- Accessible 24 hours each day during the 40 days before Election Day, and be accessible until 8 pm on election day.
- Equipped with a single slot or mailbox-style lever to allow absent voter ballot applications and absent voter ballot return envelopes to be placed in the AV drop box, and all other openings on the AV drop box must be securely locked.
- Regularly inspected to confirm that the AV drop box complies with all requirements, beginning 75 days before each election and until election day.
- Located in a publicly accessible, well-lit area with good visibility.
- Video monitored by the municipal clerk to ensure effective monitoring of that AV drop box, beginning 75 days before each election and until Election Day.
    - Only for AV drop boxes that were not ordered or installed before October 1, 2020.
    - Beginning January 1, 2026, all AV drop boxes must be video monitored, regardless of when it was ordered or installed.
- Subject to immediate reporting to local law enforcement if vandalism or suspicious activity occurs in the immediate vicinity of the AV drop box.

Only a clerk, deputy clerk, or sworn member of the clerk's staff can collect absent ballots from the drop box. Ballots that have been deposited into ballot drop boxes by 8 p.m. on Election Day must be collected and counted.

75 days before each election and until election day, an authorized individual must regularly inspect each absent voter ballot drop box used in that city or township to confirm that the absent voter ballot drop box complies with all above requirements.

Beginning 35 days before each election and until election day, an authorized individual must collect, on any day in which the city or township clerk's office is open for business, the election materials deposited in an absent voter ballot drop box located in the city or township. Those materials must be immediately returned to the city or township clerk's office.

All absent voter ballot return envelopes collected from an absent voter ballot drop box must be transported in an approved ballot container.

Collection from any drop box located off grounds of the city or township clerk's office or satellite office must be documented utilizing the collection form available in the eLearning Center.

XV. Military and Overseas Voters and accessible absent voter ballot envelopes

The completed ballots of military and overseas voters, as well as the completed ballots of voters using accessible ballots, will not arrive in a standard ballot return envelope. These voters receive their ballots electronically and do not receive an absent voter ballot return envelope, so they cannot return their ballot in such an envelope. Federal Write-In Absentee Ballots (FWAB), MOVE ballots that have been printed and returned, and accessible ballots that have been printed and returned will likely arrive in plain envelopes. Clerks should check their incoming mail for plain envelopes that look like they may contain the completed ballots of military and overseas voters, as well as the completed ballots of voters using accessible ballots. Some indicators that a plain envelope may contain such a ballot include envelopes that have "Official Ballot Material" written on them and envelopes with a signature on the back of the envelope.

If an envelope containing the completed ballots of a military and overseas voter, or the completed ballot of a voter who used an accessible ballot, is accidentally opened before Election Day, the envelope should be immediately resealed and placed with other returned absent voter ballots for processing on Election Day.

XVI. Ballot verification requirement

A voter must sign the certificate on the absent voter ballot envelope prior to returning the envelope containing the ballot to the clerk. By signing the certificate, the voter verifies the voter's eligibility to vote, the secrecy of the voter's ballot, and the lawful return of the voter's ballot.

An absent voter application with Power of Attorney (POA) signature in lieu of the voter's signature cannot be accepted. The Michigan Election Law allows a voter unable to sign due to physical impairment to make a "mark" or to use a signature stamp.

RECEIVED by MCOC 3/28/2024 12:37:48 PM

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Upon receiving a returned absent voter ballot envelope, the clerk must verify the voter's identity by checking that the voter's signature on the certificate matches the voter's signature saved in the QVF. Just as with absent voter ballot applications, a signature is invalid only if it differs in significant and obvious respects from the voter's signature on file. Slight dissimilarities must be resolved in favor of the voter, and an exact signature match is not necessary to determine that a signature agrees sufficiently with the signature on file. Because signatures on absent voter ballot applications have already been checked against the QVF and found to match prior to the absent voter ballot being issued, a clerk may check the signature on the absent voter ballot envelope against the voter's signature on their absent voter ballot application in lieu of checking the signature against the voter's signature stored in the QVF.

If the voter fails to sign the certificate or if the signature on the certificate does not match the signature on the voter's registration record, the ballot cannot be removed from the envelope, transported to an absent voter counting board, or counted unless the signature mismatch is cured. The ballot should be marked rejected in the QVF. The clerk should immediately contact the voter and instruct the voter to visit the clerk's office to sign their absent voter ballot envelope or cure the mismatched signature on the absent voter ballot envelope. If the voter is unable to sign their absent voter ballot envelope or otherwise cure their signature, the original ballot may be spoiled and the voter may be reissued a replacement ballot. The voter must make a request for a new ballot in writing.

For further guidance on reviewing signatures, contacting voters, and curing missing or mismatched signatures, refer to Signature and Cure Guidance[5] in the eLearning Center.

XVII. Spoiling an absent voter ballot

Voters have a right to spoil an absent voter ballot that has been received but not tabulated by the clerk for any reason. After the ballot has been spoiled, the voter must be issued a new absent voter ballot. The voter's request to spoil their ballot must be made in writing and must be signed by the voter.

There are three ballot-spoiling scenarios, and each has different timing requirements. Those scenarios are explained below:

Voter did not receive their absent voter ballot

A voter who requested but never received their absent voter ballot may request that the ballot sent to them by the clerk be spoiled and a new ballot be issued. If the request is made before 5 p.m. on the second Friday prior to the election, the voter may request the clerk mail the newly issued absent voter ballot to the voter, or the voter may opt to complete the ballot in person at the clerk's office. If the request is made after 5 p.m. on the Friday before the election, but before 4 p.m. on the day before the election, the voter may only be issued a new ballot by appearing in person at the clerk's office. It the request is made on or before the Sunday prior to the election, the voter may leave the clerk's office with their newly issued absent voter ballot. If the request is made on the day prior to the election, the voter must complete and return the newly issued absent voter ballot in the clerk's office; the voter cannot leave the office with the ballot.

A voter who requested but not receive their absent voter ballot may opt to vote in person at their polling place on Election Day instead of requesting a new absent voter ballot. The voter will be asked to complete an Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot at their precinct when they appear to vote, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot. A voter who signs the Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot may be subject to challenge by a properly credentialed election challenger as an absent voter in the polls.

Voter received but did not return their absent voter ballot

A voter who requested and received, but did not return, their absent voter ballot may request that the ballot sent to them by the clerk be spoiled and a new ballot be issued. If the request is made before 5 p.m. on the Friday prior to the election, the voter may request the clerk mail the newly issued absent voter ballot to the voter, or the voter may opt to complete the ballot in person at the clerk's office. If the request is made after 5 p.m. on the Friday before the election, but before 4 p.m. on the day before the election, the voter may only be issued a new ballot by appearing in person at the clerk's office. It the request is made on or before the Sunday prior to the election, the voter may leave the clerk's office with their newly issued absent voter ballot. If the request is made on the day prior to the election, the voter must complete and return the newly issued absent voter ballot in the clerk's office; the voter cannot leave the office with the ballot.

A voter who requested and received, but did not return, their absent voter ballot may opt to vote in person at their polling place on Election Day instead of requesting a new absent voter ballot. The voter will be asked to complete an Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot at their precinct when they appear to vote, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot. Alternatively, the voter may surrender their absent voter ballot to the election inspectors at the precinct, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot.

A voter who surrenders their absent voter ballot to election inspectors in the polling place is not subject to a challenge as an absent voter in the polls. A voter who signs the Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot may be subject to challenge by a properly credentialed election challenger as an absent voter in the polls.

Voter received and returned their absent voter ballot

Voter's signature verified by clerk

A voter who requested, received, and returned their absent voter ballot, and whose ballot was accepted by the clerk after the voter's signature was found to match the signature on file with the clerk, may request that their returned absent voter ballot be spoiled by the clerk and that the clerk issue them a new absent voter ballot. If the request is made before 5 p.m. on the second Friday prior to the election, the voter may request the clerk mail the newly issued absent voter ballot to the voter, or the voter may opt to complete the ballot in person at the clerk's office. A voter cannot request that a returned and accepted absent voter ballot be spoiled after 5 p.m. on the second Friday prior to Election Day. Additionally, once tabulated, verified ballots cannot be spoiled for any reason.

A voter who requested, received, and returned their absent voter ballot, and whose ballot was accepted by the clerk after the voter's signature was found to match the signature on file with the clerk, cannot request that their ballot be spoiled on Election Day. Such a voter is not eligible to cast a ballot at their precinct on Election Day.

Voter's signature not verified by clerk

A voter who requested, received, and returned their absent voter ballot, but whose ballot was not accepted by the clerk after the voter's signature was found not to match the signature on file with the clerk, is treated in the same manner as a voter who requested but never received their absent voter ballot for the purposes of ballot spoilation. Such a voter may request that their ballot be spoiled. If the request is made before 5 p.m. on the Friday prior to the election, the voter may request the clerk mail the newly issued absent voter ballot to the voter, or the voter may opt to complete the ballot in person at the clerk's office. If the request is made after 5 p.m. on the Friday before the election, but before 4 p.m. on the day before the election, the voter may only be issued a new ballot by appearing in person at the clerk's office. It the request is made on or before the Sunday prior to the election, the voter may leave the clerk's office with their newly issued absent voter ballot. If the request is made on the day prior to the election, the voter must complete and return the newly issued absent voter ballot in the clerk's office; the voter cannot leave the office with the ballot.

A voter whose returned ballot was not accepted by the clerk after the voter's signature was found not to match the signature on file with the clerk may opt to vote in person at their polling place on Election Day instead of requesting a new absent voter ballot. The voter will be asked to complete an Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot at their precinct when they appear to vote, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot.

In addition to spoilation, a voter whose returned ballot was not accepted by the clerk after the voter's signature was found not to match the signature on file with the clerk may appear in person at the clerk's office to cure the signature issue by verifying that the signature on the absent voter ballot envelope is the voter's signature. Voters may cure a missing or mismatched signature on a returned ballot envelope until 5 pm on Friday after Election Day. The voter should contact their clerk for more information about the signature cure process.

Surrendered ballots

A voter who has received an absent voter ballot but who wishes to vote a new ballot in person at their polling place on Election Day may surrender their absent voter ballot to their clerk prior to Election Day or may surrender their absent voter ballot to election inspectors at their polling place on Election Day. To surrender an absent voter ballot, the voter should write "I am surrendering my ballot" on the absent voter ballot envelope and sign the envelope. A clerk receiving a surrendered ballot prior to Election Day should mark the ballot as surrendered in the QVF. A voter who has surrendered their absent voter ballot cannot be issued a new absent voter ballot; the voter's only opportunity to vote after surrendering their absent voter ballot is to appear at their polling place on Election Day.

XVIII. Deceased or incarcerated absent voters

If a clerk receives notice that a voter has died within the 40 days before an election, they must check whether that voter was issued an absent voter ballot. If the deceased notice comes after the voter has completed and returned their absent voter ballot, but prior to that ballot's tabulation, the local clerk should reject and should not tabulate the absent voter ballot.

Additionally, if a clerk is certain that a voter is currently serving a sentence in jail or prison, and is thus ineligible to vote, the voter's ballot should be rejected. In either case, the clerk should write "rejected as illegal" on the absent voter ballot return envelope and record the rejection and the reason for the rejection in the QVF.

A person who is incarcerated in a jail awaiting trial or sentencing is permitted to vote in Michigan. A clerk should not reject a person's ballot solely because the person is currently incarcerated. Instead, the clerk must verify that the person has been found guilty and has been sentenced to a term of incarceration before the clerk rejects the person's ballot.

XIX. Posting absent voter information

For any election involving a state or federal office, clerks are required to make the following public postings:

- Before 8:00 a.m. on Election Day, the clerk must publicly post the number of absent voter ballots distributed to absent voters, the number of absent voter ballots returned prior to Election Day, and the number of absent voters delivered to absent voter counting boards for tabulation on Election Day.
- Immediately upon completion of all precinct returns, the clerk must publicly post the total number of absent voter ballots tabulated for the election.

RECEIVED by MCOC 3/28/2024 12:37:48 PM

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

The Bureau has developed a form that clerks may use to report this information; that form is included in Appendix I.

XX. Required recording of AV Ballot information in the QVF

Clerks are required to immediately record the sending and receipt of absent voter ballots in the Absent Voter module of the Qualified Voter File. This module provides an easy and efficient way for election officials to print absent voter ballot applications and ballot labels and to manage the list of voters sent ballots as required by law. Immediate recording of sent and received absent voter ballots also allows voters to track the status of their absent voter ballot via Michigan.Gov/Vote. Information regarding which absent ballots have been sent and received is also included in the ePollbook download of voter information in the Electronic Poll Book on Election Day. This information must be kept current to ensure that election inspectors do not issue an in-person ballot to any voter whose absent voter ballot has already been returned to and accepted by the clerk.

XXI. Voting after registering to vote or updating voter registrations on Election Day

In Michigan, voters may register to vote and obtain an absent voter ballot in the same transaction. The period where a voter may register and obtain an absent voter ballot starts 40 days prior to the election and runs until 8 p.m. on Election Day. While the deadline for persons who are registered to vote at their current address to request an absent voter ballot is 4 p.m. on Election Day, eligible persons may register to vote or update their registration to reflect their current address and receive an absent voter ballot until 8 p.m. on Election Day. A person registering to vote or updating their address on Election Day also has the option of bringing the QVF receipt printed after their successful registration to their precinct and casting a ballot in person at that precinct on Election Day.

The availability of absent voter ballots in Michigan tightens the timelines for clerks to prepare electronic poll books containing all relevant absent voter ballot information for Election Day. Clerks in jurisdictions with 50 or fewer precincts are now required to export electronic pollbook lists from the QVF after 4:00 p.m. on the day before the election to ensure that the electronic poll book has the current information for all voter who requested absent voter ballots or who registered to vote and cast an absent voter ballot on the Monday prior to election.

XXII. Issuing AV Ballots to election-eligible voters who have moved

Voters frequently move during the 40-day absent voting period that precedes every election. Consult the following graphic to determine where such voters are eligible to vote and how the clerk of each jurisdiction should process those voters.

XXIII. Reporting postal service issues

Any clerk experiencing recurring issues with mail delivery may report those issues to electionmail.org. This website aggregates and tracks postal issues and the U.S. Postal Service's response. Reports made to electionmail.org by election officials in Michigan are forwarded to the Bureau of Elections. Issues that may be reported at electionmail.org include:

- Delivery delays;
- Damaged mail;

- Lost mail;
- Undeliverable or returned mail; and
- Misdirected mail.

Please be as detailed as possible when reporting issues to electionmail.org. If possible, include specific addresses and mailing dates to assist USPS in identifying which postal facilities may be involved.

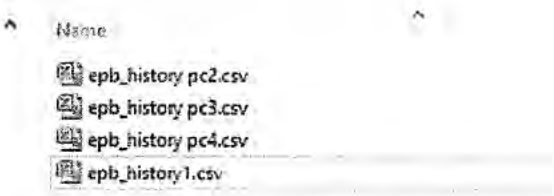
Re: Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA") Request

Dear FOIA Coordinator:

Per the Freedom of Information Act, please provide a copy of the extract files from the electronic poll books for all registrants at all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the election concluding November 8, 2022. These files should be in .CSV or .XLS format and is typically named EPB_History.CSV.



These files may contain the full birthdate and driver's license number of the registrants in your jurisdiction, which is exempt from FOIA release (MCL 168.509gg). Please open the copy of the digital file and erase the birth month, birth day and drivers license number information and save before providing. If you are able to retain the year of birth for the registrants (which is permissible), it would be appreciated.

Instructions on how to locate the requested information is available on pages 40-41 of the Electronic Poll Book Refresh Manual. These pages are included in Exhibit 1 below for your convenience.

Once the outlined redactions have been made there is no other exempt information in this document.
I have not requested any software or information which would somehow be deemed proprietary.

Please note that the electronic pollbooks are an original record and a component of the electronic voting system audit trail and should be retained for a federal minimum of 22 months (52 USC 207) and a state minimum of 24 months (MCL 168.811).

I would prefer to receive information via email. If email is unavailable, please contact me to coordinate an alternative.

Should you have any questions, please let me know.

Thank you.

Attorney Work Product

Hi all,

We wanted to update you on yesterday's U.S. Supreme Court decision about presidential immunity from criminal prosecution in Trump v. US. A complete summary is attached along with the opinion, but big picture, the Court held that a President has (1) absolute immunity for core constitutional powers, (2) "at least" presumptive immunity for all other official acts, and (3) no immunity for unofficial acts. It further held that not only does immunity protect from prosecution, but any immune conduct cannot be used as evidence in a criminal prosecution against the President. Finally, it provided some guidance on the official/unofficial character of the allegations in the case. The decision marks a significant expansion in executive power. In her dissent, Justice Sotomayor said the Majority had endorsed "an expansive vision of Presidential immunity that was never recognized by the Founders, any sitting President, the Executive Branch, or even President Trump's lawyers, until now."

In addition to summarizing the key points of the decision, the attached document also describes the potential impact on the D.C. and Georgia election interference prosecutions and offers some communications considerations, which we hope you find useful. Please don't hesitate to reach out if you have any questions.

Best,
Robert

Hi Heather,

Following up on our earlier conversations regarding the USPS, in collaboration with our clients in Nevada, we've put together a draft Common Interest Agreement for your consideration. Once we've got everyone on board, we can schedule a multi-state call to discuss further. Please let us know if you have any questions or concerns.

Best,

PRIVILEGED & CONFIDENTIAL

COMMON INTEREST AGREEMENT

The parties to this common interest agreement (the "Agreement"), specifically the States of Michigan, Nevada, New York, Oregon, and Pennsylvania (hereinafter the "Parties"), are evaluating legal issues related to the United States Postal Service (the "Postal Service"), including but not limited to issues arising from existing and future litigations challenging statutes, regulations, or other actions regarding the Postal Service's transformation of its processing and delivery network ("network change"), including the Postal Service's failure to seek an advisory opinion from the Postal Regulatory Commission ("PRC").

The Parties to this Agreement have a common interest in network change issues and litigations addressing such issues. The Parties wish to pursue their common interest concerning network change issues and litigations addressing such issues, while avoiding any waiver of the confidentiality of those privileged materials. The Parties agree to share information for the purpose of advancing their common interest in network change issues and litigations addressing such issues, including but not limited to potentially filing amicus briefs, to keep such information and materials confidential, and to protect any privileges attaching to such information and materials to the extent authorized by law. The Parties also agree that the sharing of information, both written and oral, among their staff, management, consultants, experts, and counsel will further their common objectives.

Both federal and state law provide for the sharing of confidential and/or privileged information[1] among those with common interests during the course of and in anticipation of litigation, without a waiver of any otherwise applicable privileges, protections, immunities, and exemptions from disclosure, so that the claims and defenses of the parties may be thoroughly investigated and prepared without giving undue advantage to the opposing side. Maintaining such confidentiality is necessary for the accomplishment of the Parties' objectives with respect to network change issues and litigations addressing such issues. This document sets forth the agreement under which the Parties and their respective staff, management, consultants, experts, and counsel will manage and protect confidential and/or privileged information shared and exchanged in the preparation of amicus briefs or other documents regarding network change issues and litigations addressing such issues.

Therefore, the Parties agree as follows:

1. Parties. The Parties to this Agreement are set forth above. Pursuant to Paragraph 10 below, additional Parties, through their counsel, may join this agreement and become Parties by executing the appropriate version of the attached Addendum, circulating a copy to all Parties and after receiving the approval of the existing Parties in writing or by email within five (5) days of receipt.

[1] "Information," as used in this Agreement, is defined below.

2. Purpose. The Parties share common interests and goals with respect to legal issues related to the Postal Service's network change and potential future litigations involving legal issues related to the same. The Parties recognize that the sharing and disclosure of privileged and confidential information among them is necessary. The purpose of this common interest agreement is to ensure that the privileged and/or confidential information shared will be used in preparing amicus briefs or other documents regarding network change issues and litigations addressing such issues, and the development of a potential future litigation strategy, and that this privileged and/or confidential information will not be disclosed to third parties or otherwise disclosed such that any privileges or other basis for confidentiality attached to these communications and documents shall be preserved and not waived.

3. "Confidential and/or privileged information" is information provided by or exchanged between the Parties, including, but not limited to, documents, materials, information, and communications exchanged among the Parties' staff, management, consultants, experts, and/or counsel, with the expectation of confidentiality and which is subject to one or more applicable privileges, protections, immunities, or exemptions from disclosure, including but not limited to, the attorney-client, attorney work product, deliberative process, and protections. "Confidential and/or privileged information" shall include information provided by or exchanged between the Parties prior to the execution of this agreement pursuant to the Common Interest Doctrine.

4. To avoid misunderstandings or inadvertent disclosure, all documents exchanged pursuant to this agreement should bear the legend "Confidential – Protected by Common Interest Privilege" or words to that effect. However, the inadvertent failure to include such a legend shall not waive any privilege or protection available under this agreement or otherwise. In addition, any Party may, where appropriate, also label documents exchanged pursuant to this agreement with other appropriate legends, such as, for example, "Attorney-Client Privileged" or "Attorney Work Product." Oral communications among the Parties shall be deemed confidential and protected under this agreement when discussing matters related to network change issues and litigations addressing such issues.

5. Non-Disclosure. The Parties agree to protect all communications and documents exchanged among them related to network change issues and litigations addressing such issues, regardless of whether such communications or document exchanges occurred before or after the effective date of this Agreement, as confidential and privileged to the extent allowable under applicable law, based upon all applicable privileges including, but not limited to, the attorney-client privilege, attorney work-product protections, common interest privilege, joint defense privilege, and governmental privileges including, but not limited to, the deliberative process privilege where applicable (hereinafter "Protected Information"). Protected Information

(1) shall not be released, disclosed, discussed or made available to or with any persons or entities who are not Parties to this Agreement, and (2) shall not be used for any purpose other than to further the Parties' common interests described herein, except as provided in paragraphs 6 and 7 infra.

6. Use of Protected Information. Protected Information is to be used by the recipient of the information solely in connection with preparing and presenting the Parties' positions regarding network change issues and litigations addressing such issues. Protected Information may not be shared by a recipient with any non-party to this Agreement without prior written waiver by all Parties to this Agreement, unless the relevant Party determines that disclosure is (i) required by applicable law, and (ii) not otherwise covered by paragraph 7, infra, concerning Requests for Release and/or Disclosure. If the relevant Party determines that disclosure is required by applicable law and not otherwise covered by paragraph 7, infra, then it agrees to use its best efforts, as permitted by applicable law, to provide notice at least five (5) calendar days in advance, to all Parties to this Agreement prior to disclosure.

7. Requests for Release and/or Disclosure. The Parties agree and acknowledge that each Party may be subject to freedom of information or public records laws, and that nothing in this Agreement is intended to alter or limit the disclosure requirements of such laws. A Party who receives a request from a non-party to release, disclose, discuss, or obtain access to any information, including Protected Information (whether by way of a subpoena, discovery request, or request under any federal or state statute) shall use its best efforts, as permitted by applicable law, to provide notice, at least five (5) calendar days prior to the date on which response to such a request is due, to all Parties to the Agreement. Unless the other Parties consent to disclosure or release of Protected Information, the Party receiving the request for disclosure shall assert, to the extent authorized by law, and subject to any mandatory disclosure laws or court orders, all relevant and applicable privileges and other objections that the Party receiving the request determines are relevant and applicable to the disclosure of such information.

8. No Agency or Additional Attorney-Client Relationships. This Agreement shall not create any agency or similar relationship among the Parties. Nor shall this Agreement alter the existing attorney-client relationships among the Parties or create any new attorney-client relationships. No Party shall have authority to waive any applicable privilege or other confidentiality protection on behalf of any other Party; nor shall any waiver of an applicable privilege or protection by the conduct of any Party be construed to apply to any other Party. Nothing in this Agreement is intended or shall be construed to obligate any of the Parties to disclose or share any information or material relating to network change issues and litigations addressing such issues.

9. Enforcement. The Parties agree that a breach of a provision of this Agreement by a Party may cause irreparable harm to the other Parties and therefore agree that injunctive relief is the appropriate means to enforce this Agreement except as otherwise provided by a state's sovereign immunity. No Party shall be subject to any claim for damages as a result of a breach of this Agreement.

10. Modification. It is agreed that any modifications to this Agreement shall be in writing and signed by all Parties. The inclusion of additional states, municipalities, or other government entities as parties to this Agreement shall not be considered a modification and shall be accomplished by having such prospective party execute the attached Addendum and provide a copy to all Parties, provided however, that if any existing Party to this Agreement provides written notice (including by email) of its objection within five (5) business days of receipt of notice of the prospective party's execution of such Addendum, the execution of the Addendum by the prospective party shall be considered an amendment requiring the signature of all Parties in order to become effective.

11. Integration. This written Agreement memorializes the entirety of the Parties' pre-existing oral agreement regarding the confidentiality of their communications. It is agreed that this Agreement itself, any amendments thereto and all discussions among the Parties related to the Agreement are themselves subject to the attorney-client privilege, common interest privilege, and work product doctrine, except as otherwise provided in a Party's specific state law.

12. Termination. Any Party to this Agreement may terminate the Agreement upon written notice to the other Parties. In such instance, the terminating Party and its counsel will continue to be bound by this Agreement with regard to any Protected Information received prior to the termination in accordance with applicable records retention policies.

13. Non-disqualification Agreement. The Parties agree that no Party or attorney for a Party to this Agreement may attempt to use, in any other legal proceeding or case that is not related to the subject matter of this Agreement, either the fact of the Agreement or any information learned as a result of this joint effort as a reason to disqualify any other lawyer or law firm acting as counsel in any future legal proceedings involving network change issues and litigations addressing such issues, consistent with applicable Rules of Professional Conduct.

14. Disclosure of Potential Conflicts/Change in Law. The Parties agree to promptly disclose to each other if their respective positions relating to legal issues related to the Postal Service, including but not limited to issues arising from existing and future litigations challenging statutes, regulations, or other actions regarding network changes, including the Postal Service's failure to seek an advisory opinion from the PRC, may result in a material conflict. Parties also agree to promptly disclose to each other if they determine that they cannot maintain the non-disclosure obligations in paragraph 5, supra, due to a change in law, including, but not limited to, newly enacted legislation, regulation(s), or rule(s), a new interpretation of law, a court decision, or other legally significant development. In the event that such a conflict in position or change in law arises, the notifying Party agrees to promptly terminate this Agreement pursuant to Paragraph 12, supra, in conjunction with disclosure.

15. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts, including electronically, and all counterparts so executed shall collectively constitute one binding agreement of the parties, notwithstanding that all Parties are not signatory to the same counterpart. Counsel signing this Agreement on behalf of the named Party or Parties it represents, certifies that it has the authority to execute this Agreement on behalf of said Party or Parties.

16. Severability. If any provision of this Agreement is determined by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, in whole or in part, such determination shall not affect the validity of any other provision of this Agreement.

17. Effective Date. This Agreement becomes effective upon its execution by at least two Parties (whether in a signature block or execution of the attached Addendum), and shall, once executed, supersede any prior confidentiality agreements among the Parties on the same subject. It may be executed in counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original for all purposes. All of the Parties' communications with each other concerning network change issues and litigations addressing such issues made prior to execution of this Agreement are fully subject to this Agreement. All additional parties added pursuant to Paragraph 10, supra, shall be effective on the 6th day after execution.

18. Successors and Assigns. This Agreement is binding upon, and inures to the benefit of, the Parties and their respective successors and assigns.

19. Substitution of Parties or Counsel. This Agreement shall automatically apply to substitute, additional, or associated counsel who may appear on behalf of a Party. This Agreement shall not be subject to abrogation by any heir, assign, or other successor in interest to any Party hereto. Nor shall such heir, assign, or successor in interest waive any privilege or doctrine with regard to information shared pursuant to this Agreement by, or among, the undersigned counsel and their respective clients. There are no third-party beneficiaries of this agreement.

20. Notification. All notices, in writing or by e-mail, shall be to the signed Parties and/or their designee(s).

It is so AGREED.

VERIFIED COMPLAINT
FOR EXPEDITED DECLARATORY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

There is no other pending or resolved civil action arising out of the transaction or occurrence alleged in the complaint.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

NOW COME Plaintiffs the Michigan Republican Party, the Republican National Committee, and Cindy Berry (collectively, "Plaintiffs"), by and through their undersigned counsel, and state as follows in support of their Verified Complaint against Michigan Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson and Director of Elections Jonathan Brater (collectively, the "Secretary"):

INTRODUCTION

1. Michigan law requires absent voters to sign absent voter ballot return envelopes and mandates that clerks verify those signatures before sending absent voter ballots to election inspectors for tabulation. That is the method by which clerks verify the identity of absent voters as required by the Michigan Constitution and Michigan law. But that's not all—Michigan law also requires clerks to mark those absent voter ballot return envelopes with a statement indicating that the corresponding voter's signature (and thus their identity) has been verified. It appears, however, that this requirement is not being universally observed. And it further appears that the Secretary contributed to this confusion by issuing incomplete guidance materials.

2. As recognized in the Carter-Baker Commission Report, absentee voting "has been one of the major sources of fraud." See, Building Confidence in U.S. Elections: Report of the Commission on Federal Election Reform (i.e., the "Carter-Baker Commission Report"), at 35, September 2005, available at https://www.eac.gov/sites/default/files/eac_assets/1/6/Exhibit%20M.PDF (last visited September 10, 2024). For that reason, the Carter-Baker Commission recommended that "[t]o verify the identity of voters who cast absentee ballots, the voter's signature on the absentee ballot can be matched with a digitized version of the signature that the election administrator maintains," and that this signature matching "should be done consistently in all cases, so that election officials can verify the identity of every new registrant who casts an absentee ballot." Id. at 20 (emphasis added).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

3. Under the Michigan Constitution, each "citizen of the United States who is an elector qualified to vote in Michigan" has the "right, once registered, to vote an absent voter ballot without giving a reason." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(h). This action involves those provisions under the Michigan Constitution and the Michigan Election Law requiring that "election officials shall . . . verify the identity of a voter who votes an absent voter ballot other than in person by comparing the signature on the absent voter ballot envelope to the signature on the voter's absent voter ballot application or the signature in the voter's registration record." Id.

4. The Michigan Election Law requires any voter that chooses to vote by absent voter ballot to sign their absent voter ballot return envelope in order for their ballot to count. MCL 168.764a. Local clerks are then required to verify the signatures on the absent voter ballot return envelopes by comparing those signatures against the voter's "signature on file," which, depending on the circumstances, can mean the signature of the voter contained in the qualified voter file (the "QVF"), the signature of the voter contained on the master card, or, in some instances, the signature on the voter's absent voter ballot application. MCL 168.761. See also MCL 168.766a(7).

5. To that end, MCL 168.765 mandates that city and township clerks "shall review each absent voter ballot return envelope to determine whether the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation in accordance with [MCL 168.766]." MCL 168.765(2). That mandated review and approval process includes "verifying the signature on each absent voter ballot return envelope in accordance with [MCL 168.766a]."

6. This suit focuses on two vital recordkeeping requirements in the above-referenced signature verification process. Specifically, MCL 168.765(2) mandates that: (1) clerks must write or stamp on each absent voter ballot return envelope the date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk (or, if received on Election Day, then clerks must write or stamp both the time and date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk); and (2) after verifying each voter's signature, clerks must include on each approved ballot return envelope "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation." MCL 168.765(2).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

7. The latter of these recordkeeping requirements under MCL 168.765(2)—i.e., the requirement that after verifying a voter's signature, clerks must include on the corresponding ballot return envelope "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation"—is a vital part of the absent voter ballot processing procedure because it enables precinct boards of election inspectors and absent voter counting boards ("AVCBs") to fulfill their statutory duty to confirm that a voter's signature has been verified by the clerk. See MCL 168.768.

8. To that end, absent voter ballots are processed in two different stages under Michigan law. First, the signature verification process is completed by local clerks outside the presence of election inspectors, election challengers, and poll watchers. See, e.g., MCL 168.765(2) (providing that signature verification must be completed by the "city or township clerk," and further providing that "a precinct board of election inspectors or an absent voter counting board must not make any further signature verification for an absent voter ballot return envelope.") (emphasis added). If during the signature verification process the "clerk determines that the elector's signature on the absent voter ballot return envelope is missing or does not agree sufficiently with the signature on file, the clerk shall reject the absent voter ballot and provide the elector with notice and the opportunity to cure the deficiency in accordance with [MCL 168.766(4)]." Id. If, on the other hand, the clerk has verified that the signature on the ballot return envelope sufficiently matches the voter's signature on file, the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation and submitted to a precinct board of election inspectors or an AVCB to be processed on Election Day (i.e., the second stage of the absent voter ballot processing procedure).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

9. While the clerk is responsible for verifying the voter's signature on absent voter ballot return envelopes, the Michigan Election Law precludes election inspectors from tabulating an absent voter ballot on Election Day if (a) the elector's signature is missing from the return envelope, or (b) the clerk's statement that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation as required under MCL 168.765(2) is incomplete. MCL 168.768. Indeed, if either the elector's signature is missing from the return envelope or the clerk failed to compete the statement on the return envelope that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation, then election inspectors may not tabulate the ballot and "must immediately contact the city or township clerk." Id.

10. Put another way, MCL 168.765 requires both that a clerk mark the date on which the ballot was received and that the clerk provide a written statement confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified) in the section of the return envelope designated "for clerk's use only." A ballot is only eligible for tabulation upon signature verification, and so the clerk's statement of approval under MCL 168.765(2) functions as confirmation to those responsible for tabulating the ballots on Election Day—i.e., either the precinct board of election inspectors or those election inspectors assigned to an AVCB—that the voter's signature on the ballot was, in fact, verified by the clerk. MCL 168.766(1)(b).

11. Together, the above-referenced provisions create a framework that (a) preserves the purity of elections and guards against abuses of the elective franchise by ensuring that each absent voter ballot originated from, and was completed by, the intended voter, while also (b) ensuring that those absentee voters whose identities could not be verified as a result of missing or mismatched signatures have an opportunity to cure their deficient ballot such that the signature verification process does not prevent any qualified elector from voting.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

12. Despite this clear statutory framework, it appears that local clerks may not be complying with the requirement to mark absent voter ballot envelopes with a statement that the voter's signature has been verified. For example, Plaintiffs recently learned that thousands of absent voter ballots were apparently tabulated during the August 6, 2024 primary election in Warren, Michigan, despite the complete absence of a statement by the clerk on the corresponding return envelope that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation as expressly required under MCL 168.765(2).

13. Plaintiffs also recently learned that the Secretary's guidance document entitled "Election Officials' Manual, Chapter 8: Absent Voter Ballot Processing," (hereinafter, the "AV Ballot Processing Guidance"), which is attached hereto as Exhibit A, is likely contributing to the above-referenced confusion by providing incomplete advice. Indeed, while MCL 168.765(2) clearly requires two separate markings—i.e., that a clerk mark the date on which the absent voter ballot return envelope was received and that the clerk provide a written statement on the return envelope confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified)—the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance omits the second of those two statutory requirements. See Ex A, at 5 (instructing clerks to "mark the ballot envelope in the 'Clerk Section' with the date of receipt," but omitting any instruction to include a written statement on the return envelope confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation as required under MCL 168.765(2)).

14. In other words, the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance fails to mention the clerk's statement of approval (i.e., signature verification confirmation) as required under subsection 765(2), yet reads as if it contains the entire universe of requirements as to the information that a clerk must write or stamp on an absentee ballot return envelope such that the corresponding ballot can be tabulated. As a result, the AV Ballot Processing Guidance is fatally incomplete.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

15. Given the complete absence of a statement by the clerk that the absent voter ballot was approved for tabulation as expressly required under MCL 168.765(2), it is an open question as to whether the clerk in Warren, Michigan, verified voters' signatures on those absent voter ballot return envelopes during the August 6, 2024 primary election.

16. Setting aside that absent voter ballots may have been tabulated even though the Warren clerk failed to provide any indication that it had verified the voter signatures, this apparent confusion is a symptom of a potentially larger issue of local election officials misconstruing the Secretary's incomplete and misleading AV Ballot Processing Guidance as the complete universe of requirements for approving absent voter signatures on ballot return envelopes.

17. Regardless, Plaintiffs' rights and abilities to participate in a free and fair elective franchise have already been damaged. By all accounts and absent the relief sought here, the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance will apparently remain in effect with respect to upcoming elections, further damaging Plaintiffs' rights and abilities to participate in a free and fair elective franchise in the November 5, 2024 general election and all those beyond.

18. As a result, and in light of the impending general election on November 5, 2024, Plaintiffs respectfully ask this Court to: (a) declare that city and township clerks must comply with MCL 168.765(2) by both (1) writing or stamping on each absent voter ballot return envelope the date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk (or, if received on Election Day, then clerks must write or stamp both the time and date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk); and (2) after verifying each voter's signature, clerks must also include on each approved ballot return envelope "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation." MCL 168.765(2); (b) declare that if a clerk fails to include a statement on the ballot return envelope that the voter's signature has been verified, then election inspectors must reject the ballot and immediately notify the clerk as required by MCL 168.768; (c) order the Secretary to rescind her AV Ballot Processing Guidance and issue new guidance directing city and township clerks to mark the date on which the ballot was received and to provide a written statement confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified) in the section of the return envelope designated "for clerk's use only" as expressly required under MCL 168.765(2); and (d) enjoin the Secretary from implementing the February 2024 version of her AV Ballot Processing Guidance in advance of the November 5, 2024 general election.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

19. Plaintiffs seek an expedited hearing on this matter under MCR 2.605(D), which expressly authorizes this Court to "order a speedy hearing of an action for declaratory relief" and to "advance [this case] on the calendar." Expedited consideration is warranted and necessary here. There can be no dispute that the voter signature and identification verification requirements under the Michigan Constitution and the Michigan Election Law are imperative to ensuring the integrity and accuracy of Michigan's elections. To be clear, the relief sought here is prospective in nature: Plaintiffs seek the above-described relief—including a declaration as to a discrepancy between the clear statutory language of MCL 168.765(2) and the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance—in advance of the November 5, 2024 general election to ensure that local election officials are instructed to follow the law in future elections. Absent declaratory and injunctive relief, the rights of Plaintiffs will continue to be violated and jeopardized by the Secretary's acts—including those

20. Time remains to adjudicate this case and controversy on the merits in an expedited fashion prior to the November 5, 2024 general election, and without the need for temporary or preliminary injunctive relief.[1] Specifically, some jurisdictions will begin verifying absent voter ballot signatures for the general election on September 26, 2024. By seeking prospective relief eight (8) weeks in advance of the general election, there remains ample time for an expedited merits proceeding before this Court; for expedited appellate review (if necessary); for the Secretary to issue AV Ballot Processing Guidance that complies with the Michigan Constitution and the Michigan Election Law; and for local clerks and election officials to implement those instructions.

21. To that end, Plaintiffs will make best efforts to effectuate formal service of process as soon as possible upon the filing of this Verified Complaint and receipt of corresponding summonses from this Court, and will contact the Assistant Attorneys General that typically serve as elections counsel for the Secretary to discuss a briefing schedule regarding the motion practice necessary to promptly decide the questions of law presented in this case.

PARTIES, JURISDICTION, AND VENUE

22. Plaintiff the Michigan Republican Party ("MRP") is a "major political party" as that term is defined by the Michigan Election Law. See MCL 168.16. MRP maintains headquarters at 520 Seymour Street, Lansing, Michigan 48912. Among its general purposes, MRP promotes and assists Republican candidates who seek election or appointment to partisan federal, state, and local office in Michigan. MRP works to further its purpose by, inter alia, devoting substantial resources toward educating, mobilizing, assisting, and turning out voters in Michigan. To that end,

[1] Plaintiffs reserve the right to seek preliminary injunctive relief should the need arise.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

MRP has made significant contributions and expenditures in support of Republican candidates up and down the ballot in Michigan in past election cycles, and is doing so again in 2024. Further, MRP works to ensure that elections in Michigan are conducted in a free, fair, and transparent manner, and works to protect the fundamental constitutional right to vote of its members and its candidates, and to promote their participation in the political process. MRP brings this action on behalf of itself, its members, and its candidates. As a result, Plaintiff MRP has a direct, personal, and substantial interest in this litigation to protect not only its own rights, but those of its candidates and its members.

23. Plaintiff the Republican National Committee (the "RNC") is the national committee of the Republican Party as defined by 52 U.S.C. § 30101(14), with its principal place of business at 310 First Street, S.E., Washington D.C., 20003. The RNC manages the Republican Party's business at the national level, including the development and promotion of the Republican Party's national platform and election strategies. The RNC supports Republican candidates for public office at the federal and state levels across the country, including those on the ballot in Michigan's forthcoming November 5, 2024 general election. The RNC also assists state parties throughout the country, including Plaintiff MRP, to educate, mobilize, assist, and turn out voters, and also by supporting MRP's efforts to ensure that elections in Michigan are conducted in a free, fair, and transparent manner, and to protect the fundamental constitutional right to vote of the RNC's members and its candidates. The RNC made significant contributions and expenditures in support of Republican candidates up and down the ballot and in mobilizing and educating voters in Michigan in past election cycles, and is doing so again in 2024. The RNC has clear and obvious interests in the laws and rules under which it, and those it represents and supports, exercise their constitutional rights to vote and to participate in elections. The RNC brings this action on behalf of itself, its members, and its candidates. As a result, Plaintiff RNC has a direct, personal, and substantial interest in this litigation to protect not only its own rights, but those of its candidates and its members.

24. Both as representatives of their candidates and their voters, and as organizations in their own right, the Republican Committees (i.e., Plaintiffs MRP and RNC) each have a substantial interest in getting Republican candidates elected to office—an interest that is unique and separate from any held by the public at large. That includes ensuring that Republicans can seek office in a fair, competitive environment where the Michigan Election Law is followed and the Legislature's identity and signature verification requirements aimed at protecting the integrity and reliability of Michigan's elections—including the ballot return envelope marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2)—are enforced. Given that the relief sought here would, among other things, enjoin the application of the current version of the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance in advance of the November 5, 2024 general election, and would also result in judicial declarations that clerks must comply with both of the ballot return envelope marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2) and also that election inspectors must reject ballots in accordance with MCL 168.768 where clerks fail to complete the ballot marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2), the interests of RNC and MRP in preventing an illegally structured and anti-competitive election environment is sufficient under MCR 2.605.

25. Plaintiff Cindy Berry serves as the Clerk for the Township of Chesterfield and resides in Macomb County. As township clerk, Mrs. Berry is responsible for running the Township's elections and, pertinent here, is also responsible for ensuring that the identity of all absent voters are verified through the absent voter signature verification process as required by the Michigan Constitution and the Michigan Election Law. Despite those legal duties to verify absent voter signatures—which include the ballot return envelope marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2)—the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance appears to require only one of the two marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2). As a local clerk, Mrs. Berry is subject to the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance. As a public official, however, Clerk Berry swore an oath to support the Michigan Constitution and to faithfully discharge the duties of her office. To that end, Plaintiff Berry has attempted to reconcile the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance against the text of the Michigan Election Law, but they appear to be inconsistent with one another for the reasons described in this Verified Complaint. As a result, Clerk Berry has been saddled with the impossible choice of whether to enforce state law (i.e., MCL 168.765(2)) or the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance—all of which are binding on Clerk Berry. As a result, Clerk Berry is an "interested party" under MCR 2.605 for the purpose of seeking a declaration clarifying the discrepancy between the clear statutory language of MCL 168.765(2) and the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance.

26. Separately, Clerk Berry is also a registered voter that cast a ballot in the February 2024 presidential primary election through Michigan's early voting process, voted by absentee ballot in the August 6, 2024 primary election, and intends to vote by absentee ballot in future elections. Clerk Berry has a direct, personal, and substantial interest in ensuring that her vote counts and is not diluted.

27. Defendant Jocelyn Benson is Michigan's Secretary of State and is being sued in her official capacity. Secretary Benson is the "chief elections officer of the state" responsible for overseeing the conduct of Michigan elections, and has "supervisory control over local election officials in the performance of their duties under the [Michigan Election Law]." MCL 168.21.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

28. Defendant Jonathan Brater is Michigan's Director of Elections and is being sued in his official capacity.

29. This Court has exclusive jurisdiction to "hear and determine any claim or demand, statutory or constitutional . . . or any demand for . . . equitable[ ] or declaratory relief or any demand for an extraordinary writ against the state or any of its departments or officers notwithstanding another law that confers jurisdiction of the case in the circuit court." MCL 600.6419(1)(a). Additionally, this Court has authority to grant injunctive relief under MCR 3.310.

30. Because Plaintiffs raise statutory and constitutional claims and because they ask this Court to order equitable and declaratory relief against Defendants Secretary Benson and Director Brater, this Court has exclusive jurisdiction to hear these claims. For the same reason, venue is appropriate in this Court.

31. An actual controversy is clearly present here. It is undisputed that MCL 168.765(2) expressly mandates that: (1) clerks must write or stamp on each absent voter ballot return envelope the date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk (or, if received on Election Day, then clerks must write or stamp both the time and date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk); and (2) after verifying each voter's signature, clerks must include on each approved ballot return envelope "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation." MCL 168.765(2). Meanwhile, the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance clearly omits the latter of those two express statutory marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2), as the Guidance directs city and township clerks to mark the date on which the ballot was received, but fails to direct clerks to provide a written statement confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified). Ex A, at 5. The fact that the AV Ballot Processing Guidance includes the date requirement but omits the signature-verification-confirmation requirement indicates that the Secretary does not believe that MCL 168.765(2) requires clerks to mark absent voter ballot return envelopes with a statement that the voter's signature has been verified and the ballot is approved for tabulation. Given that Clerk Berry is subject to both MCL 168.765(2) and the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance, there is no question that an actual controversy exists here such that Clerk Berry (and the hundreds of other local clerks across Michigan) requires a declaratory judgment to guide her future conduct as it pertains to applying MCL 168.765(2).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

32. Further, the fact that thousands of absent voter ballots were tabulated during the August 6, 2024 primary election in Warren, Michigan despite the absence of a statement by the clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation (and that the voter's signature had been verified by the clerk) as expressly required under MCL 168.765(2), further evidences both the presence of an actual controversy here as well as the need for declaratory relief, notwithstanding any material omission in the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance. Indeed, it appears that, for example, the City of Warren may have tabulated absent voter ballots for which the voter's corresponding signature was not verified in accord with Michigan law, which in turn injures Plaintiffs where their members and candidates have their votes diluted by ballots for which the corresponding signatures did not meet the signature matching criteria under Michigan law but were accepted anyway, or where the interests of MRP and RNC in a fair and competitive electoral environment becomes a competitive disadvantage as a result of clerks' failure to verify signatures.

33. The injuries to Plaintiffs are at once completed and ongoing. Absent relief from this Court, these injuries will recur indefinitely because local election officials will continue misapplying MCL 168.765(2) due to confusion caused at least in part by the incomplete direction set forth in the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance. Therefore, a decision from this Court will redress the violation of Plaintiffs' rights under the Michigan Constitution and Michigan Election Law, and will also guide Plaintiffs' future conduct in this regard for the November 2024 general election and beyond.

LEGAL AND FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Constitution and the Michigan Election Law expressly provide a framework for ensuring the accuracy and integrity of elections.

34. Under the Michigan Constitution, "[e]very citizen of the United States who is an elector qualified to vote in Michigan" has "[t]he fundamental right to vote, including but not limited to the right, once registered, to vote a secret ballot in all elections." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(a). To that end, qualified electors have the right to vote either in person or by absent voter ballot. Id. § 4(1)(g), (h). Exercising either right carries with it the electors' obligation to "prove their identity." Id.

35. An elector voting in person may prove their identity by "presenting their photo identification, including photo identification issued by a federal, state, local, or tribal government or an educational institution, or [] if they do not have photo identification or do not have it with them, executing an affidavit verifying their identity." Id. In any case, Michigan law requires that each in-person elector prove their identity before an election official gives that elector a ballot. See MCL 168.523(1) (requiring "at each election, before being given a ballot, [that] each registered elector offering to vote must identify himself or herself by presenting identification for election purposes"); MCL 168.523(2) (providing an elector the alternative of an affidavit which must be signed in the presence of an election inspector, and subjecting the elector to challenge under MCL 168.727).

36. The requirement that in person electors prove their identity by photo ID prior to receiving and casting a ballot is consistent with the Constitution's broader command that "the legislature shall" enact laws "to preserve the purity of elections . . . [and] to guard against abuses of the elective franchise." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(2). Indeed, the Supreme Court acknowledged that "[b]y instituting requirements," such as "the requirement that voters [] present photo identification . . . before voting," the State "guard[s] against abuse of the elective franchise [and] protects the right of lawful voters to exercise their full share of this franchise." In re Request for Advisory Opinion Regarding Constitutionality of 2005 PA 71, 479 Mich 1, 7, 19; 740 NW2d 444 (2007).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

37. As further acknowledged by the Supreme Court, Michigan's Purity of Elections Clause "[has] been a part of our constitution for almost as long as Michigan has been a state. As [the Michigan Supreme Court] noted in the nineteenth century, the purpose of a law enacted pursuant to these constitutional directives 'is not to prevent any qualified elector from voting, or unnecessarily to hinder or impair his privilege. It is for the purpose of preventing fraudulent voting.' " Id. at 17. (Emphasis in original and internal citation omitted).

38. That balance is paramount to the electoral process. "In sum, while a citizen's right to vote is fundamental, this right is not unfettered. It competes with the state's compelling interest in preserving the integrity of its elections and the Legislature's constitutional obligation to preserve the purity of elections and to guard against abuses of the elective franchise, including ensuring that lawful voters not have their votes diluted." Id. at 20.

39. Not only is the mandate that an elector must "prove their identity" before receiving a ballot in a polling place constitutional, it is also overwhelmingly supported by public opinion. See Detroit Regional Chamber, Statewide Poll Reveals Opinions on Political Landscape (June 7, 2021) https://www.detroitchamber.com/statewide-poll-reveals-opinions-on-political-landscape-covid-19-and-vaccination-perceptions-ongoing-labor-shortage-and-voting-rights/ (last visited September 10, 2024) (finding that 79.7% of respondents in statewide poll support requiring "every voter coming to the polls present a government-issued identification to cast their ballot").

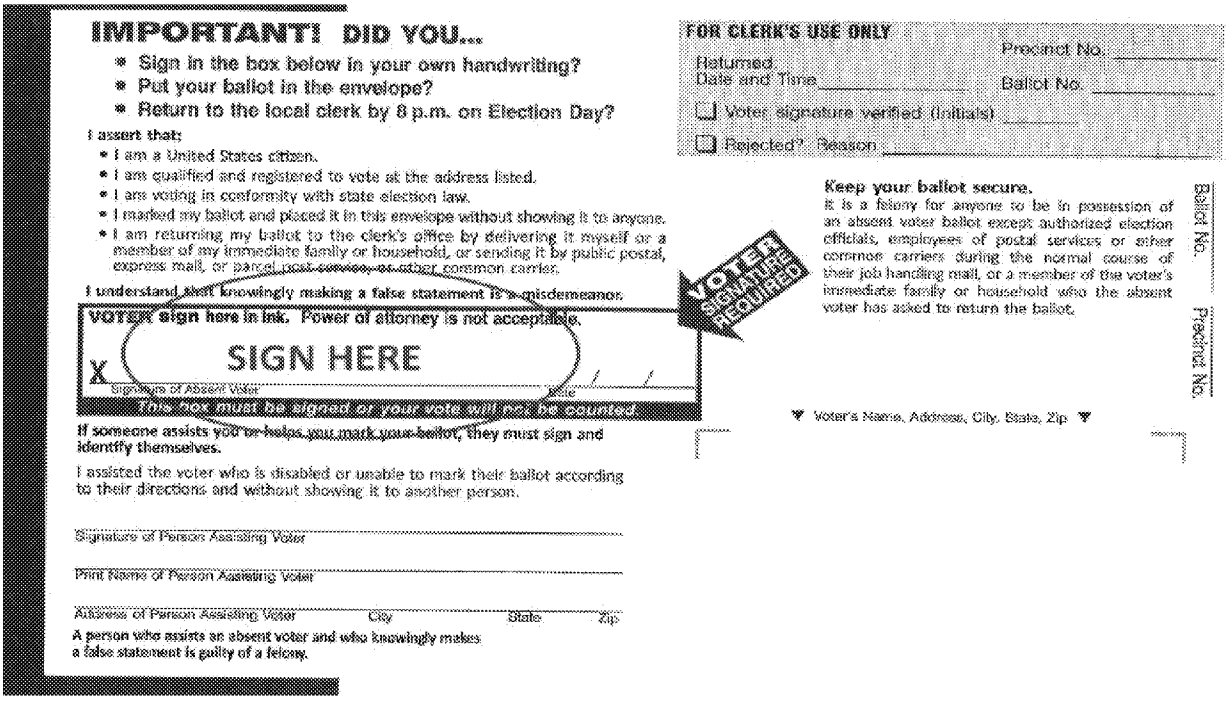
40. While the process is somewhat different for those voting by absent voter ballot, the Constitution nonetheless requires voters "to prove their identity when applying for or voting an absent voter ballot other than in person by providing their signature to the election official authorized to issue absent voter ballots." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(h) (emphasis added); see also MCL 168.764a (requiring electors to sign and date their absent voter ballot return envelope). This identification verification process is often referenced as the "signature verification" process.

41. The ballot return envelope within which the absent voter's ballot must be returned to the clerk is central to the signature verification process. MCL 168.761(4) requires that the back of each return envelope contain printed statements, including one "TO BE COMPLETED BY THE CLERK" and another "TO BE COMPLETED BY THE ABSENT VOTER." Id.

42. A sample absent voter ballot return envelope bearing substantially similar language (as is allowed pursuant to MCL 168.761(4)) follows:



Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

See Election and Voter Information, City of Romulus https://www.romulusgov.com/332/Election-Voter-Information (accessed September 10, 2024).

43. The portion "to be completed by the absent voter" instructs the elector to sign the envelope on the line designated for that purpose. It is that signature that the clerk must verify for the purpose of confirming the voter's identity under Michigan law.

44. To that end, when an election official is provided a voter's signature for the purpose of proving that voter's identity as a precondition to voting an absent voter ballot, the Michigan Constitution mandates that the election official shall: "verify the identity of a voter who votes an absent voter ballot other than in person by comparing the signature on the absent voter ballot envelope to the signature on the voter's absent voter ballot application or the signature in the voter's registration record." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(h) (emphasis added). See also MCL 168.765(2) ("The city or township clerk shall review each absent voter ballot return envelope to determine whether the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation in accordance with [MCL 168.766]. The review under this subsection includes verifying the signature on each absent voter ballot return envelope in accordance with [MCL 168.766a].") (emphasis added).

45. Specifically, MCL 168.766(1) mandates that city or township clerks "shall determine" whether an absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation "by verifying both of the following: (a) [t]he elector is a registered elector and has not voted in person in that election [and] (b) [u]sing the procedures required under [MCL 168.766a], the signature on the absent voter ballot return envelope agrees sufficiently with the elector's signature on file." (emphasis added).

46. As for verifying the signature on an elector's absent voter ballot envelope, MCL 168.766a sets forth the standard by which local clerks must determine whether the signature is valid. Specifically, section 766a provides that "[a]n elector's signature is invalid only if it differs in significant and obvious respects from the elector's signature on file. Slight dissimilarities must be resolved in favor of the elector. Exact signature matches are not required to determine that a signature agrees sufficiently with the signature on file." MCL 168.766a(2). There, a voter's "signature on file" means "any signature of an elector contained in the qualified voter file[,]" or, "[i]f the qualified voter file does not contain a copy of an elector's digitized signature, or is not accessible, [then] the signature of the elector contained on the master card [or] the signature on the elector's absent voter ballot application." MCL 168.766a(7)(a)-(c).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

47. The Michigan Election Law also implements a timing requirement on local clerks' duty to verify signatures. Specifically, MCL 168.766b governs the amount of time a clerk has to verify a voter's signature on an absent voter ballot return envelope, providing in pertinent part:

> (1) Beginning 45 days before an election, if an . . . absent voter ballot return envelope is received 6 or more calendar days before an election, the clerk must make a reasonable effort to verify or reject the absent voter ballot application or absent voter ballot return envelope by the end of the next business day following the receipt of that . . . return envelope.
> (2) [If an] absent voter ballot return envelope is received 5 or fewer days before an election or on election day, the clerk must verify or reject the absent voter ballot application or absent voter ballot return envelope by the end of the calendar day of receiving that . . . return envelope. [MCL 168.766b(1)-(2) (emphasis added)]

48. For this reason, MCL 168.765(2) expressly mandates that "[w]ritten or stamped on each absent voter ballot return envelope must be the date, and the time and date if received on election day, that the absent voter ballot return envelope was received by the city or township clerk[.]" By mandating that clerks indicate the date of receipt on each ballot return envelope under MCL 168.765(2), the Legislature has further ensured that clerks comply with the signature verification timing requirements such that they know when each ballot return envelope was received and, as a direct result, the deadline by which the voter's signature on each of those ballot return envelopes must be verified under MCL 168.766b(1)-(2).

49. Moving on to the verification of signatures, if a clerk determines that the signature on an elector's absent voter ballot return envelope is missing or does not agree sufficiently with the signature on file, then that ballot must be rejected. MCL 168.766a(3); MCL 168.765(2); MCL 168.766(2).

50. When a clerk rejects an absent voter ballot due to a missing or mismatched signature—and to ensure that the election integrity measures under Michigan law do not prevent any qualified elector from voting—then that voter has the right to be promptly notified and afforded "an equitable opportunity to correct the issue with the signature." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(h). Likewise, Michigan law requires the Secretary to maintain an electronic system for tracking absent voter ballots to ensure that voters are aware of the status of their ballot. See MCL 168.764c; see also Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(i). Separately, Michigan law also requires local election officials to notify voters when their ballot has been rejected due to a missing or mismatched signature so that the voter may cure their deficient signature. MCL 168.761; MCL 168.765; MCL 168.766(3)-(6); MCL 168.766a(3)-(6).

51. If, however, the clerk determines that a voter's signature on their ballot return envelope agrees sufficiently with the voter's signature on file, then Michigan law mandates that clerks "must" include on each approved ballot return envelope "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation." MCL 168.765(2). That requirement may be satisfied by completing the corresponding field in the "FOR CLERK'S USE ONLY" section, such as by checking the box and inserting the clerk's initials in the "Voter signature verified (Initials) _____" field, as in the example provided here:

52. This particular recordkeeping requirement under MCL 168.765(2)—i.e., the requirement that after verifying a voter's signature, clerks must include on the corresponding ballot return envelope "a statement . . . that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation"—is a vital aspect of the signature verification framework.

53. To reiterate, absent voter ballots are processed in two different stages under Michigan law. First, the above-referenced signature verification process is completed by local clerks outside the presence of election inspectors, election challengers, and poll watchers. See, e.g., MCL 168.765(2) (providing that signature verification must be completed by the "city or township clerk," and further providing that ". . . a precinct board of election inspectors or an absent voter counting board must not make any further signature verification for an absent voter ballot return envelope.") (emphasis added). If at that point the "clerk determines that the elector's signature on the absent voter ballot return envelope is missing or does not agree sufficiently with the signature on file, the clerk shall reject the absent voter ballot and provide the elector with notice and the opportunity to cure the deficiency in accordance with [MCL 168.766(4)]." Id. If, on the other hand, the clerk has verified that the signature on the ballot return envelope sufficiently matches the voter's signature on file, the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation and submitted to a precinct board of election inspectors or an AVCB to be processed on Election Day.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

54. Therefore, while the clerk is responsible for verifying the voter's signature on each ballot return envelope, Michigan law precludes election inspectors from tabulating an absent voter ballot on Election Day if (a) the elector's signature is missing from the return envelope, or (b) the clerk's statement that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation as required under MCL 168.765(2) is incomplete. MCL 168.768. In other words, if the elector's signature is missing from the return envelope or if the clerk fails to complete the statement on the return envelope that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation, then election inspectors may not tabulate the ballot and "must immediately contact the city or township clerk." MCL 168.768.

55. Put another way, a ballot is only eligible for tabulation if the voter's signature has been verified by the clerk. So the clerk's statement of approval under MCL 168.765(2) functions as confirmation to those responsible for tabulating the ballots on Election Day—i.e., either the precinct board of election inspectors or those election inspectors assigned to an AVCB—that the voter's signature on the ballot was, in fact, verified by the clerk. MCL 168.766(1)(b); MCL 168.768.

56. Given that the foregoing signature verification process for absent voter ballot return envelopes is conducted by local clerks behind closed doors and outside the presence of election inspectors or partisan poll challengers, those election inspectors responsible for tabulating the absent voter ballots on Election Day have no way of knowing whether the clerk verified the absent voter's signature in accord with Michigan law unless the clerk complies with MCL 168.765(2) by providing the required statement on the ballot return envelope. And if the clerk fails to provide that statement under MCL 168.765(2) confirming that the voter's signature has been verified and the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation, then those election inspectors are required to reject the ballot and notify the clerk. See MCL 168.768 (mandating that election inspectors "shall verify . . . that the statement on the absent voter ballot return envelope that the ballot is approved for tabulation is complete" and that if "the statement that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation is incomplete, the [board] must immediately contact the city or township clerk.").

57. Michigan law is clear on this issue: for each and every absent voter ballot return envelope received by a local clerk, that clerk must (1) record on the envelope the date it was received by the clerk, and (2) once the clerk has verified the voter's signature and approved the ballot for tabulation, they must include a statement "that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation." MCL 168.765(2).

The August 6, 2024 primary election: the Clerk in at least one major Michigan city fails to include a statement on absent voter ballot return envelopes that the corresponding absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation—and yet those ballots were tabulated anyway without any apparent signature verification.

58. The City of Warren is the third largest city in the state of Michigan and is located within Macomb County, which boasts the third highest number of registered voters. Warren, State of Mich, PureMichigan.org https://www.michigan.org/city/warren (accessed September 10, 2024); see also Voter registration statistics, Dep't of State – Mich Voter Info Ctr https://mvic.sos.state.mi.us/VoterCount/Index (accessed September 10, 2024).

59. On August 6, 2024, the AVCB for the City of Warren processed and tabulated thousands of absent voter ballots for the Michigan primary election. In attendance were individuals serving as counting board chairs, including Madison Takala and Ron Takala (see Affidavit of Madison Takala, attached hereto as Exhibit B, and Affidavit of Ron Takala, attached hereto as Exhibit C). Also in attendance were credentialed poll challengers, such as Dawn Beattie (see Affidavit of Dawn Beattie, attached hereto as Exhibit D).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

60. Madison and Ron Takala are seasoned election workers, having served as election inspectors in August 2020 and November 2020, respectively, and in almost every election since then. Exs B at ¶ 4; C at ¶ 4.

61. On August 6, 2024, Madison and Ron served as counting board chairs, responsible for managing and overseeing multiple election inspectors tasked with processing and tabulating absent voter ballots for 12 to 13 voting precincts. Exs B at ¶ 14, C at ¶ 5. In total, Madison and Ron each oversaw the processing and counting of thousands of absent voter ballots, personally inspecting hundreds in the process. Exs B at ¶ 14, C at ¶¶ 5-6.

62. Meanwhile, Dawn Beattie—a Regional Election Integrity Director for the MRP—was duly credentialed to serve as a poll challenger at the Warren AVCB on August 6, 2024. Ex D at ¶ 2. With limited exception, Ms. Beattie was present at the AVCB that entire day, observing roughly 16 different tables of election inspectors as they processed and tabulated absent voter ballots and return envelopes. Id. at ¶¶ 4-6.

63. The absent voter ballot return envelopes received by the Warren AVCB contained a printed statement in the upper right corner, indicating that portion of the return envelope was "For Clerk's Use Only." Exs B at ¶ 12, C at ¶ 7, D at ¶ 7. The clerk's portion of the return envelope included text prompting the clerk to fill in the following information in the space provided: 1) the date and time of the ballot and envelope's receipt; 2) the applicable precinct number; 3) the returned ballot number; and 4) confirmation that the voter signature on the return envelope has been verified as indicated by the clerk's initials. Id.; see also supra ¶¶ 42, 51 (providing a similar example of the "for clerks use only" portion of a ballot return envelope). The return envelopes also contained a printed statement on the lower left side of the envelope directing the absent voter to sign the envelope on the line designated for that purpose. Ex B at ¶ 13, Ex C at ¶ 8.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

64. Throughout the day, election inspectors reviewed each absent voter ballot return envelope to confirm that the clerk had correctly completed all of the required fields designated "For Clerk's Use Only." Ex B at ¶ 11, Ex C at ¶ 9.

65. Even though they personally observed hundreds of absent voter ballot return envelopes, neither Madison Takala, Ron Takala, nor Dawn Beattie recall a single instance in which the clerk had included a statement on the envelope confirming that the voter's signature had been verified. Ex B ¶ 15-17, C at ¶¶ 10-12, D at ¶¶ 10-12.

66. Making matters worse, at least one poll challenger (Dawn Beattie) notified an election inspector (Madison Takala) that the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the ballot envelopes were not marked with either the date received or a statement that the voter's signature had been verified. Ex B ¶ 23. Consistent with MCL 168.768, that election inspector directed the challenger to the deputy clerk. Id. The deputy clerk first responded that she was not sure about the verification process, then stated that she did not know why the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the envelopes was incomplete, and finally stated that she was not able to answer the challenger's inquiry because she was busy. Ex D at ¶¶ 16-18. And while the deputy clerk did tell the challenger that she would follow up with her on this issue, the deputy clerk never explained why none of the "For Clerk's Use Only" sections of the ballot envelopes were marked with the date received by the clerk's office nor a statement that the voter's signature had been verified. Ex D at ¶¶ 18-19.

67. As expressly stated in MCL 168.765(2), anything less than written confirmation by the clerk that the absent voter ballot and return envelope were approved for tabulation is contrary to Michigan law. Upon information and belief, ballots for which there is no evidence or confirmation that clerks verified signatures on absentee ballot return envelopes were tabulated and counted in the August 6 Michigan primary election in derogation of the law.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

68. Moreover, the City of Warren's noncompliance with the marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2) appears to be longstanding. For example, while Ms. Takala worked as a temporary employee of the City of Warren clerk's office before the November 2020 general election and was responsible for receiving and handling AV ballots that had been returned to the clerk's office, she was never told to mark any portion of the ballot return envelope to indicate that the voter's signature had been verified. Ex B ¶¶ 5-8. So, upon information and belief, it appears that some local clerks have not been complying with MCL 168.765(2) for at least four years.

The Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance.

69. A current version of the Secretary's guidance document entitled "Election Officials' Manual, Chapter 8: Absent Voter Ballot Processing" (referenced throughout as the Secretary's "AV Ballot Processing Guidance") attached hereto as Exhibit A.

70. While one portion of the AV Ballot Processing Guidance permissibly instructs that "upon receipt of the absent voter ballot envelope, the clerk should verify that the signature on a returned absent voter ballot envelope matches the voter's signature stored in the QVF," Ex A at 5, the Guidance fails to instruct local clerks to record such verification by written statement in the "to be completed by the clerk" portion of the ballot return envelope as required by MCL 168.765(2).

71. Worse, however, the AV Ballot Processing Guidance obfuscates section 765(2)'s recording requirements by only referencing the requirement that ballot envelopes be marked with the date the ballot was received, and wholly failing to mention the requirement that ballot envelopes be marked with a statement that the voter's signature has been verified and the ballot is approved for tabulation. The full text of the challenged provision of the AV Ballot Processing Guidance reads as follows:

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

> Immediately upon receipt of the absent voter ballot envelope, the clerk should verify that the signature on a returned absent voter ballot envelope matches the voter's signature stored in the QVF. If the signature does not match, or if the signature is missing, the clerk must immediately attempt to contact the voter and "cure" the signature. Voters have until 5 p.m. on the third day following the election to cure this issue. If the missing or mismatched signature is not cured by election day, the clerk should keep the ballot at their office and not send to the AVCB. If the missing or mismatched signature is not cured by third day after election day, the ballot should be rejected.
>
> Once the ballot is verified and deemed valid, clerk should mark the "received" date in QVF and mark the ballot envelope in the "Clerk Section" with the date of receipt.
>
> A voter may leave the date entry next to the signature on the absent voter ballot return envelope blank, so long as the voter has signed the absent voter return envelope. A signed absent voter ballot envelope that is missing a date is processed in the same way as an absent voter ballot envelope which is not missing the date.
> An absent voter ballot envelope whose signature has been determined to match the absent voter's signature on file is referred to as an "accepted absent voter ballot."

Ex. A at 5 (second emphasis added).

72. A plain reading of the foregoing "Signature verification" section of the AV Ballot Processing Guidance imparts two directions, both related to recording only the date on which a ballot was received—clerks must (i) mark the date the ballot envelope was received in the QVF, and (ii) mark the date received on the ballot envelope.

73. But the Secretary's guidance suffers from a material omission. MCL 169.765(2) unambiguously requires a clerk to record both the date an absent voter ballot return envelope was received and a statement by the clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirmation that the clerk, in fact, verified the signature and thus the elector's identity as required under Michigan law).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

74. In other words, the Secretary's Guidance reads-out the one accountability mechanism available to the one class of persons responsible and eligible under the law to "verify" a signature. Id. (prohibiting "any further signature verification for an absent voter ballot return envelope" after the clerk's approval) (emphasis added).

75. In Michigan, clerks are required to follow the law. But election inspectors processing absent voter ballots are not allowed to assume that the clerk's office verified a voter's signature. Rather, clerks are required to make a statement that the signature on "each" absent voter ballot return envelope had been verified and therefore approved for tabulation. MCL 168.765(2) (emphasis added). Only when that statement is present on a ballot return envelope are election inspectors permitted to tabulate a ballot; otherwise, the ballot must be rejected. MCL 168.768.

76. Because the Secretary's Guidance promotes a standard that wholly omits one of the requirements of MCL 168.765(2), it is inconsistent with and directly counter to the express requirements of the Michigan Constitution and Michigan Election Law.

Judicial intervention is necessary to ensure that the Michigan Constitution and the Michigan Election Law are enforced during the November 2024 general election.

77. This Court recently issued an opinion and order declaring inconsistent with Michigan law other guidance materials issued by the Secretary that diminished the constitutional and statutory requirement that clerks must "verify" signatures on absent voter ballot return envelopes. That case was captioned Republican National Committee v Benson, Case No 24-000041-MZ (June 12, 2024). In so holding, the Court reasoned that "[w]hether the guidance material includes a gentle nudge instead of a hip check, [its inconsistency with the Michigan Constitution and Michigan Election Law is] still a foul under Michigan law." Id. at p 6.

78. That reasoning applies here, too. The Secretary's omission gently nudges local clerks to an interpretation of MCL 168.765(2)'s recording requirements that only implicates the date on which an absentee ballot is received. What it leaves out is the accountability mechanism that is section 765(2)'s written statement of approval for tabulation—the one oversight on the consequential duty of a clerk to ensure the purity of elections and safeguard against abuses of the elective franchise by verifying signatures on absent voter ballots.

79. The occurrences at the Warren AVCB on August 6, 2024 are potentially indicative of a more widespread misunderstanding caused by the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance.

80. The Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance arrived as one of a string of different directives and changes in the law that local clerks had to sort for themselves since the recent proliferation of absentee and early voting. For example, City of Lansing Clerk Chris Swope reportedly referred to the 2024 presidential primary on February 27 as "one of the craziest" he had seen in the last 18 years serving in that role. Gibbons, Early voting a 'significant new option' for voters, 'significant challenge' for clerks, Bridge Mich (February 16, 2024) https://www.bridgemi.com/michigan-government/early-voting-significant-new-option-voters-significant-challenge-clerks (accessed September 10, 2024). Swope continued, "[a]s election officials, our priority number one is the accuracy and integrity of the system itself. Sometimes, when you inject a lot of changes into a system, that can be really challenging." Id.

81. In any case, Plaintiffs' rights and ability to participate in a free and fair elective franchise has already been damaged. If absent voter ballot return envelopes are not marked with a statement that the voter's signature has been verified by the clerk during the first stage of the absent voter ballot processing procedure, there is no way for election inspectors conducting the second stage of the process at precinct boards and AVCBs to confirm that signature verification has actually occurred, which in turn means those election inspectors cannot fulfill their statutory duty to confirm that a voter's signature has been verified by the clerk. See MCL 168.768 ("The board of election inspectors shall verify . . . that the statement on the absent voter ballot return envelope that the ballot is approved for tabulation is complete.") (emphasis added).

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

82. Further, by all indications, the Secretary will maintain her fatally incomplete AV Ballot Processing Guidance into the November 5, 2024 general election, thereby damaging Plaintiffs' rights and abilities to participate in a free and fair elective franchise in that election, and all those beyond, by creating confusion for clerks and obfuscating the ballot envelope marking requirements imposed on clerks by MCL 168.765(2).

83. Plaintiffs collectively seek to ensure that local election officials are instructed to follow the law in advance of the general election on November 5, 2024.

84. Clerks like Plaintiff Berry are, and will continue to be, subject to this misleading and fatally incomplete Guidance.

85. Immediate declaratory relief is justified so that Plaintiffs receive a declaration of their rights and clarity as to the absent voter ballot processing procedure in advance of the November 5, 2024 general election.

86. Absent declaratory relief, the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance will, as it did during the August 6, 2024 primary election, violate and jeopardize the rights and interests of Plaintiffs in the forthcoming general election.

87. Plaintiffs, moreover, lack an adequate remedy at law to clarify the legal requirements of MCL 168.765(2) and prevent the enforcement of the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance directing incomplete recording by local clerks.

COUNT I – VIOLATIONS OF THE MICHIGAN CONSTITUTION

88. Plaintiffs incorporate the allegations of the foregoing paragraphs as if fully stated herein.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

89. As set forth in this Verified Complaint, city and township clerks' apparent practice of failing to satisfy their duties under MCL 168.765(2) which requires both that a clerk mark the date on which each absent voter ballot return envelope was received and that the clerk provide a written statement on the envelope confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified), and the apparent practice of election inspectors tabulating absent voter ballots despite the complete absence of the above-referenced statement by the clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation (see MCL 168.768 (conditioning tabulation of absent voter ballots on the clerk's satisfaction of the ballot marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2))—all of which appears to be caused at least in part by a material omission in the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance—is inconsistent with the mandate in the Michigan Constitution requiring that election officials verify the identity of absentee voters. See Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(h) ("[E]lection officials shall [inter alia] verify the identity of a voter who votes an absent voter ballot other than in person by comparing the signature on the absent voter ballot envelope to the signature on the voter's absent voter ballot application or the signature in the voter's registration record.")

90. Injunctive and declaratory relief are therefore necessary to remedy these unlawful practices. Plaintiffs are unable to reconcile the above-described practices and the material omission in the Secretary's AV Ballot Guidance with the mandate under the Michigan Constitution requiring that election officials verify the identity of absentee voters through the signature verification process.

91. A current ripe case or controversy between the parties is clearly present here. The Michigan Constitution requires that election officials verify the identity of absentee voters through the signature verification process. Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(h). During the primary election on

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

August 6, 2024, local clerks failed to include a statement on absent voter ballot return envelopes indicating that the ballot is approved for tabulation as required by MCL 168.765(2). Likewise, it further appears that those ballots were tabulated despite missing the statement required by MCL 168.765(2), which is a violation of MCL 168.768. Attributable, at least in part, to the Secretary's incomplete AV Ballot Processing Guidance, these unlawful acts undoubtedly have and will continue to result in absent voter ballots being counted despite not having passed through the entire signature verification process. Absent declaratory and injunctive relief from this Court, these practices will continue to be applied in future elections, in which case Plaintiffs' respective rights and interests will continue to be violated and jeopardized.

92. For the reasons explained above, Plaintiffs will face irreparable harm if the Secretary's incomplete AV Ballot Processing Guidance remains in place, and justice requires the issuance of injunctive relief.

93. It is in the public interest to issue injunctive relief to ensure that Michigan's elections are carried out in accordance with the Michigan Constitution, and specifically to ensure that, inter alia, election officials verify the identity of absentee voters as required under the Michigan Constitution by completing the signature verification process required by Michigan law. Aside from being mandated by the Michigan Constitution, this signature verification process is critical to election security and designed to ensure that each absent voter ballot originated from, and was completed by, the intended voter.

94. Plaintiffs lack an adequate remedy at law to enforce the Michigan Constitution's express absent voter identity verification requirements, which have been and will continue to be violated by the unlawful acts such as those described supra ¶¶ 89, 91 and the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

95. Finally, the balance of harms clearly weighs in favor of granting injunctive relief. To not enjoin unlawful directives such as the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance would allow a single state officer to circumvent (and essentially amend) valid and enforceable constitutional mandates on the same subject. That is certainly not in the public interest, which expects its public officials to follow the law. Nor would the public be harmed by such relief as they, too, have an interest in ensuring the integrity and accuracy of Michigan's elections and that each absent voter ballot originated from and was completed by the intended voter as required by the Michigan Constitution.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court declare that the local clerk's failure to satisfy the absent voter ballot marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2), as well as the tabulation of absent voter ballots despite the absence of that required statement of clerk approval, are inconsistent with the Michigan Constitution; order that the Secretary rescind her AV Ballot Processing Guidance and issue new guidance directing clerks to mark the date on which the ballot was received and to provide a written statement confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified as required by the Michigan Constitution) in the section of the return envelope designated "for clerk's use only" as expressly required under MCL 168.765(2); enjoin the Secretary from implementing the February 2024 version of her AV Ballot Processing Guidance in advance of the November 5, 2024 general election; and award any other relief that this court deems just and equitable.

COUNT II – VIOLATIONS OF THE MICHIGAN ELECTION LAW

97. As set forth in this Verified Complaint, city and township clerks' apparent practice of failing to satisfy their duties under MCL 168.765(2) which requires both that a clerk mark the date on which each absent voter ballot return envelope was received and that the clerk provide a written statement on the envelope confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified), and the apparent practice of election inspectors tabulating absent voter ballots despite the complete absence of the above-referenced statement by the clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation (see MCL 168.768 (conditioning tabulation of absent voter ballots on the clerk's satisfaction of the ballot marking requirements under MCL 168.765(2))—all of which appears to be caused at least in part by a material omission in the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance—is inconsistent with the Michigan Election Law.

98. Injunctive and declaratory relief are therefore necessary to remedy these unlawful practices. Plaintiffs are unable to reconcile the practices such as those described supra ¶ 97 and the material omission in the Secretary's AV Ballot Guidance with provisions in the Michigan Election Law expressly mandating that clerks mark absent ballot return envelopes with "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation," MCL 168.765(2); precluding election inspectors from tabulating absent voter ballots if that clerk's statement of approval is missing from the ballot return envelope, see MCL 168.768; and mandating that clerks verify the signatures on the absent voter ballot return envelopes by comparing those signatures against the voter's "signature on file." See, e.g., MCL 168.766a.

99. A current ripe case or controversy between the parties is clearly present here. The Michigan Election Law requires that election officials verify the identity of absentee voters through the signature verification process. During the primary election on August 6, 2024, local clerks failed to include a statement on absent voter ballot return envelopes indicating that the ballot is approved for tabulation as required by MCL 168.765(2). Absent declaratory and injunctive relief from this Court, these practices will continue to be applied in future elections, in which case Plaintiffs' respective rights and interests will continue to be violated and jeopardized.

100. Relief is therefore necessary so that this Court can articulate the proper standards of recording dates of receipt and statements of approval for tabulation as to absent voter ballot return envelopes.

101. For the reasons explained above, Plaintiffs will face irreparable harm if the Secretary's incomplete AV Ballot Processing Guidance remains in place, and justice requires the issuance of injunctive relief.

102. It is in the public interest to issue injunctive relief to ensure that Michigan's elections are carried out in accordance with the Michigan Election Law, and specifically to ensure that, inter alia, election officials verify the identity of absentee voters by completing the signature verification process required by Michigan law. violated by the unlawful acts such as those described supra ¶ 97 and the Secretary's AV Ballot Processing Guidance.

104. Finally, the balance of harms clearly weighs in favor of granting injunctive relief. REQUEST FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court order "a speedy hearing" of this action and "advance it on the calendar" as provided under MCR 2.605(D), and that it issue the following relief:

A. Declare that city and township clerks must comply with MCL 168.765(2) by both (1) writing or stamping on each absent voter ballot return envelope the date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk (or, if received on Election Day, then clerks must write or stamp both the time and date that the ballot return envelope was received by the clerk); and (2) after verifying each voter's signature, clerks must also include on each approved ballot return envelope "a statement by the city or township clerk that the absent voter ballot is approved for tabulation." MCL 168.765(2);

B. Declare that if a clerk fails to include a statement on the ballot return envelope that the voter's signature has been verified, then election inspectors must reject the ballot and immediately notify the clerk as required by MCL 168.768;

C. Order the Secretary to rescind her AV Ballot Processing Guidance and issue new guidance directing city and township clerks to mark the date on which the ballot was received and to provide a written statement confirming the ballot is approved for tabulation (i.e., confirming that the voter's signature has been verified) in the section of the return envelope designated "for clerk's use only" as expressly required under MCL 168.765(2);

D. Enjoin the Secretary from implementing the February 2024 version of her AV Ballot Processing Guidance in advance of the November 5, 2024 general election.

E. Award Plaintiffs their costs, expenses, and attorney fees incurred in this action; and

I. Introduction

Every Michigan voter has the right to request, vote, and return an absent voter ballot. Chapter 6: Michigan's Absent Voter Process, lays out how a voter may apply for, receive, and return an absent voter ballot. This chapter explains how returned absent voter ballots are processed and tabulated. Questions about the content of this chapter should be directed to Elections@Michigan.gov.

II. Overview of absent voter ballot processing

Returned absent voter ballots may be processed in one of three ways. First, absent voter ballots may be counted by election inspectors at the polling place where the absent voter would otherwise have voted on Election Day. Second, the city or township's election commission may establish one or more absent voter counting boards for the purpose of processing and tabulating absent voter ballots separately from Election Day polling places. Eligible jurisdictions can establish absent voter counting boards in order to process and tabulate returned absent voter ballots. Tabulation can occur starting as early as 8 days before Election Day. Third, city or townships may enter into an agreement with their county clerk to form a combined absent voter counting board.

The absent voter counting board structure: reporting returns and sharing resources

Absent voter counting boards (AVCBs) are precincts specially established to process absent voter ballots. Because AVCBs are precincts separate from in-person polling places operating on Election Day, AVCBs must report their election results separately from in-person precincts. For the county canvass, however, election results that report the vote totals of all in-person ballots cast on Election Day at a particular precinct as well as the vote totals of all absent voters assigned to that precinct must be prepared.

Jurisdictions where absent voter ballots are processed in the precinct on Election Day report their absent voter ballot returns in the Poll Book and the Statement of Votes.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Each AVCB must use their own poll book, ballot container, and tabulator. In addition, each AVCB must produce individual precinct ballot summaries and Statement of Votes. When time allows, a single tabulator may be used for multiple AVCBs, so long as the tabulator uses an appropriately assigned ballot program, front and back pages of the Poll Book, and ballot containers. If an AVCB uses a single ballot container to secure ballots from multiple precincts, special care shall be taken to sort and bundle each precinct's ballots separately within the ballot container.

Duties of the local election commission

The local election commission decides whether to establish AVCBs or to process returned absent voter ballots at the precinct on Election Day. If the election commission establishes AVCBs, the commission must appoint a minimum of three inspectors to each AVCB. A single group of precinct inspectors may process multiple AVCB precincts. Election inspector appointments must be made under the same procedures established for the appointment of the precinct inspectors who will serve at in person precincts on Election Day. The commission is also responsible for securing a suitable location for the AVCBs to meet to process and tabulate ballots on Election Day. This location, referred to as a "absent voter ballot processing facility" must be sequestered from all other Election Day activity. Multiple AVCBs can be located in the same building or room.

The election commission is required to set the time that election inspectors working at the AVCB must report to the absent voter ballot processing facility. The work of the AVCB may begin as early as 7 a.m., and election inspectors may be required to arrive prior to 7 a.m.

Duties of the local clerk

The city or township clerk is responsible for providing either the precincts or the AVCBs with all necessary supplies to process absent voter ballots, depending on the absent voter ballot processing method selected by the election commission. In addition, the clerk should provide instruction on the operation of the AVCB to election inspectors assigned to work at an AVCB.

Oath required of persons present in the AVCB

All election inspectors, election challengers, and any person other than a member of the clerk's staff present at the absent voter ballot processing facility at the time absent voter ballots begin to be tabulated must take and sign the following oath:

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

> "I (name of individual taking oath) do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I shall not communicate in any way information relative to any ballots or the tabulation of votes that may come to me while in this counting place until after the polls are closed. Further, I shall not photograph, or audio or video record, within the counting place, except for posted election results."

The oath for election inspectors can be found and completed in the AVCB poll book. All others should complete the oath on a separate sheet and be placed in the local clerk envelope.

A person who discloses an election result or in any manner characterizes how any ballot being counted has been voted before 8:00 p.m. on Election Day is guilty of a felony.

Prohibition on recording video or audio in the absent voter ballot processing facility

Individuals may have a cell phone or other electronic device in an absent voter ballot processing facility. However, no person, including election inspectors and challengers, may record video or audio in an absent voter ballot processing facility at any point. This prohibition, unlike other prohibitions, extends to periods prior to the beginning of tabulation and after the close of polls. A clerk may, at their discretion, create a media area in the absent voter ballot processing area after 8 p.m. on Election Day where audio or video may be recorded, but no person may record audio or video anywhere else in the facility at any time.

Number of AVCBs required

One AVCB must be designated to correspond to each precinct in the jurisdiction. A single AVCB, however, can correspond to more than one precinct. Absent voter ballots should be processed on a precinct basis and should not be intermingled to allow for precinct-level absent voter ballot and combined results to be recorded, so long as absent voter ballots from different precincts are kept separated, a single AVCB can process ballots from multiple precincts.

Establishing early processing AVCBs

Any local election commission may establish an AVCB on the Monday immediately before Election Day to process and tabulate AV ballots. Additionally, the local election commission of a jurisdiction with a population of over 5,000 can establish an AVCB on any of the 8 days before Election Day, beginning on the second Monday before Election Day.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

For each day of early processing and tabulation, the participating city or township clerk will deliver approved absent voter ballots to the AVCB. Absent voter ballots must be processed and tabulated in the same manner as on Election Day (described below).

Clerks should review the Early Absent Voter Ballot Processing and Tabulating procedures document on eLearning for additional and specific procedures.[1]

Challengers in an early absent voter counting board

Challengers are allowed in a facility where absent voter ballots are being processed and tabulated before election day, and have the same rights and responsibilities as challengers at an Election Day AVCB. Eligible entities may designate one challenger for every eight election inspectors or one challenger if seven or fewer election inspectors are present.

Notice and posting requirements

Eligible clerks wishing to process and/or tabulate absent voter ballots before Election Day must do the following:

- Provide written notice to the Secretary of State at least 28 days before Election Day.
- Post the hours and location of the AVCB, as well as the number of election inspectors working, on the city or township website and in the clerk's office at least 18 days before Election Day. If the time or location changes after the initial notice, post the revised details on the city or township website and in the clerk's office as soon as possible, but no later than 11 days before Election Day.
- If the time, location, or staffing change after early processing and tabulating begins, updated notice must be provided no later than 10 a.m. on the day before a change occurs.
    - If notice is provided after this time, and a staffing change would reduce the eligible number of challengers in the facility, the previous number of challengers must be allowed to remain.

III. Absent voter ballot counting procedures

The work performed by election inspectors processing AV ballots is divided into two separate tasks: processing absent voter ballots and tabulating absent voter ballots.

Signature verification

Immediately upon receipt of the absent voter ballot envelope, the clerk should verify that the signature on a returned absent voter ballot envelope matches the voter's signature stored in the QVF. If the signature does not match, or if the signature is missing, the clerk must immediately attempt to contact the voter and "cure" the signature. Voters have until 5 p.m. on the third day following the election to cure this issue. If the missing or mismatched signature is not cured by election day, the clerk should keep the ballot at their office and not send to the AVCB. If the missing or mismatched signature is not cured by third day after election day, the ballot should be rejected.

Once the ballot is verified and deemed valid, clerk should mark the "received" date in QVF and mark the ballot envelope in the "Clerk Section" with the date of receipt.

A voter may leave the date entry next to the signature on the absent voter ballot return envelope blank, so long as the voter has signed the absent voter return envelope. A signed absent voter ballot envelope that is missing a date is processed in the same way as an absent voter ballot envelope which is not missing the date.

An absent voter ballot envelope whose signature has been determined to match the absent voter's signature on file is referred to as an "accepted absent voter ballot."

Processing absent voter ballots

If a jurisdiction processes absent voter ballots using AVCBs, all absent voter ballots received by the clerk prior to Election Day are delivered to the absent voter ballot processing facility on Election Day or during the early tabulation period. The absent voter ballots are delivered to the AVCB at the time established by the election commission.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

If a jurisdiction processes absent voter ballots at the polling place, all absent voter ballots received by the clerk prior to Election Day, and all absent voter ballot applications corresponding to those ballots, are delivered to the appropriate polling place shortly after the opening of the polls.

After receipt of the absent voter ballots at the absent voter ballot processing facility, ballot processing begins. The processing of absent voter ballots is divided into the two steps explained below. While jurisdictions may deviate from the process described here, jurisdictions must take care that whatever process they settle on does not compromise ballot secrecy.

Ballot envelope verification using AVCBs

During this stage, election inspectors verify that the clerk's record area of the return envelope was completed. If the clerk's record area of the return envelope is incomplete, the election inspectors alert the clerk or a member of the clerk's staff present in the absent voter ballot processing facility of the issue. If the clerk's record area of the return envelope was completed, the election inspector should open the return envelope and continuing processing.

The election inspector should then highlight or place a check by the voter's name using the absent voter ballot button in the QVF Absent Voter List or the ePollbook, depending on which voter list is being used at the absent voter ballot processing facility, to indicate that an absent voter ballot envelope was received for processing. If the certificate for persons assisting an absent voter on the ballot envelope is completed, the election inspector should record the assistance in the Remarks page of the ePollbook. The note should include the name of the voter and the name of the individual who provided the assistance.

Ballot envelope verification at the polling place

After selecting an absent voter ballot envelope, the election inspector should check the ePollbook to confirm that the voter whose absent voter ballot envelope is being processed has not voted in person at the election. If the election inspector cannot confirm either that the voter whose absent voter ballot envelope is being processed has not voted in person at the election or cannot confirm that the signature on the absent voter ballot return envelope matches the signature on the corresponding absent voter ballot application, the election inspector should contact the city or township clerk.

Next, inspectors verify that the clerk's record area of the return envelope was completed. If the clerk's record area of the return envelope is incomplete, the election inspectors should contact the clerk and alert them of the issue. If the clerk's record area of the return envelope was completed, the election inspector should open the return envelope and continuing processing.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Ballot verification

After the absent voter ballot envelope has been verified at either an AVCB or a polling place, the election inspector should open the absent voter ballot envelope. Without exposing any votes, the election inspector should verify that the number on the ballot stub agrees with the ballot number recorded for the voter in the QVF Absent Voter List or the ePollbook.

If the ballot was returned in a secrecy envelope, the ballot and secrecy envelope may be removed from the return envelope to make the comparison. If the ballot was not returned in a secrecy envelope, the election inspector should first verify that the ballot was folded by the voter so that the votes are concealed before removing the ballot from the return envelope to make the comparison. If the ballot must be placed in a secrecy envelope, the election must take care placing the ballot into a secrecy sleeve to avoid exposing any votes cast on the ballot.

If the number on the ballot does not agree with the ballot number recorded for the voter in the QVF Absent Voter List or the ePollbook and no explanation for the discrepancy can be found, the ballot must be processed as a challenged ballot. Possible explanations for a discrepancy that do not require the ballot to be processed as a challenged ballot include that the voter lives in the same household as a second voter and that the voters accidentally switched absent ballot return envelopes.

If the ballot is missing its stub, the election inspector should check to see if the detached stub is included inside the absent voter ballot envelope. If the stub is inside the envelope, the stub should be treated as if it were attached to the ballot. If the stub is not inside the envelope, the ballot should be processed as a challenged ballot.

If the absent voter ballot envelope or secrecy sleeve is empty, the election inspector should note the missing ballot in the Remarks page of the ePollbook. The note should include the expected ballot number and the fact the ballot was not returned, but it should not include the voter's name.

Finally, the election inspector should remove the absent voter ballot from the absent voter ballot envelope. The envelope should be set aside. At the end of Election Day, all absent voter ballot envelopes should be returned to the clerk. Without removing the ballot from the secrecy sleeve, the election inspector should remove the numbered stub from the ballot. At the discretion of the clerk, the stub may be either discarded or retained for later review.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

After the election inspector completes the above steps, the absent voter ballot in its secrecy sleeves are then sent for tabulation.

Tabulating absent voter ballots

To begin the tabulation process, an election inspector who was not involved in the ballot processing explained above should move the absent voter ballots with stubs detached to a different location within the absent voter ballot processing facility or the polling place. This maintains ballot secrecy by ensuring that the election inspectors who processed the ballots cannot see how a particular ballot was voted.

The election inspector should then remove the anonymized ballots from their secrecy sleeve and feed the ballot into the tabulator. If the ballot is accepted by the tabulator, the ballot's tabulation is complete.

If a ballot is rejected by the tabulator, the election inspector should visually inspect the ballot to determine the reason the ballot was rejected. If the reason for the ballot's rejection can be cured, for example because the ballot was damaged, the ballot should be duplicated using the normal duplication procedures explained below. Duplication cannot occur in an in person polling place until after the close of polls, but duplication can occur in an absent voter ballot counting facility at any time.

After the close of polls at 8:00 p.m., election inspectors should confirm with the clerk that no additional absent voter ballots will be delivered for processing. Once election inspectors have confirmed that no further absent voter ballots will be delivered, that all absent voter ballots have been processed and tabulated, and that all necessary ballot duplication has occurred and those duplicate ballots have been tabulated, election inspectors may begin closing the AVCB or polling place.

If tabulating early, no results can be generated prior to 8:00 p.m. on Election Day.

Closing procedures

Election inspectors processing absent voter ballots at the polling place should follow the regular closing procedures explained below. Election inspectors serving at AVCBs should follow the instructions below to close their AVCBs.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Once all ballots have been tabulated and all ballots requiring duplication have been duplicated and tabulated, the election inspectors should compare the total number of ballots tabulated displayed on the tabulator's public counter to the total number of absent voter ballots delivered to the board for processing. These totals should agree.

If the total number of ballots tabulated and total number of absent voter ballots received for processing do not agree, the election inspectors should attempt to identify the reason for the discrepancy. Possible explanations for a discrepancy may be noted in the Remarks page of the ePollbook, and may include that an absent voter ballot envelope that did not contain a ballot was opened at the AVCB. If the discrepancy cannot be reconciled after reviewing the Remarks page, the election inspectors should physically count all tabulated ballots. If the number of ballots differs from the number displayed on the tabulator's public counter, the ballots must be retabulated. The election inspectors should contact their clerk for instructions on how to conduct a retabulation.

Once the election inspectors have determined that the total number of tabulated ballots displayed on the tabulator's public counter and the total number of absent voter ballots delivered for processing agree, or the election inspectors have identified the specific reason for any discrepancies and noted those reasons in the Remarks page of the Poll Book, the election inspectors must prepare the Statement of Votes and Ballot Summary. The Statement of Votes and Ballot Summary for each AVCB should be completed in the same manner each document would be completed for an in person precinct on election day. A minimum of three copies of each document are required. Often, the Poll Book is designed so that completing each document once creates an original and two copies, satisfying the three copy requirement.

Next, the election inspectors should complete the Certificate of Election Inspectors included in the Poll Book. The election inspectors must fill in the following four blanks in the Poll Book:

- The number of voters who were issued absentee ballots (according to this Poll Book): _____
- The number of absent voter ballot return envelopes received by the Board: _____

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

- The number of invalid absent voter ballot return envelopes that the clerk did not deliver to Board (according to this Poll Book): _____
- The number of absent voters who did not return their absent voter ballot to the clerk (according to this Poll Book): _____

The election inspectors should then complete any remaining required entry in the Poll Book.

