. 128, 163 N. E. 758. In our opinion, the offence involves a breach of the peace, and justifies an officer in arresting without a warrant a person whom he sees in the act of committing it.

Because of its public importance, we have dealt with the lawfulness of the arrest. But there is another answer.

Mr. Justice Holmes said, in Michigan Trust Co. v. Ferry, 228 U. S. 346, 353, 33 S. Ct. 550, 552, 57 L. Ed. 867: 'Ordinarily jurisdiction over a person is based on the power of the sovereign asserting it to seize that person and imprison him to await the sovereign's pleasure.' In criminal cases, an arrest, upon a warrant or without warrant, is the usual means of bringing defendants before the court, and the alternative method of summons in minor cases is comparatively new. St. 1881, c. 127, § 1, G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 276, § 24. In the eighteenth century, civil actions were regularly begun, in practice if not in theory, by arrest upon a capias writ. 9 Holdsworth, Hist.

Eng. Law, 250 et seq. In carefully restricted **621 form this practice still survives. G.L. (Ter. Ed.) cc. 224, 226. When the court has jurisdiction over the case, and the defendant is physically *300 before the court to answer to the plaintiff a possible view is that the unlawfulness of the arrest that brought the defendant there is immaterial in that case, and that the court will proceed to try the merits, leaving the defendant to the remedy of an action against the arresting officer. This view has been taken in some jurisdictions even in civil cases. More v. Earl Rivers, Style, 222; O'Keefe v. Delaney, 31 New Brunswick, 299, 303; McNab v. Bennett, 66 Ill. 157, 161; Compare, however, Willington v. Steams, 1 Pick. 497; Illsley v. Nichols, 12 Pick. 270, 275 et seq., 22 Am. Dec. 425; Baker v. Copeland, 140 Mass. 342, 4 N. E. 606. This view is not necessarily inconsistent with the doctrine that an arrest or other service obtained through the act of the plaintiff in bringing the defendant into the State by force or fraud will not give the court jurisdiction over him, the reason given being that the plaintiff will not be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong. Ex parte Johnson, 167 U.S. 120, 126, 17 S. Ct. 735, 42 L. Ed. 103; Ex parte Taylor, 29 R. I. 129, 69 A. 553. See, also, Paine v. Kelley, 197 Mass. 22, 83 N. E. 8; Diamond v. Earle, 217 Mass. 499, 105 N. E. 363, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1178, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 984; Lamb v. Schmitt, 285 U. S. 222, 52 S. Ct. 317, 76 L. Ed. 720.

Even though the view just stated be not taken in civil cases, it may nevertheless be adopted in criminal cases. The latter concern directly the public peace and order, and are prosecuted by the Commonwealth, to which the wrongdoing of its officers cannot be attributed. It is true that earlier cases in this court are not fully decisive, for in them the defendant had waived the point by pleading to the merits and going to trial, instead of saving the point by a plea such as was filed in the present case. Commonwealth v. Oakes, 151 Mass. 59, 60, 23 N. E. 660, and cases cited. Commonwealth v. Murphy, 155 Mass. 284, 286, 29 N. E. 469; Commonwealth v. Tay, 170 Mass. 192, 48 N. E. 1086; Commonwealth v. Conlin, 184 Mass. 195, 68 N. E. 207; Flito's Case, 210 Mass. 33, 95 N. E. 971. See, also, Ford v. United States, 273 U.S. 593, 606, 47 S. Ct. 531, 71 L. Ed. 793; State v. Rosenblum, 102 N. J. Law, 125, 130 A. 614; State v. Baker, 102 N. J. Law, 349, 133 A. 785; State v. McClung, 104 W. Va. 330, 140 S. E. 56 A. L. R. 260. But it is intimated in Commonwealth v. Wait, 131 Mass. 417, 419, Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 155, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475, and Commonwealth v. Tay, 170 Mass. 192, 48 N. E. 1086, and we think it is the law, that where a defendant is physically before the court upon a complaint or indictment, *301 either because he is held in custody after an arrest or because he has appeared in person after giving bail, the invalidity of his original arrest is immaterial, even though seasonably raised. 2 Hawk. P. C., c. 27, § 102; Starkie, Crim. Pl. (2d Ed.) 297; Hawkins, J., in R. v. Hughes, 4 Q. B. D. 614, 625, et seq.; People v. Eberspacher, 79 Hun, 410, 29 N. Y. S. 796; People v. Snell, 216 N. Y. 527, 111 N. E. 50, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 222. Compare Albrecht v. United States, 273 U.S. 1, 8-11, 47 S. Ct. 250, 71 L. Ed. 505. It has even been held that a defendant brought within the jurisdiction by unlawful force or fraud may be tried for crime. Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, 27 S. Ct. 111, 51 L. Ed. 148, 7 Ann. Cas. 1047; 18 A. L. R. 509, note. See, also, Commonwealth v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 33 N. E. 82, 19 L. R. A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475; Lascelles v. State of Georgia, 148 U.S. 537, 13 S. Ct. 687, 37 L. Ed. 549; Morse v. United States, 267 U. S. 80, 45 S. Ct. 209, 69 L. Ed. 522.

