INTERESTS OF THE *AMICUS CURIAE*¹

Judicial Watch, Inc. (“Judicial Watch”) is a non-partisan, public interest organization headquartered in Washington, D.C. Founded in 1994, Judicial Watch seeks to promote accountability, transparency and integrity in government, and fidelity to the rule of law. Judicial Watch regularly files amicus curiae briefs and lawsuits related to these goals.

Amicus, as an issue-oriented educational 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, has a deep and vested interest in the ability to engage in free and fair speech. A large part of Amicus’ mission is to publish records and information it has obtained through open records laws. The ability to inform the public on matters of genuine and profound public interest is an essential aspect of free speech rights. The Ninth Circuit’s erroneous decision upholding the lower court’s permanent injunction amounts to unconstitutional viewpoint discrimination that must be corrected. In addition to the constitutional injuries Petitioners will continue to suffer, the public continues to suffer as well, by being purposefully prevented from learning the facts regarding an exceptionally important issue. Abortion affects not only personal choices, but national choices like elections, federal funding, and agency regulations. It is absolutely essential that the public have the full story of what transpired on Petitioners' videos.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The Ninth Circuit's decision to uphold the district court is a blow to First Amendment rights that rises to the level of significant public importance. The Ninth Circuit's decision to rubberstamp viewpoint discrimination has caused substantial adverse consequences for the Petitioners in this case, including an especially unjust and onerous monetary award, the inability to use the videotapes as evidence in their criminal trial, and a chilling of their First Amendment rights. But the damage of the Ninth Circuit's decision goes far beyond the Petitioners. The decision has also caused substantial adverse consequences for the public in general. The freedom of speech logically incorporates the right to receive the speech as well. The right to speak is rendered meaningless without an audience free to listen.

By permanently silencing the Petitioners' speech, the general public is subsequently harmed by not being able to receive the information contained on the videotapes. The importance of the information on the videotapes being suppressed by the Ninth Circuit cannot be overstated. As Amicus will demonstrate, the videotapes that were released changed the national and state landscape in dramatic ways. The general public was largely unaware of the shocking underbelly of the abortion lobby which Petitioners exposed through the release of the videotapes.

Petitioners videos changed federal and state laws, spurred federal and state investigations, changed private business changes, and led to severe public backlash. By suppressing the further release of information, the Ninth Circuit effectively blocked access to information the public had a right to know. Absent this Court's intervention, the Petitioners and public are left with no avenue for legal relief for the adverse consequences they have suffered and will continue to suffer.

This Court's intervention is greatly needed.

ARGUMENT

A. The Petition Presents an Important Public Issue Which Warrants This Court's Attention.

This case presents the intersection of extraordinarily important issues of public concern: the First Amendment, the right to know, and human fetal tissue trafficking. As such, it is imperative that the Court intervene. See e.g., Lau v. Nichols, 414 U.S. 563, 565 (1974) (cert granted because of the public importance of the question presented); see also United States v. Republic Steel Corp., 362 U.S. 482, 484 (1960); Raley v. Ohio, 360 U.S. 423, 435 (1959); United States v. Union Pac. R.R. Co., 353 U.S. 112, 113 (1957); Ex Parte Quirin, 317 U.S. 1, 19 (1942); United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 166 (1940); McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Coal Mining Co., 309 U.S. 33, 42 (1940).

Historically, this Court has recognized that the First Amendment rights of the speaker and the press include the rights of the receiver and audience as well. “It is now well established that the Constitution protects the right to receive information and ideas. ‘This freedom [of speech and press] ... necessarily protects the right to receive ...’” Stanley v. Georgia, 394 U.S. 557, 564 (1969) (quoting Martin v. Struthers, 319 U.S. 141, 143 (1943)); see also Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753, 762-63 (1972); Virginia State Board of Pharmacy v. Virginia Citizen Consumer Council, 425 U.S. 748, 756-57 (1976).