After the Poll Book is complete, the election inspectors should seal all ballots into an approved ballot container and record the seal number in the Poll Book, on all three copies of the Statement of Votes, and on the Ballot Container Certificate. Two election inspectors who have expressed a preference for different political parties must attest to the sealing. If ballots for more than one AVCB are placed into the ballot container, election inspectors should sort and bundle each AVCB's ballots separately within the container. The absent voter ballot envelopes and the absent voter ballot applications should be placed in the Absent Voter Envelope.

The Poll Book and other materials prepared at the AVCB will be reviewed by a receiving board. If a mistake is found at the receiving board that requires the ballot container to be opened and resealed, the replacement seal number must be recorded on all documents where the original seal number was recorded. Once the Poll Book and other materials are verified by the receiving board, the ballot container may not be opened unless authorized by the Board of County Canvassers.

IV. Absent voter ballots received on Election Day

All accepted absent voter ballots received by the clerk through 8:00 p.m. on Election Day must be delivered to the location where absent voter ballots are being processed. If absent voter ballots are being processed using AVCBs, the election inspectors at the AVCB should record the date on which the absent voter ballot was returned in the QVF Absent Voter List. If absent voter ballots are being processed in the polling place, the election inspectors at the polling place should record the date that the absent voter ballot was returned in the ePollbook.

To ensure the secrecy of all votes cast, the election inspectors at the location where absent voter ballots are being processed should set aside several of the absent voter ballot envelopes that were returned prior to Election Day until after 8:00 p.m. These envelopes should then be intermingled with any absent voter ballot envelopes delivered by the clerk during or after the close of polls on Election Day. This intermingling preserves ballot secrecy and ensures the votes cast by persons returning their absent voter ballots remains anonymous.

V. Absent voter ballots rejected by tabulator

Tabulators are programmed to reject damaged and invalid ballots. Damaged and invalid absent voter ballots should be duplicated to remove the issue causing the tabulator to reject the ballot.

Damaged and improperly completed ballots

A damaged ballot is a ballot that is crumpled, is water damaged, or has another physical defect that prevents the tabulator from reading the ballot.

Blank ballots

Blank ballots occur when a voter does not complete their ballot, but a tabulator may also interpret a ballot as being blank if the voter attempts to complete their ballot with ink that is not black or blue or if the voter makes marks on the ballot which are insufficiently dark to be detected by the tabulator.

Ballots with overvotes

Overvotes occur when a voter votes for more candidates than permitted for a given office. An overvote may also occur if the voter has crossed out a candidate, attempted to erase a mark on a ballot, or otherwise made a mark on the ballot that the tabulator interprets as an attempt to vote for more candidates that prohibited.

Ballots with crossover votes

Crossover votes occur because a voter has voted in races for both parties during a partisan primary. In partisan primaries, although primary elections for the two major parties appear on the same ballot, the voter is only permitted to participate in one party's primary. The voter cannot participate in one party's primary for one office and the other party's primary for a second office. As with overvotes, inadvertent or erased marks may be interpreted by the tabulator as an attempt to cast a crossover vote.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Ballots with stray marks

A ballot with stray markings may be interpreted by the tabulator as an ballot with an overvote or a crossover vote.

Duplicating damaged or improperly completed ballots

If an absent ballot is rejected by the tabulator, the election inspector should check the tabulator to determine the reason for the rejection. The election inspector should then examine the ballot to determine where the issue on the ballot occurs.

Once the election inspector has determined what mark or marks are causing the tabulator to reject the absent voter ballot, the election inspector should set the ballot aside for duplication. In an absent voter ballot processing facility, particular teams of election inspectors are often assigned to duplicate ballots. In a precinct processing absent voter ballots on Election Day, the election inspectors should duplicate the ballot after the close of polls.

Two election inspectors, each of whom has expressed a preference for a different political party, must be present for every step of the ballot duplication process.

The duplication process consists of the following steps:

1. The election inspectors should obtain one blank ballot for each ballot which needs to be duplicated. The numbered stub should be removed from the blank ballot and discarded. The election inspectors should then identify the blank ballot and the corresponding ballot to be duplicated by writing numbering the two ballots, starting with the number one. The ballot to be duplicated should be identified with a numeral, and the corresponding blank ballot should be identified with "Dup." followed by the same numeral. For example, the first ballot to be duplicated would be labeled "1", and the corresponding blank ballot would be labeled "Dup. 1"
2. The votes recorded on the ballot to be duplicated should be transferred to the blank ballot using a reader-checker process. One election inspector should call out the valid votes on the original ballot, while the other election inspector records those votes on the duplicate ballot. If the voter's intent is uncertain, the election inspector should consult the section Determining Ambiguous Voter Intent below. If the voter has overvoted in a race, the election inspector should consult the section Correcting an Overvote below.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

3. After completing the duplication process, both election inspectors should verify that the original ballot and the now-duplicated ballot are identified with the correct number and that all valid votes have been transferred from the original ballot to the duplicate ballot.

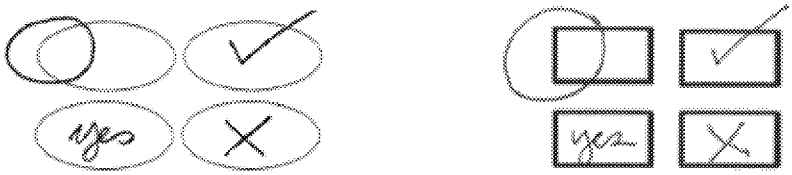
After all ballots requiring duplication have been duplicated, the original ballots are placed into an envelope designated to hold ballots rejected by the tabulator. The envelope is sealed into the ballot container with all other ballots. The newly-duplicated ballots are fed into the tabulator and tabulated.

Determining ambiguous voter intent

Different ballot styles require voters to fill in ovals or boxes. While voter intent is ultimately decided by the team of election inspectors assigned to the duplication process, the following are examples of valid and invalid ballot markings.

Valid markings

These are examples of markings on a ballot which may be rejected by a tabulator but which the election inspectors duplicating the ballot should interpret as votes for the candidate or ballot question at issue.



Invalid markings

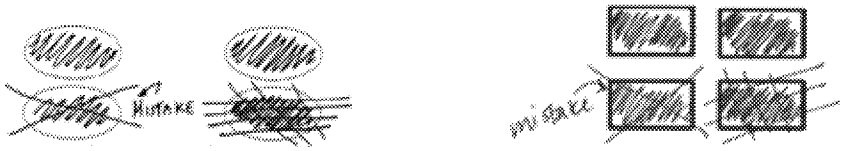
These are examples of markings on a ballot which may be rejected by a tabulator and which the election inspectors duplicating the ballot should not interpret as votes for the candidate or ballot question at issue because the voter's intent cannot be clearly understood from the marking.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Corrections

These are examples of markings on a ballot which may be rejected by a tabulator but which the election inspectors duplicating the ballot should interpret as a voter's attempt to correct a mistake on the voter's ballot. The election inspectors should duplicate these votes as being cast for the candidate or ballot question at issue.



A corrected crossover vote may also cause a tabulator to reject a ballot. Election inspectors duplicating the ballot should interpret the correction as a voter's attempt to vote for only one party as permitted.

False Crossover/

Stray marks

These are examples of stray marks on a ballot which may be rejected by a tabulator but which the election inspectors duplicating the ballot should not interpret as the voter's attempt to vote for the the candidate or ballot question at issue.

In all three examples above, count the top two positions only.

Correcting an overvote

A true overvote – one which is caused by a voter clearly and intentionally attempting to vote for more candidates that allowed for a particular office – on an absent voter ballot cannot be corrected, because the election inspector cannot determine for which candidate the voter intended to vote. The voter's other validly-cast votes on the ballot, however, can be read. To correct an overvote for one office on the ballot when the correct number of votes have been cast for other offices on the ballot, the election inspectors should leave the office for which the voter has overvoted entirely blank on the duplicate ballot.

Overvotes caused by write-in votes for a write-in candidate who has not submitted a Declaration of Intent, however, can be corrected by removing the write-in candidate during duplication.

VI. Challengers and poll watchers at absent voter ballot processing facilities

Challengers have a right to be present at absent voter ballot processing facilities. Absent voter ballot processing facilities do not include a clerk's office or other locations where absent voter ballots are stored, signatures appearing on absent voter ballot envelopes are checked, or other activities are conducted prior to absent voter ballots being removed from absent voter ballot envelopes and prepared for tabulation.

Poll watchers should be allowed to observe the operation of the absent voter ballot processing facility if there is sufficient space to accommodate poll watchers within the facility without impeding the processing and tabulation of absent voter ballots.

For more information on challengers and poll watchers at absent voter ballot processing facilities, consult the Bureau of Elections publication The Appointment, Rights, and Duties of Election Challengers and Poll Watchers.[2]

Number of challengers at an absent voter ballot processing facility on Election Day

An absent voter ballot processing facility may contain a single absent voter counting board, multiple absent voter counting boards, a single combined absent voter counting board, or multiple combined absent voter counting boards. The Michigan Election Law uses the term "absent voter counting board" simultaneously to refer to a single absent voter counting board corresponding to an individual in-person precinct; a station within a facility processing absent voter ballots for multiple in-person precincts; the entire facility at which all absent voter ballots are processed for a jurisdiction; and an entire facility at which combined absent voter ballots are processed for multiple jurisdictions in a county. Michigan Election Law does not expressly state how many challengers may be present at an AVCB on election day. An early tabulation AVCB is limited to 1 challenger for every 8 election inspectors.

When determining how many challengers each credentialing organization is allowed to have in an absent voter ballot processing facility, clerks must balance the rights of challengers to meaningfully observe the absent voter ballot counting process and the clerk's responsibility to ensure safety and maintain orderly movement within the facility. Clerk considerations in setting the number of challengers each credentialing organization may field in the absent voter ballot processing facility should include:

- The number of processing teams and the number of election inspectors;
- The number of tables or discrete stations at which ballots are processed;
- The physical size and layout of the facility; and
- The number of rooms and areas used to process absent voter ballots within the facility.

The clerk must make publicly available the number of challengers each credentialing organization will be allowed to field in the absent voter ballot processing facility at least seven calendar days prior to the election.

Duties of challengers and poll watchers at absent voter ballot processing facilities

Challengers and Poll Watchers must take the same oath as any other person who is present at the absent voter ballot processing facility at the beginning of tabulation. A challenger or poll watcher present at the absent voter ballot processing facility at the beginning of tabulation is sequestered at that facility until the close of polls. Challengers and poll watchers, like all other persons present at the absent voter ballot processing facility, are not allowed to possess cell phones or other messaging devices in the facility before the close of polls.

Challenger liaisons

Every polling place or absent voter ballot processing facility should have an election inspector designated as the challenger liaison. Unless otherwise specified by the local clerk, the challenger liaison at a polling place is the precinct chairperson. The challenger liaison or precinct chairperson may designate one or more additional election inspectors to serve as challenger liaison, or as the challenger liaison's designees, at any time. Unless otherwise specified by the local clerk, the challenger liaison at an absent voter ballot processing facility is the most senior member of the clerk's staff present, or, if no members of the clerk's staff are present, the challenger liaison is the chairperson of the facility. Unless otherwise specified by the local clerk, the challenger liaison at the clerk's office is the most senior member of the clerk's staff present.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Challengers must not communicate with election inspectors other than the challenger liaison or the challenger liaison's designee unless otherwise instructed by the challenger liaison or a member of the clerk's staff.

Permissible challenges at an absent voter ballot processing facility

Challengers at absent voter ballot processing facilities may make challenges to election processes. Permissible challenges at absent voter ballot processing facilities include challenges to ensure that the review of any portion of the absent voter ballot envelope reviewed at the absent voter ballot processing facility is properly completed. City and township clerks review the portion of the absent voter ballot envelope containing the absent voter's signature prior to Election Day, or when the ballot envelope is received by the clerk on Election Day, to ensure that the signature is genuine and the absent voter is eligible to cast a ballot. If the clerk has verified the signature and the absent voter's eligibility prior to the ballot envelope being transmitted to the absent voter ballot processing facility, neither challenges to the voter's signature nor to the voter's eligibility made at the absent ballot processing facility on Election Day are permissible.

Because an absent voter's eligibility is verified by the clerk prior to the absent voter ballot envelope being processed at the absent voter ballot processing facility on Election Day, election inspectors serving at the absent voter ballot processing facility are not responsible for verifying voter eligibility at the facility. Instead, election inspectors serving at the absent voter ballot processing facility confirm that the clerk has verified the absent voter's eligibility to cast a ballot by confirming that the clerk has reviewed the signature section of the absent voter ballot envelope. Additionally, because the voters are not present at the absent voter ballot processing facility, the oath administration and questioning process set out in the Michigan Election Law and explained above cannot be carried out at an absent voter ballot processing facility and a challenged voter would have no chance to refute the challenge leveled against them. For these reasons, challenges to voter eligibility at absent voter ballot processing facilities are not permissible and need not be recorded.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Challenging an election process

A challenger may challenge a voting process, including the way that election inspectors are operating a polling place or processing absent voter ballots at an absent voter ballot processing facility. A challenge to an election process must state the specific element or elements of the process that the challenger believes are being improperly performed and the basis for the challenger's belief.

Impermissible challenge to an election process

A challenge to an election process is impermissible and should not be recorded by the election inspectors if the challenger cannot identify a specific element or multiple elements of the process whose performance the challenger believes improper. A challenge to an election process is also impermissible if the challenger cannot adequately explain why the election process is being performed in a manner prohibited by state law. An explanation for a challenge to an election process must include an explanation of the proper performance of the element or elements in question but need not take the form of a direct citation to statute or election administration materials.

Rejecting a challenge to an election process

A permissible challenge to an election process will be rejected if the challenger liaison determines that the specific element or elements of the election process being challenged are being carried out in accordance with state law. A challenger liaison's determination that a challenge to an election process is rejected may be appealed using the process laid out at the end of this document.

Accepting a challenge to an election process

A permissible challenge to an election process will be accepted if the challenger liaison determines that the challenger is correct and that the specific element or elements of the election process being challenged are not being carried out in accordance with state law. The challenger liaison shall inform the relevant election inspectors how to properly carry out the process and take any other remedial action necessary to correct the error. Recording Challenges to an Election Processes A permissible challenge to an election process should be recorded in both the remarks section of the electronic poll book and on the "Challenged Procedures" section of the physical poll book. The record should include:

- The challenger's name;
- The time of the challenge;
- The substance of the challenge; and either
- If the challenge was rejected, the reason why the challenge was rejected; or
- If the challenge was accepted, the reason the challenge was accepted, and any remedial actions taken in response to the challenge.

Challenges to Recurring Election Processes: Blanket Challenges

If a challenger wishes to challenge recurring elements of the election process, the challenger must make a blanket challenge. The blanket challenge shall be treated as a challenge to each occurrence of the process but need only be made and recorded in the poll book once. A challenger may only challenge recurring processes through a blanket challenge; a challenger may not challenge every occurrence of a recurring process in lieu of making a blanket challenge.

Warning and ejecting challengers or poll watchers

If a challenger or poll watcher acts in a prohibited manner or fails to follow a direction given by an election inspector serving at the location at which the challenger or poll watcher is present, the challenger will be warned of their prohibited action and of their responsibility to adhere to the instructions in this manual and to directions issued by election inspectors. The warning and the reason that the warning was issued should be noted in the poll book. The warning requirement is waived if the prohibited action is so egregious that the challenger or poll watcher is immediately ejected.

A challenger or poll watcher who repeatedly fails to follow any of the instructions or directions set out in The Appointment, Rights, and Duties of Election Challengers and Poll Watchers or issued by election inspectors may be ejected by any election inspector. A challenger or poll watcher who acts in a manner that disrupts the peace or order of the polling place or absent voter ballot processing facility, who acts to delay the work of any election inspector, or who threatens or intimidates a voter, election inspector, or election staff, may also be ejected by any election inspector. The ejection should be noted in the poll book. If the challenger or poll watcher refuses to leave after being informed of their ejection by an election inspector, the election inspector may request law enforcement remove the challenger or poll watcher from the polling place or absent voter ballot processing facility.

A challenger or poll watcher who is ejected from an absent voter ballot processing facility before the close of polls and while the challenger or poll watcher is subject to sequestration should, in lieu of being removed from the area containing the facility, be directed to remain in a room or area of the location separate from the area where absent voter ballots are being processed.

Challenger appeal of election inspector determinations

A challenger may appeal a decision by the challenger liaison or any other election inspector relating to the validity of a challenge, to a challenger's conduct, or to a challenger's ejection to the city or township clerk of the jurisdiction in which the challenger is serving. At the request of a challenger, the challenger liaison must provide the contact information of the city or township clerk. The appeal must be made outside of the hearing of voters. If the challenger is appealing their ejection, the appeal must be made after the challenger has left the polling place or absent voter ballot processing facility. If the city or township clerk rejects the challenger's ejection as improper, the clerk shall inform the challenger liaison and the challenger shall be allowed to reenter the polling place or absent voter ballot processing facility.

The challenger may appeal the decision of the local clerk to the Bureau of Elections.

A challenger may not appeal to the city or township clerk an election inspector's resolution to a challenge to a voter's eligibility to vote. Appeals of an election inspector's resolution to an eligibility challenge can only be adjudicated through the judicial process after Election Day.

A poll watcher may not appeal any determination made by an election inspector.

VII. Emergency absent voter ballots

In certain emergency situations, a voter may apply for an emergency absent voter ballot. This application may be received as late as 4:00 p.m. on

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Election Day. If an emergency application is received by the clerk, the AVCB must be instructed to make the necessary entries on the QVF Absent Voter List that would otherwise be completed by the clerk. Once the necessary entries are made, the emergency absent voter application must be returned to the clerk to await the return of the ballot. If the requested ballot is voted and returned to the clerk by 8:00 p.m., the clerk should record the date of the return on the corresponding application and deliver the absent voter ballot envelope to the counting board; the counting board must then record the date of return on the QVF Absent Voter List.

VIII. Absent voters appearing at the polls

If a voter who has been issued an absent voter ballot appears at an early voting site or an in-person precinct on Election Day to offer to vote, the ePollbook will alert the election inspector that the voter was issued an absent voter ballot. The election inspector should take the following actions, depending on whether the voter did not receive their absent voter ballot, received but did not return their absent voter ballot, received and returned their absent voter ballot to the clerk, or is appearing with the absent voter ballot in person.

Voter was sent but did not receive their absent voter ballot

A voter who requested but not receive their absent voter ballot may opt to vote in person at an early voting site or their polling place on Election Day instead of requesting a new absent voter ballot. The voter will be asked to complete an Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot at their precinct when they appear to vote, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot.

Such a voter will appear in the ePollbook with the following alert:

A voter who signs the Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot may be subject to challenge by a properly credentialed election challenger as an absent voter in the polls.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

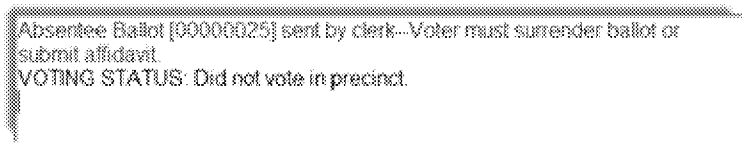
Voter was sent and received but did not return their absent voter ballot

A voter who requested and received, but did not return, their absent voter ballot may opt to vote in person at an early voting site or their polling place on Election Day instead of requesting a new absent voter ballot. The voter will be asked to complete an Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot at their precinct when they appear to vote, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot. Alternatively, the voter may surrender their absent voter ballot to the election inspectors at the precinct, and then will be permitted to cast a normal ballot.

Such a voter will appear in the ePollbook with the same alert as appears for a voter who was sent but did not receive their ballot:



A voter whose signature on their absent voter ballot was rejected by the clerk is treated as a voter who received but did not return their absent voter ballot. Such a voter is entitled to vote in person at a polling place on Election Day by following the procedures above.

A voter who surrenders their absent voter ballot to election inspectors in the polling place or who appears in person to cast their absent voter ballot is not subject to a challenge as an absent voter in the polls. A voter who signs the Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absent Voter Ballot may be subject to challenge by a properly credentialed election challenger as an absent voter in the polls.

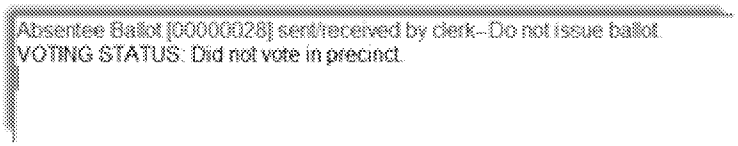
Voter was sent, received, and returned their absent voter ballot

A voter who requested, received, and returned their absent voter ballot, and whose ballot was accepted by the clerk after the voter's signature was found to match the signature on file with the clerk, cannot request that their ballot be spoiled on Election Day. Such a voter is not eligible to cast a ballot at their precinct on Election Day.

Such a voter will appear in the ePollbook with the following alert:

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA



Voter appears in person with their absent voter ballot

A voter who requested and received their absent voter ballot may bring the ballot with them to an early voting site or their polling place on Election Day. The voter may either surrender their absent voter ballot or they may vote their absent voter ballot and place it into the tabulator[3].

After the voter completes the application to vote, the election inspector should verify that the ballot presented by the voter is the ballot that was issued by comparing the number on the ballot stub to the ballot number appearing in the ePollBook. During this, the election inspector should be careful to not expose the ballot. If the numbers match, the voter will be converted from an "absent voter" to an "election day" or "early" voter. The election inspector should provide the voter with a full-size secrecy sleeve to place their ballot in. The voter may then vote their ballot, if not done already, and place it into the tabulator.

Alternatively, the voter may surrender their ballot and be issued a new one. If the ballot is surrendered, the election inspector should write "surrendered" on the ballot, place it into the clerk envelope, and issue the voter a new ballot. A voter who surrenders their absent voter ballot to election inspectors in the polling place or who appears in person to cast their absent voter ballot is not subject to a challenge as an absent voter in the polls.

IX. Staffing absent voter counting boards and working in shifts

Multiple shifts of election inspectors may be assigned to AVCBs, so long as the following requirements are observed:

- The city or township's board of election commissioners must appoint all election inspectors who will serve on election day between 21 and

[3] If the tabulators in an election day polling place cannot be programmed to accept and tabulate absent voter ballots, the voter can instead surrender their AV ballot and be issued a new ballot.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

40 days prior to the election. The city or township clerk is responsible for determining how many election inspectors are required to staff each AVCB

- Every election inspector present at the absent voter ballot counting facility at the start of tabulation must take and sign the required oath, as explained above.

Additionally, to avoid delay in the processing of absent voter ballots and to allow the ending shift of election inspectors to instruct the new shift of inspectors, any replacement shift of election inspectors beginning their work after the close of polls should have at least a one hours overlap with the ending shift. This will allow a smooth transition of information from the earlier shift to the replacement shift, including the identification and documentation of any issues that may have arisen during the earlier shift. For AVCBs using high-speed scanners, shifts should overlap by two hours so that the new shift can be instructed on the use of the high-speed equipment.

Documenting shift changes

The shift change should be noted in the remarks section of the Poll Book. The election inspector ending their shift should note the name of the election inspector replacing them and should provide a brief description of the last tasks they completed and handed off to their relief election inspector. The new election inspector must take the oath and sign the oath section at the front of the Poll Book. Any election inspectors present at the close of the AVCB are required to sign both the totals tape and the Certificate of Election Inspectors. The signature of election inspectors relieved prior to the closing of the AVCB will not appear on either document, but those election inspectors should sign a separate sign-out sheet provided by the jurisdiction before leaving the absent voter ballot processing facility.

X. Combined absent voter counting boards

City or townships may enter into agreements with each other or with the county in which they are located to operate a combined absent voter counting board. In general, the same rules and procedures apply to combined AVCBs that apply to other AVCBs. To establish a combined AVCB, local and county clerks should enter into an agreement to establish a combined AVCB. The agreement must be entered into at least 75 days prior to Election Day. The Bureau provides model language for the agreement on eLearning.[4]

Additionally, local and county jurisdictions should agree in advance whether the local clerk or election inspectors working in the AVCB will complete the pre-tabulation processing of the absent voter ballots described above. If the local clerk completes the verification, the local clerk should provide a signed statement that the local clerk has verified that the names on the absent voter ballot envelopes and absent voter list or pollbook match, and that the number of envelopes delivered to the combined AVCB matches the number of names on the absent voter list or pollbook.

Finally, jurisdictions participating in a combined AVCB should also agree on answers to the following issues in advance of the operation of the combined AVCB:

- How and when all necessary equipment will be delivered by the local jurisdiction to the location of the combined AVCB.
- How equipment will be stored at the location of the AVCB and what security measures will be in place at the combined AVCB before Election Day.
- Procedures for the operation of the combined AVCB, including the number of challengers and poll watchers who will be permitted in the facility, how election inspectors will be selected, and shift schedules for election inspectors.
- In consultation with election management system vendors, establish procedures for how unofficial election results will be reported.
- How ballot containers will be used, sealed, and stored.
- How election equipment will be returned to local jurisdictions following the canvass.

Affidavit of Madison Takala

STATE OF MICHIGAN)
) ss
COUNTY OF MACOMB)

Madison Takala, being first duly sworn, deposes and says as follows:

1. If called as a witness, I would testify as follows based on my personal knowledge to the best of my information, knowledge, and belief.

2. I am employed by the City of Warren as an election inspector.

3. The first time I worked as an election inspector for the City of Warren was the August 2020 primary election. In that election, I was assigned to the Absent Voter Counting Board (AVCB).

4. Since August 2020, I have worked every subsequent election as an election inspector for the City of Warren. Following the November 2020 general election, I have always worked as a counting board precinct chair at the City of Warren AVCB. During the August 6, 2024 primary election, I was a precinct chair at the City of Warren AVCB.

5. Following the August 2020 primary election, I was asked by the City of Warren Deputy Clerk to work as a temporary employee in the clerk's office to help prepare for the November 2020 general election.

6. As part of that job, I was responsible for: (1) receiving and processing AV ballot applications; (2) preparing the ballot envelopes for being sent to voters on the AV ballot list; (3) putting ballots into the envelopes before being sent to voters.

7. As a temporary employee of the City of Warren clerk's office, I was also responsible for receiving and handling AV ballots that had been returned to the clerk's office. As soon as I received a ballot envelope, I would stamp the envelope with the date it was received.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Then, after stamping the envelop, I would take the envelop to a computer and scan a bar code on it, which would pull up the voter's signature from the QVF so the signature on the envelop could be verified. If there were any questions about the signature on the envelope, I would set the envelop aside for additional review.

8. During the entire time I worked for the clerk's office before the November 2020 general election, I was never told to mark any portion of the ballot envelope to indicate that the voter's signature had been verified. Nor was I ever told to mark the date on the portion of the envelope for the clerk's use.

9. During the August 6, 2024 primary election, I worked as a counting board chair at the City of Warren AVCB. On that day, I arrived at the AVCB by 7:50 a.m. and left around 10:55 p.m. Because my group was short-staffed, I only took a 30 minute lunch break and a 10 minute dinner break.

10. As a counting board chair, I was responsible for managing the group of election inspectors assigned to my counting board and helping new workers get adjusted. After we were sworn in, I would also manage the pollbook for the precincts assigned to my counting board and, as the ballots were tabulated, I would make sure that the precincts were in balance.

11. One of the first steps of processing an absent voter ballot at the AVCB involves an election inspector looking at the envelope in which the absent voter ballot was returned to the clerk's office to check whether: (1) the precinct number is correct; (2) the ballot number matches the number on the envelope; (3) the clerk's office marked the envelop to indicate that the ballot was received on or before election day; and (4) the clerk's office marked the envelop to confirm that the voter's identity has been verified.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

12. To simplify this process, the envelopes in which the ballots are returned to the clerk's office include a grey rectangle in the upper right-hand corner that states "For Clerk's Use Only" and includes blanks for the clerk's office to fill in the following items: (1) Return Date and Time; (2) Precinct Number; (3) Ballot Number; and (4) Voter Signature Verified (Initials).

13. In addition to the "For Clerk's Use Only" section in the upper right-hand corner, the envelopes in which the ballots are returned to the clerk's office includes a section on the lower left-hand side of the envelope where the voter is directed to sign the envelope for the purpose of verifying their identity.

14. As a precinct chair on August 6, 2024, I personally observed a large number of AV ballots and ballot envelopes from the City of Warren. My counting board was assigned 12-13 precincts, which means we processed several thousand AV ballots.

15. All of the ballot envelopes I observed had the "For Clerk's Use Only" section only partially filled out. That is, while the precinct number and number blanks were filled in, I do not remember seeing a single envelope where the "Return Date and Time" or "Signature Verified (Initials)" blanks were filled in.

16. I do not remember ever seeing an envelope where the "For Clerk's Use Only" section was signed or initialed by the clerk's office, or otherwise marked with a statement that the voter's signature had been verified by the clerk's office. I did see a small number of ballot envelopes where the voter had signed in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the envelope.

17. I do not believe that any of the ballots that were forwarded from the clerk's office to the counting board included a statement—or signature or initials—indicating that the corresponding voter's signature had been verified by the clerk's office.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

18. I do remember seeing around 4 or 5 ballots where the envelopes indicated that the voter's identity had been verified. But the appearance of these ballot envelopes indicated to me that the voter's identity had been verified as part of the curing process by which, because of an issue with (or omission of) the voter's signature on the envelope, the voter had gone to the clerk's office in person to have their identity verified.

19. I do not remember ever seeing an envelope where the "For Clerk's Use Only" section was marked with the date that the ballot had been received. However, I do remember seeing some envelopes that were stamped with the date the envelope had been received the clerk's office.

20. Many of the ballots I observed on August 6, 2024 had a green highlighter mark running through the section of the envelope where the voter was supposed to put their signature.

21. I did not see any ballot where the highlighter mark was placed in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the envelope such that the highlighting would have indicated that the voter's signature had been verified by the clerk's office.

22. I believe that the highlighter mark is placed on the voter's signature line by the clerk's office before the envelopes are mailed to voters for the purpose of drawing the voter's attention to the signature line and limiting the number of AV ballots that require curing due to a missing signature.

23. On August 6, 2024, a poll challenger brought to my attention that the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the ballot envelopes were not marked with either the date received or a statement that the voter's signature had been verified. I directed the challenger to the deputy clerk and believe they spoke, although I am not aware of the outcome of their conversation.

3. The first time I worked as an election inspector for the City of Warren was the November 2020 general election. In that election, I was assigned to the Absent Voter Counting Board (AVCB).

4. I have worked as an election inspector for the City of Warren during almost every election since November 2020.

5. During the August 6, 2024 primary election, I worked as a counting board chair at the City of Warren AVCB. In that role, I was responsible for managing 6-10 election inspectors who were tasked with processing and counting the AV ballots for around 12 precincts.

6. My counting board processed around 2,000 ballots. I personally observed a large number of AV ballots and ballot envelopes during the August 6, 2024 primary election. I estimate that I visually observed and inspected around 500 to 600 individual ballots and ballot envelopes.

7. The envelopes in which the ballots are returned to the clerk's office include a grey rectangle in the upper right-hand corner that states "For Clerk's Use Only" and includes blanks for the clerk's office to fill in the following items: (1) Return Date and Time; (2) Precinct Number; (3) Ballot Number; and (4) Voter Signature Verified (Initials).

10. For all of the 500-600 ballot envelopes I observed, the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the envelope was only partially filled out. That is, the ballot envelopes I observed only had the precinct number and ballot number blanks "filled in," while the fields for "return date and time" and "voter signature verified" had not been completed by the clerk's office.

11. I do not remember seeing a single AV ballot envelope where the "Return Date and Time" or "Signature Verified (Initials)" blanks in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section were filled in. Nor do I remember a single ballot envelope that had any other indication that a clerk's office employee had verified the voter's signature on the envelope.

12. I also do not remember seeing any ballot envelopes that were stamped with the date and/or time the envelope was received.

13. There were a handful of ballots—less than 20—that had a paper attached to the envelope by paperclip that indicated that the voter's signature had been verified through the curing process.

15. I did not see any ballot where the highlighter mark was placed in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the envelope.

16. Although it is my understanding that the AV ballots that are brought to the City of Warren AVCB by the clerk's office have had the ballot envelope signature verified, that is an assumption—there was nothing on the face of any of the ballot envelopes I saw on August 6, 2024, indicating that the signatures had been verified.

Dawn Beattie, being first duly sworn, deposes and says as follows:

1. If called as a witness, I would testify as follows based on my personal knowledge to the best of my information, knowledge, and belief.

2. I am employed by the Michigan Republican Party as a Regional Election Integrity Director in Michigan. I am also a member of the State Committee of the Michigan Republican Party. I have been credentialed as a poll challenger in multiple elections.

3. During the August 6, 2024 Primary Election, I was credentialed by the Michigan Republican Party to serve as a poll challenger at the Absent Voter Counting Board (AVCB) for the City of Warren in Macomb County, Michigan.

4. I arrived at the Warren AVCB at around 8:05 a.m. on election day. And, except for a quick lunch and a coffee run, I was present at the AVCB all day until past 9:00 p.m.

5. As a poll challenger at the AVCB, I watched several precinct tables performing multiple stages of the absent voter ballot counting process. Over the course of the day, I moved between and observed about 16 tables.

6. All told, I spent multiple hours on August 6, 2024 actually looking absent voter ballots being processed and tabulated.

7. The envelopes in which absent voter ballots are returned to the clerk's office include a grey rectangle in the upper right-hand corner that states "For Clerk's Use Only" and includes blanks for the clerk's office to fill in the following items: (1) Return Date and Time; (2) Precinct Number; (3) Ballot Number; and (4) Voter Signature Verified (Initials).

8. 9. As I watched the election inspectors process absent voter ballots on August 6, 2024, I noticed that, for every ballot envelope I remember looking at, the "For Clerk's Use Only" section was not fully filled out and was instead incomplete.

10. Although the precinct number and ballot number blanks were filled in on every ballot envelope I observed, I did not observe a single ballot envelope where either the "Return Date and Time" or "Voter Signature Verified (Initials)" blanks were filled in.

11. That is, I did not see a single ballot envelope where the clerk's office marked the envelope with the date and/or time when it was received as directed in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the return envelope.

12. I also did not see a single ballot envelope where the clerk's office signed, initialed, or otherwise marked the ballot envelope with a statement or indication that the voter's signature had been verified or that the voter's identity had otherwise been confirmed as directed in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the return envelope.

13. I did notice that many of the ballot return envelopes had a highlighter mark on the section where the voter is supposed to sign the envelope.

14. Although I initially speculated that the above-referenced highlighter marks on the section where a voter is supposed to sign the envelope might be evidence that the signature was verified, I was informed by one of the counting board chairs that this was not true.

Document received by the MI Court of Claims.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

15. In fact, the highlighter marks I observed were exclusively located in the voter's section of the envelope. That is, I did not see a single highlighter mark in the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of a ballot return envelope.

16. I brought this issue to the attention of the Deputy City Clerk. I pointed out that the "For Clerk's Use Only" section was not filled out and asked her to help me understand the verification process.

17. The Deputy City Clerk responded that she was not sure about the verification process and did not know why the "For Clerk's Use Only" section of the envelopes was incomplete.

18. The Deputy City Clerk also told me that she was not able to find out the answer because she needed to do something else, but that she would follow up with me. However, she never followed up with me.

19. I was never provided with an explanation why none of the "For Clerk's Use Only" sections of the ballot envelopes were marked with either the date it was received by the clerk's office or a statement that the voter's signature and identity had been verified.

PETITION FOR RELIEF IN THE FORM OF WRIT OF MANDAMUS [1]

TO: The Honorable, the Judges of Said Court:

United Sovereign Americans, Inc., a Missouri nonprofit corporation, Michigan Fair Elections Institute, a Michigan nonprofit corporation, Timothy Maura-Vetter, individually, Braden Giacobazzi, individually, Phani Mantravadi, individually, Philip O'Hallorin, individually, and Donna Brandenburg, individually, Nick Somberg, individually, Petitioners, by counsel, van der Veen, Hartshorn, Levin, & Lindheim, through Bruce L. Castor, Jr., Esquire, and Michael T. van der Veen, Esquire, hereby submit this Petition for Relief in the Form of a Writ of Mandamus, directed to Respondents, Jocelyn Benson in her Official Capacity as the Secretary of Michigan, Dana Ness, in her Official Capacity as Attorney General of Michigan, and Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and,

Respectfully Represents:

Summary of Petitioners' Argument and Examples of Relief Requested

1. The Congress of the United States has outlined the minimum standards which must be maintained by every state in order for a federal election to be considered reliable. As outlined below, in Michigan's 2022 federal election those minimum standards were not met by Michigan election officials rendering the certified election results that year unreliable. Respondents in their official capacities engaged in insufficient efforts to ensure that the 2022

[1] Petitioners are cognizant of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 81(b) which abolished mandamus actions in United States District Court, but nonetheless authorizes "relief previously available through [writs of mandamus] by appropriate action or motion under these rules." F.R.C.P. 81(b). Petitioners herein are seeking relief via the All Writs Act (§ 1361) and an Action to Compel a United States Officer to Perform His/Her Duty (§ 1361).

performance is not repeated in subsequent federal elections beginning in 2024.

2. If the 2022 election performance is repeated in 2024, Petitioners and all Michigan voters will suffer damages.

3. Apart from Court action in equity, no other mechanism exists in the law for Petitioners to require Respondents to perform their ministerial duties requiring that Michigan's federal elections be conducted in conformity with the law as Congress has set forth.

4. Only this Honorable Court has the power to require Respondents to act to bring the 2024 (and subsequent) federal elections supervised by Michigan authorities into conformity with the minimum standards for reliability set down by Congress and outlined infra.

5. Without the Court's action, Petitioners believe and therefore aver that the 2024 (and subsequent) Michigan federal election results will be unreliable in the same way, and thus unreliable for the same reasons that the 2022 results are unreliable.

6. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that only properly registered voters cast votes in combined federal and state elections beginning in 2024.

7. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that only votes properly cast are counted in combined federal and Michigan elections beginning in 2024.

8. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that all votes properly cast are counted correctly in combined federal and Michigan elections in even numbered years beginning in 2024.

9. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that only votes properly cast are counted in combined federal and Michigan elections beginning in 2024.

Obtained by Judicial Watch, Inc. via Michigan FOIA

10. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that all voting systems are compliant with all critical infrastructure requirements and risk assessments are completed within the actual use context, thereby assuring that every ballot is correctly and uniformly processed, as well as accurately tabulated and secured in combined federal and Michigan elections beginning in 2024.

11. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that the authenticity of every ballot counted is proven by the maintenance of a comprehensive, unbroken chain of custody from the voter's hand to the final certified result, and the Michigan election officials maintain records of said chain of custody post-election, in compliance with all legally prescribed safeguards in combined federal and Michigan elections beginning in 2024.

12. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that combined federal and Michigan elections in even numbered years beginning in 2024 are conducted with the transparency required by law.

13. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention to ensure that only votes properly cast are counted in combined federal and Michigan elections beginning in 2024.

14. Petitioners seek this Court's intervention clarifying and ordering that the currently accepted Federal definition "to certify" is to attest that an official measurement is both accurate and the finding of accuracy was reaching in a fully compliant manner, thereby, directing that the "certification of elections" by Michigan election officials of combined federal and Michigan elections from 2024 onward constitutes an "attestation," ostensibly under penalty of perjury, by the certifying official(s) that the vote counts are accurate and the cast and counted votes and the election itself were all conducted in compliance with applicable federal and state law.

Obtained by Judicial Watch, Inc. via Michigan FOIA

15. Petitioners, upon review of the statutes cited below, believe and therefore aver that federal and state law specify what Michigan officials must conform to, at a minimum, to properly conduct a combined federal and state election and prior certifying that election.

16. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that based on the analysis below, combined with the various exhibits attached to this petition and incorporated by reference herein, that in the 2022 combined federal and state election, officials of the State of Michigan failed to ensure that safeguards were in place as mandated by various statutes designed to ensure the integrity of the elections.

17. Petitioners believe and therefore aver the failure by Michigan election officials to know of and implement the safeguards required by law in 2022 allowed Michigan election officials to certify that election despite analysis showing the election results were per se unreliable on account of apparent error rates exceeding those the law permits before the results in any federal election become unreliable.

18. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that apparent error rates that exceed the maximum error rate allowed by law destroyed the integrity of the 2022 election making full confidence in the accuracy of that election impossible.

19. While Petitioners cannot state with certainty that the 2022 Michigan General Election produced "winning" candidates who should not have won, Petitioners believe and therefore aver that Michigan cannot state with certainty that all "winning" candidates received more votes than their "losing" candidates because the election itself was compromised by the state's failure to conform to the requirements of federal law designed to ensure reliable election results.

20. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that Congress mandated the maximum number of election errors which were permissible in the 2022 combined federal and state elections in Michigan (and, indeed, in all states and voting territories). An error rate above the maximum permissible rate set by Congress renders an election uncertifiable because the results are unreliable. Nevertheless, Michigan officials certified the 2022 election.

21. Petitioners do not seek relief in this Court in a challenge to the outcome of the 2022 federal election in Michigan. Petitioners agree that it is possible that in every federal contested election supervised and certified by the State of Michigan in 2022 the "winner" received more votes than the "loser."

22. Petitioners believe and therefore aver, however, that the certification by Michigan officials of the 2022 election was done despite the integrity of the election being suspect on account of apparent error rates occurring in that election that exceeded the error rate Congress permits before federal election results cannot be relied upon as accurate, and the State of Michigan did nothing to investigate those apparent errors before certifying the election.

23. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that it is reasonable to believe that systemic issues which occurred in the 2022 combined Federal and state election in Michigan will continue uncorrected in 2024, 2026, 2028, etc. absent intervention by this Court.

24. Petitioners aver they have called the various issues with the 2022 election to the attention of Michigan officials who failed to take sufficient action to ensure no further repeats of those issues cited here affecting the integrity of the 2022 election.

25. The relief requested by Petitioners in the form of a Writ of Mandamus seeks, broadly speaking, this Court order Respondents to perform the ministerial functions their jobs require by taking actions to rectify reliability issues evident in the 2022 election.[2]

2022 Combined Federal and State Election in Michigan Produced Unreliable Results and Should Not Have Been Certified

26. In the Help America Vote Act ("HAVA") 52 US.C.A. § 21081, Congress mandates as follows: HAVA - voting system error rate "…(5) Error RATES.—The error rate of the voting system in counting ballots (determined by taking into account only those errors which are attributable to the voting system and not attributable to an act of the voter) shall comply with the error rate standards established under section 3.2.1 of the voting systems standards issued by the Federal Election Commission ("FEC") which are in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act."

27. Congress enacted and President Bush signed HAVA into law in 2002 and it remains the law of the United States to date.

28. The voting standards of the FEC in effect at the time Congress enacted HAVA in 2002 were the Voting Systems Standards Volume I: Performance Standards (2002).[3]

29. Those voting standards, in effect at the time HAVA became law, allowed for one error per 500,000 ballot positions.

30. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that a federal election that exceeded an error rate of one error per 500,000 ballot positions renders a federal election unreliable.

[2] Petitioners do not request this Court order Respondents to exercise their discretion or make any decision at all apart from enforcing the specific, non-discretionary, requirements of the law outlined inter alia below.

[3] As of 2021, there have been five iterations of national level voting system standards. The Federal Election Commission published the first two sets of federal standards in 1990 and 2002 (VSS1990 and VSS2002). The Election Assistance Commission then adopted Version 1.0 of the Voluntary Voting System Guidelines (VVSG 1.0, or VVSG2005) on December 13, 2005. On March 31, 2015, the EAC commissioners approved VVSG 1.1 (VVSG2015). On February 10, 2021, the EAC approved VVSG 2.0 (VVSG2021).

Obtained by Judicial Watch, Inc. via Michigan FOIA

31. As the HAVA provision enacted in 2002 cited above has not changed, the error rate of one error per 500,000 ballot positions is currently the law of the United States.

32. A "ballot position" refers to the number of individual "choices" a voter could make on a single ballot. For example, if a particular ballot has thirty little circles for the voter to fill-in or not fill-in, that single ballot would be said to contain thirty ballot positions.

33. A voting system error occurs anytime the voting scanning machine should have discerned an error, not made by the voter, while counting one of those ballot positions on a scanned ballot.

34. Experts working for the FEC estimated that 500,000 ballot positions equaled 125,000 individual ballots. (See Election Assistance Commission Voluntary Voting System Guidelines of 2015, U.S. Election Assistance Commission. United States [Web Archive] Retrieved from the Election Assistance Commission, https://www.eac.gov/sites/default/files/eac_assets/1/28/VVSG.1.1.VOL.1.FINAL1.pdf

35. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that the EAC desired to clarify the meaning of 500,000 ballot positions in terms of how many individual ballots "make-up" 500,000 ballot positions in order to make easier understanding the election "error rates" permissible by HAVA.

36. Petitioners believe and therefore aver (and will present expert testimony to so substantiate) that the calculation made by the FEC that 500,000 ballot positions represents 125,000 individual ballots is correct and represents the proper interpretation of federal law and Congressional intent under HAVA.

37. In the 2022 Michigan General Election, 4,500,400 individual ballots were recorded by election officials as cast.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

38. For the 2022 General Election if 4,500,400 (ballots cast) is divided by 125,000 (because the law allows for one error per 125,000 ballots), that leaves thirty-seven (37) (rounded up) as the maximum number of errors permitted under federal law for that election. Only upon a showing of 37 of fewer errors, then, would HAVA permit Michigan election officials to certify the 2022 election as valid.

39. If there were more than thirty-seven (37) voting system errors in the entire ballot tabulation for all ballots cast in the 2022 election in Michigan, the election results are unreliable.

40. Michigan exceeded this benchmark of thirty-seven (37) voting system errors in the 2022 General Election as outlined below.

41. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that contributing to the unreliability of Michigan's 2022 election is the fact that Michigan's voter registration rolls, themselves, contained hundreds of thousands of potential errors at the time of the 2022 General Election.

42. These potential errors were in the form of illegal duplicate registrations, voters with invalid or illogical voter history, voters placed in inactive statuses on questionable authority, backdated registrations, registrations with a modified date prior to registration, invalid or illogical registration dates, age discrepant registrants, and registrants with questionable addresses.

43. While Congress may not have specifically intended for these types of errors to be included in the one out of 500,000 error rate, Petitioners believe and therefore aver that this figure provides a general benchmark for what the Legislature considered an acceptable degree of error in our elections.

44. Such errors jeopardize the validity of elections throughout Michigan, bring doubt as to the accuracy and integrity of Michigan's currently-in-place voting systems, undermine Michigan citizens' collective voting rights, all in violation of existing state and federal election laws.

45. Petitioners seek redress from these voter registration apparent errors, relief from blatantly inaccurate voter registration rolls, relief from discrepancies between votes cast and actual votes reported, and relief from extreme voting errors generally, which collectively and historically amount to violations of federal election laws, Michigan election laws, and various voting rights encompassed by the United States Constitution.

46. The aforesaid violations of federal and state law have in the past resulted in the certification of election results from provably flawed, inaccurate, and obscure processes outside the view of impartial witnesses or the public, and Respondents have refused collectively to maintain or enforce compliance with federal and state required transparency mandates.

47. Petitioners have brought this issue to the attention of Respondents, who have done absolutely nothing to address these errors ensuring future elections will suffer from the same deficiencies.

48. Furthermore, rather than alarmed by these apparent errors pursuant to prevailing election laws, Respondents instead have collectively ignored the issue of the unreliable election results therefore produced.

49. Petitioners believe and therefore aver Respondents have failed to adequately police and monitor problems with the voter rolls and failed to adequately fix voting registration errors within Michigan, despite being in the best position to ensure the reliability, integrity, and accuracy of Michigan's elections to ensure veracity of the state's election results.

50. Petitioners have repeatedly made good faith and sincere efforts to negotiate and get Respondents to respond to their legitimate concerns.

51. Petitioners have repeatedly shown Respondents evidence of potential violations of election law, regarding the conduct of elections by local and state officials charged with administering elections, on behalf of all citizens in accordance with the law.

52. The risk of election subversion is indisputable, but the State of Michigan has denied Petitioners denied a fair hearing, despite the serious nature of Petitioners' findings calling into question the reliability, integrity and accuracy of prior federal elections administered by the state.

53. The prayer for relief seeks the protection of Petitioners' rights, as well as those of every voting citizen of Michigan, to have their vote fairly counted in an open and reliable election as such elections are defined according to law as outlined below.

54. Respondents have denied Petitioners' their right to a fair vote.

55. Furthermore, Respondents appear to have followed procedures that have obscured the ability to audit the 2022 general election to render the outcomes factually unknowable, at the time of certification.

56. Petitioners believe and therefore aver Respondents have violated multiple federal and state laws, or negligently allowed such violations to occur, while loudly proclaiming the infallibility of Michigan's election results.

57. Respondents insist that Petitioners have adequate voting rights, while simultaneously fighting from every conceivable angle to prevent Petitioners from attempting to protect those rights. Respondents' collective actions in refusing to address the problem extinguishes and undermines the very meaning of the right to vote in a fair democracy.

58. Respondents can and should be compelled to address compliance with existing election law, specifically: compelled to adequately investigate the issue, prosecute anyone in violation of federal and/or state law, and actively work to bring Michigan back into compliance with federal and state election law mandates so that Michigan's constitutionally enshrined voting rights are upheld and preserved.

59. The All-Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651 provides that "[t]he Supreme Court and all courts established by Act of Congress may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in the aid of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the usages and principles of law."

60. District Courts of the United States have original jurisdiction of any action in the nature of mandamus to compel an officer or employee of the United States or any agency thereof to perform a duty owed to the plaintiff. 28 U.S.C. § 1361.

Jurisdiction and Venue

72. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1651.

73. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1361.

74. This Court additionally has subject matter jurisdiction over this complaint because the case presents substantial questions of federal law, and the state claims are so related to the federal claims that they form part of the same case or controversy. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1367.

75. This Court has personal jurisdiction as the Respondents are a collection of Michigan agencies and actors, and the State of Michigan is within the jurisdiction of the United States.

76. "When a state exercises power wholly within the domain of state interest, it is insulated from federal judicial review. But such insulation is not carried over when state power is used as an instrument for circumventing a federally protected right." Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 372 (1963) (citing Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 347 (1960)).

77. Venue is proper in this district under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(e)(1).

Standing

78. Timothy Mauro-Vetter is a citizen of Michigan, Oakland County, and uncovered voting irregularities in Michigan's 2022 General Election through Freedom Of Information Act ("FOIA") requests, including vote switching, duplicates, delays, and manipulation of voting history. He also submitted FOIA requests for accurate voter and registration data which were ignored. See Exhibit "A" for a copy of Petitioner's FOIA requests.

79. Petitioner Braden Giacobazzi is a citizen of Michigan, Oakland County, and was a 2022 recount and poll challenger. Petitioner is a current candidate for Orion Township Clerk in the 2024 election season.

80. Petitioner Phani Mantravadi is a citizen of Michigan, Livingston County, and is the CEO of CheckMyVote.com, a for profit business which was impacted negatively due to the 2022 Michigan elections by data manipulation of vote history records, which led to a loss of customer base due to poor data integrity.

81. Petitioner Philip O'Hallorin is a citizen of Michigan, Oakland County, and was a 2022 election challenger whose rights were violated due to Respondents' failure to enforce federal and Michigan state election laws.

82. Petitioner Donna Brandenburg is a citizen of Michigan, Kent County, and was a candidate for Governor of Michigan in the 2022 election season. Petitioner suffered financial injury through campaign investments spent to run for office where the 2022 election was not held to the proper federal or state legal standards for election integrity.

83. Petitioner Nick Somberg is a citizen of Michigan, Oakland County.

84. Petitioner United Sovereign Americans also uncovered overwhelming evidence of registration issues in the 2020 and 2022 elections. In particular, they discovered that for the 2022 election:

a. 100,229 registrations contained invalid addresses;

b. 4,714 registrants were age discrepant (younger than 16 or older than 115)

c. 2,204 registrations were back-dated new registrations;

d. 7,481 registrations were illegal duplicates;

e. 6,069 registrations had the voter removed then added back;

f. 11,511 registrations had double votes added then removed;

g. 57,903,469 registrations had votes altered post certification;

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

h. 152,047 registrations were processed on a non-business day;

i. 13,824 registrations had invalid registration status;

j. 4,235 registrations contained invalid names.

See Exhibit "B" for a copy of United Sovereign Americans' Michigan 2022 General Election Scorecard.

85. There is active litigation in this state concerning Michigan's compliance with the Help America Votes Act ("HAVA"), in that certain state directives violate United States federal election law.

86. Petitioners have been and are currently harmed by the State of Michigan voting systems currently and formerly in use in Michigan state and federal elections. Respondents have allowed, and continue to allow, violations of federal election laws, Michigan election laws, the United States Constitution, and federal civil rights laws pertaining to voter rights.

87. The violations of Michigan election laws, federal election laws, the U.S. Constitution, and federal civil rights laws pertaining to voter registration rolls, transparency, compliance, and certification of the voting systems, and the serious issues hereinafter discussed with the overall voting systems exemplify their injury.

88. The injury to Petitioners and all Michigan voters would cease to exist or be greatly relieved if the Court grants Petitioners' requested relief.

89. The Supreme Court has indicated that if one party to a lawsuit has standing, other entities can join as parties without having to independently satisfy the demands of Article III, provided those parties do not seek a distinct form of relief from the party with standing. See, Horne v. Flores, 557 U.S. 433, 446-47 (2009).

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

90. United Sovereign Americans is not seeking a distinct form of relief from the other Petitioners and therefore has standing.

91. Michigan Fair Elections Institute is not seeking a distinct form of relief from the other Petitioners and therefore has standing.

Background

A. THE CONSTITUTIONALLY PROTECTED RIGHT TO VOTE

92. The United States Constitution grants the people the right to choose representatives to the people of several states, according to the voting eligibility requirements of the state. U.S. Const. art. 1, § 2.

93. The 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution, Section 1, defines a "citizen" as all people born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.

94. The 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution, Section 2, protects eligible citizen voters against denial or abridgment of their vote.

95. "The very essence of civil liberty certainly consists in the right of every individual to claim the protection of the laws, whenever he receives an injury." Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch 137, 5 U.S., 137, 163 (1803).

96. Federal courts regard the right to vote in a fairly conducted election as a constitutionally protected feature of United States citizenship. Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 554-55 (1964).

97. After the 2020 Presidential Election, pervasive discussion reported on by the media focused on the validity of the presidential election results within the State of Michigan.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

98. Discussions and/or litigation in Michigan, as well as in other states around the Nation, centered on whether raw vote totals were accurate, with particular attention focused on the question: if all ballots in dispute were decided, hypothetically, in the favor of one candidate for president over the other, would that have changed the outcome of the election in that state?

99. Questions concerned whether the recorded vote totals, viewed in the light most favorable to the losing candidate in any given state, could have affected the awarding of electoral votes from said state, which, in turn, might have affected the determination of the "winner" of the elections for president and vice-president in the Electoral College.

100. The media widely reported that no court ruled that, even if all disputed ballots were assumed to have been found to be favorable to the Republican Candidate during the 2020 presidential election, the outcome in any disputed state would not have been affected. Furthermore, there was insufficient evidence produced such that a court could find that the outcome of the election in any disputed state was unreliable.

101. Petitioners do not seek to revisit the results of the 2020 presidential election, nor to re-examine the conclusions drawn by the various courts and media outlets as summarized above.

102. Petitioners posit a different question than that noted above: How many disputed ballots found to be improperly cast in any given federal election may occur before the reliability and integrity of the entire election becomes suspect? Petitioners respectfully represent that Congress has answered this very question as outlined further below and Congress' answer to this question forms much of the basis of the instant Petition.

103. In In re: Coy, 127 U.S. 731 (1888), the United States Supreme Court held that

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

Congress had authority under the Constitution's Necessary and Proper Clause to regulate any activity during a mixed federal/state election that exposed the federal election to potential harm, whether that harm materialized or not. Coy is still good law. See, United States v. Slone, 411 F.3d 643, 647 (6th Cir. 2005); United States v. Mason, 673 F.2d 737, 739 (4th Cir. 1982); United States v. Malmay, 671 F.2d 869, 874–75 (5th Cir. 1982); Ex parte Yarborough, 110 U.S. 651 (1884); Ex parte Siebold, 100 U.S. 371 (1880).

104. In Oregon v. Mitchell, the Supreme Court stated:

> The right to vote is, of course, different in one respect from the other rights in the economic, social, or political field which, as indicated in the Appendix to this opinion, are under the Equal Protection Clause. The right to vote is a civil right deeply embedded in the Constitution. Article I, § 2, provides that the House is composed of members 'chosen . . . by the People' and the electors 'shall have the Qualifications requisite for Electors of the most numerous Branch of the State Legislature.' The Seventeenth Amendment states that Senators shall be 'elected by the people.' The Fifteenth Amendment speaks of the 'right of citizens of the United States to vote' -- not only in federal but in state elections.

> right strike at the heart of representative government. This 'right to choose, secured by the Constitution,' United States v. Classic, 313 U.S. 299, is a civil right of the highest order. Voting concerns 'political' matters; but the right is not 'political' in the constitutional sense. Interference with it has given rise to a long and consistent line of decisions by the Court; and the claim has always been upheld as justiciable.

105. Justice Harlan also stated the following in his concurring opinion:

> [A]s the right in the people of each State to a republican government and to choose their Representatives in Congress is of the guarantees of the Constitution, by this amendment a remedy might be given directly for a case supposed by Madison, where treason might change a State government from a republican to a despotic government, and thereby deny suffrage to the people.

Mitchell, 400 U.S. at 185 (Harlan, J., concurring in part).

106. The Supreme Court further stated: "we are cautioned about the dangers of entering into political thickets and mathematical quagmires. Our answer is this: a denial of constitutionally protected rights demands judicial protection; our oath and our office require no less of us." Reynolds v Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 566 (1964).

107. "Every voter in a federal . . . election . . . whether he votes for a candidate with little chance of winning or for one with little chance of losing, has a right under the Constitution to have his vote fairly counted, without its being distorted by fraudulently cast votes." Anderson v. United States, 417 U.S. 211, 227 (1974) (emphasis added).

B. NATIONAL VOTER REGISTRATION ACT ("NVRA")

108. The National Voter Registration Act ("NVRA") was passed for the purpose of ensuring accurate and current voter registration rolls to enhance the integrity of elections.

109. In so doing, Congress found that: (1) the right of citizens of the United States to vote is a fundamental right; (2) it is the duty of the Federal, State, and local governments to promote the exercise of that right; and (3) discriminatory and unfair registration laws and procedures can have a direct and damaging effect on voter participation in elections for Federal office and disproportionately harm voter participation by various groups, including racial minorities. 52 US.C.A. § 20501.

110. The NVRA exists in part to "protect the integrity of the electoral process" and "to ensure that accurate and current voter registration rolls are maintained." 52 US.C.A. § 20501.

111. The NVRA requires states to "conduct a general program that makes a reasonable effort to remove the names of ineligible voters from the official lists of eligible voters" by reason of death or change of address. 52 U.S.C. § 20507(a)(4).

112. Similarly, the U.S. Election Assistance Commission ("EAC") is required by law to report to Congress its findings related to state voter registration practices. 52 U.S.C. § 20508(a)(3).

113. Federal regulations require states to provide data to the EAC for use in their reports, including the numbers of active voters, and the numbers of registered voters removed from the rolls for any reason. 11 C.F.R. § 9428.7(b)(1), (2), (5).

114. The NVRA requires the States to complete any program the purpose of which is to remove ineligible voters from the official lists of eligible voters not later than ninety (90) days prior to an election.

115. NVRA has two (2) methods of enforcement. First, the Attorney General can petition the court for declaratory and injunctive relief. Second, a private citizen can pursue a cause of action with certain requirements as follows. In a private action, notice is required, in that a person must notify the chief election official of the State involved. If the violation is not corrected within 90 days of receipt of the notice or within 20 days after receipt of the notice, if the violation occurred within 120 days before the date of an election for office, the aggrieved person may bring a civil action in an appropriate district court seeking relief. In the alternative, if the violation occurs 30 days before the date of an election for federal office, no notice is required.

116. Although the NVRA authorizes a private cause of action in the form of declaratory or injunctive relief, this "remedy" is largely toothless. Any Court in the United States would have great reluctance to formally order election officials to correct the NVRA error and/or decertify an election so close in time to an actual election or just after certification.

117. Additionally, to what extent the NVRA requires a hypothetical plaintiff to have suffered injury is not clear – standing could be a troublesome burden to prove particularly if the harm, such as voter fraud and dilution, has been committed on a class people, the electors as a whole, rather than on an individual person.

118. Furthermore, a Court could attempt to use the doctrine of laches to avoid the distasteful task of questioning election officials, inquiring into potentially fraudulent elections, and inaccurate voting rolls, despite a hypothetical plaintiff being in full compliance with the private

NVRA notice requirements.

119. Congress's power to pass the NVRA comes from Article I, Section 8, Clause 18 of the United States Constitution, the Necessary and Proper Clause, making accurate voter rolls a requirement to uphold the right of the people to choose their representatives.

C. HELP AMERICA VOTE ACT ("HAVA")

120. The Help America Vote Act ("HAVA") exists in part to "establish minimum election administration standards for States and units of local government with responsibility for the administration of Federal elections, and other purposes." H.R. 3295 (2002).

121. HAVA requires that voter roll databases contain only the registrations of qualified citizen voters residing in that state. 52 US.C.A. § 21083(a).

122. HAVA defines a voting system as "the total combination of mechanical, electromechanical, or electronic equipment (including software, firmware, and documentation required to program, control, and support the equipment) that is used to define ballots; to cast and count votes; to report or display election results; and to maintain and produce any audit trail information." 52 US.C.A. § 21081(b).

123. The purpose of any voting system is to accurately record, store, consolidate, and report the specific selections, and absence of selections, made by the voter as well as to accurately measure the intent of the total body of eligible voters that voted.

124. Petitioners believe and therefore aver the ability to "cast and count votes" begins with establishing eligibility and registering only qualified citizens into voter registration databases, thus assuring that all ballots granted, cast, and counted, are lawful.

125. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that inaccurate voter rolls have significant negative consequences in elections.

126. Per HAVA, in any given state, each qualified voter is granted a unique statewide identifier in a database, which averts the risk of double-voting or extra ballots being cast in the name of one individual voter.

127. HAVA furthermore requires that federal elections adhere to an accuracy standard established by the FEC through Section 3.2.1 of its Voting System Standards (2002), which states in relevant part that error rates are "…set at a sufficiently stringent level such that the likelihood of voting system errors affecting the outcome of an election is exceptionally remote even in the closest of elections." United States (2002) U.S. Federal Election Commission FEC. United States [Web Archive] Retrieved from the Election Assistance Commission, https://www.eac.gov/sites/default/files/eac_assets/1/28/Voting_System_Standards_Volume_I.pdf (emphasis added).

128. Accuracy in a voting system is defined as the ability of the system to capture the intent of voters without error. United States. (2002) U.S. Federal Election Commission FEC. United States [Web Archive] Retrieved from the Election Assistance Commission, https://www.eac.gov/sites/default/files/eac_assets/1/28/Voting_System_Standards_Volume_I.pdf.

129. Section 301 of HAVA regarding "Voting System Standards," states that the "error rate of [a] voting system in counting ballots (determined by taking into account only those errors which are attributable to the voting system and not attributable to an act of the voter) shall comply with the error rate standards established under section 3.2.1 of the voting systems standards issued by the Federal Election Commission." 52 US.C.A. § 21081(a)(5).

130. Petitioners ask this Court to recall that, the FEC voting systems standards of section 3.2.1 establish that "the system shall achieve a target error rate of no more than one in 10,000,000 ballot positions, with a maximum acceptable error rate in the test process of one in 500,000 ballot positions." See, supra. at 30 (emphasis added).

131. The Voluntary Voting System Guidelines ("VVSG"), Version 1.1, Section 4.1.1 – Accuracy Requirements state, in part, "[a]ll systems shall achieve a report total error rate of no more than one in 125,000." Furthermore, "[t]he benchmark of one in 125,000 is derived from the 'maximum acceptable error rate' used as the lower test benchmark in the 2005 Voluntary Voting System Guidelines Version 1.0. That benchmark was defined as a ballot position error rate of one in 500,000. The benchmark of one in 125,000 is expressed in terms of votes, however, it is consistent with the previous benchmark that the estimated ratio of votes to ballot positions is ¼." United States (2015) U.S. Election Assistance Commission. United States [Web Archive] Retrieved from the Election Assistance Commission, https://www.eac.gov/sites/default/files/eac_assets/1/28/VVSG.1.1.VOL.1.FINAL1.pdf.[4]

132. HAVA also requires that states who receive payments for the administration of elections must use the funds "in a manner consistent with each of the laws described in Section 21145 . . . and the proposed uses are not inconsistent with the requirements of Title III." 52 U.S.C. § 20971(c).

133. A private cause of action may exist for HAVA through 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Colon-Marreror v. Velez, 813 F.3d 1, 22 (1st Cir. 2016) (finding a private action under §1983 for HAVA violations because the provision provided enforceable voting rights and imposes binding obligations on state officials).

[4] In the latest version of the VVSG, or VVSG 2.0, the EAC adopted the position that "the value of 10,000,000 ballot positions is taken from VVSG 1.0 [VVSG2005], however it is used here as the minimum number of ballot positions to test without error. If a larger number of ballot positions is used, there still can be no error." (emphasis added).

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

134. Section 1983 provides a mechanism for enforcing individual rights secured elsewhere as in rights independently secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States. Gonzaga University v. Doe, 536 U.S. 273, 284-85 (2002). Importantly, a §1983 plaintiff must assert a violation of a federal right, not just a law. Blessing v. Freestone, 520 U.S. 329, 340 (1997).

135. A private cause of action pursuant to §1983 can be found for violations of HAVA, which requires voting systems to provide the voter with the opportunity to change the ballot or correct any apparent error before the ballot is cast and counted. 52 USC 21081(a)(1)(A)(ii). The violation could be produced by a configuration of the voting machines.

136. Section 1983 is currently the only mechanism where HAVA violations will receive any meaningful private review, yet it has proven thus far to be ineffectual at providing any real remedy for HAVA violations.

137. Congress's power to pass the HAVA comes from Article I, Section 8, Clause 18 of the United States Constitution, the Necessary and Proper Clause, making accurate voting systems a requirement to uphold the right of the people to choose their representatives.

MICHIGAN ELECTION CODE

138. Michigan law provides for the establishment of the State Bureau of Elections, which is an administrative body designed to assist the Secretary of State with the administration of federal and state elections. Mich. Comp. Laws § 168.32.

139. As such, the Michigan Secretary of State is responsible for overseeing Michigan elections and enforcing Michigan's Election Law. Mich. Comp. Laws § 168.21(1).

140. Per Michigan Statutes § 168.32, the State Bureau of Elections is vested with the powers and shall perform the duties of the secretary of state under his or her supervision, with respect to the supervision and administration of the election laws, and, among other things, is required to do the following:

a. Issue instructions and promulgate rules pursuant to the administrative procedures act of 1969 for the conduct of elections and registrations in accordance with the laws of the state;

b. Advise and direct local election officials as to the proper methods of conducting elections;

c. Publish and furnish for the use in each election precinct before each state primary and election a manual of instructions that includes specific instructions on assisting voters in casting their ballots, directions on the location of voting stations in polling places, procedures and forms for processing challenges, and procedures on prohibiting campaigning in the polling places as prescribed in this act;

d. Publish indexed pamphlet copies of the registration, primary, and election laws and furnish to the various county, city, township, and village clerks, a sufficient number of copies for their own use and to enable them to include 1 copy with the election supplies furnished each precinct board of election inspectors under their respective jurisdictions. The secretary of state may furnish single copies of the publications to organizations or individuals who request the same for purposes of instruction or public reference;

e. Prescribe and require uniform forms, notices, and supplies the secretary of state considers advisable for use in the conduct of elections and registrations;

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

f. Require reports from the local election officials the secretary of state considers necessary;

g. Investigate, or cause to be investigated by local authorities, the administration of election laws, and report violations of the election laws and regulations to the attorney general or prosecuting attorney, or both, for prosecution.

Mich. Comp. Laws §168.31. Secretary of state; duties as to elections; rules.

141. The election code describes numerous criminal penalties for failing to adhere to basic code guidelines, including making a materially false statement in a registration application – a misdemeanor. (Mich. Comp. Laws § 168.499(1)).

142. Michigan law requires the State Bureau of Elections, under the supervision of the Secretary of State, to issue instructions and promulgate rules pursuant to the administrative procedures act of 1969 for the conduct of elections and registrations in accordance with the laws of the state.

143. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that the State of Michigan cannot demonstrate effective control over voter eligibility in conformity with federal or state requirements, and Michigan has implemented a system that does not guarantee accuracy or compliance with legal mandates requiring the state to ensure that only eligible voters may register and vote.

D. ELECTION FRAUD CONGRESS SOUGHT TO GUARD AGAINST

144. Petitioners do not accuse any person or entity of engaging in election fraud in 2022, nor propose any person or entity will engage in such fraud in 2024 or in subsequent federal elections in Michigan. Petitioners' purpose in describing types of voter fraud is to set forth the harms Congress sought to avoid by implementation of HAVA and NVRA as well as the various statutes passed by the Michigan General Assembly and cited above.

145. Petitioners believe and therefore aver election fraud can occur in multiple diverse ways, not all of which are individualized to a specific actor.

146. Petitioners believe and therefore aver over the past fifty years, Congress has enacted criminal laws with broad jurisdictional basis to combat false voter registrations, vote-buying, multiple-voting, and fraudulent voting in elections in which a federal candidate is on the ballot. See, 52 U.S.C. §§ 10307(c), 10307(e), 20511.

147. The federal jurisdictional predicate underlying these statutes is satisfied as long as either the name of a federal candidate is on the ballot, or the fraud involves corruption of the voter registration process in a state where one registers to vote simultaneously for federal as well as other offices. Slone, 411 F.3d at 647–48; United States v. McCranie, 169 F.3d 723, 727 (11th Cir. 1999).

148. Voting in federal elections for individuals who do not personally participate in, and assent to, the voting act attributed to them, or impersonating voters, or casting ballots in the names of voters who do not vote in federal elections, can constitute prosecutable election fraud. See, 52 U.S.C. §§ 10307(c); 10307(e); 20511(2).

149. It is possible for election officials acting "under color of law" to commit election fraud by performing acts such as diluting ballots with invalid ones (ballot stuffing), rendering false tabulations of votes, or preventing valid voter registrations or votes from being given effect in any election, federal or non-federal (18 U.S.C. §§ 241, 242), as well as in elections in which federal candidates are on the ballot. See 52 U.S.C. §§ 10307(c), 10307(e),

20511(2).[5]

150. An individual commits election fraud by submitting fictitious names to election officers for inclusion on voter registration rolls, thereby qualifying the fictious name to vote in federal elections. 52 U.S.C. §§ 10307(c), 20511(2).

151. An individual commits election fraud by knowingly procuring eligibility to vote for federal office by people who are not entitled to vote under applicable state law and/or people who are not United States Citizens. 52 U.S.C. §§ 10307(c), 20511(2); 18 U.S.C. §§ 1015(f).

152. An individual who makes a false claim of United States Citizenship to register to vote commits election fraud. 18 U.S.C. § 1015(f); 18 U.S.C. § 911.

153. A person who provides false information concerning a person's name, address, or period of residence in a voting district to establish voting eligibility commits election fraud. 52 U.S.C. §§ 10307(c), 20511(2).

154. Fraud can occur where an individual causes the production of voter registrations that qualify alleged voters to vote for federal candidates, where that individual knows the registrations are materially defective under applicable state law. 52 U.S.C. § 20511(2)

155. However, election fraud need not involve the participation of individual voters.

156. Election fraud can occur where an individual or organization places fictious names on voter rolls (allowing for fraudulent ballots which can later be used to stuff the ballot box, supra.), casting fake ballots in the names of people who did not vote, obtaining and marking absentee ballots without the input of the voter involved, and falsifying vote tallies.

[5] For purposes of the present Petition, Petitioners do not suggest any Michigan election officials engaged in election fraud. Rather, Petitioners' point out the possibility of improper conduct by election officials as a harm against which Congress and the General Assembly have sought to guard by enacting the various statutes cited here. A reason Congress, especially in HAVA, set forth standards that must be met before an election is considered reliable is to counter potential election fraud and to thus produce presumptively reliable election results.

157. When the federal government seeks to maintain the integrity of elections, it does so for specific federal interests inter alia: (1) the protection of the voting rights of racial, ethnic, or language minorities, a specific constitutional right; (2) the registration of voters to vote in federal elections; (3) the standardization and procurement of voting equipment purchased with federal funds; (4) the protection of the federal election process against corruption; (5) the protection of the voting process from corruption accomplished under color of law; and (6) the oversight of non-citizen and other voting by persons ineligible to vote under applicable state law. Richard C. Pilger, Federal Prosecution of Election Offenses, p. 30, 8th Edition (2017).

158. Congress has enacted a litany of specific crimes that can be prosecuted under a general definition as "election fraud":

a. Conspiracy Against Rights: 18 U.S.C. § 241. See United States v. Saylor, 322 U.S. 385 (1944) (stuffing a ballot box with forged ballots); United States v. Classic, 313 U.S. 299 (1941) (preventing the official count of ballots in primary elections); United States v. Townsley, 843 F.2d 1070, 1073–75 (8th Cir. 1988) (destroying ballots); United States v. Morado, 454 F.2d 167, 171 (5th Cir. 1972) (casting absentee ballots in elderly or handicapped peoples' names); Crolich v. United States, 196 F.2d 879, 879 (5th Cir. 1952) (impersonating qualified voters); United States v. Colvin, 353 F.3d 569, 576 (7th Cir. 2003) (conspiracy need not be successful nor need there be an overt act).

b. Deprivation of Rights under Color of Law: 18 U.S.C. § 242. See United States v. Price, 383 U.S. 787 (1966) (acted jointly with state agents); Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97 (1951) (actions clothed under Color of State Law).

c. False Information in, and Payments for, Registering and Voting: 52 U.S.C. § 10307(c).[6]

d. Voting More than Once: 52 U.S.C. § 10307(e).

e. Fraudulent Registration or Voting: 52 U.S.C. § 20511(2).

f. False claims to Register or Vote: 18 U.S.C. § 1015(f).

g. "Cost-of-Election" theory: 18 U.S.C. § 1341.

h. Improper Retention of Federal Election Returns: 52 U.S.C. § 20701.

159. In short, election fraud can constitute numerous different actions or inactions, and federal and state governments of the United States have an interest in guarding the integrity of elections, and ensuring election fraud is stopped, then prosecuted appropriately.

Facts and Summary of the Issues

160. Petitioner United Sovereign Americans received Michigan's voter registration data from the 2022 general election – the data contained millions of entries of voter registration data.

161. Thereafter, expert data analysists acting on behalf of Petitioner United Sovereign Americans performed a series of SQL database queries on the data to extrapolate

[6] "Section 10307(c) protects two distinct aspects of a federal election: the actual results of the election, and the integrity of the process of electing federal officials." United States v. Cole, 41 F.3d 303, 307 (7th Cir. 1994).

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police and refine information about voter registrations in Michigan.

162. Thereafter, Petitioner United Sovereign Americans thoroughly reviewed the results.

163. United Sovereign Americans' SQL database queries revealed hundreds of thousands of voter registration apparent errors in the State of Michigan. See Infra.

164. The results from the SQL database queries allowed Petitioners' experts to produce a "Scorecard" reflecting Michigan's voter registration data detailing the hundreds of thousands of apparent errors contained within that registration data. See Exhibit "B" for a copy of United Sovereign American's Michigan 2022 General Election Validity Scorecard.

165. In addition, the results from the SQL Database Queries of Michigan's voter registration data allowed Petitioners' experts to compile a General Election Validity Reconciliation. See Exhibit "C" for a copy of United Sovereign American's Michigan 2022 General Election Validity Reconciliation.

166. The results from the SQL Database Queries of Michigan's voter registration data also revealed that apparent errors were not uniform across Michigan – some counties had far more registration apparent errors than others.

167. According to the data provided to Petitioner United Sovereign America for the 2022 election, Michigan had 7,587,952 voter registrations.

A. VOTER REGISTRATION ROLL INACCURACY

168. Expert analysis by Petitioner United Sovereign Americans of the official Michigan State Voter Registration Data for the 2022 election revealed that, out of 7,587,952 voter registrations, there was a total of 58,205,783 voter registration violations including:

7,481 Illegal duplicates, where the same voter has multiple registrations

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

100,229 invalid addresses

4,714 Age discrepant registrants[7]

2,204 back-dated new registrations

6,069 registrations where the voter was removed and added back on 11,511 double votes added and removed

57,903,469 votes altered post certification

152,047 registrations processed on a non-business day

13,824 invalid registration statuses

4,235 invalid names

See, Exhibit "B" for a copy of United Sovereign American's Michigan 2022 General Election Validity Scorecard.

169. This data shows that in 2022 the voter rolls in Michigan were not accurate and current as required by NVRA, HAVA, nor in conformity with specific Michigan laws pertaining to voter registration. 52 U.S.C.A. § 20501(b)(4); 52 US.C.A. § 21081; and Mich. Comp. Laws, Chapter 168.

170. Thus far, Petitioners have exhausted every remedy known to them in advance of the 2024 general election to have these issues corrected. Petitioners continued in 2024 to seek redress and repair for these egregious violations through democratic means.

171. Respondents have dismissed, and continue to dismiss, Petitioners' concerns and, based on information and belief, did so without any meaningful review, action, or

172. Petitioners believe and therefore aver Respondents intend to administer and ultimately certify Michigan's 2024 general election (involving both state and federal contests) using the same inaccurate and flawed data and conditions.

B. VOTES FROM INELIGIBLE VOTERS

173. Expert analysis on behalf of Petitioner United Sovereign Americans of the official Michigan State Voter Registration Data for the 2022 election revealed that, out of the votes cast in the 2022 general election, there were a total of 379,130 evident voting violations, and 369,107 unique votes impacted by apparent voting violations.[8] These violations were in the form of:

506 Illegal Duplicates, where the same voter has multiple registrations.

92,708 Vote History Invalid or Illogical[9]

47,805 Illegal addresses

444 Votes from back-dated new registrations

3,646 Vote history moved to a new voter ID

10 Double votes

2 Age Discrepant Registrants[10]

226,928 Registrants With Altered Votes after Certification

[8] Some registered voters have more than one violation. The number of unique voters indicates how many individual registrations have apparent errors – whether it be one or multiple apparent errors.

[9] Voter history exists prior to the voter's birth or prior to the voter attaining the age of eighteen (18) years.

[10] Registrants younger than the age of sixteen (16) or older than the age of one hundred fifteen (115).

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

1,582 Missing absentee voters on the Nov. 14, 2022, Absentee Ballot Tracking Report

2,995 Votes from Invalid Registrations

540 Missing votes

1,964 Invalid Names

See, Exhibit "B" for a copy of Petitioner United Sovereign American's Michigan 2022 General Election Validity Scorecard.

174. Petitioners believe and therefore aver this data shows that in 2022 the voter rolls in Michigan are not accurate and current as required by the NVRA, HAVA, and specific Michigan laws pertaining to voter registration. 52 U.S.C.A. § 20501(b)(4); 52 US.C.A. § 21081; and Mich. Comp. Laws, Chapter 168.

175. Thus far, Petitioners have exhausted every remedy known to them in advance of the 2024 general election to have these issues, and all issues raised below, addressed and remedied. Petitioners continued in 2024 to seek redress and repair for these egregious violations through democratic means.

176. Respondents have ignored or dismissed, and continue to ignore or dismiss, these concerns without apparent meaningful review, action, or response, and furthermore Petitioners believe and therefore aver Respondents intend to administer and certify Michigan's 2024 general election (involving both state and federal contests) under the same inaccurate and flawed conditions as that have utilized previously in conducting Michigan's combined federal and state elections.

C. ERROR RATES IN 2022 COMPARED TO RATES PERMITTED BY FEDERAL LAW

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

177. Michigan's voting systems are subject to the permissible error rates set forth by Congress in HAVA and further elucidated in FEC Voting System Standards 3.2.1 and explained in the EAC's VVSG. Supra.

178. The maximum number of apparent voting system errors permissible in counting votes in the 2022 Michigan General Election using the calculations set forth by the Federal Election Commission upon mandate by Congress was thirty-seven (37) errors at most allowed. The total number of Unique Ballots impacted by voting system errors in the Michigan General Election, however, was 379,130 apparent errors. See Exhibit "B."

179. Even accounting for the possibility that of the 379,130 apparent errors, many were not true errors, Petitioners believe and therefore aver, that Michigan cannot reduce that number to thirty-seven (37) or less.

180. Under HAVA, an error rate of no more than one in 125,000 is permissible before the results of the entire election becomes suspect, and the integrity and reliability of the election compromised. As mentioned above, this figure is calculated by dividing the total number of Michigan votes in a given election by 125,000, to arrive at the number of permissible errors in any given election in order to create the error rate of no more than one in 125,000 mandated by the VVSG.

181. For the 2022 General Election this is 4,500,400 (votes cast) divided by 125,000 leaves thirty-seven (37) (rounded up) as the maximum errors permitted, meaning that in order for the election to be considered valid, there cannot have been more than 37 voting system apparent errors in the entire ballot tabulation for all ballots cast in that election in Michigan.

182. However, in the 2022 Michigan General Election, the number of voting system apparent errors in counting ballots for the 2022 general election was 379,130, a figure dramatically exceeding the maximum allowable apparent error rate of thirty-seven (37).

183. Because the voting system apparent error rate for the 2022 Michigan General Election was far above the maximum allowable error rates, Petitioners believe and therefore aver the reliability and credibility of the 2022 results are cast into doubt as a matter of law.

VOTER-TO-VOTE DEFICIT

184. The official canvas for the 2022 Michigan Election was 4,500,400 ballots cast yet the data shows there exist 4,482,427 total votes cast – a discrepancy of 17,973 votes. See Exhibit "B."

185. This discrepancy can best be defined as a Voter-to-Vote deficit.

186. Additionally, the official canvas for the 2022 Michigan Election was 4,500,400 votes (ballots counted) yet there exist only 4,482,427 voters who actually voted according to the data provided – a discrepancy of 17,973 votes that are completely unaccounted for and cannot be explained—a number far in excess of thirty-seven (37) and indisputably each constitution an "error."

187. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that the 17,973 more votes counted than voters who voted means that either tabulators overcounted votes statewide, or there is an alternative source of the data discrepancy.[11]

D. MICHIGAN'S 2022 GENERAL ELECTION VALIDITY

188. For Michigan's 2022 General Election, out of the 7,587,952 total registrations, [11] Petitioners accuse no one of engaging in fraud or deceit. Petitioners merely point out the discrepancy, which could be due to unintentional tabulator error, some fraud of unknown origin, a combination of both, or even fraud by the tabulators themselves. The discrepancy occurred in 2022 for an unknown reason. It is the deficit itself, regardless of the cause, that demonstrates an error rate in excess of that permitted by HAVA calling into question the integrity of the election. Petitioners propose to ask this Court to order Respondents to ascertain why the deficit occurred in 2022, ensure that a similar deficit does not re-occur in 2024, and in all federal elections thereafter in the future.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

of which Petitioners believe and therefore aver, there were 7,070,211 valid registrations, 26,332 uncertain/illogical/invalid registrations, 491,409 registrations which violated election laws, and 0 "Deadwood" registrations.[12] See Exhibit "B."

189. Petitioners believe and therefore avers that of the people holding the 7,070,211 valid registrations, 4,131,293 votes were counted in the 2022 General Election.

190. Petitioners believe and therefore avers that of the identified 26,332 uncertain/illogical/invalid registrations, 2,407 people voted and had their votes counted in the 2022 General Election.

191. Petitioners believe and therefore avers that of the 491,409 registrations that violated election laws, 366,700 people holding such registrations cast votes that were counted in the 2022 General Election.

192. Petitioners believes and therefore avers there were no "Deadwood" registrations, or fake name registrations, listed as having voted in the 2022 General Election.

193. Petitioners believe and therefore avers that the registration error rate in Michigan for the 2022 General Election was six-and-eight-tenths percent (6.8%) of the total registrations on Michigan's voter rolls. This figure is arrived at by taking 26,332 uncertain/illogical/invalid registrations, plus 491,409 registrations which violated election laws, as a percentage of 7,587,952 total registrations.

194. Petitioners believe and therefore avers that the voter system error rate in [12] "Deadwood" is a concept dealing with election fraud and is defined as a fake voter registration record. These registrations could include a voter who is deceased, ineligible, moved, etc.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

Michigan for the 2022 General Election was eight-and-two-tenths percent (8.2%), arrived at by taking 2,407 votes counted from uncertain/illogical/invalid registrations, plus 366,700 votes counted from illegal registrations, as a percentage of 4,482,427 votes cast.

195. For example, the margin of victory in MI Congressional District 7 in 2022 was five-and-five-tenths percent (5.5%), or 192,809 votes to the winner and 172,624 votes to the loser. The apparent error rate statewide in the 2022 federal election when applied to the Congressional Election in MI District 7 exceeds the margin of victory for this particular congressional district, meaning that if the apparent error rate in Michigan is evenly distributed by Congressional District (which ordinarily might be a reasonable assumption given that such districts must contain roughly the same number of people under the Constitution), the Congressional Election results in District 7 election would be considered unreliable.[13] That is not to say that the eventual "winner" there did not receive more votes than the eventual "loser." It simply means if the apparent error rate is assumed to be evenly distributed throughout Michigan, the winner in the 7th cannot be confident in his/her election, and the loser cannot be confident in his/her defeat because the election itself would not have produced results according to law that are reliable, meaning the integrity of the entire election process is called into question.

196. To expand on the above, Michigan's 2022 voter system error rate of 8.2% exceeded the margin of victory in two of Michigan's 13 Congressional Districts: 7 and 10. Thus, 15% of Michigan's current members of the United States House of Representatives might hold their seats owing to legally unreliable election results.

197. Per HAVA and the FEC, the legal standard of allowable registration errors for a [13] This is merely a simplified example for illustrative purposes as Petitioners are aware that the apparent error rates are not evenly distributed county-by-county and thus cannot be evenly distributed by congressional district.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

federal election is 0.0008% (or 1 out of 125,000) yet the voter system error rate in Michigan's 2022 combined state and Federal General Election was 8.2%.

Requested Relief

ALL WRITS ACT RELIEF – 28 U.S.C. § 1651

198. Petitioners incorporate the previous paragraphs by reference as if set forth at length here.

199. Petitioners are not seeking to undermine official elections results previously certified. Petitioners have cited issues in prior Michigan federal elections to add weight to Petitioners' belief that absent intervention by this Honorable Court, Respondents will permit the same apparent errors to occur in the 2024 General Election in Michigan, and in all following federal elections in the state.

200. Petitioners seek redress from the constitutional harm brought upon them, and the Michigan electorate at large, by Respondents failure to comply with federal and state election law.

201. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that Respondents have done nothing or an inadequate job at addressing the issues presented in this Petition – particularly to address the inaccurate and likely fraudulent voter rolls and voter systems used in federal elections conducted by state authorities.

202. Respondents' inaction and/or failure to act compels Petitioners to ask that the Court to issue a Writ of Mandamus requiring Respondents to comply with the two federal statutes at issue (the NVRA and the HAVA) along with the Michigan Election Law, Mich. Comp. Laws, Chapter 168, while giving Respondents a reasonable time within which to bring Michigan into compliance in time for the 2024 General Election and all federal elections conducted by the state going forward while providing relief to 2024 voters if bringing

Michigan into compliance in time is impossible upon showing by Respondents.

203. Specifically, Petitioners respectfully seek that the Court order Respondents take steps, both short term and long term, to ensure the apparent errors made during the 2022 elections do not recur and to bring Michiganinto compliance with HAVA's specific mandate of no greater than 1 voting error out of 125,000 votes.

204. This Honorable Court is authorized to issue a writ of mandamus under "The All-Writs Act," 28 U.S.C. § 1651 granting the power to United States Federal Courts to "issue all writs necessary or appropriate in the aid of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the usages and principles of law."

205. A writ of mandamus under 28 USC § 1651 is typically used to fill gaps in the law, and the Supreme Court has stated that The All-Writs Act is a "legislatively approved source of procedural instruments designed to achieve 'the rational ends of the law.'" Harris v. Nelson, 394 U.S. 286 (1969) (All Writs Act mandamus properly used to conduct factual inquiries).

206. A writ of mandamus is warranted where "(1) no other adequate means exist to attain the relief, (2) the party's right to issuance of the writ is clear and indisputable, and (3) the writ is appropriate under the circumstances." Hollingsworth v. Perry, 558 U.S. 183, 190 (2010) (quoting Cheney v. United States Dist. Ct., 542 U.S. 367, 380–81 (2004) (stay granted where district court likely did not follow federal law)).

207. A writ of mandamus is appropriate and necessary to vindicate the rights of citizens when a governmental agency or official has refused to perform a ministerial duty that the petitioner has established has a clear legal right to have the governmental agency or official, in this case Respondents, perform.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

208. A federal court may use all auxiliary writs as aids when it is "calculated in [the court's] sound judgment to achieve the ends of justice entrusted to it." Adams v. United States, 317 U.S. 269, 273 (1942) (writ of habeas corpus is available to the circuit courts of appeals).

209. A "ministerial action" is a duty in a particular situation so plainly prescribed as to be free from doubt and equivalent to a positive command. Wilbur v. United States, 281 U.S. 206, 218 (1930); see also Will v. United States, 389 U.S. 90 (1967).

210. "Mandamus is employed to compel the performance, when refused, of a ministerial duty . . . [i]t also is employed to compel action, when refused, in matters involving judgment and discretion, but not to direct the exercise of judgment or discretion in a particular way nor to direct the retraction or reversal of action already taken in the exercise of either." Wilbur v. United States, 281 U.S. 206, 218 (1930). See also Decatur v. Paulding, 39 U.S. 497, 514-17 (1840) (Secretary of the Navy's duty to approve of pensions was discretionary, and therefore, not ministerial); Kendall v. United States, 37 U.S. 524 (1838) (Postmaster General had a ministerial duty to make entries); Work v. Rives, 267 U.S. 175, 177 (1925).

211. Instantly, Petitioners have no other remedy than a writ of mandamus.

212. Petitioners argue that injunctive and/or declaratory relief is inapplicable or inappropriate in this issue because the harm from the 2024 election is not yet realized and Petitioners are seeking to have Michigan election officials and/or federal officials bring Michigan into compliance with federal and state law, specifically HAVA, NVRA, and the Michigan Election Law, Mich. Comp. Laws, Chapter 168, absent a specific existing private cause of action Petitioners could assert that affords Petitioners relief.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

213. Petitioners believe and therefore aver Respondents have allowed, and continue to allow, violations of federal election laws, Michigan election laws, the United States Constitution, and federal civil rights laws pertaining to voter rights, which include mandating accurate registration rolls, transparency, compliance, and proper certification of the voting systems. 52 US.C.A. § 20501; 52 US.C.A. § 21083.

214. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that the voter rolls within the State of Michigan are inaccurate, in violation of NVRA and HAVA. These are not list maintenance failures. The inaccuracies represent a failure to control the process of validating and registering only qualified citizen voters. These apparently invalid and/or illegal registrations voted in large numbers in Michigan's 2022 General Election.

215. Petitioners believe and therefore aver the Respondents have lost control of voter registration, leading to the distribution of ballots to what appear to be false registrants which results in a diluted vote and further harm to petitioners and the electorate at large. The voter-to- vote deficit is illustrative here in that the official canvas for the 2022 Michigan Election was 5,500,400 votes yet there exist 4,482,427 total votes in the data – a discrepancy of 17,973 votes. Upholding HAVA includes the risk assessments and proper certification of all system elements individually, and as a system as a whole.

216. Petitioners believe and therefore aver an election official's job is fidelity to the law in administering the electoral process, thereby protecting the integrity of an election, and the citizens from corruption in the election process.

217. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that Michigan officials' failure to follow the law has resulted in election outcomes that are untrustworthy. The voting system in its present form cannot be used to produce trustworthy reliable results without the requested judicial intervention.

218. Petitioners believe and therefore aver a writ of mandamus is appropriate in this case. Respondents have failed, and continue to fail, in complying with federal and state laws regarding voting – including voting accuracy and accountability. It is clear from the Respondents conduct before, during, and after, the 2022 elections that, absent judicial action, Respondents will do nothing to repair the deficiencies noted above to ensure the integrity of Michigan elections are conducted in compliance with federal and state law.

219. The scope of Petitioners' mandamus request is narrow: Petitioners seek this Court to order Respondents follow existing federal and state law designed by Congress and the Michigan General Assembly to ensure that Michigan's 2024 and subsequent combined federal and state general elections produce reliable results within the margin of error rate allowed.

220. Petitioners hold up the mathematically unreliable (according to, inter alia, HAVA) 2022 Michigan combined federal and state General Election as evidence that, should the writ not issue, the apparent error rate in the 2024 and subsequent combined general elections will continue to exceed the law's mandated maximum error rate permitted before an election is unreliable.

221. Petitioners seek that the requested writ direct Respondents to investigate and remedy the issues exposed in the 2022 elections to avoid repeating the same mistakes in future combined federal and state general elections which are constitutionally administered by Michigan pursuant to Article I, Section 4 (delegating to the state legislatures the power to regulate federal elections for members of the House of Representatives, with Congress reserving the power to "…alter such Regulations [made by the various state legislatures]…"),[14] and, generally, Article II, Section 1 (granting state legislatures the power to determine how presidential electors are chosen) of the United States Constitution.[15]

222. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that since the Constitution reserves to Congress the ultimate (as opposed to the presumptive) power to regulate the means by which Congress' own members are chosen, while the Constitution simultaneously delegates the presumptive power to regulate such elections to, in this case, the General Assembly of the State of Michigan to further delegate as it sees fit to do so by law, the Respondents who are not federal officers per se, become federal officers by agency requiring them to carry out not only Michigan election law, but additionally to carry out federal election statutes passed by Congress and duly signed into law by the President under Congress' ultimate authority laid out in Article I, Section 4.

223. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that delegations of authority by the General Assembly of powers to supervise federal elections to any Respondent Michigan officials

[14] Petitioners aver that NVRA and HAVA are examples of Congress' exercising its power under Article I, Section 4 to "alter" Michigan's (and all other state's) otherwise absolute constitutional authority to regulate federal elections to the House of Representatives and, by application of the 17th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution providing for the direct election of two senators from each state, Congress may exercise its authority "…from time to time by Law make or alter such Regulations…" [of the various states…] to regulate the election of United States Senators as well the election of members of the House of Representatives.

[15] Petitioners include citation to Article II and the choosing of electors for president and vice-president, (later modified by the 12th Amendment), to again demonstrate the Framers' intent that the various states shall have presumptive authority to regulate and administer the election of all federal officers on the ballot for consideration in a federal election. Article 1, Section 4 (as later amended) and Article II, Section (as later amended) are examples of where the Framers intentionally intertwined the powers of the various states with those of Congress, while making certain Congress maintained the ultimate power to regulate the election of its members, the then-prevailing concepts of Federalism and Dual Sovereignty notwithstanding.

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

pursuant to the General Assembly's power to regulate federal elections granted by Article I, Section 4, makes said Michigan Respondents into federal officers by agency or quasi- federal officials in the carrying out of their duties to regulate federal elections.

224. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that ordinary principles of federalism and dual sovereignty where a Federal District Court Judge would be reluctant to issue an order to a State official pertaining to how that state official may perform his/her official functions are inapplicable because the Respondent Michigan official is acting in his/her hybrid role as a quasi-federal officer as required by Article I, Section 4.