In reaching this result we have not relied upon any condition in the recognizance requiring the defendant to appear and abide the sentence. See Brown v. Getchell, 11 Mass. 11; Baker v. Copeland, 140 Mass. 342, 4 N. E. 606; Lane v. Holman, 145 Mass. 221, 223, 13 N. E. 602; Everett v. Henderson, 146 Mass. 89, 14 N. E. 932, 4 Am. St. Rep. 284; Simmons v. Richards, 171 Mass. 281, 50 N. E. 617; Washington National Bank v. Williams, 188 Mass. 103, 106, 74 N. E. 470; Mann v. Cook, 195 Mass. 440, 81 N. E. 286; People v. Shaver, 4 Park. Cr. R. (N. Y.) 45; Sedgewick v. Houston, 9 Houst. (Del.) 113, 32 A. 12, 43 Am. St. Rep. 165; Dickinson v. Farwell, 71 N. H. 213, 51 A. 624; Albrecht v. United States, 273 U. S. 1, 9, 47 S. Ct. 250, 71 L. Ed. 505.

5 The return which should be indorsed upon the complaint in the case of an arrest without a warrant (G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 218, § 34), is not essential to the validity of the complaint. It relates only to the service or means by which the defendant is brought before the court. Where, as in this case, the defendant is physically before the court for trial, an omission to make return of the arrest avails him no more than illegality in the arrest itself.

Verdict to stand.

First Amendment

United States Constitution Amendment I

Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances

Massachusetts Declaration of Rights

Article XVI

The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a state: it ought not, therefore, to be restrained in this commonwealth. The right to free speech shall not be abridged.

Article XIX

The people have the right, in an orderly and peaceable manner, to assemble to consult the common good: give instructions to their representatives, and request the legislative body, by way of addresses, petitions, or remonstrance's, redress the wrongs done them, and grievances they suffer.

The four freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment are: speech, press, assembly and religion. In the course of their duties police officers generally deal with issues regarding freedom of speech, assembly and on a limited basis, press. Police Officers have the difficult duty of achieving the balance between protecting these rights and maintaining order in the community. In maintaining order in the community nothing can replace the sound judgment of a reasonable, prudent and well-trained police officer. Using this judgment the officer simply has to balance the context of the activity with its likely result. Therefore conduct that would fall short of death, injury or property damage should be tolerated. Riot, mob-rule and malicious destruction should not. Civil disobedience may be tolerated, but criminal disobedience is not.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

Protected Activity

Speech -

Freedom of speech means that individuals have the right to advocate their ideas. No matter how unpopular that idea is, it is protected by the First Amendment. Case law has developed the proposition that speech alone, without more, is protected. Words which some may consider to be crude, offensive, abusive or vulgar, cannot be made the subject of criminal sanctions.<sup>1</sup> Although certain four-letter words may be distasteful, "one man's vulgarity is another man's lyric,"<sup>2</sup> and no arrest can be made for the use of such words. One of the hallmarks of a free society is tolerance for the expression of ideas that may seem undemocratic or even dangerous. So it is that "freedom to think as you will and speak as you think are means indispensable to the discovery of and spread of political truth."<sup>3</sup> The short of it is, if all we have is going on is "words" the speaker will be protected. Generally, a person cannot be arrested for making a speech, or for his choice of words. There are exceptions to this general rule, which will be discussed shortly. Additionally peaceful begging has been ruled a communicative activity protected by the First Amendment in Massachusetts.<sup>4</sup>