This recognition is based on the principle that to give the rights of speech and press any teeth, the right to receive must be included. In his concurring opinion in Lamont v. Postmaster General, 381 U.S. 301 (1965), Justice Brennan explained:

It is true that the First Amendment contains no specific guarantee of access to publications. However, the protection of the Bill of Rights goes beyond the specific guarantees to protect from congressional abridgment those equally fundamental personal rights necessary to make the express guarantees fully meaningful. I think the right to receive publications is such a fundamental right. The dissemination of ideas can accomplish nothing if otherwise willing addressees are not free to receive and consider them. It would be a barren marketplace of ideas that had only sellers and no buyers.

Id. at 308 (Brennan, J., concurring, whom Goldberg and Harlan, JJ., joined) (internal citations omitted).

The Court confirmed Justice Brennan's "right to receive" principle in Virginia State Board of Pharmacy v. Virginia Citizen Consumer Council, 425 U.S. 748 (1976) when it held:

Freedom of speech presupposes a willing speaker. But where a speaker exists, as is the case here, the protection afforded is to the communication, to its source and to its recipients both. This is clear from the decided cases. In Lamont v. Postmaster General, 381 U.S. 301 (1965), the Court upheld the First Amendment rights of citizens to receive political publications sent from abroad. More recently, in Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753, 762-763 (1972) we acknowledged that this Court has referred to a First Amendment right to 'receive information and ideas,' and that freedom of speech 'necessarily protects the right to receive.'

Id. at 756-57. After all, what good is the right to speak if the audience is prevented from receiving the information spoken?

Incorporating the right to receive information as an essential part of the rights to speech and press completes the purpose designed for protecting speech: debate and the free exchange of ideas, regardless of popularity. As this Court held in Terminiello v. Chicago, 337 U.S. 1 (1949):

The vitality of civil and political institutions in our society depends on free discussion. As Chief Justice Hughes wrote in De Jonge v. Oregon, 299 U.S. 353, 365, it is only through free debate and free exchange of ideas that government remains responsive to the will of the people and peaceful change is effected. The right to speak freely and to promote diversity of ideas and programs is therefore one of the chief distinctions that sets us apart from totalitarian regimes. Accordingly a function of free speech under our system of government is to invite dispute.

Id. at 4.

This right to receive is most significant when the information rises to the level of prominent public concern and public interest. “Speech by citizens on matters of public concern lies at the heart of the First Amendment, which ‘was fashioned to assure unfettered interchange of ideas for the bringing about of political and social changes desired by the people.’” Lane v. Franks, 573 U.S. 228, 325-35 (2014) (quoting Roth v. United States, 354 U. S. 476, 484 (1957)).

Petitioners' "speech" is comprised of the videotapes of Respondents discussing human fetal tissue, including how they harvest and sell it. The general topic of human fetal tissue harvesting has been a topic of great public interest and concern. The more specific topic of trafficking human fetal tissue has been a topic of even more significant public interest and concern.

Beginning in 2015, Petitioners began publicly releasing videotapes of undercover conversations they had with Respondents regarding the business of human fetal tissue. See Petition for Writ of Certiorari ("Petition") at 4-6. The videos were shocking and revealed publicly, for the first time, the grotesque nature of human fetal tissue trafficking. Petitioners' videos hit the mark with the general public and became an issue of intense public interest and concern: no longer would human fetal tissue be trafficked in the dark.

The impact of Petitioners' videos has been immense at all levels of American society. Federal and state legislatures and executive branches launched investigations, proposed and passed legislation, and issued executive orders in response to Petitioners' videos. Presidential campaigns included discussion and debate about Petitioners' videos and human fetal tissue trafficking. Private businesses cut business ties with Planned Parenthood and companies involved in human fetal tissue trafficking as identified on Petitioners' videos. Colleges and universities held conferences, hosted speakers and panels, and dove into the legal, moral, and philosophical nature of the content of Petitioners' videos. The public's response included peaceful protests, petitions, boycotts, and perhaps most importantly, making their voices heard at the ballot boxes. Even the international community was impacted by Petitioners' videos. Some of the most prominent examples of the impact of Petitioners' videos are as follows:

1. Federal Investigations

- July 15, 2015: the U.S. House Judiciary Committee announced its intention to investigate allegations that Planned Parenthood doctors altered abortion procedures to increase the chances of obtaining usable fetal tissue. The hearing began on September 9, 2015.² The investigation concluded in December 2016 with the release of a detailed report calling for the Department of Justice to immediately investigate.³

- July 22, 2015: a group of 49 bipartisan U.S. Senators wrote to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (“HHS”) after the release of Petitioners’ first video, calling on HHS to cooperate in any and all future investigations into Planned Parenthood’s role in fetal organ harvesting and requested that the Secretary confirm an immediate and thorough compliance review.⁴
- September 9, 2015: the U.S. House Committee on Oversight and Reform sent Petitioners and StemExpress requests for documents and materials regarding fetal tissue acquisition and sale. On September 29, 2015, the Committee held a hearing on the federal funding Planned Parenthood receives and how it spends its funds, including how it transfers funds from its 501(c)(3) arm into its 501(c)(4) arm for the purpose of lobbying. The Committee issued a memorandum in response which made the case that Planned Parenthood is “self-sustaining” and does not need federal funds.⁵

- April 20, 2016: the U.S. House Select Investigative Panel on Infant Lives began a hearing on “The Pricing of Fetal Tissue.”⁷ This investigation resulted in criminal and regulatory referrals as well as a scathing 471-page report revealing the practice of human tissue procurement businesses paying abortion performers per tissue specimen in violation of federal law.⁸
- December 13, 2016: the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee sends criminal referrals to the U.S. Department of Justice (“DOJ”) and the Federal Bureau of Investigations (“FBI”). After a significant

10. International Response

- Petitioners’ videos reached beyond the U.S. borders and invoked responses from the international community, including members of the European Parliament who called on the E.U. to defund Planned Parenthood. Alojza Peterle, a European Parliament member from Slovenia, stated that “It is unacceptable that an organization which appears to be breaching human rights, ethical standards, and laws is operating in the EU and is also being funded by EU taxpayers. I consider their activities as a serious offense over the first article of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, which talks about the inviolability of human dignity.”⁵²

As evidenced by the events cited above, this is not simply a case of a federal circuit getting a case wrong resulting in isolated adverse effects. This is a case that rises to the level of substantial public concern and interest with profound and lasting adverse effects for the general public.

B. The Ninth Circuit's Decision Has Caused Substantial Adverse Consequences.

The videos that Petitioners were able to publicly distribute have clearly had a significant impact on the country. See supra § A. Petitioners' foes felt that impact in federal and state legislation, federal and state elections, federal and state funding, and private funding. It was imperative for the Respondents that, in order to protect their businesses, Petitioners' unseen videos must be suppressed. Respondents accomplished this goal through elected officials and jurists who used their positions to censor Petitioners' First Amendment rights. See Petition at 9-11; see also Alexandra DeSanctis, "Big Abortion v. David Daleiden", Human Life Review, published May 21, 2012 (available at <https://eppc.org/publication/big-abortion-v-david-daleiden/>). And in censoring Petitioners' speech, the public has been harmed. Without the complete picture of Respondents' role in human fetal tissue trafficking, debate of federal and state legislation is missing context and facts. Without parliament-call-on-eu-to-defund-planned-parenthood-until-investigations-into-u-s-video-scandal-are-carried-out-in-europe/the complete picture of Respondents' role in human fetal tissue trafficking, elections are conducted without a full accounting of candidates support or opposition of the harvesting and selling of human fetal tissue. Without a complete picture of Respondents' role in human fetal tissue trafficking, the public's right to know is utterly extinguished.

It is important to note that the two individuals most responsible for targeting Petitioners and censoring Petitioners' speech are now the current Vice President of the United States and the U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services.⁵³ Censorship is a very politically profitable business when left unchecked.

The Court's intervention is needed to restore accountability in the Ninth Circuit, protect the First Amendment rights of the Petitioners to speak and disseminate their videos, and of the public to receive them.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Amicus respectfully requests that the Court grant the petition for writ of certiorari.