225. Petitioners believe and therefore aver, then, that this Honorable Court has authority to issue the requested writ of mandamus to compel, not just the Respondent Federal officers to ensure that federal election law is carried out in Michigan's 2024 and subsequent general elections, this Court also has the authority to compel Respondent Michigan officials because said officials are charged by the U.S. Constitution in the carrying out of federal law where Congress has asserted its power to "alter" existing Michigan federal election procedures as it did in enacting NVRA and HAVA.

226. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that any delegation from the Michigan General Assembly to the Executive Branch of Michigan government (e.g., to the Governor who in turn delegates power to the Secretary of State, or any delegation of the General Assembly's power to regulate federal elections to the Attorney General) still falls under this Court's authority which is derived through Article I, Section 4's grant to the various state legislatures of the power to supervise federal elections.

227. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that simply because the General Assembly may have chosen to delegate some of its authority to supervise federal elections to

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

Respondent members of Michigan's Executive Branch of government, such delegation does not insulate such officials from the power of this Court, since this Court's power comes from its authority over the delegating entity, in this case the Michigan General Assembly.

ACTION TO COMPEL AN OFFICER OF THE UNITED STATES TO PERFORM HIS DUTY – 28 U.S.C. § 1361

228. Petitioners incorporate the previous paragraphs as if set forth at length here.

229. District Courts are empowered with the ability to compel an officer or employee of the United States or any agency thereof to perform a duty owed to a plaintiff. 28 U.S.C. § 1361.

230. Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice are parties responsible for the enforcement of federal election laws, specifically HAVA and NVRA.

231. Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice are officers, employees, or an agency of the United States.

232. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice, have done nothing, or, at best, an inadequate job at addressing the issues presented above – namely, the inaccurate and likely fraudulent voter rolls and systems within Michigan.

233. The inaction and/or failure to act is harming Petitioners and the Michigan electorate at large warranting that the Court issue a Writ of Mandamus compelling Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice to enforce and police the two federal statutes at issue (NVRA and HAVA) for implementation in the Michigan 2024 General Election and subsequent combined federal and state elections administered by Michigan officials and giving Respondents a reasonable period of time in which to do so.

234. Specifically, the Court should order Respondents to take preventative measures to see the apparent errors evident the 2022 elections are not repeated in the 2024 and subsequent elections and bring Michigan into compliance with HAVA's specific mandate of no greater than 1 voting error out of 125,000 votes to ensure reliable election results as HAVA intended.

235. A writ of mandamus is warranted where "(1) no other adequate means exist to attain the relief, (2) the party's right to issuance of the writ is clear and indisputable, and (3) the writ is appropriate under the circumstances." Hollingsworth v. Perry, 558 U.S. 183, 190 (2010)(quoting Cheney v. United States Dist. Ct., 542 U.S. 367, 380–81 (2004) (stay granted where district court likely did not follow federal law).

236. A writ of mandamus is appropriate and necessary to vindicate the rights of citizens when a governmental agency or official has refused to perform a ministerial duty that the petitioner has established has a clear legal right to have the governmental agency or official, in this case Respondents, perform.

237. A "ministerial action" is a duty in a particular situation so plainly prescribed as to be free from doubt and equivalent to a positive command. Wilbur v. United States, 281 U.S. 206, 218 (1930); see also Will v. United States, 389 U.S. 90 (1967).

238. Relief contemplated under statute providing that federal district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any action in nature of mandamus to compel an officer or employee of United States or any agency thereof to perform a duty owed to plaintiff is at least as broad as under common-law writ of mandamus. Carey v. Local Bd. No. 2, Hartford,

Obtained by Judicial Watch at Michigan Police

Conn., 297 F.Supp. 252 (D. Conn. 1969), aff'd, 412 F.2d 71 (2d Cir. 1969).

239. Petitioners believe and therefore aver they have no other remedy than a writ of mandamus and to compel an officer or employee of the United States or any agency thereof to perform a duty owed to plaintiff/petitioner.

240. Petitioners argue that an injunctive and/or declaratory relief is inapplicable or inappropriate in this issue because the harm from the 2024 election is not yet realized and Petitioners are seeking to have Michigan election officials and/or federal officials bring Michigan into compliance with federal and state law, specifically HAVA, NVRA, and the Election Code, absent a specific private cause of action that affords Petitioners relief.

241. Petitioners believe and therefore aver Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice have allowed, and continue to allow, violations of federal election laws, the United States Constitution, and federal civil rights laws pertaining to voter rights, which include mandating accurate registration rolls, transparency, compliance, and proper certification of the voting systems.

242. Petitioners believe and therefore aver the voter rolls within Michigan are inaccurate, in violation of NVRA and HAVA. That these are not list maintenance failures. Instead, the inaccuracies represent a failure to control the process of validating and registering only qualified citizen voters. Persons voted in the Michigan 2022 General Election in significant numbers who held apparently invalid and/or illegal registrations.

243. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that Respondents' failure to follow the law, or enforce the law, has resulted in election outcomes that are untrustworthy and unreliable. Michigan's voting system in its present form cannot be trusted to produce reliable results under HAVA, because Respondents will not follow the dictates of the Act necessitating judicial intervention.

244. A writ of mandamus against Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice is appropriate in this case. Respondents Merrick Garland, in his Official Capacity as Attorney General of the United States, and the United States Department of Justice have failed, and continue to fail, in forcing the State of Michigan to comply with federal laws regarding voting – including voting accuracy and accountability as is clear from how the 2022 Michigan General Election was conducted.

245. Petitioners believe and therefore aver that without judicial action, Respondents will do nothing to comply with HAVA and other federal and state statutes to ensure the integrity of Michigan's elections and the same issues evident from the 2022 General Election will call into question the validity of Michigan's 2024 General Election results.

246. The scope of this request for a writ of mandamus is narrow: Petitioners seek a judicial order requiring Respondents both federal and state to follow the laws cited herein in conducting the 2024 and subsequent federal elections, and adequately investigate and remedy the problems exposed in and 2022 elections and detailed above.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Petitioners respectfully request Your Honorable Court formally recognize Michigan's voter registration rolls contained hundreds of thousands of apparent errors in the 2022 General Election. Further, that these apparent errors took the form of illegal duplicate registrations, incomplete or unknown addresses, registrations on or before the registrant's date of birth, age discrepant registrants, registrations on a federal holiday, registrations on Sunday, registrations with modified dates of birth, registrants whose voter history inexplicably changed, registrants with registration dates altered backwards, and registrants with altered "unique" state voter identification numbers. Petitioner asks this Court to enter an order in mandamus compelling Respondents to ministerially correct the apparent errors evident from the 2022 elections data, ascertain to the Court's satisfaction the reasons why the 2022 errors occurred, and prevent those same or similar ministerial errors from recurring during the Michigan 2024 General Election and all subsequent federal general elections to ensure the integrity of Michigan's combined federal and state elections going forward for years to come. Petitioners, additionally, seek pursuant to permissible causes of action under NVRA and HAVA, this Court order that the State of Michigan may not certify the 2024 General Election unless and until the relevant Respondents have demonstrated to the Court that the 2024 General Election and subsequent elections were conducted in conformity with federal and state law and with fewer than the maximum errors permissible. Petitioners further request this Honorable Court order the state, and any subdivision thereof responsible for voter registrations, submit voter registration requests (and any existing registrations reasonably in question) to the Department of Homeland Security to verify the citizenship or immigration status of persons seeking registration to vote or who are presently on the state's voter rolls whenever there exist any reliable indicators that an applicant or registered voter may not be a U.S. citizen. (see: 8 U.S.C. secs.1644 & 1373(c)). Lastly, Petitioners seek and order in mandamus requiring all public officials named as Respondents perform their duties as the law intended whether it be conducting federal elections in conformity with the law or investigating, and where warranted in their discretion, prosecuting persons or entities for failing to perform their duties in conformity to the law after being given timely notice to do so.

Subject: FOIA request - Tim Vetter - Jan. Feb. 2023

Hi Sarah,
I would like to request, via FOIA, a complete qualified voter file dated January 1st , 2023 and February 1st, 2023. At a minimum, this is the same typical data provided in the past via FOIA.

If possible to the standard data issued by your office, I am requesting the following items identified below. If any items can not be provided, please explain in detail why the SOS can not fulfil my FOIA request for this data. Thank you!

1. A complete list of voters: Registration status should include but not be limited to all registrants with active, challenged, verify, cancelled and rejected status. Therefore, I would anticipate every voter in the November, 2022 election (4,500,400 voters) would be listed in BOTH Jan and Feb QVFs for voting history. I anticipate many registrations will be removed due to death, moving out of state, or request for removal. However, I want a complete voting history record. Removed/deleted voting history is not desired. I want a complete voting history list with accurate voting locations of past elections.
2. Locations: Every voter should have the exact County, Jurisdiction, and Precinct not modified in their voting history. In the past we received only county and jurisdiction. Also, in the past the location is changed from original voting location to reflect ALL vote history at the current registration location. This past voter history location modification is NOT desired. I want the same vote history as maintained in the QVF as provided by the local clerks.
3. VoterIDs: Include the typical "Voter_Identification_Number" typical from your group AND "voterID" which is provided from the local jurisdictions. See the following screenshot showing two voterIDs per registration.

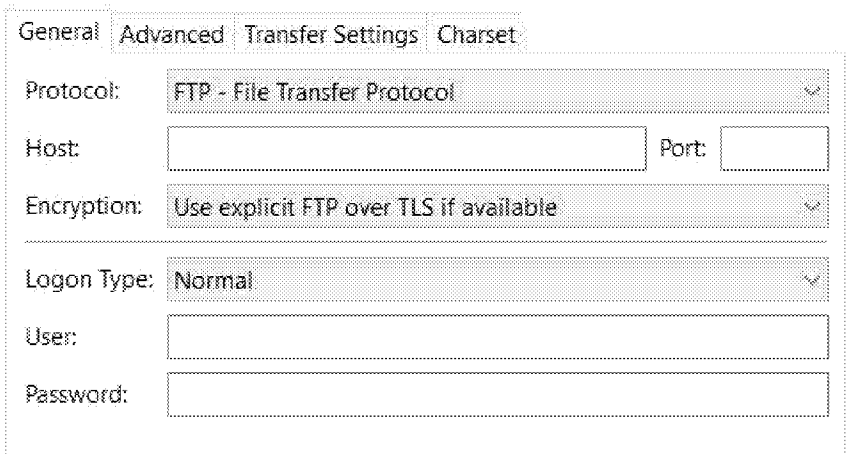
Hi Tim,

We can upload to a secure FTP if you provide me with the information below. I also realized never sent you the password for the flashdrive: Electi@n2022



As for your questions:

1. The file will contain all voters that we have record of voting in the Nov 2022 election. Local clerks are responsible for uploading voting history. If they haven't uploaded their history we will not have that data.
2. The file will contain voting location
3. This will have to be a separate request. I have attached an invoice for the estimated cost

Hi Sarah,
I have not received the thumb drive yet which was, I assume, in the mail on May 9th . Can you upload this FOIA data to a secure FTP site if I do not receive it by tomorrow? Please confirm. Also, I did not received any confirmations to my questions, shown below, sent to your on May 8th.

Thank you Sarah,
In addition to sending the data tomorrow via flash drive, can you please confirm the following:

- Your data provided will contain the complete list of all 4,500,400 November 2022 voting records with a minimum of the column headers listed on my March 13th email?
- The voting history will contain County, Jurisdiction, and Precinct of the voting location. Not the current relocated address if the voter moved.
- If there are any clerks who have "failed to upload voting data" please list these clerks by name and jurisdiction and provide any past email documentation from the SOS attempting to get remaining election data.
- You stated: "We can include the "Voter_Identification_Number" , however we do not have record of "voterID" that is given out by jurisdictions so we will not be able to provide that." Please provide a response to my email dated April 28th. Why this voterID can not be provided.

Thank you Sarah I welcome your feedback to my FOIA questions.

Take Care,

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT NOTICE

The Michigan Department of State (Department) is in receipt of your recent request for documents dated February 2, 2023 submitted pursuant to the Michigan Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 1976 PA 442, MCL 15.231 et seq. The Department received your request on February 3, 2023. MCL 15.235(1). The Department has begun to process the request under FOIA and issues this preliminary notice in response to your request, a copy of which is attached and incorporated herein.

Your FOIA request for List of November 2022 Voters is denied in part and granted in part as to existing, nonexempt public records that are determined to be responsive to your request. Your request is denied to the extent that it seeks "[r]ecords or information specially described and exempted from disclosure by statute." MCL 15.243(1)(d). Under Michigan Election Law, the following is exempt from disclosure:

(a) The record that a person declined to register to vote.
(b) The office that received a registered voter's application.
(c) A registered voter's driver's license or state personal identification card number.
(d) The month and day of birth of a registered voter.
(e) The telephone number provided by a registered voter.

Obtained by Judicial Watch, Inc. via Michigan FOIA

(f) The digitized signature of an elector that is captured or reproduced and transmitted to the Qualified Voter File.
(g) The last four digits of a registered voter's social security number contained in a registration record.

MCL 168.509gg(1) – (2). The Department is required to separate exempt from nonexempt material. MCL 15.244(1). Where a responsive record contains both exempt and nonexempt material, the Department will redact such material.

In order to process your request, please pay the total processing fee of $55.10. FOIA authorizes the Department to charge for mailing costs, copying, searching, reviewing, deleting and separating exempt from nonexempt information (MCL 15.234). The failure to charge a fee for the search, examination, review, and the deletion and separation of exempt from nonexempt information would result in unreasonably high costs to the Department in this particular instance because, your request requires Department employee(s) to be diverted from their regularly assigned duties in order to process your request.

Checks or money orders should be made payable to the STATE OF MICHIGAN and mailed to:

Michigan Bureau of Elections
PO Box 20126
Lansing, MI 48901-0726

As set forth under section 4(14) of the FOIA, MCL 15.234(14), the Department must receive the required deposit within 45 days after your receipt of this notice, which is June 15, 2023, otherwise the FOIA request will be considered abandoned and the Department will not be required to fulfill the request.

Regarding the partial denial of your request, under FOIA (MCL 15.240) you may do one of the following:

1. Appeal this decision in writing to the Secretary of State's designated appeals officer at:

   Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson
   Attn: Michael J. Brady
   Legal Services Administration
   Michigan Department of State
   P.O. Box 30204
   Lansing, Michigan 48918

   The writing must specifically state the word "appeal" and must identify the reason or reasons you believe the denial should be reversed. The Department must respond to your appeal within 10 business days of its receipt. Under unusual circumstances, the time for a response may be extended by 10 business days.

2. File an action in the appropriate court within 180 days after the date of the final determination to deny the request. If you prevail in such an action, the court is to award reasonable attorney fees, costs and disbursement, and possible damages.

Obtained by Judicial Watch, Inc. via Michigan FOIA

The Department's FOIA Procedures and Guidelines can be accessed at www.michigan.gov/sos, under the "FOIA" tab at the bottom of the page.

Hi Sarah,
I am not looking for the "entire state voter files from Jan 1, 2023 and Feb 1, 2023" which removed November 2022 general election voters. FYI-I already have these standard monthly QVF datasets that you issue. This is not what I asked for in my original FOIA dated February 2nd and clarification/follow-up to that same FOIA dated March 13th.

- As my original FOIA clearly stated, Yes, "just who voted in the Nov 2022 election". Header columns listed in the March 13th email intended for clarification/follow-up.
- If you can not provide the "voterID" that is given out by local jurisdictions, then per my original FOIA request dated Feb, 2nd, please do the following:
    - "If any items can not be provided, please explain in detail why the SOS can not fulfill my FOIA request for this data."
    - Therefor, I want a clear explanation why the local jurisdictions can not provide the same "Voter_Identification_Number" you give from the SOS. Both of these voterID numbers are in the single QVF system maintained by the SOS. The local jurisdictions has provided this same "Voter_Identification_Number" in the past using the QVF system managed by the SOS. Why was this statewide change made by the SOS to the QVF system? Can this clear change by the SOS be reversed/corrected so a common voterID number can be used for matching voter registration data?

Tim

Hi Tim,

Sorry for delay. We have a couple things that we need you to clarify.

We can get you the entire state voter files from Jan 1, 2023 and Feb 1, 2023. Did you also want the complete voting history files with these? These files will not include any voters that have been cancelled, moved out of state, etc.

- Are you looking for a file of just who voted in the Nov 2022 election or are you looking for all past voting history for every voter?
- We can include the "Voter_Identification_Number" , however we do not have record of "voterID" that is given out by jurisdictions so we will not be able to provide that

Thank you

Hi Sarah, I have not received any feedback from my February 2nd FOIA request. Can you please reply with any details why my FOIA request is delayed so long. Asking for a simple and accurate November 2022 vote history from our QVF should be a simple 15 minute export task. The December 2022 QVF was missing 17,974 voters. I would anticipate all 4,500,400 voters by now are all in the QVF with accurate voting history locations.

Please reply ASAP.

Hi Sarah,
I no longer need the standard January or February statewide lists you have provided to me in the past.

Are there any questions about my additional 3 FOIA requests listed below? I have not received any feedback from you since February 9th. Keep in mind my 3 FOIA requests can be fulfilled in one single dataset. Simply put, all I need is an accurate voting history file for our November 8th 2020 election with the following 7 headers and with the 4,500,400 records that are documented by the SOS as the official vote total by the SOS:

1. VoterID_Local – (All statewide local clerks provide this voterID number for each voter when we request a QVF)
2. voter_identification_number
3. County_Name
4. Jurisdiction_Name
5. Precinct
6. Election_Date (All dates should be Nov. 8, 2023)
7. is_absentee_voter

Items 3, 4, & 5 above should have the actual voting location NOT changed to the existing voter's registration location. Also, as documented in Patrick Colbeck's attached letter from Adam Fracassi, if there are any clerks who have "failed to upload voting data" please list these clerks by name and jurisdiction and provide any past email documentation from the SOS attempting to get remaining election data.

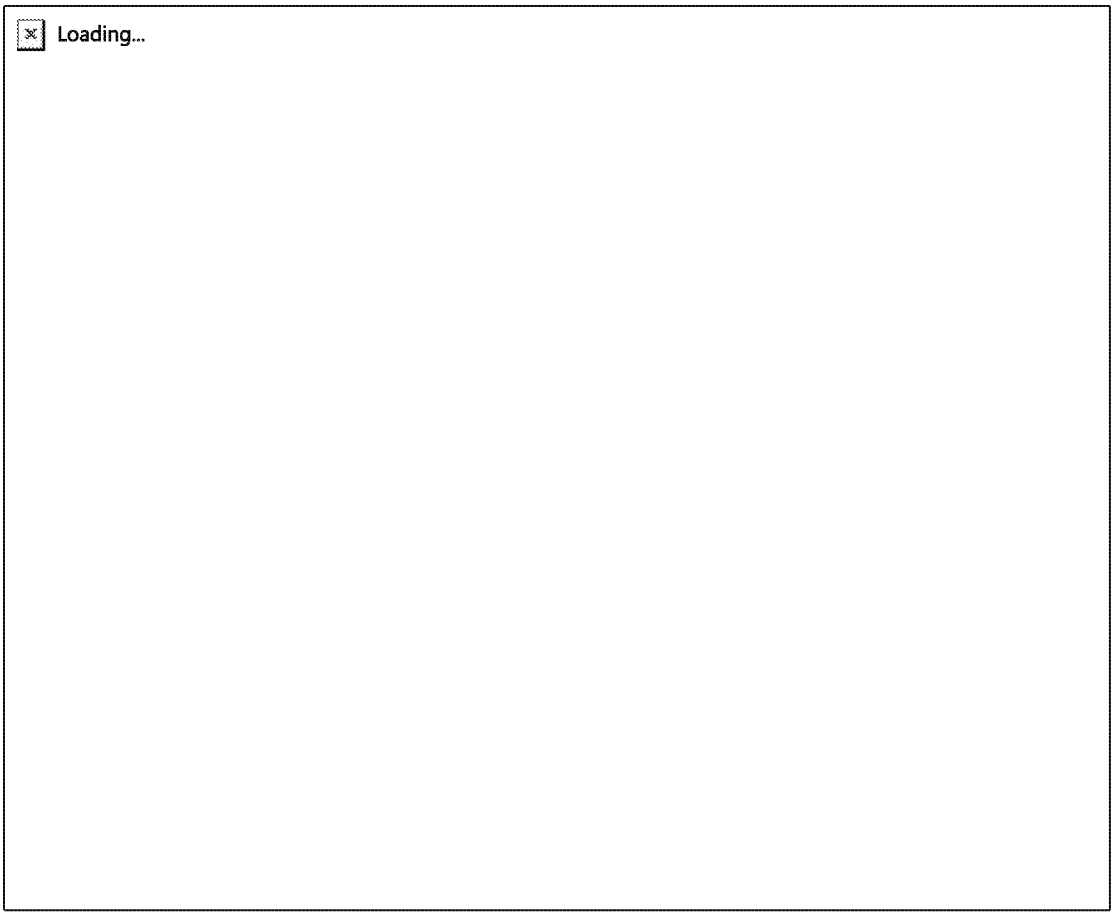
Subject: FOIA request - Tim Vetter - Jan. Feb. 2023

Hi Sarah,
I would like to request, via FOIA, a complete qualified voter file dated January 1st , 2023 and February 1st, 2023. At a minimum, this is the same typical data provided in the past via FOIA.

If possible to the standard data issued by your office, I am requesting the following items identified below. If any items can not be provided, please explain in detail why the SOS can not fulfil my FOIA request for this data. Thank you!

1. A complete list of voters: Registration status should include but not be limited to all registrants with active, challenged, verify, cancelled and rejected status. Therefore, I would anticipate every voter in the November, 2022 election (4,500,400 voters) would be listed in BOTH Jan and Feb QVFs for voting history. I anticipate many registrations will be removed due to death, moving out of state, or request for removal. However, I want a complete voting history record. Removed/deleted voting history is not desired. I want a complete voting history list with accurate voting locations of past elections.
2. Locations: Every voter should have the exact County, Jurisdiction, and Precinct not modified in their voting history. In the past we received only county and jurisdiction. Also, in the past the location is changed from original voting location to reflect ALL vote history at the current registration location. This past voter history location modification is NOT desired. I want the same vote history as maintained in the QVF as provided by the local clerks.
3. VoterIDs: Include the typical "Voter_Identification_Number" typical from your group AND "voterID" which is provided from the local jurisdictions. See the following screenshot showing two voterIDs per registration.

Obtained by Judicial Watch through Michigan FOIA



In addition to the data normally provided with a qualified voter file request, please also include in this file all records in the qualified voter file for all voter statuses. The list of voter status should include but not be limited to all registrants with active, challenged, verify, cancelled and rejected status. If additional voter status' exist it should include those as well. Please include in this FOIA the complete voter record file and the complete voter history file. Michigan's 2022 General Election Validity Reconciliation

The measured error rate of the electoral process in Michigan, from registration through certification, makes it impossible to legally certify any election in Michigan. Whether due to ignorance, arrogance or malice, the error rate simply outstrips the margins of victory. Countless unique investigations were required by law before certification could proceed. Election officials may never be able to prove that those granted the privilege of writing laws for the nation legitimately represented the will of eligible citizen voters.

The registration and voting error rates reported here represent minimums. We have ample reason for concern, after two years of careful study, that the actual error rates are higher.

2022 Federal Elections in which the error rate exceeded the margin of victory:

All US Senate, MI Congressional Districts

Every race in MI's 2022 GE was irretrievably impacted by an error rate 10,000 times the legal standard for system accuracy.

Hi Heather,

Two additional United Sovereign Americans cases were filed this week in Colorado and Georgia. They raise similar allegations under the NVRA and HAVA as their suit in Michigan and others brought over these past few months.

United Sovereign Americans v. Griswold, No. 1:24-cv-02499-SBP (D. Colo. filed Sept. 10, 2024).

United Sovereign Americans v. Raffensperger, No. 2:24-cv-00104-LGW-BWC (S.D. Ga. filed Sept. 11, 2024).

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR EXPEDITED DISCOVERY

NOW COME the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan (the "ACLU"), Sheril Kelly, and Scott Kelly (collectively, "Plaintiffs"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, and for their Motion for Expedited Discovery state as follows:

1. On September 3, 2024, Plaintiffs filed their Complaint, seeking a declaratory judgment that county canvassers must certify the results of the forthcoming election on November 5, 2024, based solely upon the returns under the Michigan Constitution and Michigan election law. See MCL 168.822(3); Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3).
2. The requested relief is necessary to guide the conduct of Defendant Robert Froman ("Defendant"), a member of the Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers, which is responsible for certifying the results of the November election in the 14 days following election day. Defendant has been publicly reported to have made statements indicating that he will refuse to comply with his legal and constitutional obligations as a county canvasser. If relief is not granted prior to the November election, Defendant's actions may cause irreparable harm to the voters of Kalamazoo County and to Michigan's elections and democracy more generally.
3. In order to assure that this court is able to grant declaratory relief in time for it to be practicable in guiding Defendant's actions, Plaintiffs seek to file a motion for summary disposition by October 1, 2024.
4. Concurrently, Plaintiffs seek limited, expedited discovery in order to ensure that there is no basis for delaying resolution of Plaintiffs' request for a declaratory judgment beyond the election on November 5, 2024.
5. Plaintiffs request that Defendant make himself available for a deposition on September

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

17, 2024 and produce a narrow category of documents no later than the date of said deposition.

6. Under the Michigan Court Rules, circuit courts have the authority to set a discovery schedule by issuing a scheduling order pursuant to MCR 2.401(B)(2)(a). MCR 2.301; see Lopez-Negrete v Lopez-Negrete, unpublished per curiam opinion of the Court of Appeals, issued May 26, 2009 (Docket No. 286247), 2009 WL 1506668, at *5 ("[T]he trial court has the authority to 'allow a longer or shorter time' for a party to serve a written response to a request for production of documents."), quoting MCR 2.310(C)(2); Lundin v City of Benton Harbor, unpublished per curiam opinion of the Court of Appeals, issued March 13, 2007 (Docket No. 264915) (SMOLENSKI, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part), p 3 n 1, 2007 WL 752154, at *4 ("[T]he trial court has the discretion to shorten or extend the period within which a request to admit must be answered.").
7. As discussed below, expedited discovery is necessary for Plaintiffs' urgent need for judicial relief and will not unduly burden Defendant.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this court grant this motion for expedited discovery and order Defendant to make himself available for a deposition by September 17, 2024, for the reasons stated above and for the reasons set forth in the accompanying brief in support.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

I. INTRODUCTION AND RELIEF REQUESTED

Plaintiffs American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan (the "ACLU"), and Sheril Kelly and Scott Kelly, voters in Kalamazoo, Michigan, (collectively, "Plaintiffs") have brought this action against Defendant Robert Froman, in his official capacity as a member of the Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers, seeking a declaratory judgment that Defendant must perform his "ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty . . . , [as a] member[] of the board of county canvassers, to certify election results based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns." MCL 168.822(3); Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3). In particular, a member of a Board of County Canvassers cannot refuse to certify the results of an election because the canvasser believes that election fraud has occurred.

Despite the unequivocal legal duty the statute imposes on him, Defendant is reported by The Detroit News to have asserted his willingness not to certify the results of the election, if he suspects that the results were affected by fraud, as he believes occurred during the 2020 presidential election. This was reported in an August 5, 2024 article in which it was also reported that Defendant has asserted that that the reason he is a member of the board of canvassers for Kalamazoo County is to block certification of the election results if the 2024 election unfolds in a similar matter to the 2020 election.

Defendant's reported willingness to violate his constitutional and statutory duty to certify presents a grave risk to the fundamental voting rights of the voters of Kalamazoo County, creates uncertainty as to the board's ability to perform its role at a crucial juncture of a presidential election, undermines the public's faith in Michigan's democracy and elections, and therefore merits swift judicial intervention.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

In an email to undersigned counsel, Defendant Froman has denied that he made the statements attributed to him in the Detroit News but refused to retract the statements. Most tellingly, at no point did he deny that he in fact would refuse to certify an election in which he believes fraud has occurred. The ACLU communicated Mr. Froman's denial of his comments to The Detroit News. The Detroit News responded with a letter to the ACLU, dated August 29, 2024, indicating that they stand by their story. See Ex. A.

Plaintiffs therefore seek an expedited deposition so that Defendant Froman can state his position under oath. The public needs a clear statement of where this official charged with certifying more than a hundred thousand votes stands and what he intends to do regarding the certification of the election in Kalamazoo County. Plaintiffs also seek a very limited set of directly relevant documents for use in that deposition.

It goes without saying that time is of the essence: the election is two months away. Plaintiffs have therefore filed the instant motion for expedited discovery, requesting that the Court use its broad authority over discovery to set an accelerated discovery schedule. Expedited discovery will permit Plaintiffs to gather information—through a deposition at which Defendant also produces a very limited set of documents—about Defendant's reported willingness to defy state law requiring him to vote to certify Kalamazoo County's returns in the days following the election.

The discovery requested is sought in furtherance of Plaintiffs' anticipated motion for summary disposition, which they expect to file by October 1 (or as ordered by this court), with sufficient time for the Court to render its decision in advance of the election. As discussed below, because the urgency of Plaintiffs' need vastly outweighs the minimal burden expedited discovery would place on Defendant, Plaintiffs' motion for expedited discovery should be granted.

I. STATEMENT OF FACTS

On August 5, 2024, Defendant, a member of the Kalamazoo County Board of Canvassers, was reported by The Detroit News to have stated that he believed that the 2020 election had been "most definitely" stolen from former President Trump. According to the article, when asked if he would certify the 2024 presidential election results if they unfolded the same way, he responded, "No. And that's why I'm there [i.e., serving on the Kalamazoo County Board]." See Ex. B. Later in the article, Defendant Froman is reported to have added, "I am not going to do anything that's illegal." Id. But this statement must be read in context of his immediately prior reported statements that the reason he now serves on the Kalamazoo County Board is to not certify if the election unfolds in the same way as the 2020 election. Defendant is also quoted as saying: "Many people within the framework or ideology of the Republican Party have realized that they have been sitting in their living rooms way too long, and the country that they know and love is being stolen out from under them . . . And they're not willing to sit in their living rooms any longer." Id.

Ten days later, on August 15, 2024, the ACLU wrote a letter to Defendant (the "ACLU Letter") in which the ACLU reminded Defendant of his certification responsibilities under the Michigan Constitution and Michigan election law, and pointed out that a refusal to certify would be an illegal act. See Ex. C. The ACLU Letter asked Defendant to clarify his position regarding the role of county canvassers, including (i) if he was misquoted, to notify The Detroit News that he was misquoted in the article and request a retraction of his statements, or (ii) if he was not misquoted, to rescind his statements and issue a public statement concerning the role of county canvassers in the election certification process.

Defendant responded to the ACLU Letter via email the next day. He stated, in full:

> I did not make any of the statements you say I did. I have not seen or approved any article by the Detroit News. I will make no public statement about what the Detroit News published. I believe the first amendment to the Constitution allows the press to publish any information they deem necessary." [See Ex D.]

Notably, Defendant did not state that he was, in fact, willing to do his legal and constitutional duty and certify an election result that he did not like or agree with. Nor did he even acknowledge the existence of that duty.

The ACLU communicated the entirety of Mr. Froman's denial to The Detroit News on August 19, 2024. On August 29, 2024, the Managing Editor of The Detroit News sent a letter to the ACLU, which read: "Regarding the article 'Most election officials who certified Michigan's 2020 race are gone. Expert sees trouble' published on Aug. 5, 2024, we stand by our story." See Ex. A. Since Defendant's email, and as of the date of the instant motion, Defendant has not issued a public statement recognizing all county canvassers' duty, including his own duty, to certify the results of the election.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

To ensure that Defendant will perform his constitutional and statutory obligations, Plaintiffs filed the instant action on September 3, 2024. Plaintiffs anticipate filing a motion for summary disposition by October 1 (or on a similar date as ordered by the Court) asking this court to enter a declaratory judgment that Defendant is legally required to comply with his constitutional and statutory duties under the Michigan Constitution and Michigan election law. See MCL 168.822(3); Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3). In order to ensure that there is no basis for delaying resolution of Plaintiffs' request for a declaratory judgment beyond the election on November 5, 2024, Plaintiffs seek limited discovery on an accelerated schedule.

To obtain the expedited discovery they seek, Plaintiffs are filing the instant motion and brief on September 3, 2024, along with their complaint.[1] Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court order Defendant make himself available for deposition, as set forth in Plaintiffs' notice of deposition and subpoena, no later than September 17, 2024, and that he produce at or before the deposition the narrow range of documents specified therein. See Ex. E (Notice of Deposition); Ex F (Subpoena). The Notice of Deposition and Subpoena are being immediately served upon Defendant with the Summons, a copy of Plaintiffs' Complaint, Plaintiffs' initial disclosures, and a copy of the instant motion and brief.[2] The limited documents Plaintiffs seek are (1) communications by Defendant since he became a member of the board of canvassers regarding his willingness to certify the 2024 presidential election and (2) his communications regarding the August 5, 2024 The Detroit News article. Id.

III. ARGUMENT

A. This Court Has Explicit Statutory Authority to Expedite Discovery.

Michigan has "a broad discovery policy that permits the discovery of any matter" that is relevant and not privileged. Alberto v Toyota Motor Corp, 289 Mich App 328, 336; 796 NW2d 490 (2010); see MCR 2.302(B)(1). The parties may begin discovery immediately after commencement of an action. MCR 2.301(A)(1); MCR 2.302(A)(1).

[1] MCR 2.310(C)(1) (discovery requests "may, without leave of court, be served . . . on the defendant with or after the summons and complaint on that defendant.").

[2] A deposition date of September 17, 2024, is reasonable as it provides Defendant 14 days' notice—the length of time required by the Michigan Court Rules for discovery from a non-party. See MCR 2.305(A)(3) ("A [discovery] subpoena shall provide a minimum of 14 days after service of the subpoena (or a shorter time if the court directs) for the requested act."); MCR 2.305(A)(6) ("The subpoena shall be served at least 14 days prior to the scheduled deposition.").

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Under the Michigan Court Rules, circuit courts may generally set a discovery schedule by issuing a scheduling order pursuant to MCR 2.401(B)(2)(a). MCR 2.301; see Lopez-Negrete v Lopez-Negrete, unpublished per curiam opinion of the Court of Appeals, issued May 26, 2009 (Docket No. 286247), p 6, 2009 WL 1506668, at *5 (Ex. G) ("[T]he trial court has the authority to 'allow a longer or shorter time' for a party to serve a written response to a request for production of documents."), quoting MCR 2.310(C)(2); Lundin v City of Benton Harbor, unpublished per curiam opinion of the Court of Appeals, issued March 13, 2007 (Docket No. 264915) (SMOLENSKI, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part), 2007 WL 752154, at *4 n 1 (Ex. H) ("[T]he trial court has the discretion to shorten or extend the period within which a request to admit must be answered."). More specifically, the Michigan Court Rules envision that a court may order a party to sit for a deposition prior to the 21-day period generally provided for a defendant to file their answer.[3] MCR 2.306(A)(1). Moreover, expedited discovery is consistent with the Michigan Supreme Court's decisions that "ha[ve]repeatedly emphasized" that Michigan's "discovery rules are to be liberally construed[.]" Daniels v Allen Industries, Inc, 391 Mich 398, 403; 216 NW2d 762 (1974); accord MCR 1.105 ("[The court] rules are to be construed to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of every action . . . .").

[3] Indeed, each of the rules that govern a specific means of discovery in addition to MCR 2.306(A)(1) explicitly grants the trial court the authority to shorten the time available to comply with a discovery request. See MCR 2.309(B)(4) (defendant's response to interrogatories due 42 days after service of summons and complaint unless time shortened by court); MCR 2.310(C)(2) (document requests due 42 days after service of summons and complaint unless time shortened by court); MCR 2.312(B)(1) (requests for admission due 28 days after service of request unless time shortened by court).

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

B. Michigan Courts Routinely Grant Expedited Discovery Upon a Showing of "Good Cause."

Because "Michigan's rules of discovery largely track the federal discovery rules . . . , courts of this state routinely seek guidance from federal cases construing a similar federal rule." Alberto, 289 Mich App at 337-338, citing Brenner v Marathon Oil Co, 222 Mich App 128, 133; 565 NW2d 1 (1997). Federal courts in Michigan have also routinely granted motions to expedite discovery upon a showing of good cause. See Dassault Systemes, SA v Childress, unpublished opinion and order of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, issued October 27, 2019 (Case No. 09-10534), 2009 WL 3602084, at *4 (Ex. I) (granting plaintiff's request for expedited discovery) aff'd 663 F3d 832 (CA 6, 2011); Arista Records, LLC v Does 1-4, unpublished opinion and order of the United States District Court for the Western District of Michigan, issued November 20, 2007 (Case No. 1:07-cv-1115), 2007 WL 4178641, at *3 (Ex. J) (same). The moving party may establish good cause by demonstrating that its "need for expedited discovery . . . outweighs the prejudice to the responding party." Lemkin v Bell's Precision Grinding, unpublished opinion and order of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, issued June 2, 2009 (Case No. 2:08-cv-789), 2009 WL 1542731, at *2 (Ex. K) (granting expedited discovery motion, citing cases) (citation omitted). In making this determination, the court takes into account the procedural posture of the case as well as the scope of the requested discovery. Id.

Here, as discussed below, there is good cause for this court to order expedited discovery because Plaintiffs' need for judicial relief is urgent and greatly outweighs the minimal burden expedited discovery would place on Defendant.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

C. Good Cause Supports Plaintiffs' Request for Limited Expedited Discovery.

1. Expedited Discovery Is Necessary Because Plaintiffs Urgently Need Judicial Relief Before the 2024 Presidential Election.

Plaintiffs' need for judicial intervention is urgent: the November 2024 election is a mere two months away, and there is significant doubt that Defendant will perform his statutory, "ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary" duty in compliance with MCL 168.822(3) and the Michigan Constitution. For Plaintiffs—individual voters of Kalamazoo County and a civil-liberties organization with nearly 1,000 members who are voters in Kalamazoo County—the risk to their votes is palpable. With that risk comes uncertainty and the potential for broad disruption and the spread of unfounded conspiracy theories should the presidential election hinge on Michigan, as it well may, and should boards of county canvassers in places such as Kalamazoo County refuse to perform their legal duties in pursuit of what amounts to a political stunt designed to sow distrust in the election.

Defendant's apparent refusal to commit to certifying the election—indeed, his reported determination to not certify it if his preferred candidate does not prevail—at this late stage has forced Plaintiffs to bring suit. Every day that passes without a declaratory judgment that Defendant must follow the law regardless of which presidential candidate wins, according to the election returns, compounds the dangers of election denialism.

2. Expedited Discovery Is Important to Ensure There Is No Basis for Delaying Resolution of Plaintiffs' Request for a Declaratory Judgment Beyond November 5, 2024.

Plaintiffs' lawsuit and their request for expedited discovery seek to ensure that Defendant complies with his constitutional and legal obligation to certify the election and to deter the injury to the electoral process that his election denialism will inflict on the voters of Michigan if he acts in the manner he reportedly said that he would. But, in order to present their case for summary disposition, Plaintiffs must first conduct discovery so as to determine the full extent of Defendant's intention and willingness not to comply with his legal duties as a county canvasser. And such a deposition also presents the opportunity to put to rest Defendant's non-credible denial of the statements attributed to him in The Detroit News. An expedited deposition will bring clarity and likely allow Plaintiffs to develop a record sufficient to move for summary disposition by October 1 (or a similar date as ordered by this Court). The requested discovery ought to "'provide accurate information in advance of trial as to the actual facts and circumstances of a controversy . . . . [It] should promote the discovery of the true facts and circumstances of a controversy, rather than aid in their concealment.'" Domako v Rowe, 438 Mich 347, 360; 475 NW2d 30 (1991) (citation omitted).

In actions requiring immediate relief, courts routinely grant expedited discovery to allow plaintiffs the opportunity to collect the information necessary to brief their arguments. See, e.g., JPMorgan Chase Bank, NA v Clark, unpublished order of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, issued September 29, 2009 (Case No. 09-13815), 2009 WL 3190342, at *4 (Ex. L) (granting plaintiffs' expedited discovery request in preparation for preliminary injunction hearing); see also, e.g., Russell v Lumpkin, unpublished opinion and order of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, issued May 11, 2010 (Case No. 2:10-cv-00314), 2010 WL 1882139, at 1-2 (Ex. M) (similar).

Michigan courts have routinely granted expedited discovery for even broader and more accelerated discovery requests. See, e.g., Detroit Free Press v City of Detroit, unpublished opinion of the Wayne County Circuit Court, issued January 25, 2008 (Docket No. 08-100214 CZ), 2008 WL 701227 (Ex. N) (ordering expedited discovery within seven days including a deposition of attorney and related document requests that included confidential material); Russell, 2010 WL 1882139, at 1-2 (ordering deposition within 14 days).

Here, Plaintiffs' discovery requests are narrowly tailored to the central issue necessitating the instant action: namely, Defendant's willingness or lack thereof to certify the results of the 2024 presidential election in accord with his statutory and constitutional obligations. The election is fast approaching. In order for Plaintiffs to present their case and give the Court time to issue its ruling, Plaintiffs seek to depose Defendant by September 17, 2024.

In the instant case, the default pace of the discovery would not make Defendant available for a deposition until approximately September 24, 2024 at the earliest. See MCR 2.306(A)(1) (party may be deposed after defendant has filed answer); MCR 2.108(A)(1) (answer is due 21 days after service of process). Nor would Defendant be obligated to produce any documents until October 15, 2024. MCR 2.310(C)(2) (defendant may respond to document request 42 days after service of process). In turn, a motion for summary disposition must typically be filed at least 21 days prior to the motion being heard. MCR 2.116(G)(1)(a). Thus, even if Defendant responded to Plaintiffs' discovery requests promptly by October 15, and even if Plaintiffs filed a motion for summary disposition the same day, this court would not be able to hear the motion prior to the November election under the default rules. Therefore, discovery must be conducted on an expedited basis.

D. Plaintiffs' Request for Expedited Discovery Does Not Prejudice Defendant.

The scope of Plaintiffs' request for expedited discovery is narrow. Plaintiffs seek (1) to depose Defendant on the topic of election certification and (2) Defendant's personal communications discussing certification and regarding The Detroit News article. Complying with such discovery requests, tailored to Defendants' own views, statements, and communications about a single topic, poses little burden on Defendant. Defendant could easily comply with these discovery requests within the proposed expedited discovery period. Furthermore, Defendant has been on reasonable notice since receiving the ACLU's letter on August 15 that if he refused to retract or rescind his reported comments, he could be subject to legal action regarding the precise and narrow—but critically important—issues at stake here. Thus, he cannot claim undue surprise or burden in responding to Plaintiffs' narrow discovery requests within two weeks.

* * *

Defendant's minimal burden in responding to these discovery requests is vastly outweighed by Plaintiffs' urgent need for judicial relief and for the information necessary to brief anticipated motions before the election. Accordingly, there is good cause for the Court to order that discovery take place on an expedited basis.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court grant their motion for expedited discovery.

Dated: September 3, 2024

Most election officials who certified Michigan's 2020 race are gone. Expert sees trouble

Lansing — Widespread change has struck the group of officials whose job is to certify Michigan's elections, igniting concerns about whether the new class is willing to sign off on the results the same way county canvassers in the battleground state did four years ago.

A first-of-its-kind, weeks-long analysis by The Detroit News found 55% of the 332 county canvassers in Michigan were not serving in November 2020 when boards in all 83 counties approved the outcome despite Republican then-President Donald Trump's unsuccessful attempt to overturn his loss to Democrat Joe Biden.

The turnover has been driven by Republicans. While 48% of the Democratic canvassers are new since 2020, 63% — nearly two out of every three — are new on the GOP side, according to The News' analysis.

The numbers point to a Michigan Republican Party that's been focused on false claims of widespread fraud aimed at the 2020 election and GOP canvassers who might interfere with the election process this fall, according to Democrats. But Republicans, such as Kalamazoo County canvasser Robert Froman, said the analysis demonstrates an increased and renewed interest in how elections are administered.

"Many people within the framework or the ideology of the Republican Party have realized that they have been sitting in their living rooms way too long, and the country that they know and love is being stolen out from under them," Froman said. "And they're not willing to sit in their living rooms any longer."

Froman, a 72-year-old retired postal service employee from Oshtemo Township, is one of the 105 new Republican county canvassers who are serving in 2024 but weren't in their positions in 2020.

Each county in Michigan has a four-person canvassing board, featuring two Republicans and two Democrats, in charge of approving election tallies before they're forwarded to the state for final authorization. The panels rarely get attention and, former Michigan elections director Chris Thomas said, their members often held the posts for many years at a time, making vast changes like what's occurred recently unusual.

Concerns about the 2020 election spurred Froman to get more actively involved in politics, he said. Froman started attending Kalamazoo County Republican Party meetings and volunteering with an entity named Check My Vote, which has been trying to examine and verify addresses used by Michigan residents in the state's official list of registered voters.

Froman, whom Republicans nominated to serve on the Kalamazoo County canvassing board and whose term began last year, said he's personally checked tens of thousands of voters' addresses. He said he "most definitely" believes the 2020 election was stolen from Trump.

Asked if he would certify the 2024 presidential election if it unfolded the same way the 2020 one did, Froman replied, "No. And that's why I'm there."

Froman is one of four so-called "county leaders" or "trainers" who have been working with Check My Vote to investigate the state's registered voter list and who have recently gotten county canvassing positions. The others are Bonnie Kellogg in Muskegon County, Maureen Hillary in Clinton County and Ron Palmgren in Genesee County, according to a list of "county leaders" in a July 2023 announcement from the Michigan Republican Party.

The belief system that there was widespread fraud in 2020 and a series of attempts to reject results in Michigan over the last four years have some election officials in Michigan expecting that Republicans on some local canvassing boards might try to block the certification process in November if Trump loses to likely Democratic nominee Kamala Harris.

County canvassing boards must have a bipartisan 3-1 or 4-0 vote to certify election results and advance them to the Board of State Canvassers, another panel comprised of two Republicans and two Democrats.

"At this point, shockingly, it wouldn't surprise me to see several counties deadlock," said Thomas, who served as Michigan's elections director for more than three decades.

'I do worry'

Each of Michigan's 83 county canvassing boards has the responsibility of reviewing the local vote totals and reporting the results to the Board of State Canvassers, according to a manual published by the Michigan Bureau of Elections.

The county boards, featuring two Republican slots and two Democratic slots, have 14 days following Election Day to certify the results for each of their precincts.

The canvassers serve staggered four-year terms, are nominated by their local political party and are picked, from among the party nominees, by the local board of commissioners. However, there is no official state list that tracks who sits on the key elections boards across Michigan.

The News compiled the names of Michigan's county canvassers — those serving now and those serving in 2020 — through questionnaires sent to county clerks in June and July and examining board member lists that were posted on some county websites.

Boards with vacancies are considered by The News to have new members because the positions are expected to be filled before the November election.

Of Michigan's 83 counties, 11 have completely new canvassing boards with four new members from 2020: Alger, Arenac, Clare, Dickinson, Iosco, Mackinac, Manistee, Montmorency, Muskegon, Roscommon and Wayne — the state's most populous county and the site of a brief November 2020 certification deadlock.

In Iosco County, which is located in northeastern Michigan and has a population of about 25,000, Clerk Nancy Huebel said one past board member died, two resigned for personal reasons, and one, Democrat Patti Casey, wasn't reappointed.

In neighboring Arenac County, Janice Grier, 69, of Standish said Democrats were having trouble finding people to serve on the canvassing board a couple of years ago, so she stepped up. In 2020, 67% of the votes in the county went to Trump.

Grier said she hasn't seen anything that would make her concerned about the county board not certifying the upcoming presidential election, but she's not so certain about elsewhere in Michigan.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

"I do worry about other parts of the state," Grier said.

Protect the vote?

Over the last four years, there have been three examples of canvassers in Michigan at least initially refusing to certify an election.

Most recently, in the spring, two Republicans on the Delta County canvassing board in the Upper Peninsula voted against certifying a May 7 recall election in which three incumbent Republican county commissioners lost their seats. However, days later, they changed course and approved the results.

"I am doing my best to protect the votes of all citizens of Delta County and to ensure free and fair elections by bringing transparency and reassurance to all Delta County citizens," one of the Republican canvassers, Bonnie Hakkola, said at the time.

Hakkola resigned from the board afterward.

The other Republican who initially voted against certification, LeeAnne Oman, was serving as an alternate for an absent GOP canvasser, Sema Deeds.

Jonathan Brater, Michigan's elections director, sent a letter to the Delta County canvassers on May 16, telling them that under the Michigan Constitution and state law, they had "a clear and nondiscretionary duty to certify election results based solely on election returns."

"The Constitution and Michigan election law do not authorize boards of county canvassers to refuse to certify election results based on claims made by third parties of alleged election irregularities or a general desire to conduct election investigations," Brater wrote in the letter.

In a statement in May, Attorney General Dana Nessel said "defying the will of the people based on conjecture, dissatisfaction in the results or any other reason not based on Michigan law" will not be tolerated.

"While the Delta County Board ultimately met their obligations, and as a result have avoided the legal consequences, let this serve as a warning to all of the boards of canvassers across the state that the willful neglect of your duties is a criminal act," added Nessel, a Democrat.

Canvassers' role

Asked about the statements from Nessel and Brater about the Delta County canvassers, new Republican Kalamazoo County canvasser Froman said he has a duty to ensure there is a free and fair election.

"I am not going to do anything that's illegal," Froman told The News.

Other new canvassers interviewed by The News in recent weeks made similar remarks.

Ron Palmgren, a Republican canvasser in Genesee County, has also served as a county leader for Check My Vote. Asked if the 2020 presidential election was stolen from Trump, Palmgren said he has "no idea whether it was stolen or not."

Biden won Michigan's election by 154,000 votes or 3 percentage points, 51%-48%. The outcome has been upheld by audits, a series of court rulings and an investigation by a Republican-controlled state Senate committee.

Palmgren, a 76-year-old retiree from Burton, said he views his role as a canvasser as being an "impartial arbiter."

"Based on my experience so far, there is no investigatory process," Palmgren said of his responsibilities. "It is strictly looking at the election results provided by all of the municipalities and making sure that all of the processes that were in place were followed."

Likewise, Jim Kargol, a 69-year-old from Petoskey who serves on the Emmet County Board of Canvassers, said he doesn't believe there's been fraud in local elections, but he questions what has happened in other places, such as Detroit.

Kargol mentioned a van dropping off loads of ballots in the night during the 2020 presidential election in Detroit, a Democratic stronghold. He appeared to be referencing about 16,000 ballots that had been delivered to the center where absentee ballots were being tallied in Detroit in the early morning hours of Nov. 4. The ballots had been verified by city Clerk Janice Winfrey's staff prior to delivery in a process prescribed by Michigan law, said Thomas, Michigan's former elections director who helped oversee voting in Detroit.

"I really think there was some foolishness that went on," said Kargol, a Republican.

Canvassing troubles

After the 2020 presidential election on Nov. 17, 2020, Wayne County's Republican then-canvassers Monica Palmer and William Hartmann questioned precincts in Detroit where the number of ballots cast and the number of votes tracked didn't match and initially voted against certifying the county's results.

But later in the meeting, they changed course and supported certifying the election based on the condition that an audit take place of some precincts within Wayne County.

Minutes after the meeting, Trump and Republican National Committee Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel called Palmer and Hartmann, and Trump personally pressured them not to sign the certification document, according to recordings previously reported on by The Detroit News.

"We've got to fight for our country," Trump said during the phone call, according to the recordings. "We can't let these people take our country away from us."

More: Trump recorded pressuring Wayne County canvassers not to certify 2020 vote

The Michigan Bureau of Elections determined the vote that occurred and the signatures of the chair or vice chair of the four-member canvassing board and the county clerk were the only things necessary to advance the certification to the Board of State Canvassers.

Hartmann died in 2021, and Republican Party officials didn't renominate Palmer to serve on the canvassing board when her term concluded in 2021. The new Republican canvassers are Katherine Riley and Robert Boyd.

Riley, who's now chair of the Wayne County Board of Canvassers, according to the county's website, didn't respond Monday to a request for comment.

There are also two new Democrats on the board, Richard W. Preuss and Frank Woods Jr.

Jonathan Kinloch, a Democrat who was serving on the Wayne County canvassing board in 2020 and is now a Wayne County commissioner, said the question of whether boards will certify the results this fall is at the forefront of his mind.

Wayne County Republicans initially denied that they were going to attempt to block certification in 2020, Kinloch said. Where there's smoke, people should be concerned, he said.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

"I think this is a tactic of theirs to create chaos," Kinloch said.

Legal backstops

If a county canvassing board refuses to certify an upcoming election, Michigan has legal "backstops" in place to deal with the development, Thomas said. But such an attempt could also further undermine people's faith in electoral outcomes, he acknowledged.

Under state processes, if a county board fails to determine a result, the job moves to the Board of State Canvassers, according to the Michigan Bureau of Elections.

The county board is supposed to immediately deliver all records and other information, including all necessary forms, to the Board of State Canvassers. A court could get involved to make sure that step happens.

When the 2020 presidential election reached the state board, one of the two Republicans on the statewide panel abstained: Norm Shinkle of Ingham County. But the other Republican, Aaron Van Langevelde, cast the deciding vote with the two Democrats in favor of certification.

At the time, Shinkle called for the Republican-led Legislature to conduct an in-depth review of election procedures, and he promoted theories about problems in Wayne County.

"I do not plan on voting for certification. I believe Wayne County's certification needs to be looked at," Shinkle said before abstaining.

Van Langevelde and Shinkle are both no longer on the board. They've been replaced by Tony Daunt and Richard Houskamp.

Daunt and Houskamp voted to certify the 2022 gubernatorial election, which Republican Tudor Dixon lost to Democratic Gov. Gretchen Whitmer by about 10 percentage points. Daunt also has openly criticized Trump for spreading "lies" that the 2020 election was rigged.

Robert Froman
Member, Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers
201 West Kalamazoo Ave.
Kalamazoo, MI 49007
Rlfpersonal2017@gmail.com

Dear Mr. Froman:

We write to express our grave concerns about recent statements you made to the media regarding your duties and intentions as a duly appointed member of the Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers. According to an article published in the Detroit News on August 5, 2024, you reportedly told the Detroit News that you "most definitely" believe that the 2020 election was stolen from former President Donald Trump. Further, when asked if you would certify the 2024 presidential election if it unfolded the same way the 2020 election did, you responded, "No. And that's why I'm there."[1]

Your legal obligation, and the obligation of every member of a board of canvassers under the Michigan Constitution and under binding Michigan law is to certify any election based solely upon the returns. The law does not authorize members of boards of canvassers to withhold certification based upon speculation, theories, or even evidence pertaining to the accuracy of the reported returns. The Michigan Constitution provides:

> It shall be the ministerial, clerical, nondiscretionary duty of a board of canvassers, and of each individual member thereof, to certify election results based solely on … in the case of boards of county canvassers, statements of returns from the precincts and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns. Const. 1963, Art II, § 7(3).

Michigan Election Law parallels this requirement. MCL 168.822(3) provides:

> It is the ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty of each board of county canvassers, and each of the members of the board of county canvassers, to certify election results based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns. MCL 168.822(3).

Thus, members of county canvassing boards have a clear, non-discretionary duty to certify election results based solely on election returns. As you are likely aware, on May 16, 2024, Jonathan Brater, Director of the Bureau of Elections, wrote a letter to the Delta County Board of Canvassers following their initial refusal to certify a May recall election in that county (the "Brater Letter).[2] In this letter, Brater emphasizes that members of county canvassing boards are not permitted to refuse to certify election results based on claims by third parties of alleged election irregularities, or a desire to conduct election fraud investigations. Brater Letter 1. Canvassers are legally required to certify the election results that are brought before them once the legal requirements have been met.

Even before the people of Michigan enacted the constitutional language quoted above in the 2022 election, the Michigan Supreme Court consistently held that members of county and state canvassing boards have a clear, nondiscretionary legal duty to certify the election based solely on election returns. See Johnson v Secretary of State, 506 Mich 975; 951 NW2d 310, 311-312 (2020) (CLEMENT, J., concurring). Indeed, as early as 1892, the Michigan Supreme Court held that "it is the settled law of this State that canvassing boards are bound by the return, and cannot go behind it, especially for the purpose of determining frauds in the election. Their duties are purely ministerial and clerical." McQuade v Furgason, 91 Mich 438, 440; 51 NW 1073 (1892). See also People ex rel Attorney General v Van Cleve, 1 Mich 362, 366 (1850) ("The duties of these [canvassing] boards are simply ministerial . . . .").

Your comments are directly contrary to the law. Not only do they demonstrate a willingness to violate your oath of office, the constitution, and the laws of the state of Michigan, but they also indicate a willingness to commit a criminal offense. On May 24, 2024, Attorney General Nessel issued a press release regarding the duty of canvassers to certify election results. In this release, Attorney General Nessel warned all members of Michigan Boards of County Canvassers that Willful Neglect of Duty is a criminal act.[3] MCL 168.931(h) provides that "A person shall not willfully fail to perform a duty imposed upon that person by this act." A person who fails to perform their duty as required by Michigan Election Law may be guilty of a misdemeanor. MCL 169.931(2). Consequently, as it is a nondiscretionary legal duty for a Board of County Canvassers member to certify the election based on election returns, to refuse to do so because of rumors, allegations, or even evidence of fraud would expose that member to criminal liability.

While we recognize that in the above cited Detroit News article you also stated that you would not do anything illegal, you evidently made that statement after openly declaring that the Defendant must produce the following documents to Plaintiffs' counsel at or before his deposition:

1. All communications from November 1, 2023 to present discussing the possible certification of the 2024 Presidential election, including communications to which Defendant is a recipient. "Communications" includes all correspondence including, but not limited to, email, text messages, social media posts, and direct messages.
2. All communications referencing the August 5, 2024 Detroit News article, "Most Election Officials Who Certified Michigan's 2020 Race Are Gone. Expert Sees Trouble," or the article's contents, including communications to which Defendant is a recipient. "Communications" includes all correspondence including, but not limited to, email, text messages, social media posts, and direct messages.

Respectfully submitted,

West KeySummary

1 Child Custody ⇨ Previous interference with lawful custody or visitation

Child Custody ⇨ Ability of parents to cooperate

Sole legal custody of a minor child was awarded to her father when it was not possible for joint custody to be awarded to the divorced couple due to the ex-wife's anger issues towards the ex-husband. The ex-wife's anger toward the ex-husband had manifested into deliberate attempts to sabotage his relationship with their minor child. In addition, the ex-wife had made several attempts to prevent the ex-husband from having parenting time with the minor child by refusing his requests to see his daughter and refusing to tell him the location for exchanging custody of his daughter. M.C.L.A. § 722.23.

Genesee Circuit Court; LC No. 06–271816–DM.

Before: BORRELLO, P.J., and MURPHY and M.J. KELLY, JJ.

Opinion

PER CURIAM.

*1 Defendant Kariann Lopez–Negrete appeals as of right the judgment of divorce awarding plaintiff Carlos Lopez–Negrete sole legal custody of the minor child (d/o/b/ 3/11/05) and plaintiff and defendant joint physical custody of the minor child. Defendant also appeals the trial court's assignment of debt. For the reasons set forth in this opinion, we affirm.

I. Facts and Procedural History

Plaintiff and defendant were married on May 24, 2003. The minor child, a daughter, was born almost two years later. For most of the marriage, plaintiff attended law school part-time. He did not work during this time. Defendant began working as a school psychologist for Flushing Community Schools during the marriage. Plaintiff and defendant separated in October 2006, and plaintiff filed for divorce in December 2006.

Following a lengthy bench trial, the trial court issued an Opinion and Order After Divorce Trial on March 14, 2008. The order and opinion contained findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding the minor child and property. The trial court found that an established custodial environment existed with respect to both plaintiff and defendant. The order and opinion addressed the best interest factors in MCL 722.23 and made findings regarding those factors. The trial court also made findings regarding the minor child's best interests. The trial court found that "[b]oth parties are capable, nurturing parents who love their daughter very much." However, the trial court noted its concern with defendant's anger issue, stating: "The Court's most significant concern ... is Defendant's anger issue, which has the potential to undermine the father/daughter relationship and do serious psychological damage to the child. Defendant is otherwise a good parent, but she is allowing this problem to poison everything." The trial court ordered that plaintiff and defendant would have joint physical custody with equal time for each parent, but ordered defendant to participate in counseling to address her anger issue. Regarding legal custody, the trial court noted that it generally prefers to award joint legal custody. However, the trial court found that because of defendant's anger issue, the parties would be unable to cooperate and generally agree concerning important decisions affecting the welfare of the child. The trial court stated that "[i]f Defendant were the sole legal custodian ... she would use her status to marginalize plaintiff. On the other hand, if Plaintiff were the sole legal custodian ... he would consult, involve and advise Defendant regarding all decisions." Therefore, the trial court determined that it would be in the child's best interest to award sole legal custody to plaintiff.

The trial court also made findings regarding the division of property. The trial court essentially divided the marital assets equally. The trial court awarded each party the property in their possession and specifically awarded defendant her wedding ring, wedding dress and veil. The trial court determined that defendant's unvested pension had an approximate value of $8,000 and awarded it solely to defendant. Each party claimed that their parents had loaned the couple money; the trial court ordered each party to repay their parents. Regarding debt, the trial court noted that the parties did not have joint debt and ordered "that each party is responsible for whatever debts are in their respective names." The court did not order any child or spousal support.

*2 On April 14, 2008, the judgment of divorce was entered. The provisions in the divorce judgment were consistent with the Opinion and Order After Divorce Trial. Thereafter, defendant filed a "Motion for Reconsideration of, Relief from, and To Amend Judgment," arguing that plaintiff, after asserting privilege, then elicited evidence in violation of MCR 2.314(B)(2), that this evidence impacted the trial court's determination of the best interest factors under MCL 722.23 and that the trial court's assignment of certain debt was inequitable. Defendant also sought joint legal custody of the minor child. The trial court denied the motion, stating in relevant part:

> Defendant seeks relief based upon her inability to procure Plaintiff's medical records relevant to the "underlying issue of Plaintiff's mental and emotional stability". She claims that, because Plaintiff asserted his privilege, and then raised the issue himself, that this is a violation of MCR 2.314(B)(2).
> Should there have been any concern that Plaintiff was improperly "raising" the issue of his mental health pursuant to MCR 2.314(B)(2), one would think that such would draw a timely objection. The Court does not remember any such objection, nor does Defendant claim that such was made.
>
> If a timely objection would have been made, however, the language "[u]nless the court orders otherwise" provides the Court with discretion as to what evidence can be introduced by a party that claims privilege. In this case, the Court finds absolutely no issue here.
> Plaintiff's "mental and emotional stability" was raised early and often by Defendant during the course of the litigation, and to the extent that it was "raised" by Plaintiff at all, it was only as a shield. It may have been mentioned by Plaintiff first at trial, but only because his case went first and he knew that the issue was going to be raised by Defendant. Although Defendant did not have Plaintiff's medical records from many years ago, several witnesses testified about the suicide/mental instability issue. Further, Plaintiff underwent a complete psychological exam, where Dr. Hobbs was well aware of the history, and she testified about it at trial. As such, Plaintiff's mental health in this regard was well covered by many other sources, and it is highly doubtful that medical records from years ago would have made any difference at all. In fact, there was much more information made available to the parties and the Court in this case than there was in Navarre v. Navarre, 191 Mich.App. 395, 479 N.W.2d 357 (1991).

The trial court also denied defendant's request for joint legal custody, finding that she had not had sufficient time to remediate her anger issue, and for a modification of the assignment of debt.

II. Analysis

A. Privilege

Defendant makes numerous arguments regarding plaintiff's assertion of privilege. The applicability of a privilege is a question of law that this Court reviews de novo. Baker v. Oakwood Hosp. Corp., 239 Mich.App. 461, 468, 608 N.W.2d 823 (2000). This Court reviews a trial court's decision to admit or exclude evidence for an abuse of discretion. Waknin v. Chamberlain, 467 Mich. 329, 332, 653 N.W.2d 176 (2002). The abuse of discretion standard recognizes that " 'there will be circumstances in which ... there will be more than one reasonable and principled outcome.' " Maldonado v. Ford Motor Co., 476 Mich. 372, 388, 719 N.W.2d 809 (2006), quoting People v. Babcock, 469 Mich. 247, 269, 666 N.W.2d 231 (2003). Under this standard, "[a]n abuse of discretion occurs when the decision results in an outcome falling outside the principled range of outcomes." Woodard v. Custer, 476 Mich. 545, 557, 719 N.W.2d 842 (2006).

*3 MCR 2.314 addresses the discovery of medical information concerning a party. MCR 2.314(A) provides, in relevant part:

> (1) When a mental or physical condition of a party is in controversy, medical information about the condition is subject to discovery under these rules to the extent that
> (a) the information is otherwise discoverable under MCR 2.302(B), and
> (b) the party does not assert that the information is subject to a valid privilege.

Defendant argues that the trial court erred in allowing plaintiff to assert privilege after he failed to raise it as required under MCR 2.314(B)(1), which provides:

> A party who has a valid privilege may assert the privilege and prevent discovery of medical information relating to his or her mental or physical condition. The privilege must be asserted in the party's written response to a request for production of documents under MCR 2.310, in answers to interrogatories under MCR 2.309(B), before or during the taking of a deposition, or by moving for a protective order under MCR 2.302(C). A privilege not timely asserted is waived in that action, but is not waived for the purposes of any other action.

MCR 2.310(C)(2) provides that a party on whom a request for production of documents is served must serve a written response within 28 days after service of the request; however, the court rule permits the trial court to give the responding party "a longer or shorter time" to serve its written response.

On December 28, 2006, defendant filed a written request for production of documents pursuant to MCR 2.310, in which she sought copies "of all psychological, counseling and/or medical records" for plaintiff, including "all histories and notes pertaining to any mental health counseling" from various health care providers and professionals from October 1998 to the present. Defendant also sought "a complete and accurate list of all other doctors, psychologists, physicians, physiatrists [sic], counselors, and/or mental health professionals who have treated and/or consulted with [plaintiff]" from October 1998 to the present. At a hearing on January 8, 2007, counsel for plaintiff did not explicitly invoke the physician-patient or psychologist patient privilege on behalf of plaintiff, but requested that the trial court quash defendant's request for plaintiff's medical records, arguing that under Navarre v. Navarre, 191 Mich.App. 395, 479 N.W.2d 357 (1991), only plaintiff's current psychological condition was relevant. Plaintiff did not file a written response to defendant's request for documents. On January 24, 2007, defense counsel sent a letter to plaintiff's counsel reminding her that defendant had served plaintiff with a written request for production of documents and that defendant had not received a response or objection to defendant's request and advising counsel for plaintiff that defense counsel would seek an order to compel discovery and for costs if defendant did not receive the documents by January 25, 2007, at 5:00 p.m. Plaintiff still did not respond, and on January 29, 2007, defendant filed a motion to compel production of documents under MCR 2.310 and MCR 2.313.

*4 The trial court held a hearing on defendant's motion to compel on February 5, 2007. At the hearing, the trial court stated:

> Now, with regard to the medical records ... I think it's clear that medical records, psychological records, psychiatric records are privileged. The privilege—this is under MCR 2.314(B), the privilege has to be asserted in the response to the discovery request or it is waived. So, if there's going to be a privilege, it needs to be in the response to the discovery request.
> If there's a request for documents and the documents are not in the possession of the party, then that needs to be stated formally, properly pursuant to the court rule. So, that's what's going to happen here, again, within seven days from today's date.
> But with regard to the psychologicals, I will also refer both parties to (2) under 2.314(B), if a party asserts that the medical information is subject to a privilege and the assertion has the effect of preventing discovery of medical information otherwise discoverable, the party may not thereafter present or produce any physical, documentary or testimonial evidence relating to the party's medical history or mental or physical condition. So, that's what the court rule says. If they're going to assert the privilege, then they can't utilize—they can't present that evidence in Court.

Following the hearing, the trial court entered an order requiring plaintiff to "produce all documents and information set forth in Defendant's Written Request For Production of © 2024 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Documents Directed to Plaintiff dated December 27, 2006, or otherwise respond as directed by Michigan Court Rule, by not later than February 12, 2007, at 5 p.m." The trial court's order indicates that it was aware that plaintiff had missed the 28 day deadline to respond to defendant's request for production of documents. However, the court, apparently acting pursuant to its authority to modify discovery periods under MCR 2.310(C)(2), granted plaintiff a seven-day extension to file a response, thus allowing plaintiff to avoid waiving the privilege due to his failure to comply with defendant's discovery request within 28 days. On about February 8, 2007, plaintiff filed a verified response to defendant's written request for production of documents. In his response, plaintiff asserted that the evidence sought by defendant was "privileged," irrelevant, and "intended to embarrass, harass and unduly cause attorney fees to be incurred[.]" In claiming privilege, plaintiff did not specify whether the documents sought by defendant were privileged under the physician-patient privilege, MCL 600.2157,[1] or the psychologist-patient privilege, MCL 333.18237.[2] However, plaintiff did state: "[plaintiff] does not waive the right to introduce any relevant admissible current information regarding the mental and physical condition of either party by asserting privilege to any previous mental or physical medical providers consistent with the ruling in Navarre v. Navarre." (Emphasis added.)

*5 After plaintiff filed his verified response to defendant's request, the trial court did not make any further pre-trial rulings regarding the privilege issue. Thus, although the trial court never entered an order specifically finding the privilege applicable and specifically excluding certain evidence, it did state on the record at the February 5, 2007, hearing that plaintiff's medical, psychological and psychiatric records were privileged. The trial court did not, however, specify under what privilege or privileges the evidence sought by defendant was barred.

It is true that under MCR 2.314(B)(1), a privilege is waived when a party does not assert the privilege in a written response to a request for production of documents. In Domako v. Rowe, 438 Mich. 347, 356, 475 N.W.2d 30 (1991), the Supreme Court stated that "the plain language of MCR 2.314(B)(1) declares that if the privilege is not asserted in a written response to a request to produce, it is waived for purposes of that action." While plaintiff did not respond or object to defendant's request for the production of documents within 28 days as required by MCR 2.310(C)(2), this does not amount to a waiver of the physician-patient privilege because in its February 5, 2007, order compelling production of documents, the trial court specifically gave plaintiff until February 12, 2007, to produce the documents or respond to plaintiff's written request for production of documents. Under MCR 2.310(C)(2), the trial court has the authority to "allow a longer or shorter time" for a party to serve a written response to a request for production of documents. Therefore, contrary to defendant's argument, plaintiff did not waive the medical privilege and has not lost the privilege for purposes of the action.

Defendant next argues that the trial court erred in permitting plaintiff to assert privilege because plaintiff's assertion of the psychologist-patient privilege is contrary to the purpose of the Child Custody Act, MCL 330.1750 and MCR 2.314(B)(2). In Navarre, this Court addressed the interplay between the Child Custody Act and the physician-patient privilege. According to the Court:

> The question before the Court is whether the Legislature intended to suspend the medical privilege in custody disputes. The defendant's statutory-construction argument that the specific should dominate over the general is inapposite unless the statutes are found to be conflicting. In other words, they must be in pari materia, i.e., they must cover the same subject matter.... Here, the purposes of the Child Custody Act and the medical privilege statute are different. The former seeks to provide a procedural framework for resolving custody disputes and requires the court to consider the mental and physical conditions of the parties. It does not, however, address the evidentiary routes by which such information may come to the attention of the court. The privilege statute, on the other hand, relates only to the right of a patient to prevent a physician from revealing a certain type of information, and it includes a few carefully delineated situations in which the evidence may be used notwithstanding the objection of the holder of the privilege.

*6 All privileges exist at the expense of suppressing valuable evidence. Indeed, were this not the case, there would be no need for privileges at all. In this context, potentially valuable evidence regarding the condition of parties to a custody dispute must be sacrificed to the perceived greater good of protecting physician-patient relationships. Moreover, the court in this case was able, with the plaintiff's participation, to gather information with regard to her mental condition. See MCR 2.311. The privilege, therefore, did not block the presentation of the only evidence of plaintiff's condition. Additionally, we do not find relevant to a party's present condition the testimony > of a physician who has not treated the party for years. [Navarre, supra at 398–399, 479 N.W.2d 357.]

Defendant attempts to distinguish the instant case from Navarre by arguing that the instant case involves the psychologist-patient privilege, whereas Navarre involved the physician-patient privilege. It is true that Navarre addressed the interplay between the Child Custody Act and the physician-patient privilege, not the psychologist-patient privilege. However, in asserting privilege before the trial court, plaintiff generally asserted "privilege" without specifically identifying which statutory privilege precluded defendant from obtaining the documents she sought. Also, in ruling that the evidence sought by defendant was barred by privilege, the trial court did not specify whether the physician-patient privilege, psychologist-patient privilege, or both, barred the evidence. There is some overlap in the privilege statutes, and both privileges are arguably relevant and applicable to the facts of this case. Cf. MCL 600.2157; MCL 333 .18237. In Navarre, the physician-patient privilege was asserted to block evidence of the plaintiff's mental condition. Even if the evidence in this case was precluded because of the psychologist-patient privilege, the reasoning of Navarre, that potentially valuable evidence regarding the condition of parties to a custody dispute must be sacrificed to the perceived greater good of protecting physician-patient relationships, is no less applicable if the relationship is between a psychologist and patient than it is if the relationship is between a physician and patient. The purpose behind both privileges is the same: to protect the confidential nature of the doctor-patient relationship and to encourage the patient to make a full disclosure of symptoms and conditions to those from whom they seek help. See Domako, supra at 354, 475 N.W.2d 30; People v. Adamski, 198 Mich.App. 133, 138, 497 N.W.2d 546 (1993). Thus, the reasoning in Navarre is not uniquely applicable or limited to the physician-patient privilege and can be extended to the psychologist-patient privilege. As the Navarre Court noted, "[a]ll privileges exist at the expense of suppressing valuable evidence." Id. (emphasis added.)

Defendant argues that under MCL 330.1750(2)(a), privileged communications must be disclosed if relevant to an element of the party's claim and that plaintiff's mental and physical health is a specific element in child custody determinations under MCL 722.23(g). We disagree that the best interest factors in MCL 722.23 constitute elements of a claim under MCL 330.1750(2)(a). Rather, MCL 722.23(a)-(l) constitute the factors that the trial court must consider, evaluate and determine in determining the best interest of a child in a child custody dispute. In any event, the Court in Navarre implicitly rejected any argument compelling disclosure of privileged information in a child custody case under MCL 330.1750(2)(a) because it held that a party's privileged medical information was not admissible even as bearing on factor (g) of the best interest factors under the Child Custody Act. This constitutes an implicit rejection of defendant's argument. The Court phrased the issue before it as "whether the Legislature intended to suspend the medical privilege in custody disputes" and clearly answered the question in the negative, stating that "potentially valuable evidence regarding the condition of parties to a custody dispute must be sacrificed to the perceived greater good of protecting physician-patient relationships." Id. at 398, 399, 479 N.W.2d 357. Thus, defendant's argument regarding MCL 330.1750(2)(a) is without merit.

*7 Defendant argues that the trial court failed to enforce MCR 2.314(B)(2) because it permitted plaintiff to testify regarding aspects of his mental and psychological health or conditions. MCR 2 .314(B)(2) provides:

> Unless the court orders otherwise, if a party asserts that the medical information is subject to a privilege and the assertion has the effect of preventing discovery of medical information otherwise discoverable under MCR 2.302(B), the party may not thereafter present or introduce any physical, documentary, or testimonial evidence relating to the party's medical history or mental or physical condition.

In spite of MCR 2.314(B)(2), plaintiff testified at length regarding his mental and psychological health, both present and past. Plaintiff does not argue that his testimony did not constitute "testimonial evidence related to ... [his] medical history or mental or physical condition" under MCR 2.314(B)(2). However, plaintiff asserts that defendant waived this issue by failing to object to plaintiff's evidence regarding his mental and emotional health. To preserve an issue regarding the admission of evidence on appeal, a party must object to the evidence at trial and specify the same ground for objection on appeal that was asserted in the trial court. MRE 103(a)(1); People v. Aldrich, 246 Mich.App. 101, 113, 631 N.W.2d 67 (2001). Not only did defendant fail to object to plaintiff's testimony regarding his mental and emotional health, defendant herself elicited, on direct and cross-examination, a significant amount of testimony regarding plaintiff's mental and emotional health. Defendant has failed to preserve this issue for review.

Because defendant failed to preserve this issue for appeal, this Court's review is for plain error affecting defendant's substantial rights. People v. Carines, 460 Mich. 750, 763, 774, 597 N.W.2d 130 (1999). To avoid forfeiture under the plain error rule, error must have occurred, the error must have been plain (clear or obvious), and the plain error must have affected substantial rights. Id. The third requirement generally requires a showing of prejudice, i.e. that the error affected the outcome of the lower court proceedings. Id.

We find that error occurred in this case because the trial court ruled that plaintiff could assert privilege and then permitted plaintiff to testify at length regarding his mental and psychological health in violation of MCR 2.314(B)(2). MCR 2.314(B)(2) prohibits a party who has asserted privilege from testifying or introducing evidence regarding the party's mental or physical condition "[u]nless the court orders otherwise[.]" In this case, there is no indication that the trial court entered an order changing the effect of privilege under MCR 2.314. Furthermore, because defendant failed to object to such evidence, the trial court did not make any ruling regarding the evidence on the record. We further find that the violation of MCR 2.314(B)(2) was plain and obvious. However, we find that the error did not affect defendant's substantial rights, and defendant was not prejudiced by the admission of this evidence for several reasons.

8 First, contrary to defendant's assertion, the violation of MCR 2.314(B)(2) did not deprive defendant of her Sixth Amendment right to confront and cross-examine plaintiff because defendant did cross-examine plaintiff regarding his mental and psychological health. Furthermore, this case involved a child custody determination, which is a civil matter. The Sixth Amendment applies to "all criminal prosecutions[.]" US Const, Am VI. The Sixth Amendment right to confront and cross-examine witnesses does not apply to civil matters. See In re Brock, 442 Mich. 101, 107–108, 499 N.W.2d 752 (1993).

Second, defendant elicited evidence, on direct and cross-examination, regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological condition. Even before plaintiff gave detailed testimony regarding his attempt to commit suicide when he was eighteen years old, defendant elicited testimony on cross-examination from several defense witnesses regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological condition. For example, defendant asked Thomas Joseph Wood if plaintiff ever told him about his many emotional problems or about having an obsessive compulsive disorder. In addition, defense counsel elicited testimony from Wood that plaintiff told him that he (plaintiff) was in therapy and that he had attempted suicide before. Defense counsel also elicited testimony from Wood that plaintiff took medication for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Defense counsel elicited similar testimony from Aaron Pyciak. In addition, defense counsel also asked plaintiff's sister, Diana Lopez–Negrete, about plaintiff's ADHD and whether he took medication. Defense counsel also attempted to elicit testimony from plaintiff's sister about plaintiff's suicide attempt. When defense counsel asked plaintiff's sister if plaintiff had attempted suicide since his first attempt, she responded in the negative.

Defense counsel also cross-examined plaintiff at length regarding his mental and psychological condition. Counsel for plaintiff elicited testimony from plaintiff that he had ADHD and took medication for the condition, that he had not been diagnosed with obsessive compulsive disorder or any other mental or emotional impairments and that he was fine from a mental health standpoint. She further cross-examined plaintiff regarding his suicide attempt while he was at college in 1998 and other threats of suicide, eliciting testimony that he only threatened suicide one time, that other family members had not threatened suicide and that he was not depressed. Defendant also elicited testimony from plaintiff that on one occasion when he told defendant he should just kill himself, he did not mean it and did not attempt suicide; he stated that defendant was pushing him and being hostile and nasty and that he said something that he did not mean and should not have said because he was upset.

In addition, defendant herself testified regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological condition. Defendant testified regarding plaintiff's suicide attempt in 1998 and stated that plaintiff told her that he had tried to kill himself by jumping out of a window. Defense counsel asked defendant about recent suicide threats or attempts on plaintiff's part, and defendant responded: "He has on several occasions threatened to kill himself by either holding a knife to his throat and saying he was going to end his life, or that he was going to run the car—he had a plan to run the car into a tree." According to defendant, plaintiff's threats of suicide occurred in the fall of 1999, after the couple was evicted from an apartment, twice in October 2006, and once in November 2006. According to defendant, plaintiff's suicide threats would typically be brought on by significant emotional events, such as arguments with plaintiff's mother or family stress. Defendant described plaintiff's alleged suicide threats in detail. For example she stated that on one occasion, plaintiff "grabbed the knife out of the drawer, and ... [h]e held it to his throat, and he said he was just going to end it, and to not try to stop him because if I tried to stop him, then he was really going to do it...." Defendant asserted that plaintiff put the knife back after she called plaintiff's mother, and then plaintiff crumpled to the floor, cried and slept for a day and a half.

*9 In addition to her own testimony, defendant also introduced the testimony of Dr. Sharon Hobbs, a clinical psychologist who, at defendant's request, conducted a psychological evaluation of both plaintiff and defendant and gave detailed testimony regarding her findings.

In light of defendant's introduction of evidence regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological condition, she cannot complain that plaintiff introduced evidence regarding his mental and psychological condition in violation of MCR 2.314(B)(2). Defendant failed to object to plaintiff's testimony regarding his mental and psychological health. If she had, the trial court might have entered an order otherwise modifying the effect of plaintiff's privilege as it was authorized to do under MCR 2.314(B)(2). Furthermore, defendant benefited from the trial court's failure to preclude the admission of evidence regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological health in that she was able to cross-examine plaintiff regarding his mental and psychological condition. Thus, the trial court's error in admitting the privileged evidence gave defendant an opportunity that she would not have otherwise had to explore plaintiff's mental and psychological health. Defendant contributed to the error by cross-examining plaintiff in this regard. A party may not harbor error, to which she consented, as an appellate parachute. In re Gazella, 264 Mich.App. 668, 679, 692 N.W.2d 708 (2005). Because defendant benefited from the trial court's error admitting evidence, she may not be heard to complain on appeal.

Third, evidence from years ago would not have been relevant to plaintiff's current mental and psychological health. Defendant sought to discover evidence regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological health from as far back as 1998. Under Navarre, the testimony of a physician who has not treated a party for years is irrelevant to the party's present condition. Navarre, supra at 399, 479 N.W.2d 357. Furthermore, this Court observed in Navarre that "[t]he privilege ... did not block the presentation of the only evidence of plaintiff's condition." Similarly, in the instant case plaintiff's assertion of privilege did not block the only evidence of plaintiff's medical condition. As indicated above, both parties testified at length about plaintiff's current and past mental state, defendant cross-examined several witnesses regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological condition and Dr. Hobbs conducted a psychological evaluation of plaintiff and testified regarding her findings. Therefore, like in Navarre, plaintiff's assertion of privilege did not block the only evidence of plaintiff's mental and psychological condition.

In sum, plaintiff did not waive his privilege by failing to assert it within 28 days as required by MCR 2.310(C)(2) because the trial court properly gave plaintiff a longer time to assert privilege, as it was authorized to do under MCR 2.310(C)(2). Although the trial court violated MCR 2.314(B)(1) by allowing the admission of evidence of plaintiff's mental and psychological condition at trial when plaintiff had asserted privilege, this unpreserved error did not affect defendant's substantial rights.

B. Best Interest Factors and Custody Ruling

*10 Defendant argues that the trial court's error in its ruling regarding privilege tainted the trial court's determinations regarding the statutory best interest factors, as well as the trial court's determination regarding the existence of an established custodial environment and the trial court's ultimate custody decision.

MCL 722.28 governs child custody disputes on appeal and provides:

> To expedite the resolution of a child custody dispute by prompt and final adjudication, all orders and judgments of the circuit court shall be affirmed on appeal unless the trial judge made findings of fact against the great weight of evidence or committed a palpable abuse of discretion or a clear legal error on a major issue.

This Court applies three standards of review in child custody cases. First, the trial court's findings of fact are reviewed under the "great weight" standard and will be affirmed unless the evidence clearly preponderates in the opposite direction. Fletcher v. Fletcher (Fletcher I), 447 Mich. 871, 877–878, 526 N.W.2d 889 (1994). The trial court need not comment on each item of evidence or argument raised by the parties, but its findings must be sufficient for this Court to determine whether the evidence clearly preponderates in the opposite direction. MacIntyre v. MacIntyre (On Remand), 267 Mich.App. 449, 452, 705 N.W.2d 144 (2005). A trial court's findings regarding the best interest factors are reviewed under the great weight of the evidence standard. Berger v. Berger, 277 Mich.App. 700, 705, 747 N.W. 2 336 (2008). This Court defers to the trial court's determinations of credibility. Id.; Fletcher v. Fletcher (Fletcher II), 229 Mich.App. 19, 25, 581 N.W.2d 11 (1998). Second, this Court reviews questions of law for clear legal error that occurs when a trial court incorrectly chooses, interprets, or applies the law. Berger, supra at 706, 747 N.W.2d 336. Third, discretionary rulings, such as custody decisions, are reviewed for an abuse of discretion. Fletcher I, supra at 879, 526 N.W.2d 889; Shulick v. Richards, 273 Mich.App. 320, 323–325, 729 N.W.2d 533 (2006). The overriding concern is the child's best interests. Fletcher II, supra at 29.

To determine child custody, the trial court must consider the statutory best interest factors in MCL 722.23:

> As used in this act, "best interests of the child" means the sum total of the following factors to be considered, evaluated, and determined by the court:
>
> (a) The love, affection, and other emotional ties existing between the parties involved and the child.
>
> (b) The capacity and disposition of the parties involved to give the child love, affection, and guidance and to continue the education and raising of the child in his or her religion or creed, if any.
>
> (c) The capacity and disposition of the parties involved to provide the child with food, clothing, medical care or other remedial care recognized and permitted under the laws of this state in place of medical care and other material needs.
>
> *11 (d) The length of time the child has lived in a stable, satisfactory environment, and the desirability of maintaining continuity.
>
> (e) The permanence, as a family unit, of the existing or proposed custodial home or homes.
>
> (f) The moral fitness of the parties involved.
>
> (g) The mental and physical health of the parties involved.
>
> (h) The home, school, and community record of the child.
>
> (i) The reasonable preference of the child, if the court considers the child to be of sufficient age to express preference.
> (j) The willingness and ability of each of the parties to facilitate and encourage a close and continuing parent-child relationship between the child and the other parent or the child and the parents.
>
> (k) Domestic violence, regardless of whether the violence was directed against or witnessed by the child.
> (l) Any other factor considered by the court to be relevant to a particular child custody dispute.

The trial court found the parties equal for factors (a), (b), (d), (e) and (h). The trial court found in defendant's favor for factor (c) and found in plaintiff's favor for factors (f), (g), (j), and (k). On appeal, defendant challenges the trial court's findings regarding factors (b), (d), (e), (f), (g), (j) and (k).

The trial court found the parties equal with respect to factor (b), the parties' capacity and disposition to give the child love, affection, and guidance and to continue the education and raising of the child in his or her religion. Defendant argues that the trial court should have found in her favor regarding this factor and that she raised questions regarding plaintiff's capacity to care for and guide the minor child because of his mental health issues. Defendant claims that plaintiff did not have the capacity to care for the minor child on a daily basis because of his ADHD and obsessive compulsive issues and because of his inability to focus. There was evidence that plaintiff had ADHD and obsessive compulsive issues. However, the evidence indicates that these conditions did not render plaintiff incapable of providing the minor child with love, affection and guidance. Defendant also argues that the trial court's findings under factor (c) that plaintiff was unable or unwilling to hold down a job and was completely financially dependent upon his parents are inconsistent with the trial court's conclusion that plaintiff was able to give the minor child love, affection and guidance under factor (b). We disagree. Factors (b) and (c) address different parental abilities. Factor (b) addresses the ability to provide the child with love, affection and guidance, while factor (c) addresses the ability to provide the child with basic material things, such as food, clothing and medical care. The trial court had "concerns about Plaintiff's ability to provide the child with the necessities of life without continued support from his parents" and found that factor (c) favored defendant. The trial court's findings regarding factor (c) were accurate and not against the great weight of the evidence. However, plaintiff's financial dependence on his parents and lack of employment do not affect plaintiff's ability to give the child love, affection and guidance. Therefore, defendant's argument in this regard is without merit. The trial court's finding regarding factor (b) was not against the great weight of the evidence.

*12 The trial court also found plaintiff and defendant equal with respect to factor (d), the length of time the child has lived in a stable environment. According to defendant, she should have been favored under this factor. The trial court found that plaintiff lived in an apartment and planned to conduct parenting time at his parents' home and that plaintiff's "family is a stable and nurturing one." The trial court also found that "[d]efendant also has an appropriate home with stability." Defendant testified regarding dysfunction and instability within plaintiff's family, asserting that on one occasion plaintiff threatened to kill his mother and burn her house down, that plaintiff's parents had a verbal and physical altercation one Thanksgiving over finances, that "[t]here was a lot of marital discord as far as yelling and arguing between Dr. and Mrs. Lopez Negrete[,]" that typical conversations in the household included "a significant amount of yelling and swearing in both English and in Spanish[,]" and that the family did not sit down to dinner together every night. According to plaintiff, the family relationships were "very contentious" and there was a lot of tension in the household. The trial court found defendant's testimony in this regard incredible, stating "that Defendant's criticisms of ... [plaintiff's] parents and their home are completely without merit and motivated by her anger issue." Whether defendant's claims regarding the alleged instability of plaintiff's family were believable was a credibility determination for the trial court. It is the function of the factfinder to determine the weight of the evidence and credibility of witnesses; this Court should not interfere with that function. People v. Wolfe, 440 Mich. 508, 514–515, 489 N.W.2d 748 (1992), amended 441 Mich. 1201, 489 N.W.2d 748 (1992).

Defendant argues that the focus under factor (d) is on the relationship between the minor child and her parents, not the relationship with the minor child and her grandparents. Defendant suggests that the trial court improperly recognized the child's grandparents as de facto custodians or caretakers for the minor child. This suggestion is simply not supported by the record. The trial court's ruling did not give plaintiff's parents custody of the minor child, and the trial court's findings regarding factor (d) do not, as defendant suggests, focus on the grandparents as the caretakers of the minor child, but rather focus on the environment in which plaintiff intended to conduct his parenting time with the minor child. While there was evidence that plaintiff's parents were involved with helping plaintiff care for the minor child, there was ample evidence that plaintiff cared for the minor child. We reject defendant's argument that the trial court awarded de facto custody to plaintiff's parents.

The trial court also found the parties equal with respect to factor (e), the permanence, as a family unit, of the existing or proposed custodial homes. Regarding factor (e), the trial court found that "[p]laintiff's proposed family unit will consist of himself and the child, living at his parents' home" and that "[d]efendant's proposed family unit will be her and the child at her home." Factors (d) and (e) have a degree of overlap, but "the focus of factor e is the child's prospects for a stable family environment." Ireland v. Smith, 451 Mich. 457, 465, 547 N.W.2d 686 (1996). The trial court should examine any "potential disruptions" to the minor's environment, such as frequent moves to unfamiliar settings, a succession of persons residing in the home, or live-in romantic companions for the custodial parent. Id. at 465 n. 9, 547 N.W.2d 686. The only potential disruption to plaintiff's parents' home serving as the custodial home concerns plaintiff's statements that he did not intend to conduct his parenting time at his parents for the rest of his life and that he hoped to buy his own house at some point. According to plaintiff, parenting time at his parents' home was desirable because it was convenient, the home was nice, it was economically feasible and his parents desired to see their granddaughter. In addition, it was a logical place to conduct parenting time because the location where he exercised his parenting time was an issue for defendant. At the time of trial, plaintiff had completed law school but had not passed the bar examination and was not employed. Based on the evidence regarding plaintiff's parents' financial support of him and his family, it is clear that plaintiff did not have immediate plans to purchase a home and he said as much on the record. Thus, there were no definite or immediate plans to change the location where he exercised his parenting time with the minor child. Furthermore, based on the evidence, there is every indication that plaintiff's parents would be willing to host plaintiff and their granddaughter during his custody times as long as necessary and that this was a stable environment for the child. Plaintiff's parents' conduct demonstrates that they are committed to hosting plaintiff and their granddaughter; they have created a safe environment for her in their home, and the home has a bedroom for her with a child's bed and toys. In Ireland, the Supreme Court ruled that changes in a young adult parent's residency, as a result of completing college, do not disqualify the parent for custody under factor (e), but cannot be ignored. Id. at 465, 547 N.W.2d 686. Given the lack of specificity regarding when plaintiff intends to purchase his own home, coupled with his financial dependence on his parents, the trial court's determination of this factor was not against the great weight of the evidence.

13 Defendant also argues that the trial court erred in finding in favor of plaintiff under factor (f), the moral fitness of the parties involved. This factor relates to the parties' moral fitness as a parent. Fletcher I, supra at 886–887, 526 N.W.2d 889. Conduct relevant to this factor includes "verbal abuse, drinking problems, driving record, physical or sexual abuse of children, and other illegal or offensive behaviors." Id. at 887 n. 6, 526 N.W.2d 889. The trial court found in favor of plaintiff for this factor based on defendant's lack of credibility. In so finding, the trial court stated: "This Court rarely will made a specific finding under this factor that a parent's lack of credibility impacts their moral fitness to parent. However, such a finding is warranted here." Defendant again takes issue with the trial court's conclusions regarding the parties' credibility, arguing that the trial court erred in finding her claims regarding domestic violence, incidents in which the minor child witnessed plaintiff masturbating to pornography on a computer, and plaintiff's alleged recent suicide threats to be incredible. She claims that evidence that was precluded because of the trial court's improper privilege ruling would have corroborated her testimony regarding these incidents and that the trial court's credibility determinations were made without the benefit of crucial evidence that was improperly excluded. Despite the trial court's privilege ruling, both parties introduced evidence regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological condition. Thus, the privilege did not block the presentation of the only evidence of plaintiff's condition. See Navarre, supra at 399, 479 N.W.2d 357. Furthermore, some of the medical evidence sought by defendant was from 1998; the testimony of a physician who has not treated a party for years is irrelevant to the party's present condition. Id. In any event, the trial court specifically noted that it found in plaintiff's favor for this factor based on defendant's lack of credibility. It is the function of the factfinder to determine the weight of the evidence and credibility of witnesses. Wolfe, supra at 514–515, 489 N.W.2d 748. Therefore, defendant's arguments regarding the trial court's findings with respect to factor (f) are unavailing. The findings were not against the great weight of the evidence.

Defendant also asserts that the trial court improperly found in plaintiff's favor with respect to factor (g), the parties' mental and physical health. In finding in favor of plaintiff regarding this factor, the trial court found that "both parties have issues ... regarding mental health," but concluded that defendant's anger issue, which the court observed "had the potential to undermine the father/daughter relationship and do serious psychological damage to the child[,]" was more of a concern than plaintiff's ADHD, obsessive personality features, indecision and one documented suicide attempt many years before. The trial court noted that defendant's allegations regarding plaintiff's recent suicide thoughts or attempts were uncorroborated. Still, the trial court considered plaintiff's history and concluded "that it does not present a significant risk or a barrier to effective parenting." Regarding defendant's anger, the trial court noted that "Dr. Hobbs asserts that the overarching issue for Defendant is her anger" and that "Dr. Hobbs expressed concern that Defendant is becoming consumed by her anger to the point where 'the air he [plaintiff] breathes is toxic.' "

14 Despite the trial court's ruling on the record that plaintiff's medical, psychological and psychiatric records were privileged, a great deal of evidence regarding plaintiff's mental and psychological health was admitted at trial. Plaintiff himself testified that he has had ADHD since he was very young and that he took medication for the condition and received accommodations for his ADHD both in college and in law school. Plaintiff also testified regarding his alleged suicide attempt, which occurred in 1998 when he was 18 years old and attending Loyola College. Plaintiff denied that he attempted suicide, stating that he did not think he was really attempting to take his life, but acknowledging that he was very sad and upset at the time because he was lonely, had gotten mugged, had conflicts with his roommate and other men on his floor, and his grandmother was going to die. According to plaintiff:

> I was very upset, and I had—a couple of my friends were around, and I said to them, you know, I just can't take it anymore. I'm under a lot of stress. I'm just going to jump out the damn window, and I was like—and I was crying at this point, and they were worried about me. One of the guys was Moses Ortiz ... and the other guy, his name was Pete ... and we just sat down and talked, and I mean I told them like how I felt, and how I felt like crap, and these guys were pretty nice guys. We were good friends and they basically talked me out of it. You know, I never got outside of a building. I was never on a ledge. I was never in a place that, you know, I was about to jump off a precipice of any > kind. I was just very upset. I really thought about doing it. It really hurt, but I never really took serious action towards actually doing it. I mean I got towards the window, and that's probably why they took me to the hospital, just in case, but I never actually got on any edge of anything.