Symbolic Speech - Symbolic speech is also protected. It has been defined as acts which communicate ideas.<sup>5</sup> Various hand gestures, such as thumbs up, thumbs down, raising the middle finger, etc. come to mind. The wearing of black armbands to protest a war,<sup>6</sup> swastikas,<sup>7</sup> and burning a flag<sup>8</sup> are all forms of protected of symbolic speech and are protected. The First Amendment protects not only speech itself, but also other expressive conduct that is "intended to convey a particular message" under circumstances in which "the likelihood is great that the message would be understood by those who view it".<sup>9</sup>

Unprotected Activity

Fighting Words - One form of speech that is not protected is "fighting words."<sup>10</sup> This concept is defined as words, which by their very nature tend to inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace. The test for fighting words is the effect that they have on an ordinary citizen. They must be a personally abusive epithet which, when addressed to the ordinary citizen, are as a matter of common knowledge, likely to provoke a violent reaction.<sup>11</sup> In order to arrest a speaker under these circumstances an officer must be prepared to show that a violent reaction was likely. If a fight does occur, constitutional issues can be avoided by charging the combatants with assault and battery. An officer need not wait until the fight is in progress. When there is an immediate threat to public safety, peace or order, the power of the State to prevent or punish it is obvious.

The fighting word concept does not apply when they are addressed to a police officer. This is so because an officer is trained to exercise a higher degree of restraint than the average citizen.<sup>12</sup> On the other hand, conduct accompanied by speech directed to police officers that actually disrupts or obstructs them in the performance of their duty is not protected by the First Amendment.

Speech Plus - Another form of speech not protected by the First Amendment is "speech plus." This is defined as speech, which will incite immediate criminal activity.<sup>13</sup> When words are used in such circumstances and are of a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about substantive evils, the government may act.<sup>14</sup> An officer must be able to show either that an immediate serious violence was to be expected or was advocated or that past conduct furnished reason to believe that such advocacy was then contemplated.<sup>15</sup> We are not talking about speech that causes unrest, dissatisfaction or that stirs people to anger. Such speech is protected. We are talking about speech that advocates violence. Such speech can be prohibited only when it is directed to inciting imminent lawless action and is likely to produce such action.<sup>16</sup> We are talking about speech that is likely to produce imminent disorder, speech that incites lawless action, speech that will result in violence. A spectator who says "we'll take the fucking streets later" is protected.<sup>17</sup> For his speech to reach the "speech plus" category, the speaker must be inciting lawless action.

FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY

When you think about it, the right to assembly is the right to free speech in a group. People have a right to gather and discuss their ideas and advocate those ideas jointly. As long as this is done in a peaceful manner, it is of no concern to the police. When the exercise of the right to assembly comes into conflict with the enjoyment of other well recognized rights: the police are often called to resolve the conflict. Some give and take is expected. Participants in the Boston Marathon, the Patriot' Super Bowl celebration, various parades and walks for charities , have all gathered and no doubt have annoyed non-participants. People also gather for political purposes.

City streets, sidewalks and parks are public forums. They are recognized as normal places for exchange of ideas. This does not mean that the freedom is beyond all control. Government may regulate the time, place and manner of assembly if there is a strong rational reason, unrelated to the suppression of free expression.<sup>18</sup> Such as traffic flow and public safety.

Occasionally, a group will gather that is hostile to the speaker and/or his views. It is the duty of the police to protect him from imminent spectator violence with reasonable crowd control techniques. However, the police may suppress otherwise constitutionally protected speech if imminent spectator violence cannot be satisfactorily prevented or curbed by means of reasonable crowd control techniques and if the speech itself is the apparent cause of the impending disorder. It is not a constitutional principle that, in acting to preserve order, the police must proceed against the crowd whatever its size and temper and not against the speaker.<sup>19</sup> The danger must be real, not just generalized police fears of violence.