Plaintiff stated that after one day of hospitalization, he was released into the care of his psychologist and that he quit attending Loyola and received regular counseling. He asserted that at the time of the incident, he was only 18 years old, and it "was just a one time incident that, you know, I really regret, but it's not something that, you know, is the end all and be all of who I am." Plaintiff also testified that he had been going to counseling because of the divorce.

Furthermore, as explained previously, defendant also testified regarding plaintiff's past suicide attempt and several more recent suicide threats made by plaintiff and described in detail how plaintiff allegedly stated that he would kill himself. In addition, Dr. Hobbs performed psychological evaluations of both plaintiff and defendant and testified regarding her findings. Dr. Hobbs testified that neither plaintiff nor defendant had any "red flags" and that she did not think either was incompetent or needed to be institutionalized. She testified that plaintiff admitted that he had suicidal ideations ten years ago. She also testified that plaintiff had some obsessive compulsive features to his personality and an indecisiveness that made it difficult for him to commit to answers on the psychological tests. Dr. Hobbs testified that this behavior would create a problem in co-parenting, but that just because a person has an obsessive compulsive disorder does not mean that they cannot effectively parent. Dr. Hobbs also testified that plaintiff had self-esteem issues.

*15 Dr. Hobbs also testified regarding her psychological evaluation of defendant. According to Dr. Hobbs, defendant had problems with anger and "her distaste for her husband negates his being in a sense." She further stated that defendant was "so consumed with her negativity and her anger at her husband that the air he breathes is toxic." Dr. Hobbs also stated that defendant's anger toward plaintiff could lead to a situation called parental alienation, in which a child will not acknowledge a single positive thing about the other parent.

The trial court's conclusion that factor (g) favored plaintiff was not against the great weight of the evidence, and the trial court's finding that defendant had an anger issue and that her anger had the potential to undermine plaintiff's relationship with the minor child was supported by Dr. Hobbs' testimony. Furthermore, while there was evidence that both plaintiff and defendant had mental health issues, the trial court's conclusion that defendant's anger problem was more of a concern than plaintiff's mental health issues was proper because determinations regarding the weight of the evidence are properly left to the trial court. Wolfe, supra at 514–515, 489 N.W.2d 748. The trial court may give the competent evidence the weight it deems appropriate.

Plaintiff also contends that the trial court erred in finding in plaintiff's favor under factor (j), "[t]he willingness and ability of each of the parties to facilitate and encourage a close and continuing parent-child relationship between the child and the other parent[.]" The trial court found that "[d]efendant's anger issue has manifested into a deliberate attempt to sabotage Plaintiff's relationship with the child" and that "[d]efendant did everything possible to freeze [plaintiff] out of his child's life[.]" The trial court further found:

> [Defendant's conduct toward plaintiff] has already had a harmful effect on the child. There has been testimony as to the child's reserved demeanor at exchanges: she waits until Defendant leaves until she becomes joyful with Plaintiff. She apparently has learned that her mother disapproves of any shows of affection toward her father. How very sad.
> The Court finds that Defendant is engaged in a deliberate effort to undermine Plaintiff's relationship with the child. This is a manifestation of Dr. Hobbs' findings regarding Defendant's anger issue toward Plaintiff, whereby the [sic] "the air he breathes is toxic."
>
> With regard to Plaintiff, the Court does not find any issues regarding his fostering of the child's relationship with Defendant.
>
> Therefore, the Court finds an intentional effort to undermine Plaintiff's role as a father. As such, this factor favors Plaintiff, and strongly so. Further, this is an important factor in the overall analysis.

There was evidence that defendant did not facilitate a continuing relationship between plaintiff and the minor child. For example, plaintiff testified that defendant prevented or attempted to prevent him from having parenting time on several occasions. According to plaintiff, defendant would ask for the address and telephone number of the location at which he was exercising his parenting time when she already knew that information. He also testified that when the parties first separated, defendant refused more than 15 requests that he made to see the minor child. Plaintiff also stated that defendant refused to tell her the location for exchanging custody of the minor child. In addition, plaintiff's mother testified that during one custody transfer, she went with plaintiff to pick up the minor child from defendant, but defendant refused to transfer the minor child, saying that she did not know who plaintiff's mother was and asking for plaintiff's mother's identification. There was also evidence that defendant attempted to interfere with or preclude plaintiff's involvement with medical care and treatment for the minor child.

16 Defendant takes issue with the fact that the trial court emphasized factor (j) above the rest. However, "the statutory best interest factors need not be given equal weight. Neither a trial court in making a child custody decision nor this Court in reviewing such a decision must mathematically assess equal weight to each of the statutory factors." McCain v. McCain, 229 Mich.App. 123, 131, 580 N.W.2d 485 (1998). The controlling consideration in child custody determinations is the best interest of the child. MCL 722.25(1); Lombardo v. Lombard, 202 Mich.App. 151, 159–160, 507 N.W.2d 788 (1993). Therefore, it was not error for the trial court to give factor (j) important, or extra, consideration in the overall analysis of best interest factors.

Defendant's remaining argument with respect to factor (j) concerns her allegations that she was improperly denied the opportunity to prove that plaintiff was mentally unstable and a bad influence and possibly a danger to the minor child. Once again, this involves a credibility determination, which was properly for the trial court to decide. For the same reasons as those stated previously, defendant's arguments in this regard are not persuasive.

Defendant also contends that the trial court improperly found in plaintiff's favor with respect to factor (k), domestic violence. The trial court found that there was evidence to support several incidents of domestic violence by defendant against plaintiff, and the record supports the trial court's conclusion in this regard. Two of plaintiff and defendant's friends testified regarding defendant's acts of violence against plaintiff. Plaintiff himself testified that defendant would knee or punch him in the testicles if she wanted something and that she hit him with a fire poker, a brass paper weight and a belt, and threatened him with a knife. Defendant denied abusing plaintiff and asserted that plaintiff physically assaulted her on several occasions. She described one occasion in May or June 2005, when plaintiff became angry at her and threw a humidifier against the wall and then pushed her down the stairs. She further stated that plaintiff pushed her down the stairs again about a year later. Defendant also testified that after the parties separated, plaintiff became angry and again threw a humidifier and pushed her out of the way. Although both parties each denied physically abusing the other, the trial court found "[p]laintiff's version much more credible" and concluded that this factor favored plaintiff. Once again, this factor involved an issue of credibility, and it is the function of the factfinder to determine the credibility of witnesses. Wolfe, supra at 514–515, 489 N.W.2d 748. The trial court's finding regarding this factor was not against the great weight of the evidence.

In sum, the trial court's factual findings were not against the great weight of the evidence. Contrary to defendant's argument, the trial court's findings regarding the best interest factors were not tainted by the trial court's privilege ruling. Furthermore, the trial court's decision awarding sole legal custody of the minor child to plaintiff was not an abuse of discretion. In awarding legal custody, the trial court noted that it prefers to award joint legal custody, but could not do so in this case because of the parties' inability to cooperate, which the court stated was "caused primarily by Defendant's anger issues." The trial court stated that it would like to see defendant "remediate her problem so that the parties could effectively co-parent. Should that occur, Defendant may petition the Court to request joint legal custody." If the parties are unable to cooperate, joint custody is not an option. Wright v. Wright, 279 Mich.App. 291, 299–300, 761 N.W.2d 443 (2008). The trial court's finding that defendant had an anger issue was supported by the evidence. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding sole legal custody to plaintiff.

C. Disqualification of the Trial Judge

17 Defendant argues that further proceedings in this case should be decided by a different trial judge because the trial judge has formed an opinion regarding defendant and can no longer impartially adjudicate this divorce matter.

The proper way to raise a concern regarding alleged bias on the part of a trial judge is by a motion in the trial court pursuant to MCR 2.003, and not by attacks in an appellate brief. Bracco v. Michigan Tech Univ., 231 Mich.App. 578, 601 n. 16, 588 N.W.2d 467 (1998). A party who does not move to disqualify the judge in the trial court has not preserved the issue for appellate review. MCR 2 .003; In re Schmeltzer, 175 Mich.App. 666, 673, 438 N.W.2d 866 (1989). Defendant does not dispute that she did not move to disqualify the trial judge under MCR 2.003, but urges this Court to rule that further decisions regarding the parties' divorce be decided by a different judge under this Court's authority to "enter any judgment or order or grant further or different relief as the case may require" pursuant to MCR 7.216(A)(7).

MCR 2.003(B)(1) provides that a judge is disqualified when "[t]he judge is personally biased or prejudiced for or against a party or attorney." Generally, a trial judge is not disqualified absent a showing of actual bias or prejudice. Gates v. Gates, 256 Mich.App. 420, 440, 664 N.W.2d 231 (2003). "[J]udicial rulings, in and of themselves, almost never constitute a valid basis for a motion alleging bias, unless the judicial opinion displays a " 'deep-seated favoritism or antagonism that would make fair judgment impossible' " and overcomes a heavy presumption of judicial impartiality." Armstrong v. Ypsilanti Charter Twp., 248 Mich.App. 573, 597, 640 N.W.2d 321 (2001).

A ruling disqualifying the trial judge from making further decisions regarding this case is not warranted. The bases for defendant's claims that the trial judge must be disqualified are the trial court's "fundamental privilege error" and the trial court's inequitable division of debt, specifically the assignment of credit card debt to defendant. Even though the trial court's ruling regarding the admission of evidence following plaintiff's assertion of privilege was technically erroneous, this error benefited defendant as much as plaintiff in that it allowed defendant to explore defendant's mental and psychological condition. In addition, for reasons that will be explained more fully in this opinion infra, the trial court's division of debt was not inequitable, and the trial court did not err in ordering the parties to each repay their own debt. Contrary to defendant's contention, nothing in the record indicates that the trial court was fundamentally predisposed against defendant or actually biased or prejudiced against defendant. It is true that there was a great deal of conflicting testimony and that the trial court repeatedly resolved credibility issues in plaintiff's favor and against defendant. However, it is the function of the trial court to make credibility determinations. Berger, supra at 705, 747 N.W.2d 336. It is also true that the trial court used harsh language regarding defendant's credibility, stating that that it had "caught [defendant] in several lies in the course of the trial [,]" "that Defendant lied[,]" that "[t]he list of [defendant's] lies is long indeed[,]" and that "[d]efendant has repeatedly lied in her testimony." However, these opinions and conclusions were formed over the course of trial on the basis of facts introduced in evidence or events that occurred during trial and do not constitute a basis for disqualification. People v. Wells, 238 Mich.App. 383, 391, 605 N.W.2d 374 (1999). Because there is no indication in the trial court's findings or rulings that the trial judge was actually biased or prejudiced against defendant, there is no basis to disqualify the trial court from hearing further matters in this case.

D. Trial Court's Ruling Regarding Division of Debt

*18 Defendant argues that the trial court erred in ordering her to be solely responsible for debt on credit cards in her name. On appeal from a property division in a divorce action, an appellate court must first review the trial court's findings of fact for clear error. Berger, supra at 717, 747 N.W.2d 336. A finding is clearly erroneous if, after a review of the entire record, the court is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake was made. Id. The trial court's factual findings are accorded substantial deference. Id.; MCR 2.613(C). If the trial court's findings of fact are upheld, the appellate court must then decide whether the trial court's dispositional ruling was fair and equitable in light of those facts, and it will affirm the trial court's discretionary ruling unless it is left with the firm conviction that the division was inequitable. Berger, supra at 717–718, 747 N.W.2d 336.

The trial court made the following ruling regarding the parties' debt:

> With regard to any other debt, although there was some testimony about credit card debt at an earlier time period of the marriage, there was no specific presentation regarding current debts along with a rationale for division. Rather, each had sources of income coming into the household and each contributed to expenses. As far as the Court understands there is no debt in both of the parties' names. Therefore, the Court will not divide debt, but merely order that each party is responsible for whatever debts are in their respective names.

In addition, the trial court ordered that each party was responsible to repay any monies loaned to the couple by their parents.

Defendant argues that the trial court erred in making her solely responsible to pay off credit cards in her name because she used the credit cards to support the parties and plaintiff's education. She testified that at the time of trial, there was a $30,000 balance on four credit cards that were in her name. She asserted that the cards were used to pay family expenses. According to plaintiff, defendant had about $40,000 in credit card debt when the parties married. Plaintiff further testified that his parents primarily paid the parties' living expenses after they were married. In addition, plaintiff's mother testified that she and plaintiff's father, a neurosurgeon, assisted plaintiff and defendant financially by giving them $24,000 for a down payment for a home, $12,000 to $15,000 for appliances and remodeling, and $10,000 to $12,000 for furniture. Furthermore, plaintiff's mother testified that she and plaintiff's father paid for plaintiff's law school out of an educational fund they established and funded for him.

In addition, there was also evidence that during the marriage, plaintiff had a credit card in his name for which his parents were paying the bill. Plaintiff's mother guessed that she and plaintiff's father had paid $100,000 total for plaintiff's credit card purchases. Some of the charges to plaintiff's credit card included charges to Bed, Bath and Beyond, Gymboree (a children's clothing store), and restaurants. Defendant acknowledged that plaintiff's parents gave the parties funds in the amount of $165,000 over the course of the parties' relationship. However, she claimed that less than ten per cent of plaintiff's credit card purchases were for household use and that 90 percent of his credit card purchases were personal in nature. Plaintiff's mother testified that while plaintiff had not signed a promissory note, she reasonably expected plaintiff to repay the money and thought that he had a moral obligation to do so. Plaintiff testified that the financial assistance provided by his parents was not a gift and that he and defendant had discussions regarding repaying his parents during the marriage and that defendant agreed that the couple should repay plaintiff's parents when they had more money. Defendant denied such conversations, however, claiming that plaintiff said he deserved the money his parents gave them and that he was "going to ride this until I can't ride it any longer, so just leave it alone." Defendant also stated that plaintiff's parents never made any demand upon plaintiff and defendant to repay any money. According to defendant, the first time there was any suggestion that the monies provided by plaintiff's parents was a loan rather than a gift was after plaintiff filed for divorce.

*19 The effect of the trial court's ruling ordering each party to pay any debts in their name, according to plaintiff, is that she was burdened with credit card debt that was marital debt and furthermore, that the trial court inequitably placed the greater debt burden on her. The trial court has the power to make credibility determinations regarding disputed joint debts, determine whether debts are joint debts or the individual responsibility of one party, and assign the debt to the party who incurred it. See Lesko v. Lesko, 184 Mich.App. 395, 401, 457 N.W.2d 695 (1990), overruled on other grounds sub nom 194 Mich.App. 284, 486 N.W.2d 116 (1992). In this case, the trial court appears to have rejected defendant's contention that she used the credit cards to support the parties and pay for plaintiff's education. To the extent that the evidence conflicted regarding the source of defendant's credit card debt, the issue involves a credibility contest between the parties, and this Court must defer to the trial court's determinations regarding witness credibility. Johnson v. Johnson, 276 Mich.App. 1, 11, 739 N.W.2d 877 (2007). In light of the conflicting evidence, this Court must not substitute its judgment for that of the trial court. Id.

Furthermore, the trial court ordered each party to repay any debts to their respective parents. There was evidence that plaintiff's parents paid $100,000 for a credit card in plaintiff's name, and some of the purchases on this card were made from stores like Bed, Bath and Beyond, Gymboree and restaurants and certainly sound like household expenses. There was also evidence that defendant's parents had gifted or loaned money to the parties, but the amount of money was not nearly as great as the money provided to the parties by plaintiff's parents. Although we concur with the trial court's assessment that it is questionable whether plaintiff would ever repay his parents, there was evidence that plaintiff's parents expected to be repaid. The amount of money provided by plaintiff's parents was more than three times the amount of defendant's credit card debt. Therefore, contrary to defendant's argument on appeal, the trial court's division of debt was arguably even more favorable to defendant than plaintiff. In sum, the trial court's division of debt was not inequitable, and it was not inequitable for defendant to be charged with paying off credit cards in her name.

In support of her argument on appeal, defendant has attached to her appellate brief numerous pages of credit card account information, apparently to bolster her argument that the debt accumulated on her credit card during the marriage was, at least in part, marital debt. This credit card account information was not part of the lower court record. This Court is limited on appeal to reviewing only the trial court record, MCR 7.210(A), and a party may not enlarge the record on appeal. People v. Williams, 241 Mich.App. 519, 524 n. 1, 616 N.W.2d 710 (2000). Accordingly, we decline to consider defendant's evidence regarding her credit card account.

III. Conclusion

*20 In sum, for all the reasons articulated in this opinion, we affirm the judgment of divorce.

Opinion

PER CURIAM.

*1 Plaintiff appeals as of right a judgment of no cause of action entered after a bench trial on her discrimination claim and claim for writ of superintending control. We affirm the judgment on plaintiff's claim for superintending control, vacate the judgment on her discrimination claim, and remand for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

If the merits of plaintiff's case were the only issue on appeal, we would have no difficulty affirming the trial court's judgment of no cause of action. The trial court's decision was supported by the evidence presented during the bench trial, and the trial court did not misapply the law. However, that is not the only issue on appeal. Instead, plaintiff has also raised a very interesting issue regarding the application of MCR 2.312(A). In our view, the plain language of that court rule allowed plaintiff to serve the request for admission when she did. By operation of the rule, defendant's failure to answer or object to the request deemed all the matters admitted, which could have caused the trial court to reach a different conclusion on the merits of plaintiff's discrimination claim.[1] Therefore, for the reasons explained more fully below, we vacate the trial court's judgment on plaintiff's discrimination claim.

MCR 2.312(A) provides in pertinent part that,

Within the time for completion of discovery, a party may serve on another party a written request for the admission of the truth of a matter within the scope of MCR 2.302(B) stated in the request that relates to statements or opinions of fact or the application of law to fact, including the genuineness of documents described in the request. [Emphasis added.]

MCR 2.312(B)(1) then provides that in the normal course the responding party has 28 days in which to answer or object (or both) to the request.

The trial court's decision seemed to rest exclusively on its interpretation of MCR 2.312(A), which is a legal issue subject to de novo review. Kmie v. Smith, 269 Mich.App 217, 220; 711 NW2d 84 (2005). We use the canons of statutory construction when interpreting court rules, Hyslop v. Wojjusik, 252 Mich.App 500, 505; 652 NW2d 517 (2002), so our duty is to apply the plain and unambiguous language of the court rule. Yudashkin v. Linzmeyer, 247 Mich.App 642, 649; 637 NW2d 257 (2001). The trial court concluded that plaintiff had to serve the request to admit so as to allow defendant time to respond before discovery closed. However, MCR 2.312(A) clearly states that "within the time set for completion of discovery", ie., before the discovery cut-off date, a party may serve requests for admissions on another party. There are no exceptions, caveats, or limitations to the language within subrule A. Thus, plaintiff properly served the request to admit because service was accomplished before the discovery completion date.

Although the 28 day deadline for responding to the request came after the discovery completion date, "[a] request for admission is not a typical discovery device ... because the purpose 'is not to discover facts but rather to establish some of the material facts in a case without the necessity of formal proof at trial....' " Radtke v. Miller, Canfield, Paddock & Stone, 453 Mich. 413, 420 n 6; 551 NW2d 698 (1996). As this is the primary tool for a request for admission,[2] it could be served anytime up to the end of discovery, for the forthcoming responses would not be providing additional information, but only objections, admissions or denials with explanation. MCR 2.312(B)(1)-(4). And, if motions are filed over the requests or responses, MCR 2.312(D) specifically indicates that the court may resolve the issue at a pretrial conference or at any other time before trial. Hence, the court rule contemplates that issues surrounding the requests or responses will need to be addressed after the close of discovery, ie., at a pretrial conference or at any other time before trial.

*2 Pursuant to this analysis, defendant had an obligation to respond to plaintiff's properly served request for admissions. By failing to do so "the matters in the request are deemed admitted," Medbury v. Walsh, 190 Mich.App 554, 556; 476 NW2d 470 (1991), "unless the trial court, on motion, permits withdrawal or amendment for good cause shown." Employers Mutual Casualty Co v. Petroleum Equip Inc, 190 Mich.App 57, 62; 475 NW2d 418 (1991). Defendant never filed anything that could be amended, and even if it did, it never moved the trial court to do so.[3] Accordingly, all the matters within plaintiff's request for admissions should have been deemed admitted.

Accepting these matters as admitted would not necessarily result in a different decision by the trial court on the merits of plaintiff's discrimination claim. Most of the requests establish procedural type facts that would likely have no bearing on a decision on the merits, except perhaps for the matters requested to be admitted in numbers nine and twelve. Nevertheless, the trial court is the proper forum to make that initial decision. Accordingly, we vacate in part the trial court's judgment and remand for further proceedings on plaintiff's discrimination claim.

Affirmed in part, vacated in part, and remanded. We do not retain jurisdiction.

SMOLENSKI, J. (concurring in part and dissenting in part). In this hiring dispute, plaintiff appeals as of right from the entry of judgment in favor of defendant after a bench trial.

I. Facts and Procedural History

In August 2002, plaintiff applied for a police officer position with the Benton Harbor Police Department (the Department). At the time plaintiff applied, the Department was operating under a hiring policy adopted in February 1998. The hiring policy required applicants to submit a completed application form and achieve a 70 percent or higher score on a written examination, after which they were required to submit to a background check. Those who passed the background check were invited for an oral interview. Applicants who passed the oral interview were then placed on an eligibility list. The applicants on the list were ranked by their combined written examination and oral interview scores. After the Civil Service Board certified the list, and a position that the city decided to fill became available, the Department had to make an offer of employment to the first person on the eligibility list. However, the offer was conditional upon the candidate receiving police certification from the Michigan Law Enforcement Officers Training Council (MLEOTC) and passing a physical examination, a psychological evaluation, a drug test, and vision and hearing tests. Subsequent vacancies were to be filled by the remaining candidates on the eligibility list. Once an eligibility list was certified, it remained in effect for two years or until there were no more candidates on the list.

Under the hiring policy, if a candidate was not certified by the MLEOTC, the Department was required to send the candidate to the first available MLEOTC Regional Police academy at the Department's expense. While the candidate attended the academy, the Department paid the candidate a training wage and provided benefits. Milton Agay, the former Public Safety Director for Benton Harbor, testified that the policy was designed to give community members the opportunity to become Benton Harbor police officers, and it specifically targeted women and minorities who could not afford to be certified.

*3 Plaintiff passed the written examination, the oral interview and the background check. Based on her combined written and oral scores, she was placed on the eligibility list. She was ranked number four. The Department submitted the list to the Civil Service Commission for certification in October 2002. The Civil Service Commission certified the list. The first two candidates on the list, who had their certifications, were hired. The next candidate on the eligibility list, who was also certified, was offered a job but failed one of the examinations and the offer was withdrawn. At this point, plaintiff was the only remaining candidate on the eligibility list.

The Department, however, never contacted her. In December 2002, plaintiff contacted the chief of police to discuss attending the police academy. His secretary informed plaintiff that she would need to speak to the city personnel director, who told plaintiff that the city was no longer sending people to the police academy. When plaintiff complained that the city was not following the hiring policy, the city personnel director told her that the decision came directly from the police chief. He also told plaintiff that the city's decision was based on the fact that the city had sent too many people to the police academy who then left for better jobs. At trial, the police chief testified that another reason for the policy change was that it cost too much money to send people to the academy and, if the city hired certified candidates, they would be on the job much more quickly.

In August 2004, plaintiff sued the City of Benton Harbor. In her complaint, plaintiff alleged that the Department refused to hire based on her gender or age in violation of the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act (ELCRA), MCL 37.2101 et seq., and, in a separate count, petitioned the trial court to exercise its superintending control to order defendant to place her at the top of the hiring list. After a bench trial, the court determined that plaintiff failed to state a cause of action for either of her claims.

This appeal followed.

II. Admissions

Plaintiff first argues that the trial court erred when it refused to admit into evidence a request for admissions that plaintiff had served on defendant prior to the close of discovery, but that defendant had not answered. Because I believe plaintiff's request was untimely, I conclude that it was within the trial court's discretion to refuse to consider it as evidence. Therefore, I must respectfully dissent from the majority opinion on this issue.

Whether the trial court properly interpreted the applicable court rules is a question of law that this Court reviews de novo. CAM Construction v. Lake Edgewood Condo Assoc, 465 Mich. 549, 553; 640 NW2d 256 (2002). When construing a court rule, this Court applies the same legal principles that govern the construction and application of statutes. People v. Phillips, 468 Mich. 583, 589; 663 NW2d 463 (2003). Accordingly, when the language of the court rule is unambiguous, this Court will enforce it as written, without further judicial construction or interpretation. Grievance Administrator v. Underwood, 462 Mich. 188, 194; 612 NW2d 116 (2000).

*4 Under MCR 2.312(A), a party may, within the time for completion of discovery, "serve on another party a written request for the admission of the truth of a matter ... stated in the request that relates to statements or opinions of fact or the application of law to fact, including the genuineness of documents described in the request." A party served with a request to admit must normally object to the request or answer it in writing within 28 days of being served or the request is deemed admitted. MCR 2.312(B)(1). However, it is within the discretion of the trial court to shorten or lengthen the time within which a party is required to answer a request to admit. Id.

In the present case, plaintiff served defendant with a request to admit on May 11, 2005. Hence, defendant would normally have had to object or answer the request by June 8, 2005. Defendant elected not to respond to the request. At the bench trial, plaintiff moved for the admission of the request to admit. Defendant responded by arguing that it was not required to answer because the request was served less than 28 days before the close of discovery and, therefore, was untimely. Plaintiff responded that MCR 2.312(A) only required the requesting party to serve the request before the close of discovery. It did not require the requesting party to leave adequate time for the served party to answer within the time set for discovery. The trial court disagreed and concluded that the request was untimely. Therefore, it refused to admit the request for admissions into evidence.

Admissions under MCR 2.312 are " 'formal concessions in the pleadings in the case or stipulations by a party or its counsel that have the effect of withdrawing a fact from issue and dispensing wholly with the need for proof of the fact.' " Radtke v. Miller, Canfield, Paddock & Stone, 453 Mich. 413, 420; 551 NW2d 698 (1996), quoting 2 McCormick, Evidence (4th ed), § 254, p 142. Because a request to admit does not seek to discover a fact or opinion that is unknown to the requesting party, it is not, in a technical sense, a discovery procedure. See Gluck v. Ansett Australia, Ltd., 204 FRD 217, 218-219 (D DC, 2001) (noting that there was a split of opinion within the federal courts as to whether a request to admit was a discovery procedure subject to the discovery deadline under the federal rules of procedure). However, because MCR 2.312 serves the purpose of narrowing the disputed factual issues, when used properly, it serves as a tool to limit and define the areas that are subject to discovery. In this sense, it is a discovery tool. This is consistent with the placement of MCR 2.312 in the subchapter of the court rules dedicated to discovery. In addition, by its own terms, MCR 2.312 is limited to matters within the scope of discovery, as provided by MCR 2.302(B), and must be served "[w]ithin the time for completion of discovery...." See MCR 2.312(A). Finally, treating a request to admit as a discovery procedure subject to the discovery deadline is consistent with the "just, speedy, and economical determination of every action...." MCR 1.105; see also Gluck, supra at 219. For these reasons, I conclude that MCR 2.312 is, for purposes of the court rules, a discovery procedure subject to the general rules applicable to discovery, including MCR 2.301(A), which requires the trial court to issue an order setting the time for the completion of discovery under MCR 2.401(B)(2)(a). Because discovery must be completed by the date established by the scheduling order, see MCR 2.401(B)(2)(a), a party serving a request to admit must serve the request at least 28 days before the discovery deadline or it will be untimely.[1] For these reasons, I would conclude that the trial court did not err when it determined that plaintiff's request to admit was untimely and, on that basis, declined to admit the request into evidence.

III. Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Claim

5 Having concluded that the trial court did not err in refusing to admit plaintiff's request for admissions into evidence, I would also conclude that the trial court did not err when it found that plaintiff failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination under ELCRA. Therefore, I would affirm the trial court's judgment of no cause for action on that claim.

MCL 37.2202(1)(a) provides, in relevant part, that an employer may not discriminate against an individual because of the individual's sex or age. A plaintiff may establish proof of discriminatory treatment in violation of the ELCRA either by direct evidence or by indirect or circumstantial evidence. Sniecinski v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Michigan, 469 Mich. 124, 132; 666 NW2d 186 (2003). In the present case, plaintiff attempted to establish discrimination through indirect evidence.

In an action alleging employment discrimination based on indirect evidence of discrimination, the plaintiff must present a rebuttable prima facie case through proofs that would allow a fact-finder to infer that the plaintiff was the victim of unlawful discrimination. Id. at 134. In Michigan, our courts have adopted the burden-shifting approach set forth by the United States Supreme Court in McDonnell Douglas Corp v. Green, 411 U.S. 792; 93 S Ct 1817; 36 L.Ed.2d 668 (1973). Sniecinski, supra at 133-134. Under McDonnell Douglas, a plaintiff can make a prima facie showing of discrimination by showing that (1) the plaintiff was a member of a protected class; (2) the plaintiff suffered an adverse employment action; (3) the plaintiff was qualified for the employment position; and (4) the action taken by the defendant gives rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination. Hazle v. Ford Motor Co, 464 Mich. 456, 463; 628 NW2d 515 (2001). A plaintiff has made a showing on the fourth element, for example, when the plaintiff has presented proof that either the job was given to someone under circumstances that create an inference of unlawful discrimination or that the defendant treated the plaintiff differently than persons of a different class for the same or similar conduct. Id. at 468.

After the close of proofs, the trial court made the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

In the instant case, the court ... finds that frankly I don't think the plaintiff has even made out a prima facie proof-case of discrimination on the basis of age or gender, for a couple reasons.

For one thing, there was no evidence of her age in the record, or that her age was a factor in anything. However, I think the city acquiesces that she was-she was 40 or over. I don't know if she was or wasn't, but I guess the city acquiesces in that because it was referred to by counsel in closing statement-closing argument. So I'm going to assume that she's 40 or over, although I didn't actually hear testimony to that effect.

Secondly, the record indicates that there have been a number of females that have been hired in various positions during Chief Harris' administration. I counted 23 patrolmen-patrol officers hired during his administration, of which [ ] six were female, which is a little over 25 percent.

6 With regard to the age factor, in looking over hires, these aren't necessarily all patrol officers, but it looks like there were a number of people hired, one, two, three, four, five, six at least, that are over 40 during Chief Harris' administration.... So it just doesn't look like gender or age are a factor here in any employment decisions.

* * *

There's just nothing in the record to indicate that either plaintiff's gender or her age were adverse employment factors that were used to discriminate against her, and not send her back a second time to the police academy, or hire her as a cadet, pending going back to the police academy.

Bottom line is, you know, I just don't think a prima facie case has been made. Even if I'm-if I would say that it did, I would say that the city has come forward with, and articulated, a legitimate non-discriminatory reason, which is we needed to get people in the cars, on the road, in the streets, as soon as possible....

So for that reason the court finds no cause of action in this matter.

The trial court's factual findings are not clearly erroneous. Plaintiff argued, and the trial court acknowledged, that she was a member of two different protected classes: she testified that she was born in 1962, making her 40 years of age when she applied for the position, and she is clearly a woman. It was also demonstrated that she suffered an adverse employment action when defendant refused to hire her. With respect to job qualification, plaintiff was qualified for the position under the 1998 hiring policy, which was in place when she applied. The evidence did not, however, clearly establish that the job was given to another person under circumstances giving rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination. Every person who was hired as an entry level police officer after plaintiff applied was certified-a qualification plaintiff did not possess. Moreover, the man first hired after plaintiff was passed over was hired under the new hiring policy. Also, the police chief testified that he had hired three women and four men over the age of 40 during his tenure. Plaintiff admits that many police officer candidates were hired during the two-year time period during which she was eligible and that, at least three were women, although the women were younger than 40 years of age. She also admits that males over age 40 were hired and all had established law enforcement experience. Under the circumstances, plaintiff failed to establish an inference of discrimination as to her age or sex.

Further, even if the trial court clearly erred when it found that plaintiff had not established a prima facie case a discrimination based on her sex combined with her age, see e.g. Hall v. Missouri Hwy and Trans Comm, 995 F Supp 1001, 1005 (ED Mo, 1998); Meyers v. Goodwill Industries of Akron, Inc, 701 N.E.2d 738, 743 (Ohio App, 1997), I would conclude that the trial court did not clearly err when it determined that defendant advanced legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for not hiring plaintiff, which plaintiff failed to rebut. Specifically, defendant stated that it had a need for officers who were available for immediate deployment and could not afford either the time or resources to send plaintiff to the police academy. Once defendant produced legitimate nondiscriminatory reasons for not hiring plaintiff, the burden shifted to plaintiff to prove by a preponderance that the stated reason was merely a pretext. Meagher v. Wayne State Univ, 222 Mich.App 700, 711; 565 NW2d 401 (1997). Plaintiff failed to present any evidence that these reasons were merely pretexts. Therefore, I would conclude that the trial court properly granted judgment in favor of defendant on this issue.

IV. Superintending Control

*7 Finally, plaintiff argues that the trial court erred when it determined that plaintiff had no cause for action on her claim that defendant failed to properly follow its hiring policy and the requirements of the civil service act applicable to the hiring of fire fighters and police officers. See MCL 38.501 et seq. We disagree.

Although MCL 38.511 governs the hiring of police officers by municipalities that are subject to the civil service act, the act does not itself provide civil remedies for violations of its terms. See Fraternal Order of Police Labor Council v. Flint Twp, 425 Mich. 382, 389; 390 NW2d 146 (1986) (noting that the only remedies codified in the act are the criminal penalties provided under MCL 38 .516). Presumably for this reason, plaintiff characterized her claim that defendant violated MCL 38.511 as a petition asking the trial court to exercise its power of superintending control to order defendant to place plaintiff at the top of the current hiring list.

A writ of superintending control is an original action designed to order a lower court or tribunal to perform a legal duty. See MCR 3.302; Shepherd Montessori v. Ann Arbor Twp, 259 Mich.App 315, 346-347; 675 NW2d 271 (2003). Although decisions of municipal civil service commissions are subject to review through original actions for superintending control, see In re Payne, 444 Mich. 679, 687; 514 NW2d 121 (1994) (opinion of Boyle, J.), plaintiff did not and has not alleged that the civil service commission failed to perform a legal duty. Instead, plaintiff claims that, because she was next on the list certified by the civil service commission in 2002, the Department was legally obligated to hire her once it elected to hire a new officer during the period that the list was in force. See DeGrace v. Shelby Twp, 150 Mich.App 587; 389 NW2d 137 (1986). Because the Department and its agents are not lower courts or tribunals, their decisions are not subject to the writ of superintending control. Therefore, the trial court properly determined that plaintiff was not entitled to relief under a writ of superintending control.

For the reasons stated above, I would conclude that there were no errors warranting relief. Therefore, I would affirm the trial court's judgment in full.

Footnotes

1 For the reasons stated by the dissent, with which we are in full agreement, plaintiff's claim for superintending control was properly dismissed and would have no chance of success on a remand.

2 While a request to admit can also be used to refine the issues for discovery, if that is the intended purpose the request would naturally be served well before the discovery cut-off date (likely at the commencement of discovery), which would still be "within the time for completion of discovery." MCR 2.312(A).

3 Unfortunately, defendant has also not filed a brief with this Court.

1 As already noted, the trial court has the discretion to shorten or extend the period within which a request to admit must be answered. See MCR 2.312(B)(1).

OPINION AND ORDER

LAWRENCE P. ZATKOFF, District Judge.

I. INTRODUCTION

*1 This matter is before the Court on Plaintiff's "Motion for Protective Order and Privacy Act Order and for Leave to Serve Subpoena on FBI" [dkt 12]; Defendant's "Motion for Protective Order and to Strike Certain Information from Complaint" [dkt 16]; and Plaintiff's motion for default judgment [dkt 19]. The parties have fully briefed the motions.[1] The Court finds that the facts and legal arguments are adequately presented in the parties' papers such that the decision process would not be significantly aided by oral argument. Therefore, pursuant to E.D. Mich. L.R. 7.1(e)(2), it is hereby ORDERED that the motions be resolved on the briefs submitted. For the following reasons, Plaintiff's Motion for Protective Order and Privacy Act Order and for Leave to Serve Subpoena on FBI [dkt 12] is GRANTED; Defendant's Motion for Protective Order and to Strike Certain Information from Complaint [dkt 16] is DENIED; and Defendant is ordered to SHOW CAUSE as to why Plaintiff's motion for default judgment [dkt 19] should not be granted.

II. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff, a French corporation, is the developer of a computer software design program known as CATIA. Plaintiff has held a registered trademark, U.S. Reg. No. 1,274,136, on its CATIA software since 1984. See Compl. Ex. A. Plaintiff also holds a registered copyright on CATIA Version 5, Release 12 ("Release 12"), Registration No. 5–856–769, and has a pending copyright registration for its most recent release, CATIA Version 5, Release 14 ("Release 14"). See Compl. Ex. C; ¶ 16.

Defendant, appearing pro se, is a design engineer. Defendant, along with some familial assistance, operates a business under the name of Practical CATIA Training. Practical CATIA Training provides its customers instruction in the use of CATIA software.

CATIA software requires a license and Target ID in order to execute the program on a computer. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant purchased one license for Release 12 and was assigned a corresponding Target ID. Plaintiff further contends that Defendant cloned the software and Target IDs onto 20 computers, which Defendant used to operate his business. Plaintiff maintains that these actions infringe its copyright and trademark rights and violate the Michigan Consumer Protection Act, Mich. Comp. Laws. § 445.901.

Defendant responded to Plaintiff's complaint by filing a motion for a more definite statement, stay of the proceedings, and evidentiary hearing. In that motion, Defendant alleged that Plaintiff was in possession of secret grand jury information and had used said information in its complaint, all in violation of Fed.R.Crim.P. 6(e)(2). The Court denied the motion, finding that Defendant had not adequately explained how the information contained in the complaint implicated matters occurring before a grand jury or how Plaintiff was subject to discipline under Fed.R.Crim.P. 6(e) (2).

While Defendant's motion was pending, Defendant became aware that Plaintiff had served a subpoena on the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) seeking access to evidence that the FBI had seized from Defendant. Defendant filed a motion to quash the subpoena [dkt 10], arguing that the subpoena was untimely under Fed.R.Civ.P. 26 and that the information sought by Plaintiff was protected under Fed.R.Crim.P. 6(e) (2). The parties stipulated [dkt 11] that Plaintiff would withdraw its subpoena and Defendant would withdraw his motion to quash, and the Court entered a corresponding order [dkt 13].

 © 2024 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

*2 Plaintiff has now moved for the Court's permission to serve its subpoena prior to a Rule 26(f) conference and for a protective order and Privacy Act order. Defendant challenges this motion and has filed his own motion for a protective order, and he seeks to strike certain information from the complaint. Plaintiff also seeks a default judgment because Defendant has not yet filed an answer to the complaint.

III. ANALYSIS

A. Plaintiff's Motion for Leave to File Subpoena

Plaintiff seeks leave pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(d) to serve a subpoena on the FBI to procure computers and documents seized from Defendant. Plaintiff also seeks the entry of a protective order under Rule 26(c)(1), and a Privacy Act order pursuant to a FBI request. Defendant continues to insist that this evidence is protected by Fed.R.Crim.P. 6(e)(2).

i. Fed.R.Crim.P. 6(e)

This analysis requires a detailed discussion of In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 851 F.2d 860 (6th Cir.1988), this circuit's seminal case on the subject. In that case, the Sixth Circuit adopted a "rebuttable presumption" approach to issues of grand jury secrecy:

> The general rule, however, must be that confidential documentary information not otherwise public obtained by the grand jury by coercive means is presumed to be "matters occurring before the grand jury" just as much as testimony before the grand jury. The moving party may seek to rebut that presumption by showing that the information is public or was not obtained through coercive means or that disclosure would be otherwise available by civil discovery and would not reveal the nature, scope, or direction of the grand jury inquiry, but it must bear the burden of making that showing, just as it bears the burden of showing that there is a "particularized need ."

Id. at 866–67.

The Court denied Defendant's original motion because Defendant had not presented any evidence that the alleged secret grand jury information was procured through the grand jury's coercive powers. Defendant now presents evidence strongly suggesting that the FBI and grand jury investigations are intertwined. Attached to Defendant's response to Plaintiff's motion are three grand jury subpoenas to produce documents, along with a search warrant for Defendant's business address. See Def.'s Resp. Br. Exs. 1–4. All four documents bear the same date of issuance. The search warrant was issued to the same FBI special agent who is listed as the investigative agent on the subpoenas. Thus, the Court finds that Defendant's computers and documents were procured by the grand jury's coercive powers as defined by the Sixth Circuit.

As the evidence Plaintiff seeks was not public information, and Defendant has proffered evidence suggesting that his computers were seized by the coercive powers of the grand jury, the Court is constrained by the Sixth Circuit's holding in In re Grand Jury Proceedings—a rule more stringent than those of its sister circuits. Compare id. with United States v. Dynavac, Inc., 6 F.3d 1407, 1412 (9th Cir.1993) ("[W]e think that the disclosure of business records independently generated and sought for legitimate purposes would not 'seriously compromise the secrecy of the grand jury's deliberations' ") (citations omitted); DiLeo v. C.I.R., 959 F.2d 16, 20 (2d Cir.1992) ("The records ... were sought for their own sake and not to learn what took place before the grand jury and clearly did not compromise the secrecy of the grand jury's deliberations."). Accordingly, the presumption of non-disclosure applies.

*3 "Mere contact with a grand jury, however, does not change every document into a matter 'occurring before a grand jury' within the meaning of Rule 6," and the seeking party has the opportunity to rebut the presumption of non-disclosure. United States v. Rutherford, 509 F.3d 791, 795 (6th Cir.2007); see also In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 196 F.R.D. 57, 64 (S.D.Ohio 2000) (moving party met burden that subpoenaed documents were available through civil discovery and did not reveal the scope or direction of the grand jury's inquiry).

Plaintiff contends that the evidence which it seeks is otherwise discoverable because it consists of Defendant's business records and was prepared prior to any grand jury action. Further, Plaintiff disputes that the evidence at issue would reveal the nature, scope, or direction of the grand jury's inquiry.

The Court agrees that the seized evidence is otherwise available through civil discovery. Defendant's business records are undoubtedly discoverable evidence. See, e.g.,

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 196 F.R.D. at 64 (holding that presumption of grand jury secrecy was rebutted because business records were otherwise available through discovery). Furthermore, inspection of a computer's contents is frequently permitted in cases involving copyright infringement of computer files or programs. See, e.g., Capitol Records, Inc. v. Alaujan, Nos. 03CV11661–NG, 07cv11446–NG, 2009 WL 1292977, at *2 (D.Mass. May 6, 2009) (ordering inspection of computer that had a "sufficiently close" connection to the alleged copyright violation); Pharmacy Records v. Nassar, 248 F.R.D. 507, 516 (E.D.Mich.2008) (noting that magistrate judge had granted motion to compel production of computers in music copyright case); Xpel Techs. Corp. v. Amer. Filter Film Distribs., No. SA–08–CV–0175, 2008 WL 744837, at *1 (W.D.Tex. Mar.17, 2008) (granting order for expedited computer forensic imaging in copyright case). Finally, the Court cannot conceive how allowing Plaintiff access to this evidence would reveal anything about the nature, direction, or scope of the grand jury's inquiry.

Therefore, Plaintiff has overcome the presumption of non-disclosure, and the evidence at issue is not protected by Fed.R.Civ.P. 6(e)(2). See In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, 454 F.3d 511, 522 (6th Cir.2006) (noting that the "discovery exception to grand jury secrecy has been interpreted somewhat broadly"). To hold otherwise would allow Defendant to use the shield of Fed.R.Crim.P. 6(e)(2) as a sword to prevent Plaintiff from obtaining evidence that would be discoverable but for the grand jury proceedings.

ii. Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(d)(1)

Plaintiff maintains that Defendant refuses to participate in a Rule 26(f) conference until the outstanding motions have been decided. Plaintiff insists that expedited discovery is necessary to obtain access to the computers before they are returned to Defendant in order to "preserve the integrity of the original material that was seized by the FBI." Plaintiff's proposed subpoena seeks "[a]ll computers, materials, and documents that were seized at Keith Childress' business, Practical Catia."

*4 Rule 26(d)(1) prevents a party from seeking discovery materials "from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f) except ... when authorized by these rules, by stipulation, or by court order." A party must show good cause when seeking expedited discovery prior to a Rule 26(f) conference. See Arista Records, LLC v. Does 1–4, No. 1:07–cv–1115, 2007 WL 4178641, at *1 (W.D.Mich. Nov.20, 2008).

The Court finds that Plaintiff has shown good cause for expedited discovery in this matter. Defendant's refusal to file an answer or participate in a Rule 26(f) conference has greatly impeded discovery. Further, Defendant's argument that Plaintiff's proposed subpoena is not "narrowly tailored" is without merit. The Court finds that Plaintiff's request is narrowly tailored to include evidence that is available through civil discovery and relevant to its allegations of copyright infringement.

Therefore, Plaintiff's motion for leave to serve subpoena on the FBI is GRANTED. The Court also GRANTS Plaintiff's motion for a protective order and Privacy Act order, and it will enter Plaintiff's proposed protective order contemporaneously with this order. In addition to the requirements and limitations contained in the protective order, Plaintiff shall not in any manner destroy, alter, or otherwise tamper with Defendant's computers and other materials, and the evidence shall be returned in the same condition as it was received.

B. Defendant's Motion for Protective Order and to Strike

Defendant has moved (1) for a protective order barring Plaintiff from acquiring secret grand jury information; and (2) to strike certain paragraphs of Plaintiff's complaint pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(f). Plaintiff challenges the motion on several procedural grounds.

1. Motion for Protective Order

The Court construes Defendant's motion for a protective order as a request to protect the evidence currently in the possession of the FBI. As discussed supra, the seized evidence is not protected by Fed.R.Civ.P. 6(e)(2) as matters occurring before a grand jury. Therefore, Defendant's motion for a protective order is DENIED.

2. Motion to Strike

Defendant also requests that the Court strike paragraphs 17, 18, 19, and 21 from Plaintiff's complaint. These paragraphs state as follows:

> 17. In 2003, Defendant Keith Childress, purchased one license for CATIA® Version 5, Release 12. On information and belief, Defendant Childress and his company were able to crack and clone the Target IDs on the license and clone the software on twenty machines on order to train students on the software.

18. On October 30, 2006, Defendant Childress and his company Practical Catia were raided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The Federal Bureau of Investigation confiscated 20 computers with the cloned software which are reproductions of, or derivations of, Plaintiff's CATIA® software. The raid took place at Defendants' office which continues to be located in Algonac, Michigan.

*5 19. Following the raid in Defendants' office, the FBI discovered that computers that were confiscated at Defendants' office had installed thereon Plaintiff's CATIA® Version 5, Release 14 software. Each computer had the same license information and Target ID for the one license Defendants had purchased. The same Target ID on each of the machines indicates that the software was cloned and is a bootlegged copy.

21. On or about April 2007, Defendants requested a license to use the CATIA® software on multiple machines. The request was denied because of the FBI's investigation of Defendant's illegal usage of Plaintiff's software.

In support of his motion to strike, Defendant cites Finn v. Schiller, 72 F.3d 1182 (4th Cir.1996), and he avers that many similarities exist between information withdrawn from the record in that case and the information Defendant seeks to strike.

Defendant fails to note a detail of great importance, however, that distinguishes Finn from the present case. In Finn, the defendant was an Assistant United States Attorney (i.e., a party subject to Rule 6(e)(2)). Plaintiff here is a private corporation not implicated by the restrictions of Rule (6)(e)(2). "No obligation of secrecy can be imposed on any person except those listed in the Rule [ ]." 1 Charles Alan Wright and Andrew D. Leipold, Federal Practice and Procedure, § 106 pp. 362–63 (4th ed.2008). That is, Plaintiff cannot be sanctioned under Rule 6(e)(2) for further dissipating secret grand jury material even if the complaint contained such information. See United States v. Jeter, 775 F.2d 670, 675 (6th Cir.1985); In re Polypropylene Carpet Antitrust Litig., 181 F.R.D. 680, 689 (N.D.Ga.1998).

Defendant also contends that the allegations in the complaint are "immaterial" and "scandalous" within the meaning of Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(f). Defendant argues that the paragraphs at issue are immaterial because any evidence relating to the FBI search and grand jury investigation is undiscoverable and inadmissible. Pleadings are immaterial when the material contained within "has no essential or important relationship to the claim for relief...." 5C Charles Alan Wright and Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, § 1382 p. 458 (4th ed.2008). The referenced allegations form the basis of Plaintiff's claim for relief and are therefore material to the pleadings.

Nor are the allegations scandalous within the meaning of Rule 12(f). Under the Rule, "[i]t is not enough that the matter offends the sensibilities of the objecting party of the person who is the subject of the statement in the pleading, if the challenged allegations describe acts or events that are relevant to the action." Id. at 466–67. The allegations in the challenged paragraphs are highly relevant to Plaintiff's claim; in fact, striking the paragraphs would eviscerate Plaintiff's cause of action. Therefore, the allegations are not scandalous.

*6 Plaintiff cites other procedural violations to support a denial of Defendant's motion, including Defendant's alleged failure to seek concurrence pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(c)(1) and E.D. Mich. L.R. 7.1, and it observes that Defendant is barred from seeking further relief by Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(g)(2) (limiting further Rule 12 motions). The Court finds that the above reasons fully justify the denial of Defendant's motion, and Plaintiff's additional arguments need not be addressed.

C. Plaintiff's Motion for Default Judgment

Plaintiff has requested that the Court enter a default judgment, noting that Defendant did not comply with the Court's May 22, 2009, order requiring Defendant to file an answer to Plaintiff's complaint within 30 days. Defendant maintains that he did not file his answer because of the outstanding issues that necessitated the current motions.

Defendant violated the Court's direct order that he file his answer within 30 days of the May 22, 2009, order. Accordingly, it is HEREBY ORDERED that Defendant SHOW CAUSE, in writing, no later than 5 p.m. on Tuesday, November 3, 2009, as to why the Court should not grant Plaintiff's motion for default judgment. Failure to comply with this order may result in the entry of a default judgment and/or the imposition of sanctions. Defendant's response shall contain specific and accurate legal support, including pinpoint citations to authority relied on and shall be limited to five pages and comply with E.D. Mich. L.R. 5.1. Additionally, Defendant shall fax his response to Judge Zatkoff's Chambers in Port Huron, at 810–984–1480.

IV. CONCLUSION

Accordingly, and for the above reasons, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiff's Motion for Protective Order and Privacy Act Order and for Leave to Serve Subpoena on FBI [dkt 12] is GRANTED;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant's Motion for Protective Order and to Strike Certain Information from Complaint [dkt 16] is DENIED;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant SHOW CAUSE by 5 p.m. on Tuesday, November 3, 2009, as to why Plaintiff's motion for default judgment [dkt 19] should not be granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

OPINION AND ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFFS' EX PARTE APPLICATION FOR LEAVE TO TAKE IMMEDIATE DISCOVERY

PAUL L. MALONEY, District Judge.

*1 Plaintiffs, various members of the music recording industry, filed a complaint against four unknown individuals for copyright infringement. With the complaint, Plaintiffs filed an application for leave to take immediate discovery under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 26 and 45. (Dkt. No. 2).

Plaintiffs allege the four unknown Defendants used peer-to-peer (P2P) online file sharing systems to download or distribute Plaintiffs' copyrighted music. Plaintiffs have identified the computer used by each of the four defendants for the infringing activities through the unique numerical Internet Protocol (IP) address assigned to each computer. Furthermore, Plaintiffs have provided a list of some of the songs that were improperly downloaded or distributed at each IP address. (Exhibit A to complaint). Plaintiffs allege Defendants have illegally downloaded or distributed between 70 and 150 files each. (Exhibit A to complaint). The IP addresses were distributed by Michigan State University (MSU), the third party internet service provider (ISP). Plaintiffs request leave to subpoena information identifying Defendants from MSU.

I. DISCOVERY RULES

A party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f). Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(d). Some courts, under their broad discretion to manage discovery, have allowed expedited discovery prior to a Rule 26 hearing upon a showing of good cause. Quest Commc'n Int'l, Inc. v. Worldquest Networks, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 418, 419 (D.Colo.2003); Pod-ners, LLC v. N. Feed & Bean of Lucern LLC, 204 F.R.D. 675, 676 (D.Colo.2002). This Court has found no published cases addressing this proposition of law within the Sixth Circuit, although there are several unpublished cases. See e.g. In re Paradise Valley Holdings, No. 03-34704, 2005 WL 3841866 (Bankr.E.D.Tenn. Dec.29, 2005) and Whitfield v. Hochsheid, No. C-1-02-218, 2002 WL 1560267 (S.D.Ohio 2002). This Court notes the pending changes to Rule 26(d) specifically authorize discovery prior to a Rule 26 hearing "by court order." Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(d)(1) (proposed amendment effective Dec. 1, 2007 absent contrary Congressional action). This Court finds the reasoning in Quest persuasive and adopts the holding. Plaintiffs have been able to establish good cause in situations involving requests for a preliminary injunction where the moving party alleges infringement. Quest, 213 F.R.D. at 419.

A number of district courts have found good cause to permit expedited discovery where the recording industry has IP addresses for individuals who have illegally distributed or downloaded music, but do not have the name of the person whose computer was assigned that address. See Capitol Records, Inc. v. Doe, No. 07-cv-1570, 2007 WL 2429830 (S.D.Cal. Aug.24, 2007) (granting subpoena for information from University of California, San Diego); Warner Bros ., Records Inc. v. Does 1-4, No. 2:07-cv-424, 2007 WL 1960602 (D.Utah July 5, 2007) (granting subpoena for information from Off Campus Telecommunications); Warner Bros. Records, Inc. v. Does 1-20, No. 07-cv-1131, 2007 WL 1655365 (D.Colo. June 5, 2007) (granting subpoena for information from Quest Communications); Arista Records, LLC v. Does 1-9, No. 07-cv-628, 2007 WL 1059049 (D.Colo. April 4, 2007). Courts typically find good cause based upon (1) allegations of copyright infringement, (2) the danger that the ISP will not preserve the information sought, (3) the narrow scope of the information sought, and (4) the conclusion that expedited discovery would substantially contribute to moving the case forward. See e.g. Capital Records, Inc. 2007 WL 2429830 at *1. Plaintiffs have also provided this Court with copies of eight orders issued over the past three years by district courts within the Sixth Circuit permitting expedited discovery under almost identical circumstances. (Exhibit B to memorandum). In addition, this Court granted expedited discovery in a prior case involving an almost identical set of facts. See LaFace Records, LLC v. Does 1-5, No. 2:07-cv-187, 2007 WL 2867351 (W.D.Mich. Sept.27, 2007).

*2 Plaintiffs have not acknowledged that courts occasionally deny similar requests. Based on the authority cited above, this Court agrees with Plaintiffs that discovery to allow the identitification of "Doe" defendants is "routine." (Plaintiffs' memorandum in support at 5). However, this Court would be remiss if it did not discuss authority counter to Plaintiffs' request. In Capital Records, Inc. v. Does 1-16, No. 07-485, 2007 WL 1893603 (D.N.M. May 24, 2007), the court denied an almost identical request to issue a subpoena for information from the University of New Mexico. The court cited privacy concerns of the individuals whose names were sought and the plaintiffs' inability to identify an irreparable harm as damages could easily cure any alleged copyright infringement. Id. at *1. Two circuit courts have rejected subpoenas sought by the recording industry under the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA). Charter Commc'n Inc., Subpoena Enforcement Matter, 393 F.3d 771 (8th Cir.2005); Recording Indust. Ass'n of America, Inc. v. Verizon Internet Servs., Inc., 351 F.3d 1229 (D.C.Cir.2003). In both cases the courts concluded the ISP was only a conduit for file sharing in P2P systems and that conduit ISPs were not one of the types of ISPs for which subpoenas could be issued. See also In re Subpoena to Univ. of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 367 F.Supp.2d 945 (M.D.N.C.2005). This Court is also aware that the recording industry has sought subpoenas under the Cable Communication Policy Act (CCPA). Interscope Records v. Does 1-7, 494 F.Supp.2d 388 (E.D.Va.2007) (denying request for subpoena for information from William and Mary College under CCPA and DMCA); UMG Recordings, Inc. v. Does 1-4, No. 06-652, 2006 WL 1343597 (N.D.Cal. March 6, 2006) (finding it unnecessary to decide the request under the CCPA and ordering the ISP to provide its subscribers with a copy of the subpoena before releasing the information, a protection which would be consistent with both the provisions of the CCPA and Rule 45).

The provisions and guidelines for issuing a subpoena are found under Fed.R.Civ.P. 45. Rule 45 permits persons subject to a subpoena to file a motion to quash or modify the subpoena on various grounds. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A). Two courts have upheld subpoenas issued under remarkably similar circumstances. See Elektra Entm't Group, Inc. v. Does 1-9, No. 04-cv-2289, 2004 WL 2095581 (S.D.N.Y. Sept.8, 2004) (upholding subpoena as not overburdening rights under the First Amendment) and Sony Music Entm't Inc. v. Does 1-40, 326 F.Supp.2d 556 (S.D.N.Y.2004) (finding that P2P file sharing is entitled to some level of First Amendment protection, but that the balance of interests weighed in favor of the subpoena because (1) plaintiff made a prima facia claim of copyright infringement, (2) the discovery request was sufficiently specific, (3) there was an absence of alternative means of obtaining the information, (4) there was a need for the information in order to pursue the action, and (5) there was only a minimal expectation of privacy under the ISP's terms of service).

II. ANALYSIS

*3 Plaintiffs argue P2P networks allow users to distribute and download millions of music files every month in violation of copyright laws. Plaintiffs assert they have good cause for this Court to issue a subpoena because (1) they have alleged a prima facia claim of copyright infringement, (2) ISPs typically retain activity logs for a limited period of time, (3) the discovery request is narrowly tailored, and (4) the information is necessary to move the case forward. Plaintiffs also request this Court clarify that the subpoena would not interfere with MSU's obligations under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, 20 U.S.C. 1232g (FERPA). Plaintiffs intend to serve a subpoena on MSU requesting documents that would identify each Defendant's true name, address

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

(current and permanent), telephone number, email address, and Media Access Control (MAC) address.

This Court finds Plaintiffs have established good cause for departing from the usual course of discovery. Specifically, this Court finds (1) Plaintiffs have alleged copyright infringement, (2) there is a possibility that the ISP might delete or otherwise destroy the activity logs which are necessary to identify the individuals who have been downloading or distributing music files, (3) the discovery request is narrowly tailored, and (4) the identity of the individuals is necessary to move the case forward and without this information, Plaintiffs would not be able to determine the identities of Defendants. This Court declines to find that the subpoena is consistent with Michigan State University's obligations under FERPA. The issue has not been briefed, it is unnecessary for this order, and MSU should be afforded an opportunity to speak on the issue if it elects to do so.

This Court also finds merit in the District Court of New Mexico's concern for the privacy of the various individuals who may be identified. This Court agrees it would be preferable for Plaintiffs to request the information from the ISP prior to filing this request in an effort to secure the information without resort to the courts. Therefore, this Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' Application for Leave to Take Immediate Discovery (Dkt. No. 2), WITH MODIFICATIONS. As the application was brought ex parte, both the ISP and the individuals implicated should have an opportunity to move to quash the subpoena.

ORDER

(1) Plaintiffs may take immediate discovery by serving a Rule 45 subpoena on Michigan State University seeking information sufficient to identify Does 1-4, including the name, current and permanent addresses, telephone numbers, email addresses, and Media Access Control addresses for each Defendant.

(2) Any information disclosed to Plaintiffs in response to the subpoena may be used solely for the purpose of protecting Plaintiffs' rights under the Copyright Act as set forth in the complaint.

(3) Plaintiffs shall serve Michigan State University a copy of the opinion and order along with the subpoena.

*4 (4) Michigan State University may move to quash or modify the subpoena at any time before the return date of the subpoena. Michigan State University shall preserve the information sought in the subpoena until it has been provided to Plaintiffs or until otherwise ordered by the Court.

(5) Michigan State University shall make a reasonable effort to inform the individuals whose identities are revealed as a result of the information sought by the subpoena of the subpoena within seven days after service of the subpoena. Where possible, Michigan State University shall provide a copy of the subpoena and the opinion and order to those individuals.

(6) Those individuals who receive notice of the subpoena from Michigan State University may move to quash or modify the subpoena at any time before the return date of the subpoena.

OPINION AND ORDER

NORAH McCANN KING, United States Magistrate Judge.

*1 Plaintiff, who is proceeding without the assistance of counsel, seeks recovery for the alleged infringement of plaintiff's patent for mold locks. Plaintiff also seeks a permanent injunction against defendant to prevent further infringements of plaintiff's patent. Defendant denies infringing the patent and asserts that it has not sold or distributed mold locks through any entity in Ohio. This matter is before the Court on plaintiff's Motion to Require Expedited Responses to Discovery, Doc. No. 17 ("Plaintiff's Motion").[1]

This action was filed on August 15, 2008. Complaint, Doc. No. 2. The parties have not yet met and conferred pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(f). Defendant has moved to dismiss this action for lack of personal jurisdiction and for improper venue. Doc. No. 21.

Plaintiff argues that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure authorize expedited discovery upon good cause shown. Plaintiff's Motion, p. 2. Plaintiff contends that "[a] party's need for timely information constitutes good cause." Id. Plaintiff argues that the Court should permit expedited discovery in this case because " '[i]t is [in] the best interest of all parties to have this case resolved as soon as possible.' " Id. (quoting Optic-Elec. Corp. v. United States, 683 F.Supp. 269, 271 (D.D.C.1987)). Plaintiff argues that the discovery "is directly related to defendant's motion for a change of venue." Id.

Defendant opposes Plaintiff's Motion, arguing that plaintiff has failed to establish good cause; specifically, that he has failed to show that his overbroad discovery requests are related to the issues of venue and personal jurisdiction. Defendant's Response to Plaintiff's Motion to Require Expedited Responses to Discovery (Doc. # 17), pp. 1-2, Doc. No. 19 ("Memo.Contra"). Defendant also contends that plaintiff has not established that the information requested is in danger of being lost. Id. at 5. Defendant further argues that responding to plaintiff's requests would constitute a substantial burden. Id. at 6. Finally, defendant contends that plaintiff will not be "unduly harmed" by denial of his motion. Id.

Rule 26 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure governs discovery. Rule 26(d) provides as follows:

> (1) Timing. A party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f), except in a proceeding exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a) (1)(B), or when authorized by these rules, by stipulation, or by court order.
> (2) Sequence. Unless, on motion, the court orders otherwise for the parties' and witnesses' convenience and in the interests of justice:
>
> > (A) methods of discovery may be used in any sequence; and
> > (B) discovery by one party does not require any other party to delay its discovery.

Rule 26(d) therefore permits the district court to order expedited discovery. See, e.g., Qwest Communs. Int'l Inc. v. Worldquest Networks, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 418, 419 (D.Colo.2003).

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

*2 Although there is no binding authority on point, unpublished decisions from this and other district courts within this circuit have applied a good cause standard in determining whether or not to permit expedited discovery. See, e.g., Giltnane v. Tennessee Valley Auth., No. 3:09-cv-14, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6734, 2009 WL 230594 (E.D.Tenn. Jan. 30, 2009); Arista Records, LLC v. Does 1-4, No. 1:07-cv-1115, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 85652, 2007 WL 4178641 (W.D.Mich. Nov. 20, 2007); Whitfield v. Hochfield, No. C1-02-218, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12661 (S.D.Ohio July 2, 2002). "[A] party seeking expedited discovery in advance of a Rule 26(f) conference has the burden of showing good cause for the requested departure from usual discovery procedures." Qwest Commc'n Int'l, Inc., 213 F.R.D. at 419. "Good cause may be found where the need for expedited discovery, in consideration of the administration of justice, outweighs the prejudice to the responding party." Semitool, Inc. v. Tokyo Electron Am., Inc., 208 F.R.D. 273, 276 (N.D.Cal.2002). Good cause is often found in cases alleging infringement, unfair competition, or where evidence may be lost or destroyed with time. See, e.g., id.; Qwest Commc'n Int'l, Inc., 213 F.R.D. at 419; Warner Bros, Records, Inc. v. Does 1-4, No. 2:07-cv-0424 TC, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48829, at *2-3, 2007 WL 1960602 (D.Utah July 5, 2007). The scope of the discovery request is also relevant to whether or not good cause exists. See, e.g., Qwest Commc'n Int'l, Inc., 213 F.R.D. at 420. Finally, the trial court retains broad discretion in establishing the timing of discovery. Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(d)(2).

For the reasons that follow, the Court concludes that plaintiff has established good cause for expedited discovery limited to the narrow issue of personal jurisdiction. First, plaintiff asserts a patent infringement claim. Complaint. This type of claim generally supports a finding of good cause. See, e.g., Semitool, Inc., 208 F.R.D. at 276; Qwest Commc'n Int'l, Inc., 213 F.R.D. at 419.

Second, defendant has moved to dismiss this action based, in part, on an alleged lack of personal jurisdiction. Doc. No. 21. Other courts have concluded that good cause exists in cases involving challenges to personal jurisdiction. See, e.g., El Pollo Loco, S.A. de C.V. v. El Pollo Loco, Inc., 344 F.Supp.2d 986, 991 (S.D.Tex. Nov.3, 2004) ("Expedited discovery would be appropriate in cases involving preliminary injunctions or challenges to personal jurisdiction."); Moldflow Corp. v. Simcon, Inc., 296 F.Supp.2d 34, 37 (D.Mass. Dec.22, 2003) (noting that prior order permitted expedited discovery on narrow issue of personal jurisdiction); Second Amendment Found. v. United States Conf. of Mayors, 274 F.3d 521, 525 (D.D.C. Dec. 21, 2001) ("Certainly, '[a] plaintiff faced with a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is entitled to reasonable discovery[.]' ") (quoting El-Fadl v. Central Bank of Jordan, 316 U.S.App. D.C. 86, 75 F.3d 668, 676 (D.C.Cir.1996)). Here, defendant has attached and relied upon an affidavit related to defendant's contacts in Ohio. Doc. No. 21. In responding to this motion to dismiss, plaintiff argues that defendant has sold its products in Ohio and that discovery would establish the extent of defendant's contacts. Doc. No. 22. In his requests, plaintiff asks for information regarding, inter alia, customers and purchase orders. Exhibit, attached to Plaintiff's Motion. This information may contain information relevant to defendant's pending motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. Based on the present record, it appears that deferring discovery on the narrow issue of personal jurisdiction would work to plaintiff's prejudice.

*3 Third, defendant's contention that plaintiff's requests are overbroad may be properly addressed by limiting discovery to the narrow issue of personal jurisdiction. For example, plaintiff seeks, inter alia, detailed information regarding drawings and blue prints as well as documents and witnesses to be produced at trial. Exhibit, attached to Plaintiff's Motion. It is unclear to the Court why this type of information is necessary at this time to resolve defendant's pending motion to dismiss. Accordingly, as presently formulated, many of plaintiff's discovery requests are overbroad and irrelevant to plaintiff's defense of the pending motion to dismiss. However, as discussed supra, the plaintiff may propose more narrowly tailored requests seeking information directly related to defendant's contact with Ohio, if any. Such requests would be relevant to plaintiff's defense of the pending motion and the issue of personal jurisdiction.

Fourth, defendant represents that the information requested by plaintiff does not exist or that its production would place a substantial burden on defendant. Memo. Contra. This argument is unpersuasive. If the requested information does not exist, it would not be burdensome for defendant to so indicate in its response to plaintiff's discovery request. In addition, there is no evidence that more narrowly tailored requests directed at the issue of personal jurisdiction would impose a substantial burden on defendant. Accordingly, based on the record before it, this Court concludes that the value of discovery specifically related to the issue of personal jurisdiction outweighs the alleged burden imposed on defendant.

Finally, the defendant correctly observes that there is currently no protective order in place. Memo. Contra, p.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

4. However, the parties remain free to consider terms of a protective order to address defendant's concerns.

WHEREUPON, plaintiff's Motion to Require Expedited Responses to Discovery, Doc. No. 17, as presently formulated, is DENIED without prejudice to the right to conduct discovery narrowly tailored to the factual issues presented in defendant's pending motion to dismiss.

Footnotes

1 Plaintiff styles his motion as one seeking "expedited responses" to his discovery requests. However, construing Plaintiff's Motion liberally, Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520-21, 92 S.Ct. 594, 30 L.Ed.2d 652 (1972), the Court interprets plaintiff's request as a motion for leave to conduct expedited discovery in this case.

ORDER

JULIAN ABELE COOK, JR., District Judge.

*1 On September 28, 2009, the Plaintiffs, JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. and J.P. Morgan Securities, Inc., filed a complaint in which they accused the Defendants, David G. Clark, Tabb M. Wile, Virginia A. Wisely, John R. Buller, Brett M. Beres, and David J. Runyon of violating their contractual and ethical obligations to avoid, inter alia, the misappropriation of confidential client information to any business competitor. On the same date, the Plaintiffs also filed a motion in an effort to obtain a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, as well as an order that will create an expedited discovery schedule for the respective parties. The Defendants filed a response in opposition on the same day.

I.

The Plaintiffs are subsidiaries of JPMorgan Chase & Co., a large banking institution with offices across the country and its principal place of business in New York, New York. According to the Plaintiffs, they provide banking, investment, and trust and estate services to customers throughout the nation including the metropolitan area of Detroit, Michigan.

In their complaint, the Plaintiffs assert that the Defendants had been employed as financial advisors until September 25, 2009 when all of them voluntarily terminated their employment tenure and immediately thereafter joined the work force of a competitor, Morgan Stanley, in the same or similar employment capacities. The Plaintiffs also maintain that these Defendants wrongfully garnered confidential client information and utilized it to solicit new clients. Feeling aggrieved, the Plaintiffs filed the instant lawsuit.

II.

In 2006, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals reiterated the long-standing factors that courts must consider when determining whether to grant injunctive relief; namely, (1) the movant's likelihood of success on the merits, (2) if the movant will suffer irreparable harm without the issuance of an injunction, (3) whether granting the injunction will cause substantial harm to others, and (4) the impact of the injunction on the public interest. Abney v. Amgen, Inc., 443 F.3d 540, 547 (6th Cir.2006) (citing Deja Vu of Nashville, Inc. v. Metro. Gov't of Nashville & Davidson Co., 274 F.3d 377, 400 (6th Cir.2001)). "In making its determination, the district court is required to make specific findings concerning each of the four factors, unless fewer factors are dispositive of the issue." Lorillard Tobacco Co. v. Amouri's Grand Foods, Inc., 453 F.3d 377, 380 (6th Cir.2006).

A.

In this case, the Plaintiffs submit that they are likely to succeed on the merits because all of the Defendants entered into separate "Supervision, Confidentiality, and Non–Solicitation Agreements" at the commencement of their respective employments wherein they agreed, among other things, not to solicit their then-current employer's clients for a period of one year following the termination of employment. Moreover, it is their contention that this confidential client information, about which they complain, constitutes a trade secret under Michigan law.

 © 2024 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

*2 In their opposition pleading, the Defendants contend that the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of the clients which have been targeted by the Plaintiffs are not trade secrets under Michigan law. Furthermore, the Defendants, while acknowledging that they have contacted their former clients, insist that its purpose was only to announce the cessation of employment with the Plaintiffs, but not to solicit business.

The Michigan Uniform Trade Secrets Act defines a trade secret as:

> [I]nformation, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that is both of the following:
>
> (i) Derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable by proper means by, other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use.
> (ii) Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.

Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.1902(d). The Michigan Supreme Court has held that "there is nothing improper in an employee establishing his own business and communicating with customers for whom he had formerly done work in his previous employment." Hayes–Albion v. Kuberski, 421 Mich. 170, 183, 364 N.W.2d 609 (1984). However, "an employer may have a protectable interest in information about client needs that an employee gains by virtue of his employment." Id. at 184, 364 N.W.2d 609.

Based on the arguments and information within the parties' briefs, the Court believes that the information which the Defendants have utilized constitutes a presumptive trade secret. While the Defendants are correct in asserting that an individual's address and telephone number may be easily obtained through the internet or telephone book, the identity of a client and his or her financial needs is not. As such, the Court determines, for purposes of the Plaintiffs' request for a temporary injunction only, that they have shown a likelihood of success on the merits on their claim of misappropriation of a trade secret.

Even if the client information which was referenced by the parties does not constitute a trade secret under Michigan law, the Court is nevertheless satisfied that the Plaintiffs have shown that they are likely to succeed on the merits with respect to their breach of contract claim. The Defendants do not deny (1) having entered into non-solicitation agreements[1] or (2) contacting clients whose accounts had been handled by them while working for the Plaintiffs. These non-solicitation agreements stated, in pertinent part, that any employee, or former employee, of the Plaintiffs cannot use confidential information, including "confidential customer data, including but not limited to customer and prospect names, addresses, phone numbers, [etc.]" for their "own benefit or for the benefit of a third party." Based on the language in this agreement, and the preliminary representations by the parties, it appears that the Defendants have used the confidential information (as defined in the non-solicitation agreements) for their benefit (i.e., to announce to their clients that they are no longer employed by the Plaintiff and, most probably, to encourage the clients to transfer their accounts to Morgan Stanley). Hence, the Court concludes that the Plaintiffs have shown a likelihood of success on the merits with respect to their breach of contract claim.

B.

*3 The Plaintiffs also assert that (1) they have no adequate remedy at law and (2) they will suffer irreparable harm if their request for a temporary restraining order is not granted. They submit that it is "extremely difficult" to identify the degree of economic detriment which will be sustained by them from the loss of clients, goodwill, and client confidence. The Defendants deny these allegations, insisting that they have not "taken any confidential or nonpublic information and have not in any way impaired [the Plaintiffs'] ability to aggressively solicit these clients." Moreover, they maintain that any damages which the Plaintiffs claimed to have been caused by a loss of clients can be easily determined because the revenue generated by each client is known for each account.

Although the revenue garnered for each client account may be readily determinable, the Defendants have not addressed another legitimate claim in the complaint (i.e., clients may lose confidence in the ability of the Plaintiffs to maintain control over confidential information). The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that "an injury is not fully compensable by money damages if the nature of the plaintiff's loss would make damages difficult to calculate." Basicomputer Corp. v. Scott, 973 F.2d 507, 511 (6th Cir.1992). The court further opined that the "loss of customer goodwill often amounts to irreparable injury because the damages flowing from such losses are difficult to compute." Id. Thus, based on the Plaintiffs' claims that they have suffered or will suffer the loss of client confidence, as well as incalculable losses, the Court concludes that the Plaintiffs have satisfactorily shown the probability of an irreparable harm in the absence of injunctive relief.

C.

The Plaintiffs further assert that the benefit of injunctive relief will outweigh any possible detriment to the Defendants. In their opposition papers, the Defendants argue that the hardship that they will face if an injunction is issued by the Court would outweigh any fiscal burdens on the Plaintiffs who allegedly possess $13.7 trillion in assets.

Having reviewed the respective positions of the parties, the Court believes that, inasmuch as the relief sought by the Plaintiffs would be in effect only until the hearing for preliminary injunction, this temporary injunctive relief will not cause any substantial harm to the Defendants. On the other hand, if the requested temporary restraining order is rejected, the confidential client information which the Plaintiffs seek to protect may have already been disclosed prior to the convening of a preliminary injunction hearing. Thus, the Court concludes that the issuance of a temporary injunction will not cause significant harm to the Defendants. However, without an injunction, the Plaintiffs could suffer an irreparable harm.

Finally, the Plaintiffs contend that the injunctive relief which they seek would advance the public interest in the enforcement of contractual agreements and the protection of investments by businesses in the development of their client base. The Defendants submit that an injunction would harm the public interest because it would restrict a client's right to work with the financial advisor of their choosing.

*4 The Court concludes that this factor does not clearly militate in favor of, or against, the position of either party. The Court believes that each party has set forth legitimate concerns that can be more fully explored at the preliminary injunction hearing.

III.

With respect to the Plaintiffs' request for expedited discovery, the Court directs the parties to commence discovery forthwith in aid of their preparation for the preliminary injunction hearing.

IV.

For the reasons which have stated above, the Court grants the Plaintiffs' request for a temporary restraining order which will expire after the expiration of a period of ten days or until further order of the Court, whichever occurs sooner. Pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 65(c),[2] the Plaintiffs shall post security in the amount of $100,000 not later than October 1, 2009.

Furthermore, the Defendants and all those acting in concert with them, are temporarily enjoined and restrained from:

(a) soliciting, attempting to solicit, or attempting to induce any customers, whose accounts had been handled by the Defendants during their employment with the Plaintiffs, to transfer their assets to a competing business entity;

(b) disclosing or attempting to disclose confidential client information to any person or business enterprise without the express consent of the Plaintiffs; and

(c) using, disclosing or transmitting documents, materials and/or confidential and proprietary information pertaining to the Plaintiffs, their employees, and/or clients.

Finally, the Defendants are directed to immediately return, release and surrender all lists, records, documents, and/or information to the Plaintiffs or their counsel (original, copied, computerized, electronically stored, or handwritten material), which pertain to their clients on or before September 30, 2009.

The parties shall appear before this Court on October 5, 2009 at 1:00 p.m. for a hearing relating to the Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction. Inasmuch as the Defendants have already submitted their response to the pending motion, the Plaintiffs are authorized to file a reply not later than Wednesday, September 30, 2009 at 5:00 p.m.

OPINION AND ORDER

ELIZABETH A. PRESTON DEAVERS, United States Magistrate Judge.

*1 This matter is before the Court for consideration of Plaintiffs' Motion for Expedited Discovery (Doc. 15). For the reasons that follow, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' Motion.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs, Annette Russell, Linda Kent, Sherry Hylton and April Gonzalez, are four individuals who each applied independently for Medicaid for the disabled. Plaintiffs filed a Complaint against Douglas E. Lumkin, the Director of the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services ("ODJFS"), Tracy J. Plouck, the Director of Medicaid in ODJFS, and Ruth E. Svarda, the Director of the Disability Determination Area, alleging that Defendants and their agents failed to process Plaintiffs' Medicaid applications with reasonable promptness in violation of federal law.

On May 3, 2010, Plaintiffs filed a Motion for Preliminary Injunction (Doc. 12), seeking an order: (A) prohibiting Defendants from denying Plaintiffs' applications due to lack of information; (B) ordering Defendants to arrange and pay for the evaluations and tests that Defendants have identified as necessary; (C) ordering Defendants to proceed through the evaluation process; and (D) ordering Defendants to produce certain documents and electronically stored information. The Court scheduled a hearing on this motion for May 27, 2010.

On May 4, 2010, Plaintiffs filed the subject Motion for Expedited Discovery, seeking limited expedited discovery pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(d). Specifically, Plaintiffs request the following expedited discovery:

> A deposition of Defendant Ruth Svarda within 14 business days on the documents attached to Plaintiff's [sic] Motion for Preliminary Injunction, on the practices of the Disability Determination Area with respect to ABD Medicaid, on the processing of Plaintiff's [sic] applications for ABD Medicaid and on the status of those applications.

(Pls.' Mot. for Prelim. Inj. at 1). Plaintiffs represent that Defendants have rejected their requests for expedited discovery.

II. ANALYSIS

Plaintiffs' request for expedited discovery is well-taken.

Federal Rule of Civil Proecedure 26 governs the timing and sequence of discovery. Rule 26(d) provides as follows:

> (1) Timing. A party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f), except in a proceeding exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a) (1)(B), or when authorized by these rules, by stipulation, or by court order.
> (2) Sequence. Unless, on motion, the court orders otherwise for the parties' and witnesses' convenience and in the interests of justice:
>
> (A) methods of discovery may be used in any sequence; and

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

(B) discovery by one party does not require any other party to delay its discovery.

Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(d). Thus, Rule 26(d) vests the district court with discretion to order expedited discovery. See Lemkin v. Bell's Precision Grinding, No. 2:08–CV–789, 2009 WL 1542731, at * 1 (S.D. Ohio June 2, 2009) (citing Qwest Communs. Int'l, Inc. v. Worldquest Networks, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 418, 419 (D.Colo.2003)).

2 Courts considering motions for expedited discovery typically apply a good cause standard. Lemkin, 2009 WL 1542731, at *2 (citations omitted). The burden of demonstrating good cause rests with the party seeking the expedited discovery. Id. (citation omitted). The moving party may establish good cause by demonstrating that "the need for expedited discovery, in consideration of the administration of justice, outweighs the prejudice to the responding party." See id. (quoting Semitool, Inc. v. Tokyo Electron Am., Inc., 208 F.R.D. 273, 276 (N.D.Cal.2002)). Good cause is often found when there is a request for a preliminary injunction. See, e.g., Hydropartners, LLC v. Ecoenergy Energy Generation Ltd., No. 1:08–CV–819, 2008 WL 1775411, at *2 (N.D.Ohio April 16, 2008) ("[S]uch limited discovery in advance of [a preliminary] injunction hearing is supported by applicable law."); Hausser Taylor LLC v. RSM McGladrey, Inc., No. 1:07–CV–2832, 2007 WL 2778659, at *3 (N.D.Ohio Sept.21, 2007) (permitting expedited discovery to "allow Plaintiff the opportunity to present evidence warranting a preliminary injunction"); El Pollo Loco, S.A. de C.V. v. El Pollo Loco, Inc., 344 F.Supp.2d 986, 991 (S.D.Tex.2004) ("Expedited discovery would be appropriate in cases involving preliminary injunctions or challenges to personal jurisdiction." (citation omitted)). Finally, the scope of the requested discovery is also relevant to a good cause determination. Lemkin, 2009 WL 1542731, at *2 (citation omitted).

In the instant case, the requested discovery is limited and narrowly tailored to the issue central to Plaintiffs' requested injunctive relief. Specifically, Plaintiffs seek to depose a single individual to authenticate documents attached to their preliminary injunction motion and to "establish in more detail ... the steps Defendants and their agents took in processing the applications of Plaintiffs." (Pl.'s Mot. for Expedited Disc. at 7). Plaintiffs assert that permitting this limited discovery "will save the amount of time needed for a hearing ..., will better enable the Court and will not burden or prejudice Defendants." (Id.). The Court agrees and consequently finds that Plaintiffs have demonstrated that good cause exists for the requested expedited discovery.

III. DISPOSITION

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' Motion for Expedited Discovery. Plaintiffs may take the deposition of Defendant Ruth Svarda as described in their Motion for Expedited Discovery. The Deposition shall be taken by May 18, 2010.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Order for Deposition

Hon. Robert J. Colombo, Jr.

The Court on January 25, 2008 having considered the request of plaintiff Detroit Free Press, Inc. for expedited discovery in this action under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act, and having heard the parties and considered the matter,

IT IS ORDERED that attorney Michael Stefani shall, on or before February 1, 2008, submit to deposition with regard to the existence of the following documents requested by plaintiff Detroit Free Press in its Freedom of Information Act request dated November 13, 2007:

> The entire settlement agreements in the two separate Wayne County Circuit Court lawsuits between the above-mentioned parties. This request includes but is not limited to all documents, attachments, exhibits, notes, records or other information related to the conclusion of the cases. This request includes any and all documents that the City or its lawyers may consider or have labeled "confidential." It also includes but is not limited to all such documents or records produced by or for city officials, staff attorneys or lawyers contracted by the city.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Mr. Stefani shall produce at the deposition any and all responsive documents in his possession, including but not limited to any confidential agreements relating to the settlement of Brown and Nelthrope v Kilpatrick and City of Detroit and Harris v Kilpatrick and City of Detroit;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, to the extent any such confidential agreement provides that its disclosure is a breach of confidentiality, disclosure of any such agreement pursuant to this order is not a breach of the agreement.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the deposition may take place in Mr. Stefani's office in Royal Oak, Michigan, unless Mr. Stefani shall agree to another location.

It is Forther Ordered That THE TRANSCRIPT OF THE DEPOSITION AND ANY DOCUMENTS PRODUCED SHALL NOT BE DISCLOSED UNTIL FORTHER ORDER OF THE COURT.

NOW COME the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan (the "ACLU"), Sheril Kelly, and Scott Kelly (collectively, "Plaintiffs"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, and for their Complaint against Robert Froman, in his official capacity as Kalamazoo County Canvasser ("Defendant"), state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

1. Robert Froman is a member of the Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers. That body is charged with certifying the results of all elections in Kalamazoo County, including Kalamazoo's share of the vote for statewide and national offices, including the 2024 presidential election. It is a critical part of the electoral process.

2. In August 2024, Defendant Froman informed a Detroit News reporter that he believed that the 2020 election had "most definitely" been stolen from former President Trump. When asked if he would certify the 2024 presidential election results if they unfolded the same way, he responded succinctly: "No. And that's why I'm there."

3. While subsequently contending that he had not made these particular statements in a private message to the ACLU, Defendant Froman never denied the substance of these remarks and refused to seek a correction from the newspaper. Even when his legal obligation to vote to certify the results of the election was brought to his attention, at no point did he confirm that he would certify the results of the 2024 election regardless of allegations or evidence of election fraud.

4. The law could not be clearer. It is the ministerial, nondiscretionary duty of the members of a county board of canvassers to certify the presidential election based on the returns from the precincts, absent voter counting boards, and early voting sites. See MCL 168.822(3); see also Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3).

5. This legal obligation is not new. Since at least 1892, Michigan courts have held that canvassers cannot "go behind" the returns and challenge the results based on allegations (or even evidence) of voter fraud. A failure to certify based on a canvasser's belief or theory that the election was somehow "stolen" would be flatly impermissible.

6. There are other avenues in Michigan for issues of voter fraud to be litigated. The county boards of canvassers are not the fora for those disputes.

7. This makes good sense. The boards of county canvassers must work on a tight schedule. The canvassers are required by law to complete their task within fourteen days of the election. It is critical to the smooth functioning of the electoral system that the tabulation and certification of the election results not be disrupted by charges and counter-charges of alleged voter fraud.

8. Although boards of canvassers have traditionally behaved in ways consistent with their ministerial nature, given their composition, the boards of canvassers are potentially prone to partisan disruption. They are inherently partisan bodies, comprised of two Republicans and two Democrats. The canvassers are chosen from a list provided by their respective parties. To allow the county canvassers to engage in determinations regarding alleged voter fraud would invite bitter disagreements that risk deadlocking the tabulation and certification of the election results. That is why the ministerial and clerical task of tabulating the returns is the only task that the boards of county canvassers are charged with performing during the certification period.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

9. This limited and specific role of the canvasser boards has been recognized for over 135 years. Thus, in Attorney General v Board of County Canvassers, the Michigan Supreme Court said of the canvassers:

> They are not a judicial or quasi judicial body. They are not a permanent body with administrative functions. They are created for a single occasion and for a single object. They have no means given them to inquire, and no right to inquire, beyond the returns of the local election boards. They have no right to raise outside issues to decide themselves, or to ask us to decide. When they have figured up the returns exactly as handed over to them, they have completed their task, and exhausted their powers. [64 Mich 607, 611; 31 NW 539 (1887) (emphasis added).]

10. Kalamazoo County is not the only county in Michigan where there is a genuine threat of a certification dispute. In fact, other counties in Michigan have already experienced certification disputes. In 2020, the issue dramatically flared in Wayne County, a dispute in which former President Trump was personally involved. And just this year, a dispute arose in Delta County where the county canvass was initially deadlocked along partisan lines. Certification only proceeded following an intervention by the Director of the Bureau of Elections.

11. Since 2020, election deniers have increasingly been appointed to positions in various county boards, including at least in Wayne, Antrim, Muskegon, Berrien, and Kalamazoo counties. The threat of a disruption of the electoral system in Michigan this November is very real. A failure to certify in even a single county imposes significant costs and difficulty for the Board of State Canvassers and the Secretary of State. Such a failure also gives oxygen to conspiracy theories and promotes a false narrative that Michigan's election are unreliable, untrustworthy, and not free and fair exercises in democracy. And, for taxpayers of Kalamazoo County, including the Kellys and nearly one thousand other ACLU members in Kalamazoo County, a failure to certify imposes significant financial costs, squandering taxpayer dollars on what amounts to a partisan political stunt.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

12. In this way, Michigan is part of an emerging national controversy regarding the role of canvassing boards. Throughout the country, election deniers are poised to disrupt the certification process, seeking to place the results of the presidential election in doubt.

13. To prevent this threat to the electoral system, Plaintiffs seek an unequivocal declaration from this Court. Boards of county canvassers must be put on notice of their obligation to certify the results of the election, notwithstanding allegations (or even evidence) of voter fraud. Such a declaration is necessary to deter the injury to the electoral process that election deniers would inflict on the voters of Michigan.

I. JURISDICTION

14. This Court has jurisdiction over this action because it is a civil action, no other court has exclusive jurisdiction over this action, and no law denies the circuit court's jurisdiction over this action.

15. This Court also has jurisdiction over this civil action as "the circuit court for the county in which a plaintiff resides" because this is "an action for declaratory, injunctive, and/or monetary relief to enforce" "[t]he fundamental right to vote." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(a).

16. This Court has authority to grant a declaratory judgment as provided by MCR 2.605 because this case presents an actual controversy. As outlined below, there exists substantial uncertainty about whether Defendant Froman and, thus, the Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers (the "Kalamazoo County Board") will fulfill its legal obligation to certify the results of the November 2024 general election.

17. Uncertainty as to whether the Kalamazoo County Board will comply with its constitutional and statutory obligation to certify the results must be resolved ahead of the November 2024 election. According to The Detroit News, Defendant Froman has openly declared his willingness to defy his legal obligations and his oath of office in contravention of the Michigan

Constitution and centuries of legal precedent. And publicly reported comments by Tony Lorentz, another member of the Kalamazoo County Board, also call into question his willingness to perform his legal obligations. Yet, as explained below, statutory deadlines will make it impractical for this Court to grant plaintiffs meaningful relief during the short 14-day period after the election when the Kalamazoo County Board is required to perform its duties. A declaratory judgment is therefore necessary, as it would set out Defendant's legal obligation and direct the future conduct of the parties prospectively. Accordingly, this Complaint "plead[s] and prove[s] facts which indicate an adverse interest necessitating the sharpening of the issues raised," and declaratory relief is appropriate. Lansing Sch Educ Ass'n v Lansing Bd of Educ, 487 Mich 349, 372 n 20; 792 NW2d 686 (2010).

18. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to MCL 600.1621, MCL 600.1615, MCR 3.305(A)(2), and Const 1963, art 2, § 4. Members of Plaintiff American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan reside in Kalamazoo County, Plaintiffs Sheril Kelly and Scott Kelly reside in Kalamazoo County, Defendant Robert Froman conducts business in Kalamazoo County, and the Kalamazoo County Board exercises its governmental authority in Kalamazoo County.

II. PARTIES

19. Established in 1959, Plaintiff American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan ("ACLU") is the Michigan affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU is a domestic, nonpartisan, and nonprofit corporation organized for the civic, protective, or improvement purpose of protecting rights guaranteed by the United States and Michigan Constitutions. The mission of the ACLU is to realize the promise of the Bill of Rights for all citizens and expand the reach of its guarantees to new areas through public education, advocacy, and organization.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

20. The ACLU seeks to ensure an easy and equal right to vote for every citizen and encourages its members and the people of Michigan to exercise their right to vote. The ACLU works to shape public policy and promotes full and fair access to the ballot, including, for example, by supporting and advocating for the 2022 ballot proposal that expanded protections for the fundamental right to vote in the Michigan Constitution and added text to Article 2, § 7 of that Constitution that is central to this lawsuit.

21. The ACLU is also a membership organization. At present, the ACLU has approximately 987 members in Kalamazoo County, most or all of whom, on information and belief, are registered to vote. The ACLU dedicates substantial time, effort, and resources to voter education and the protection of voting rights. Defendant's refusal to commit to certify the results of the election as required by law harms the ACLU's ability to fulfill its mission to educate and encourage voting. It diverts ACLU resources from other aspects of its mission. The ACLU has organizational standing and associational standing to represent its members who vote in Kalamazoo County and who do not want their vote to be ignored, discarded, exploited, and undermined by a failure to certify the election in Kalamazoo County.

22. Plaintiff Sheril Kelly is a registered voter in Kalamazoo, Michigan. She has lived in Kalamazoo County for over thirty years. She plans to vote in the November 2024 election.

23. Plaintiff Scott Kelly is a registered voter in Kalamazoo, Michigan. He has lived in Kalamazoo County his entire life. He plans to vote in the November 2024 election.

24. Defendant Robert Froman is a member of the Kalamazoo County Board of Canvassers. Defendant Froman and the other county canvassers are responsible for canvassing and certifying election returns for Kalamazoo County. As set forth below, it is his "ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty . . . [as a] member[] of the board of county canvassers, to certify election results based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns." MCL 168.822(3); Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3). Defendant Froman is sued in his official capacity.

III. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

26. There is a clear danger that members of Michigan's various boards of county canvassers will refuse to certify the 2024 general election results, and Kalamazoo County appears to have turned into an epicenter for this danger. In August 2024, Defendant Froman, a member of the Kalamazoo County Board, was reported by The Detroit News to have stated that he believed that the 2020 election had been "most definitely" stolen from former President Trump. When asked if he would certify the 2024 presidential election results if they unfolded the same way, he responded, "No. And that's why I'm there [i.e., serving on the Kalamazoo County Board]." See Ex. 1[1] .

27. At no point has Defendant Froman stated that he would comply with his legal obligation to certify.

A. The Legacy of the 2020 Election

28. On November 17, 2020, in response to completely baseless allegations and rumors about election fraud in Detroit during the 2020 election, two members on the four-member Wayne County Board of Canvassers (the "Wayne County Board")—Monica Palmer and William

[1] Mauger, *Most Election Officials Who Certified Michigan's 2020 Race Are Gone. Hartman—initially voted against certifying county vote totals in the 2020 general election, resulting in a 2-2 deadlock preventing certification.[2]

29. The two board members failing to certify pointed to what they alleged were irregularities in Detroit and surrounding suburban communities.[3] Palmer told the Washington Post, "I believe we do not have complete and accurate information in those poll books."[4]

30. This initial refusal to certify election results sparked a local and national firestorm.

31. The initial deadlock of that board was highlighted by former President Trump, who stated on social media that "Michigan just refused to certify the election results" and praised the "courage" of the board members who voted against certification on social media.[5]

32. Trump legal adviser Jenna Ellis—who has since had her law license suspended and pleaded guilty in a Georgia election subversion criminal case—trumpeted the initial certification deadlock on social media as the first step in a plan to have the Michigan Legislature select the presidential electors and overturn the will of Michigan voters.[6]

33. The certification dispute in Wayne County was just one of many unprecedented certification disputes around the country, and the New York Times reported that the deadlock "was among the starkest examples of how previously routine aspects of the nation's voting system have been tainted by [former President] Trump's monthslong effort to undermine confidence in the election."[7]

34. After the failed initial certification vote, the Wayne County Board heard several hours of public comment from residents of Wayne County, as well as non-partisan poll observers. The board members who refused to certify faced particular criticism for their singling out of purported irregularities in the majority-Black city of Detroit—drawing accusations of both partisan and racial bias.[8]

35. Following hours of criticism, the Wayne County Board reversed course and certified the county election results.[9]

36. The Wayne County Board's initial failure to certify was despite the fact that, even in 2020, Michigan law was clear that canvassing boards have a ministerial duty to certify election based only on the returns.

37. In the days following the certification of the Wayne County election results, two board members tried and failed to "rescind" their votes to certify after being pressured directly by former President Trump and Republican National Committee Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel to block certification in a phone call in which former President Trump told them "[w]e can't let these people take our country away from us."[10]

38. On November 20, 2020, former President Trump held a meeting in the White House with the two Republican leaders of the Michigan Legislature, Senate Majority Leader Mike Shirkey and House Speaker Lee Chatfield. According to CNN, "Trump . . . had invited the lawmakers to the White House this week, as he seeks to subvert the will of voters in a long-shot effort to overturn the results of an election he lost," reportedly urging them to overturn the results of the election.[11]

39. The meeting was held three days before the Board of State Canvassers was scheduled to vote on the certification of the presidential election. On November 23, 2020, notwithstanding the White House meeting, the Board of State Canvassers narrowly voted to certify the results of the election with one of the members of the board abstaining after "he asked questions about Detroit and clearly indicated he did not trust the Michigan election system."[12]

40. In light of the disruption caused by anti-democracy forces in 2020 and the threatened misuse of the canvass process, Michigan's voters in 2022 forcefully re-emphasized the limited role of canvassers, voting by an overwhelming majority to enshrine such principles in the Michigan Constitution—as well as including a fundamental right to vote in the Constitution and establishing a right of action against anyone who attempts to unreasonably burden or interfere with that right.[13]

41. As a result, the Michigan Constitution was amended and the Michigan election law revised by the Legislature to codify what was already established in the case law—that the canvassers' role is a purely ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary one. See Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3) (stating members of boards of canvassers have "the ministerial, clerical, nondiscretionary duty . . . to certify election results"); see also MCL 168.822 (similar).

B. The Threat in 2024 in Michigan

42. In 2024, there are strong indicators that certain members of the boards of county canvassers, citing baseless allegations of election fraud or other election defects as their justification, will refuse to certify election results.

1. Numerous County Canvass Board Members Continue to Question the Legitimacy of the 2020 Election

43. Across the state, there has been significant turnover of individuals serving on boards of county canvassers. In August 2024, The Detroit News reported that 55% of the 332 current Michigan county canvassers had not served as canvassers in November 2020, including 63% of the current Republican county canvassers.[14]

44. Among the new county canvassers are multiple individuals who have (i) publicly expressed the false view that the 2020 presidential election in Michigan was tainted by election fraud and/or (ii) publicly called into question whether President Biden prevailed over former President Trump in Michigan.

45. An April 21, 2021 audit of the 2020 presidential election conducted by the Michigan Secretary of State "found no examples of fraud or intentional misconduct by election officials and no evidence that equipment used to tabulate or report election results did not function properly when properly programmed and tested."[15] And the Wayne County Circuit Court found such claims to be "incorrect and not credible." Ex. 2.

46. Despite the audit results, multiple new county canvassers have publicly pushed discredited theories questioning the integrity and security of the 2020 election in Michigan. For example:

a. Two members of the Wayne County Board—neither of whom served on the Board in 2020—have each made public statements casting doubt on the legitimacy of the 2020 election. One canvasser said that he would not have certified the results of the 2020 election; in October 2021, he claimed, without basis, that the vote was "inaccurate."[16] The other has also repeatedly denied the results of the 2020 election.[17]

b. A January 2022 article reported that a member of the Antrim County Board of Canvassers who began his term in 2023 has deemed former President Trump's contention that the 2020 election was stolen from him a "credible accusation."[18]

c. A member of the Muskegon County Board of Canvassers who began her term in 2023 shared a false news story in November 2020 headlined "Breaking Down the Greatest Electoral Heist in American History."[19]

d. A member of the Berrien County Board of Canvassers who began her term in 2023 has shared multiple social media posts calling into doubt the legitimacy of the 2020 election, including re-posting on Facebook a post that reads, "January 6th will be forever remembered as the day the government setup a staged riot to cover up the fact that they certified a fraudulent election."[20]

47. Public assertions of uncertainty regarding who won the presidential election in Michigan in 2020, made despite the fact that those assertions have been conclusively discredited, indicates that many canvassers will be inclined to improperly refuse to certify the results of the 2024 election based on their belief that election fraud may have occurred during the election.

2. Delta County: A Recent Certification Dispute

48. The threat of county canvassing boards refusing to fulfill their legal and constitutional duty to certify elections is demonstrably real. County canvassers recently abrogated their legal duties following the May 2024 election for the Delta County Board of Commissioners.

49. On May 7, 2024, three incumbents on the Delta County Board of Commissioners faced a recall election. All three of these incumbents lost by significant margins.[21]

50. On May 14, 2024, two members of the Delta County Board of Canvassers (the "Delta County Board") voted against certifying the May 7 recall election results, resulting in a 2-2 deadlock.

51. The canvassers who opposed certification contended that there were irregularities in the vote counts, a supposition that they apparently based on the similarities in vote totals across the three races that they inexplicably found suspicious.[22] However, Nancy Przewrocki, the county clerk in Delta County, said, "we matched the numbers of voters . . . to the numbers of ballots counted by tabulators—all the numbers match 100%."[23]

52. Two days after the Delta County Board failed to certify, Michigan Bureau of Elections Director Jonathan Brater wrote a letter to the Delta County Board members in which he urged the canvassers to fulfill their "ministerial, clerical, [and] nondiscretionary" duty to certify the results of the election.[24] Brater explained the consequences if the Delta County Board failed to certify, including that it would be required to personally deliver to the Secretary of the Board of State Canvassers all information pertaining to the election and that Delta County would be responsible for covering the "substantial" costs associated with the state certification.[25] Finally, Brater reminded the Delta County Board that while "there are multiple separate, independent ways for election records to be reviewed and investigations to be conducted," the job of the Delta County Board "is to review the election returns and certify the election solely based on the returns."[26]

53. On May 17, 2024, one of the members of the Delta County Board who had refused to certify relented, and the election was certified by a vote of 3-0.[27] The other canvasser abstained from the final certification vote without any legal basis for doing so.[28]

54. Following the certification, another member of the Delta County Board called on one of the members who initially voted against certification to step down, noting that she "didn't follow our oath—[she] didn't do her job."[29] He added that it could be a "real problem" if certification issues persisted during the 2024 presidential election.[30]

55. A subsequent partial audit of the Delta County Board of Commissioners election found no irregularities and confirmed the accuracy of the vote totals.[31]

3. The Threat at the Kalamazoo County Board

56. The risk of non-certification in the November 2024 is now perhaps most pronounced in Kalamazoo County.

57. Neither Republican appointee on the Kalamazoo County Board served in 2020. Both have made statements casting doubt on whether they will exercise their constitutional and statutory mandate to certify elections based solely on the returns.

58. Defendant Froman began his term on November 1, 2023.

59. According to an August 5, 2024 article by The Detroit News, Defendant Froman expressed the view that the 2020 election was "most definitely" stolen from former President Trump.[32] When asked if he would certify the 2024 presidential election if it unfolded the same way as the 2020 election, he responded, "No. And that's why I'm there [i.e., serving on the Kalamazoo County Board]."[33]

60. Later in the article, Defendant Froman is reported to have added, "I am not going to do anything that's illegal."[34] But this obviously must be read in context of his prior reported statements that the reason he now serves on the Kalamazoo County Board is to not certify if the election unfolds in the same way as the 2020 election.

61. Indeed, Defendant Froman is further quoted in the same article as saying that he sees his intended actions as part of a commitment to preventing a replay of the 2020 election. Defendant Froman is quoted as saying: "Many people within the framework or ideology of the Republican Party have realized that they have been sitting in their living rooms way too long, and the country that they know and love is being stolen out from under them . . . And they're not willing to sit in their living rooms any longer."[35]

62. Defendant Froman has reportedly acted in just that manner. Per The Detroit News: "Concerns about the 2020 election spurred Froman to get more actively involved in politics" and he "started attending Kalamazoo County Republican Party meetings and volunteering with an entity named Check My Vote, which has been trying to examine and verify addresses used by Michigan residents in the state's official list of registered voters."[36]

63. Following The Detroit News reporting, on August 15, 2024, the ACLU wrote a letter to Defendant Froman (the "ACLU Letter") in which the ACLU reminded Defendant Froman of his certification responsibilities under the Michigan Constitution and Michigan election law, and pointed out that a refusal to certify would be an illegal act. See Ex. 3.

64. The ACLU Letter raised key points about the responsibility of county canvassers. Specifically, it included:

a. A reminder that "[t]he law does not authorize members of boards of canvassers to withhold certification based upon speculation, theories, or even evidence pertaining to the accuracy of the reported returns," id. p 1;

b. Reference to the Brater Letter which "emphasize[d] that members of county canvassing boards are not permitted to refuse to certify election results based on claims by third parties of alleged election irregularities, or a desire to conduct election fraud investigations," id. p 2;

c. Cases establishing that even before the 2022 constitutional and statutory changes to Michigan election law, the Michigan Supreme Court held that "it is the settled law of this State that canvassing boards are bound by the return, and cannot go behind it, especially for the purpose of determining frauds in the election. Their duties are purely ministerial and clerical," id. (collecting cases); and

d. A reminder that "it is a nondiscretionary legal duty for a Board of County Canvassers member to certify the election based on election returns, to refuse to do so because of rumors, allegations, or even evidence of fraud would expose that member to criminal liability," id.

65. The ACLU Letter asked Defendant Froman to clarify his position regarding the role of county canvassers, including (i) if he was misquoted, to notify The Detroit News that he was misquoted in the article and request a retraction of his statements, or (ii) if he was not misquoted, to rescind his statements and issue a public statement concerning the role of county canvassers in the election certification process.

66. Defendant Froman responded to the ACLU Letter via email the next day. He stated, "I did not make any of the statements you say I did. I have not seen or approved any article by the Detroit News. I will make no public statement about what the Detroit News published. I believe the first amendment to the Constitution allows the press to publish any information they deem necessary." See Ex. 4.

67. Critically, Defendant Froman provided no assurances that he would certify the election if faced with allegations or evidence of fraud, even after being confronted with repeated statements regarding his legal duties in this regard.

68. Defendant Froman's claim that he did not make the statements quoted in The Detroit News lacks credibility given his simultaneous refusal to contact The Detroit News to seek a retraction. If a public official were inaccurately quoted in a major publication declaring their intention to violate their constitutional and legal obligations, it is highly unlikely that the official would not seek a retraction, particularly under threat of litigation.

69. The ACLU communicated Mr. Froman's denial of his comments to The Detroit News. The Detroit News responded with a letter to the ACLU, dated August 29, indicating that they stand by their story. See Ex. 5.

70. Defendant Froman has now had a clear opportunity to clarify his understanding of the role of county canvassers and to affirm that the decision to certify must be based solely on the returns. And yet, his statements and subsequent dubious denial of those statements make it uncertain that he will lawfully carry out his duties as a county canvasser.

71. The other Republican on the Kalamazoo County Board, Tony Lorentz, has also expressed doubt about whether President Biden won the election in 2020. He has also made public comments raising concerns whether he will faithfully execute his duty to certify the elections based on the returns alone.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

72. According to a January 2022 Detroit Free Press article, when asked whether he would vote to certify elections, Lorentz responded that it "depends how they look."[37]

73. In the event that these two canvassers on the Kalamazoo County Board fail to exercise their ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty to certify the 2024 election result in Kalamazoo County, it would likely result in a 2-2 deadlock at the Kalamazoo County Board.

74. A certification deadlock at the county level would shift responsibility to the Board of State Canvassers to complete the task of certifying the election for Kalamazoo County.

75. While Michigan election law empowers the Board of State Canvassers to carry out that responsibility, having to do so would increase the burden on the Board of State Canvassers at a time when it has other significant responsibilities of its own relating to administration of the election in Michigan and a narrow window of time to carry out those duties.

76. Moreover, the failure of county canvassers to carry out their ministerial, clerical, nondiscretionary duty to certify would sow confusion in the election process and increase distrust in the integrity of the election.

77. Such a failure would also impose significant costs on the taxpayers of Kalamazoo County, including the Kelly Plaintiffs and other ACLU members in Kalamazoo County, as they would be forced to fund the costs of having the Board of State Canvassers undertake the certification.

78. The prospect of certification issues is not merely an administrative inconvenience. As Aghogho Edevbie, Michigan Deputy Secretary of State, has previously stated before becoming [37] New GOP Canvassers Who Embrace Election Lies Raise Prospects of Chaotic Certification, supra.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Deputy Secretary, county canvassers' failure to timely certify election results "would be tremendously destabilizing."[38]

4. Check My Vote and Election Deniers on the Boards of County Canvassers.

79. The concerns regarding Defendant Froman's likely course of conduct are heightened by Defendant Froman's connections with Check My Vote ("CMV"). As reported in The Detroit News, Defendant Froman is a CMV "county leader" or "trainer" working with CMV to investigate the state's registered voter list.[39]

80. CMV is a software tool supported by Election Eagle QC, LLC ("Election Eagle"). CMV's stated mission is to "help[] identify and rectify irregularities in voter rolls." To that end, CMV has created a software tool used by the election denial movement to identify supposedly questionable voters and prevent them from freely exercising their right to vote.

81. The articles of organization for Election Eagle identify two co-founders, one of whom failed to secure a position on the Oakland County Board of Canvassers after he declined to answer whether he believes that the 2020 election was properly certified.[40]

82. Defendant Froman is not a passive member of CMV, as he has reportedly said that he had personally checked tens of thousands of addresses.[41]

83. Defendant Froman is not the only CMV activist now serving on a board of county canvassers. According to a July 2023 announcement from the Michigan Republican Party, other

CMV "county leaders" who now serve on boards of county canvassers include Bonnie Kellog in Muskegon County, Maureen Hillary in Clinton County, and Ron Palmgren in Genesee County.[42]

C. National Context: Election Denialism Has Created a Nationwide Movement Undermining the Apolitical Task of Vote Certification.

84. The movement by members of canvassing boards to refuse to perform their ministerial duties is not limited to Michigan and is part of a rising national tide of election denialist activity.

85. Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington ("CREW") has identified eight states under threat of non-certification, including Michigan, and "35 rogue election officials across the country who have already refused to certify election results and may be in a position to do so again."[43] Two salient examples illustrate the nature of this threat.

86. In Nevada, an official recommended against certifying a 2023 election and stated that "[t]he elections of 2024 will be an epic battle." He suggested that election officials should "reject the corruption" in 2024 by declining to certify elections.[44] Nevada faced certification issues again this cycle when Washoe County declined to certify the 2024 primary results.[45]

87. In Georgia, a new state rule changed the authority of election canvassers and will potentially "allow some local election boards to refuse to certify."[46] This rule change is being challenged in court amid allegations that it increases the prospect of certification disputes in Georgia, which could cause "chaos" in November.[47]

88. Additional public reporting confirms the trend and suggests coordination among these election deniers. Just last week, USA Today reported that leaders of the Republican Party in Colorado have sent notices to local canvassing board members urging them not to certify the vote in their regions. The Colorado GOP's "election integrity unit" was quoted using language eerily similar to that from Nevada election officials: "The elections of 2024 will be an epic battle" and "Our standing and credibility will be upheld if we reject the corruption of the unchanged voting process—in Colorado and throughout the nation."[48]

89. As set forth in the CREW Report: "The threat of disruption looms large in this year's elections. If county officials successfully obstruct certification, it could have a cascading effect on state and federal certification deadlines. It could also lead to mass disenfranchisement of qualified voters."

IV. LEGAL CONTEXT AND RELEVANT PROCEDURES GOVERNING MICHIGAN'S ELECTIONS

A. The Canvass at the County Level

1. Precinct-Level Canvass

90. After the polls close on election day, election inspectors (the formal term for poll workers in Michigan) in each precinct immediately perform the precinct-level canvass. MCL 168.801. The election inspectors compare poll lists and correct any mistakes. Id. They seal all of the ballots in a designated container that is delivered to the township or city clerk. MCL 168.805.

91. The election inspectors then "prepare duplicate statements of the returns showing the whole number of votes cast for all offices voted that are to be canvassed by the board of county canvassers, the names of the persons for whom the votes were given, and the number each person received." MCL 168.806(1). Each member of the board of election inspectors[49] "sign[s] the certificate on the statement of returns" attesting to the correctness of the returns and the packaging, sealing, and indorsing of the ballots. MCL 168.806(2). The results of the election inspectors' canvass are immediately available to interested persons present at the precinct, including election challengers. MCL 168.807.

92. Two election inspectors from each precinct, one from each of the major political parties, then deliver the sealed ballot container, along with the poll book and statement of returns, to the city or town's receiving board. MCL 168.679a. The receiving board ensures that the ballot container is properly sealed, that the seal number is properly recorded in the poll book and statement of returns, and that the number of voters recorded in the poll book is equal to the number of ballots. MCL 168.679a(3).

[49] The term "board of election inspectors" is a term of art used throughout Michigan's election law which refers to the group of election inspectors assigned to any particular precinct, counting board, or other location relating to election administration. See, e.g., MCL 168.677 (governing the appointment of boards of election inspectors).

93. The board of election inspectors seals one copy of the statement of returns and one tally return sheet in an envelope addressed to the board of county canvassers, care of the judge of probate. MCL 168.809(1). The board of election inspectors then delivers this envelope to the clerk of the township or city, which delivers it to the probate judge. Id. The probate judge provides the sealed envelope to the board of county canvassers when it meets. Id.

94. The other statement of returns and the precinct's poll list are sealed in an envelope addressed to the county clerk. MCL 168.809(2). The board of election inspectors delivers this envelope to the clerk upon completion of the count. Id. The clerk then opens the envelope, compiles unofficial returns, and makes the returns available to the public. Id.

95. Ballots, ballot boxes, and other election materials are kept in the possession of the city or township clerk until otherwise directed by the board of county canvassers. MCL 168.810a(1). Major political parties may designate individuals to monitor access points to the location where the materials are kept until 1:00 p.m. on the day after the election unless additional security is required by the board of county canvassers. MCL 168.810a(2).

2. Absent Voter Counting Boards

96. Michigan law provides that "not less than 75 days before the day of an election, the clerk of a city or township may . . . [e]nter into an agreement with the clerk of the county . . . to establish an absent voter counting board to count the absent voter ballots for that city or township." MCL 168.764d(1), (3).

97. Absent voter county boards ("AVCBs") must consist of at least two election inspectors. MCL 168.764d(8)(a). Absent voter ballots must always be monitored by election inspectors during processing and tabulation. MCL 168.765a(8). During this early counting process, election inspectors are charged with securing the tabulated ballots in sealed ballot containers at the end of each day. MCL 168.765a(15). Election inspectors are also charged with creating a "poll book ballot summary at the conclusion of each day to account for absent voter ballot return envelopes and absent voter ballots processed and tabulated on that day." Id.

98. With a few exceptions, AVCBs are required to process ballots and returns in a manner that "as nearly as possible" reflects the manner that ballots are processed in election day precincts. MCL 168.765a(6). Jurisdictions with a population of at least 5,000 may begin processing and tabulating absentee votes up to eight days prior to the election, while smaller jurisdictions must tabulate them on election day. MCL 168.765a(6), (11).

99. "For each day of processing and tabulation of absent voter ballots before election day, a participating city or township clerk shall deliver the absent voter ballots approved for tabulation to an absent voter counting board." MCL 168.765a(13).

3. The County Boards: How They Are Constituted

100. By law, every county must have a four-person board of canvassers. MCL 168.24a(1).[50]

101. The participants in the four-member board are selected from "each of the 2 political parties casting the greatest number of votes for secretary of state at the preceding general November election in that county." MCL 168.24c(1). In the ordinary course, each county board is comprised of two Democrats and two Republicans.

[50] See also Secretary of State, Procedures and Duties of the Boards of County Canvassers (July 2024), p 2, available at <https://www.michigan.gov/sos/-/media/Project/Websites/sos/02lehman/BCC_Manual.pdf> (hereinafter "County Canvassers Manual").

4. The County Boards: What They Do

102. No later than 9:00 a.m. on the Thursday following election day, the board of county canvassers for each county begins the county-level canvass. MCL 168.821(1). The board of county canvassers must perform this canvass based solely on the statements of returns from the precincts and AVCB and any corrected returns. Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3); MCL 168.822(3).

103. "Statements of returns" refers to the statements prepared and certified by the precinct election inspectors showing the total number of votes cast, the names for whom those votes were casts, and the number of votes that each person received. MCL 168.806. The forms for these statements must be provided by the county election commissioners to each precinct and must be "as prescribed by the secretary of state for use by the precinct election inspectors in making returns of any primary or election to the boards of county canvassers." MCL 168.667(a).

104. The county canvass must be completed "at the earliest possible time," and no later than fourteenth day after the election. MCL 168.822(1).

105. Although these duties are clerical and ministerial in nature, they are time-consuming. In a large county such as Kalamazoo, for example, there were 107 precincts that had to be canvassed in 2020.[51]

106. For each precinct, the board must separately check the precinct's pollbook for completion, check the statement of votes for internal consistency, and tally all write-in votes.[52]

107. As such, it is not uncommon for large counties to require the entire 14-day period to complete the canvas, despite exercising their authority to employ the assistance of multiple election inspectors.

5. The Post-Canvass Statements and Report

108. Upon completing the canvass, the board of county canvassers prepares a statement of votes showing the number of votes cast for each office, the names for whom the votes were cast, and the number of votes given to each person, "as shown by the returns of the boards of inspectors of election of the various voting precincts of the county." MCL 168.824(1). The statement of votes must include the "total number of votes cast for each candidate for each office in the county." See County Canvassers Manual, pp 58–59.

109. No later than twenty-four hours after the completion of the canvass, the clerk of the board of county canvassers must transmit a certified copy of these statements to the Secretary of State. MCL 168.828.

110. These statements are compiled into a "County Canvassers' Report." County Canvassers Manual, p 57. This report includes, inter alia, "[t]he votes cast for offices and ballot questions for which the Board of State Canvassers is responsible for certifying," id., p 58, which includes the President of the United States, id., p 62.

111. If a board of county canvassers fails to certify by the fourteenth day after the election, it must immediately deliver all records pertaining to the election to the secretary of the Board of State Canvassers. MCL 168.82.

B. The Canvass at the State Level

112. The Board of State Canvassers consists of four members appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Board of State Canvassers consists of two members from each major political party. MCL 168.22(3). The Governor selects members from lists of nominees provided by the two major political parties. MCL 168.22a(1).

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

113. The Board of State Canvassers' duty includes the responsibility to "canvass the returns and determine the result of all elections for electors of president and vice president of the United States." MCL 168.841(1).

114. The Board of State Canvassers is required to meet as soon as practicable following the receipt of returns from the boards of county canvassers, but in no event later than twenty days after the date of the election. MCL 168.42(1).

115. During the Board of State Canvassers' meeting, the board is required to examine the certified statements of votes from the boards of county canvassers and prepare a statement showing the total number of votes cast for all candidates for each office and the number of votes for each such candidate. MCL 168.844.

116. When the boards of county canvassers have submitted a certified statement of votes, it is the "ministerial, clerical, [and] nondiscretionary duty" of the Board of State Canvassers to certify the election results based on such certified statements. Const 1963, art 2, § 7; MCL 168.842(4).

117. The results must be certified no later than the twentieth day after the election, which means that in instances where the Board of State Canvassers has to step in after the failure by a county board to certify, the state board has only six additional days to complete the county canvass in addition to performing its own statutorily mandated tasks. MCL 168.822(2).

118. Following the canvass, the Board of State Canvassers must "determine which persons have been duly elected." MCL 168.845. The Board of State Canvassers then certifies that determination and submits the certificate of determination along with the statement of votes to the Michigan Secretary of State. Id.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

119. If the Board of State Canvassers is required to take over the duties of a board of county canvassers, "[a]ll costs associated with the completion of the canvass must be borne by the county involved." MCL 168.822(2). These costs may include "costs needed for transportation, lodging, meals, [and] all costs incurred by the Michigan Department of State, Michigan Department of Attorney General, Michigan State Police, and any other state agency." County Canvassers Manual, p 18; see also Brater Letter, p 3.

120. Because the Board of State Canvassers likely would have as little as six days following a board of county canvassers' refusal to certify, and because of the time-intensive nature of the ministerial duties involved with certification, the refusal by a single board of county canvassers, including the Kalamazoo County Board, would foist an unjustified and cumbersome responsibility upon the Board of State Canvassers at a time when the Board of State Canvassers already has significant and critical obligations of its own to which it must attend. Should numerous county boards simultaneously refuse to certify, the burden on the Board of State Canvassers would increase exponentially, and would create a high-pressure environment that would present particularly fertile ground for the sprouting of election-related conspiracy theories. As Michigan, and the entire United States, have witnessed since 2020, such dangerous and febrile theories cannot be easily pruned once they have grown, no matter how many times they are proven false.

C. The County Canvassers Must Consider Only the Formal Returns and Have No Authority to Consider Claims of Fraud When Performing the Canvass.

121. Michigan election law states the obligation of the county boards when conducting the canvass. In particular, the county board is to limit the canvass to "the precinct returns, early voting returns, and absent voter counting board returns." Per MCL 168.822(1):

> The board of county canvassers shall . . . canvass the returns of votes cast for all candidates for offices voted for . . . according to the precinct returns, early voting returns, and absent voter counting > board returns filed with the probate judge or presiding probate judge by the several city and township clerks . . . .

122. These duties include "[c]anvassing each of the county's precincts by carefully reviewing the vote totals reported and ensuring consistency across all election forms and certificates."[53] County Canvassers Manual, p 1.

123. If, during the canvass, the board of county canvassers finds that the returns from any election precinct "are missing, incomplete, or incorrect, or for any other reason it is found necessary," the board of county canvassers may "adjourn from day to day until the returns shall have been procured or corrected." MCL 168.823(1).

124. The board of county canvassers may also require the person in possession of the ballots or the returns and poll lists to bring those materials before the county board. MCL 168.823(2). The members of the board may open the ballot boxes and remove "any books or papers bearing upon the count and return of the election inspectors of the election precincts." Id. They may not, however, "remove or mark the ballots." Id.

125. The board of county canvassers is obligated to "correct obvious mathematical errors in the tallies and returns." MCL 168.823(3) (emphasis added). If the board of county canvassers determines, after examining the returns, poll lists, or tally sheets, that the returns are incorrect or incomplete, it may take one of two courses of action: It may "summon the election inspectors," and require the election inspectors "to count any ballots that the election inspectors failed to count." Id. Alternatively, it may "designate staff members from the county clerk's office to count any ballots that the election inspectors failed to count." Id. In either case, the board of county canvassers then canvasses the votes from the corrected returns. Id.

126. "It is the ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty of each board of county canvassers, and each of the members of the board of county canvassers, to certify election results based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns." MCL 168.822(3). The "ministerial, clerical, [and] nondiscretionary" nature of these duties is confirmed and reinforced by the Michigan Constitution. Const 1963, art 2, § 7.

127. In Michigan, "[a] ministerial act . . . leave[s] nothing to the exercise of discretion or judgment." Barrow v Wayne Co Bd of Canvassers, 341 Mich App 473, 486; 991 NW2d 610 (2022); Taxpayers for Mich Constitutional Gov't v Michigan, 508 Mich 48, 82; 972 NW2d 738 (2021).

128. These provisions of the Michigan election law and the Michigan Constitution are consistent with the longstanding law in Michigan. As early as 1892, the Michigan Supreme Court held "it is the settled law of this state that canvassing boards are bound by the return, and cannot go behind it, especially for the purpose of determining frauds in the election. Their duties are purely ministerial and clerical. They must be governed by the return." McQuade v Furgason, 91 Mich 438, 440; 51 NW 1073 (1892); see also Attorney General v Bd of Co Canvassers, 64 Mich 607, 611; 31 NW 539 (1887).

129. This view of the law has repeatedly been reaffirmed over the past 100 years. See Johnson v Secretary of State, 506 Mich 975, 975 (2020) (CLEMENT, J., concurring) ("At no point in this process is it even proper for [the county boards of canvassers] to investigate fraud, illegally cast votes, or the like."); McLeod v Kelly, 304 Mich 120, 127; 7 NW2d 240 (1942) (similar).

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

130. Thus, boards of county canvassers "do not have any discretion to consider" evidence or information other than the returns. County Canvassers Manual, p 2. County boards cannot, for example "refuse to certify election results based on third party claims alleging election irregularities, or a general desire to conduct election investigations." Id.

D. Michigan Election Law Provides Alternative Recourse for Investigating Fraud

131. While it is not within the boards of county canvassers' mandate to investigate allegations of election fraud, Michigan election law provides appropriate legal avenues and recourse to candidates to pursue investigations into alleged fraud.

132. For example, an aggrieved candidate may petition for a recount, MCL 168.862; the Secretary of State may investigate violations of election laws, MCL 168.31(h); the Secretary of State can audit the results of an election, MCL 168.31a; the Attorney General can bring an action seeking quo warranto, MCL 600.4501, as may an aggrieved person in any election other than for the offices of electors of President or Vice President if the Attorney General refuses to do so, id.; and/or an aggrieved presidential candidate may seek review of the certification by the Board of State Canvassers by filing a mandamus action in the Supreme Court, MCL 168.845a.

133. What is clear under the law, however, is that investigations into allegations of election fraud are to occur post-county certification and have no role to play in the county certification process.

134. This action is necessary because Defendant Froman has been reported by The Detroit News to have publicly declared that he will act in defiance of these well-established principles, creating uncertainty as to whether the Kalamazoo County Board will carry out its legal duty under Michigan law.

V. CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

COUNT I
Declaratory Judgment
Const 1963, art 2, § 7
MCR 2.605

135. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference all foregoing paragraphs as though fully set forth herein.

136. Pursuant to MCR 2.605, this Court has the authority to declare the rights and legal relations of the parties to this action.

137. There exists an actual case and controversy between the parties because Defendant has expressed an intent to violate the Michigan Constitution.

138. The Constitution establishes that "[i]t shall be the ministerial, clerical, nondiscretionary duty of a board of canvassers, and of each individual member thereof, to certify election results based solely on: . . . in the case of boards of county canvassers, statements of returns from the precincts and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns." Const 1963, art 2, § 7(3). "A ministerial act is one in which the law prescribes and defines the duty to be performed with such precision and certainty as to leave nothing to the exercise of discretion or judgment." Taxpayers for Mich Constitutional Gov't v Michigan, 508 Mich 48, 82; 972 NW2d 738 (2021), quoting Hillsdale Co Senior Servs, Inc v Hillsdale Co, 494 Mich 46, 58 n 11; 832 NW2d 728 (2013).

139. By law, county canvassers must tally the vote counts reported in the returns and certify the results of the election. They may not consider any other evidence, including any allegations of suspected fraud, that they receive from precincts or any other source. See McLeod v Kelly, 304 Mich 120, 127; 7 NW2d 240 (1942).

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

140. Nonetheless, Defendant has stated that he will not certify the election if it unfolds in the same manner as 2020. Indeed, Defendant Froman is reported to have told The Detroit News that blocking certification of the election results is "why [he is] there," meaning why he is on the Kalamazoo County Board.[54] While he denied making that statement in an unsworn email to the ACLU, he also did not contact The Detroit News to retract the statement, and did not deny that he actually would not certify the election in 2024 if it were to unfold in the same manner as it did in 2020. Defendant Froman's denial as to what he actually said is simply not credible.

141. Defendant's stated willingness to violate his constitutional and statutory duty creates an actual controversy that requires the Court to intervene. A declaratory judgment that county canvassers may not refuse to certify election results based on information extrinsic to the statements of returns—including any allegations of fraud—would direct the parties' conduct prospectively and would ensure that Defendant Froman does not abuse his office to propagate baseless conspiracy theories and unlawfully foist his obligations onto members of the Board of State Canvassers at significant expense to Kalamazoo County's taxpayers, including the Kelly Plaintiffs and nearly 1,000 other ACLU members residing in the county.

142. Accordingly, Plaintiffs are entitled to declaratory relief.

COUNT II
Declaratory Judgment
MCL 168.822
MCR 2.605

143. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference all foregoing paragraphs as though fully set forth herein.

[54] Most Election Officials Who Certified Michigan's 2020 Race Are Gone, supra.

144. Pursuant to MCR 2.605, this Court has the authority to declare the rights and legal relations of the parties to this action.

145. There exists an actual case and controversy between the parties because Defendant has expressed an intent to violate Michigan election law.

146. Michigan election law dictates that "[i]t is the ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty of each board of county canvassers, and each of the members of the board of county canvassers, to certify election results based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns." MCL 168.822(3).

147. For the same reasons that Defendant's planned course of action violates Article 2, § 7 of the Michigan Constitution, it also violates MCL 168.822.

148. Defendant's stated willingness to violate Michigan election law creates an actual controversy that necessitates this Court's intervention. A declaratory judgment that county canvassers may not refuse to certify election results based on extrinsic information outside the four corners of the statements of returns would direct the parties' conduct prospectively and would ensure that Defendant Froman does not abuse his office to propagate baseless conspiracy theories and unlawfully foist his obligations onto members of the Board of State Canvassers at significant expense to Kalamazoo County's taxpayers, including the Kelly Plaintiffs and nearly 1,000 other ACLU members residing in the county.

149. Accordingly, Plaintiffs are entitled to declaratory relief.

COUNT III
Violation of the Fundamental Right to Vote
Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(a)

150. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference all foregoing paragraphs as though fully set forth herein.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

151. The Michigan Constitution protects "[t]he fundamental right to vote," and prohibits any person from "us[ing] any means whatsoever, any of which has the intent or effect of denying, abridging, interfering with, or unreasonably burdening the fundamental right to vote." Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(a). It also provides that "[a]ny Michigan citizen or citizens shall have standing to bring an action for declaratory, injunctive, and/or monetary relief to enforce the rights created by this part (a) of subsection (4)(1) on behalf of themselves." Id.

152. Defendant has asserted his willingness not to certify the results of the election if he suspects that the results were affected by fraud. Such a failure to certify would be contrary to both the Michigan Constitution and Michigan election law. It would also have the intent and effect of interfering with the fundamental right to vote of every citizen in Kalamazoo County. Indeed, by delaying and stonewalling the required certification, a refusal to certify would constitute an intent to disenfranchise all Kalamazoo County voters for an indeterminate period of time after the election. It would also unreasonably burden every Kalamazoo County voter's fundamental right to vote by forcing them to foot the bill, through their taxpayer dollars, for the costs of having the Board of State Canvassers take over the duties of the Kalamazoo County Board.

153. Accordingly, this Court should declare that Defendant must abide by his statutory and constitutional duties and certify the results of the election.

154. This Court should also award Plaintiffs reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and disbursements, as required by Article 2, § 4 of the Michigan Constitution. Const 1963, art 2, § 4(1)(a).

VI. RELIEF REQUESTED

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully requests that this Court:

A. Enter judgment in favor of Plaintiffs and against Defendant;

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

B. Declare that Article 2, § 7 of the Michigan Constitution requires Defendant to certify the results of the election based solely on the statements of returns from the precincts and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns, and that Defendant may not refuse to certify the results of the election based on any information extrinsic to the statements of returns;

C. Declare that MCL 168.822(3) requires Defendant to certify the results of the election based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns, and that Defendant may not refuse to certify the results of the election based on any information extrinsic to the statements of returns;

D. Declare that Defendant's stated willingness to refuse to certify the results of the election based on information extrinsic to the statements of returns violates Plaintiffs' fundamental right to vote protected by Article 2, § 4(1)(a) of the Michigan Constitution;

E. Award Plaintiffs reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and disbursements, as required by Article 2, § 4(1)(a) of the Michigan Constitution;

F. Grant Plaintiffs any such further relief as the Court deems equitable and just under the circumstances.

Most election officials who certified Michigan's 2020 race are gone. Expert sees trouble

Craig Mauger
The Detroit News

Published 11:00 p.m. ET Aug. 5, 2024 | Updated 11:00 p.m. ET Aug. 5, 2024

Lansing — Widespread change has struck the group of officials whose job is to certify Michigan's elections, igniting concerns about whether the new class is willing to sign off on the results the same way county canvassers in the battleground state did four years ago.

A first-of-its-kind, weeks-long analysis by The Detroit News found 55% of the 332 county canvassers in Michigan were not serving in November 2020 when boards in all 83 counties approved the outcome despite Republican then-President Donald Trump's unsuccessful attempt to overturn his loss to Democrat Joe Biden.

The turnover has been driven by Republicans. While 48% of the Democratic canvassers are new since 2020, 63% — nearly two out of every three — are new on the GOP side, according to The News' analysis.

The numbers point to a Michigan Republican Party that's been focused on false claims of widespread fraud aimed at the 2020 election and GOP canvassers who might interfere with the election process this fall, according to Democrats. But Republicans, such as Kalamazoo County canvasser Robert Froman, said the analysis demonstrates an increased and renewed interest in how elections are administered.

"Many people within the framework or the ideology of the Republican Party have realized that they have been sitting in their living rooms way too long, and the country that they know and love is being stolen out from under them," Froman said. "And they're not willing to sit in their living rooms any longer."

Froman, a 72-year-old retired postal service employee from Oshtemo Township, is one of the 105 new Republican county canvassers who are serving in 2024 but weren't in their positions in 2020.

Each county in Michigan has a four-person canvassing board, featuring two Republicans and two Democrats, in charge of approving election tallies before they're forwarded to the state for final authorization. The panels rarely get attention and, former Michigan elections director Chris Thomas said, their members often held the posts for many years at a time, making vast changes like what's occurred recently unusual.

Concerns about the 2020 election spurred Froman to get more actively involved in politics, he said. Froman started attending Kalamazoo County Republican Party meetings and volunteering with an entity named Check My Vote, which has been trying to examine and verify addresses used by Michigan residents in the state's official list of registered voters.

Froman, whom Republicans nominated to serve on the Kalamazoo County canvassing board and whose term began last year, said he's personally checked tens of thousands of voters' addresses. He said he "most definitely" believes the 2020 election was stolen from Trump.

Asked if he would certify the 2024 presidential election if it unfolded the same way the 2020 one did, Froman replied, "No. And that's why I'm there."

Froman is one of four so-called "county leaders" or "trainers" who have been working with Check My Vote to investigate the state's registered voter list and who have recently gotten county canvassing positions. The others are Bonnie Kellogg in Muskegon County, Maureen Hillary in Clinton County and Ron Palmgren in Genesee County, according to a list of "county leaders" in a July 2023 announcement from the Michigan Republican Party.

The belief system that there was widespread fraud in 2020 and a series of attempts to reject results in Michigan over the last four years have some election officials in Michigan expecting that Republicans on some local canvassing boards might try to block the certification process in November if Trump loses to likely Democratic nominee Kamala Harris.

County canvassing boards must have a bipartisan 3-1 or 4-0 vote to certify election results and advance them to the Board of State Canvassers, another panel comprised of two Republicans and two Democrats.

"At this point, shockingly, it wouldn't surprise me to see several counties deadlock," said Thomas, who served as Michigan's elections director for more than three decades.

'I do worry'

Each of Michigan's 83 county canvassing boards has the responsibility of reviewing the local vote totals and reporting the results to the Board of State Canvassers, according to a manual published by the Michigan Bureau of Elections.

The county boards, featuring two Republican slots and two Democratic slots, have 14 days following Election Day to certify the results for each of their precincts.

The canvassers serve staggered four-year terms, are nominated by their local political party and are picked, from among the party nominees, by the local board of commissioners. However, there is no official state list that tracks who sits on the key elections boards across Michigan.

The News compiled the names of Michigan's county canvassers — those serving now and those serving in 2020 — through questionnaires sent to county clerks in June and July and examining board member lists that were posted on some county websites.

Boards with vacancies are considered by The News to have new members because the positions are expected to be filled before the November election.

Of Michigan's 83 counties, 11 have completely new canvassing boards with four new members from 2020: Alger, Arenac, Clare, Dickinson, Iosco, Mackinac, Manistee, Montmorency, Muskegon, Roscommon and Wayne — the state's most populous county and the site of a brief November 2020 certification deadlock.

In Iosco County, which is located in northeastern Michigan and has a population of about 25,000, Clerk Nancy Huebel said one past board member died, two resigned for personal reasons, and one, Democrat Patti Casey, wasn't reappointed.

In neighboring Arenac County, Janice Grier, 69, of Standish said Democrats were having trouble finding people to serve on the canvassing board a couple of years ago, so she stepped up. In 2020, 67% of the votes in the county went to Trump.

Grier said she hasn't seen anything that would make her concerned about the county board not certifying the upcoming presidential election, but she's not so certain about elsewhere in Michigan.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

"I do worry about other parts of the state," Grier said.

Protect the vote?

Over the last four years, there have been three examples of canvassers in Michigan at least initially refusing to certify an election.

Most recently, in the spring, two Republicans on the Delta County canvassing board in the Upper Peninsula voted against certifying a May 7 recall election in which three incumbent Republican county commissioners lost their seats. However, days later, they changed course and approved the results.

"I am doing my best to protect the votes of all citizens of Delta County and to ensure free and fair elections by bringing transparency and reassurance to all Delta County citizens," one of the Republican canvassers, Bonnie Hakkola, said at the time.

Hakkola resigned from the board afterward.

The other Republican who initially voted against certification, LeeAnne Oman, was serving as an alternate for an absent GOP canvasser, Sema Deeds.

Jonathan Brater, Michigan's elections director, sent a letter to the Delta County canvassers on May 16, telling them that under the Michigan Constitution and state law, they had "a clear and nondiscretionary duty to certify election results based solely on election returns."

"The Constitution and Michigan election law do not authorize boards of county canvassers to refuse to certify election results based on claims made by third parties of alleged election irregularities or a general desire to conduct election investigations," Brater wrote in the letter.

In a statement in May, Attorney General Dana Nessel said "defying the will of the people based on conjecture, dissatisfaction in the results or any other reason not based on Michigan law" will not be tolerated.

"While the Delta County Board ultimately met their obligations, and as a result have avoided the legal consequences, let this serve as a warning to all of the boards of canvassers across the state that the willful neglect of your duties is a criminal act," added Nessel, a Democrat.

Canvassers' role

Asked about the statements from Nessel and Brater about the Delta County canvassers, new Republican Kalamazoo County canvasser Froman said he has a duty to ensure there is a free and fair election.

"I am not going to do anything that's illegal," Froman told The News.

Other new canvassers interviewed by The News in recent weeks made similar remarks.

Ron Palmgren, a Republican canvasser in Genesee County, has also served as a county leader for Check My Vote. Asked if the 2020 presidential election was stolen from Trump, Palmgren said he has "no idea whether it was stolen or not."

Biden won Michigan's election by 154,000 votes or 3 percentage points, 51%-48%. The outcome has been upheld by audits, a series of court rulings and an investigation by a Republican-controlled state Senate committee.

Palmgren, a 76-year-old retiree from Burton, said he views his role as a canvasser as being an "impartial arbiter."

"Based on my experience so far, there is no investigatory process," Palmgren said of his responsibilities. "It is strictly looking at the election results provided by all of the municipalities and making sure that all of the processes that were in place were followed."

Likewise, Jim Kargol, a 69-year-old from Petoskey who serves on the Emmet County Board of Canvassers, said he doesn't believe there's been fraud in local elections, but he questions what has happened in other places, such as Detroit.

Kargol mentioned a van dropping off loads of ballots in the night during the 2020 presidential election in Detroit, a Democratic stronghold. He appeared to be referencing about 16,000 ballots that had been delivered to the center where absentee ballots were being tallied in Detroit in the early morning hours of Nov. 4. The ballots had been verified by city Clerk Janice Winfrey's staff prior to delivery in a process prescribed by Michigan law, said Thomas, Michigan's former elections director who helped oversee voting in Detroit.

"I really think there was some foolishness that went on," said Kargol, a Republican.

Canvassing troubles

After the 2020 presidential election on Nov. 17, 2020, Wayne County's Republican then-canvassers Monica Palmer and William Hartmann questioned precincts in Detroit where the number of ballots cast and the number of votes tracked didn't match and initially voted against certifying the county's results.

But later in the meeting, they changed course and supported certifying the election based on the condition that an audit take place of some precincts within Wayne County.

Minutes after the meeting, Trump and Republican National Committee Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel called Palmer and Hartmann, and Trump personally pressured them not to sign the certification document, according to recordings previously reported on by The Detroit News.

"We've got to fight for our country," Trump said during the phone call, according to the recordings. "We can't let these people take our country away from us."

More: Trump recorded pressuring Wayne County canvassers not to certify 2020 vote

The Michigan Bureau of Elections determined the vote that occurred and the signatures of the chair or vice chair of the four-member canvassing board and the county clerk were the only things necessary to advance the certification to the Board of State Canvassers.

Hartmann died in 2021, and Republican Party officials didn't renominate Palmer to serve on the canvassing board when her term concluded in 2021. The new Republican canvassers are Katherine Riley and Robert Boyd.

Riley, who's now chair of the Wayne County Board of Canvassers, according to the county's website, didn't respond Monday to a request for comment.

There are also two new Democrats on the board, Richard W. Preuss and Frank Woods Jr.

Jonathan Kinloch, a Democrat who was serving on the Wayne County canvassing board in 2020 and is now a Wayne County commissioner, said the question of whether boards will certify the results this fall is at the forefront of his mind.

Wayne County Republicans initially denied that they were going to attempt to block certification in 2020, Kinloch said. Where there's smoke, people should be concerned, he said.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

"I think this is a tactic of theirs to create chaos," Kinloch said.

Legal backstops

If a county canvassing board refuses to certify an upcoming election, Michigan has legal "backstops" in place to deal with the development, Thomas said. But such an attempt could also further undermine people's faith in electoral outcomes, he acknowledged.

Under state processes, if a county board fails to determine a result, the job moves to the Board of State Canvassers, according to the Michigan Bureau of Elections.

The county board is supposed to immediately deliver all records and other information, including all necessary forms, to the Board of State Canvassers. A court could get involved to make sure that step happens.

When the 2020 presidential election reached the state board, one of the two Republicans on the statewide panel abstained: Norm Shinkle of Ingham County. But the other Republican, Aaron Van Langevelde, cast the deciding vote with the two Democrats in favor of certification.

At the time, Shinkle called for the Republican-led Legislature to conduct an in-depth review of election procedures, and he promoted theories about problems in Wayne County.

"I do not plan on voting for certification. I believe Wayne County's certification needs to be looked at," Shinkle said before abstaining.

Van Langevelde and Shinkle are both no longer on the board. They've been replaced by Tony Daunt and Richard Houskamp.

Daunt and Houskamp voted to certify the 2022 gubernatorial election, which Republican Tudor Dixon lost to Democratic Gov. Gretchen Whitmer by about 10 percentage points. Daunt also has openly criticized Trump for spreading "lies" that the 2020 election was rigged.

OPINION & ORDER

At a session of this Court
Held on: November 13, 2020
In the Coleman A. Young Municipal Center
County of Wayne, Detroit, MI

PRESENT: Honorable Timothy M. Kenny
Chief Judge
Third Judicial Circuit Court of Michigan

This matter comes before the Court on Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction, protective order, and a results audit of the November 3, 2020 election. The Court having read the parties' filing and heard oral arguments, finds:

With the exception of a portion of Jessy Jacob affidavit, all alleged fraudulent claims brought by the Plaintiffs related to activity at the TCF Center. Nothing was alleged to have occurred at the Detroit Election Headquarters on West Grand Blvd. or at any polling place on November 3, 2020.

The Defendants all contend Plaintiffs cannot meet the requirements for injunctive relief and request the Court deny the motion.

When considering a petition for injunction relief, the Court must apply the following four-pronged test:

1. The likelihood the party seeking the injunction will prevail on the merits.
2. The danger the party seeking the injunction will suffer irreparable harm if the injunction is not granted.
3. The risk the party seeking the injunction would be harmed more by the absence an injunction than the opposing party would be by the granting of the injunction.
4. The harm to the public interest if the injunction is issued. Davis v City of Detroit Financial Review Team, 296 Mich. App. 568, 613; 821 NW2nd 896 (2012).

In the Davis opinion, the Court also stated that injunctive relief "represents an extraordinary and drastic use of judicial power that should be employed sparingly and only with full conviction of its urgent necessity." Id. at 612 fn 135 quoting Senior Accountants, Analysts and Appraisers Association v Detroit, 218 Mich. App. 263, 269; 553 NW2nd 679 (1996).

When deciding whether injunctive relief is appropriate MCR 3.310 (A)(4) states that the Plaintiffs bear the burden of proving the preliminary injunction should be granted. In cases of alleged fraud, the Plaintiff must state with particularity the circumstances constituting the fraud. MCR 2.112 (B) (1)

Plaintiffs must establish they will likely prevail on the merits. Plaintiffs submitted seven affidavits in support of their petition for injunctive relief claiming widespread voter fraud took place at the TCF Center. One of the affidavits also contended that there was blatant voter fraud at one of the satellite offices of the Detroit City Clerk. An additional affidavit supplied by current Republican State Senator and former Secretary of State Ruth Johnson, expressed concern about allegations of voter fraud and urged "Court intervention", as well as an audit of the votes.

In opposition to Plaintiffs' assertion that they will prevail, Defendants offered six affidavits from individuals who spent an extensive period of time at the TCF Center. In addition to disputing claims of voter fraud, six affidavits indicated there were numerous instances of disruptive and intimidating behavior by Republican challengers. Some behavior necessitated removing Republican challengers from the TCF Center by police.

After analyzing the affidavits and briefs submitted by the parties, this Court concludes the Defendants offered a more accurate and persuasive explanation of activity within the Absent Voter Counting Board (AVCB) at the TCF Center.

Affiant Jessy Jacob asserts Michigan election laws were violated prior to November 3, 2020, when City of Detroit election workers and employees allegedly coached voters to vote for Biden and the Democratic Party. Ms. Jacob, a furloughed City worker temporarily assigned to the Clerk's Office, indicated she witnessed workers and employees encouraging voters to vote a straight Democratic ticket and also witnessed election workers and employees going over to the voting booths with voters in order to encourage as well as watch them vote. Ms. Jacob additionally indicated while she was working at the satellite location, she was specifically instructed by superiors not to ask for driver's license or any photo ID when a person was trying to vote.

The allegations made by Ms. Jacob are serious. In the affidavit, however, Ms. Jacob does not name the location of the satellite office, the September or October date these acts of fraud took place, nor does she state the number of occasions she witnessed the alleged misconduct. Ms. Jacob in her affidavit fails to name the city employees responsible for the voter fraud and never told a supervisor about the misconduct.

Ms. Jacob's information is generalized. It asserts behavior with no date, location, frequency, or names of employees. In addition, Ms. Jacob's offers no indication of whether she took steps to address the alleged misconduct or to alter any supervisor about the alleged voter fraud. Ms. Jacob only came forward after the unofficial results of the voting indicated former Vice President Biden was the winner in the state of Michigan.

Ms. Jacob also alleges misconduct and fraud when she worked at the TCF Center. She claims supervisors directed her not to compare signatures on the ballot envelopes she was processing to determine whether or not they were eligible voters. She also states that supervisors directed her to "pre-date" absentee ballots received at the TCF Center on November 4, 2020. Ms. Jacob ascribes a sinister motive for these directives. Evidence offered by long-time State Elections Director Christopher Thomas, however, reveals there was no need for comparison of signatures at the TCF Center because eligibility had been reviewed and determined at the Detroit Election Headquarters on West Grand Blvd. Ms. Jacob was directed not to search for or compare signatures because the task had already been performed by other Detroit city clerks at a previous location in compliance with MCL 168.765a. As to the allegation of "pre-dating" ballots, Mr. Thomas explains that this action completed a data field inadvertently left blank during the initial absentee ballot verification process. Thomas Affidavit, #12. The entries reflected the date the City received the absentee ballot. Id.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

The affidavit of current State Senator and former Secretary of State Ruth Johnson essentially focuses on the affidavits of Ms. Jacob and Zachery Larsen. Senator Johnson believed the information was concerning to the point that judicial intervention was needed and an audit of the ballots was required. Senator Johnson bases her assessment entirely on the contents of the Plaintiffs' affidavits and Mr. Thomas' affidavit. Nothing in Senator Johnson's affidavit indicates she was at the TCF Center and witnessed the established protocols and how the AVCB activity was carried out. Similarly, she offers no explanation as to her apparent dismissal of Mr. Thomas' affidavit. Senator Johnson's conclusion stands in significant contrast to the affidavit of Christopher Thomas, who was present for many hours at TCF Center on November 2, 3 and 4. In this Court's view, Mr. Thomas provided compelling evidence regarding the activity at the TCF Center's AVCB workplace. This Court found Mr. Thomas' background, expertise, role at the TCF Center during the election, and history of bipartisan work persuasive.

Affiant Andrew Sitto was a Republican challenger who did not attend the October 29th walk- through meeting provided to all challengers and organizations that would be appearing at the TCF Center on November 3 and 4, 2020. Mr. Sitto offers an affidavit indicating that he heard other challengers state that several vehicles with out-of-state license plates pulled up to the TCF Center at approximately 4:30 AM on November 4th. Mr. Sitto states that "tens of thousands of ballots" were brought in and placed on eight long tables and, unlike other ballots, they were brought in from the rear of the room. Sitto also indicated that every ballot that he saw after 4:30 AM was cast for former Vice President Biden.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Mr. Sitto's affidavit, while stating a few general facts, is rife with speculation and guess-work about sinister motives. Mr. Sitto knew little about the process of the absentee voter counting board activity. His sinister motives attributed to the City of Detroit were negated by Christopher Thomas' explanation that all ballots were delivered to the back of Hall E at the TCF Center. Thomas also indicated that the City utilized a rental truck to deliver ballots. There is no evidentiary basis to attribute any evil activity by virtue of the city using a rental truck with out-of-state license plates.

Mr. Sitto contends that tens of thousands of ballots were brought in to the TCF Center at approximately 4:30 AM on November 4, 2020. A number of ballots speculative on Mr. Sitto's part, as is his speculation that all of the ballots delivered were cast for Mr. Biden. It is not surprising that many of the votes being observed by Mr. Sitto were votes cast for Mr. Biden in light of the fact that former Vice President Biden received approximately 220,000 more votes than President Trump.

Daniel Gustafson, another affiant, offers little other than to indicate that he witnessed "large quantities of ballots" delivered to the TCF Center in containers that did not have lids were not sealed, or did not have marking indicating their source of origin. Mr. Gustafson's affidavit is another example of generalized speculation fueled by the belief that there was a Michigan legal requirement that all ballots had to be delivered in a sealed box. Plaintiffs have not supplied any statutory requirement supporting Mr. Gustafson's speculative suspicion of fraud.

Patrick Colbeck's affidavit centered around concern about whether any of the computers at the absent voter counting board were connected to the internet. The answer given by a David Nathan indicated the computers were not connected to the internet. Mr. Colbeck implies that there was internet connectivity because of an icon that appeared on one of the computers. Christopher Thomas indicated computers were not connected for workers, only the essential tables had computer connectivity. Mr. Colbeck, in his affidavit, speculates that there was in fact Wi-Fi connection for workers use at the TCF Center. No evidence supports Mr. Colbeck's position.

This Court also reads Mr. Colbeck's affidavit in light of his pre-election day Facebook posts. In a post before the November 3, 2020 election, Mr. Colbeck stated on Facebook that the Democrats were using COVID as a cover for Election Day fraud. His predilection to believe fraud was occurring undermines his credibility as a witness.

Affiant Melissa Carone was contracted by Dominion Voting Services to do IT work at the TCF Center for the November 3, 2020 election. Ms. Carone, a Republican, indicated that she "witnessed nothing but fraudulent actions take place" during her time at the TCF Center. Offering generalized statements, Ms. Carone described illegal activity that included, untrained counter tabulating machines that would get jammed four to five times per hour, as well as alleged cover up of loss of vast amounts of data. Ms. Carone indicated she reported her observations to the FBI.

Ms. Carone's description of the events at the TCF Center does not square with any of the other affidavits. There are no other reports of lost data, or tabulating machines that jammed repeatedly every hour during the count. Neither Republican nor Democratic challengers nor city officials substantiate her version of events. The allegations simply are not credible.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Lastly, Plaintiffs rely heavily on the affidavit submitted by attorney Zachery Larsen. Mr. Larsen is a former Assistant Attorney General for the State of Michigan who alleged mistreatment by city workers at the TCF Center, as well as fraudulent activity by election workers. Mr. Larsen expressed concern that ballots were being processed without confirmation that the voter was eligible. Mr. Larsen also expressed concern that he was unable to observe the activities of election official because he was required to stand six feet away from the election workers. Additionally, he claimed as a Republican challenger, he was excluded from the TCF Center after leaving briefly to have something to eat on November 4th. He expressed his belief that he had been excluded because he was a Republican challenger.

Mr. Larsen's claim about the reason for being excluded from reentry into the absent voter counting board area is contradicted by two other individuals. Democratic challengers were also prohibited from reentering the room because the maximum occupancy of the room had taken place. Given the COVID-19 concerns, no additional individuals could be allowed into the counting area. Democratic party challenger David Jaffe and special consultant Christopher Thomas in their affidavits both attest to the fact that neither Republican nor Democratic challengers were allowed back in during the early afternoon of November 4th as efforts were made to avoid overcrowding.

Mr. Larsen's concern about verifying the eligibility of voters at the AVCB was incorrect. As stated earlier, voter eligibility was determined at the Detroit Election Headquarters by other Detroit city clerk personnel.

The claim that Mr. Larsen was prevented from viewing the work being processed at the tables is simply not correct. As seen in a City of Detroit exhibit, a large monitor was at the table where individuals could maintain a safe distance from poll workers to see what exactly was being performed. Mr. Jaffe confirmed his experience and observation that efforts were made to ensure that all challengers could observe the process.

Despite Mr. Larsen's claimed expertise, his knowledge of the procedures at the AVCB paled in comparison to Christopher Thomas'. Mr. Thomas' detailed explanation of the procedures and processes at the TCF Center were more comprehensive than Mr. Larsen's. It is noteworthy, as well, that Mr. Larsen did not file any formal complaint as the challenger while at the AVCB. Given the concerns raised in Mr. Larsen's affidavit, one would expect an attorney would have done so. Mr. Larsen, however, only came forward to complain after the unofficial vote results indicated his candidate had lost.

In contrast to Plaintiffs' witnesses, Christopher Thomas served in the Secretary of State's Bureau of Elections for 40 years, from 1977 through 2017. In 1981, he was appointed Director of Elections and in that capacity implemented Secretary of State Election Administration Campaign Finance and Lobbyist disclosure programs. On September 3, 2020 he was appointed as Senior Advisor to Detroit City Clerk Janice Winfrey and provided advice to her and her management staff on election law procedures, implementation of recently enacted legislation, revamped absent voter counting boards, satellite offices and drop boxes. Mr. Thomas helped prepare the City of Detroit for the November 3, 2020 General Election.

As part of the City's preparation for the November 3rd election Mr. Thomas invited challenger organizations and political parties to the TCF Center on October 29, 2020 to have a walk-through of the entire absent voter counting facility and process. None of Plaintiff challenger affiants attended the session.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

On November 2, 3, and 4, 2020, Mr. Thomas worked at the TCF Center absent voter counting boards primarily as a liaison with Challenger Organizations and Parties. Mr. Thomas indicated that he "provided answers to questions about processes at the counting board's resolved dispute about process and directed leadership of each organization or party to adhere to Michigan Election Law and Secretary of State procedures concerning the rights and responsibilities of challengers."

Additionally, Mr. Thomas resolved disputes about the processes and satisfactorily reduced the number of challenges raised at the TCF Center.

In determining whether injunctive relief is required, the Court must also determine whether the Plaintiffs sustained their burden of establishing they would suffer irreparable harm if an injunction were not granted. Irreparable harm does not exist if there is a legal remedy provided to Plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs contend they need injunctive relief to obtain a results audit under Michigan Constitution Article 2, § IV, Paragraph 1 (h) which states in part "the right to have the results of statewide elections audited, in such as manner as prescribed by law, to ensure the accuracy and integrity of the law of elections." Article 2, § IV, was passed by the voters of the state of Michigan in November, 2018.

A question for the Court is whether the phrase "in such as manner as prescribed by law" requires the Court to fashion a remedy by independently appointing an auditor to examine the votes from the November 3, 2020 election before any County certification of votes or whether there is another manner "as prescribed by law".

Following the adoption of the amended Article 2, § IV, the Michigan Legislature amended MCL 168.31a effective December 28, 2018. MCL 168.31a provides for the Secretary of State and appropriate county clerks to conduct a results audit of at least one race in each audited precinct. Although Plaintiffs may not care for the wording of the current MCL 168.31a, a results audit has been approved by the Legislature. Any amendment to MCL 168.31a is a question for the voice of the people through the legislature rather than action by the Court.

It would be an unprecedented exercise of judicial activism for this Court to stop the certification process of the Wayne County Board of Canvassers. The Court cannot defy a legislatively crafted process, substitute its judgment for that of the Legislature, and appoint an independent auditor because of an unwieldy process. In addition to being an unwarranted intrusion on the authority of the Legislature, such an audit would require the rest of the County and State to wait on the results. Remedies are provided to the Plaintiffs. Any unhappiness with MCL 168.31a calls for legislative action rather than judicial intervention.

As stated above, Plaintiffs have multiple remedies at law. Plaintiffs are free to petition the Wayne County Board of Canvassers who are responsible for certifying the votes. (MCL 168.801 and 168.821 et seq.) Fraud claims can be brought to the Board of Canvassers, a panel that consists of two Republicans and two Democrats. If dissatisfied with the results, Plaintiffs also can avail themselves of the legal remedy of a recount and a Secretary of State audit pursuant to MCL 168.31a.

Plaintiff's petition for injunctive relief and for a protective order is not required at this time in light of the legal remedy found at 52 USC § 20701 and Michigan's General Schedule #23 – Election Records, Item Number 306, which imposes a statutory obligation to preserve all federal ballots for 22 months after the election.

In assessing the petition for injunctive relief, the Court must determine whether there will be harm to the Plaintiff if the injunction is not granted, as Plaintiffs' existing legal remedies would remain in place unaltered. There would be harm, however, to the Defendants if the Court were to grant the requested injunction. This Court finds that there are legal remedies for Plaintiffs to pursue and there is no harm to Plaintiffs if the injunction is not granted. There would be harm, however, to the Defendants if the injunction is granted. Waiting for the Court to locate and appoint an independent, nonpartisan auditor to examine the votes, reach a conclusion and then finally report to the Court would involve untold delay. It would cause delay in establishing the Presidential vote tabulation, as well as all other County and State races. It would also undermine faith in the Electoral System.

Finally, the Court has to determine would there be harm to the public interest. This Court finds the answer is a resounding yes. Granting Plaintiffs' requested relief would interfere with the Michigan's selection of Presidential electors needed to vote on December 14, 2020. Delay past December 14, 2020 could disenfranchise Michigan voters from having their state electors participate in the Electoral College vote.

Conclusion

Plaintiffs rely on numerous affidavits from election challengers who paint a picture of sinister fraudulent activities occurring both openly in the TCF Center and under the cloak of darkness. The challengers' conclusions are decidedly contradicted by the highly-respected former State Elections Director Christopher Thomas who spent hours and hours at the TCF Center November 3rd and 4th explaining processes to challengers and resolving disputes. Mr. Thomas' account of the November 3rd and 4th events at the TCF Center is consistent with the affidavits of challengers David Jaffe, Donna MacKenzie and Jeffrey Zimmerman, as well as former Detroit City Election Official, now contractor, Daniel Baxter and City of Detroit Corporation Counsel Lawrence Garcia.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Perhaps if Plaintiffs' election challenger affiants had attended the October 29, 2020 walk-through of the TCF Center ballot counting location, questions and concerns could have been answered in advance of Election Day. Regrettably, they did not and, therefore, Plaintiffs' affiants did not have a full understanding of the TCF absent ballot tabulation process. No formal challenges were filed. However, sinister, fraudulent motives were ascribed to the process and the City of Detroit. Plaintiffs' interpretation of events is incorrect and not credible.

Plaintiffs are unable to meet their burden for the relief sought and for the above mentioned reasons, the Plaintiffs' petition for injunctive relief is DENIED. The Court further finds that no basis exists for the protective order for the reasons identified above. Therefore, that motion is DENIED. Finally, the Court finds that MCL 168.31a governs the audit process. The motion for an independent audit is DENIED.

It is so ordered.

This is not a final order and does not close the case.

Member, Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers

Dear Mr. Froman:

We write to express our grave concerns about recent statements you made to the media regarding your duties and intentions as a duly appointed member of the Kalamazoo Board of County Canvassers. According to an article published in the Detroit News on August 5, 2024, you reportedly told the Detroit News that you "most definitely" believe that the 2020 election was stolen from former President Donald Trump. Further, when asked if you would certify the 2024 presidential election if it unfolded the same way the 2020 election did, you responded, "No. And that's why I'm there."[1]

Your legal obligation, and the obligation of every member of a board of canvassers under the Michigan Constitution and under binding Michigan law is to certify any election based solely upon the returns. The law does not authorize members of boards of canvassers to withhold certification based upon speculation, theories, or even evidence pertaining to the accuracy of the reported returns. The Michigan Constitution provides:

> It shall be the ministerial, clerical, nondiscretionary duty of a board of canvassers, and of each individual member thereof, to certify election results based solely on … in the case of boards of county canvassers, statements of returns from the precincts and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns. Const. 1963, Art II, § 7(3).

Michigan Election Law parallels this requirement. MCL 168.822(3) provides:

> It is the ministerial, clerical, and nondiscretionary duty of each board of county canvassers, and each of the members of the board of county canvassers, to certify election results based solely on the statements of returns from the election day precincts, early voting sites, and absent voter counting boards in the county and any corrected returns. MCL 168.822(3).

Thus, members of county canvassing boards have a clear, non-discretionary duty to certify election results based solely on election returns. As you are likely aware, on May 16, 2024, Jonathan Brater, Director of the Bureau of Elections, wrote a letter to the Delta County Board of Canvassers following their initial refusal to certify a May recall election in that county (the "Brater Letter).[2] In this letter, Brater emphasizes that members of county canvassing boards are not permitted to refuse to certify election results based on claims by third parties of alleged election irregularities, or a desire to conduct election fraud investigations. Brater Letter 1. Canvassers are legally required to certify the election results that are brought before them once the legal requirements have been met.

Even before the people of Michigan enacted the constitutional language quoted above in the 2022 election, the Michigan Supreme Court consistently held that members of county and state canvassing boards have a clear, nondiscretionary legal duty to certify the election based solely on election returns. See Johnson v Secretary of State, 506 Mich 975; 951 NW2d 310, 311-312 (2020) (CLEMENT, J., concurring). Indeed, as early as 1892, the Michigan Supreme Court held that "it is the settled law of this State that canvassing boards are bound by the return, and cannot go behind it, especially for the purpose of determining frauds in the election. Their duties are purely ministerial and clerical." McQuade v Furgason, 91 Mich 438, 440; 51 NW 1073 (1892). See also People ex rel Attorney General v Van Cleve, 1 Mich 362, 366 (1850) ("The duties of these [canvassing] boards are simply ministerial . . . .").

Your comments are directly contrary to the law. Not only do they demonstrate a willingness to violate your oath of office, the constitution, and the laws of the state of Michigan, but they also indicate a willingness to commit a criminal offense. On May 24, 2024, Attorney General Nessel issued a press release regarding the duty of canvassers to certify election results. In this release, Attorney General Nessel warned all members of Michigan Boards of County Canvassers that Willful Neglect of Duty is a criminal act.[3] MCL 168.931(h) provides that "A person shall not willfully fail to perform a duty imposed upon that person by this act." A person who fails to perform their duty as required by Michigan Election Law may be guilty of a misdemeanor. MCL 169.931(2). Consequently, as it is a nondiscretionary legal duty for a Board of County Canvassers member to certify the election based on election returns, to refuse to do so because of rumors, allegations, or even evidence of fraud would expose that member to criminal liability.

While we recognize that in the above cited Detroit News article you also stated that you would not do anything illegal, you evidently made that statement after openly declaring that the

INTERVENING DEFENDANT SECRETARY OF STATE JOCELYN BENSON'S MOTION TO LIFT STAY FOR LIMITED PURPOSE

NOW COMES Intervening Defendant Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson, by her attorneys, and requests that this Court enter an order lifting the stay entered on September 4, 2021 for the limited purpose of receiving a motion to show cause related to an apparent violation of an earlier order of this Court. In support thereof, Defendant Benson states:

1. On January 11, 2021, this Court ruled from the bench that the forensic images taken from Antrim County election equipment that had not been published in the Plaintiff's expert report (which had been released pursuant to this Court's December 15, 2020 order) were not to be publicly released.

2. On or about August 12, 2021, counsel for Intervening-Defendant Secretary of State Benson received information that copies of the forensic images of Antrim County's voting equipment obtained by Plaintiff in this case were being distributed publicly.

3. Counsel immediately began gathering information to determine what information had been distributed and confirming that it was virtually identical to the forensic images reviewed in this case.

4. On September 3, 2021, counsel was in the process of filing a motion to show cause why one of Plaintiff's experts should not be held in contempt for violating this Court's January 11, 2021 order. A copy of that proposed motion and its supporting exhibits is attached to this motion as Exhibit 1.

5. On September 3, 2021 at 1:59 p.m.—moments before the above motion to show cause would be filed—this Court entered an order staying "all matters" pending a determination of Plaintiff's appeals.

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

6. The September 3 order was unexpected, as a hearing on Plaintiff's objection to the Intervening-Defendant's filing of an errata on the subject of the stay had already been scheduled by the Court for September 13, 2021.

7. The same security risks and public interests that prompted this Court's January 11, 2021 order prohibiting distribution of the forensic images urge prompt action to hear and redress an apparent violation of that order.

RELIEF REQUESTED

For these reasons, Intervening Defendant Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson moves and respectfully requests that this Honorable Court enter an Order lifting the September 3, 2021 stay of proceedings for the limited purpose of filing and hearing Intervening-Defendant's above-described motion to show cause.

INTERVENING DEFENDANT SECRETARY OF STATE JOCELYN BENSON'S EX PARTE MOTION FOR ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

NOW COMES Intervening Defendant Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson, by her attorneys, and requests that pursuant to this Court's inherent authority, MCL 600.1701, and MCR 3.606, this Court enter an Order directing Colonel James

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Waldron to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for violating this Court's January 11, 2021 order prohibiting the distribution of the forensic images obtained from Antrim County's election equipment outside of the parties to this litigation and the experts specifically identified in the parties' pleadings filed in this matter. In support thereof, Defendant Benson states:

1. On December 23, 2020, Plaintiff filed an expert witness list in this matter in which he identified Colonel James P. Waldron as an expert witness and stated that Colonel Waldron could be contacted through Plaintiff's counsel. (Ex A, 12/23/20 Witness List).

2. On January 11, 2021, this Court ruled from the bench that the forensic images taken from Antrim County election equipment that had not been published in the Plaintiff's expert report (which had been released pursuant to this Court's December 15, 2020 order) were not to be publicly released. While Plaintiff's experts could review those forensic images, "mass distribution of that information is not something that the Court is countenancing at this time." (Ex B, Excerpt 1/11/21 Transcript, pp 43-44.)

3. Between August 10 and August 12, 2021, Colonel Waldron appeared at an event referred to as "Mike Lindell's Cyber Symposium." Speakers at the event discussed various theories and arguments disputing the results of the November 2020 general election. Colonel Waldron was a speaker at the event—as was Dr. Douglas Frank, who was listed on Plaintiff's April 16, 2021 proposed amended expert witness list. (Ex C, 4/15/21 Prop Amend Witness List).

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

4. Harri Hursti, an attendee of the "Cyber Symposium," has averred in a sworn declaration filed in federal court that event organizers made copies of three (3) separate Dominion Election Management System Server installations available to people in attendance. (Ex D, Hursti Decl., ¶4.) Two of the images appeared to originate from Mesa County, Colorado, but the third was from Antrim County, Michigan. (Ex D, ¶ 6.) A copy of the header from the Antrim County image is attached to Hursti's declaration as its exhibit 2.

5. According to Hursti, all three images—including the Antrim County image—were made globally available for download. (Ex D, ¶9.)

6. Defendant's expert, Professor Alex J. Halderman, was provided with a copy of the data from the "Cyber Symposium" by another attendee. Professor Halderman can confirm that the data is authentic and that it contains material from the Antrim County forensic images he reviewed in this case. (Ex E, Halderman Aff.)

7. During a presentation during the "Cyber Symposium," Colonel Waldron stated that, "the Antrim information," would be available to attendees. He further referred to "the breakout rooms" as having the Antrim County images, and invited attendees to look at the images. He also stated that, "this is going to be like a training book on how to look at server logs." These statements were recorded on video (click on image below):

jFELKrwjYLsTrdyL.mp4

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

8. It is not clear who provided the Antrim County forensic images to the "Cyber Symposium," but Colonel Waldron was clearly aware that the Antrim County forensic images were being distributed and he encouraged that distribution.

9. Contempt is defined as a "willful act, omission, or statement that tends to . . . impede the functioning of a court." In re Contempt of Robertson, 209 Mich App 433, 436 (1995). "[T]he primary purpose of the contempt power is to preserve the effectiveness and sustain the power of the courts." In re Contempt of Auto Club Ass'n, 243 Mich App 697, 708 (2000) (citation omitted).

10. This Court has inherent and statutory authority to hold attorneys, parties, and other persons in contempt for violating any order or process of the Court, see In re Contempt of Auto Club Ass'n, 243 Mich App at 708-709; MCL 600.1701(c), (g), and to impose penalties as provided in MCL 600.1715.

11. As an expert retained by Plaintiff, Colonel Waldron was given access to the Antrim County forensic images only for the purpose of advising the Plaintiff and providing testimony in this matter. Colonel Waldron knew, or should have known, the restrictions this Court had placed on the use and distribution of the forensic images.

12. Further, as averred by Professor Halderman the public release of the Antrim County data presents a security risk in that it is sufficiently detailed such

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

that it would facilitate the planning or development of methods or means to compromise voting systems in communities using similar systems. (Ex E, ¶ 7.)[1]

13. On August 12, 2021, counsel for Secretary Benson e-mailed Plaintiff's counsel to advise of the distribution of the Antrim County data. Plaintiff's counsel replied that he had already sent a demand to Mike Lindell to cease and desist distribution of the images, and further quoted his demand as stating:

> This is a demand that you immediately cease and desist disclosing or displaying any forensic images of Antrim County. Those images are under protective order. Neither you or your team are permitted to display or use those images.

(Ex F, E-mail 8/12/2021.)

14. Defendant Secretary of State Benson has no ability to further investigate this incident, but given the seriousness of the matter felt compelled to provide the available information to the Court for it to take appropriate action to enforce its orders.

RELIEF REQUESTED

For these reasons, Intervening Defendant Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson moves and respectfully requests that this Honorable Court enter an Order directing Colonel James Waldron to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for violating this Court's January 11, 2021 order prohibiting the mass distribution of the Antrim County forensic images.

[1] As Professor Halderman is presently out of state, a signed and notarized version of the Affidavit will be filed with the Court as quickly as possible upon his return during the week of September 6, 2021.

Mr. Grill?

MR. GRILL: I don't have any -- any questions, I think, at this point about what the Court has laid out in regards to the discovery request from Mr. Deperno. I do have two -- I do have some additional matters related to discovery I would like to bring to the Court's attention, if the Court wants to handle that now or just give me a minute afterwards.

THE COURT: Let's talk about that in just a moment. I'd also like to remind the parties I did make a decision with regard to the request for protective order with regards to Dominion information or the ElectionSource information as well, that should be included in the order.

And, Mr. Deperno, I'd like you to prepare that order, please. But let's go ahead and discuss the additional issues with regard to discovery, starting with you, Mr. Grill.

MR. GRILL: Thank you, your Honor.

First, the original requests we were under the -- the one-week response time with Mr. -- with the narrowing construction given today, what -- when would our responses be due to the discovery requests? That's the first issue. The second issue comes to in regards to the forensic data that was taken by Mr. Deperno's experts originally, when we lifted or when we agreed to lift the protective order for the purpose of Mr. Deperno's expert report being released, I don't think it was quite our understanding that those forensic files themselves would be subject to public release as well.

I know we spent some time during the hearing talking about how code should be redacted from the report. So I guess I just wanted to raise the issue to the Court and clarify that the original forensic images that Mr. Deperno obtained should still be kept confidential. And then lastly, just bringing to the Court's attention, last week we sent Mr. Deperno two emails requesting deposition dates for witnesses. Mr. Deperno has not given us any reply.

THE COURT: All right. Let's go ahead and talk to Mr. Deperno.

Mr. Deperno -- well, first, Mr. Grill, how much time do you need to respond to the updated discovery requests?

MR. GRILL: I think given -- even with the narrowing that we've got today, the Secretary of State's administrative offices and the Bureau of Elections with a number of parties, coordination with the Department of Management and Budget is usually required to conduct email searches and those can take some time. I, frankly, would welcome as much time as the Court would be willing to give us, but I would say at least two weeks.

THE COURT: All right.

Mr. Deperno, in response to the issues that have been raised by Mr. Grill? How much time is appropriate, do you think?

MR. DEPERNO: If he needs two weeks, he needs two weeks. I don't want to argue with him about that. He knows his schedule and the constraints of his client better than I do.

THE COURT: All right.

And as to the availability of the forensic imaging?

MR. DEPERNO: Well, the -- the forensic imaging there's no protective order on any of that information right now and it's not source code. The images are not source code. And certainly if we want to have other people look at that, we should be able to have other people look at that information to get -- you know, more analysis, more data from people. I wouldn't see the harm in allowing other people to examine the forensic images. But there is no protective order right now covering that information.

THE COURT: Mr. Grill?

MR. GRILL: And I think that kind of underscores our concern, your Honor. We had heard reports that there was a website somewhere that had obtained copies and had published them, and I think that has subsequently been taken down. Be that as it may, our concern at this point is when we're -- when we were before this Court talking about the protective order for the purposes of releasing Mr. Deperno's report, that was the understanding of the parties was that we were talking about the release of the report.

I don't see that there is much to be accomplished through the publication of the forensic images taken from Mr. Deperno's experts. If Mr. Deperno wants to consult with additional experts, he's free to do so, of course; but, you know, obviously they would be subject to the same constraints that Mr. Deperno would be under.

I think that this -- the fact that there seems to be some pushback on this I think underscores that there probably needs to be some level of control placed on the distribution of these files.

THE COURT: All right. Well, we did discuss this matter to some degree, but I don't think we quite reached the issue of distribution of forensic images, but for those matters that were contained in the expert opinion that was prepared for Mr. Deperno.

Those matters are already open. They're available to the public. However, anything that is not included, including individual images in the report, is still subject to in a -- a protective order. And should Mr. Deperno need to provide those images to other experts that he's already identified, then that certainly would be appropriate.

However, the Court is not interested in creating unnecessary intrusions into source code, number one, that may be retained, or controlled, or owned by parties that are not part of this litigation, including Dominion. And to the extent that includes forensic imaging -- pardon me, to the extent that includes imaging -- forensic implies some level of analysis, then it makes sense that we -- we also protect that information.

So the line I'm trying to draw here, gentlemen, is between matters that are owned as intellectual property by parties that are not part of this litigation, Dominion, et cetera, and those matters that have been released pursuant to my order that have been part of the analysis performed by experts in this case. Again, Mr. Deperno's experts should have the opportunity to review those materials, as should the experts of any other entity -- be it the intervenor, or the county, or any of the other defendants in this case. But mass distribution of that information is not something that the Court is countenancing at this time.

Does that make sense, gentlemen? Or do you need more information from me?

MR. GRILL: I understand the Court, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Deperno, do you understand the Court?

MR. DEPERNO: I do understand the Court, yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

Mr. Deperno, I'd like you to go ahead, as I said, and prepare an order with regard to my decisions with regard to discovery today. We'll go ahead and grant the state -- pardon me, the Secretary of State three weeks to prepare the materials and to respond to the -- to the requests for production, and that will be as of -- three weeks as of today. So you're looking at the 25th will be the time for the response.

All right. Is there anything else that we

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

can address today? Let's start with you, Mr. Deperno.

MR. DEPERNO: Nothing from the plaintiff, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

Mr. Kazim, anything for you?

MR. KAZIM: Your Honor, just, I think, echoing Mr. Grill's comment, there was a request that was made requesting depositions of the forensic team. Those -- Mr. Grill's office sent two emails to Mr. Deperno last week requesting availability and we have not received a response to those -- to that request.

THE COURT: Well, let's short-circuit any -- any potential motion on the point.

Mr. Deperno, where do we stand with regard to dates for depositions?

MR. DEPERNO: Yeah. I'm getting dates. I'm not ignoring them, but it takes more than just a couple days to coordinate all that. I will respond to them within the next couple of days.

THE COURT: All right.

Anything further, Mr. Kazim?

MR. KAZIM: Nothing further. Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: Anything further, Mr. Grill?

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

MR. GRILL: Just a point of clarification, your Honor. A moment ago the Court said three weeks from today, which would be the 25th. The 25th is actually two weeks from today. Three weeks would be February 1st. So I just want to seek clarification when our responses are due.

THE COURT: All right. Your math is better than mine. Thank you. It would be February 1st, did you say?

MR. GRILL: February 1st would be three weeks, your Honor, yes.

THE COURT: Very good. It's February 1st. Okay. Thank you, all.

MR. DEPERNO: Thank you.

MR. GRILL: Thank you, your Honor.

MR. KAZIM: Thank you, your Honor.

DECLARATION OF HARRI HURSTI

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct:

1. My name is Harri Hursti. I am over the age of 21 and competent to give this testimony. The facts stated in this declaration are based on my personal knowledge, unless stated otherwise.
2. This declaration supplements my prior declarations and I stand by the statements in those declarations.
3. I have been in Sioux Falls, South Dakota since the 9th of August 2021 to participate in "Mike Lindell's Cyber Symposium", which took place from August 10th to 12th.
4. During the event, the organizers of the event made copies of forensic images of 3 separate Dominion Election Management System Server installations available to me and others in attendance.
5. The organizers did not give consistent explanations for how the images were made, where they were made, or any other details.
6. Two of the images appear to have originated from Mesa County, Colorado and one from Antrim County, Michigan.
7. The forensic image headers from the Antrim County image are shown in Exhibit 1.
8. The forensic image headers from the Mesa County images are shown in Exhibit 2 and Exhibit 3.
9. All three images were additionally made available globally for download by the public over a peer-to-peer file sharing system called BitTorrent. At least one of the speakers of the symposium, Ron Watkins a.k.a. "CodeMonkeyZ", posted links to download the files (https://t.me/s/CodeMonkeyZ) on a social media platform where he has almost 400,000 followers. Attendees at the event mentioned that "thousands" of people were downloading the files.
10. In my professional opinion, global public release of the server images lowers the barrier to planning an attack against any election management system running this Dominion software, and therefore makes future attacks against such systems more likely.

I declare under penalty of the perjury laws of the State of Colorado and the United States that the foregoing is true and correct and that this declaration was executed this 13th day of August, 2021 in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

AFFIDAVIT OF J. ALEX HALDERMAN IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

I, J. Alex Halderman, being duly sworn, voluntarily state as follows:

Document received by the MI Antrim 13th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

1. I am Professor of Computer Science and Engineering, Director of the Center for Computer Security and Society, and Director of the Software Systems Laboratory at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

2. On March 26, 2021, I provided my expert report in this lawsuit based in part on my review of data collected by Plaintiff's forensic team from Antrim County voting equipment.

3. An attendee of an event referred to as "Mike Lindell's Cyber Symposium" held during the days of August 10 through August 12, 2021, provided me with a copy of data that was distributed through that event, and I have reviewed that data.

4. The data distributed at the "Cyber Symposium" and represented as being from Antrim County is authentic, and contains almost the entirety of the material collected by Plaintiff's forensic team that I reviewed as part of my expert report in this case.

5. The data obtained from the "Cyber Symposium" includes a nearly complete forensic image of the Antrim County Election Management System (EMS). It is missing only one file (out of 37), but is otherwise a complete copy of the forensic image collected by Plaintiff's forensic team and provided to me for review in this case. The data also includes complete forensic images of the Antrim County tabulator memory cards that were provided to me for review in this case.

6. In addition, the data distributed at the "Cyber Symposium" includes forensic images of thumb drives that purport to be from Antrim County and include metadata indicating that they were collected by Plaintiff's forensic team, but which were not provided to me for review in this case.

7. The material contained in the data from the "Cyber Symposium" is sufficiently detailed that it would facilitate the planning or development of methods or means to compromise voting systems—not just in Antrim County—but anywhere that uses similar systems.

order. And should Mr. Deperno need to provide those images to other experts that he's already identified, then that certainly would be appropriate. However, the Court is not interested in creating unnecessary intrusions into source code, number one, that may be retained, or controlled, or owned by parties that are not part of this litigation, including Dominion. And to the extent that includes forensic imaging -- pardon me, to the extent that includes imaging -- forensic implies some level of analysis, then it makes sense that we -- we also protect that information.

So the line I'm trying to draw here, gentlemen, is between matters that are owned as intellectual property by parties that are not part of this litigation, Dominion, et cetera, and those matters that have been released pursuant to my order that have been part of the analysis performed by experts in this case. Again, Mr. Deperno's experts should have the opportunity to review those materials, as should the experts of any other entity -- be it the intervenor, or the county, or any of the other defendants in this case. But mass distribution of that information is not something that the Court is countenancing at this time.

(AMENDED)[1] SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF OF PLAINTIFF

INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff has filed numerous FOIA requests for EPB data. Without legal authority to do so, Secretary Benson has ordered all defendants to deny these EPB FOIA requests. (ATTACHMENT A). In 2020, Benson ordered all clerks to delete the EPB data in violation of state and federal law. (ATTACHMENT B). Many clerks refused to violate law and did not delete the EPB data. (ATTACHMENT C, Affidavit of Stephanie Scott, Correspondence and Supporting Expert Report); (ATTACHMENT D, Affidavit of Kim Meltzer and Exhibits). Analysis currently under law enforcement investigation revealed that original data is preserved on the EPB drive that is not contained in end of the night print outs as suggested by SOS Benson. In fact, analysis of the correctly preserved EPB data reflects who voted in a particular township. The EPB data analyzed by law enforcement proves that it matches what the local jurisdiction certified in the past election. The data should match and this is correct.

When this same data is then compared to the data certified in FOIA requests from the state as to who SOS Benson has recorded as voting in the same election- it varies by up to 12%. The data should match and it does not.

Local clerks must maintain accurate registrations and the registration on the EPB drive. SOS Benson inflated the state registration by 700000 just weeks before the 2020 election and told local clerks they wouldn't see a paper trail at their level because the registration was being modified through the driver database. (ATTACHMENT E). Now we know that non-citizens are being enrolled on the voter roll through the driver database. (ATTACHMENT F, Affidavit of [redacted]). When these discrepancies were questioned by clerks and citizens, SOS Benson encrypted the EPB data so that clerks can no longer reconcile it despite local clerks having civil liability in the event that it is not accurate.

This action involves a simple request for documents under Michigan's Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), MCL 15.231 et seq. Pursuant to the express terms of that act, certain information may be exempted from disclosure, but the exemptions must explicitly and specifically apply to the withheld information.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

MCL 15.243(1)(d). This statute provides that "[a] public body may exempt from disclosure…[r]ecords or information specifically described and exempted from disclosure by statute." ACLU of Mich v Calhoun Co Sheriff's Office, 509 Mich 1, 4-5; 983 NW2d 300 (2022). An agency "regulation," or a "directive," or "guidance" or an "opinion," or a "statement" in a legal brief, or an "email", cannot serve as the basis for a FOIA denials under MCL 15.243(1)(d). Id. Such are not "statutes," and therefore, the only basis for denial of a FOIA request must be based on the express and plain language of the statute's exemptions. Id.

Intervenor Secretary of State (SOS Benson) has no real "standing" in this matter. The public official who receives a FOIA request and who denies a FOIA request, and who is required by law to decide on denial based on the statute, not on the basis of regulations, opinions, "memos" or "emails" or direction of another state agency, i.e., SOS Benson, see ACLU, supra, is the only individual who is subject to FOIA's requirements and restrictions, and who must comply with its statutory mandate. See Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 458; 789 NW2d 178 (2010). Defendants cannot therefore say, as they have, that they are "waiting" on the research and guidance from the SOS or any other entity for that matter to tell them what to withhold, what exemption applies, or what exemption might be asserted, or what might be exempt in the future, because "only the circumstances known to the public body at the time of the request are relevant to whether an exemption precludes disclosure," not any "waiting to hear from" the SOS, or any entity other than the Legislature. Id. SOS Benson is simply not authorized by law to prohibit public officials from fulfilling their constitutional and statutory duties of disclosing public information under FOIA – no "guidance," "regulation," "directive," "opinion," legal argument, memo, or email can do that – a denial must be based on a legitimate, valid, and applicable, statutory exemption found in the FOIA statutes themselves. See ACLU of Mich, 509 Mich at 4-5. Here that is not present.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

SOS Benson originally acknowledged that this information was public information under FOIA subject to disclosure because she had no other choice by law. (ATTACHMENT G). When she realized that some public officials were properly releasing this information under FOIA, she ordered them to "delete" the data (ATTACHMENT C), even though destruction of this data is contrary to and a violation of Michigan and federal criminal law. (ATTACHMENT H, Correspondence from Bourbonais Instructing to Delete); see, e.g., 52 U.S.C. § 20701 (requiring "all records and papers which come into [the] possession [of "[e]very officer of election"] relating to any application, registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in such election," to be "retained and preserved" for a period of 22 months following an election" and, 52 U.S.C. § 20702, making it a crime…for "any person" whether or not an election officer to

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

"willfully steal[], destroy[], conceal[], mutilate[], or alter[] any record or paper required by" § 20701 to be retained and preserved. Of course, the latter applies to orders to and the act of deleting or concealing such information. See also, MCL 750.248, which provides that "[a] person who falsely makes, alters, forges, or counterfeits a public record, or a certificate, return, or attestation of a clerk of a court, register of deeds, notary public, township clerk, or any other public officer, in relation to a matter in which the certificate, return, or attestation may be received as legal proof… with intent to injure or defraud another person is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than 14 years.

Those public officials who complied with SOS Benson's unlawful order to delete this information were themselves violating state and federal criminal laws. Finally, after some of the clerks held onto this data, SOS Benson unilaterally, and without legal authority, "encrypted" it and concealed it from the public. SOS Benson's prohibited local governments from having access to this data, thereby preventing local election officials and county and township clerks from performing their duties pursuant to state and federal law.

Plaintiff demonstrates herein that not only were Defendants wrong in withholding his FOIA request, but also that local governments are required by law to maintain accurate registration and election roll records. Indeed, MCL 15.244 requires public officials to disclose non-exempt information; if there is "exempt" information combined with said "non-exempt" information, then the public official cannot use the excuse that redaction or separation is not possible. See, e.g., Evening News Asso v Troy, 417 Mich 481, 486; 339 NW2d 421 (1983). Indeed, the statute itself says: "the public body shall separate the exempt and nonexempt material and make the nonexempt material available for examination and copying." Id., (emphasis in original), citing MCL 15.244. As this Court is well aware, "[u]se of the word 'shall' connotes a mandatory duty imposed by law," especially as it relates to a command directed at public officials and their public duties to disclose public information under FOIA. Sharp v Huron Valley Bd of Ed, 112 Mich App 18, 20; 314 NW2d 785 (1981), citing Southfield Twp v Drainage Board for Twelve Towns Relief Drains, 357 Mich 59, 76; 97 NW2d 821 (1959), King v Director of the Midland County Department of Social Services, 73 Mich App 253, 259; 251 NW2d 270 (1977). See also, Anklam v Delta College Dist, et al., Unpublished Per Curiam Opinion of the Michigan Court of Appeals, Docket No. 317692 (June 26, 2014) (ATTACHMENT I).

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Plaintiff's request is simple, straightforward, and compliant with FOIA. (ATTACHMENT J). He agreed that certain of the information that might be exempt can be redacted (i.e., separated from the non-exempt information), and he has also shown that none of the remaining information that he requests is exempt under those exemptions that have been asserted by the Defendants. Id.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

The information requested by Plaintiff is public information, subject to disclosure under FOIA, and not covered by any of the exemptions cited by any of the Defendants.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff requested Defendants to release files from the electronic poll books (EPB) for all registrants for all voting precincts for elections on November 8, 2022 and May 2, 2023. (ATTACHMENT J). Plaintiff agreed that some of the information contained in the poll books were exempt from disclosure and asked that this information be redacted prior to disclosure. Id. The specific information Plaintiff sought included election returns and the poll lists. These are required to be delivered to the clerk of the township or city, as the case may be, and shall be by him filed in his office, MCLA 168.810. The EPB poll list must be carefully preserved and may be destroyed after the expiration of 2 years following the primary or election at which the same were used, MCL 168.811. Registration records, which Plaintiff also requested, are required by law to be open for public inspection. MCL 168.516. Plaintiff also cited MCL 750.492, requires public officials, after request, to permit inspection of the official records of said public office. Failure to do so is a violation of Michigan Law.

Plaintiff's FOIA request only asked for raw text data to be placed on a spreadsheet in .csv or Microsoft "Excel" format (.xls). In other words, Plaintiff's request pertained only to the text of the information from the EPB. In fact, in his specific FOIA request, dated May 2, 2023, Plaintiff explicitly acknowledged that under MCL 168.509gg "birthdate and driver's license numbers" were exempt from the FOIA request, and/or could be redacted. Id. Plaintiff also asked whether only the date of birth could be left in the response. Id.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Finally, after acknowledging the necessity of certain redactions to comply with FOIA's exemptions under MCL 168.509gg, Plaintiff correctly stated that "there should be no other FOIA exempt information in the EPB digital records requested. Id. Plaintiff then specifically stated: "I am not requesting any software or information which would somehow be deemed proprietary. I am only requesting public record information as is my right." Id. (emphasis added). Plaintiff further reminded Defendants that the EPB .csv files "are an original record and a component of the electronic voting system audit trail. As such, these digital records should be retained by your office for a federal minimum of 22 months (52 U.S.C. § 207[20701])[2] and a state minimum of 24 months (MCL 168.811).

[2] Federal law requires "all records and papers which come into [the] possession [of "[e]very officer of election"] relating to any application, registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in such election," to be "retained and preserved" for a period of 22 months following an election. 52 U.S.C. § 20701. Further, 52 U.S.C. § 20702 makes it a crime for "any person" whether or not an election officer to "willfully steal[], destroy[], conceal[], mutilate[], or alter[] any record or paper required by" § 20701 to be retained and preserved.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

On May 9, 2023, Defendants sent a letter exercising the 10-day extension under FOIA explaining that the request was complex due to the nature of the information sought and estimated that a response would be complete by May 23, 2023. (ATTACHMENT K). Also, in the letter exercising the extension, while they have no right to do so, Defendants cryptically stated: "We are continuing to investigate and research issues involving whether a request would create an exposure to the operating system resulting in injury. We are also reviewing our methods and capabilities in responding, including likely time involved." Id.

On May 23, 2023, Defendants sent a letter attached to an email denying, in toto, Plaintiff's request. (ATTACHMENT K). Defendant stated: "[i]n response to your FOIA requested[sic] submitted on May 2, 2023 for a copy of the extract files from the electronic poll book (EPBs) for all registrants at all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the elections concluding November 8, 2022 and May 2, 2023…[t]he following Action has been taken pursuant to your request for a public record: Denied all portions of your request (Please see below for reason). Id. The denial further provided:

> Per the Michigan Bureau of Elections, clerks must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the Electronic Poll Book, as doing so could compromise the Bureau of Elections ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss, or destruction. In response to previous FOIA request regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from > disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.2431(y). In addition, the responsive records include sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z).

> Further, electronic poll book files contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which is exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software program files are disclosed.
> Please contact the Macomb County Clerk for the paper pollbook copies or the Michigan Bureau of Elections for the log files or voter history. [Id.]