Public property, which is not a traditional forum for public discussion and which is used for government business can be regulated to a greater degree. In addition to time, place and manner regulations, the state may reserve the forum for its intended purposes. When government property is not dedicated to open communication the government may restrict its use to those on official business.<sup>20</sup> The state has the power to preserve the property under its control to the use for which it was lawfully dedicated. Thus, conduct which interferes with the activity of a draft board, welfare office, school or court proceeding can be prohibited. Obviously, there is no right to uninvited access to private property, even business property. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has stated that the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights allows limited access to common areas of shopping malls for election related activity (distribution of campaign literature, gathering signatures) only. The management of the shopping malls may place reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on this activity.<sup>21</sup>

Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 269, sections 1, 2, and 4 make it a crime for five or more persons, being armed with clubs or other dangerous weapons, or ten or more persons, whether armed or not, to unlawful, riotously or tumultuously assemble. If they do not immediately and peacefully disperse upon command of the police or other officials in the name of the commonwealth, they may be arrested and charged with unlawful assembly. These statutes have their origin in common law. They contemplate a meeting with intent to commit a crime by open force, or to execute a common design, lawful or unlawful, in an unauthorized manner likely to cause courageous people to apprehend a breach of the peace. It must be such to alarm reasonable persons.

DISTURBING THE PEACE, DISORDERLY PERSONS, RESISTING ARREST

I. Introduction.

The right of the people to express their views openly, no matter how unpopular they may be is undeniable. Freedom of speech is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and Article 16 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights. Equally undeniable is the right of the people to assemble in an orderly and peaceable manner. Freedom of assembly is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and Article 19 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights. When the right of the people to express their views openly comes into conflict with the enjoyment of other well recognized rights of individuals, however, the police are often called to the scene to resolve the conflict. Three options that may be used to resolve such conflicts are discussed below.

II. Disturbing the Peace.

Disturbing the peace is a common law crime, which has an express statutory penalty under G.L. c. 272, s. 53. This crime prohibits activities which:

1. Most people find to be unreasonably disruptive; and
2. Which do in fact infringe on someone's right not to be disturbed.

This crime carries a right of arrest, if it occurs in the officer's presence and in a public place under G.L. c. 272, s. 54. Under common law, this crime is a misdemeanor, which amounts to a breach of peace, in either a public or private place, for which an officer would have an in presence right of arrest. This charge would be appropriate in every case in which a "disorderly" arrest could also be made, and would be the required charge when disruptive activity could not be properly charged as "disorderly."

Example: Those who block a public street or highway to which the public has an easement of passage, and thereby interfere with this easement are creating a nuisance. Those blocking the street would be considered disturbers of the peace under the common law, since their conduct tends to annoy anyone present and not favoring it, and they could be so charged. The fact that the police are called to the scene is indicative that citizens are annoyed.

III. Disorderly Persons.

This crime is punishable under G.L. c. 272, s. 53. The elements of the crime of a disorderly person are defined as

Persons who, with purpose to cause public inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating the risk thereof:

1. Engage in fighting or threatening, or in violent or tumultuous behavior, or
2. Create a hazardous or physically offensive condition by any act which serves no legitimate purpose of the actor.

This statute carries both a common law, and statutory right of arrest under G.L. c. 272, s. 54. It must occur in the officer's presence and on a public way or other public place. A charge of disorderly person can only be applied to conduct which involves no lawful exercise of the federal or state constitutional rights noted above in Section I.

Generally speaking, if a person's activity consists of speech alone, it will be protected. However, speech might be prohibited if it consists of "fighting words" that by their very utterance inflict injury; or "speech plus" words that tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace.

IV. Resisting Arrest.

Persons commit the crime of resisting arrest, under G.L. c. 268, s. 32B, if they knowingly prevent or attempt to prevent a police officer from effecting an arrest by:

1. Using or threatening to use physical force or violence against the police officer or another or:
2. Using any other means which creates a substantial risk of causing bodily injury to such police officer or another.

Those who physically interfere would also be subject to arrest as a Disorderly Person.

Fourth Amendment

Amendment IV.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Article XIV, Declaration of Rights, Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Every subject has a right to be secure from all unreasonable searches and seizures, of his person, his houses, his papers, and all his possessions. All warrants, therefore, are contrary to this right, if the cause or foundation of them be nor previously supported by oath or affirmation; and if the order in the warrant to a Civil Officer, to make search in suspected places, or to arrest one or more suspected persons, or to seize their property, be not accompanied with a special designation of the persons or objects of search, arrest, or seizure; and no warrant ought to be issued but in cases, and with the formalities prescribed by the laws.