The original election records subject to this FOIA appeal submitted by Michael Butz concerns the .csv file referenced as the Electronic Pollbook Voter History file dated October 2021. The poll book and poll list are defined in MCL 168.735. They compile the record of the voter and the ballot number provided at the time a voter is provided a vote to cast. This activity occurs after a voter shows valid identification or signs an affidavit of a lost identification card at the time of an election. The responsibility is on the election inspectors to keep and an accurate list of these activities. In the case of absentee ballots, upon opening the envelope, the election inspector must record the name of the voter and the number of the ballot, which also is to be used to compare with the data on the EPB. MCL 168.375.

The election inspectors use the EPB in the format as it is downloaded on the election day laptops by the local clerk. The EPB is downloaded from the Qualified Voter File (QVF) and is loaded to a laptop prior to each election. Once the EPB is loaded on the laptop, the software allows election inspectors to look up a voter's registration record, confirm their registration is correct, and assign a ballot to that voter, essentially automating the typical paper process. After the election is complete, the EPB software will generate reports to complete the official precinct record (paper binder pollbook) and a voter history file that can be uploaded into the QVF to update voter history in a matter of minutes." This guidance and information is taken directly from the Electronic Pollbook Refresh Election Inspector Manual. (ATTACHMENT L).

The EPB software is downloaded by the local clerk from the state's QVF after 4pm the night before the election. Id. It is downloaded onto a USB storage device (USB flash drive) and the clerk then uploads that into the election day laptops. Id. It is within this software that the activities required by election inspectors to record voters and ballot numbers occurs throughout election day. Id. At the close of the election, the election inspectors close out the EPB and save the reports back onto the USB flash drive that was utilized for the EPB install onto the laptop. Id. Three (3) end of night reports are printed and included per MCL 168.375 into the final election records envelopes provided to county and local clerks. Id. The election inspectors return the USB flash drive of the EPB download to the clerk at the end of the election per MCL 168.811. Id. The USB stick contains the following election record files:

1. EPB Package. This zipped file presumably contains the poll book software programming files. It is encrypted/ password protected;

2. Three (3) PDF reports that are generated at poll closing: Ballot Summary, Remarks, Voter List;

3. EPB History. This is a .csv file of the poll book which is the subject of the FOIA request in this case. [Id.]

The Electronic Pollbook Refresh Clerk's Manual describe this duty as 'Post-election Tasks: Import Voter History (within 7 days) The clerk or a designated QVF user (either Basic or Complete) must upload voter history into the QVF within seven days of the election. Id. To enter voter history via the QVF, they are to insert the encrypted flash drive into a USB port and log into the flash drive, then log into QVF. Id.

As explained herein, this raw data (the voter registration records of qualified voters), and all other election records, that data which is the subject of Plaintiff's FOIA request, are the responsibility of the local clerk to maintain per, inter alia, MCL 168.811, 52 U.S.C. § 20701 and 52 U.S.C. § 20702. See also, footnote 1, supra.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Federal and state election laws provide that election officials have duties to maintain election records precisely because they constitute public information that is subject to public access and examination upon request – i.e., they are subject to public disclosure. Therefore, these records enjoy a prima facie presumption of disclosable information under FOIA. Indeed, the presumption is written into the act because "[t]he FOIA is an act requiring full disclosure of public records unless a statutory exemption precludes the disclosure of information." Messenger v Consumer & Industry Services, 238 Mich App 524, 531; 606 NW2d 38 (1999) (emphasis added). See also, MCL 15.243(1)(d). "Rather than specifying which records would be subject to disclosure, the Legislature chose to provide that, unless expressly exempt under Section 13 of the FOIA, all public records are subject to public disclosure." Penokie v Michigan Technological Univ, 93 Mich App 650, 657; 287 NW2d 304 (1979) (emphasis added). See also, Detroit News v Co of Wayne, ___NW2d___; 2002 Mich. government's affairs and the official actions of governmental officials and employees and where the SOS conceded that the names and addresses of registered voters in were public records subject to public disclosure without exemption).

Moreover, the exemptions cited by the Defendants do not apply to Plaintiff's FOIA request. First, and foremost, Plaintiff specifically only asked for raw text data from the files. He specifically stated that he was not asking for "any software or information which would somehow be deemed proprietary" and that he was "only requesting public record information as is my right." (ATTACHMENT J). Plaintiff further reminded Defendants that the EPB .csv files "are an original record and a component of the electronic voting system audit trail. As such, these digital records should be retained by your office for a federal minimum of 22 months (52 U.S.C. § 207[20701]) and a state minimum of 24 months (MCL 168.811). Id. Secondly, Plaintiff specifically conceded to redaction of private information (personal identifying information). Defendants cannot say that they are "waiting" on the SOS or any other entity to tell them what an exemption is or might be, or what might be exempt in the future because "only the circumstances known to the public body at the time of the request are relevant to whether an exemption precludes disclosure, not any "waiting to hear from" the SOS, or any entity other than the Legislature. Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 458; 789 NW2d 178 (2010).

"The Legislature when enacting, and courts when interpreting, the privacy exemption of FOIA have weighted the scales heavily in favor of disclosure: the balance to be struck is between the public's ongoing interest in governmental accountability, on the one hand, and clearly unwarranted invasions of privacy on the other. Under this exemption, the scales are not balanced equally at the outset, and for good reason. In all but a limited number of circumstances, the public's interest in governmental accountability prevails over an individual's, or a group of individuals', expectation of privacy. Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 464; 789 NW2d 178 (2010) (information about registered voters was public information subject to disclosure under FOIA and holding "FOIA is a pro disclosure statute that we are to interpret broadly to allow public access. Conversely, we are to interpret its exemptions narrowly so that we do not undermine its disclosure provisions. Simply put, the core purpose of FOIA is disclosure of public records in order to ensure the accountability of public officials. Here, there is no question that the "separate record[s]"… that contain the printed name, address, and qualified voter file number of each elector and the participating political party ballot selected by that elector at the 2008 presidential primary are public records. And there is no question that these "separate record[s] were also the public records that Practical Political Consulting sought in its March 26, 2008 FOIA request.").

Finally, even if Defendants' argument were to be considered despite the presumptive prima facie availability to the public of this information, and notwithstanding that the exemptions cited simply do not apply, there are genuine issues of material fact which make summary dismissal impossible. The burden of proof lies on the denying party to demonstrate that exemptions apply. Manning v East Tawas, 234 Mich App 244, 248; 593 NW2d 649 (1999).

Here, Plaintiff has specifically tailored his request not to include personal identifying information and not to include "software" and/or "proprietary" information. It is for the Defendants to demonstrate through factual presentation and/or expert presentation to the court under MCR 2.116(C)(10) that the requested records are exempt, and then, why Defendants cannot tailor their response to provide that information that is disclosable, as Plaintiff has requested, and how disclosing same would implicate any of the exemptions.

The matter in contest is the voter history file and it's accessibility to citizens via state FOIA statutes. MCL 168.509gg defines election data exempt from FOIA. It exempts six items from FOIA disclosure of election related information and cannot be construed to exclude the data requested in Mr. Butz's FOIA request. The pollbook for each jurisdiction is maintained by the local clerk. The poll book is an electronic record produced through the electronic pollbook software distributed by the bureau of elections. Per MCL 168.668b (2019 version), each city or township "shall use the electronic poll book software developed by the bureau of elections."

Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson and the Bureau of Elections (BOE) assert that the information contained in the EPB history file (.csv) is contained in its entirety in the Voter List Report produced at the end of night, but this is simply not the case. In review of the EPB data preserved from Adams Township November 2020 election, it is apparent that it contains data unique to the EPB file; including Same Day Voting data, data elements specific to the laptop and it's security and internet connectivity, and ten data fields of voter information. (ATTACHMENT C, Stephanie Scott Affidavit, Correspondence, and Expert Reports).

To further convolute the voter records, Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson admits to inflating voter rolls prior to the November 2002 Presidential election. Local clerks were notified via the BOE newsletter, that there would be no paper trail, and hence no ability to verify the eligibility of voter names added to his/her local poll list. (ATTACHMENT E). MCL 168.509r states " The county, city, and township clerks shall verify the accuracy of the names and addresses of registered electors in the qualified voter file." Through the actions of the SOS, the local clerk's voter registration file is thus compromised and out of the control of local clerks.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

This series of events will show how it has become apparent that local clerks are instructed to delete original election records in violation of Federal and State statutes of records retention. The blind obedience of local clerks to the unlawful directives of the BOE is the actual reason that the FOIA requests presented by Michael Butz were denied.

The Electronic Pollbook flash drive contains corroborating evidence that public records have been deleted, altered, or produced with fraudulent data. The above two examples show users other than the local clerk within the voter's registration file. ~~And in the case of Adams Township, someone falsely utilizing Stephanie Scotts User Code.~~ And, in the case of Adams Township, someone blocking Stephanie Scott's access to user codes and locking her out of the qualified voter file (QVF) voter registration.

This is in direct violation of MCL 750.248 (1) which reads "A person who falsely makes, alters, forges, or counterfeits a public record.... with intent to injure or defraud another person is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than 14 years.

As a result, the Bureau of Elections and Secretary of State have gone out of their way to keep this information from the public by controlling responses to FOIA requests such as Michel Butz's.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

In 2022 individuals such as Michael Butz began to FOIA for the EPB Voter file (.csv) from local clerks per MCL 168.509ff, which states: "The secretary of state and each county, city, township, or village clerk shall maintain all records concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of registration records under this chapter for 2 years or more. Except to the extent that the records maintained pursuant to this section relate to a declination to register to vote or to the identity of a designated voter registration agency through which any particular voter applied for registration pursuant to section 509gg, the secretary of state or a county, city, township, or village clerk shall make the records available for public inspection under reasonable conditions and, if available, for photocopying at a reasonable cost." (emphasis added).

While some FOIA requests were fulfilled, it became apparent that the BOE was intervening to discourage and prevent the lawful fulfillment of FOIA requests for pertinent election records. As early as February, 12, 2021, BOE directed County Clerks that "[t]he EPB software and associated files must be deleted unless a post-election audit is planned but has not yet been completed or the deletion of the data has been stayed by an order of the court or the Secretary of State." (ATTACHMENT B).

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

In February of 2021, Stephanie Scott, former Township Clerk for Adams Township in Hillsdale County was instructed by the Deputy County Clerk, Abe Dane to comply with the BOE's letter. (ATTACHMENT C). In a follow-up email, it was confirmed that the folder in the EPB drive from the November 2020 election was the one that the local clerks, including Scott, were being told to delete. (ATTACHMENT C).

FOIA requests for EPB information began to be sent to county and local clerks. A July 20, 2022 email from Lori Bourbonais advised clerks to consult with counsel before responding to FOIAs. On August 26, 2022, Lori Bourbonnais with BOE sent email to clerks asserting their instructions to delete records are lawful. (ATTACHMENT H).

On November 14, 2022 Lori Bourbonais released a letter to clerks instructing that local counsel should be consulted before fulfilling FOIA requests. (ATTACHMENT G). The letter asserts that the release of the .csv file contains software programming and the BOE interest in 'maximizing the protection and defense of its information system which outweigh the public interest in the disclosure of this information". Id.

As further discussed herein, MCL 168.509gg defines election information that is exempt from freedom of information act. Lawful redaction of the appropriate items is expected, but BOE is not allowed to define what is acceptable

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

FOIA material in opposition to statute. In July 2023 the Bureau of Elections released a seven-page letter to county clerks and a handful of local clerks that had received FOIA requests for the EPB Voter file (.csv).

As of the 2022 elections, all files on the USB Drive for the EPB flash drive are now fully encrypted. This blatantly usurps a locals clerk's control and responsibility of local election records and appears to be the BOE's attempt to further prevent release of election records.

The electronic pollbook is an inherent component of the election audit trail and associated public election records. The public records derived from the EPB must, by law, be retained in their entirety and be accessible to the public. The Bureau of Elections has displayed a pattern of oversight that shows disregard for State and Federal Laws applicable to the election process. This FOIA appeal should be upheld and local clerks should testify as to the status of their EPB Voter file (.csv) format. Any interjection of responsibility by the Secretary of State should be denied.

ARGUMENT AND ANALYSIS

A. FOIA and Its Interpretation

Michigan's Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), MCL 15.231, et seq., "is a manifestation this state's public policy favoring public access to government information, recognizing the need that citizens be informed as they participate in democratic governance, and the need that public officials be held accountable for the manner in which they perform their duties." Manning v East Tawas, 234 Mich App 244, 248; 593 NW2d 649 (1999) (emphasis supplied). Our Supreme Court has repeatedly described FOIA as " a pro-disclosure statute," Herald Co v Bay City, 463 Mich 111, 119; 614 NW2d 873 (2000); Swickard v Wayne Co Med Examiner, 438 Mich 536, 544; 475 NW2d 304 (1991), and, as a result, Michigan courts have held "that FOIA's disclosure provisions must be interpreted broadly to ensure public access." Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 465; 789 NW2d 178 (2010) (emphasis supplied). The Legislature placed its imprimatur on this policy of broad public access and narrow construction of asserted statutory exemptions, when it stated:

> It is the public policy of this state that all persons…are entitled to full and complete information regarding the affairs of government and the official acts of those who represent them as public officials and public employees, consistent with this act. The people shall be informed so that they may fully participate in the democratic process. MCL 15.231(2) (emphasis added).

While it is true that FOIA contains several exceptions to the duty to disclose, MCL 15.243, "these exemptions must be construed narrowly, and the burden of proof rests with the party asserting an exemption," Manning, 234 Mich App at 248 (emphasis added); see also Bradley v Saranac Community Schools Bd of Ed, 455 Mich 285, 293; 565 NW2d 650 (1997). "Under FOIA, a public body must disclose all public records that are not specifically exempt under the act."

Hopkins v Duncan Twp, 294 Mich App 401, 409; 812 NW2d 27 (2011); see also MCL 15.233(1) (emphasis added). See also, Rataj v City of Romulus, 306 Mich App 735, 748-49; 858 NW2d 116 (2014).

With the legislative policy of broadly interpreting public disclosure statutes in favor of public access, narrowly construing asserted exemptions, and placing the burden of proof always on the party so asserting them, the overarching framework for interpretation of the statutes at issue is established.

"FOIA is a pro disclosure statute that we are to interpret broadly to allow public access. Conversely, [courts] are to interpret its exemptions narrowly so that we do not undermine its disclosure provisions. Simply put, the core purpose of FOIA is disclosure of public records in order to ensure the accountability of public officials. Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 465; 789 NW2d 178 (2010) ("record[s]" created…for the 2008 presidential primary that contain the printed name, address, and qualified voter file number of each elector and the participating political party ballot selected by that elector at the 2008 presidential primary are public records" as these are not "specifically exempt" they are subject to public access and required to be disclosed).

Indeed, the presumption is written into the act because "[t]he FOIA is an act requiring full disclosure of public records unless a statutory exemption precludes the disclosure of information. Messenger v Consumer & Industry Services, 238

See also, Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 455-62; 789 NW2d 178 (2010) (noting the presumption and that the purpose of FOIA is to provide the people of this state with full and complete information regarding the government's affairs and the official actions of governmental officials and employees and where the SOS conceded that the names and addresses of registered voters in were public records subject to public disclosure without exemption).

B. The General Rules of Statutory Interpretation Applicable to the FOIA Statute

"The primary goal of statutory interpretation is to 'ascertain the legislative intent that may reasonably be inferred from the statutory language.'" Krohn v Home-Owners Ins Co, 490 Mich 145, 156-57; 802 NW2d 281 (2011) (internal citations omitted). "The first step in that determination is to review the language of the statute itself." Id. See also, In re MCI Telecom Complaint, 460 Mich. 396, 411; 596 N.W.2d 164 (1999), citing House Speaker v State Admin Bd, 441 Mich 547, 567; 495 NW2d 539 (1993).

By statute, the Michigan Legislature requires that "[a]ll words and phrases [of statutes] shall be construed and understood according to the common and approved usage of the language; but technical words and phrases, and such as may have acquired a peculiar and appropriate meaning in the law, shall be construed and understood according to such peculiar and appropriate meaning." MCL 8.3a (LexisNexis, Lexis Advance through Act 11 of the 2024 Regular Legislative Session). "Unless statutorily defined, every word or phrase of a statute should be accorded its plain and ordinary meaning," Robertson v Daimlerchrysler Corp, 465 Mich 732, 748; 641 NW2d 567 (2002), "taking into account the context in which the words are used." Krohn v Home-Owners Ins Co, 490 Mich 145, 156-57; 802 NW2d 281 (2011). It is not the judiciary or any executive or administrative agency that can "decide" what words in statutes mean if they are plain and understandable. The Legislature is presumed to have intended the meaning it has plainly expressed, and if the expressed language is clear, judicial construction is not permitted and the statute must be enforced as written. Id. Additionally, it is important to ensure that words in a statute are not ignored, treated as surplusage, or rendered nugatory.

1. The statutes related to the voting records and the Secretary of States' and Defendants' duties to maintain such information provide a prima facie presumption that the records sought by Plaintiff are open for public access.

To begin with, the information sought by Plaintiff already enjoys a statutory presumption of being open and accessible for public access. These requirements must factor into any assessment of a FOIA request, and, particularly, the statutory exemptions asserted as the reasons for withholding them. For example, MCL 168.810 provides that "[o]ne of the poll lists shall be delivered to the clerk of the township or city, as the case may be, and shall be by him filed in his office." (emphasis added). In other words, these records are to be entered and filed in the public records of the relevant official. Further, MCL 168.811 provides, explicitly, that:

> All election returns, including poll lists, statements, tally sheets, absent voters' return envelopes bearing the statement required by [MCL 168.]761, absent voters' records required by [MCL 168.760], and other returns made by the election inspectors of the several precincts must be carefully preserved and may be destroyed after the expiration of 22 months following the primary or election at which the same were used. All applications executed under [MCL 168.]523, all voter registration applications executed by applicants under [MCL

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

> 168.]497(3) and (4), and all absent voters' applications must be carefully preserved and may be destroyed after the expiration of 6 years following the primary or election at which those applications were executed. All ballots used at any primary or election, other than ballots containing a federal office, may be destroyed after 30 days following the final determination of the board of canvassers with respect to the primary or election unless a petition for recount has been filed and not completed or unless the destruction of the ballots is stayed by an order of a court. All ballots containing a federal office, and all presidential primary ballot selection forms, may be destroyed after the expiration of 22 months following the primary or election at which those ballots were cast or forms were used.

Further, all voter registration records are required by law to be open for public inspection. MCL 168.516. Further, MCL 750.492 requires public officials to permit inspection of the official records of said public office. Finally, federal law requires "all records and papers which come into [the] possession [of "[e]very officer of election"] relating to any application, registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in such election," to be "retained and preserved" for a period of 22 months following an election. 52 U.S.C. § 20701. Further, 52 U.S.C. § 20702 makes it a crime for "any person" whether or not an election officer to "willfully steal[], destroy[], conceal[], mutilate[], or alter[] any record or paper required by" § 20701 to be retained and preserved. Moreover, MCL 750.248 provides that (1) A person who falsely makes, alters, forges, or counterfeits a public record, or a certificate, return, or attestation of a clerk of a court, register of deeds, notary public, township clerk, or any other public officer, in relation to a matter in which the certificate, return, or attestation may be received as legal proof, …with intent to injure or defraud another person is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than 14 years." This statute (1) applies to government officials by its plain language ("a person"), and (2) it "applies to public records." People v Carter, 106 Mich App 765, 767-68; 309 NW2d 33 (1981). Indeed, there is even more reason to hold government officials responsible for deleting, altering, and/or concealing public information and public records because of the tight control and monopoly of possession that the government exercises over such data. See, e.g., People v Hall, 391 Mich 175, 215 NW2d 166 (1974).

These and additional statutes therefore demonstrate that these records are public records, required to be kept on file and retained and preserved for public inspection. These records therefore enjoy a presumption of disclosure under FOIA. "FOIA is a pro disclosure statute that [courts] are to interpret broadly to allow public access. Conversely, [courts] are to interpret its exemptions narrowly so that [they] do not undermine its disclosure provisions. Simply put, the core purpose of FOIA is disclosure of public records in order to ensure the accountability of public officials. Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 465; 789 NW2d 178 (2010) (emphasis added) ("record[s]" created…for the 2008 presidential primary that contain the printed name, address, and qualified voter file number of each elector and the participating political party ballot selected by that elector at the 2008 presidential primary are public records" as these are not "specifically exempt" they are subject to public access and required to be disclosed). Therefore, generally sweeping assertions of whole swaths of excluded information will not satisfy the pro-disclosure nature of FOIA. Indeed, the responding agency is responsible and liable for the decisions made respecting FOIA requests – they cannot rely on guidance, regulations, memoranda, or emails from any other entity to make this decision. ACLU, supra (the only basis for a FOIA denial is if it is in the statute's exemptions, which must be narrowly construed to ensure that the public has presumptive access to public information). See also, Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 458; 789 NW2d 178 (2010).

Defendants cannot therefore say, as they have, that they are "waiting" on the research and guidance from the SOS or any other entity for that matter to tell them what to withhold, what exemption applies, or what exemption might be asserted, or what might be exempt in the future, because "only the circumstances known to the public body at the time of the request are relevant to whether an exemption precludes disclosure," not any "waiting to hear from" the SOS, or any entity other than the Legislature. Id.

2. There is no statutory basis for Defendants' denial of the public records requested by Plaintiff's FOIA

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

The public record / public information sought does have to be factually analyzed – some personal information, etc. (which Plaintiff has already conceded can be "redacted") might be subject to one or more exemptions cited, but on balance, the information can and should be disclosed without concern that any of the reasons for the exemptions will be triggered. Practical Political Consulting, Inc v Secretary of State, 287 Mich App 434, 465; 789 NW2d 178 (2010) ("record[s]" created…for the 2008 presidential primary that contain the printed name, address, and qualified voter file, number of each elector and the participating political party ballot selected by that elector at the 2008 presidential primary are public records" as these are not "specifically exempt" they are subject to public access and required to be disclosed).

Moreover, Plaintiff specifically stated he was not asking for any proprietary software or any technical information that would require disclosure of such. In other words, there is no threat to a cyber-attack, hacking methods software, hardware tech data, because this is ostensibly "static" information that is sought to report on and record and classify that which appeared at a specific place and a specific time in history. These are quintessentially kept and preserved public records that record and document the passage of a public event – an election. See Political Consulting Inc, supra. And, in any event, the Defendants (counties and clerks) cannot rely on the sweeping, ultra-vires decision of the Secretary of State to make a FOIA decision on behalf of each and every individual who in their own right are responsible for, and will be held liable for, errant decisions made upon receipt of a FOIA request.

The data sought in Plaintiff's FOIA requests must be subject to redaction, if necessary, as Plaintiff has conceded, but also must be tailored to the request to fulfill the pro-disclosure meaning and intent of Michigan's FOIA. However, the information sought fits nowhere within the meaning of MCL 15.2431(y) (threatening Michigan's election security – quite the contrary, it is sought precisely to prevent unlawful breaches in Michigan's election security as defined in the Michigan Constitution and statutory law – not as envisioned and conceived by SOS Benson); or MCL 15.243(1)(z) (it simply would not "disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software."). The data will be used to compare the results with voter information, and data provided by the state – where several alarming discrepancies have already been found. (ATTACHMENT C).

3. Genuine issues of material fact about the categorization of the items subject to Defendants' denial and the scope of the exemptions as applied thereto prohibit summary dismissal of Plaintiff's claims.

Finally, Defendants' cannot be entitled to summary dismissal because there are genuine issues of material fact that require factual, expert, and legal determinations concerning whether (and to what extent, i.e., scope), Defendants' exemptions are valid. Moreover, FOIA provides a right of action – to sue the denying parties in court to determine the fact and apply the law to them. This is the process required by the statute. SOS Benson and Defendants cannot get a "free pass" from compliance with FOIA just because SOS Benson "intervened," even though she has no standing to do so in this FOIA proceeding, and seeks to apply her own administrative agency's "interpretations" and "broadly construed," i.e., sweeping idea of exemptions. ACLU, supra. Denial of FOIA must come from the public official who receives the request. And, the broadly construed permissibility, and narrowly construed exemptions must also be applied by these officials.

Aside from the fact that the records Plaintiff has requested (1) enjoy a prima facie presumption of being open public records due to their independent treatment under Michigan and federal election laws as public information required to be retained, preserved, and protected, and therefore, are subject to disclosure, and (2) do not fall within any of the asserted exemptions cited by Defendants when the broadly permissive interpretive principles and the narrow construction of the asserted exemptions are applied, see analysis supra, genuine issues of material fact exist sufficient to prohibit summary dismissal based on Defendants' sweeping interpretation of the exemptions cited as applied to the precise information sought.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Indeed, MCL 15.244 requires public officials to disclose non-exempt information; if there is "exempt" information combined with said "non-exempt" information, then the public official cannot use the excuse that redaction or separation is not possible. See, e.g., Evening News Asso v Troy, 417 Mich 481, 486; 339 NW2d 421 (1983). Indeed, the statute itself says: "the public body shall separate the exempt and nonexempt material and make the nonexempt material available for examination and copying." Id., (emphasis in original), citing MCL 15.244. As this Court is well aware, "[u]se of the word 'shall' connotes a mandatory duty imposed by law," especially as it relates to a command directed at public officials and their public duties to disclose public information under FOIA. Sharp v Huron Valley Bd of Ed, 112 Mich App 18, 20; 314 NW2d 785 (1981), citing Southfield Twp v Drainage Board for Twelve Towns Relief Drains, 357 Mich 59, 76; 97 NW2d 821 (1959), King v Director of the Midland County Department of Social Services, 73 Mich App 253, 259; 251 NW2d 270 (1977). responsibility of local election records and appears to be the BOE's attempt to further prevent release of election records. Plaintiff is entitled to the information he seeks to keep the state in check, and to ensure that elections are secure and properly run in accordance with the laws that county and local clerks, and local election officials must follow. The very pro disclosure purpose behind Plaintiff's request is not to make elections less secure, but more secure, not to invade privacy or infringe on copyright and proprietary matters, but to make elections and the manner in which they are conducted transparent and honest.

The electronic pollbook is an inherent component of the election audit trail and associated public election records. The public records derived from the EPB must, by law, be retained in their entirety and be accessible to the public. The Bureau of Elections has displayed a pattern of oversight, at best, and downright intentional neglect, at worst, that shows disregard for State and Federal Laws applicable to the election process. Plaintiff's FOIA should be honored, and there should be a full litigation and hearing so that local clerks and other witnesses called by the parties can testify as to the status of their EPB Voter file (.csv) format and/or as to their own experiences with voter registration fraud and/or mistakes. Any interjection of responsibility by the Secretary of State should be denied.

MEMORANDUM

Date: July 10, 2023
To: Municipal and County Election Officials
From: Jonathan Brater, Director of Elections
Subject: Security of Qualified Voter File and Electronic Pollbooks

Introduction

Election officials have experienced a series of attempts to access election materials that, if disclosed, pose privacy threats to Michigan voters and security threats to Michigan's election system. At times, these attempts have been accompanied by aggressive and even threatening language and behavior. Consistent with the Michigan Election Law and its responsibility to safeguard election security in Michigan, the Bureau of Elections (the Bureau) has instructed clerks that while Qualified Voter File (QVF) and Electronic Pollbook (EPB) records are public and subject to disclosure, certain components of these systems cannot be released without compromising voter privacy and election system security.

This memorandum provides further explanation of these issues and information for clerks to consider when reviewing public records requests with their legal counsel. It also describes the potential consequences of providing inappropriate access to election equipment to unauthorized individuals. Additionally, the memorandum addresses several false claims that have been made about QVF and EPB data and election administration in Michigan.

Record Requests Seeking QVF and EPB Data

Clerks have received requests for access to QVF and EPB data in a variety of different formats, including:

- Requests under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act (FOIA)
- Demands that records be preserved for "investigation"
- Demands to perform "inspections" of election records or equipment

Regardless of the format of any request to inspect QVF or EPB data, clerks should consult with their own counsel for legal questions regarding any of these requests.[1] The Bureau provides the following information in this memorandum: a summary of applicable provisions of FOIA and the Michigan Election Law; a description of the manner in which the Bureau has responded to specific requests, and; instructions not to disclose certain materials that pose a threat to election system security if released.

[1] Any clerk who receives a subpoena, request to preserve records pursuant to a lawsuit, or a request to inspect records from law enforcement should consult with legal counsel and inform the Bureau of Elections and the Michigan Department of Attorney General.

Requests for Electronic EPB Files

Clerks have received requests for electronic copies of EPB materials in various formats. These include requests for "an electronic copy of the Qualified Voter File (QVF) extract"; an "electronic pollbook flash drive", a "CSV- Comma separate value format", or other similar requests. At times, these requests have been accompanied by "helpful" instructions showing clerks how to potentially compromise the security of their election systems and render their election equipment unusable by illegally providing security-compromising information to unauthorized individuals.

Before responding to these or any FOIA requests, clerks should consult with their legal counsel regarding the requests and exemptions that may apply. Under FOIA, officials may shield sensitive information from disclosure. In the case of EPB files, the Bureau of Elections instructs clerks that they must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the EPB. The Bureau gives this lawful instruction[2] under its supervisory authority pursuant to MCL 168.21, 168.31, and 168.32, as doing so could compromise the Bureau's ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss or destruction, and accordingly interfere with the Bureau's obligation under the Michigan Election law to provide EPB software to clerks. MCL 168.668b.

In response to previous FOIA requests regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(y). In addition, the responsive records include proprietary software information, security feature information, and sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z). Additionally, these files contain sensitive information regarding jurisdictions' EPB laptop(s) that might compromise the security of these laptops.

EPB files also contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which are exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software and program files are disclosed.

[2] See MCL 168.931(h) ("A person shall not willfully fail to perform a duty imposed upon that person by this act, or disobey a lawful instruction or order of the secretary of state as chief state election officer[.]""

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

If clerks receive a FOIA request for EPB data, the requestor can be directed to the county clerk for paper pollbook copies or to the Bureau for the log file or voter history.

Notwithstanding the above restrictions on the release of certain information, there are numerous ways in which members of the public can review public QVF and EPB data. Clerks can provide the paper records they are legally obligated to maintain for the required retention period after each election, as soon as the security period has elapsed. Certain specific data derived from the QVF and EPB is subject to disclosure under FOIA, including the lists of registered voters from the QVF and the paper printout of the EPB generated on election night.

If members of the public are interested in verifying the names of individuals registered to vote on a certain date or included in the EPB, they may obtain this information by submitting a FOIA request for publicly available records. If members of the public with concerns about EPB data wish to verify the names of individuals who cast ballots, they can also do so by submitting a FOIA request and reviewing the paper applications to vote completed by all in-person voters and the absent voter ballot applications submitted by all absentee voters.

Electronic records such as the EPB log file or voter history can be requested from the Bureau. Requests for EPB data must be directed to the Bureau to ensure that sensitive information related to both individual voters and the EPB are removed before public disclosure of otherwise available information. Even if clerks were to attempt to redact a voter's date of birth and other personally identifiable information, the disclosure of security and technical information is also exempt from FOIA and may not be properly redacted if produced by clerks, instead of the Bureau.

Clerks have also received communications demanding that they disregard instructions contained in the Bureau of Elections communications, including the Recount/Release of Security Memorandum circulated after each election. The Bureau's instructions are lawful directives in compliance with state and federal law.

Going back to at least 2012 (under Secretary of State Ruth Johnson), the Bureau has issued a directive to destroy electronic copies of the EPB and flash drive. As clerks are no doubt aware, numerous candidates of both major political parties have won statewide elections since 2012. This procedure is necessary to safeguard security and voter privacy. Clerks destroy electronic copies only after they have already printed the paper copy of pollbook information (which must be retained for the required retention period).

Clerks must comply with this instruction regardless of whatever claims private individuals make. A private individual has no authority to instruct clerks on their duties. Whatever "investigation" these individuals claim to be conducting or threats of "prosecution" they may make toward local or state officials, in the absence of a court-issued subpoena or other court order, clerks are not required to comply with their demands. If clerks do receive one of these demands, they should consult with their attorney on how to respond.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Clerks should also be wary of private individuals, including self-proclaimed "experts," attempting to instruct them on the issue of whether disclosure of electronic materials would or would not constitute a security concern. In reality, it is often not possible for an individual unfamiliar with a system to determine whether any one individual piece of information, if known, would be useful in compromising that system. This is one of the reasons software and data elements which may, on their own or in combination with other elements, jeopardize security are not disclosed. Similarly, clerks should not accept at face value claims from private individuals, whatever expertise they claim to have, that clerks can easily redact security-related or personal identifying information.

Consequences of Improper Disclosure

Clerks should understand that the disclosure of this sensitive information may compromise the integrity of Michigan's elections and may warrant an investigation by the Department of State, Department of Attorney General, or Michigan State Police. Improper disclosure may also result in fiscal implications for the jurisdiction. Specifically, disclosure could require the purchase of new EPB laptops for each precinct for which data was compromised.

False and Misleading Claims About QVF and EPB Data

Individuals seeking improper access to QVF and EPB records have made numerous false or misleading claims about QVF and EPB data and election administration in Michigan. Although making or believing false statements has no bearing on whether individuals are permitted to access a record, clerks may find these explanations useful in communicating with the public or other local and county officials, including law enforcement.

Election Turnout and Voter History

Some individuals have claimed that because, in past elections, the total number of ballots tabulated statewide does not exactly match the number of voters with a voter history indicator in QVF, this means that election results and files cannot be trusted, or that there is some sort of unknown or unexplained irregularity involving voter data.

In reality, these numbers do not match exactly because they come from two different sources. County-certified election results are based on the number of ballots cast and tabulated in each jurisdiction, as determined by the county canvass. This includes canvasser review of tabulator tapes showing election night results, in addition to any corrections or adjustments at the county canvass and recounts, if applicable.

Voter history in QVF is based on entry of voter history data from the EPBs (for in-person voters) and absent voter ballot return envelopes (for absentee voters). Following each election, each clerk uploads their EPB data for each of their precincts to the QVF. This automatically updates the voter history in QVF for all voters recorded in the EPB as voting at the polling place. Alternatively, clerks can manually add voter history to the QVF using the paper printout of the EPB.

If any of Michigan's 1,520 municipal clerks do not update QVF with EPB data for any of their precincts, voter history for voters in those precincts will not appear in QVF even though those voters did in fact appear at the precinct, apply to vote, get recorded in the poll book, and cast ballots. Following each election, the Bureau sends multiple communications and reminders to clerks to add voter history data to the QVF. Most clerks do so promptly, but some are delayed and some fail to do so.

This was the case in the November 2020 election, as it was in other past elections. Approximately 5.57 million ballots were cast in the November 2020 election according to certified results. As of April 2021, when the Office of the Auditor General reviewed QVF data for its audit of the Bureau, voter history for approximately 5.53 million voters had been uploaded to the QVF. In subsequent months, the Bureau sent additional communications to clerks reminding them to add voter history data to the QVF, and more clerks did so. As of 2022, the number of voters showing history in QVF for the November 2020 election was approximately 5.55 million.

Ultimately, a small percentage of jurisdictions did not add QVF data for at least one of their precincts in 2020 which meant that a small percentage of voter history was not recorded in QVF. Approximately 99.6% of voter history was uploaded in the QVF for the November 2020 election, which is a higher percentage than was uploaded for the November 2016 election (approximately 99.0%) and November 2018 election (approximately 98.5%). In subsequent elections, the percentage of voter history uploaded has increased even further.

EPB Time and Date Records

Individuals have claimed that the absence of a specific "time stamp" on some voter history tables is suspicious because, on election day, the EPB records the specific time at which a voter appeared on Election Day. These individuals misunderstand the table they are viewing. In reality, some QVF tables include "00:00" in the time field because the record is referring to an election date, not a time on election day. Elections occur all day, so it does not make sense for QVF to display any specific time. Like other programs that include voluminous amounts of data, QVF generates tables of data that are programmed and populated using numerous databases.[3] When there is no entry needed for a field (for example, a time field corresponding to election day), the default value that databases display is "00:00."

Voter History from Previous Addresses

Some voters who have moved from one jurisdiction to another in Michigan have noticed that voter history from prior elections, when they voted at their prior address, may appear as voter history from their current address. This is because the old version of QVF (QVF Legacy) did not track the jurisdiction where a past vote occurred. One of the many benefits of QVF Refresh, released in 2019, is that voter history from prior addresses can be tracked at the prior address. Therefore, voters who moved to and voted from prior addresses in elections that occurred after QVF Refresh was released will see voter history appear as having voted at the prior address.

[3] Some individuals have claimed that there are multiple QVF "databases" and that this is somehow being used to perpetuate fraud. Aside from being impossible for the reasons described later in the memo, this claim is based on misconceptions regarding the QVF. The QVF is not a single "database" but instead a program used by the Bureau and Clerks for many purposes, requiring numerous tables and reports, which are in turn programmed and populated by numerous databases. For an explanation of what a database actually is, see this explanation from Microsoft: https://azure.microsoft.com/en-us/resources/cloud-computing-dictionary/what-are-databases/.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

However, votes that occurred at addresses when the voter's move predated QVF Refresh will display at the current address. This is not because of some nefarious purpose, but because QVF Legacy did not have the data capability as the current system.

QVF Record Identifying and Voter ID Numbers

Some individuals have claimed that the fact that there are multiple identifying numbers corresponding to voter records in QVF suspicious. In reality, there are multiple numbers for security reasons. Voters have a public voter ID number in QVF and the EPB, which is public and disclosed in public record requests. QVF also contains separate record-identifying numbers that correspond to voter records, which are used for security and verification purposes (and which are not publicly disclosed for security reasons). Again, the non-disclosed record-identifying number is not different from the voter ID number for some nefarious purpose, but as an internal verification and security measure.

Security Procedures Used to Verify EPB is Offline

As clerks are aware, the EPB used on Election Day must be offline and laptops operating the EPB software must be turned to "airplane mode" to ensure there is no internet connection. In order to make sure that EPBs are offline, the EPB software is designed to receive a periodic "Ping" from the State of Michigan network on Election Day to check for improper internet connectivity. If the Ping detects an internet connection on the EPB laptop, the EPB software displays a warning message instructing the user to disconnect the laptop from an internet connection by turning the laptop to airplane mode. Some individuals have suggested this connection is suspicious, when in fact it is a security feature designed to ensure EPB laptops remain offline throughout Election Day.

General QVF-Related Conspiracy Theories

In general, some individuals have pointed to various data or program elements in QVF and claimed – whether because QVF data is imperfect or incomplete, because these individuals do not understand what they are looking at, or some combination of the above – that this shows some broad conspiracy to perpetrate election fraud. While it is of course true that QVF – a constantly changing voter file that needs to be updated whenever a voter registers, moves, cancels a registration, dies, applies for an absentee ballot, or various other activities – will never be 100 percent accurate or up to date, this does not mean there is some conspiracy to manipulate QVF data to perpetrate fraud. In fact, in recent years the Bureau and clerks have done more than ever before to keep QVF accurate and up to date.[4]

Regardless of how accurate or up to date QVF is at any given time, however, the suggestion that QVF could be used to perpetuate massive undetected election fraud is without merit. Even if one were to assume that Bureau staff (many of whom have worked at the nonpartisan Bureau of Elections for years or decades under multiple Secretaries of State of both political parties) and staff at the nonpartisan Department of Technology, Management, and Budget were involved in such a scheme, it would require thousands of clerks and election inspectors of both political parties to be involved as well.

[4] For more information on how QVF is kept up to date, see https://www.michigan.gov/sos/elections/voting/voters/voter-registration-cancellation-procedures.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

This is because while QVF is used to maintain electronic registration and voting records, voting is done by human beings using paper ballots, in elections that are run by municipal clerks across the state. In addition to the paper ballots, there are also polling place applications to vote (which must be completed by in-person voters, and which are retained by clerks after election) and absentee ballot applications (which must be completed by absentee voters, and which are also retained by clerks after elections). These materials provide an independent, paper record of all the individuals who cast ballots in an election. If there were actually some kind of fraud being perpetrated using QVF, this could be easily proven by reviewing these paper records.

In many respects, these nonsensical claims about QVF are similar to the false claims previously made about ballot tabulation equipment, which if true could have been proven by reviewing paper ballots (when in fact, reviews of paper ballots all confirmed that tabulators counted ballots accurately).

Additional Information and Support Available

It is unfortunate that election officials continue to be subjected to false claims, abusive behavior, and even threats. Whatever assertions individuals make about election officials, clerks should be mindful that there are legal avenues for individuals to pursue these assertions. If individuals disagree with a FOIA determination by a local or state official, they can file a lawsuit. If they believe criminal activity occurred, they can make a complaint in writing to law enforcement.

The Bureau encourages election officials to communicate with local and state law enforcement regarding any threats they may have received, and to continue to communicate with law enforcement regarding the various false claims and allegations of criminal activity that some individuals continue to make. Clerks are also encouraged to communicate with municipal and county government associations for additional independent support and advice. Finally, the Bureau of Elections remains available for any additional questions you have or support you may need. If clerks believe that any unauthorized or unsupervised access to their equipment may have occurred, they should contact the Bureau immediately. Please do not hesitate to contact the Bureau if we can be of further assistance.

City and Township Clerks,

Jurisdictions have received Freedom of Information Act Requests to view Qualified Voter File (QVF) records, voter registration records, and absent voter ballot records for registered voters in Michigan. You should consult with your local legal counsel regarding any public records requests. The Bureau of Elections' position is that the Michigan Election Law prohibits the release of the digitized voter signature images from the Qualified Voter File. MCL 168.509gg(f). The Bureau's position is that the Michigan Election Law does not prohibit clerks from allowing members of the public to view voter registration forms, voter registration master cards, absent voter ballot applications, or absent voter ballot applications that include a voter's handwritten signature.

MEMORANDUM

DATE: February 12, 2021
TO: County Clerks
FROM: Michigan Bureau of Elections
SUBJECT: Release of Voting Equipment

Please be advised of the following:

RELEASE OF VOTING EQUIPMENT: The security of ballots and election equipment is released as follows:

Ballots, programs and related materials: The security of all optical scan ballots, programs, test decks, accuracy test results, edit listings and any other related materials are released.

E-Pollbook laptops and flash drives: The EPB software and associated files must be deleted unless a post-election audit is planned but has not yet been completed or the deletion of the data has been stayed by an order of the court or the Secretary of State. Jurisdictions should consult with city, township, or county counsel regarding any pending court orders, subpoenas, or records requests regarding these materials.

FEDERAL BALLOT RETENTION REQUIREMENT: If the office of President, U.S. Senator or U.S. Representative in Congress appears on the ballot (all appeared on the November 3, 2020 general election ballot), federal law requires that all documents relating to the election -- including optical scan ballots and the programs used to tabulate optical scan ballots -- be retained for 22 months from the date of the certification of the election. To comply with the requirement, the Bureau of Elections recommends that optical scan ballots and the programs relating to federal elections be stored in sealed ballot bags in a secure place during the 22-month retention period. The documents subject to the federal retention requirement must not be transferred to ballot bags for extended retention until after they are released under Michigan election law as detailed in this memo.

Affidavit of Stephanie Scott

State of Michigan

County of Hillsdale

Stephanie Scott, being duly sworn deposes and states as follows under penalty of perjury:

1. My name is Stephanie Scott. I am presently 52 years old, and my current address of residence is 3571 State Road, Hillsdale MI 49242.
2. I am the former Adams Township Clerk.
3. I assumed office of Adams Township Clerk early December 2020.
4. I immediately began to prepare to run a local school millage election by completing the State of Michigan's online election training and certification program. Upon completion I was then allowed access to the State of Michigan Qualified Voting File (QVF).
5. To my understanding, Adams Township was holding the first and only election in the state following the November 2020 presidential election.
6. During election preparation, I received instructions from the Hillsdale County clerks office, Deputy Clerk Abe Dane, that I was to locate the USB flash drive from November 2020 election. Once located I was instructed to delete the files and return the USB flash drive to him for the programming files of the Electronic Pollbook (EPB) for the next election.
7. In December 2020, an email was sent out from the Michigan Bureau of Elections at the direction of Jocelyn Benson directing the deletion of the EPB data from the November 3, 2020 election.
8. I reviewed the law and discovered that deleting the EPB data would be a violation of state and federal law. I did not delete the EPB data.
9. I questioned the direction from the Secretary of State to delete the EPB data because the USB sticks that store the EPB data cost less than $10.00. Additionally, election records that I am required to maintain pursuant to the Michigan Constitution, Michigan law, and federal law would be deleted.
10. I raised this concern with the Secretary of State's Office. I was told by the Bureau of Elections that the records contained on the EPB USB drive were preserved by 3 print outs from the pollbook (the laptop that the EPB USB drive is inserted into) that occur on election night.
11. I subsequently learned this statement from the BOE is FALSE!
12. I had the Adams Township EPB data analyzed by a forensic expert, and I learned that the EPB data is original evidence that has information not contained anywhere else including the 3 print outs referred to by the BOE. It is original evidence that had I deleted that I would have violated state and federal law.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

13. The forensic expert further verified that the registration (QVF) files were on the EPB USB drive. I then reconciled the data with the Adams Township certified and recorded data for the November 3, 2020 election. It matched. As it should.
14. I then compared the EPB data and the Adams Township data that was recorded for the November 3, 2020 election to the certified and recorded data that Hillsdale County had for Adams Township for the November 3, 2020 election. It matched. As it should.
15. I then compared the EPB data, and Adams Township data, Hillsdale data to the certified data obtained by FOIA request from the BOE as to who the state had recorded for voting in Adams Township for the November 3, 2020 election. It differed by 11.5%
16. Again, it differed by 11.5%.
17. In other words, the State final certified data had 11.5% unique voters recorded as voting in Adams Township that Adams Township, and Hillsdale County did not have recorded.
18. This was ONLY discovered by looking at the EPB data. The same data that the SOS ordered to be deleted.
19. voter records (FOIA records) from 2009 thru October 2021. We began to examine the numbers for Adams Township.
20. The first discrepancy identified was the fact that the FOIA records illustrate 1332 people voted
21. I wanted to find who the 30 people were that the state FOIA records did not have record of voting. We created a query to compare the EPB record to the state FOIA records.
22. Pertaining to the timestamps. There is no other documentation to my knowledge that records this. It would represent when the election inspector ' checked in' the voter to the electronic pollbook on the laptop and provided him/her a ballot. The ballot number would be entered at this time as well.
23. I noticed the Voter IDs had different lengths of numbers. Upon closer review, the Voter IDs did not match the Voter IDs on the state FOIA records.
24. The BOE responded in the October 15, 2021 letter to my concerns of deleting the EPB to me that "all electronic pollbook data is printed in paper form on election night". That is clearly not the case with my findings.
    a. The 14 names listed as same day registers are not delineated on the .pdf file of the Voter List.
    b. There are 10 data fields not included on the .pdf of the Voter List including the time stamp and the Voter ID.
    c. No information regarding the laptop is recorded in any of the night end .pdf reports.
25. These discrepancies are repeatable in other precincts in which the clerks lawfully retained their EPB flash drives. And because of this, citizens began writing FOIAs for the .csv EPB Voter file.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

26. The BOE responded to the FOIAs with a variety of emails and memos discouraging clerks from providing the information and claiming security concerns. Included are emails/memos dated 8/26/22, 7/20/22, 11/14/2022.
27. These take the same authoritarian tone by the BOE advising clerks to consult with their legal counsel before complying with FOIA.
28. Election records exempt from FOIA release are identified in MCL 168.509gg. BOE has no authority to intimidate clerks into non-compliance with statute.
29. The BOE continued to send out letters instructing clerks to delete the EPB flash drive data off laptops and off the USB flash drive, justifying it as a necessary security issue.
30. EPB sticks of 2022 election show 'pings' of internet connectivity attempts. Although I do not have physical prints of the evidence I saw, you will see reference to this fact in the July 10, 2023 BOE letter to clerks. While the BOE attempts to explain the internet connection attempts as their 'ping' to check if election laptop is in airplane mode, it is not logical to believe that the EPB software installed on local laptops can record inbound 'pings'. But it is completely reasonable that it would record it's own outbound 'pings' of failed IP address connection attempts.
31. As the momentum increased around the state, and as clerks denied FOIAs and were on record of not having the files, the BOE released a memo dated July 10, 2023 which contains many refutations to the election result findings of the EPB voter files verifies.
32. As of the 2023 election, the EPB history file is encrypted. The clerk has no ability to access her own pollbook records.
33. It is my opinion that the mantra to compare tabulator tapes to paper ballots is NOT sufficient to an audit of actual election results. It completely disregards WHO voted. Adams Township records from the USB flash drive document the complete misstatement of the state QVF voter database. It contains a litany of bad and potentially fraudulent records.
34. MCL168.509ff states "The secretary of state and each county, city, township, or village clerk shall maintain all records concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of registration records under this chapter for 2 years or more*. Except to the extent that the records maintained pursuant to this section relate to a declination to register to vote or to the identity of a designated voter registration agency through which any particular voter applied for registration pursuant to section 509gg, the secretary of state or a* county, city, township, or village clerk shall make the records available for public inspection under reasonable conditions and, if available, for photocopying at a reasonable cost." While some FOIA requests were fulfilled, it became apparent that the BOE was intervening to discourage and prevent the lawful fulfillment of FOIA requests for pertinent election records.
35. The EPB flash drive files MUST be maintained and utilized for election accountability.

Hi Abe-

I am surprised that this direction isn't coming from the Secretary of State. Incredible that all are being directed to remove seals and loose the integrity of the paper trail. I suppose this came out because the Supreme Court declined case?

So you are free to remove seals and store your ballots somewhere more convenient if you want to free up your nice ballot storage containers for the next election. PLEASE LET MARNEY OR I KNOW IF YOU NEED NEW BALLOT STORAGE BAGS. Our current bags are between 15 and 20 years old and are showing a lot of age. We are in the process of researching prices for new bags and if you are interested these bags can include wheels for easier transport.

This would be used on Monday March 22nd to download the EPB from QVF for transfer to your EPB laptop for election day.

If you already have your EPB Flash Drive, please delete the November 3rd, 2020 election folder within the drive.

If you do not have an EPB Flash Drive, I will provide one in your precinct kit.

Please let me know either way. Thank you.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

AFFIDAVIT OF BENJAMIN R. COTTON 11 JULY 2022

I, Ben Cotton, being duly sworn, hereby depose and state as follows:

1) I am over the age of 18, and I understand and believe in the obligations of an oath. I make this affidavit of my own free will and based on first-hand information and my own personal observations.

2) I am the founder of CyFIR, LLC (CyFIR).

3) I have a master's degree in Information Technology Management from the University of Maryland University College. I have numerous technical certifications, including the Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP), Microsoft Certified Professional (MCP), Network+, and Certified CyFIR Forensics and Incident Response Examiner.

4) I have over twenty-five (25) years of experience performing computer forensics and other digital systems analysis.

5) I have over eighteen (18) years of experience as an instructor of computer forensics and incident response. This experience includes thirteen (13) years of experience teaching students on the Guidance Software (now OpenText) EnCase Investigator and EnCase Enterprise software.

6) I have testified as an expert witness in state and federal courts and before the United States Congress.

7) I regularly lead engagements involving digital forensics for law firms, corporations, and government agencies and am experienced with the digital acquisition of evidence under the under the Federal Rules of Evidence.

8) I reviewed the Administrator manual for the Hart Verity system for the version of software that was purchased by the State of Michigan under contract number #071B7700128.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

9) I reviewed the State of Michigan contract number #071B7700128, which is specific to the State of Michigan acquisition, deployment and operation of the Hart voting systems from March 1, 2017 to February 28, 2027 and was in effect during the November 3, 2020 general election.

10) I reviewed the Voting System Examination of Hart InterCivic Verity Voting 2.4 report dated May 16, 2020 the was conducted by Brian Mechler on behalf of the State of Texas.

11) The analysis and review of the Hart InterCivic contract, administrative and user manuals state the following:

a) State Michigan contract number #071B7700128 documents the inclusion of the State of MI Qualified Voter Files (QVF) loaded onto the tabulators on page 59 and are illustrated in the diagram on page 60.

b) This download of QVF occurs 4-5 weeks prior to election via the Verity Drive USB stick (V-Drive). This data is loaded onto the tabulator prior to the Public Accuracy Test and not modified by the clerk prior to election day.

c) The Verity drive is provided by the County to the township clerk.

d) The Hart InterCivic tabulator includes WIFI and ethernet local area network (LAN) network support coupled with an automatic transmission process to connect to the internet. (Page 61)

e) The ballot images are stored on the tabulator in PNG format. (page 77)

f) The time stamp of the ballot insertion into the tabulator is removed per paragraph 1.1.A.24 of Hart contract.

g) Ballot information is recorded in 3 physically separate locations: internal memory, the paper ballot itself and on the V-drive.

h) Given that the ballot images are stored on the tabulator, the QVF is stored on the tabulator, the ballot images are stored on the tabulator and the tabulator has multiple modes of internet connectivity with few if any cyber security protections, a huge vulnerability to the integrity of the voting process exists. If an unauthorized person were to gain remote access to the tabulators the vote as recorded on the tabulator could be modified or additional votes entered into the system.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

12) The Adams Township tabulator was confiscated by MI State Police and remains in their custody. Since maintenance was not performed prior to the seizure, the ballot information from the 2018 thru March 2021 elections should remain on the device.

13) I have had the opportunity, with the permission of Adams Township, Michigan officials, to examine the contents of the Electronic Poll Book (EPB) USB drive from the November 2020 General Election.

14) I have reviewed the letter from Jonathan Brater, Director of Elections, dated 15 October 2021 to Stephanie Scott.

15) I have reviewed a series of emails between Stephanie Scott and Abe Dane dated 23 February 2021 through 24 February 2021.

16) I have reviewed the Memorandum dated 12 February 2021 named 2021.02.12 Final Release of Security Memo Nov 2020.pdf. This memorandum is unsigned but is written on Michigan Bureau of Elections letterhead.

17) I have had the opportunity to review the reports that are generated and printed by the Secretary of State following the submission of precinct results for a given election. These reports are referenced in the Jonathan Brater document dated 15 October 2021.

18) The administrative and operator manuals for the Hart InterCivic voting system clearly state that the Qualified Voter Record is stored on the voting machines and poll books..

19) The epb.accdb file on the EPB USB is a password-protected data base that contains the election definition data as well as qualified voter data. At the point that these files are utilized in the course of the election, the data contained in these files becomes unique to that machine and election. For example, when a qualified voter casts a vote the exact date and time that the vote is cast is added to the voter's record. At this point, the data on the devices and the EPB USB becomes original evidence for the voting process.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

20) Under the Federal Rules of Evidence Rule 902 paragraph 14, data copied from an electronic device, storage medium or file is admissible if authenticated by a process of digital identification and certified by a qualified person. This presumes that all data contained on the device is copied and reproduced. I saw no evidence that there is any such certification attesting to the completeness of the copied data associated with the conversion of the electronic EPB USB to the printed format that is produced by the Secretary of State. Without this certification, the original evidence must be preserved. In this case that would require that the systems involved in the election and the removable media used in the election be preserved in their digital state following the closure of the polls. There are forensic preservation processes that could have preserved the data, but there are no current processes or procedures approved by the Secretary of State to perform these operations.

21) The EPB USB is original evidence. The basic principle governing the preservation of electronic data and ensuring that digital evidence is admissible in court is that original evidence is the best evidence. Preserving a digital device in an original state ensures that the evidence is reliable, dates and times are factual, and that the data has not been altered. Failure to preserve digital evidence in a forensically sound manner can result in charges of spoliation and the inadmissibility of that evidence in court. Based on my review of the Hart InterCivic manuals and the Secretary of State's instructions to the municipality election officials, I do not see any method or procedure to forensically preserve the voting systems or the digital media used in a Michigan election.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

22) The EPB USB contains data that is unique to that specific EPB USB and to the equipment that the USB is plugged into. The following items are not recorded anywhere else in the night-end reporting:

a. Same Day Voting Data. The quantity of same-day in-person registrations is not summarized on night-end reports.

b. Same Day Voting Data. The voter identification/ information is not recorded in the printed total votes cast nor is this information delineated in the end-of-night voter list.

c. Same Day votes. These votes are not separated out on the night-end ballot summary report.

d. The reports produced at the closing of the polls will reconcile the voting numbers, but there is no method to separate out the same-day registers without the original EPB USB.

23) I have analyzed reports produced by the Secretary of State for the preservation of voting data and materials under the Federal Statute and have determined that those reports do not capture and preserve all the data contained on the EBP USB. The following data elements for and Electronic Pollbook and other voting equipment used in the election are not part of these reports:

a) Computer Name that the Vote was Conducted On

b) The Domain of the Computer

c) Manufacturer of the Computer

d) The Model of the Computer

e) Processor Name

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

f) Total Virtual Memory Size

g) Free Virtual Memory

h) Free Physical Memory

i) Internet Connection Status

j) Internet Connection Type

k) Cable Internet Speed

l) Cable Internet MAC Address

m) Wifi Internet Speed

n) Wifi Internet Mac Address

o) Windows Operating System Version

p) AntiVirus Program and Status

q) Firewall Type and Status

r) Bit Locker Disk Encryption Status

s) Bitlocker Hard Disk Status

t) Bitlocker Removeable Drive Status

u) .Net Version

v) Dymo Lable Version.

Once again, these data elements are not part of the reports that are produced for preservation by the Secretary of State, but would be data that should be preserved under the Federal statutes. Should an audit of the election or should the voting records be produced in support of a legal action, the above components would be critical to prove compliance with election law, validate voting system configurations and the demonstrate the fairness of the election. Failure to forensically preserve the EPB USB would have effectively deleted and wiped these elements of information, as they are not present or preserved on any other component of the voting system.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

24) The following data fields for voter information from election day are not part of the night end reports:

a) VOTERID
b) BALLOTTYPE
c) PRECINCT
d) CREATE DATE – Recorded date of election.
e) ADDRESS_ID
f) LICENSE_NUMBER
g) IDENTIFICATION_STATUS_ID
h) DISTINCT_POLITIAL_AREA_ID
i) CODE
j) PARTYID

25) I had the opportunity to review FOIA documents produced by the Secretary of State's office to Scott Aughney. These documents included the official vote totals for Adams Township. Analysis of these official totals revealed some significant deviations from the data contained on the voting media at the local Township level.

a) The Electronic Poll Book USB data for Adams Township recorded 1,362 voters in night end reporting. This includes the same-day registered voters.
b) The Hillsdale County Canvassing Board confirms the quantity of 1362 votes in Adams Twp
c) The State records indicate 1332 votes recorded in Adams Township. This is short 30 votes from the end-of-day totals in the Adams Township data. These numbers do not include the fourteen (14) same-day registration voters.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

d) A comparison of names between the two data sources illustrates seventy-nine (79) unique names on the Electronic Poll Book data for Adams township that are not listed on the State's official records.

e) Conversely, there are sixty-four (64) names unique to the State's records that are not represented on the Adams Township Electronic Poll Book records.

f) The combination of these report discrepancies documents an 11.5% difference in votes between township and state.

Without the data contained on the EPB USB data there is no manner by which these discrepancies could be investigated and reconciled. The EPB USB data is essential to any audit or reconciliation.

I have had the opportunity to review two reports created by Scott Aughney. The first report titled "BALLOTS CAST HILLSDALE COUNTY ADAMS TOWNSHIP ELECTION DATE 2020-11-03 was printed on I/13/2022. The second report titled "BALLOTS CAST HILLSDALE COUNTY ADAMS TOWNSHIP ELECTION DATE 2020-11-03" was produced on 1/13/2022 as well. Both reports were produced in an Adobe Acrobat .pdf format document. Highlighting was applied to the "BALLOTS CAST HILLSDALE COUNTY ADAMS TOWNSHIP ELECTION DATE 2020-11-03" document on 1/17/2022. This was done to highlight voters, who according to the report, voted in the November 3, 2020 election but were not registered until after that date. In some cased these voters data of registration reflects registering to vote 7 months after the election. Figure one is a screen capture of this report. Voter identification data has been blocked to preserve privacy. The original document is available for review.

It is evident that the election date column reflects the date of the November 2020 general election and it is also apparent that on this one snippet of the report four (4) individuals registered well after the election date. A search was conducted on the QVR from the EPB.accdb file and none of these individuals were shown to have been registered before the election. A review of the total information contained in this report indicates that thirteen (13) individuals are recorded as successfully voting in the November 2020 general election that were not registered to vote until well after the election.

26) I have had the opportunity to examine multiple voting systems from multiple software vendors. It is clear from my experience that there is a blatant lack of cyber security protection within the election systems. In the case of Adams Township I have had a limited opportunity to examine the complete voting system, but the items that I have been able to examine confirmed that there are shared passwords utilized by the personnel supporting the election process. Specifically the primary data base that is utilized on the EPB USB is a Microsoft Access database named epb.accdb. This file is password protected, which is sound security practices, but Microsoft Access only support a single password for multiple users. Each person using this data base would have had to have possession of this single password. This is known as a shared password. Sharing passwords is a violation of one of the basic tenants of sound cyber security practices.

27) It is clear from my examination of the materials, the Secretary of State's election reports and the digital EPB USB data that had Ms. Scott followed the directive from the Secretary of State's to delete the EPB USB data, none of these discrepancies could have been detected or substantiated.

JOCELYN BENSON, SECRETARY OF STATE DEPARTMENT OF STATE LANSING

October 25, 2021

Stephanie Scott, Clerk
Adams Township
5675 Knowles Road
P.O. Box 336
North Adams, MI 49262
Via U.S. Mail and email: stephiedscott@gmail.com

Dear Clerk Scott:

As of this date, you have not responded sufficiently to my previous letter directing you to confirm by October 22, 2021, that you would fulfill your legal responsibilities and comply with instructions from the Bureau of Elections. I previously directed you, in a letter dated October 15, 2021 (attached for your reference), to confirm that you would do the following:

- Permit Hart Intercivic, Inc. to perform preventative maintenance on your voting equipment.
- Conduct Public Accuracy Testing and sign required certificates.
- Conduct all future elections in Adams Township using certified Hart Intercivic, Inc. voting equipment, until such time as the Hillsdale County Clerk chooses a different certified voting system vendor.

On October 17, 2021 you responded by email stating that Public Accuracy Testing had been scheduled for October 27, 2021; however, in response to a follow-up email you did not confirm that you would sign certificates confirming Public Accuracy Testing had been completed, which you, as Township Clerk, are required to do. You also did not respond to either of the other two matters raised in the directive.

Your past statements, detailed in prior letters, indicate that you are unwilling to fulfill your responsibilities as clerk, and you have failed to confirm that you will fulfill them in response to recent correspondence. Accordingly, in order to ensure public trust and confidence in the integrity and security of elections, and to ensure that elections in Adams Township are conducted in accordance with the Michigan Election Law, I am directing you to refrain from administering any elections held in Adams Township, including the upcoming November 2, 2021 election. These functions will be fulfilled by the Hillsdale County Clerk or her designee until further notice.

Under the Michigan Election Law, 1954 PA 116, as amended, MCL 168.1*et seq.,* the Secretary of State is the Chief Election Officer of this State and "shall have supervisory control over local election officials in the performance of their duties under the provisions of this act." MCL 168.21. The Secretary of State is required by law to "issue instructions" and "[a]dvise and direct local election officials as to the proper methods of conducting elections." MCL 168.31(1)(a),(b). County clerks and Boards of Commissioners are required to comply with theinstructions given by the Secretary of State. Secretary of State v Berrien Co Bd of Election Comm'rs, 373 Mich 526, 530-531 (1964). The Director of Elections is authorized to act at the Secretary's behest "with respect to the supervision and administration of the election laws." MCL 168.32.

In accordance with my authority under the Michigan Election Law, you are directed to refrain from any election administration activities, including the duties described below pertaining to voter registration and routine list maintenance; preparation, issuance, and processing of ballots (including absent voter ballots) and absent voter ballot applications; ordering or assembling election supplies and precinct supply kits; recruiting, placing, and training election inspectors; logic and accuracy testing; voter registration before the 14th day prior to Election Day and the close of polls; handling any Election Day issues that may arise; generation of unofficial election results, and responsibilities related to the post-election canvass process.

- Performing Voter Registration and Routine List Maintenance. You must refrain from any duties associated with processing voter registration applications and performing routine list maintenance. These functions must be performed by the Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections.

- Ordering Election Supplies and Ballots. You are prohibited from ordering election supplies and ballots; the Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections must order supplies and prepare the precinct materials. You are prohibited from handling any ballots, including blank ballots. The Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections must secure and track all ballots, including blank ballots, that are ordered or delivered to your office.

- Processing Absent Voter Ballot Applications and Issuing Absent Voter Ballots. You are barred from issuing, handling, and processing any absent voter ballot applications, and prohibited from preparing, issuing, delivering, receiving, and handling any absent voter ballots, including the recording of issuance and receipt of ballots in the Qualified Voter File (QVF). Only the Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections are permitted to perform any of these functions.

- Preparing Polling Locations. You must not set up (or supervise the set up of) polling locations. The Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections must perform (or supervise) the set up.

- Recruiting, Assigning and Training Election Inspectors. You must refrain from performing any tasks associated with poll worker recruitment, placement and training. Training must be conducted by an individual who is certified to train election inspectors. If supplemental training is necessary, it may be taught by the Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections.

- Membership on the Election Commission. The Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections shall replace you as a member of the Township Election Commission.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

- Role in Logic and Accuracy Testing. You must not perform any duties in relation to logic and accuracy testing. Individuals designated by the Election Commission (other than yourself) may be authorized to complete the test decks, ballot charts, and initial testing for the preliminary logic and accuracy testing. The public accuracy test shall be conducted by the Election Commission, which is also responsible for sealing the equipment, recording seal numbers, and completing the required paperwork. Duties that would otherwise be performed by you will be performed by the Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections.

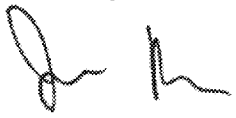
- Addressing Election Day Issues. Issues that arise on Election Day must be addressed by the Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections as appropriate.

- Compiling Unofficial Results/ Post-Election Canvass. The Hillsdale County Clerk or an individual designated by her or the Bureau of Elections will act as the Township's point of contact regarding involving all duties related to the compiling of unofficial results and the 14-day post-election canvass process.

You are directed to provide immediate access to all election equipment and records, including tabulators, voter assist terminals, absent voter ballot applications and ballot envelopes, and polling place materials, to the Hillsdale County Clerk or her designee at a time and place specified by the County Clerk or her designee. Your access to the Qualified Voter File will be suspended until further notice. Adams Township will be billed for all costs incurred by Hillsdale County and the State of Michigan, including staff time, for administering elections in Adams Township.

This directive remains in effect until further notice. Be advised that willfully failing to comply with a lawful order from the Secretary of State is a misdemeanor. MCL 168.931(h). Please contact my office if you require additional information or clarification regarding these instructions.

Sincerely,



Jonathan Brater

AFFIDAVIT OF KIM MELTZER, CLERK FOR THE CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CLINTON, CONCERNING FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT REQUEST MADE BY MICHAEL BUTZ AND INFORMATION RECEIVED FROM THE MICHIGAN SECRETARY OF STATE

County of Macomb)
)SS
State of Michigan)

NOW COMES, Kim Meltzer, Clerk for the Charter Township of Clinton, who having been sworn, deposes and states as follows:

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

1. That I am competent to testify to the following facts based on my personal knowledge if called as a witness at trial, unless stated otherwise upon information and belief.

2. That I am presently the Clerk for the Charter Township of Clinton, and in my role as clerk undertook an oath of office to support the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Michigan, and to faithfully perform the duties of the office of clerk.

3. That I have received the following communications attached, marked and signed by me from the Michigan Secretary of State Election Division involving the electronic poll book. Exhibit A.

4. That I have been made aware of the requirements of 52 USCA 20701 and 20702, copies of which are attached as Exhibit B.

5. That I am aware of obligations as a clerk associated with my duties as an election official provided under MCL 168.520 which is attached as Exhibit C.

6. That I have been advised by the Secretary of State that the content of the electronic poll book in its electronic format as existing on the poll book should not be disclosed as such disclosure reasonably could result in harm to the confidentiality, integrity or availability of information systems which are part of the electronic poll book.

7. That I have also been advised by the Secretary of State that disclosure of the information in electronic form from the electronic poll book (extract file) as its assembled in the electronic poll book would furnish information that would identify or provide a means of identifying a person that may, as a result of disclosure of information, become a victim of a cybersecurity incident, or it may disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware or software.

8. That I have an obligation as clerk to comply with MCLA 168.520, a copy of which is attached as Ex. C, if I have knowledge that there is a probable illegal or fraudulent registration in the Township or in any precinct of the Township.

9. The Secretary of State has the ability to register voters through the driver database, and increase the number of new voter registrations in the QVF without a voter

RELEASE OF ALL CLAIMS AND HOLD HARMLESS AGREEMENT
By and Between
CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CLINTON and SHEILA GOLDSTEIN

This Release of All Claims and Hold Harmless Agreement (hereinafter "Release") is made and entered into this 6th day of December, 2023, by and between the Charter Township of Clinton, a Michigan municipal corporation, whose address is 40700 Romeo Plank Road, Clinton Township, Michigan 48038 (hereinafter "Township") and Sheila Goldstein ("Goldstein"), whose address is 38135 S Julian St Clinton Twp, Michigan 48036.

WHEREAS, for receipt of an executed Affidavit, an unexecuted copy of which is attached to this Release, Goldstein desires to release the Township from any and all claims relating to damages, injuries, causes of action or claims arising from any acts and omissions of the Township, Kim Meltzer, and its elected officials, employees, attorneys, agents, and affiliates for any and all claims, damages, injuries, causes of action or claims of any kind known, or unknown whatsoever relating to the production or failure to produce documents associated with any requests under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act, or failure to preserve or produce election records or for any errors or omissions or failures to preserve or produce election related records for elections occurring up until the date of this Release. Further, Goldstein desires to release the Township, Kim Meltzer, and its elected officials, employees, attorneys, agents, and affiliates from any and all claims known or unknown, injuries or damages, claims or causes of action known or unknown associated with elections or record retention or preservation.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of an executed Affidavit, Goldstein hereby releases the Township from any and all claims relating to damages, injuries, causes of action or claims arising from any acts and omissions of the Township, Kim Meltzer, and its elected officials, employees, attorneys, agents, and affiliates for any and all claims, damages, injuries, causes of action or claims of any kind known, or unknown whatsoever relating to the production or failure to produce documents associated with any requests under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act, or failure to preserve or produce election records or for any errors or omissions or failures to preserve or produce election related records for elections occurring up until the date of this Release.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

FURTHER, Goldstein releases the Township, Kim Meltzer, and its elected officials, employees, attorneys, agents, and affiliates from any and all claims known or unknown, injuries or damages, claims or causes of action known or unknown associated with elections or record retention or preservation.

Goldstein shall not encourage, promote or furnish assistance, whether financial or otherwise, to any person or entity in order to pursue any action against the released parties which she otherwise has forgone pursuant to the terms of this Release. Goldstein shall hold harmless the released parties for any breach of this provision from all damages, costs and expenses.

The parties mutually agree that they have had the opportunity to review this Release with counsel of their own choosing, and that the Release is freely and voluntarily being executed by them. This Release contains the entire understanding of the parties and that there are no other promises or conditions other than those described in this Release.

Michigan Department of State Voter Registration Mailings

This week, the Michigan Department of State will begin sending voter registration mailings to eligible but unregistered individuals with a Michigan driver's license or state ID card. The mailings are part of Michigan's participation in the Electronic Registration Information Center (ERIC) program. Through the ERIC program, Michigan obtains information about individuals who are eligible but not registered to vote in Michigan, as well as information about registered voters who may have left the state or otherwise become ineligible.

Based on data received from ERIC, the Bureau of Elections will be sending voter registration mailers to approximately 700,000 individuals. These mailers will notify Michigan residents of their voter registration eligibility and offer options to register online or to return the inserted card to the Secretary of State to be registered. Registration will occur through the driver database – clerks will not be mailed forms. However, the mailer also gives voters information on how to contact their local clerk to register to vote if the voter prefers that method of registration. Individuals on the mailing list who had Secretary of State transactions after Proposal 2018-3 went into effect but before it was implemented in September 2019, and are marked on the driver file as U.S. citizens, will receive an automatic voter registration mailer Reminder: Ballot Scout Webinar Today at 3 p.m.

As a reminder, the Bureau of Elections and Democracy Works will be hosting a live Zoom webinar on the Ballot Scout ballot-tracking system. Clerks who are deciding whether to use the software for November AV ballots are invited to attend and learn more.

similar to the form currently used when these eligible individuals renew their driver's license.

Because voter registration through these mailers will occur primarily through the driver database, clerks should not expect an increase in voter registration forms mailed to their offices as a result of these mailings. However, you may see an increased number of new voter registrations in QVF as a result of these mailers between September 21 and October 20. These mailers can be identified by their green color and Be a Voter message across the top. Our office will be tracking the registration response to improve our future efforts. If you have any questions or feedback, please email Shelly Belton beltons@michigan.gov with "ERIC Mailer" in the subject line.

State will be mailing postcards to voters who have not requested absent voter ballots informing them of opportunities to apply for absent voter ballots for November. More information about the postcards is available in an August press release from the Secretary of State. Unlike the mailers sent before the August primary, these postcards are not absent voter ballot applications and will not be mailed to the local clerk. However, as is the case with the voter registration mailers discussed above, clerks may see an increase in absent voter ballot applications as a result of these postcards.

Reminder: Center for Tech and Civic Life Grant Funding Available!

Funding to support voter education efforts – including mailings and public service announcements, and technology, tabulators, and other equipment – is available through a grant from the Center for Tech and Civic Life. Jurisdictions should act quickly if they are interested in this funding, which is separate from state reimbursement and grant programs (you can apply for both).

You can find more information and request an application on the Center for Tech and Civic Life's COVID-19 Response Grant webpage.

Subject: Recent FOIA Requests

Clerks,

We are aware that clerks have received a request for the following:

"1. An electronic copy of the Qualified Voter File (QVF) extract for all precincts completed on Monday November 7, 2022 and loaded to the electronic pollbooks.

2. The historical electronic pollbook flash drive for all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the election concluding November 8, 2022. (This is likely in a CSV – comma separated value format).

3. An electronic copy of the Qualified Voter File extract for all precincts completed as soon as the November midterm election voter history is uploaded to the QVF which must be within 7 days pursuant to MCL 168.813."

Before responding to these FOIA requests, you should consult with your city or township attorney regarding the requests and exemptions that may apply including those contained in MCL 15.243(1)(y) and (z). Under FOIA, you may shield sensitive information from disclosure. Clerks must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the Electronic Poll Book, as doing so could compromise the Bureau of Elections' ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss or destruction. In response to previous FOIA requests regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(y). In addition, the responsive records include sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z).

Further, electronic poll book files contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which is exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software and program files are disclosed.

Please note that certain specific data derived from the qualified voter file electronic pollbook is subject to disclosure under FOIA, including the lists of registered voters from the Qualified Voter File and the paper printout of the electronic pollbook generated on election night. If members of the public are interested in verifying the names of individuals registered to vote on a certain date or included in the electronic pollbook, they may obtain this information by submitting a FOIA for publicly available records.

Additionally, we are aware that clerks received FOIA requests for a copy of or the opportunity to view tabulator tapes. While the tapes are a public record that can be provided, they are election records that should remain secured until security is released after the final canvass and certification, recounts, and audits. Once you are notified that security has been released in your jurisdiction, you can fulfill these requests.

County, City, and Township Clerks:

Many clerks have reported receiving a communication from a private individual or group demanding that they disregard instructions contained in the Bureau of Elections' recent Recount/Release of Security Memo. The Bureau's instructions are lawful directives in compliance with state and federal law.

As has been done in past elections, the Bureau has issued a directive to destroy electronic copies of your epollbook and flash drive. This is procedure is necessary to safeguard security and voter privacy. You have already printed, and must retain for the required retention period, the paper copy of pollbook information for the August 2, 2022 primary election.

A private individual has no authority to instruct you on your duties. The circulated communication is not a subpoena, court order, or lawsuit. If you do receive one of these, please consult with your attorney on how to respond.

DELTA COLLEGE DISTRICT and DELTA COLLEGE BOARD OF TRUSTEES,

UNPUBLISHED
June 26, 2014

No. 317962
Kent Circuit Court
LC No. 12-009608-CZ

Before: MURPHY, C.J., and SHAPIRO and RIORDAN, JJ.

PER CURIAM.

Plaintiff filed a complaint against defendants, alleging various violations of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), MCL 15.231 et seq. She now appeals as of right the trial court's order granting defendants' motion for summary disposition and denying plaintiff's own motion for summary disposition. Except for one issue that we conclude is not justiciable, we reverse and remand for further proceedings.

On August 9, 2012, and August 10, 2012, plaintiff sent defendants two FOIA requests, each of which requested multiple records. On August 31, 2012, defendants granted in part and denied in part plaintiff's FOIA requests. In general, the two sets of FOIA requests sought information regarding the compensation and benefits of Jean Goodnow, who holds the position of Delta College President. After defendants' decision to grant in part and deny in part plaintiff's FOIA requests, plaintiff filed the instant action claiming that defendants committed multiple violations of the FOIA. The parties subsequently filed competing motions for summary disposition under MCR 2.116(C)(10). The trial court granted defendants' motion and denied plaintiff's motion.

A trial court's ruling on a motion for summary disposition is reviewed de novo on appeal. Elba Twp v Gratiot Co Drain Comm'r, 493 Mich 265, 277; 831 NW2d 204 (2013).[1]

[1] In Pioneer State Mut Ins Co v Dells, 301 Mich App 368, 377; 836 NW2d 257 (2013), this Court recited the well-established principles governing a motion for summary disposition brought pursuant to MCR 2.116(C)(10):

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Interpretation of the FOIA is a question of law that is also subject to de novo review. Thomas v City of New Baltimore, 254 Mich App 196, 200; 657 NW2d 530 (2002). With respect to the principles applicable to statutory construction, our Supreme Court in Whitman v City of Burton, 493 Mich 303, 311-312; 831 NW2d 223 (2013), observed:

> When interpreting a statute, we follow the established rules of statutory construction, the foremost of which is to discern and give effect to the intent of the Legislature. To do so, we begin by examining the most reliable evidence of that intent, the language of the statute itself. If the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous, the statute must be enforced as written and no further judicial construction is permitted. Effect should be given to every phrase, clause, and word in the statute and, whenever possible, no word should be treated as surplusage or rendered nugatory. Only when an ambiguity exists in the language of the statute is it proper for a court to go beyond the statutory text to ascertain legislative intent. [Citations omitted.]

In MCL 15.231(2), the Legislature expressly declared the public policy and purpose behind enactment of the FOIA:

> It is the public policy of this state that all persons, except those persons incarcerated in state or local correctional facilities, are entitled to full and complete information regarding the affairs of government and the official acts of those who represent them as public officials and public employees, consistent with this act. The people shall be informed so that they may fully participate in the democratic process.

"[T]he FOIA is a prodisclosure statute; a public body must disclose all public records not specifically exempt under the act." Thomas, 254 Mich App at 201, citing MCL 15.233(1); see

> In general, MCR 2.116(C)(10) provides for summary disposition when there is no genuine issue regarding any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment or partial judgment as a matter of law. A motion brought under MCR 2.116(C)(10) tests the factual support for a party's claim. A trial court may grant a motion for summary disposition under MCR 2.116(C)(10) if the pleadings, affidavits, and other documentary evidence, when viewed in a light most favorable to the nonmovant, show that there is no genuine issue with respect to any material fact. A genuine issue of material fact exists when the record, giving the benefit of reasonable doubt to the opposing party, leaves open an issue upon which reasonable minds might differ. The trial court is not permitted to assess credibility, weigh the evidence, or resolve factual disputes, and if material evidence conflicts, it is not appropriate to grant a motion for summary disposition under MCR 2.116(C)(10). A court may only consider substantively admissible evidence actually proffered relative to a motion for summary disposition under MCR 2.116(C)(10). [Citations and internal quotation marks omitted.]

also Nicita v Detroit, 194 Mich App 657, 661-662; 487 NW2d 814 (1992). "[I]f a public body makes a final determination to deny a request, the requesting person may either appeal the denial to the head of the public body or commence an action in the circuit court within 180 days." Scharret v City of Berkley, 249 Mich App 405, 412-413; 642 NW2d 685 (2002), citing MCL 15.235(7).

Plaintiff first argues that the trial court erred when it determined that defendants had not violated MCL 15.235(4)(c). We agree. MCL 15.235(4)(c) provides that a public body's "written notice denying a request for a public record in whole or in part . . . shall contain . . . [a] description of a public record or information on a public record that is separated or deleted pursuant to [MCL 15.244[2]], if a separation or deletion is made." Here, on August 31, 2012, defendants partially denied the FOIA request in ¶ 10 of plaintiff's first set of requests on the basis that the withheld information fell under the attorney-client privilege exemption of MCL 15.243(1)(g).[3] The FOIA does exempt from disclosure "[i]nformation or records subject to the

[2] MCL 15.244 provides:

> (1) If a public record contains material which is not exempt under section 13, as well as material which is exempt from disclosure under section 13, the public body shall separate the exempt and nonexempt material and make the nonexempt material available for examination and copying.
> (2) When designing a public record, a public body shall, to the extent practicable, facilitate a separation of exempt from nonexempt information. If the separation is readily apparent to a person requesting to inspect or receive copies of the form, the public body shall generally describe the material exempted unless that description would reveal the contents of the exempt information and thus defeat the purpose of the exemption.

[3] Plaintiff had requested:

> Copies of any and all communications (in any form, including e-mail communications) that were exchanged between any member of the President's Compensation Committee, the Delta College Board of Trustees and any Delta College staff, including Board Secretary and the President for a period from May 1, 2008[,] to November 11, 2008[,] regarding the President's Employment Contract and/or her compensation.

Defendants' FOIA coordinator responded:

> This request is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. The information is exempt from disclosure under Section 13(1)(g) of the [FOIA], for information or records subject to the attorney-client privilege.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

attorney-client privilege." MCL 15.243(1)(g). However, defendants' written notice of partial denial did not describe or otherwise identify the information that was separated or deleted based on the attorney-client privilege. Defendants did not provide such a description until they attached an affidavit executed by their FOIA coordinator to their June 2013 motion for summary disposition, which, of course, was after plaintiff commenced the litigation seeking FOIA compliance. The trial court found that the FOIA coordinator's affidavit cured any deficiency in defendants' written notice, and it granted summary disposition in favor of defendants regarding plaintiff's claim of a violation of MCL 15.235(4)(c). The plain language of MCL 15.235(4)(c), however, requires that a public body's written notice denying a FOIA request "shall contain" a description of the public record that was separated or deleted. The word "shall" denotes a mandatory directive, not a discretionary act. Smitter v Thornapple Twp, 494 Mich 121, 136; 833 NW2d 875 (2013). There is no language in MCL 15.235(4)(c) remotely suggesting that compliance may be achieved at a later date or that compliance is excusable if the public body eventually provides the required description. Compliance certainly cannot be found when the public body communicates the description of the separated or deleted records after the requesting party is forced to initiate litigation to obtain FOIA compliance. On the record before us, there is no genuine issue of material fact regarding defendants' failure to comply with MCL 15.235(4)(c). Thus, with respect to plaintiff's claim under MCL 15.235(4)(c), the trial court erred in granting defendants' motion for summary disposition and in denying plaintiff's own summary disposition motion relative to the claim. We reverse the trial court's grant of summary disposition in favor of defendants and remand for entry of judgment in favor of plaintiff, declaring that defendants violated MCL 15.235(4)(c). See Scharret, 249 Mich App at 416.

On a related issue, plaintiff next argues that defendants improperly withheld requested information under the attorney-client privilege exemption of MCL 15.243(1)(g). Section 13 of the FOIA sets forth several exemptions to a public body's duty to disclose under the FOIA. Manning v City of East Tawas, 234 Mich App 244, 248; 593 NW2d 649 (1999). "[T]hese exemptions must be construed narrowly, and the burden of proof rests with the party asserting an exemption." Id. (citation omitted). In order for a public body to meet its burden of proof in asserting an exemption, "'the public body should provide a complete particularized justification for the claimed exemption[].'" Nicita, 194 Mich App at 662 (citation omitted); see also The Evening News Ass'n v City of Troy, 417 Mich 481, 503, 516; 339 NW2d 421 (1983). The public body should provide "'[d]etailed affidavits describing the matters withheld'" and show that it complied with the requirement to separate exempt and non-exempt material under MCL 15.244. Evening News Ass'n, 417 Mich at 503 (citation omitted); Nicita, 194 Mich App at 662-663. The public body's "[j]ustification of exemption must be more than 'conclusory,' i.e., simple repetition of statutory language." Evening News Ass'n, 417 Mich at 503. Moreover, "'a trial court may not make conclusory or 'generic determinations' when deciding whether the claimed exemptions are justified.'" Nicita, 194 Mich App at 662 (quotation omitted). Rather, "before determining that the defendant sustained its claim of exemption, the court must specifically find that the particular sections of the public record requested by the plaintiff would for particular reasons fall within the claimed exemptions." Id.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Here, defendants partially denied plaintiff's record requests in ¶ 10 of her first set of requests, as alluded to earlier, and ¶ 2 of her second set of requests, asserting that the withheld information was exempt under the attorney-client privilege exemption in MCL 15.243(1)(g).[4] In Herald Co, Inc v Ann Arbor Pub Sch, 224 Mich App 266, 279; 568 NW2d 411 (1997), this Court examined the exemption, explaining:

> The attorney-client privilege attaches to communications made by a client to an attorney acting as a legal adviser and made for the purpose of obtaining legal advice. The purpose of the privilege is to enable a client to confide in an attorney, secure in the knowledge that the communication will not be disclosed. The scope of the privilege is narrow: it attaches only to confidential communications by the client to its advisor that are made for the purpose of obtaining legal advice. [Citations omitted.]

The FOIA coordinator's affidavit averred that, pursuant to the attorney-client privilege exemption, defendants withheld six e-mails from the records they produced in response to ¶ 10 of plaintiff's first set of FOIA requests and that they redacted certain information on billing records produced in response to ¶ 2 of the second set of FOIA requests. According to the affidavit, the e-mails were communications between defendants' general counsel and members of the Compensation Committee "and/or" President Goodnow. However, the FOIA coordinator did not describe the substance of the withheld e-mails or redacted information in the billing statements as being exempted on the basis that the withheld information reflected confidential communications made to counsel for the purpose of obtaining legal advice. The affidavit cursorily indicated that the coordinator relied on counsel to redact information and to withhold communications under the attorney-client privilege exemption. Defendants' motion for summary disposition relied on the coordinator's affidavit to justify their claimed exemptions under MCL 15.243(1)(g).

"When a public body's statements alone are inadequate to determine, upon review de novo, if disclosure should be compelled, a trial court should examine the disputed documents in camera to resolve the question." Manning, 234 Mich App at 248. Here, at the hearing on the

[4] Plaintiff had requested the following records in ¶ 2 of the second set of requests:

> Copies of itemized billing statements, including a description of all services performed and all costs charged, which were submitted to Delta College by any attorneys who performed services for the Delta Board of Trustees President's Compensation Committee for the years 2008 and 2009.

Defendants' FOIA coordinator responded:

> This request is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. The information redacted is exempt from disclosure under Section 13(1)(g) of the [FOIA], for information or records subject to the attorney-client privilege.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

parties' competing motions for summary disposition, plaintiff asked the trial court to conduct an in-camera review of the materials withheld under MCL 15.243(1)(g). However, the record does not indicate that the trial court undertook any in-camera review of the six withheld e-mails, but rather merely relied on the FOIA coordinator's affidavit and the assertions defendants made in their motion for summary disposition. But defendants' assertions ultimately relied on the coordinator's affidavit for support, which in turn did not aver that the withheld e-mails were confidential communications made to counsel for the purpose of obtaining legal advice. Given that the trial must construe a claimed exemption narrowly and defendants were required to provide "detailed" affidavits describing the matters withheld, Evening News Ass'n, 417 Mich at 503, we are compelled to conclude that the trial court erred in finding that defendants met their burden of proof regarding whether the withheld e-mails were exempt under the attorney-client privilege exemption.

Furthermore, with respect to ¶ 2 of the second set of requests in which plaintiff sought detailed copies of attorney billing statements, defendants provided redacted billing statements, but did not provide any justification for the redactions other than to state that the information was covered by the attorney-client privilege exemption. The public body's "[j]ustification of exemption must be more than 'conclusory,' i.e., simple repetition of statutory language." Evening News Ass'n, 417 Mich at 503. Here, the trial court relied on its review of the redacted documents to make its ruling. The trial court found that "[m]ost of the redacted information related to" the substance of the communications and that there were "very few instances where the redacted information is who the attorney had a conversation with." The trial court concluded that because "in some instances it is possible that who an attorney had a conversation with" could be covered by the attorney-client privilege, defendants properly exempted the redacted information under MCL 15.243(1)(g). Again, a trial court must construe a claimed exemption narrowly and is not permitted to render conclusory or generic determinations in deciding whether a claimed exemption is justified. Nicita, 194 Mich App at 662. Rather, the trial court "'must specifically find that the particular sections of the public record requested by the plaintiff would for particular reasons fall within the claimed exemptions.'" Id. (citation omitted). The attorney-client privilege exemption is only triggered in regard to confidential communications made by a client to an attorney that are made for the purpose of obtaining legal advice. Herald Co, 224 Mich App at 279. In the case at bar, the trial court did not speak in terms of the required finding for purposes of the attorney-client privilege exemption.

Ultimately, the record before us is insufficient to determine whether the information defendants withheld and redacted under the attorney-client privilege exemption was properly exempted under MCL 15.243(1)(g). We reverse the trial court's grant of summary disposition with respect to plaintiff's claims relative to MCL 15.243(1)(g) and remand for further factual findings as to this issue, which may require an in-camera review of the withheld e-mails and/or unredacted billing statements.

Plaintiff next argues that defendants improperly withheld requested information under the privacy exemption of MCL 15.243(1)(a). We agree. MCL 15.243(1)(a) provides that "[a] public body may exempt from disclosure as a public record under this act any . . . [i]nformation of a personal nature if public disclosure of the information would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of an individual's privacy." In State News v Michigan State Univ, 274 Mich App 558,

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

576-577; 735 NW2d 649 (2007), rev'd in part on other grounds 481 Mich 692 (2008), this Court examined the privacy exemption, stating:

> [T]he privacy exemption consists of two distinct elements, both of which must be satisfied for the exemption to apply. First, the information must be of a "personal nature," and, second, the disclosure of such information must constitute a "clearly unwarranted" invasion of privacy. Information that is not of a personal nature is subject to disclosure without considering the second prong of the exemption. [Citations omitted.]

Under the first prong, information is of a personal nature when it is intimate, embarrassing, private, or confidential information. Mich Federation of Teachers & Sch Related Personnel, AFT, AFL-CIO v Univ of Mich, 481 Mich 657, 676; 753 NW2d 28 (2008). Regarding the second prong, this Court in Detroit Free Press, Inc v City of Southfield, 269 Mich App 275, 282; 713 NW2d 28 (2006), observed:

> Determining whether the disclosure of such information would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy requires a court to balance the public interest in disclosure against the interest the Legislature intended the exemption to protect. The only relevant public interest is the extent to which disclosure would serve the core purpose of the FOIA, which is to facilitate citizens' ability to be informed about the decisions and priorities of their government. This interest is best served through information about the workings of government or information concerning whether a public body is performing its core function. [Citations omitted.]

In ¶ 2 of plaintiff's first set of requests, she asked for a "[c]opy of the 403(b) salary reduction agreement signed by President Goodnow which allowed her participation in a 403(b) plan." In response, the FOIA coordinator indicated:

> This request is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. The redacted information is exempt from disclosure under Section 13(1)(a). President Goodnow's personal financial decisions are information of a personal nature the public disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of Dr. Goodnow's privacy.

Defendants produced President Goodnow's salary reduction agreements, but they redacted information revealing the amount of her salary that President Goodnow elected to contribute to her 403(b) retirement account ("Bi-Weekly Reduction $ [redacted] or % [redacted]").

Plaintiff argues that the 403(b) information was subject to disclosure under MCL 15.243a and that, additionally, in regard to the claimed privacy exemption, the information was necessary to determine whether the total annual contributions to President Goodnow's 403(b) account exceeded IRS limitations. MCL 15.243a provides, in relevant part, that a community college "shall upon request make available to the public the salary records of an employee or other official of the institution of higher education, school district, intermediate school district, or community college." MCL 15.243a is prefaced by the language, "Notwithstanding section 13," which is the exemption section that encompasses the privacy exemption, MCL 15.243(1)(a). Accordingly, if a record comes within the parameters of MCL 15.243a, it must be disclosed regardless of whether it otherwise reveals information of a personal nature that, if disclosed, would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Defendants fail to even address or acknowledge MCL 15.243a in their appellate brief, let alone present an argument with respect to why it would not be applicable. The full title of the salary reduction agreements is the "DELTA COLLEGE 403(b) RETIREMENT PLAN SALARY REDUCTION AGREEMENT FOR ELECTIVE DEFERRAL." The salary reduction agreements, in general, would appear to qualify as "salary records" for purposes of MCL 15.243a. A somewhat more difficult question is whether a redaction within a salary record is nonetheless permissible under MCL 15.243a with respect to information concerning the nature or extent of an employee's 403(b) contributions, which information does not truly reflect or identify the employee's "salary"[5] but rather a type of salary spending decision by the employee. We note that MCL 15.243a's requirement to make available an employee's salary records does not necessarily mean that every piece of information contained within a salary record must be disclosed. For example, a person's full social security number cannot be disclosed pursuant to a FOIA request, MCL 445.85, and President Goodnow's social security number was redacted in the salary reduction agreements without dispute. We decline to resolve the issue posed above, given that, as we shall explain below, the information regarding President Goodnow's contributions is not subject to the privacy exemption under the particular circumstances of this case.

Although the extent of President Goodnow's contributions to her 403(b) retirement account constitutes information of a personal nature, we cannot conclude that disclosure of the information would be a clearly unwarranted invasion of her privacy, which is the second prong of the privacy-exemption test. State News, 274 Mich App at 576-577. In balancing the public interest in disclosure against the interest the Legislature intended the exemption to protect, Detroit Free Press, 269 Mich App at 282, we find in favor of disclosure. The salary reduction agreements provided, "The Employee must ensure that he/she is not exceeding the lower of the annual elective deferral limit or the annual addition limit established by the IRS[.]" They further provided, "In the event that contributions are made on behalf of the Employee which exceed the limits permitted by Sections 403(b), 402(g), 414(v) and/or 415 of the Internal Revenue Code, the Employee must assure that such excess deferrals, contributions and income on these amounts are returned to the Employee as required by the Internal Revenue Code." Finally, the salary reduction agreements provided:

> I fully understand my responsibilities as a participant in the Delta College 403(b) Retirement Plan and agree to provide both the Delta College 403(b) Plan Administrator and my 403(b) Account Service Provider(s) with accurate, timely > information. I accept full responsibility for determining that the annual elective deferral amount(s) elected in my Salary Reduction Agreement(s) under the Delta College 403(b) Retirement Plan do not exceed the legal limits. Furthermore, I agree to indemnify and hold Delta College, its Board of Trustees, agents, employees and representatives and the Delta College 403(b) Plan Administrator harmless in any case, matter or proceeding involving or relating to alleged adverse tax consequences affecting any tax sheltered annuity or custodial account sold to me, including, but not limited to, any case, matter or proceeding in which it is alleged that there was a failure to calculate or improper calculation of the permissible limitations under current Code §§ 403(b), 402(g), 414(v) or 415 or under corresponding provisions of future tax laws.

[5] The term "salary" is defined as "a fixed compensation paid periodically to a person for regular work or services." Random House Webster's College Dictionary (2001).

We hold that disclosure of the 403(b) information at issue would facilitate the ability of citizens to be informed regarding President Goodnow's compliance with her contractual obligations, regarding any Internal Revenue Code (IRC) violations and President Goodnow's need to take remedial steps, and regarding any IRC violations and defendants' potential liability and need to seek indemnification under the salary reduction agreements. See Detroit Free Press, 269 Mich App at 282 (there is a public interest in facilitating a citizen's ability to be informed about the decisions and priorities of the government, which interest is best served through the disclosure of information concerning the workings of government or whether a public body is performing its functions). When balanced against President Goodnow's privacy interests relative to the extent of her 403(b) contributions, public disclosure governs; therefore, any invasion of privacy is not clearly unwarranted.

Defendants argue that "there is no merit to [plaintiff's] assertion that President Goodnow's personal financial information falls within the public interest due to an alleged potential for 'excess' annual contributions to her 403(b) retirement plan that could subject [defendants] to IRS fines and refunds." In support, defendants simply contend that they have specific accounting controls in their payroll management software that would prevent excess retirement contributions to the 403(b) plan. This argument, in our view, is irrelevant and is akin to claiming that the public interest in obtaining information on a matter of concern can be negated by promises or assurances of the public body that there is no need for the information or no need to be concerned about a matter, as the public body is up to the task of preventing an error; the public body cannot be left to dictate and define what is or what should be in the public's interest. The FOIA does not support defendants' self-accountability argument; rather, the FOIA seeks to achieve public-body accountability by permitting open access to public-body records by the citizens of the state, so as to keep the citizenry informed and on guard. In sum, the redacted information at issue is to be disclosed, and the trial court erred in ruling to the contrary.

Plaintiff next argues that defendants violated MCL 15.235(4)(d)(i) by failing to advise her that she had the right to file an appeal with the board of trustees, which, according to plaintiff, is the head of the public body in this case. We agree. MCL 15.235(4)(d)(i) provides in relevant part that "[a] written notice denying a request for a public record in whole or in part . . . shall contain . . . [a] full explanation of the requesting person's right to . . . [s]ubmit to the head of the public body a written appeal . . . ." Here, defendants' written notice of partial denial informed plaintiff that she could appeal to President Goodnow. Plaintiff contends that President Goodnow was not the head of Delta College and, thus, defendants violated MCL 15.235(4)(d)(i) when they incorrectly instructed her to direct her appeal to President Goodnow.

Under the Community College Act of 1966 ("the CCA"), MCL 389.1 et seq., it is abundantly clear that the head of the Delta College District is the Delta College District Board of Trustees. See, e.g., MCL 389.14(1) ("A community college district is directed and governed by a board of trustees[.]"). Accordingly, for purposes of MCL 15.235(4)(d)(i), the written notice of denial had to include language explaining that plaintiff had a right to submit a written appeal to the Delta College District Board of Trustees. Assuming for the moment that the board of trustees had the authority to delegate its duty or authority to hear FOIA appeals to President Goodnow under MCL 389.123(d) and/or MCL 389.124(a) and (b), there is nothing in the record, including her employment agreement, that indicates that she was specifically delegated the duty or authority to hear FOIA appeals. Moreover, assuming such a delegation and the ability to do so under MCL 389.123(d) and/or MCL 389.124(a) and (b), it would not change the fact that, for purposes of MCL 15.235(4)(d)(i) and the notice of a right to appeal, the board of trustees is the head of the public body and needed to be identified as such; any delegation would merely be in a representative capacity for and on behalf of the board of trustees. While we question whether the FOIA would permit the head of a public body to delegate the duty or authority to hear a FOIA appeal, we ultimately need not answer that question, given that we have only been asked to rule on whether President Goodnow should have been identified as head of the public body in connection with the required notice under MCL 15.235(4)(d)(i) and that plaintiff only pursued an appeal in the circuit court.

Next, plaintiff argues that defendants violated MCL 15.234(3) by failing to establish and publish procedures and guidelines to allow them to charge FOIA fees. MCL 15.234(1) provides that "[a] public body may charge a fee for a public record search, the necessary copying of a public record for inspection, or for providing a copy of a public record." MCL 15.234(3) provides, in relevant part, that "[a] public body shall establish and publish procedures and guidelines to implement this subsection." Here, although defendants waived plaintiff's FOIA fees, plaintiff still sought declaratory and injunctive relief precluding defendants from charging FOIA fees under MCL 15.234, where defendants allegedly failed to properly establish and publish procedures and guidelines regarding FOIA fees as required by MCL 15.234(3). It is uncontroverted that at all times relevant to this case, defendants had procedures and guidelines regarding FOIA fees posted on the official website of Delta College.

Whether under the doctrine of ripeness, mootness, or standing, or a combination of two or more of those doctrines, we decline to address the issue presented. Plaintiff acknowledges that her associated claim for money damages was rendered moot because the fees were waived, but she asserts that her "request for declaratory and injunctive relief is not moot because Delta College is still imposing fees for FOIA requests . . . ." Plaintiff does not claim, nor provide evidence, that defendants are imposing fees on her. Whether defendants properly established and published procedures and guidelines to allow for the imposition of fees is only relevant if fees have actually been imposed on a party. There is no actual controversy over the payment of fees that requires judicial resolution and thus the issue is moot. See State News v Mich State Univ, 481 Mich 692, 704 n 25; 753 NW2d 20 (2008) (FOIA appeal would be rendered moot if a requested record were released as there would no longer be a controversy requiring judicial resolution); Mich Chiropractic Council v Comm'r of the Office of Fin & Ins Servs, 475 Mich

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

363, 371 n 15; 716 NW2d 561 (2006) (an issue is moot if it is no longer "live" or the parties lack a legally cognizable interest in the issue's outcome), overruled in part on other grounds Lansing Sch Ed Ass'n v Lansing Bd of Ed, 487 Mich 349; 792 NW2d 686 (2010); see also MCR 2.605(A)(1) (declaratory judgment may be rendered "[i]n a case of actual controversy"). An issue regarding any fees that might be imposed on plaintiff in the future is not ripe for consideration. Mich Chiropractic Council, 475 Mich at 371 n 14 (ripeness precludes adjudication of hypothetical or contingent claims prior to an actual injury; a claim is not ripe if it rests on contingent future events that may never occur). And, as to this particular issue, plaintiff does not have "a special injury or right, or substantial interest, that will be detrimentally affected in a manner different from the citizenry at large." Lansing Sch Ed, 487 Mich at 372 (discussing the requirements to establish "standing").[6]

Finally, plaintiff asks us to enter an award of reasonable attorney fees and costs under MCL 15.240(6), which provides:

> If a person asserting the right to inspect, copy, or receive a copy of all or a portion of a public record prevails in an action commenced under this section, the court shall award reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and disbursements. If the person or public body prevails in part, the court may, in its discretion, award all or an appropriate portion of reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and disbursements. . . .

Considering that further proceedings and findings are necessary as discussed above, we leave it to the trial court, after resolution of all matters, to rule on any request for attorney fees and costs made by plaintiff, with the court to employ MCL 15.240(6) and to take into consideration conclusive rulings in this opinion.

We reverse and remand for further proceedings, except as to the public-body fee issue under MCL 15.234, which we conclude is not justiciable. Plaintiff, having predominantly prevailed on appeal, is awarded taxable costs pursuant to MCR 7.219. We do not retain jurisdiction.

/s/ William B. Murphy
/s/ Douglas B. Shapiro

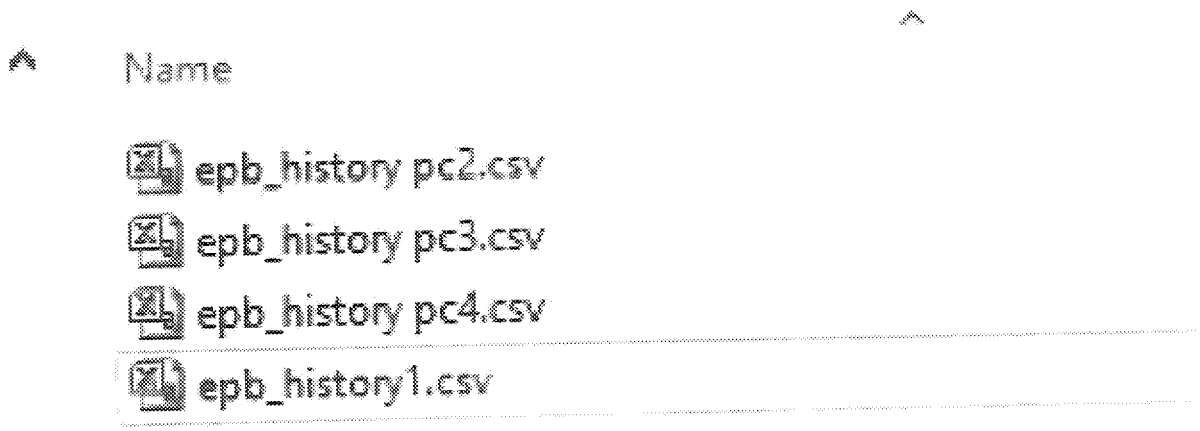
Re: Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA") Request

Dear Jennifer Zelmanski:

Per the Freedom of Information Act, please provide a copy of the extract files from the electronic poll books (EPBs) for all registrants at all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the elections concluding November 8, 2022 and May 2, 2023. These files should be in .CSV or .XLS format and typically have a file name beginning with "EPB_History" (see below screenshot).



Please note that these files likely contain the full birthdate (month, day and year) and driver's license number of the registrants in your jurisdiction, which is exempt from FOIA release (MCL 168.509gg). Therefore, please open the copy of the digital file(s), remove or redact the birth month, birth day and drivers license number information, and save your changes before sending the file(s) to me. If you are able to retain the year of birth for the registrants as is permissible per MCL 168.509gg, it will be greatly appreciated.

Instructions on how to locate the requested information is available on pages 40-41 of the Electronic Poll Book Refresh Manual provided by the Michigan Board of Elections. These pages are included in Exhibit 1 below for your convenience.

Once the above redactions have been made, there should be no other FOIA exempt information in the EPB digital records requested. I am not requesting any software or information which would somehow be deemed proprietary. I am only requesting public record information as is my right.

Please note that the EPB .CSV files are an original record and a component of the electronic voting system audit trail. As such, these digital records should be retained by your office for a federal minimum of 22 months (52 USC 207) and a state minimum of 24 months (MCL 168.811).

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

I prefer to receive the requested information via email as a file attachment. If email is unavailable, please contact me to coordinate an alternative method to fulfill my FOIA request since I would be happy to bring a USB drive to your office so that you or your staff can copy the file(s) to.

Please don't hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Michael Lewis Butz

After all other reports are saved, save the voter history to the flash drive. The clerk needs to use this file to update the voter registration files in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) recording who voted on Election Day.

To save Voter History:

1. Click File
2. Click Save History
3. Redirect the file by clicking on the flash drive under This PC, then double-click on the Election Date folder. The file name should say epb_history with no preceding d:\

   If d:\ is still in the File name, click the cursor at the beginning of the File name field and use the Delete key to delete the d:\

FOIA - NOTICE OF DENIAL OF REQUEST FOR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION

In response regarding your FOIA requested submitted on May 2, 2023 for a copy of the extract files from the electronic poll books (EPBs) for all registrants at all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the elections concluding November 8, 2022 and May 2, 2023.

The following Action has been taken pursuant to your request for a public record:

✓ Denied all portions of your request (Please see below for reason)

November 8, 2022, Election:

Per the Michigan Bureau of Elections, Clerks must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the Electronic Poll Book, as doing so could compromise the Bureau of Elections' ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss or destruction. In response to previous FOIA requests regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(y). In addition, the responsive records include sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z).

Further, electronic poll book files contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which is exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software and program files are disclosed.

Please contact the Macomb County Clerk for the paper pollbook copies or the Michigan Bureau of Elections for the log file or voter history.

May 2, 2023, Election:

Per the Michigan Bureau of Elections, Clerks must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the Electronic Poll Book, as doing so could compromise the Bureau of Elections' ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss or destruction. In response to previous FOIA requests regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(y). In addition, the responsive records include sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z).

Further, electronic poll book files contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which is exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software and program files are disclosed.

Please contact the Macomb County Clerk for the paper pollbook copies or the Michigan Bureau of Elections for the log file or voter history.

If your request for record(s) is denied, you may submit a written appeal, specifically stating Aappeal@ and stating the reasons for appeal, to the attention of the City Council, or seek judicial review under Section 10 of the Act within 180 days after the public body's final determination. Within 10 days of receiving a request for an appeal, the City Council shall: a) reverse the denial; b) issue a written notice upholding the denial; c) reverse the disclosure denial in part and issue a written notice to the requesting person upholding the disclosure denial in part; or d) issue a notice extending by 10 business days the time to decide the appeal. (Note: If a board of commission is the head of the public body it is not considered to have received a written appeal until the first regularly scheduled meeting following submission of the written appeal.)

If after judicial review, the Circuit Court determines that the public body has not complied fully with the disclosure requirements, the Court shall award reasonable attorney's fees, costs and disbursements. If the Court determines that the public body has arbitrary and capriciously violated the Act, the Court shall award punitive damages in the amount of $500.00.

A copy of this request will be kept on file for no less than one (1) year.

Introduction to the Electronic Pollbook

The Bureau of Elections developed computer software that can be used in the polling place on Election Day to process voters and generate precinct reports. The electronic pollbook (EPB) software is downloaded from the Qualified Voter File (QVF) software and is loaded to a laptop prior to each election. Once the EPB software is loaded on the laptop, the software allows election inspectors to look up a voter's registration record, confirm their registration is correct, and assign a ballot to that voter, essentially automating the typical paper process. After the election is complete, the EPB software will generate reports to complete the official precinct record (paper binder pollbook) and a voter history file that can be uploaded into the QVF to update voter history in a matter of minutes.

Key Features

- ☆ Access current voter registration and absent voter information in the precincts (from the day prior to the election, in most cases)
- ☆ Locate a voter's registration record by swiping their driver's license with a magnetic card reader
- ☆ Assign and record the voter's ballot immediately upon registration confirmation
- ☆ Look up voters registered within the jurisdiction but not in the assigned precinct
- ☆ Print accurate reports, including a ballot summary that calculates, the list of voters, and remarks
- ☆ Upload voting history quickly and accurately

Important Considerations

Maintain security throughout the EPB process by using an encrypted flash drive. The flash drive must be password protected, and passwords should never be kept with flash drives. The encrypted flash drive must be used to transfer files back and forth between the QVF computer and the EPB laptop.

Pre-election file transfer: QVF to EPB

Post-election file transfer: EPB to QVF

The laptop must not be connected to any networks (must be in "airplane mode") when the EPB software is installed on the laptop. Windows Updates and antivirus updates must be done regularly between elections.

It is also important to understand when to delete files. Delete all EPB files seven days after the final canvas (unless there is a pending recount, court challenge, or audit/Secretary of State order). This keeps voter data secure and prevents the wrong files from being used in future elections.

Most importantly, practice! Walking through the manual well before every election will ensure you understand all of the features of the EPB software and will prepare you for successful implementation come election day. Remember it is important to delete all practice files, too!

Getting Started: Election Day Reminders

1. Wireless internet access – The laptop must be in airplane mode on election day. To verify airplane mode is enabled, click the notifications icon and make sure the Airplane mode is blue and that the Wi-Fi button is gray.

2. Don't skip page 7, Step 3 – It is important when you save the backup file that you browse to the location that the file is supposed to be saved to, which is the flash drive. It does not automatically save to the flash drive.

3. Unable to Record an Absentee Ballot – Click the File menu, click Options, and add a checkmark to "Allow the recording of Absentee Ballots."

4. Spoiling an Absentee Ballot – Absentee ballots are never spoiled in the EPB on Election Day. There are other procedures in place for a voter surrendering their absentee ballot. The duplication process does not include spoiling the original ballot number; see FAQ # 11 on p. 31.

5. Recording PDF ballots / ballots sent electronically – An absent voter issued an electronic ballot is processed in the EPB with the same ballot number originally recorded by the clerk. Electronically issued MOVE ballots returned by the voter on 8 ½ x 11 paper are recorded in the EPB using the original "ET#." The number of the ballot onto which the votes are duplicated is NEVER assigned to the absent voter in the EPB. Simply use the duplication process established for other absent voter ballots that require duplication and record the number of ballots used in duplication on line H of the Ballot Summary.

6. Don't forget page 27 – The Voting History file (epb_history.csv) must be saved to the flash drive in addition to the 3 PDF reports and the backup file at the end of the night.

7. Even if your laptop freezes, it's going to be OK! This reminder is also FAQ # 15 on p. 31.

   While other workers continue to process voters using the paper backup:

   First, try to close and reopen the EPB program, using Ctrl + Alt + Delete if necessary to use the Task Manager to end the task and close the EPB application. If that doesn't work, you may restart the computer. Remember to log back into the flash drive as well as the EPB program before you begin working again.

Election Day EPB Tasks: Election Inspector's Guide

Prepare the EPB for Opening the Polls

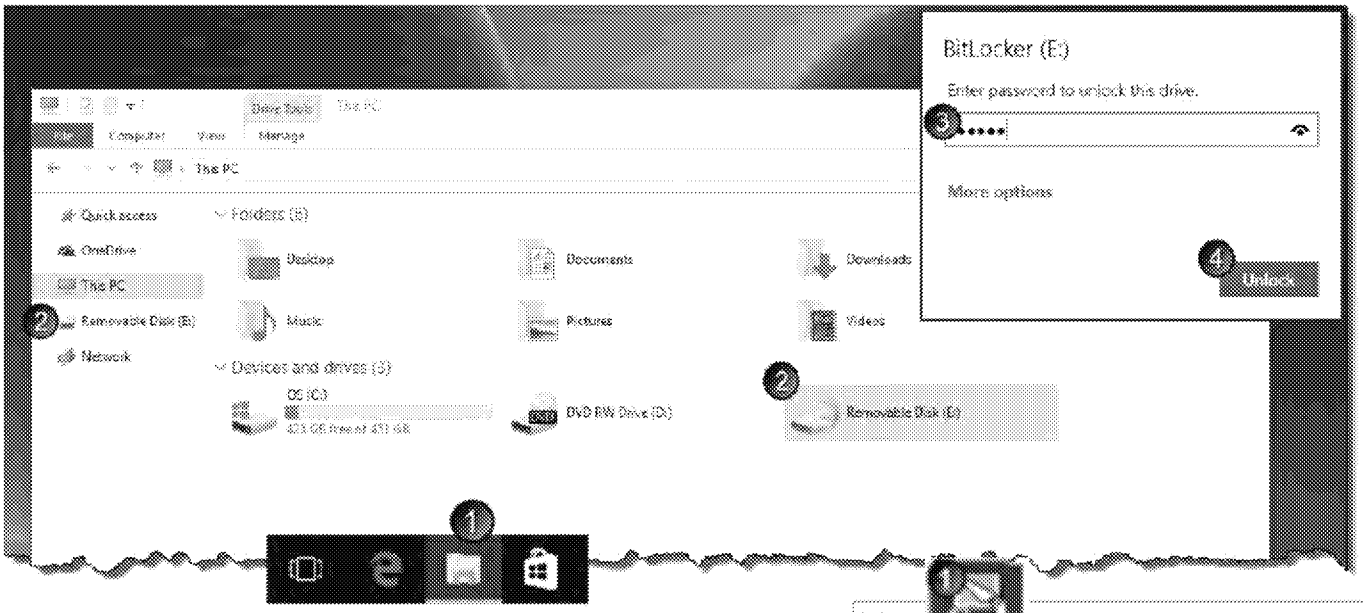
Pull the laptop out of the case, plug it into a surge protector, and plug the surge protector into the wall. The power cord may have two pieces. Keep the power cord plugged in throughout the day to maintain a 100% charged battery. Plug the magnetic card reader and mouse into USB ports. Then turn the laptop on. Once the laptop has booted up, make sure that the laptop cannot connect to the internet by turning on Airplane Mode (see pg. 5).

Log into the encrypted flash drive

The encrypted flash drive is a vital component of the EPB software program. Use this password-protected file storage device to protect voter data, store the backup file, and store all the work done on Election Day so the Clerk can update voter history and create precinct reports. When saving files, make sure the files are being saved to the encrypted flash drive.

To log into the flash drive, insert it into a USB port and:

1. Click the Windows Explorer folder icon
2. Click Removable Disk
3. Enter the password
4. Click Unlock



Log into the EPB software

After you have inserted and logged into the encrypted flash drive with its password, you can open the EPB program.

To log into the EPB software:

1. Double click on the Electronic Poll Book icon in the upper left corner of the desktop
2. Enter Encryption Password and click Enter
3. Enter Username and User Password and click Enter

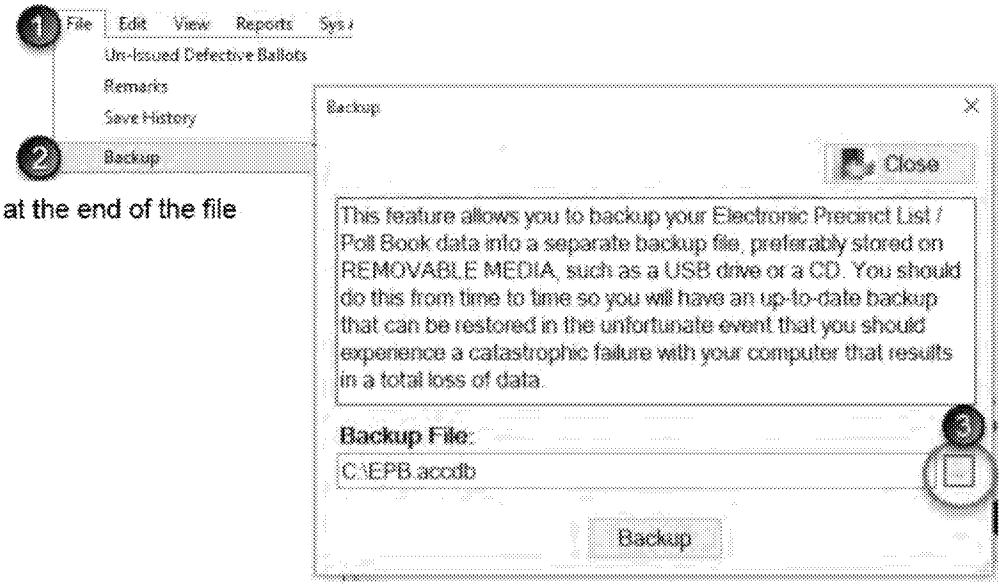
Save the First EPB Backup: Redirection Action Required!

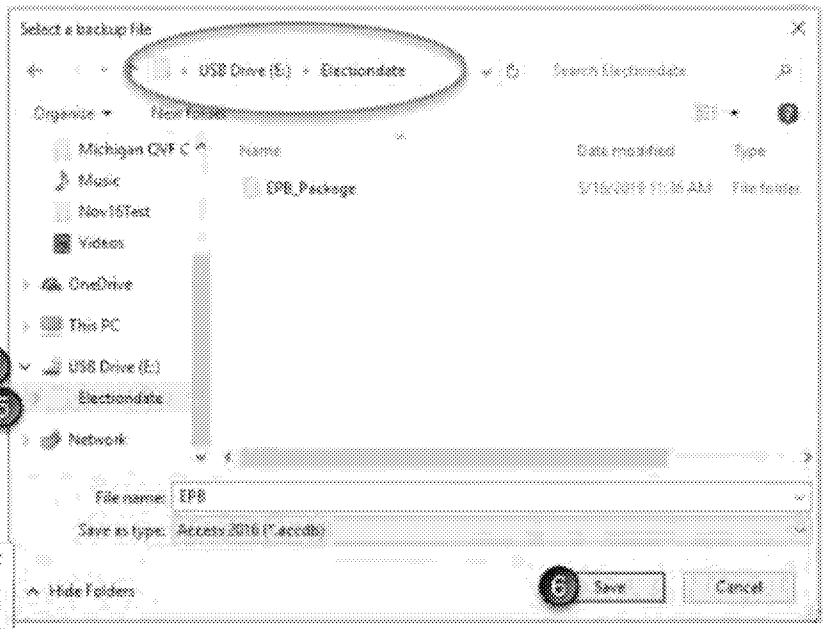
You must keep the encrypted flash drive plugged into the laptop all day. Save a Backup periodically throughout the day to save voters that have been processed. This ensures that data will not be lost if there is a hardware failure. Pay attention to your laptop's settings when performing the initial Backup. The letter labeling your encrypted flash drive in Windows Explorer may vary since it is dependent on the laptop and port being used.

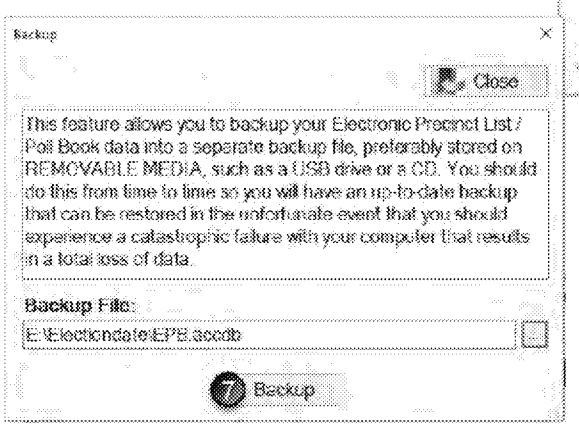
To Back up the EPB:

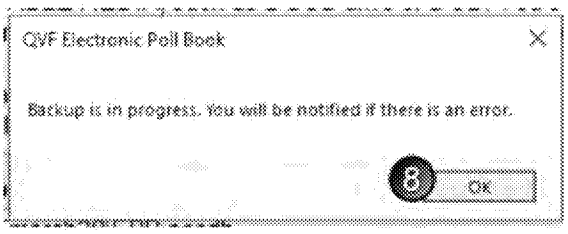
1. Click File
2. Click Backup
3. Click this button ... at the end of the file path field



4. Select Removable Disk (Drive letter may vary). Use the encrypted flash drive to save files throughout the day and after the polls close. Future backups should remember the drive you select in this step.
5. Double-click the [ElectionDate] folder
6. Click Save
7. Click Backup
8. After a few seconds, the Backup is in progress message will appear, and the backup continues briefly in the background.







The laptop and EPB software are now ready for voters!

Read and Use the EPB Main Screen to Process each Voter

The EPB main screen is divided into three sections. Take a moment to become familiar with the various parts of the screen. Make sure the top line lists the correct election and precinct number.

Voter Search: The Voter Search section of the screen is the precinct list. All voters in your precinct will be listed under This Precinct tab. The Other tab provides access to the lists of other precincts in the jurisdiction. The Unlisted tab is available to add voters not found in either list in certain situations.

Voter Details: The Voter Details section of the screen shows the voter's registration information at the top, including the appropriate Ballot Style that should be issued to the voter. The Geography button provides detailed district information for each voter. The middle of the screen is the "Lock this Voter Record" action box where ballots will be assigned and recorded. Voting status flags appear at the bottom of the screen. This portion of the screen is important to verify the status before issuing a voter a ballot.

List of Voters: The List of Voters section records the voter's name and what ballot number was assigned to them in a running list. This section is for reference; use it throughout the day to balance with the tabulator.

The EPB software contains the voter list for the precinct, records the ballots issued, and creates the List of Voters for the permanent record of the precinct. With a few clicks, a voter may be verified and assigned a ballot.

Important Note: If a voter does not wish to have their driver's license scanned, their name should be typed into the EPB software.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

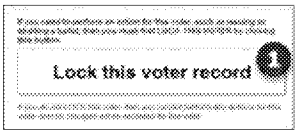
Assign a Ballot

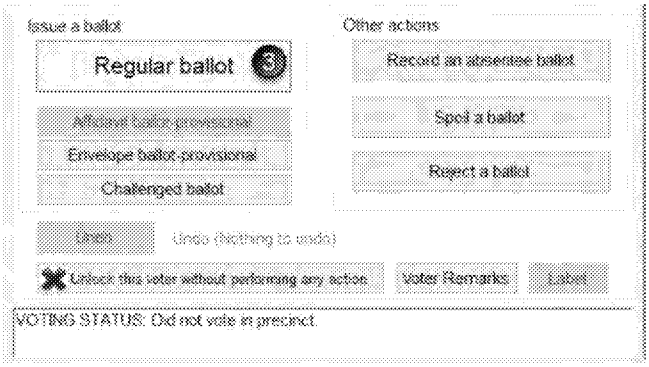
The voter must complete an Application to Vote, and their photo identification must be verified or the Affidavit of Voter Not in Possession of Picture Identification must be completed before processing a ballot in the EPB software. Once those steps have been taken, process the voter in the EPB by following these steps:

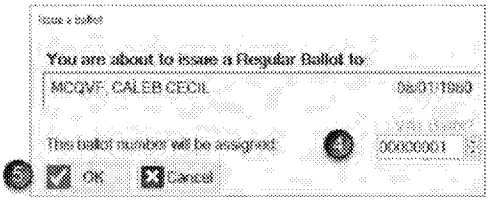
1. Swipe the voter's driver's license through the magnetic card reader or type the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first. If typing, select the correct voter and then you must click on "Lock this voter record," otherwise skip to Step 2.



2. Verify the voter's information on the Application to Vote matches EPB.

3. Click Regular ballot
4. Enter the next available ballot number in the This ballot number will be assigned box (this number will auto fill after the first number for the ballot style has been entered)
5. Click OK, and the voter's name will now be added to the List of Voters.





Verify the ballot was issued

Click OK on the confirmation window (if enabled). After you assign the ballot, the main screen returns. Three places verify the ballot was processed in the EPB software. Further duties may be divided amongst election inspectors, including completing the Election Inspector Completes portion of the Application to Vote and providing the voter a ballot in a secrecy sleeve. The voter will then go to a voting booth to vote their ballot and return the ballot to the tabulator.

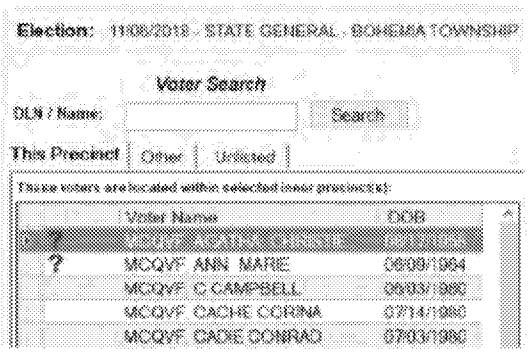
Process Voter with Status Flag(s)

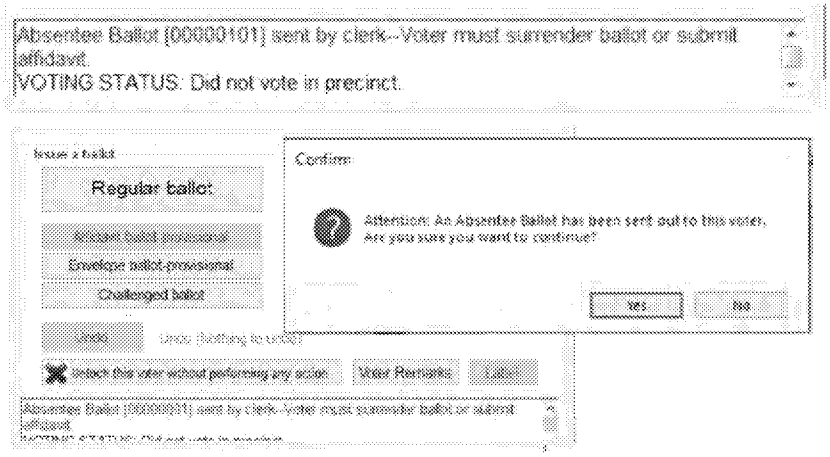
Some voters have status flags that need to be addressed prior to issuing a ballot. On the paper precinct list, these were indicated with a code. Something happened in the registration process or in subsequent mailings that needs follow-up. For example, a signature was not obtained, the voter missed checking an answer to the citizenship question, an absentee ballot was issued, the clerk received reliable information the voter may have moved, etc.

A voter has a status flag if he or she has a red question mark next to his or her name. When a red question mark is found, read the message in the Voter Status window at the bottom of the Voter Details screen to determine the issue.

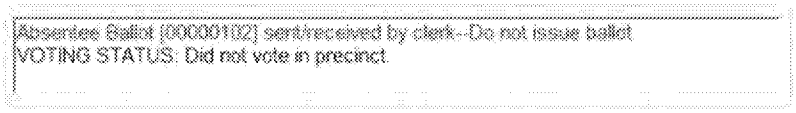


Absentee Ballot sent by clerk

This voter was sent an absentee ballot. The voter must surrender the absentee ballot or complete the Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absentee Ballot after approval from the Clerk. Process as a Regular ballot and click through the warning. Place the AV ballot in the Local Clerk envelope.



Absentee Ballot sent/received by clerk



This voter was sent an absentee ballot and returned it to the Clerk. DO NOT issue this voter a ballot as they have already voted.

In the extremely rare case of a clerical error (such as if a ballot was recorded in QVF for the wrong voter), after approval from the clerk a ballot may be issued. Process as instructed and click through the warning.

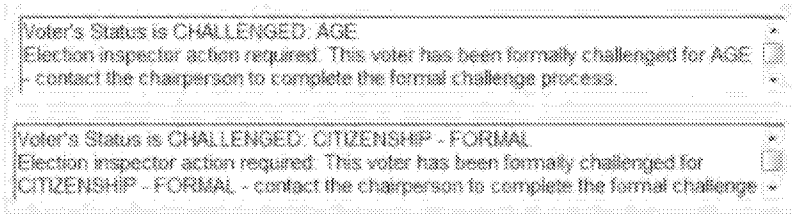
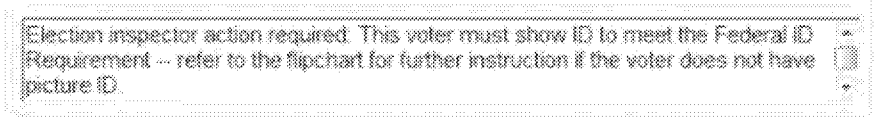
Voter's status is Challenge: Age, Citizenship Formal or Residency Formal

This voter has been formally challenged and must complete the challenge process before being issued a challenged ballot. Seek assistance from the precinct chairperson to complete this process. The EPB processing is the same as a regular voter except Challenged ballot is selected in the Issue a ballot box. A CHAL will appear next to the voter's name after processed.



Must show ID before voting (Federal Requirement)



This voter must show photo ID or a paycheck, government check, utility bill, bank statement, or a government document which lists his or her name and address (if no photo ID but provides one of the documents listed above, must sign the Affidavit of Voter Not in Possession of Photo ID as well) prior to being issued a ballot.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

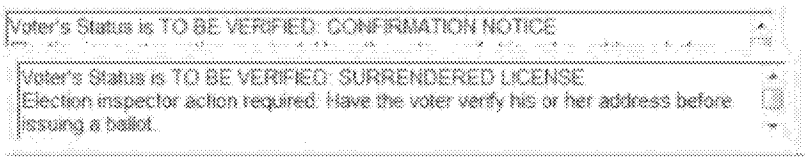
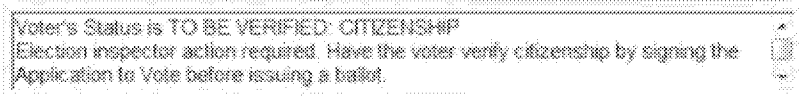
Voter's Status is V: Address Unclear, Confirmation Notice, or Surrendered License

This voter must verbally confirm the address listed in the EPB. If the voter does not confirm the address, the procedure for voters that have moved must be taken.

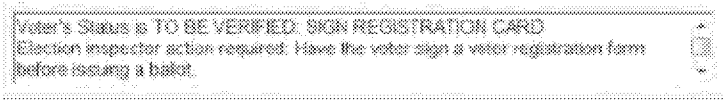


Voter's Status is V: Confirm Citizenship

This voter must verify their citizenship by signing the Application to Vote. If the voter does not complete the Application to Vote, DO NOT issue a ballot.

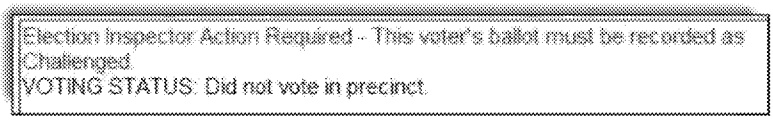


Voter's Status is V: Sign Registration Card



This voter must sign a voter registration form prior to being issued a ballot.

Voter Message: Challenged Ballot



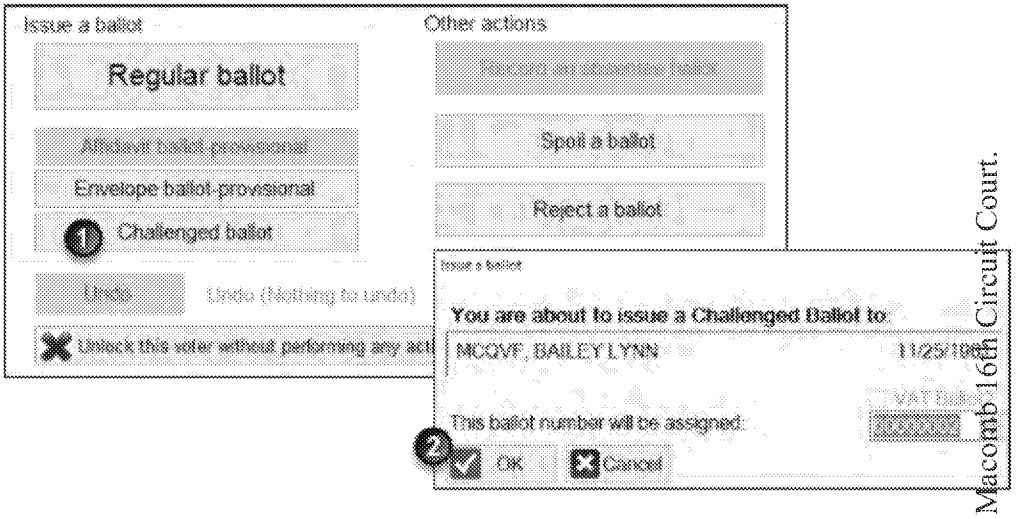
When the EPB indicates in red text that an inspector action is required to record a voter's ballot as challenged (shown above), perform the actions listed below.

(These voters registered within 14 days of the election with an alternative form of residency verification.)

To issue a Challenged ballot:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, lock it in if necessary and:

1. Click Challenged ballot
2. Verify the ballot number being issued is correct or enter the ballot number and click OK



Important note:
The Challenged ballot procedure for these voters is different than formal challenges. Outside of the EPB, perform the following steps when issuing the challenged ballot:

1. Write the ballot number in pencil on the upper left-hand corner of the ballot, being sure to avoid any barcodes or timing marks (not on the ballot stub).
2. Conceal this number with a small piece of white paper taped over the number.
3. Use the Challenged ballot button to enter the voter's ballot number into the e-Pollbook. If your precinct has more than one ballot style, issue the ballot style noted on the receipt.
4. The voter will then vote the ballot and place the ballot in the tabulator as usual.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

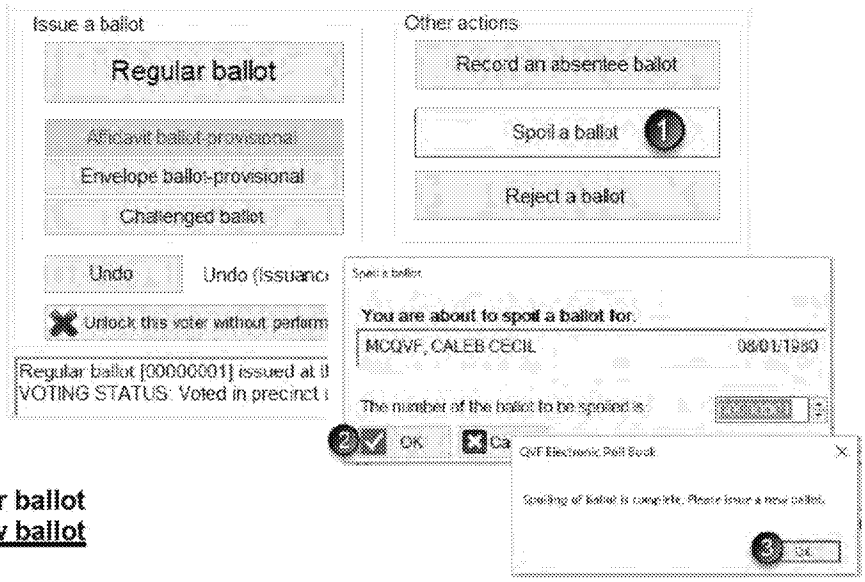
Process a Spoiled Ballot

A voter may request a new ballot if needed and a new ballot must be issued, no matter how many times the voter requests a new one. The voter should write "SPOILED" at the top of their ballot, remove the ballot stub, and place in the Spoiled Ballot Envelope. Change the Application to Vote to note the new ballot number and record the new ballot in the EPB software.

To spoil a ballot:

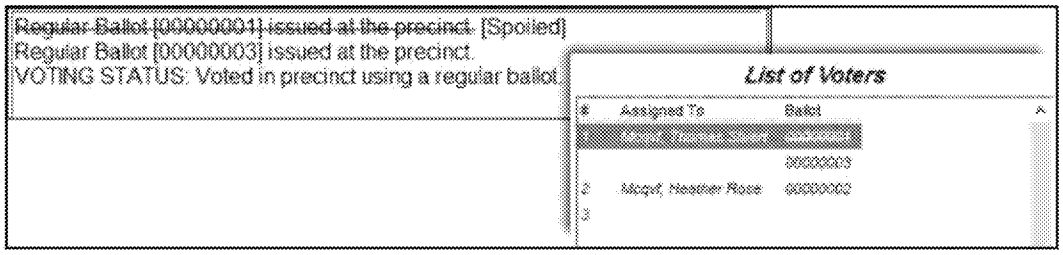
Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software by typing the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first, select the voter's name, click Lock this Voter Record and:

1. Click Spoil a ballot
2. Click OK – the software will automatically enter the ballot number you are spoiling.
3. Click OK



After the ballot is spoiled, the regular ballot process must be used to issue a new ballot to the voter.

Once the process is complete, verify the recording was done properly by looking at the Voter Status screen and the List of Voters.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Find a Voter Not Appearing On This Precinct List

Find a Voter in Other Precinct in Other Tab

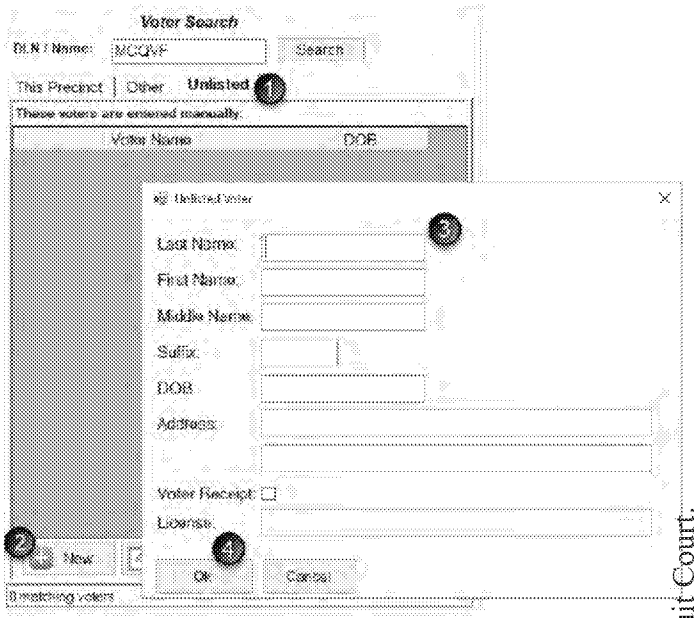
Election inspectors can look up voters throughout the jurisdiction, not just in the precinct they are working. If the voter does not pop up after a search, click on the Other tab. If the voter is registered to vote within the jurisdiction, click on their name and view their polling location. Explain to the voter that they are registered in a different polling location and/or precinct and direct them to the appropriate location. Be sure to click back to the This Precinct tab before processing the next voter.

Add an Unlisted Voter

If a voter is not found under the This Precinct tab or the Other tab, the citizen was not registered to vote in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) for that jurisdiction at the time of the EPB download.

If the voter registered at the local clerk's office after the EPB was downloaded and has a receipt, add the voter to the list (steps 1-4) and see the next section of this manual, Process Unlisted Voter with a Receipt.

The chairperson, with the assistance of the Clerk (and utilizing the Election Inspectors' Procedural Manual Flipchart and Missing Voters Flow Chart listing options including a provisional ballot) should determine whether the citizen is eligible to vote. If it is determined that the citizen is a qualified voter that should vote in that precinct, they must be added to the list.



To add a voter to the list:

1. Click the Unlisted tab
2. Click New
3. Enter the voter's information
4. Click OK

After the voter is added, a ballot number must be assigned.

The Clerk will provide guidance on the type of ballot to issue the voter.

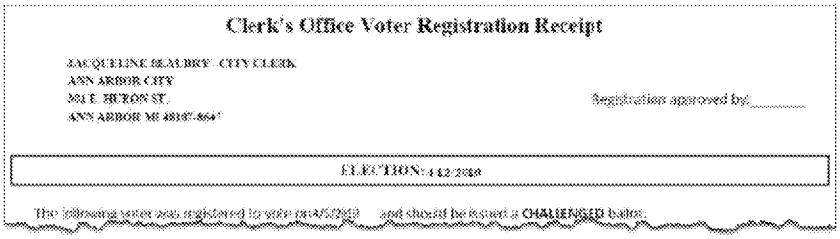
Important note: You must manually enter ballot numbers for unlisted voters, and the next regular ballot issued (for that ballot style) will need to be adjusted; it will not auto advance correctly.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

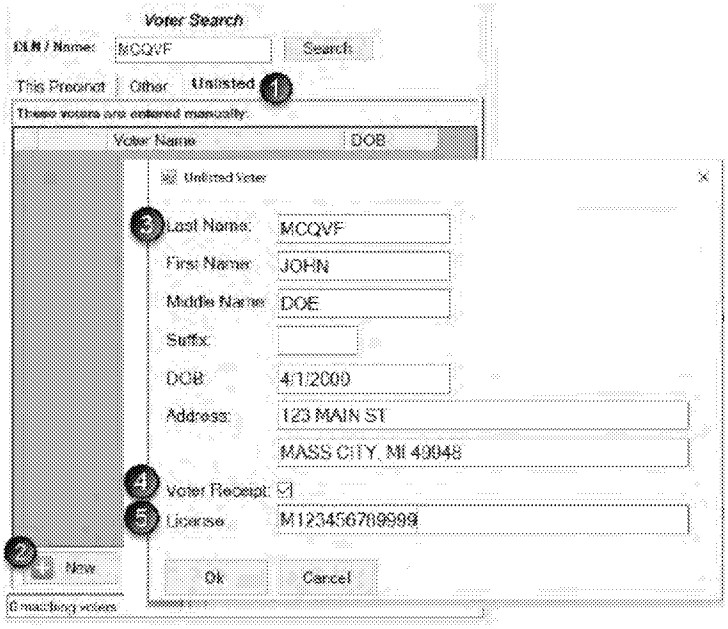
Process an Unlisted Voter with a Receipt

When a voter is not found under the This Precinct tab or the Other tab and they were registered by the local clerk's office after the e-Pollbook was downloaded for the election they must present the Clerk's Office Voter Registration Receipt. The voter must be added to the EPB from the Unlisted tab, then a ballot can be issued per the instructions on the receipt.



To add a voter to the list:

1. Click the Unlisted tab
2. Click New
3. Enter the voter's information
4. Click the "Voter Receipt" box to enable the option and the cursor automatically moves to the License field
5. If the voter has a DL/PID, swipe the DL/PID or scan the barcode to add the id number and the Unlisted Voter window will automatically close. The ID number can also be hand-typed, then click OK.



After the voter is added, a ballot number must be assigned. Follow the instructions provided on the receipt to select the correct ballot type button (Regular or Challenged).

If the receipt says that the ballot must be prepared as "challenged" perform the following steps:

1. Write the ballot number in pencil on the upper left-hand corner of the ballot, being sure to avoid any barcodes or timing marks (not on the ballot stub).
2. Conceal this number with a small piece of white paper taped over the number.
3. Use the Challenged ballot button to enter the voter's ballot number into the e-Pollbook. If your precinct has more than one ballot style, issue the ballot style noted on the receipt.
4. The voter will then vote the ballot and place the ballot in the tabulator as usual.

Important note: You must manually enter ballot numbers for unlisted voters, and the next regular ballot issued (for that ballot style) will need to be adjusted; it will not auto advance correctly.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Process Other Voter Types

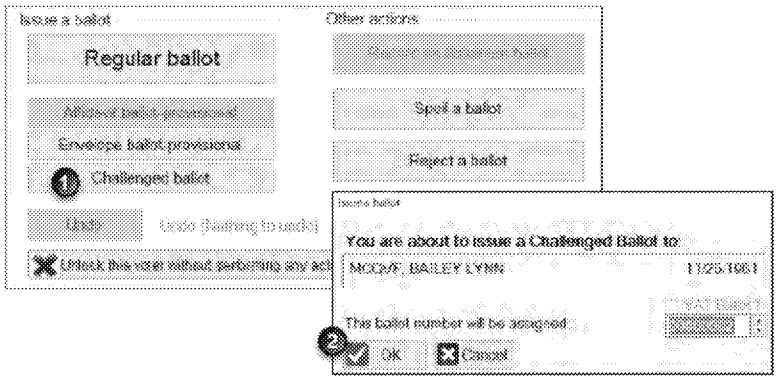
Process a Voter Challenged by a Challenger

If a voter is challenged by a Challenger, the voter must be issued a Challenged ballot and that Challenged ballot must be recorded in the EPB. Please note, the Challenge must be directed to the chairperson and all steps must be carried out prior to issuing the challenged ballot. Follow the instructions below to issue a challenged ballot in the EPB software.

To issue a Ballot to a Challenged Voter:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, lock it in if necessary and:

1. Click Challenged ballot
2. Verify the ballot number being issued is correct or enter the ballot number and Click OK



Important note: The ballot number must be written on the physical ballot and covered with a piece of paper or post-it tapes. In addition, full documentation of the challenge must be recorded in the paper binder pollbook.

Record an Absentee Ballot

If absentee ballots are processed in the precinct and the Clerk has instructed entry into the EPB software versus using the paper Addendum List of AV voters, follow the instructions below to process the ballots in the EPB software.

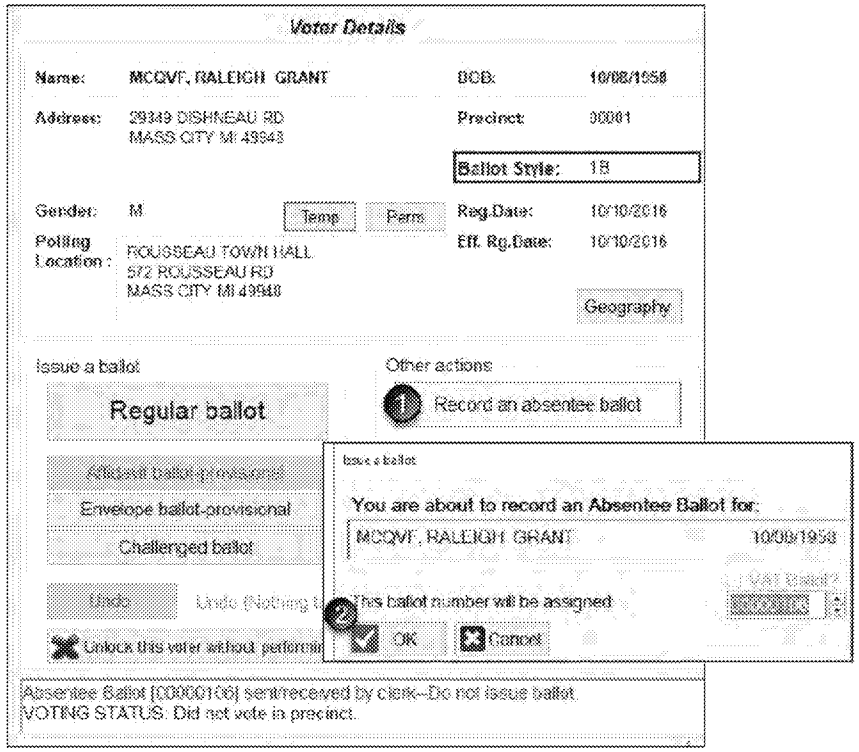
To record an absentee ballot:

Pull the absent voter's record up in the EPB software, lock it in if necessary and:

1. Click Record an absentee ballot
2. Verify ballot number (enter if not auto filled) is the same as assigned and click OK

Once the process is complete, verify the recording was done properly by looking for AV next to the voter's name, the Voter Status screen and the List of Voters.

NOTE: If processing a FWAB or electronic MOVE ballot, simply accept the regular AV ballot number assigned or enter the AV ballot number assigned by the clerk.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

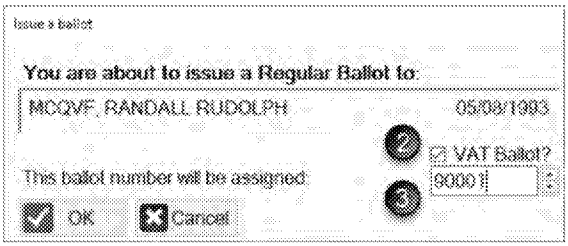
Record a Voter Assist Terminal (VAT) Ballot

When a voter requests to use the Voter Assist Terminal (VAT) to vote, issue a blank ballot (with a numbered stub). Since they will make their selections using the VAT which prints their votes on a blank ballot, they will not receive a regular ballot with a traditional number sequence.

To record such ballots in the Electronic Pollbook, search for the voter in the EPB as usual and select a ballot type to record. When assigning this voter's ballot number, indicate that it is a VAT Ballot by checking the VAT box. This action tells the system to use the blank ballot numbering sequence when auto advancing. If it is the first VAT ballot of the day, enter the first ballot number of the blank ballot stock. VAT ballot numbers will advance automatically like other ballots do when the Auto Advance option is enabled and after the first number is entered.

To record a VAT ballot:

1. Click the button for the kind of ballot being assigned (Regular, Provisional…)
2. Add a checkmark to the VAT box
3. If this is the first VAT ballot of the day, enter the ballot number in, otherwise, confirm the VAT ballot number matches the sequence and click OK.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Avoid or Correct Mistakes

If a voter is selected in error, simply click Unlock this voter without performing any action to return to the main screen.

If an entry mistake occurs, whether the wrong ballot number or the wrong voter was issued a ballot, using the Undo function will aid in correcting the mistake.

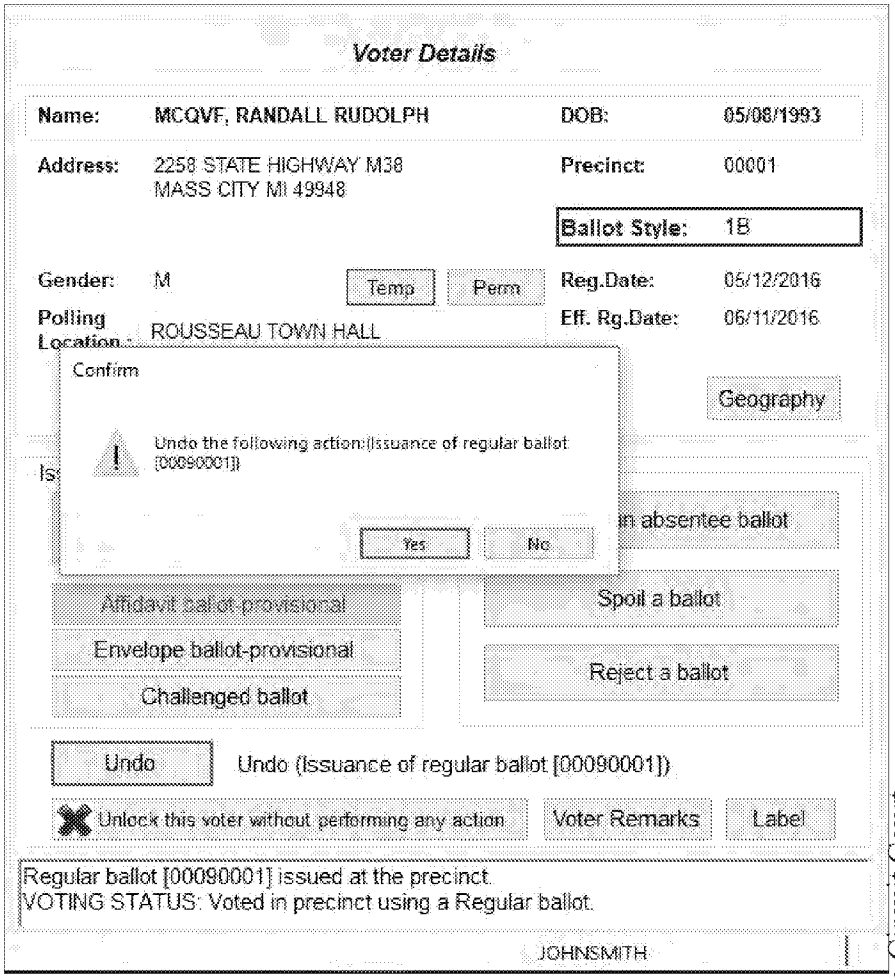
To correct a mistake:

1. Search for the voter, using the DLN/Name search box
2. Select the voter
3. Click Lock this voter record
4. Click Undo
5. Click Yes

Notice the action you are undoing is in brackets next to the Undo button and in the confirmation box. Use the Application(s) to Vote to ensure you are making the correction properly. The Undo function should not be used to attempt to fix major mistakes. If several ballots have been issued out of sequence, correct this type of error with a remark and by ensuring the next voter is correct from that point forward.

Important note: The Undo feature is NOT for spoiling ballots (see Spoiled Ballots section for detail). If you have questions as to when the Undo function is appropriate to use, consult your local Clerk.

See FAQ #1 at the back of this manual, if a voter was issued an incorrect ballot style.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Make a Remark

Any time a correction is made, a remark should be entered. In addition, remarks should be made throughout the day to document events that happened in the polling place that are significant. Providing this information aids the Clerk in understanding what took place throughout the day. There are two types of remarks General or Specific, be sure to use the correct type based on the comment you need to make.

To make a general remark:

1. Click File (or the General Remarks button and skip to step 3)
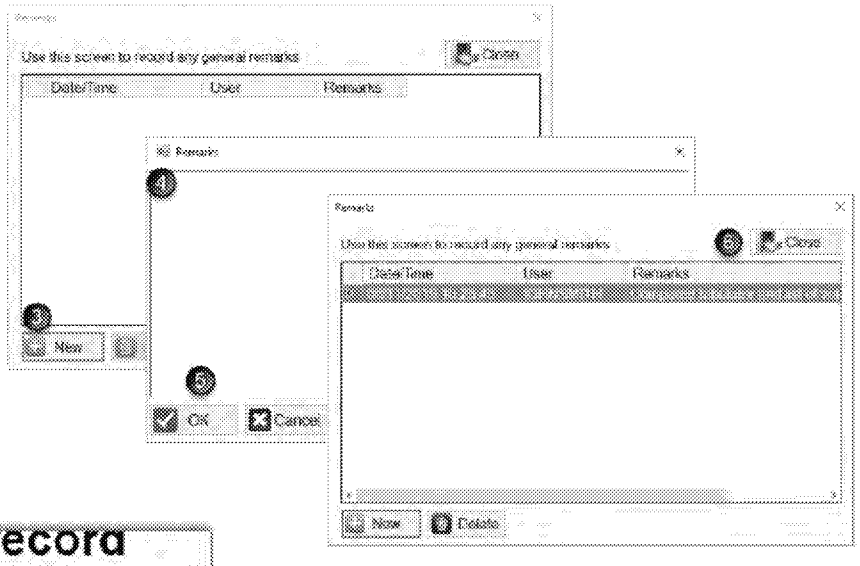
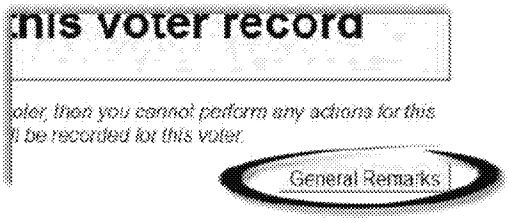
2. Click Remarks
3. Click New
4. Enter Remark, the EPB automatically records the date and time of the entry; however, if entry of the remark is delayed from the time the event occurred, then include the time the event took place in the remark.
5. Click OK
6. Click Close



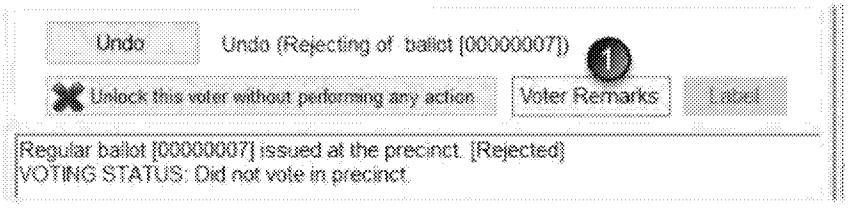


To make a voter remark:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, by typing the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first, click Lock this Voter Record and:

1. Click Voter Remarks
2. Enter Remark, the EPB automatically records the Voter Name, Voter Number, and date and time of the entry, however, adding the time is recommended as the EPB is not always available for remark entry at the time the event took place.
3. Click OK

If there are no other actions to perform on that voter, Unlock the voter and proceed to process the next voter.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Reject a Ballot

A ballot is rejected only in a situation where a voter will not be issued a new ballot. Valid reasons for rejection are:

- Exposure – A voter intentionally exposed his or her marked ballot to others at the polling place.
- Missing stub/ballot number does not agree – It is discovered during the ballot serial number verification process that the stub on the ballot that was issued to the voter at the polls is missing or bears a different number than the number recorded on the voter's Application to Vote.
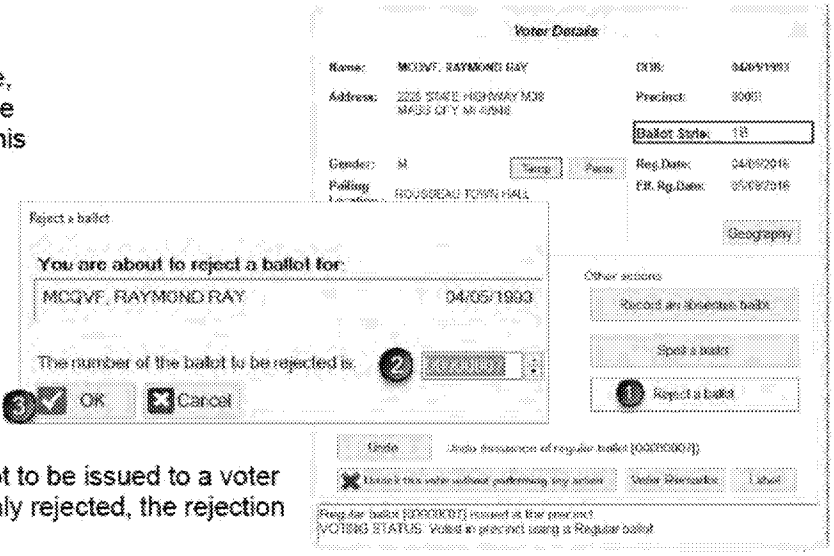
- Ballot was left in booth/voter did not tabulate – A voter neglected or refused to tabulate his or her ballot.

If any of these situations arise, a voter may not be issued a replacement ballot. The ballot must be rejected.

To Reject a ballot:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, by typing the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first, click Lock this Voter Record and:

1. Click Reject a ballot
2. Verify ballot number is the same as assigned - Click OK
3. Click OK
4. Record a Voter Remark (See previous page) that includes the reason for rejection



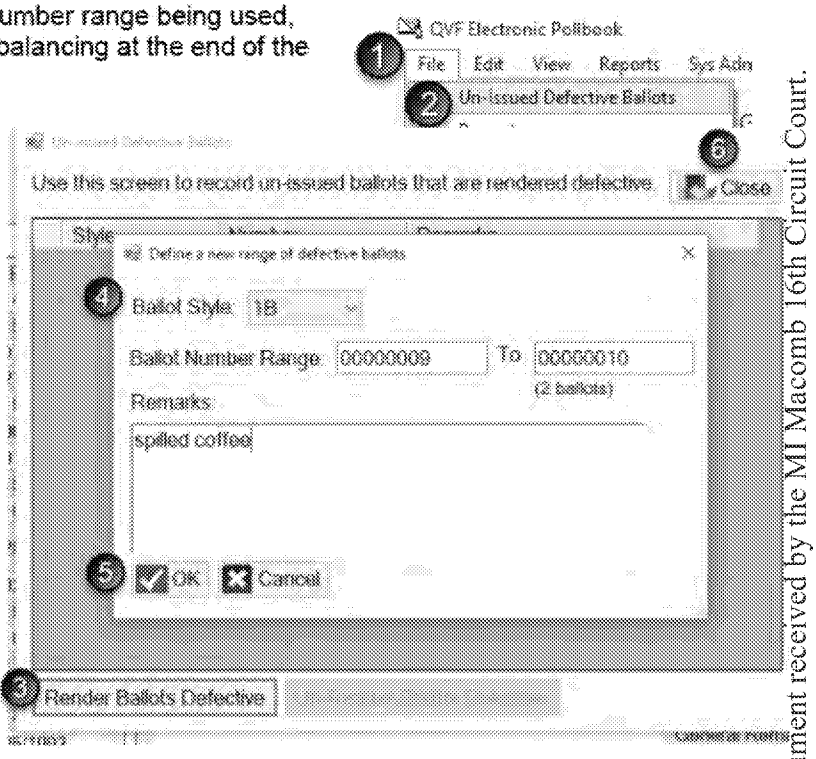
The EPB software will not allow another ballot to be issued to a voter with a rejected ballot. If a ballot was mistakenly rejected, the rejection must be removed by using the Undo button.

Mark Unissued Ballots Defective

If a ballot becomes unusable and it is within the number range being used, record it defective in the EPB software to ensure balancing at the end of the night.

To record defective ballots:

1. Click File
2. Click Un-issued Defective Ballots
3. Click Render Ballots Defective
4. Select the ballot style, enter the ballot number range, and record the reason the ballot is defective.
5. Click OK
6. Click Close



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

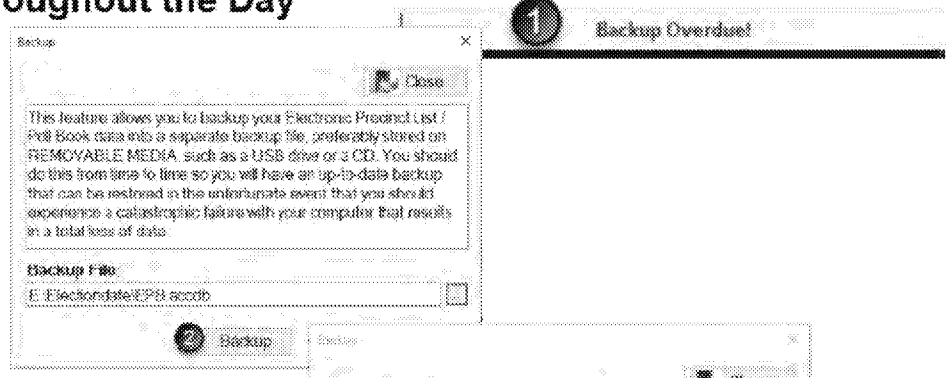
Back up Regularly Throughout the Day

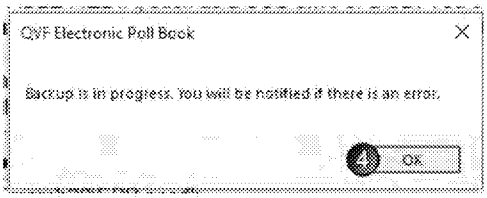
Approximately every half hour, the EPB software will notify the user that a backup is overdue. It is important to take a moment after processing a voter to update the backup. This will ensure the flash drive has the most recent data entered into the EPB in the event of a hardware failure.



To Backup:

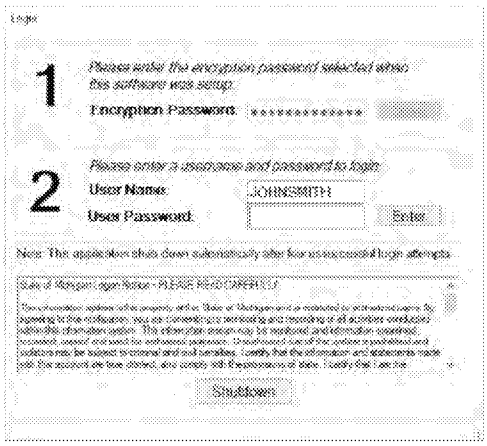
1. Click Backup Overdue
2. Click Backup – the file path should default to the encrypted flash drive and [ElectionDate] folder once the first backup has been completed
3. Click Yes to overwrite the existing backup file
4. Click OK

If you get an error that the drive or path is not accessible, log into your flash drive and try again



Understand Timeout Features

For security reasons, the EPB software will logout a user after thirty minutes of inactivity. This can be avoided by moving the mouse and/or clicking into the DLN/Name field if there are long periods of inactivity. If the EPB software logs out the user, simply reenter the User Name and User Password and click Enter.



Switch Users

To switch users, simply use the Logout function by:

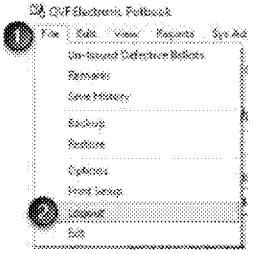
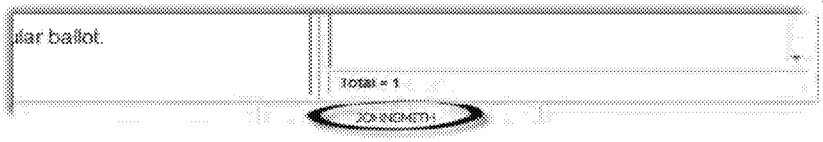
1. Click File
2. Click Logout



Then simply log in with the new username and password.

The current user is listed in the lower right hand corner of the screen as illustrated:



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Restore the Database

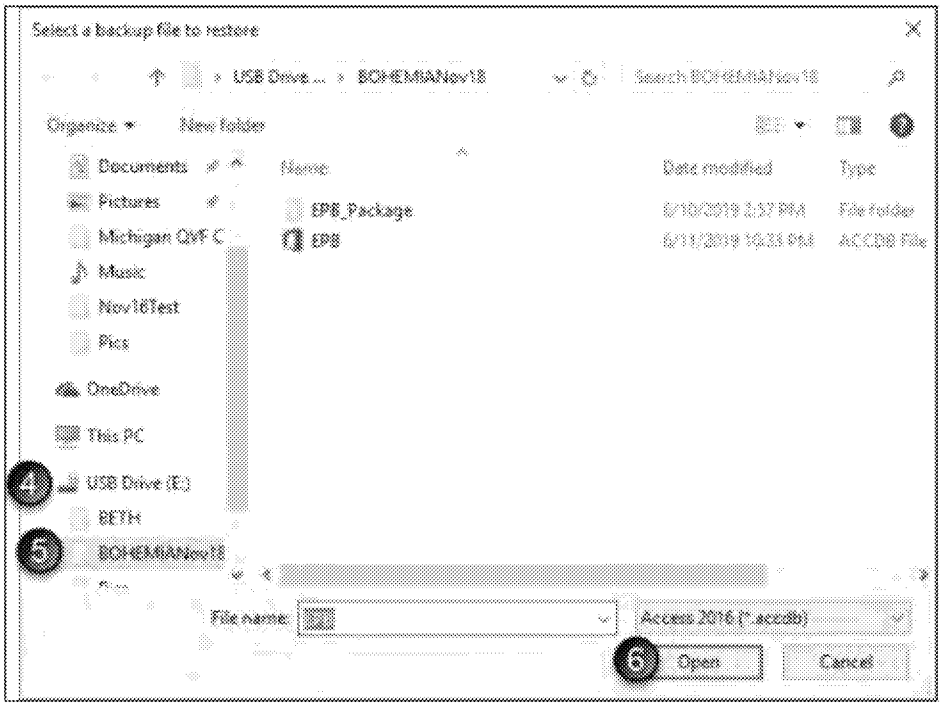
In the event the laptop fails and the EPB needs to be reinstalled on a new laptop on election day, the Restore feature will reload all of the information entered up to the point of the last backup. The only voter data missing would be entries made in the EPB since the last backup. That information can be added back in using the Applications to Vote. The Administrator username and password must be obtained from the Clerk for the initial login when the software is re-installed.

Once the EPB software has been installed onto the new laptop, login to the EPB software, and perform the following steps:

1. Click File
2. Click Restore

3. Click this button … at the end of the path field

4. Make sure the encrypted flash drive is selected (Removable Disk E:) Drive letters may vary.
5. Double click [ElectionDate] folder
6. Click Open



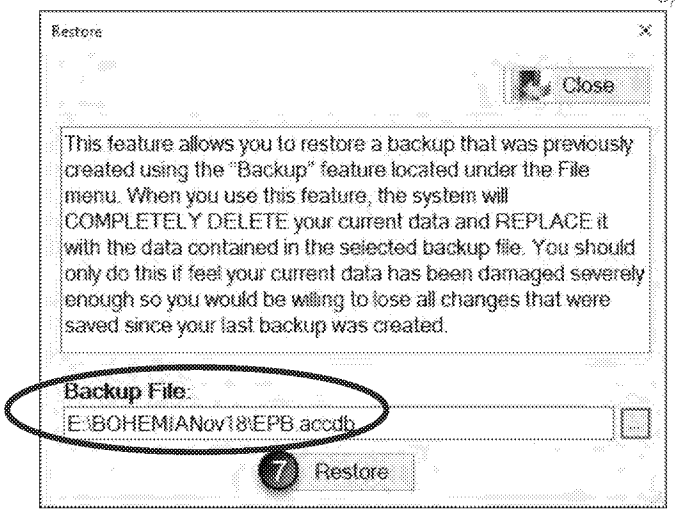
Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

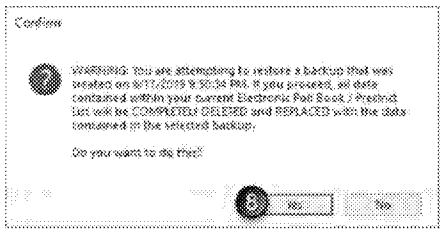
Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

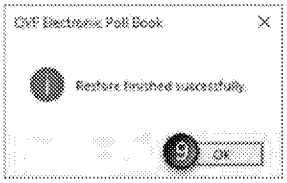
7. Click Restore
8. Click Yes
9. Click OK

After restoration is complete, the election inspectors should review the Options under File>Options, then log out of the EPB and log back in with the username and password they had used prior to the laptop/software failure.

If time elapsed between the last backup and the restoring of data, use the Application(s) to Vote to re-enter voter(s) and process new voters.







Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Election Day: Close the Polls

After the close of polls on Election Day, data processed in the EPB software must be saved one last time to the encrypted flash drive and reports must be generated to complete the paper binder pollbook. The EPB software generates the three reports necessary for completion of the paper binder pollbook/official record of the precinct in just a few steps. Those reports include the Ballot Summary, the List of Voters, and the Remarks report. After reports are saved and printed, save voter history in a manner that can easily be uploaded into the Qualified Voter File (QVF) in a matter of seconds, ensuring accurate recording of voters in the master voter registration database.

Review and complete the next six required steps. If your receiving board prints the reports, simply save each report.

1. Save one last Backup file
2. Save and print the Ballot Summary Report
3. Save and print the List of Voters Report
4. Save and print the Remarks Report
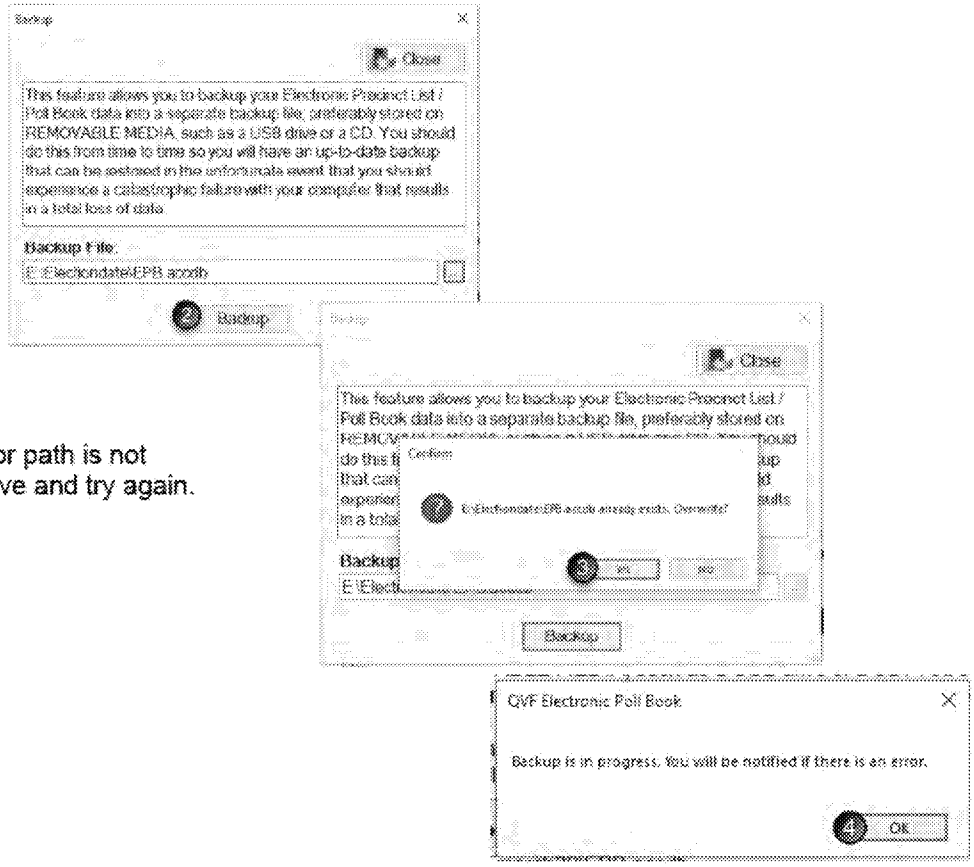
5. Save Voting History (This is a frequently missed step, so please pay extra attention here!)
6. Look at the files saved on the flash drive and go back to save anything that was missed.

Save Backup

After all voters have been processed in the EPB, perform one last Backup to ensure all data is saved to the encrypted flash drive.

1. Click File
2. Click Backup
3. Click Backup
4. Click Yes
5. Click OK

If you get an error that the drive or path is not accessible, log into your flash drive and try again.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

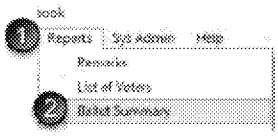
Save and Print Reports

Save and print Ballot Summary Report

The Ballot Summary documents the total number of ballots assigned to the precinct and how each ballot was used. You already recorded spoiled or defective (F), rejected (G) and Provisional "envelope" (I) ballots and the software enters those numbers. The designated inspector enters the remaining numbers, and the EPB software will calculate and balance the Ballot Summary. Type in numbers carefully and use the Tab key to move between fields.

To complete the Ballot Summary:

1. Click Reports
2. Click Ballot Summary



Enter the Number of ballots delivered to the precinct for each ballot style:

3. (A) Enter the Starting number and the Ending number of the first ballot style. If using more than one ballot style or if any VAT ballots were used, tab to create a new line and repeat the process until all styles are listed. The Count will be calculated automatically.

4. (B) Enter the Number of AV return envelopes received by board, if absentee ballots are being processed in the precinct. If absentee ballots are not being processed in the precinct, this box will already be completed with a 0.

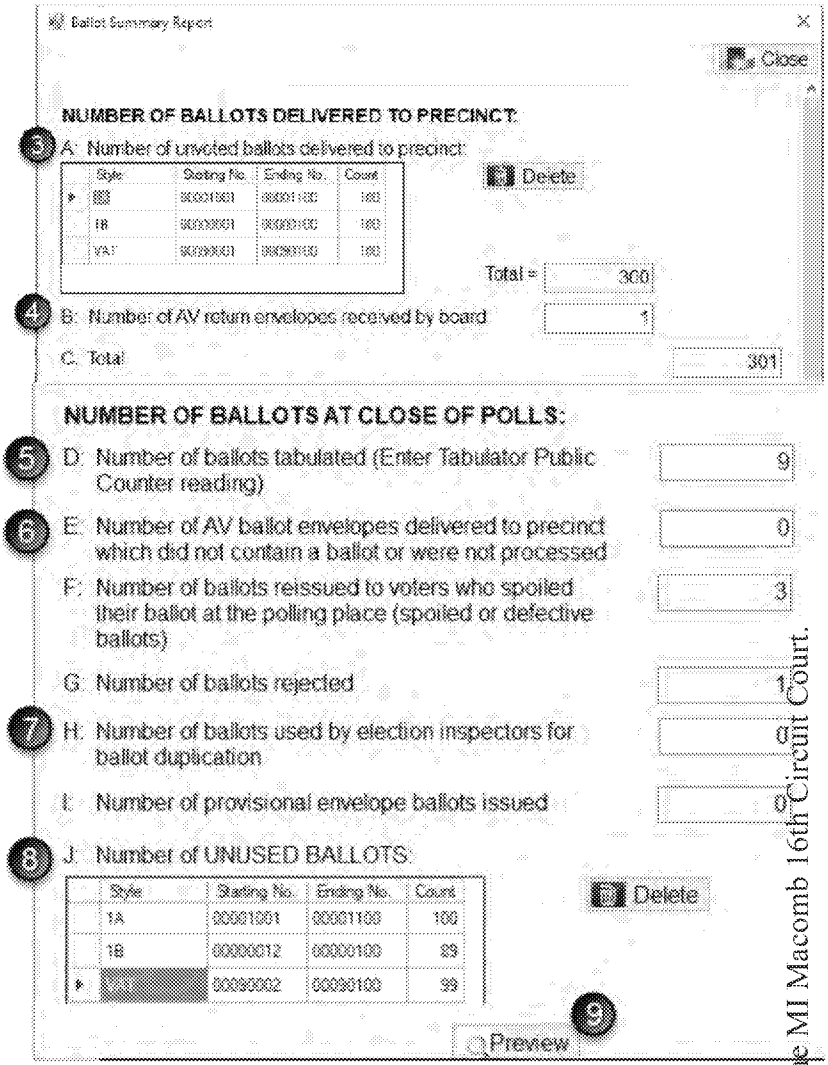
Enter the Number of ballots at close of polls:

5. (D) Enter Number of ballots tabulated from the Tabulator Public Counter reading

6. (E) Enter the Number of AV ballot envelopes delivered to precinct which did not contain a ballot or were not processed for any reason, if absentee ballots are being processed in the precinct. If absentee ballots are not being processed in the precinct, this box will already be completed with a 0.

7. (H) Enter the Number of ballots used by election inspectors for ballot duplication.

8. (J) Enter the Number of Unused Ballots by entering the Starting Number (the next ballot that would be issued) and the Ending Number of the unused ballots. If using more than one ballot style, tab to create a new line and repeat the process until all styles are listed. Tab out of the box or place the cursor in a different box to make the totals calculate.



SCROLL DOWN AND STOP – L must be 0. If L is not 0, double check items 3-8 and ensure everything was entered correctly. If there is a known reason for not balancing and it is unable to be resolved, a detailed Remark must be made to explain to the Board of Canvassers why the precinct does not balance.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

9. Click Preview

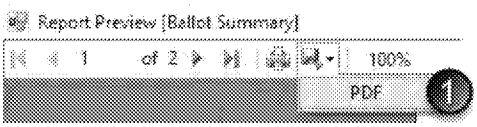
The Ballot Summary report will pop-up after clicking Preview. Be sure to review the summary to ensure all information was entered correctly and that the summary balances (Line L = 0). Line L may appear on a second page, so click the arrow to view the next page if necessary.

At this point, the Ballot Summary must be saved to the encrypted flash drive. If your precinct has the ability to print, the Ballot Summary should be printed as well. Otherwise, the reports will be printed at the Receiving Board.



To save the Ballot Summary:

1. Click the disk icon and PDF

2. Double click the [ElectionDate] folder in the encrypted flash drive (Removable Disk E:). Drive letters may vary.

3. Click Save

After the Ballot Summary has been saved, print the report (if applicable), close out of the preview screen, and close the Ballot Summary screen as well.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

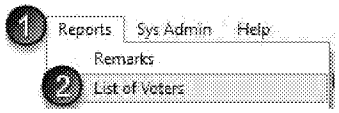
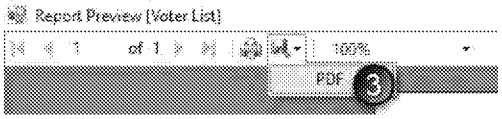
Save and Print List of Voters Report





To save the List of Voters:

1. Click Reports
2. Click List of Voters
3. Click the disk icon and PDF

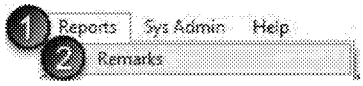
After the List of Voters has been saved, print the report (if printing in the precinct) and close out of the preview screen.

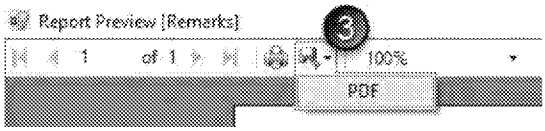
Save and Print Remarks Report

Remarks recorded in the EPB software using the General Remarks and/or Voter Remarks are saved in a report also and must be saved to the encrypted flash drive. If your precinct has the ability to print, the Remarks should be printed as well.

To save the Remarks report:



1. Click Reports
2. Click Remarks
3. Click the disk icon and PDF



4. The [ElectionDate] folder selected for the last two reports should automatically pop up. Always check to make sure you are in the encrypted flash drive and the correct folder before clicking Save

Note: There must be one recorded Remark for the report to save.

Save Voter History: Redirection Action Required!

After all other reports are saved, save the voter history to the flash drive. The clerk needs to use this file to update the voter registration files in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) recording who voted on Election Day.

To save Voter History:

1. Click File
2. Click Save History
3. Redirect the file by clicking on the flash drive under This PC, then double-click on the Election Date folder. The file name should say epb_history with no preceding d:\

   If d:\ is still in the File name, click the cursor at the beginning of the File name field and use the Delete key to delete the d:\
4. Click Save

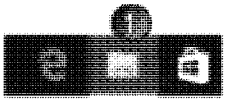
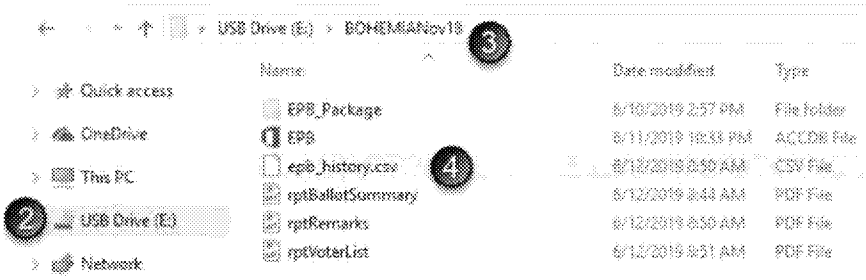
Ensure Files are on Flash Drive

To verify files have been saved on the encrypted flash drive:



1. Click on the file folder icon to open Windows File Explorer
2. Click Removable Disk (E:) Drive letters may vary
3. Double Click the [ElectionDate] folder



4. You must have the following files:

File Name	File Type
EPB Back Up	ACCDB file
EPB_History	CSV file
rptBallot Summary	PDF file
rptRemarks	PDF file
rptVoter List	PDF file

You may also see the following files in your folder:

File Name	File Type
EPB_Package	File Folder
EPB_Package	Compressed (zipped)

Once all reports have been saved, close all programs and shut down the laptop. Return all items to the case except the encrypted flash drive. The encrypted flash drive must be placed into the container the Clerk recommends, sealed (either an envelope with a red paper seal or an approved container and the appropriate seal), and returned to the Clerk on election night.

Helpful Hints

Bar Code Scanners and Absent Voter Ballots
When processing absent voter ballots in the precinct, bar code scanners may be used to scan the absentee ballot application for voter look-up. If the laptop has 4 USB ports, the bar code scanner may be used along with the magnetic card reader. If the laptop only has 3 USB ports, the bar code scanner can be used to scan the back of a driver's license, replacing the need for a magnetic card reader.

Screen Resolution
Optimal screen resolution for the EPB laptop has been 1366x768. If your list of voters is not displaying on the right-hand side of your screen, the resolution needs to be adjusted.

To adjust the screen resolution:

1. Go to the desktop and right click
2. Click screen resolution
3. Select 1366x768

Frequently Asked Questions

1. The wrong ballot style was issued to a voter, how can it be corrected?

   Answer: If using different ballot numbers for each ballot style, no action is required except to remark the situation in the Remarks. If your ballot styles are numbered with the same ballot number series, open the voter's record, undo the issuance of the ballot with the incorrect ballot style, and reissue a Regular Ballot with a modified number using a letter before the number (for example, X0000012) and remark the situation in the Remarks.

2. Is there a way to setup all election inspector usernames and passwords into the software before the EPB software is downloaded on to the encrypted flash drive?

   Answer: Yes, QVF Basic or Complete users can set up usernames and passwords in QVF.

3. If using the QVF AV module, do I have to extract the EPB software from QVF after 4:00 p.m. on the Monday before the election to get the most up to date absent voter information?

   Answer: Yes, this is now required by law. Jurisdictions with over 50 precincts are required to do so on the Saturday prior to Election Day after 2:00 p.m.

4. Is there a way to update absent voter activity on the encrypted flash drive or in the Voter List portion of the EPB software after it has been installed on the laptop?

   Answer: No, not at this time. Also, remember that election inspectors record AV ballots in the EPB software (unless using the addendum list or an AVCB), but they must not record AV ballots in the EPB software before the opening of the polls.

5. Do I have to print the paper binder pollbook reports in the precinct?

   Answer: No, in fact, having the Receiving Board print the reports is highly recommended. Reports must be delivered to the Receiving Board on the encrypted flash drive in a sealed container by two election inspectors of opposing political party after the polls close. The Receiving Board then prints the reports and completes the paper binder pollbook.

6. Do I need to use a particular type of printer with the laptops?

   Answer: No. Most printers will work with the laptops as long as the proper printer driver is installed. Complete the installation as soon as possible to verify the laptop and printer are compatible.

7. Do I have to have a hardcopy precinct list and full paper binder pollbook with a List of Voters, Ballot Summary and a Remarks section at each precinct if I use the EPB software?

   Answer: Under the terms of your User Agreement, you are required to have a hardcopy Precinct List and a hardcopy List of Voters, Ballot Summary, and Remarks Section available for immediate delivery to the precinct in the event of a system failure. One may be printed from the Elections eLearning Center; see Election Day Use of the QVF Precinct List.

8. The EPB software allows me to issue a ballot to a voter who has already returned an absent voter ballot. Why is this permitted?

   Answer: Under rare circumstances, an absentee ballot may have been recorded incorrectly in QVF. Election inspectors MUST contact the local clerk to verify the status of the absentee ballot before issuing a ballot to a voter who, according to the EPB software, has already returned an absent voter ballot.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

9. How do I change the time and time zone on my laptop?

   Answer: Right-click on the time and date, click Date and Time Settings. Here you can select the appropriate time zone. If you need to adjust the time, turn off the "Set time automatically" option, then click the Change button. Once the time is corrected, you can turn the "Set time automatically" option back on.

10. Do I have to use the EPB software to process absent voters in the precinct?

    Answer: No, you may use the Addendum List of Absent Voters method and add the list to the paper binder pollbook.

11. What if an absent voter does not return their ballot? Or if the absent voter surrenders their AV ballot in the polls? Do I need to indicate this in the EPB software?

    Answer: No. Only process an absentee ballot in the voter's record when the ballot has been received for processing. If the voter has surrendered their absent voter ballot, simply issue a precinct ballot using the normal process. The Spoil a ballot function should never be used for an absent voter ballot in the EPB software.

12. Will Unlisted Voters transfer to QVF after the Voter History has been updated?

    Answer: Some may, and some may not. Unlisted voters without a driver's license or state ID number will not transfer into QVF after Voter History has been updated. The registration of an Unlisted voter must be added to QVF if it has not been already added, and then Voter History for the Unlisted voter can be entered manually in QVF under Voter>Voting History.

13. Is there a way to view all actions taken in the EPB on Election Day?

    Answer: Yes. An Activity Log Report can be viewed at any time by selecting Reports > Activity Log Report. This Report may be printed as well.

14. Is there a way to convert the List of Voters into a .csv file?

    Answer: Not at this time.

15. What if my laptop "freezes up" and stops responding?

    Answer: First, try to close and reopen the EPB program, using Ctrl + Alt + Delete if necessary to use the Task Manager to end the task and close the EPB application. If that doesn't work, you may restart the computer. Remember to log back into the flash drive as well as the EPB program before you begin working again.

Glossary

Antivirus Software is a software program that helps protect the laptop from viruses that could damage or shut down the machine.

Backup is a file that replicates and saves entered data for use in the event of a system failure.

Ballot Style is a designation to distinguish amongst ballots in a precinct that has a District split. For example, Precinct One represents voters from County Commission District 5 and 7. If the County Commission position is on the ballot, Precinct One will have two ballot styles, one for District 5 and one for District 7.

BitLocker is free encryption software from Microsoft. For the E-Pollbook, it is software on flash drives issued by the State after 2015, used to protect data on a flash drive with a password.

Data Security is the means of ensuring that data is kept safe from corruption and that access to it is suitably controlled. Thus, data security helps to ensure privacy. It also helps in protecting personal data.

e-Pollbook Software is a computer software program created in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) to be loaded on a laptop and used in the precinct on election day to record voters and the ballots they are issued.

Encryption is the process of transforming information using an algorithm to make it unreadable to anyone except those possessing the password.

Encrypted Flash Drive is a digital storage device that has the ability to encrypt data and keep the data secure.

Encryption Password is a password created to allow access to the encrypted e-pollbook software once downloaded from QVF.

Election Geography is a function of QVF where precinct combinations and ballot style names can be set for an election. The information entered in the QVF Election Geography module will then tell the EPB software which precincts have been combined and the preferred name for ballot styles in split precincts.

Lockout is an e-pollbook software feature that disallows the issuance of a ballot number more than once per ballot style.

Privacy Zone is a term the V-Safe 100 software uses to define the encrypted area of the flash drive. This only applies to flash drives issued by the State prior to 2015.

Receiving Board is a board established by the local Election Commission responsible for ensuring 1) all ballot containers delivered to the clerk after the polls close are properly sealed 2) all seal numbers are properly recorded and 3) the number of names entered in the Poll Book balances with the number of ballots counted in the precinct. For more information visit michigan.gov/elections and click on “Information for Election Administrators.”

Strong Password is a password that contains a combination of 8-16 characters, mixed case with at least one number.

V-Safe 100 is the name of the encryption software installed on earlier versions of the State issued flash drive prior to 2015.

COURT OF APPEALS

DETROIT NEWS,

Plaintiff-Appellee,

v

COUNTY OF WAYNE,

Defendant-Appellant.

UNPUBLISHED
March 15, 2002

No. 235831
Wayne Circuit Court
LC No. 01-118800-CZ

Before: Talbot, P.J., and Smolenski and Wilder, JJ.

PER CURIAM.

Plaintiff brought this action alleging defendant violated Michigan's Freedom of Information Act, MCL 15.231 et seq. ("FOIA") by refusing to disclose certain employee information about Wayne County employees. The trial court determined that the requested information was not exempt from disclosure and ordered defendant to produce the requested records. Defendant appeals by right. We affirm.