Introduction

The Fourth Amendment comes into play daily as perform the functions of a police officer. The freedom against unreasonable searches and seizures will apply to almost every action that we take as a police officer. In the course of applying principles of criminal procedure we must analyze what course of action would be reasonable given all the facts of a certain situation.

Exclusionary Rule and Fruit of the Poisonous Tree

The United States Supreme Court created the exclusionary rule in Weeks v. United States, 232 US 383 (1914) and applied the rule to the states in Mapp v. Ohio, 367 US 643 (1961). The exclusionary rule was created to deter improper police procedures and is used to remedy violations of the Fourth Amendment by police officers. Any evidence that is discovered by police in violation of an individual's rights granted by the Fourth Amendment is considered Fruit of the Poisonous Tree and will be suppressed in a court of law. In other words, any evidence obtained illegally by police officers will be excluded from use in the trial and prosecution of the arrested person.

ARREST

The Fourth Amendment states "the right of people to be secure in their persons, house, papers and effect". The following discussions on Arrest and Threshold Inquiries will focus on that right of individuals to secure in their persons. When police officers seize an individual, either during an arrest or while conducting a threshold inquiry, the principles of the Fourth Amendment apply and must be followed.

During the Introduction to the Legal Process course an arrest was defined as the taking under real assumed authority, custody of another person for purposes of holding him to answer to a criminal charge or from preventing harm to himself or others. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has ruled that there are three elements that must be present in order for an arrest to occur (Mass General Hospital v. Revere, 385 Mass 772, 1982):

Intent - The court will use an objective test to determine if the police officer had the intent to arrest. Would a reasonable person feel free to leave under the circumstances? Based on the police officers words and actions if a reasonable person feels free to leave - there is no intention to arrest. If the reasonable person does not feel free to leave - there is an intention to arrest.

Communication - The second element in the definition of an arrest will be satisfied if based on the officer's words and actions that the person understands that he is being arrested. As human beings we communicate both verbally and non-verbally. Both forms of our communication process will be taken into account by the courts. Generally, we clearly state to the individual that they are under arrest. But our intent may be communicated non-verbally by placing the person in handcuffs and seating them in the back seat of our cruiser.

Control - There must be some type of physical restraint of the individual to satisfy the third element of an arrest. The physical constraints can be an actual seizure - some type of physical restraint (holding onto an individual, handcuffing, placing in the rear of the police cruiser). The control also can be constructive where an individual obeys the Officer's verbal commands and submits to their authority.

The exact moment of arrest is extremely important to police officers as certain rights may attach to the arrested person (right to use the telephone, right to know true grounds for the arrest, right to be examined for injuries, Jenkins hearing etc.). In order for an arrest to be lawful a police officer must have probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed, the offense must be arrestable and the officer must be within his jurisdiction.

Lawful Arrests consist of:

I. Probable Cause - Probable cause has been defined as the level of proof more than reasonable suspicion but less than proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Probable cause exists if a reasonable and prudent person would believe the arrested committed the crime charged. Police officers establish probable cause by personal observations and information received during the course of the investigation. In Massachusetts, police officers must satisfy a two prong test in order to use information received as a basis of probable cause - RELIABILITY & BASIS OF KNOWLEDGE.

In Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, (1964), and in Spinelli v. United States, 394 U.S. 410 (1969), the US Supreme Court stated that if an informant's tip is to be used as the basis for establishing probable cause, then two factors must be demonstrated.

First, the informant must be shown to be reliable. Some informants are considered to be reliable in themselves, i.e. police officers, known victims, or known witnesses to a crime. Another type of reliable informant is one who has given information in the past, which information has resulted in convictions, or an arrest and the seizure of contraband. Similarly, an informant who makes a declaration against penal interest (admits his own involvement in a crime) is also considered reliable.

Second, the informant must be shown to have a basis of knowledge concerning the information which he claims to possess. There must be facts to support his conclusions. These are the underlying facts upon which a neutral magistrate could determine the existence of probable cause.

If either "prong" of this two part test is missing, probable cause will not exist, unless the information is supplemented by other facts, such as corroboration by the officer's observations.

In Illinois v. Gates, 103 S.Ct. 2317 (1983), the US Supreme Court found this test to be too rigid, and adopted a "totality of the circumstances" test to determine probable cause. However, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Commonwealth v. Upton, 476 N.E.2d 548 (1985) held that the Gates test was "unacceptably shapeless and permissive" to satisfy the substantive protection required by article 14 of the Declaration of Rights of the Massachusetts Constitution.

Plainly speaking, officers in Massachusetts are required by the State Constitution to continue to apply the two-prong Aguilar-Spinelli test when using an informant's tip as the basis for probable cause. This test applies to arrest warrants and search warrants, as well as warrantless arrests, searches and/or seizures. If an officer is going to use an informant's tip as the basis for establishing probable cause, he must be prepared to show that the informant is reliable, and has a basis of knowledge.

2. Arrestable Offenses -As we learned in Intro to the Legal Process (Hogan's hand) a police officer has the right of arrest for:

- A. Felony - committed in his presence
- B. Felony - based on probable cause
- C. Misdemeanor - committed in his presence AND amounts to a breach of the peace
- D. Misdemeanor - the offense has a statutory right of arrest if committed in his presence
- E. Misdemeanor - the offense has a statutory right of arrest based on probable cause
- F. Arrest Warrant - An arrest warrant is an order by the court to arrest an individual and bring him to court to answer to a criminal charge. An arrest warrant must be based on probable cause - the judge or magistrate will make a probable cause determination after reviewing the written statement police officer applying for the warrant. The person's name, address, physical address and offense charged should be listed on the warrant. If the subject's name is not known, a detailed description must be included on the warrant. The suspect must be able to be identified with reasonable certainty. Officers do not need to have the warrant in their possession in order to make the arrest. Rather the officer must have knowledge that the warrant is in full force and effect. Police Officers must have an arrest warrant in order to enter a person's dwelling for a crime that has been completed. An officer must also have a reasonable belief that the location is the suspect's dwelling and that the suspect is present when the arrest warrant is executed. Exceptions to the requirement of an arrest warrant are: consent, fresh and continuous pursuit and exigent circumstances.

In order to fall under the fresh pursuit theory officer must be able to show the arrest in the dwelling resulted from pursuing the suspect into the dwelling and that getting an arrest warrant would not be practical. The pursuit must be part of a continuing investigation with no break

Exigent Circumstances are present if taking the time to get a warrant would be unreasonable and there is a necessity for immediate entry. Examples of exigent circumstances include injury, violence and destruction of evidence. The court has noted several factors when deciding on the issue of exigent circumstances (Comm v Vz iriyahiranpaiboon, 412 Mass 224, 1992 & Comm v. Forde, 367 Mass 798, 1975):

- 1. Crime involved violence/suspect was armed
- 2. Probable Cause has been established
- 3. Strong reason to believe suspect is in the dwelling
- 4. Suspect may escape if apprehension is delayed
- 5. Evidence will be destroyed, lost or moved

There may be situations that police officers have to enter a third party dwelling in order to arrest a person named in an arrest warrant. Without consent, exigency or fresh pursuit being present, officers must obtain a search warrant to enter the dwelling as well as the arrest warrant for the suspect.

3. Jurisdiction - Police officers may arrest a person named in an arrest warrant anywhere in Commonwealth. As a general rule police officer may exercise their police powers for warrantless arrests within their geographic boundaries. In order for a warrantless arrest to be valid outside these geographic boundaries it must fall within one of the following categories:
  - A. Fresh and continuous pursuit outside the Commonwealth - Mass General Law Chapter 276, Sections 10A-10D allows a police officer in fresh pursuit of a person wanted for a felony to continue into a bordering state to make the arrest. The person arrested must be brought in front of the court in the county where the arrest is made.
  - B. Fresh and continuous pursuit into other cities and towns - Mass General Law Chapter 41, Section 98A allows police officers to arrest an individual in any city or town for an offense that was committed in the officer's presence, occurred in his jurisdiction and was arrestable in his jurisdiction.
  - C. Boston, Brookline and Newton - Officers in Boston, Brookline and Newton have full police powers up to 500 yards into the territory of each others departments (Acts & Resolves of 1998, chapter 212).
  - D. Mutual Aid Agreements - Cities and towns may enter into mutual aid agreements (Mass General Laws Chapter 40, Section 8G). These agreements give the police officers the same powers of arrest that they have in their own municipality.
  - E. Request for Police Officers - Mass General Law Chapter 41, Section 99 authorizes the Chief or commander of a police department in one town to request that the Chief in another town send police officers to assist them. There does not have to be a written agreement in place between the two jurisdictions. The request for assistance must be made by the Officer-in-Charge to the Officer-in-Charge.
  - F. Transferred Authority - If an officer observes a crime being committed outside his jurisdiction he should contact the local police department and request and obtain permission to make the stop. (Comm v. Morrissey 422 Mass 1, 1996).

Use of Force - Police Officers are authorized to use a reasonable amount of force when effecting an arrest. The amount of force used must be reasonably necessary to make the arrest, overcome resistance and protect others present. Officers should be guided by their Department Policies governing the use of lethal and non-lethal force.

THRESHOLD INQUIRY

One of the most valuable procedures available to police officers in performing their duties is the Threshold Inquiry. This procedure is a very useful tool, and when properly understood and utilized, it can be effective against the criminal suspect, yet protective of the citizen's state and federal Constitutional guarantees. Police Officers are authorized to conduct threshold inquiries by both statute and case law.

Mass General Law Chapter 41, Section 98 states in part "They may examine all persons abroad whom they have reason to suspect of unlawful design." "If a police officer stops a person for questioning pursuant to this section and reasonably suspects that he is in danger of life or limb, he may search such person for a dangerous weapon." The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court stated "we are of the opinion that MGL c 41, s. 98 constitutionally permits a brief threshold inquiry where suspicious conduct gives the officer reason to suspect the questioned person of unlawful design that is, that the person has committed, is committing, or about to commit a crime. What is reasonable within the principle of threshold inquiry must be decided in each case." (Comm v. Lehan, 347 Mass 197, 1964).

The United States Supreme Court addressed the issue in Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1 (1968). In Terry a 39 year veteran detective of the Cleveland Police Department was working in the downtown area, where he had worked for many years. He observed two men "that didn't look right." He continued to watch the men and saw walking back and forth looking in a jewelry store window several times. After one of the men looked in the window the men engaged in a conversation. After a while a third man entered the conversation. Believing they were about to rob the store the detective approached the men and asked some questions. Their responses to him were mumbled. He conducted a limited search of the outer clothing of each man and found a firearm on two of them. They were arrested and convicted of carrying concealed weapons. The Court stated in their opinion, "where a police officer observes unusual conduct which leads him reasonably to conclude in the light of his experience that criminal activity maybe afoot and that the persons whom he is dealing with may armed and presently dangerous he is entitled for the protection of himself and others in the area to conduct a carefully limited search of the outer clothing of such person in an attempt to discover weapons which might be used to assault him.

STOP

An officer may not stop every person whom he sees, but may stop those about whom he has a reasonable suspicion of unlawful design. Simply stated this means if an officer observes activity, which based on his training and experience, leads him to reasonable suspect that a person has, is, or is about to commit a crime, the officer may briefly detain that person to investigate.

This detention may be based on less than probable cause, but reasonable suspicion is more than a hunch or mere suspicion, or a good faith belief. Reasonable suspicion may be founded on an officer's personal observations, or may be based on information received, together with the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from those observations and/or information.

Because the stop is based on less than probable cause, it must be brief and not turn into a custodial situation normally associated with an arrest. There are no specific time limits as to how long a Threshold Inquiry may last. Such will be determined on a case by case basis as dictated by the total situation, what the courts call "the whole picture." The officer should make a common sense objective determination as to how he may quickly, yet thoroughly, confirm or dispel his suspicions.

An officer may use a reasonable amount of force while making the stop. The amount of force must only what is reasonably necessary to bring to suspect to a stop.

REASONABLE SUSPICION

An officer may use the same facts and inferences in which he forms probable cause to form reasonable suspicion. The officer's suspicions must be based on specific and articulable facts. While one of the following examples alone is sufficient to rise to the level of reasonable suspicion, a combination of these examples may allow an officer to conduct a stop of a person.

- high crime area
- matches the description of a suspect
- in the area of a recently committed crime
- criminal record/reputation
- apprehension at the sight of police
- evasive answers
- flight from police
- unusual behavior
- time of day
- furtive gestures