Pursuant to the FOIA, plaintiff requested the following information from defendant: (1) the name, job title, and salary or hourly pay rate for all Wayne County officials and employees for the calendar years 2000 and 2001, (2) the names of all employees who received longevity pay, and the amount of each payment for the calendar years 1999 and 2000, (3) the names of all employees who received pay for annual leave, accumulative leave, and the amount of leave pay each received for the calendar years 1999 and 2000, (4) the names of all employees who received pay for accumulated sick leave and the amount of sick pay each received during the calendar years 1999 and 2000, (5) the names of all employees who received flat rate mileage reimbursements and the monthly amount each received as of April 2, 2001, and (6) the names of all employees who had a county vehicle assigned to them as of April 2, 2001, and the year, make and model of each assigned vehicle.

Defendant denied plaintiff's request. Defendant relied on MCL 15.243(1)(d) of the FOIA, which provides that "[r]ecords or information specifically described and exempted from disclosure by statute" may be exempted from disclosure as a public record under the FOIA. Defendant maintained that the records plaintiff sought were part of the records of the Department of Personnel/Human Resources, a division created under the Wayne County Charter ("The Charter"). Defendant asserted that the Charter is controlled by the Civil Service Act, MCL 38.401 et seq., which provides that "employees' records shall be confidential and not open for public inspection." MCL 38.412(g).

Plaintiff filed a complaint against defendant for an alleged FOIA violation along with a motion for an expedited order to show cause. The trial court proceeded on the assumption that the Civil Service Act governs the Charter, but the court concluded that the requested records did not fall within the exemptions of MCL 38.412(g), and ordered defendant to produce the records.

Defendant's appeal raises two legal issues: (1) Does the County Employees Civil Service Act ("Civil Service Act"), MCL 38.412(g), exempt the requested information from FOIA disclosure, and (2) can a negative inference be made that the Legislature intended to protect from disclosure other public employee salaries when it amended the FOIA, Section 13a, MCL 15.243a, to expressly provide for the disclosure of the salaries of public education employees? We conclude that the Civil Service Act does not exempt the requested information from FOIA disclosure, and that the Legislature, by amending the FOIA, did not intend to bar the FOIA disclosure of public employee salaries.

I

Section 13 of the FOIA, MCL 15.243(1)(d), provides that "[r]ecords or information specifically described and exempted from disclosure by statute" may be exempted from disclosure as a public record. Defendant contends that MCL 38.412(g), of the Civil Service Act exempts the requested information from disclosure. We conclude that MCL 38.412(g) is inapplicable to the requested records.

A determination whether a public record is exempt from disclosure under the FOIA is a mixed question of law and fact. Schroeder v City of Detroit, 221 Mich App 364, 366; 561 NW2d 497 (1997). We review the trial court's factual findings for clear error and review the questions of law de novo on appeal. Id. Statutory interpretation is a question of law that is also subject to review de novo on appeal. Oakland Co Bd of Co Rd Comm'rs v Michigan Property & Casualty Guaranty Ass'n, 456 Mich 590, 610; 575 NW2d 751 (1998).

The trial court did not rule on the question whether the Civil Service Act governs the current civil service system in Wayne County, in light of the Wayne County Charter and Reorganization Plan ("Charter"), adopted by the electorate on November 3, 1981, effective January 1, 1983.[1] However, even assuming arguendo, as did the trial court in this case, that the Civil Service Act applies, a reading of the plain language of MCL 38.412(g) shows that it does

[1] At the request of the trial court, the parties orally argued the issue of whether the Civil Service Act governed the Charter, but the trial court did not decide the issue, and it proceeded under the assumption that the Civil Service Act applied. Because the argument was not decided by the court, it is not preserved for appeal. Swickard v Wayne Co Medical Examiner, 438 Mich 536, 562; 475 NW2d 304 (1991); Herald Co, Inc, v Ann Arbor Public Schools, 224 Mich App 266, 278; 568 NW2d 411 (1997). Further, defendant failed to brief, and plaintiff did not fully brief, this issue in the trial court, and both parties have not fully briefed this question on appeal, giving their arguments only cursory attention. We decline to address the issue when the record relating to it is not fully developed and when the issue is unnecessary for this Court's review. Kent Co Deputy Sheriff's Ass'n v Kent Co Sheriff, 463 Mich 353, 356 n7; 616 NW2d 677 (2000).

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

not exclude the requested records from FOIA disclosure. Section 13 of the Civil Service Act, MCL 38.412, provides that the Civil Service Commission:

> (g) . . . Shall have such other powers and perform such other duties as may be necessary to carry out the provisions hereof.
>
>
> Service records. It shall cause to be kept in each department and division thereof, records of the service of each employee, known as "service records". These records shall contain fact statements on all matters relating to the character and quality of the work done and the attitude of the individual to his work.
> Service records; armed services records; confidential records. It shall keep a roster of the employees of the county, together with a record of service, military or naval experience and such other matters as may have a bearing on promotion, transfer or discharge. All such "service records" and employees' records shall be confidential and not open for public inspection. [Emphasis added.]

Defendant argues that the requested information qualifies as a "service record," defined by MCL 38.412(g) as those records that "contain fact statements on all matters relating to the character and quality of the work done and the attitude of the individual to his work." In support of its argument, defendant merely offers a generalized statement that "[c]ompensation and benefit information include facts related to the employee's work and attitude."[2]

The exemptions in the FOIA are to be narrowly construed, and the burden of proving their applicability rests with the public body. Booth Newspapers, Inc v Univ of Michigan Bd of Regents, 444 Mich 211, 232; 507 NW2d 422 (1993). To meet the burden of proving that public records are exempt from disclosure, the public body claiming the exemption should provide complete particularized justification, rather than simply repeat statutory language. Hyson v Dep't of Corrections, 205 Mich App 422, 424; 521 NW2d 841 (1994). Because defendant failed to support its claim with a complete particularized justification, it failed to carry its burden of showing that the requested records qualify as "service records."

Defendant also argues that MCL 38.412(g) does not define the term "employees' records" and that the plain meaning of the term encompasses the requested records. We disagree. A plain reading of the language of the statute shows that it does point to the definition of the term "employees' records" and excludes the requested records from its statutory exemption.

The primary goal of judicial interpretation of statutes is to give effect to the intent of the Legislature. Farrington v Total Petroleum, Inc, 442 Mich 201, 212; 501 NW2d 76 (1993). The first criterion in determining intent is the specific language of the statute. Indenbaum v Michigan

Bd of Medicine (After Remand), 213 Mich App 263, 270; 539 NW2d 574 (1995). The Legislature is presumed to have intended the meaning it plainly expressed. Id. In determining legislative intent, we look first at the words of the statute. Id. The words of the statute must be given their ordinary and plain meaning; only if the language is ambiguous may the courts look beyond the statute to determine the intent of the Legislature. DiBenedetto v West Shore Hosp, 461 Mich 394, 402; 605 NW2d 300 (2000). When statutory language is clear and unambiguous, this Court must honor the legislative intent as clearly indicated in that language. Western Michigan Univ Bd of Control v Michigan, 455 Mich 531, 538; 565 NW2d 828 (1997). No further construction is required or permitted. Id.

The statutory language at issue is the following sentence: "All such 'service records' and employees' records shall be confidential and not open for public inspection." MCL 38.412(g). Plaintiff argues that the word "such" modifies the term "employees' records." Defendant argues that it does not. The only logical conclusion that can be drawn from a reading of the sentence is that the word "such" modifies the term "employees' records" because of the absence of a separating comma after the term "service records" and before the connective word "and." Punctuation is an important factor in determining legislative intent, and the rules of grammar are presumed to have been known to the Legislature. Kizer v Livingston Co Board of Comm'rs, 38 Mich App 239, 251; 195 NW2d 884 (1972). Therefore, the absence of a separating comma before the connective conjunction suggests that the word "such" was intended to modify the term "employees' records."

The word "such" is not defined in the statute. Therefore, we look to the dictionary definition for its ordinary and plain meaning. DiBenedetto, supra at 402. The relevant dictionary definitions of the adjective "such" include "of the kind, character, degree . . . indicated or implied" or "being the . . . things indicated." Random House Webster's College Dictionary (1997). The word "such" is properly used as an adjective when reference has previously been made to a category of persons or things, meaning "of that kind." Garner, A Dictionary of Modern American Usage (Oxford University Press, 1998). Furthermore, "such" is a pointing word that must refer to a clear antecedent. Id. A pointing word should always have an identifiable referent. Id. A "pointing word" is a word like this, that, these, those, and it, which points directly to an antecedent. Id. An "antecedent" is a word, phrase, or clause that is replaced later by a pronoun or other substitute. Random House Webster's College Dictionary (1997). A reading of the sentence in question points directly to two antecedents: the "service records" in the immediately preceding paragraph, and the "roster of the employees of the county, together with a record of service, military or naval experience and such other matters as may have a bearing on promotion, transfer or discharge" in the immediately preceding sentence. Because it is clear that the term "service records" in the sentence at issue refers to the "service records" defined in the preceding paragraph in the statute, the only conclusion to be made is that the term "employees' records" in the sentence at issue is the term that the Legislature chose to describe the second antecedent. Contrary to defendant's contention that the term "employees' records" was not defined in the statute, we conclude that a plain reading of the statute shows that it is defined, albeit indirectly.

We reject defendant's argument that had the Legislature intended to restrict "employees' records" to the items described in the preceding sentence, the Act would have read "these records shall be confidential" or "the foregoing records shall be confidential." Defendant does not explain the basis of its conclusion that the above sentence structures are the only syntax usages that the Legislature employs or should employ.

We find no ambiguity in the language of MCL 38.412(g), and therefore we may not look beyond the statute to determine the intent of the Legislature. DiBenedetto, supra at 402. Thus, an "employee record" as defined by MCL 38.412(g) is a record that contains "a record of service, military or naval experience and such other matters as may have a bearing on promotion, transfer or discharge." Defendant failed to show that the requested records of employee job title, salary, paid or used sick and annual leave, mileage reimbursement or the use of assigned county vehicles, have "a bearing on promotion, transfer or discharge." Therefore, the requested records do not fall within the definition of "employees' records" pursuant to MCL 38.412(g), and are not exempt from FOIA disclosure.[3]

II

Defendant next argues that when the Legislature amended the FOIA, section 13a, MCL 15.243a,[4] to expressly require only the disclosure of the salaries of public education employees, it did not expressly include the disclosure of other public employee salaries, and, consequently, a negative inference may be made that the Legislature did not intend that the salaries of other government employees be disclosed to the public. We disagree.

The FOIA is an act requiring full disclosure of public records unless a statutory exemption precludes the disclosure of information. Messenger v Consumer & Industry Services, 238 Mich App 524, 531; 606 NW2d 38 (1999); MCL 15.243(1)(d). Rather than specifying which records would be subject to disclosure, the Legislature chose to provide that, unless expressly exempt under Section 13 of the FOIA, all public records are subject to public disclosure. Penokie v Michigan Technological Univ, 93 Mich App 650, 657; 287 NW2d 304 (1979).

Here, it is undisputed that salary information of Wayne County employees are public records. However, defendant cites no statutory exemption that expressly exempts the release of [3] We do not address here the issue whether the disclosure of the requested information would constitute an invasion of individual privacy, subsection 13(1)(a) of the FOIA, MCL 15.243(1)(a), because defendant does not raise it on appeal. We note, however, that defense counsel alluded to the question during oral argument.

[4] Section 13a of MCL 15.243a reads as follows:

> Notwithstanding section 13, an institution of higher education established under section 5, 6, or 7 of article 8 of the state constitution of 1963; a school district as defined in section 6 of Act No. 451 of the Public Acts of 1976, being section 380.6 of the Michigan Compiled Laws; an intermediate school district as defined in section 4 of Act No. 451 of the Public Acts of 1976, being section 380.4 of the Michigan Compiled Laws; or a community college established under Act No. 331 of the Public Acts of 1966, as amended, being sections 389.1 to 389.195 of the Michigan Compiled Laws shall upon request make available to the public the salary records of an employee or other official of the institution of higher education, school district, intermediate school district, or community college. the Wayne County employee salaries, other than MCL 38.412(g), which, as previously discussed, is inapplicable. In construing a statute, a court may consider a variety of factors and apply principles of statutory construction, but should not ignore common sense. Marquis v Hartford Accident & Indemnity (After Remand), 444 Mich 638, 644; 513 NW2d 799 (1994). Common sense dictates that the manner in which Wayne County allocates taxpayer monies in the form of salaries is "information regarding the affairs of government and the official acts of those who represent [the people] as public officials and public employees." MCL 15.231(2).

The Legislature enacted 1979 PA 130, effective October 26, 1979, which amended the FOIA by adding Section 13a, MCL 15.243a. Penokie, supra at 664 n 7. The addition mandates the disclosure of the salary records of employees of institutions of higher education, school districts, intermediate school districts and community colleges. MCL 15.243a. In Penokie, this Court noted that MCL 15.432a represents a clarification of, rather than a substantive change in, prior law.[5] Id. at 664 n 7. The legislative history of the amendment indicates that the purpose of the amendment was to remove from the public educational institutions the discretion whether to disclose salary information, and make the disclosure mandatory pursuant to the FOIA. As noted in the House Legislative Analysis Section regarding the release of school salary information, the proponents of the bill argued that because other public employee salary information was available, there was no reason to provide an exemption for the disclosure of school teacher salaries. Thus, because the FOIA does not expressly exempt the disclosure of records of public employee salaries, defendant's argument is without merit.

Affirmed.

[5] It must be noted here that the Legislature enacted MCL 15.234a subsequently to the decision in Penokie, but prior to the release date of the opinion. Penokie, supra at 664 n 7. The issue in Penokie was the disclosure of salary records of university employees pursuant to the privacy provision of FOIA, MCL 15.243(1)(a).

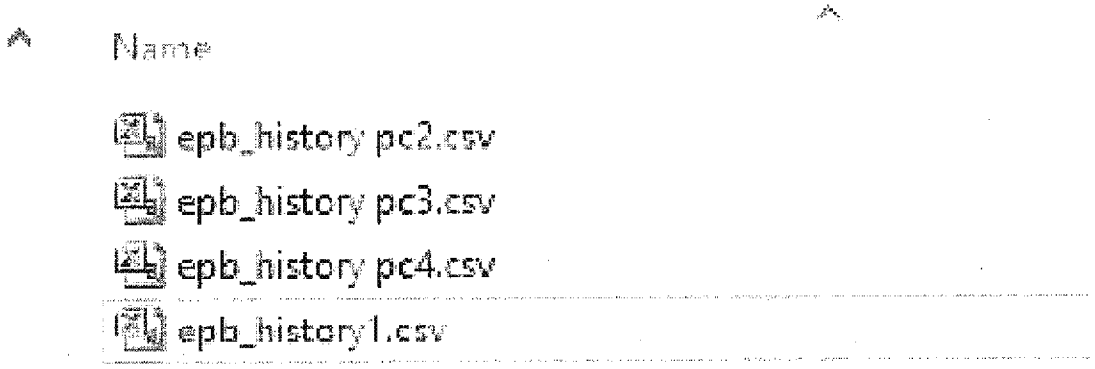
Re: Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA") Request

Dear Jennifer Zelmanski:

Per the Freedom of Information Act, please provide a copy of the extract files from the electronic poll books (EPBs) for all registrants at all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the elections concluding November 8, 2022 and May 2, 2023. These files should be in .CSV or .XLS format and typically have a file name beginning with "EPB_History" (see below screenshot).



Please note that these files likely contain the full birthdate (month, day and year) and driver's license number of the registrants in your jurisdiction, which is exempt from FOIA release (MCL 168.509gg). Therefore, please open the copy of the digital file(s), remove or redact the birth month, birth day and drivers license number information, and save your changes before sending the file(s) to me. If you are able to retain the year of birth for the registrants as is permissible per MCL 168.509gg, it will be greatly appreciated.

Instructions on how to locate the requested information is available on pages 40-41 of the Electronic Poll Book Refresh Manual provided by the Michigan Board of Elections. These pages are included in Exhibit 1 below for your convenience.

Once the above redactions have been made, there should be no other FOIA exempt information in the EPB digital records requested. I am not requesting any software or information which would somehow be deemed proprietary. I am only requesting public record information as is my right.

Please note that the EPB .CSV files are an original record and a component of the electronic voting system audit trail. As such, these digital records should be retained by your office for a federal minimum of 22 months (52 USC 207) and a state minimum of 24 months (MCL 168.811).

I prefer to receive the requested information via email as a file attachment. If email is unavailable, please contact me to coordinate an alternative method to fulfill my FOIA request since I would be happy to bring a USB drive to your office so that you or your staff can copy the file(s) to.

Please don't hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

Thank you.

Subject: FOIA Request for Electronic Poll Book public records for 11/8/2022 and 5/2/2023 Elections

CAUTION: This is an External email. Please send suspicious emails to abuse@michigan.gov

Greetings,

I hereby request a comma separated electronic version (CSV) or Microsoft Excel workbook file version (XLS) of the information recorded in the Electronic Poll Book for each voting jurisdiction within Macomb County for the November 8, 2022 and May 2, 2023 elections. As stated in USC 52, 20701, the federal retention period for election materials is 22 months following the final canvass, and the State of Michigan retention period is 24 months following final canvass as stated in MCL 168.811.

Below are the specific data elements requested:

1. Voter full name (First, Middle, Last, Suffix)
2. Voter ID
3. Voter number
4. Voter ballot number
5. Date/time of poll book record entry
6. Voter ballot type
7. Voter school district code
8. Voter birth year
9. Precinct
10. Action Description
    a. Issue Regular ballot
    b. Record AV Ballot
    c. UNDO: Issue Regular Ballot
    d. Spoil Ballot
    e. Add standalone remark
    f. Other?
11. Is Undone (True or False)
12. Unlisted voter name (if applicable)

This request includes absentee voter counting boards within Macomb County.

I recognize that the Electronic Pollbook contains personal information that is exempt from disclosure per MCL168.509gg such as driver's license number, day of birth and month of birth. Please redact this information as is required in fulfilling this request.

Please understand that I have no desire to obtain any details relating to cybersecurity plans, cyber security methods, voting software coding, voting software infrastructure, voting software configuration

_____/

AFFIDAVIT OF DIRECTOR OF ELECTIONS JONATHAN BRATER

I, Jonathan Brater, state as follows:

1. I have been employed by the Department of State as Director of Elections since January 2, 2020, and in such capacity serve as Director of the Bureau of Elections (Bureau).

2. I bring this declaration in support of Defendant Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson's motion for summary disposition.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

3. I am personally knowledgeable of the programming and operation of electronic poll books (EPB) and the instructions to election officials for the operation of EPBs, as well as associated laws and retention schedules.

ELECTRONIC POLL BOOK (EPB) PROCEDURES

4. The Department of State's Bureau of Elections developed the computer software in the EPB as a tool for local clerks and election inspectors to assist in election day operations. MCL 168.668b. The EPB contains built-in security to protect the integrity of our elections and the privacy of voters.

5. The Bureau of Elections provided each precinct with a laptop computer, encrypted flash drive, a mouse, a magnetic card reader, and a case to administer the EPB program (hereafter also referred to as "software"). Clerks can also buy their own compatible laptop and download the EPB software onto that laptop; clerks can also buy their own compatible peripheral devices such as encrypted flash drives. (Attachment A, Electronic Pollbook Refresh Clerk's Manual for Windows 10 & BitLocker Flash Drives, p 5.)

6. The Bureau of Elections' laptop containing the EPB software and encrypted flash drive are essential components to protecting sensitive voter information.

7. Clerks are instructed to use the EPB software to download files from the Qualified Voter File (QVF) after 4 p.m. on the day before the election to ensure an accurate voter list is downloaded (with the exception of the City of Detroit, which may begin downloading on the Saturday before the election). MCL 168.668b.

8. The EPB software takes the live voter registration data in the QVF and generates an offline voter list for election day that allows election inspectors to easily look-up voters and assign ballot numbers.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

9. To ensure security of the EPB software and voter information, clerks are directed to create an EPB login for each election inspector on election day.

10. The EPB is used on election day to process voters by assigning ballots, verifying voter information, and recording voter history (which helps prevent double voting). The EPB contains a status "flag" for any voter that has an issue, such as an outstanding absentee ballot, that needs to be addressed before voting in-person. (Election Officials' Manual, Chapter 11, p 11.)[1]

11. The EPB software allows election inspectors to make notations for spoiled ballots, surrendered absentee ballots, rejected ballots, challenged ballots, and provisional ballots to ensure accurate reports are generated after the polls close. (Managing Your Precinct on Election Day Election Inspectors' Procedure Manual, p 38.)[2]

12. After the polls close on election day, the clerks are instructed to save data in the EPB software to the flash drive and generate and print reports for the paper binder pollbook.

13. The EPB software generates the three reports necessary to print and complete the paper binder pollbook/official record for each precinct. These reports are the Ballot Summary, Voter List, and the Remarks report. (Election Officials' Manual, Chapter 12, p 19.)[3]

14. The Ballot Summary report generates a breakdown of all ballots that were processed at that precinct. This includes tabulated, absentee, spoiled, defective, rejected, provisional ballots, and unused ballots at that precinct. This report is saved to the encrypted flash drive.

15. The Remarks Summary report includes all remarks entered by election inspectors on election day. This allows any unusual circumstances for which there is not another recording function in the EPB to be documented and saved to the encrypted flash drive.

16. The Voter List report identifies the voters at the precinct and the type of ballot that they were issued. This is downloaded and saved to the encrypted flash drive. Notably, the list of voters who appeared at the precinct can also be determined by reviewing the paper applications to vote completed by voters who vote at the precinct; these paper applications are also saved. (Attachment A, Electronic Pollbook Refresh Clerk's Manual for Windows 10 & BitLocker Flash Drives, p 38.)

17. Paper reports are printed either at the precinct or the receiving board. If the election inspectors at the precinct do not print the report at the precinct, the electronic copy of the report is sent to a designated receiving board that prints the files and creates the paper binder pollbook or official record. (Election Officials Manual, Chapter 12, p 19.)[4]

18. Within seven days after election day, the clerk or designated QVF users must upload data from the encrypted flash drive into QVF. This uploads voter history for each voter on the EPB voter list into the voter's QVF record. (Attachment A, Electronic Pollbook Refresh Clerk's Manual for Windows 10 & BitLocker Flash Drives, p 46.)

19. Clerks or designated QVF users are instructed to, after uploading data to QVF, delete the EPB software and associated files from all devices, including the laptop and encrypted flash drive, by the seventh day following the final (state or county, as applicable) canvass unless there is a court order to preserve the documents; the Secretary of State requests the data be preserved; or there is a pending recount. Deleting the EPB software and data is only done after paper copies have been printed and the information has been uploaded to the QVF. Retention of these documents satisfies the requirements that election returns and records be preserved under MCL 168.811 and 52 US 20701. Only after these records are preserved are the software and data file copies deleted from the encrypted flash drives. (Attachment A, p 48.)

20. Deleting the EPB software and associated data is essential to ensure the security of voter information because the EPB data includes personal identifying information for voters. Deleting the EPB is also essential in preventing outdated versions of the software or data files from being used accidentally in subsequent elections, which could lead to errors or out-of-date voter data appearing in the electronic pollbook.

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT REQUESTS

21. On February 12, 2021, prior to the FOIA requests by the Plaintiff, the Bureau of Elections sent a communication to County Clerks reminding them that the EPB software provided by the Bureau of Elections contains sensitive voter information that should be deleted absent one of the exceptions noted in the EPB manual. (Attachment B, 2/12/21 memo.) This instruction was provided in a memorandum to clerks, a routine communication that had been sent after elections for many years. (Attachment A, Electronic Pollbook Refresh Clerk's Manual for Windows 10 & BitLocker Flash Drives, p 3, 48.)

22. On November 14, 2022, Bureau or Elections staff emailed local clerks regarding FOIA requests concerning the EPB. The email instructed clerks to consult with their local

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

attorney but indicated that "some" of the information being requested may be exempt from the FOIA requests. (Attachment C, 11/14/22 email.)

23. Beginning May 2023, Plaintiff began requesting documents under the Freedom of Information Act from local clerks for the November 2022 election and the May 2023 election. The requests specifically included the extracted files from the EPB, which includes the EPB software used for the EPB program. The request was made for the files to be sent in either .CSV or .XLS formats. Similar requests were and had been occurring around the state.

24. On May 13, 2023, Plaintiff sent a similar FOIA request to the Department of State for the EPB history of all precincts in Macomb County for elections held in November 2022 and May 2023.

25. The EPB software and files that clerks download and use temporarily for each election do not enable clerks to ensure that all information that should not be shared in a FOIA request can be removed before data or files are shared. Clerks can run reports in a .CSV file, but the file will contain personal identifying information that must be carefully removed. The disclosure of personal identifying information for voters not only threatens the privacy of voters but also increases the likelihood this data could be misused to compromise the security of the electoral system. Further, even assuming clerks can remove all personal identifying information, the release would also include propriety software information, security feature information, and sensitive information, the release of which could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(d), (y), (z), MCL 168.509gg.

26. Because of the complexity of these new types of FOIA requests, concerns over the security of the EPB software and personal identifying information of voters being disclosed, and the limited ability of clerks to ensure this information is not disclosed while responding to FOIA requests, the Bureau of Elections began instructing local clerks to not release the information and to direct requestors to the Bureau of Elections. (Attachment D, July 2023 memo.)

27. The Bureau of Elections has the capability to convert the .CSV files from the EPB to .XLS files and not disclose the information that is exempt from FOIA.

28. On September 6, 2023, the Bureau of Elections sent the Plaintiff a thumb drive containing .XLS files in response to his May 13th FOIA request.

29. The thumb drive sent to the Plaintiff included EPB history for all jurisdictions in Macomb County specific to the November 2022 election, including the jurisdictions at issue in the consolidated cases.

30. Additionally, the thumb drive included EPB history for only the jurisdictions in Macomb County that held May 2023 elections, including the Cities of Roseville, Centerline, Warren, and Sterling Heights, and for Richmond, Bruce, Macomb, Shelby, Washington, and Clinton Townships.

31. This declaration is based on personal knowledge. If called as a witness, I can testify competently to the facts stated in this declaration.

Introduction to the Electronic Pollbook

The Bureau of Elections developed computer software that can be used in the polling place on Election Day to process voters and generate precinct reports. The electronic pollbook (EPB) software is downloaded from the Qualified Voter File (QVF) software and is loaded to a laptop prior to each election. Once the EPB software is loaded on the laptop, the software allows election inspectors to look up a voter's registration record, confirm their registration is correct, and assign a ballot to that voter, essentially automating the typical paper process. After the election is complete, the EPB software will generate reports to complete the official precinct record (paper binder pollbook) and a voter history file that can be uploaded into the QVF to update voter history in a matter of minutes.

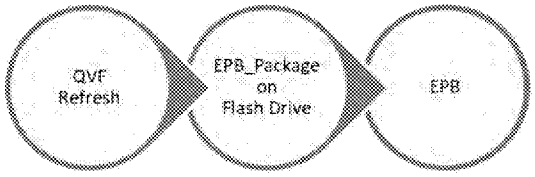
Key Features

- ☆ Access current voter registration and absent voter information in the precincts (from the day prior to the election, in most cases)
- ☆ Locate a voter's registration record by swiping their driver's license with a magnetic card reader
- ☆ Assign and record the voter's ballot immediately upon registration confirmation
- ☆ Look up voters registered within the jurisdiction but not in the assigned precinct
- ☆ Print accurate reports, including a calculated ballot summary, the list of voters, and remarks
- ☆ Upload voting history quickly and accurately

Important Considerations

Maintain security throughout the EPB process by using an encrypted flash drive. The flash drive must be password protected, and passwords should never be kept with flash drives. The encrypted flash drive must be used to transfer files back and forth between the QVF computer and the EPB laptop.

Pre-election file transfer: QVF to EPB



Post-election file transfer: EPB to QVF

The laptop must not be connected to any networks (must be in "airplane mode" with Wi-Fi disabled) when the EPB software is installed on the laptop. Windows Updates and antivirus updates must be done regularly between elections.

It is also important to understand when to delete files. After uploading EPB data to QVF and ensuring a paper copy of EPB files has been retained, delete all EPB files seven days after the final canvass (unless there is a pending recount, court challenge, or audit/Secretary of State order). This keeps voter data secure and prevents the wrong files from being used in future elections.

Most importantly, practice! Walking through the manual well before every election will ensure you understand the features of the EPB software and will prepare you for successful implementation come election day. Remember it is important to delete all practice files, too!

Getting Started: Pre-Election Day Tasks

The Bureau of Elections Electronic Pollbook (EPB) program provided each precinct with a laptop computer, an encrypted flash drive, a mouse, a magnetic card reader, and a case. Install and update antivirus software and printer driver software (if applicable) well in advance of the first election. Take time to perform these steps prior to installing EPB software.

Gather and Prepare Electronic Pollbook Equipment

Review and complete these tasks well before Election Day. Most are one time installations but can be time consuming. Please ensure you have completed the tasks prior to installing the EPB software.

1. Wireless internet access – Connect the laptop to the internet periodically to perform the necessary software and antivirus updates before election day; however, the laptop must be in airplane mode with Wi-Fi disabled on election day. To verify airplane mode is enabled, click the notifications icon, and make sure the Airplane mode is blue and that the Wi-Fi button is gray.

2. Laptop Security - You must maintain a secure laptop. This includes turning on the Windows firewall and installing and updating antivirus software. Load antivirus software (any commercially available antivirus product is acceptable) on each EPB laptop, update and regularly run the antivirus update, and scan at least once within a week of an election on the laptop and flash drive. The closer it is run to Election Day, the better. Keep in mind, antivirus software is updated frequently. If the laptop has been in storage for a long time, it may be quicker to uninstall the antivirus software and reinstall versus loading updates.

3. Printer driver software - If inspectors or the receiving board will print reports from the EPB laptop, select any standard printer and install its printer driver software on the laptop prior to election day. Printer driver software may be on a CD, but many laptops do not have CD drives so the software will have to be installed through the wireless internet connection or by saving the software to a flash drive. The printer will come with instructions on how to install printer driver software. Print a test document from the laptop to ensure the software was installed properly.

4. Windows Updates – The Windows operating system is updated on a regular basis. Budget time to download and install the updates prior to Election Day. To find updates, make sure the laptop is connected to the internet; then, click on the Windows Home button, click Settings, click Update & Security, click Windows Update, and click Check for Updates. Perform this task often to avoid long updates.

5. Batteries – Charge laptop batteries fully prior to use on Election Day.

6. Check for old data – There should not be an Electronic Pollbook installed on your laptop when you begin to prepare for the next election. Check for the EPB desktop icon and if a prior installation is present, use the uninstall feature to remove it.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

7. Install New Laptop Files– Each new laptop which has never had EPB installed on it needs to have EPB New Laptop Files installed. This may be done as part of the first test export of EPB (by just checking the box) or as a separate task (by checking the box to get the blue button and clicking the blue button to start their download), but these files typically only need to be installed once. EPB New Laptop Files do not contain election- or voter-specific data and will not be uninstalled by the Uninstall EPB tool. See p. 13 for information about installing as part of the first EPB download; see p. 50 for information about downloading, unzipping, and installing only prerequisites if you prefer to do this step separately. This process ensures faster Election Night downloads without prerequisites.

Review Election Details in QVF

You must download the EPB files after 4 p.m. on the Monday before the election unless the jurisdiction has more than 50 precincts; jurisdictions with more than 50 precincts that download earlier must provide a supplemental list of absent voter ballots issued after the EPB download to the precinct(s), and elections inspectors must check that list for each voter. There is not a way to add absent voter information electronically after the EPB download. Please practice the following steps prior to Election Day.

Set Up Election Geography in QVF

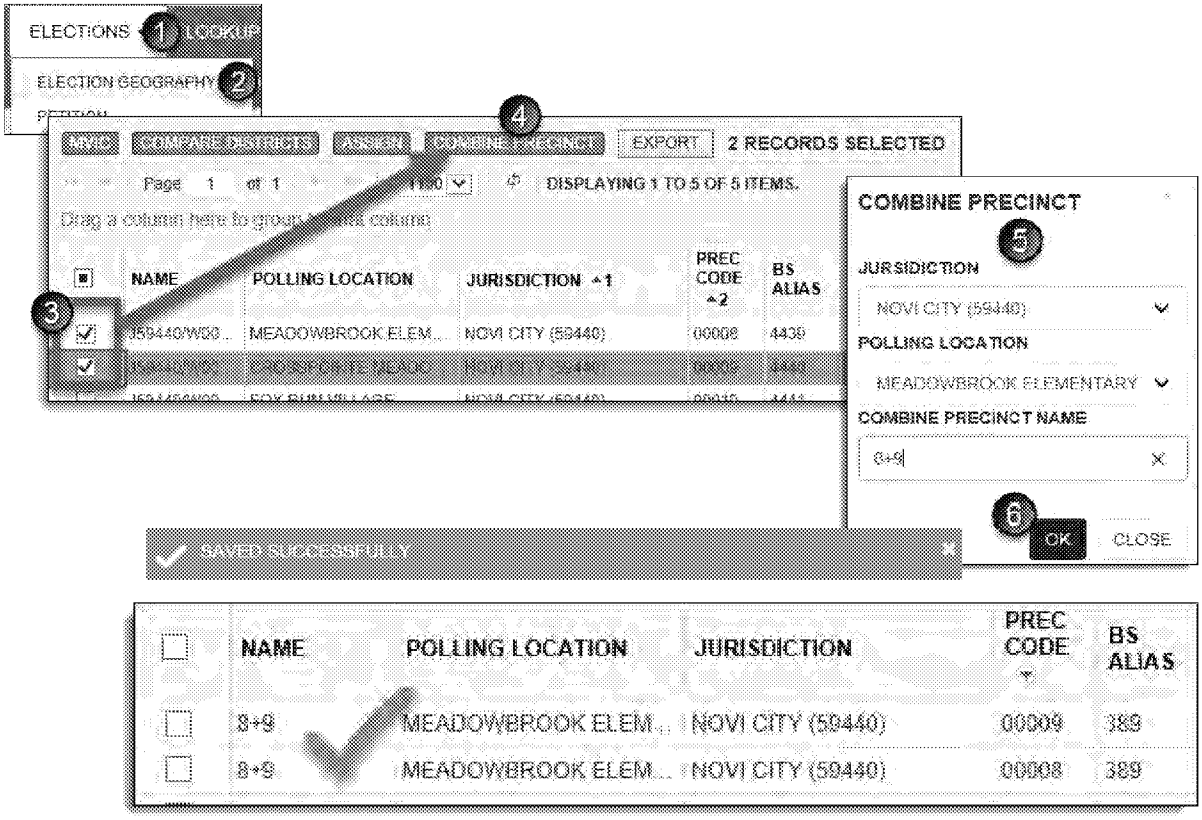
Review QVF Election Details

Prior to export, ensure Election Geography settings have been previously set in QVF (either by your County Clerk or yourself). If using combined precincts, see below. If using temporary polling locations or split precincts with more than one ballot style, see the next page.

Create a Combined Precinct for a Consolidated Election:

1. Click Elections
2. Click Election Geography
3. Select the rows for the distinct political areas (DPA) you wish to consolidate
4. Click Combine Precinct
5. Make desired changes to Polling Location and/or Combine Precinct Name
6. Click OK

A green banner appears when the changes have been saved successfully. Note the changes applied to the DPAs for the selected election.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Change a Polling Location, Assign a Ballot Style Alias, and to Assign a Counting Board:

1. Click Elections
2. Click Election Geography
3. Find the row for the distinct political area (DPA) you wish to update and click Edit
4. Make the desired changes to the appropriate fields and click Save

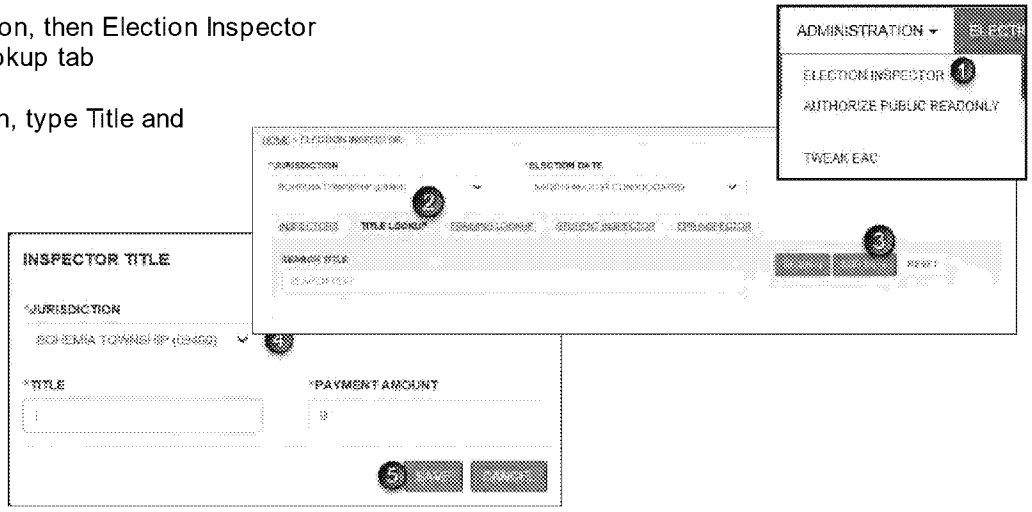
EPB Inspectors in QVF (This Step is Required)

Prior to exporting the EPB, QVF Complete users must work in QVF to mark voters as Election Inspectors (as well as add those who are ineligible to register to vote as "Student Inspectors") and indicate whether they will be an Electronic Pollbook user. Once you flag an inspector as "Is EPB," you can create their EPB username and password in QVF and the accounts will be part of the EPB export and setup file. You must now set up at least one admin and at least one non-admin user in QVF prior to download. You have been provided EPBAdmin and EPBUser accounts to which you may assign passwords.

An administrative EPB user (EPBAdmin) may still create additional EPB user accounts in the EPB software after the program is installed on the laptop. For those instructions, refer to "Preparing the Software for Election Day Use."

Set up Election Inspector Titles (if not already set up for your jurisdiction):

1. Click Administration, then Election Inspector
2. Click the Title Lookup tab
3. Click Add Title
4. Select Jurisdiction, type Title and Payment Amount
5. Click Save



Add a user before exporting the EPB files:

1. Search for voter in Voter Search
2. Open voter by clicking "edit"
3. Go to inspector tab on voter
4. Check the "Is Active" and "Is EPB" boxes
5. If creating a new inspector, fill in the required fields and add other contact information
6. Click Save

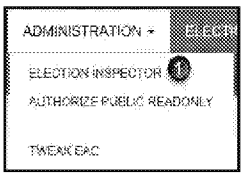
Once an inspector has been flagged as "Is EPB" their EPB username and password can be created in QVF's Election Inspector module, but you should also assign the inspector to a precinct.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

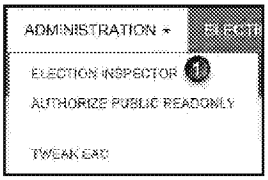
Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Assign an inspector to a precinct:

1. Click Administration and Election Inspector
2. Select the Precinct Type and Precinct
3. Check box(es) to select and highlight Inspector(s)
4. Click the double-arrow to assign inspector(s) to precinct

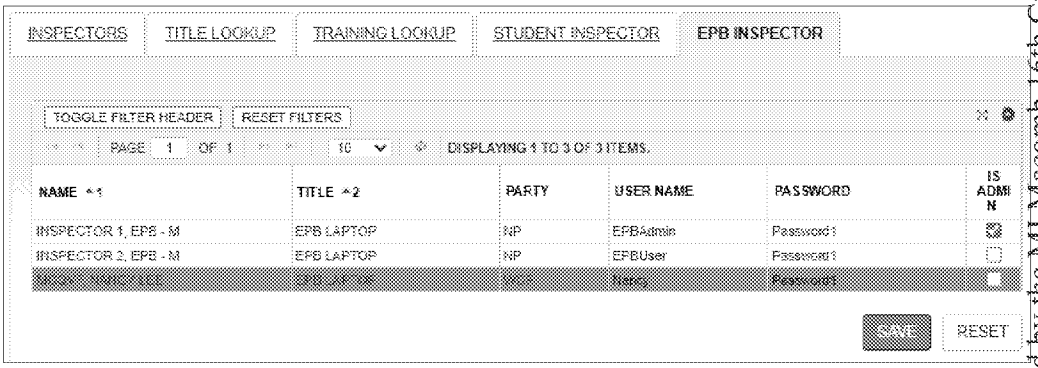


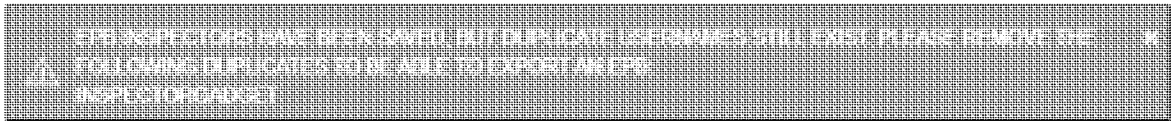
REQUIRED: Create EPB usernames and passwords in QVF prior to download:



1. From the Administration menu, select Election Inspector
2. Click the EPB Inspector tab in the Election Inspector module
3. With your mouse, click in the username and password fields for each inspector to finish creating their EPB accounts.
   a. The username is not case sensitive.
   b. The password is case sensitive and must meet the criteria for a strong password: 8-16 characters long, mixed case, and at least one number. You cannot use the sample password of Password1.
4. Click Save

The Bureau of Elections requires using a unique username for each EPB Inspector and recommends using a unique "pass phrase" for each EPB election inspector. A warning will appear upon clicking Save if duplicate usernames have been assigned.





Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

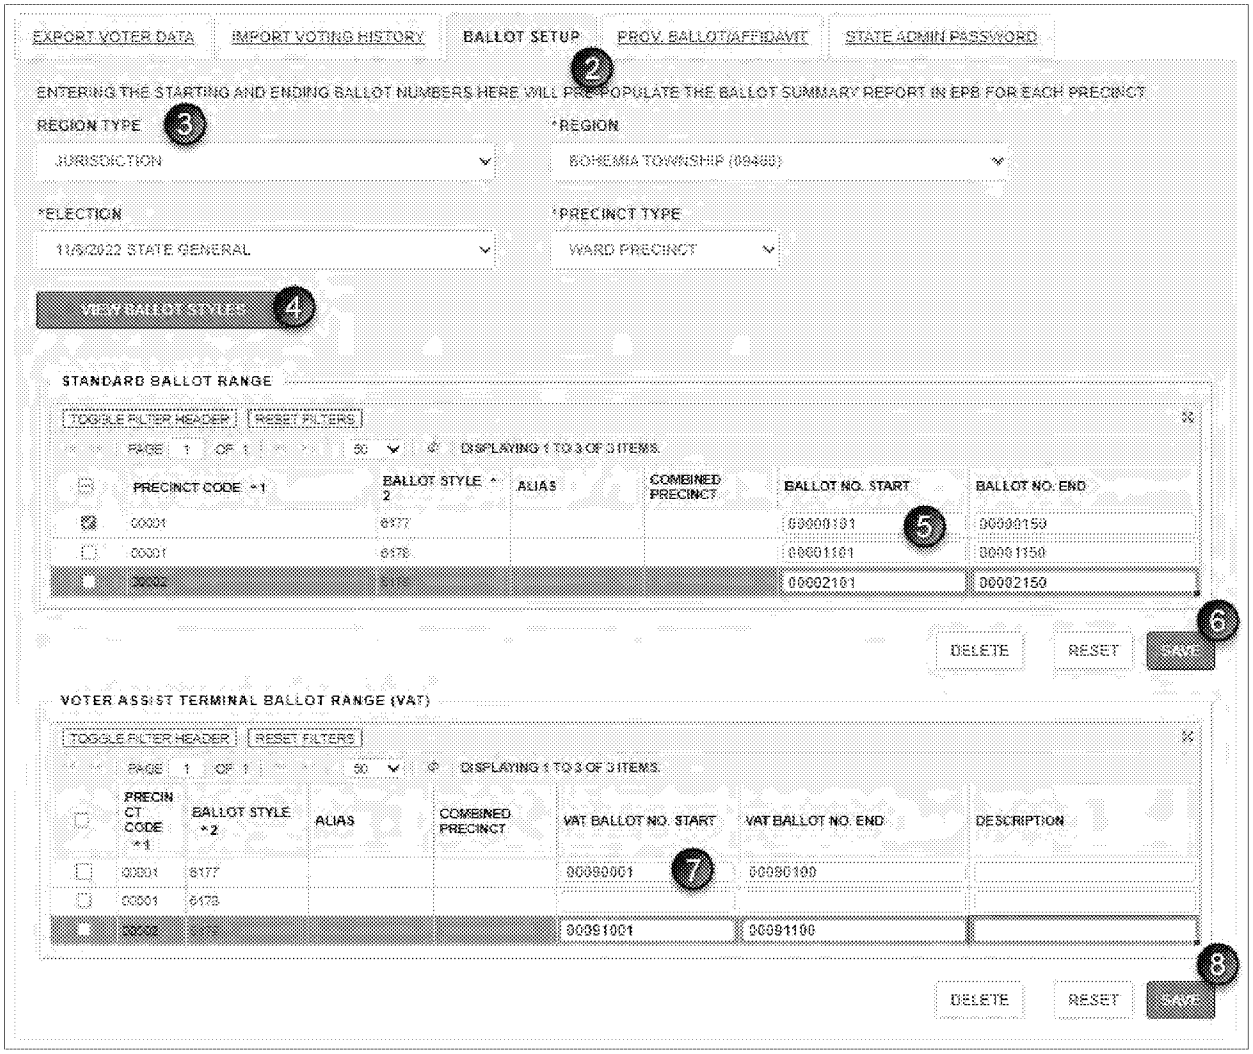
(Optional Step) Set up Ballot Style Number Ranges in QVF

QVF Complete and Basic users may use Ballot Setup to enter their ballot number ranges to prepopulate their EPB Ballot Summary line A.

This is an optional setup step and numbers can always be added or corrected in the EPB Ballot Summary.

To Set Up Ballot Style Number Ranges (for Ballot Summary Line A) in QVF prior to download:

1. Click Elections, then Electronic Pollbook
2. Click the Ballot Setup tab
3. Select Region Type, Region, Election, and Precinct Type (if not present from Preferences)
4. Click View Ballot Styles
5. Click into a field and enter starting and ending ballot numbers for each style, tabbing between fields
6. Click Save
7. Voter Assist Terminal (VAT) ranges are only needed where VAT ballots stock has ballot numbers printed
8. Click Save, if needed



After these steps are completed, you can proceed to Download the EPB Software.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Download the EPB Software

The QVF software creates the EPB software, essentially taking the voter registration data in QVF and putting it in an easy-to-use, offline format for election inspectors to use on a laptop. Remember, most jurisdictions must download the EPB software after 4 p.m. on the Monday prior to the election. There is not a way to add absent voter information electronically after the EPB download. Practice the following steps prior to Election Day to

- create an Election Day folder on your desktop
- export the EPB software
- extract zipped files, and
- copy the files you need to your flash drives

Please note download and extraction instructions vary slightly depending on whether QVF users are in jurisdictions with more than one precinct or in jurisdictions with one precinct.

Create an Election Date folder on your QVF computer's Desktop to keep your E-Pollbook files organized, especially if you have more than one precinct. You will copy and paste the folder to each precinct's flash drive.

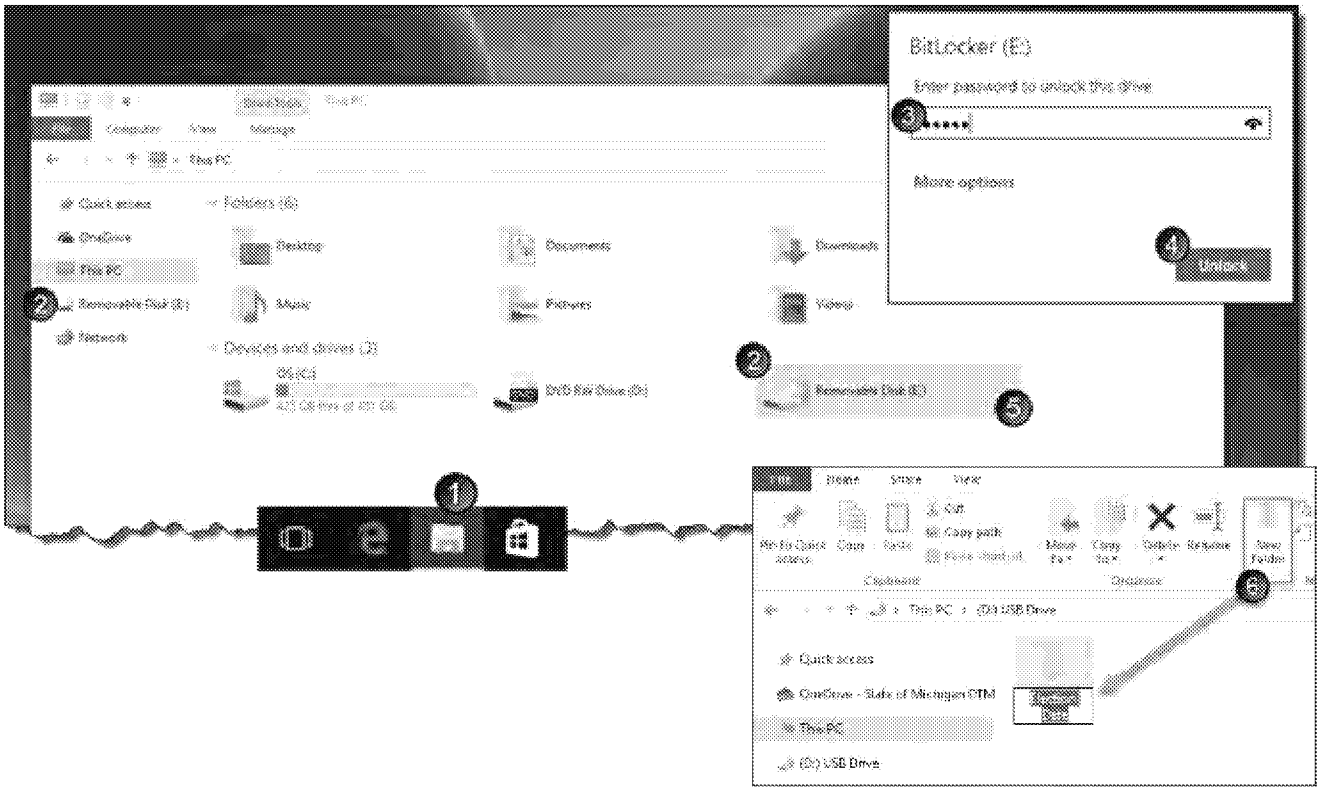
1. Using your mouse, right-click on the Desktop
2. Go to New
3. Left click Folder
4. Name the folder after the election date (for example: Nov2021EPB, NovEPBTest….)

Insert the encrypted flash drive into a USB port and unlock by entering the password.

To log into the flash drive, insert it into a USB port and:

* If a window saying "…is not accessible. Access is denied" appears, click OK

1. Click the Windows Explorer folder icon
2. Click Removable Disk (E:)
3. Enter the password
4. Click Unlock
5. Double click the Removable Disk (E:)
6. Create a New Folder with the Election Date



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Export EPB software

NOTE: Export the EPB file once per jurisdiction, extract files, and then copy to each precinct's flash drive.

To export the EPB software, login to QVF and:

1. Open the Elections menu and select Electronic Pollbook
2. Select the correct Jurisdiction from the drop-down menus.
3. Select the correct Election Date from the drop-down menu if not already populated from Preferences.

4. Select the precinct type and select all precincts. Combined Precinct is the default; you may change if not using combined precincts. Note: combined precincts must be setup in the QVF Election Geography module (see Election Geography section in this manual) prior to this download.
5. Export Type defaults to Poll Book. Only change this selection to Greeting App when using that app.
6. Select the options you want enabled on the e-Pollbook for use in the polls. By default, Auto-Increment and Lockout are already enabled.
   a. Allow recording of absentee ballots: Check this box to process absentee ballots in the precinct(s) on Election Day.
   b. Auto-Increment: This option tells the software to auto fill the ballot number box with the next ballot number. Unchecking this box requires election inspectors to enter the ballot number for each transaction.
   c. Auto-Increment VAT: This enables auto-increment for a separate ballot style/number range of Voter Assist Terminal ballots.
   d. Lockout: This option prevents the issuance of a ballot number for each ballot style to multiple voters.
   e. Lockout VAT: This option includes VAT number series as a ballot style in the lockout function to avoid duplication of a VAT ballot number.
   f. Confirm Issued and Recorded Ballots: This option enables the confirmation screen in EPB reiterating the voter name, voter number, and ballot number issued.
   g. Setting Up New Laptop: This option should only be enabled for installations on new EPB laptops which have never had EPB installed before unless you have already tried installing and are encountering errors. Checking the box includes those files with the download upon clicking Export, or the blue button becomes available for a separate download if that is preferred (see p. 47 for step-by-step instructions).

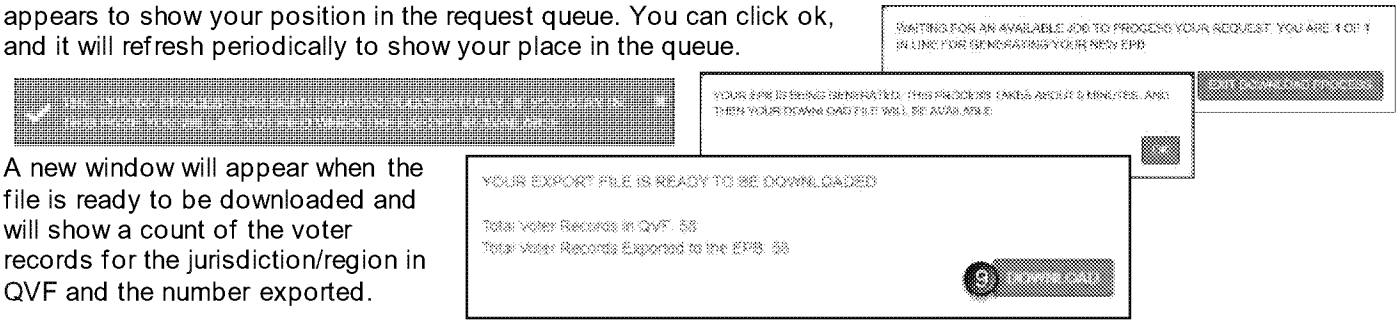
7. Create a strong Encryption Password that is different from the sample password.
   a. A strong password contains 8-16 characters, mixed case (lower-case and upper-case letters), and at least one number.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

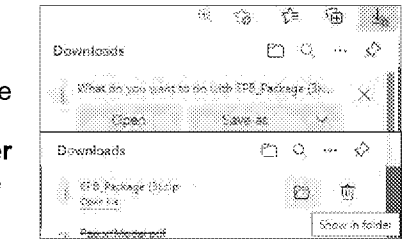
8. Click Export and a message appears, reminding you that it is now required to set up at least two EPB Inspectors prior to download. To review, click Check EPB Inspectors (and see p. 8-9); if you have already set them up, and are ready to proceed, click Continue.

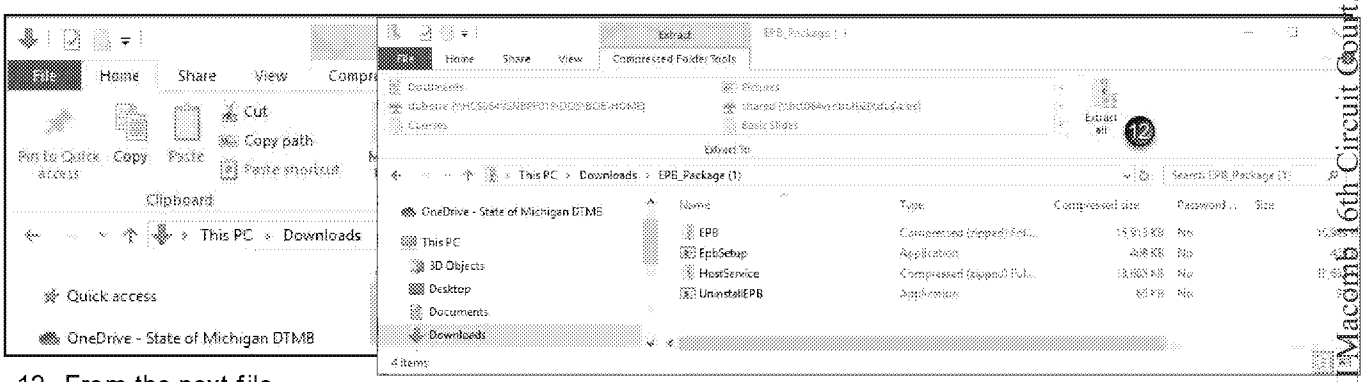
A temporary green message appears, confirming the request has been received and you will be notified when the export is available for download. Another window appears to show your position in the request queue. You can click ok, and it will refresh periodically to show your place in the queue.



A new window will appear when the file is ready to be downloaded and will show a count of the voter records for the jurisdiction/region in QVF and the number exported.

9. Click Download. (If in Edge, you may click Save As and redirect download to Desktop>[Election Date] folder, or you may let the file download in its default destination.) When the download is complete, the web browser will have a notification at the top or bottom of the screen.
10. Click the arrow or folder next to the download and select Show in folder to verify that the EPB_Package.zip file has been saved correctly (to the default download location, usually to the Downloads folder in Chrome) and proceed to decompress (unzip) the zipped file folder.
11. From the "Open" menu, select Windows Explorer (unless your screen already looks like step 12 below). (Note that if you have exported this before and didn't delete prior versions as recommended, your subsequent files named "EPB_Package" will have numbers in the file names. In a time crunch, work with the newest one and clean up soon but not now.)



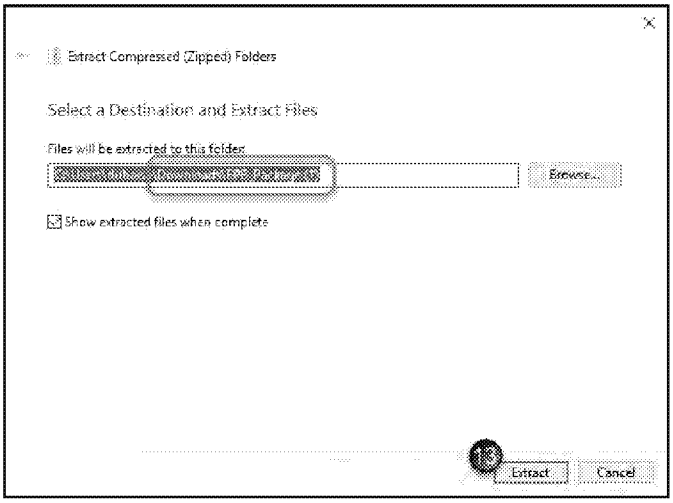


12. From the next file explorer window that opens, click Extract All.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

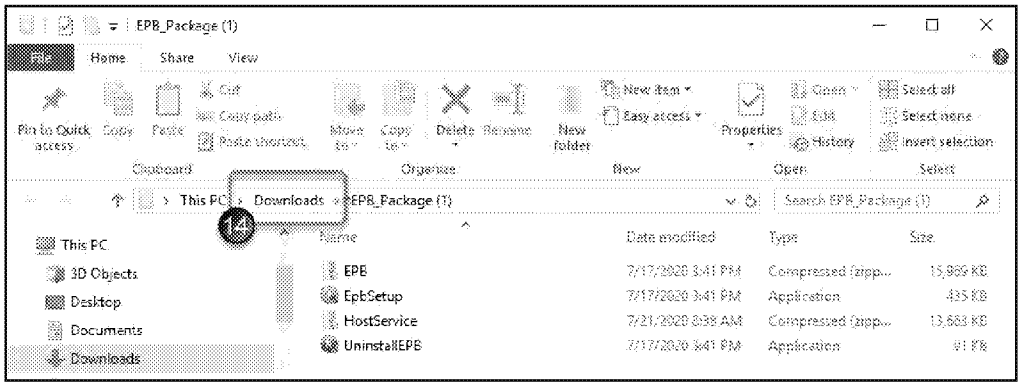
13. From the Extract Compressed (Zipped) Folders window, click Extract. The extracted EPB_Package folder will be saved to the location specified (which should default to the same Downloads folder.

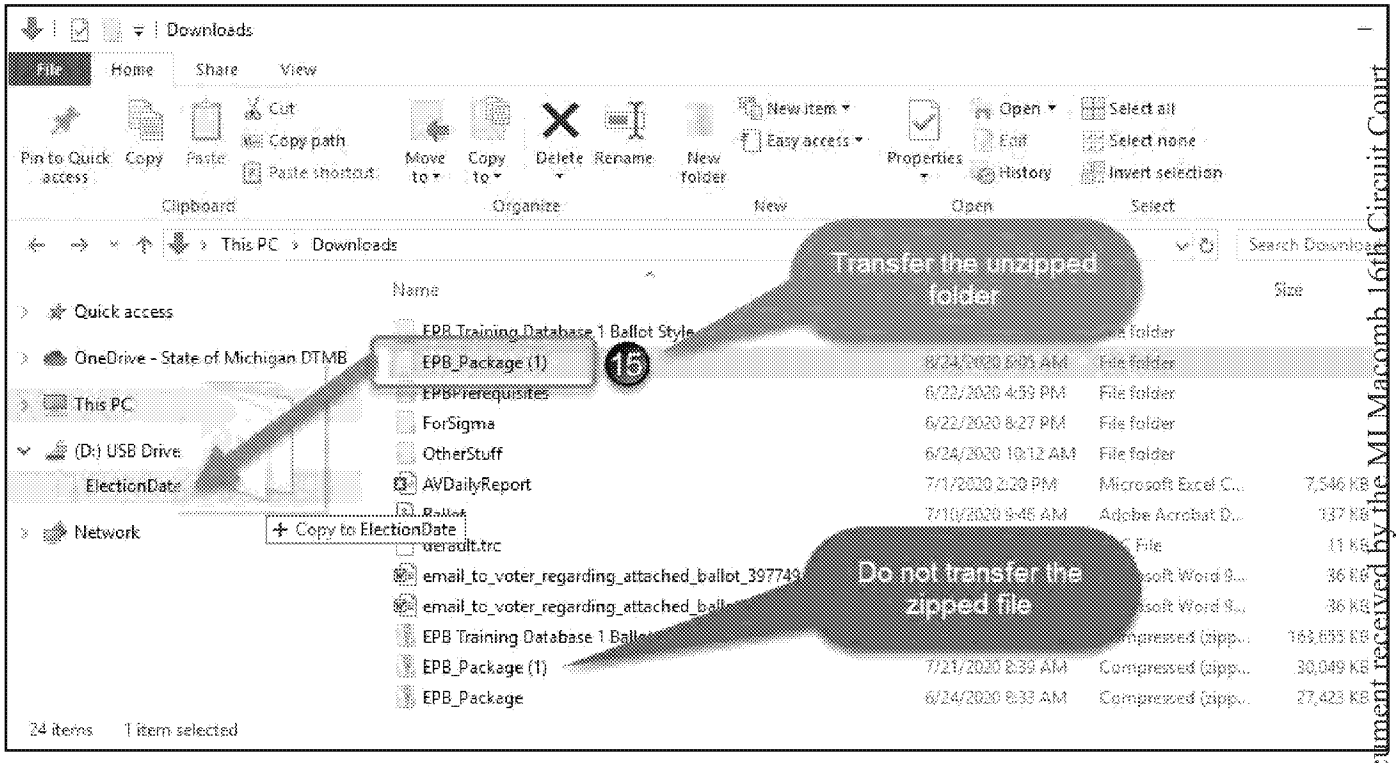


14. Click on the name of the Downloads folder to go up a level in the flash drive. You will see the original zipped folder and the uncompressed/ unzipped EPB_Package folder.

15. Copy and paste the unzipped EPB_Package folder to the Election Date folder on the encrypted flash drive. When the copy is complete, remove the flash drive.

16. For jurisdictions with more than one precinct, for each remaining precinct's flash drive, log into the flash drive, create its Election Date folder, and repeat step 15 to copy and paste the unzipped EPB_Package folder to the Election Date folder on the encrypted flash drive.





You can now insert the flash drive into a laptop, unlock the drive, and proceed to install the EPB software.

Install EPB Software on Laptop

Turn the EPB laptop on. Once the laptop has booted up, insert the encrypted flash drive into a USB port.

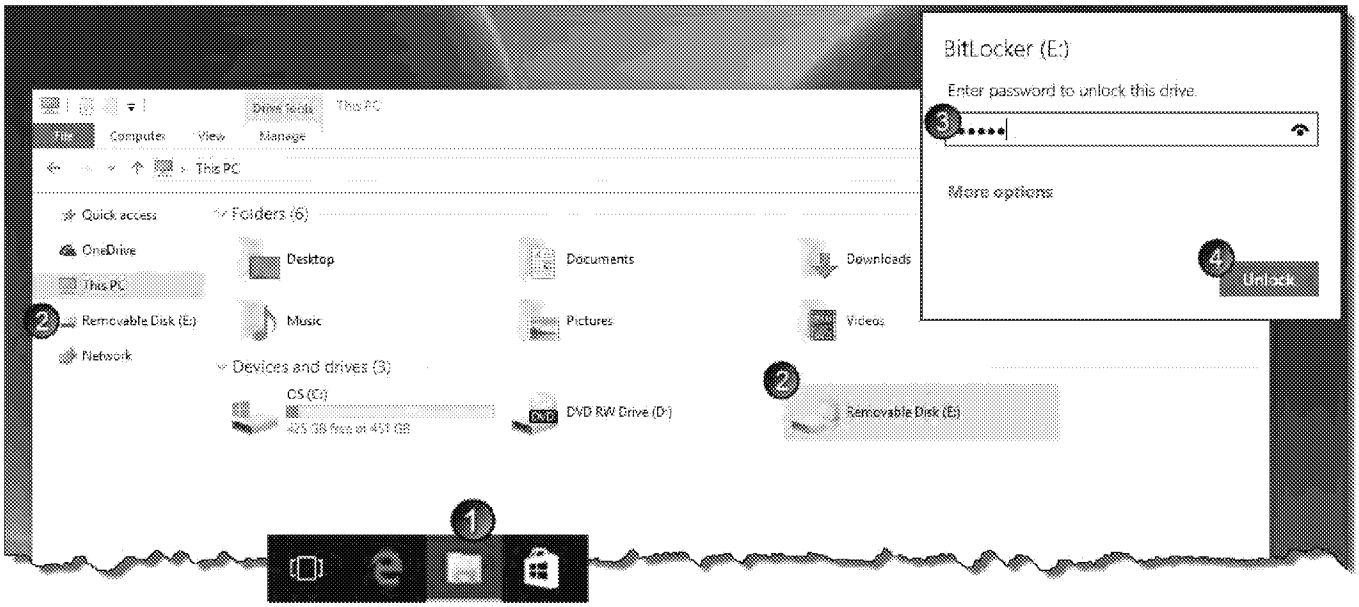
Log into the encrypted flash drive

The encrypted flash drive is a vital component of the EPB software program. Use this password-protected file storage device to protect voter data, store the backup file, and store all the work done on Election Day so the Clerk can update voter history and create precinct reports. When saving files, make sure the files are being saved to the encrypted flash drive.

To log into the flash drive, insert it into a USB port and:

1. Click the Windows Explorer folder icon
2. Click (D:) USB Drive (Drive letter may vary, D: or E:)
3. Enter the password
4. Click Unlock

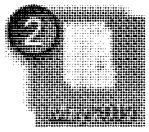
Note: If using the Verbatim flash drive with Store-n-Go/V-Safe100 encryption software, refer to the EPB User Manual for Windows 7 and V-Safe 100 for detailed instructions on logging into the Privacy Zone.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

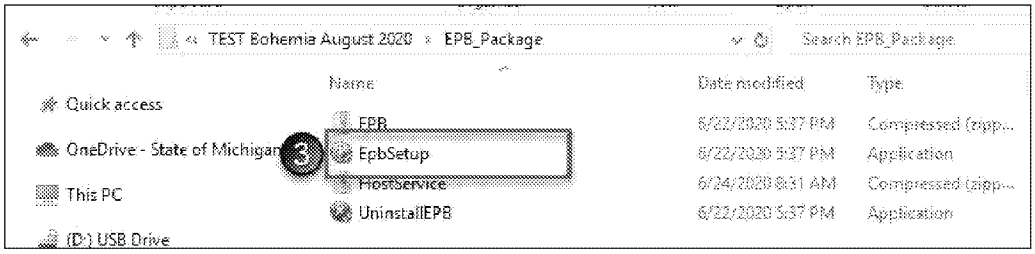
Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Run the setup file



To install the EPB software:

1. Copy and paste the [ElectionDate] folder from the flash drive to the Desktop
2. Double-click the [ElectionDate] folder on the desktop and open the EPB_Package folder
3. Double-click the EPBSetup file to begin installation



If a warning screen about the publisher pops up and requests you to confirm installation, it is ok to click yes.

4. Click Next
5. Click I Agree
6. Click Next for a traditional installation (default). For Dual e-Pollbooks, refer to the Dual e-Pollbook Manual

7. Click Install

A window showing the progress of the installation will appear, along with a command window (black screen). The command window will automatically close.

8. Click Finish; this will place a shortcut icon to the Electronic Poll Book on your desktop
9. Close the File Explorer window (as seen partially in Step 3)

Check Settings to Prepare the Software for Election Day Use

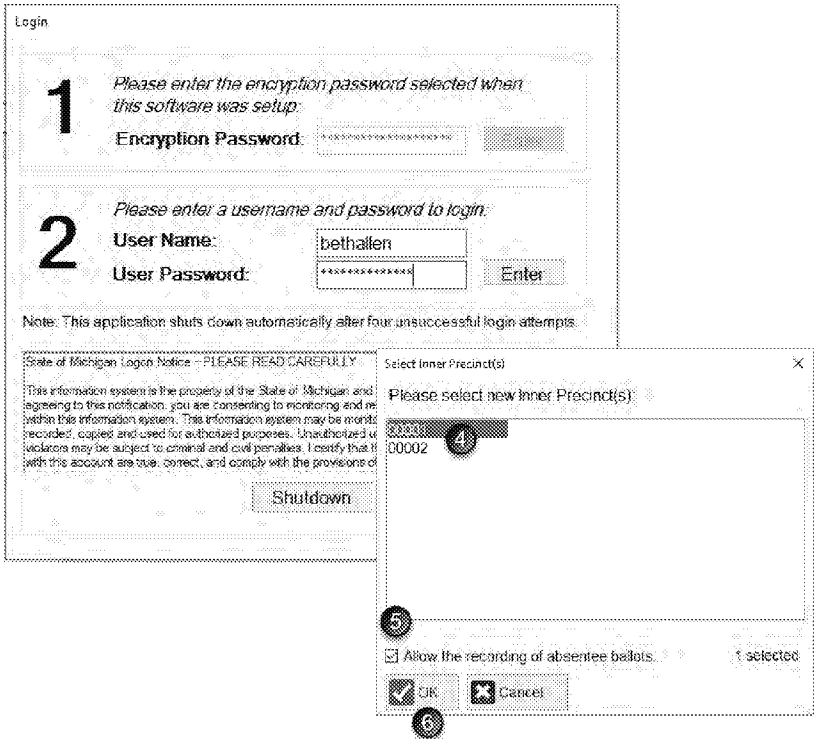
On the Monday before the Election or before training, confirm that the correct election was downloaded. If EPB options were not set in QVF, set options to assist election inspectors and minimize their tasks.

Select Precinct

The precinct the laptop will be used in needs to be selected in the EPB software.

To select the Precinct:

1. Double click the Electronic Poll Book icon on the desktop
2. Enter the Encryption Password and click Enter.
3. Enter the User Name and User Password that was set up in QVF (see p. 8-9) and click Enter.
4. Select the Inner Precinct where the laptop is used.
5. If AVs are processed in the precinct, check the Allow the recording of absentee ballots box.
6. Click OK



If the options and users were already set up in QVF prior to exporting the EPB files, the Election Day preparation is complete. Skip to the Election Day EPB Tasks: Election Inspector's Guide section of this manual for opening of the polls. If these steps were not already done in QVF please continue with the following steps:

Review EPB Options

To manage options, select File and then Options from the EPB menu. The most used options are set as defaults.

a. Auto Advance: This option tells the software to auto fill the ballot number box with the next ballot number. Unchecking this box requires election inspectors to enter each ballot number.

b. Lockout: This option is used to prevent the issuance of a ballot number for each ballot style to multiple voters.

c. Allow the recording of absentee ballots: Check this box to process absentee ballots in the precinct(s) on Election Day.

d. Confirm issued and recorded ballots: Check this box for a pop-up confirmation screen after issuing each ballot.

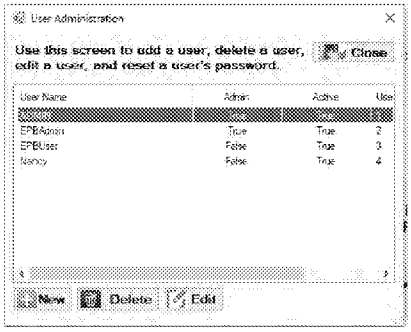
e. Including VAT Ballots: Check these boxes to enable the recording of Voter Assist Terminal ballots and to include them in the Auto Advance and Lockout functions.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

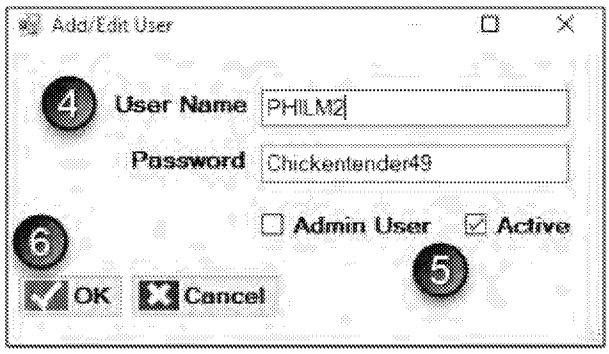
Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Review User Account Setup

User setup in the EPB is an important security step. If more accounts are needed than were set up in QVF, create those user accounts now. Set up the main EPB user or precinct chairperson as an active Admin User. All other election inspectors that will use the EPB should be setup as Active users. Setting up a unique username and password for each EPB user allows tracking of use on Election Day. The administrator account(s) set up in QVF should not be used by election inspectors.
Note: passwords are case sensitive.



To add a user:
1. Click Sys Admin
2. Click User Administration
3. Click New
4. Enter a Username (must be at least 5 characters long and cannot contain any spaces – no longer has to be all caps) and a strong password.
5. Select user type
6. Click OK, Repeat Steps 3-6 until all users are setup
7. Click Close



Editing or deleting a user: Admin users can delete or edit a user by highlighting the name and clicking either Delete or Edit. The User Name, Password and user type can all be changed in the User Administration Edit screen. If deleting, a confirmation screen will pop up to confirm the deletion.

At this point, close the EPB software, shut down the laptop and pack laptop items up for Election Day.

You must include the encrypted flash drive with the laptop in the appropriate case.

Election Day EPB Tasks: Election Inspector's Guide

Prepare the EPB for Opening the Polls

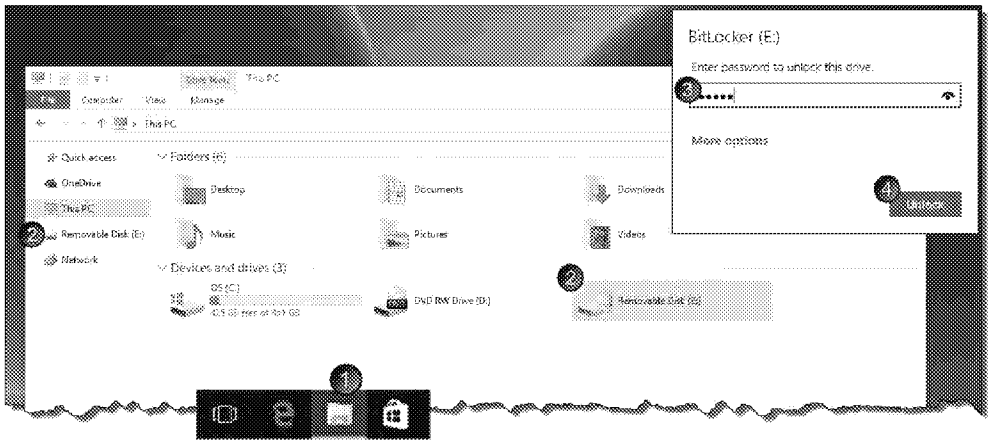
Pull the laptop out of the case, plug it into a surge protector, and plug the surge protector into the wall. The power cord may have two pieces. Keep the power cord plugged in throughout the day to maintain a 100% charged battery. Plug the magnetic card reader and mouse into USB ports. Then turn the laptop on. Once the laptop has booted up, make sure that the laptop cannot connect to the internet by turning on Airplane mode with wifi disabled (see pg. 5).

Log into the encrypted flash drive

The encrypted flash drive is a vital component of the EPB software program. Use this password-protected file storage device to protect voter data, store the backup file, and store all the work done on Election Day so the Clerk can update voter history and create precinct reports. When saving files, make sure the files are being saved to the encrypted flash drive.

To log into the flash drive, insert it into a USB port and:

1. Click the Windows Explorer folder icon
2. Click Removable Disk
3. Enter the password
4. Click Unlock

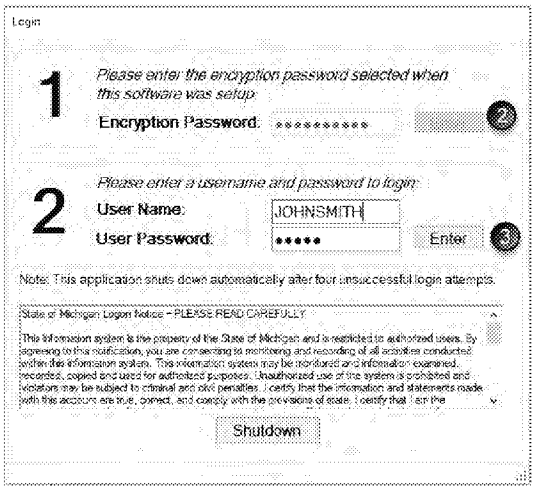


Log into the EPB software

After you have inserted and logged into the encrypted flash drive with its password, you can open the EPB program.

To log into the EPB software:

1. Double click on the Electronic Poll Book icon in the upper left corner of the desktop
2. Enter Encryption Password and click Enter
3. Enter Username and User Password and click Enter



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

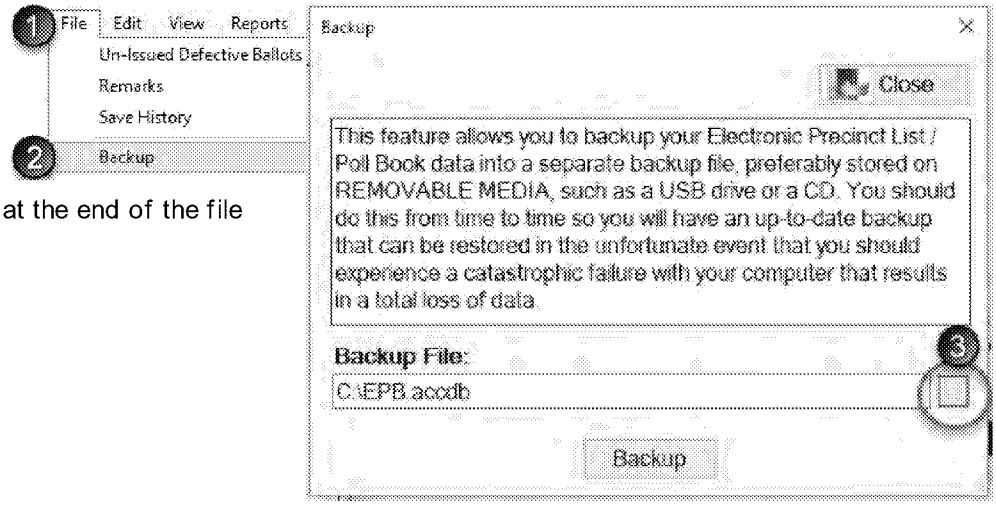
Save the First EPB Backup: Redirection Action Required!

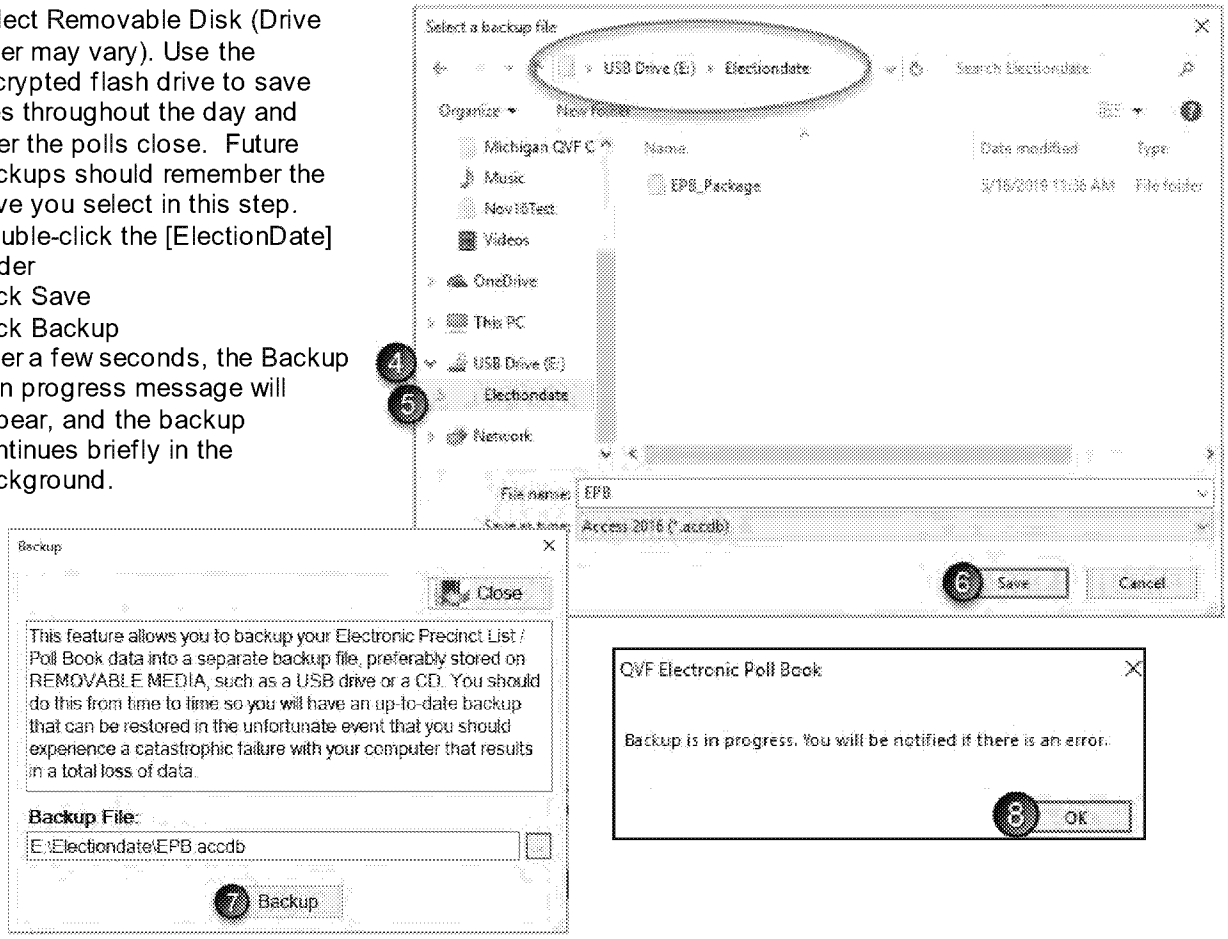
You must keep the encrypted flash drive plugged into the laptop all day. Save a Backup periodically throughout the day to save voters that have been processed. This ensures that data will not be lost if there is a hardware failure. Pay attention to your laptop's settings when performing the initial Backup. The letter labeling your encrypted flash drive in Windows Explorer may vary since it is dependent on the laptop and port being used.

To Back up the EPB:

1. Click File
2. Click Backup
3. Click this button ... at the end of the file path field



4. Select Removable Disk (Drive letter may vary). Use the encrypted flash drive to save files throughout the day and after the polls close. Future backups should remember the drive you select in this step.
5. Double-click the [ElectionDate] folder
6. Click Save
7. Click Backup
8. After a few seconds, the Backup is in progress message will appear, and the backup continues briefly in the background.



The laptop and EPB software are now ready for voters!

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Read and Use the EPB Main Screen to Process each Voter

The EPB main screen is divided into three sections. Take a moment to become familiar with the various parts of the screen. Make sure the top line lists the correct election date and precinct number.

Voter Search: The Voter Search section of the screen is the precinct list. All voters in your precinct will be listed under This Precinct tab. The Other tab provides access to the lists of other precincts in the jurisdiction. The Unlisted tab is available to add voters not found in either list in certain situations.

Voter Details: The Voter Details section of the screen shows the voter's registration information at the top, including the appropriate Ballot Style that should be issued to the voter. The Geography button provides detailed district information for each voter. The middle of the screen is the "Lock this Voter Record" action box where ballots will be assigned and recorded. Voting status flags appear at the bottom of the screen. This portion of the screen is important to verify the status before issuing a voter a ballot.

List of Voters: The List of Voters section records the voter's name and what ballot number was assigned to them in a running list. This section is for reference; use it throughout the day to balance with the tabulator.

The EPB software contains the voter list for the precinct, records the ballots issued, and creates the List of Voters for the permanent record of the precinct. With a few clicks, a voter may be verified and assigned a ballot.

Important Note: If a voter does not wish to have their driver's license scanned, their name should be typed into the EPB software.

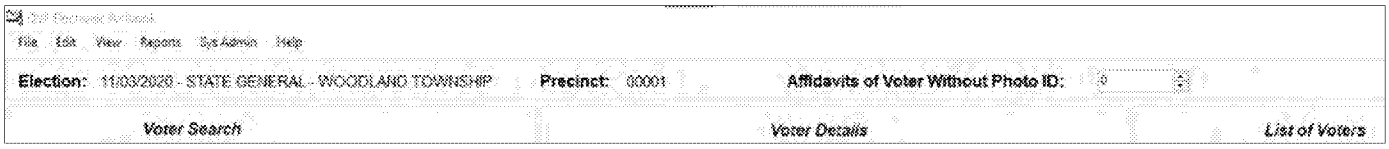
Record a Voter Not in Possession of Photo ID

The voter must complete an Application to Vote, and their photo identification must be verified or the Affidavit of Voter Not in Possession of Picture Identification must be completed, before processing a ballot in the EPB software. When a voter uses the Affidavit of Voter Not in Possession of Picture Identification, click the up arrow to increment the Affidavits of Voter Without Photo ID counter, or click into the box, delete the number, and type in the new total. This count is not tied to an individual voter but is the running total for the precinct for the election.

This number will be uploaded to the Qualified Voter File with voting history, and clerk's office staff will be able to review and correct this number in QVF after the election.

To record a Voter Not in Possession of Photo ID:

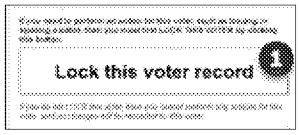
1. Click the up-arrow button next to the Affidavits of Voter Without Photo ID (or click in the field, delete the number that's there, and type the new total)



Assign a Ballot

After reviewing the voter's Application to Vote and verifying their photo identification or Affidavit of Voter Not in Possession of Picture Identification, process the voter in the EPB by following these steps:

1. Swipe the voter's driver's license through the magnetic card reader or type the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first. If typing, select the correct voter and then you must click on "Lock this voter record," otherwise skip to Step 2.

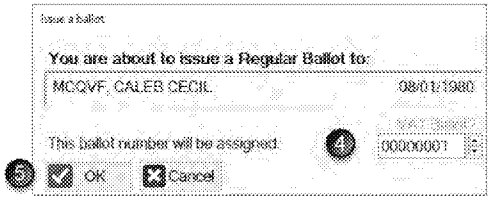


2. Verify the voter's information on the Application to Vote matches EPB.

3. Click Regular ballot

4. Enter the next available ballot number in the This ballot number will be assigned box (this number will auto fill after the first number for the ballot style has been entered)

5. Click OK, and the voter's name will now be added to the List of Voters.



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Verify the ballot was issued

Click OK on the confirmation window (if enabled). After you assign the ballot, the main screen returns. Three places verify the ballot was processed in the EPB software. Further duties may be divided amongst election inspectors, including completing the Election Inspector Completes portion of the Application to Vote and providing the voter a ballot in a secrecy sleeve. The voter will then go to a voting booth to vote their ballot and return the ballot to the tabulator.

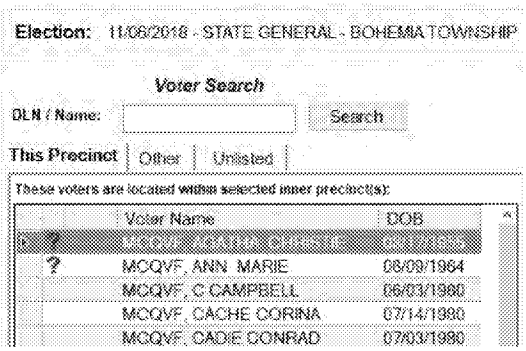
Process Voter with Status Flag(s)

Some voters have status flags that need to be addressed prior to issuing a ballot. On the paper precinct list, these were indicated with a code. Something happened in the registration process or in subsequent mailings that needs follow-up. For example, a signature was not obtained, the voter missed checking an answer to the citizenship question, an absentee ballot was issued, the clerk received reliable information the voter may have moved, etc.

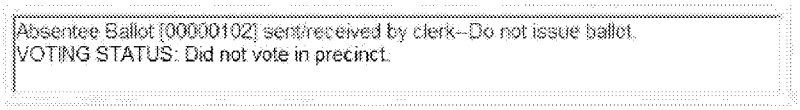


A voter has a status flag if he or she has a red question mark next to his or her name. When a red question mark is found, read the message in the Voter Status window at the bottom of the Voter Details screen to determine the issue.

Absentee Ballot sent by clerk

This voter was sent an absentee ballot. The voter must surrender the absentee ballot or complete the Affidavit of Lost or Destroyed Absentee Ballot after approval from the Clerk. Process as a Regular ballot and click through the warning. Place the AV ballot in the Local Clerk envelope. Do not issue a ballot unless the Clerk has confirmed that the voter's absentee ballot was not received.

Absentee Ballot sent/received by clerk



This voter was sent an absentee ballot and returned it to the Clerk. DO NOT issue this voter a ballot as they have already voted.

In the extremely rare case of a clerical error (such as if a ballot was recorded in QVF for the wrong voter), after approval from the clerk a ballot may be issued. Process as instructed and click through the warning.

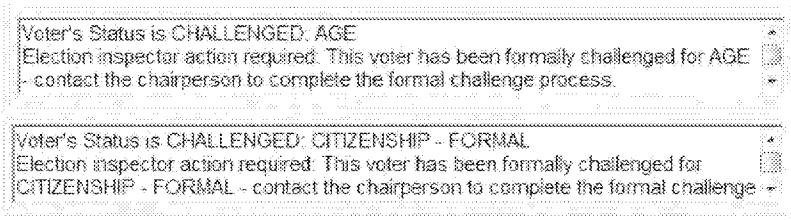
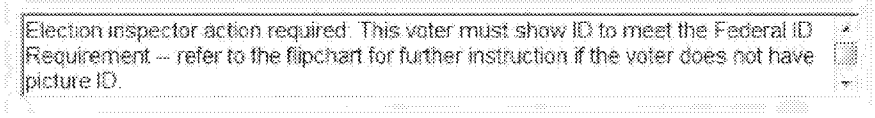
Voter's status is Challenge: Age, Citizenship Formal or Residency Formal

This voter has been formally challenged and must complete the challenge process before being issued a challenged ballot. Seek assistance from the precinct chairperson to complete this process. The EPB processing is the same as a regular voter except Challenged ballot is selected in the Issue a ballot box. A CHAL will appear next to the voter's name after processed.



Must show ID before voting (Federal Requirement)



This voter must show photo ID or a paycheck, government check, utility bill, bank statement, or a government document which lists his or her name and address (if no photo ID but provides one of the documents listed above, must sign the Affidavit of Voter Not in Possession of Photo ID as well) prior to being issued a ballot.

Document Received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

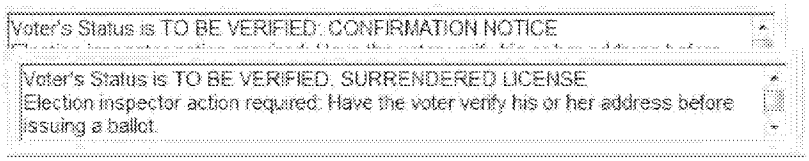
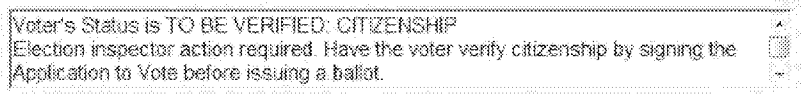
Voter's Status is V: Address Unclear, Confirmation Notice, or Surrendered License

This voter must verbally confirm the address listed in the EPB. If the voter does not confirm the address, the procedure for voters that have moved must be taken.

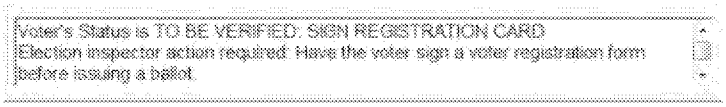


Voter's Status is V: Confirm Citizenship

This voter must verify their citizenship by signing the Application to Vote. If the voter does not complete the Application to Vote, DO NOT issue a ballot.

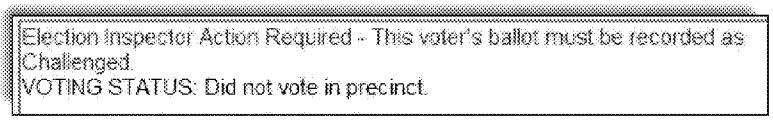


Voter's Status is V: Sign Registration Card



This voter must sign a voter registration form prior to being issued a ballot.

Voter Message: Challenged Ballot



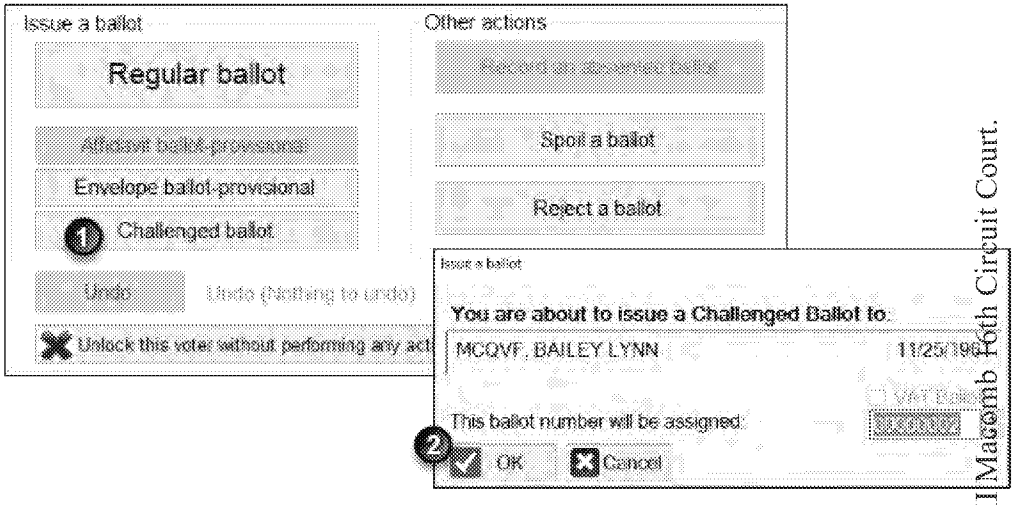
When the EPB indicates in red text that an inspector action is required to record a voter's ballot as challenged (shown above), perform the actions listed below.

(These voters registered within 14 days of the election with an alternative form of residency verification.)

To issue a Challenged ballot:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, lock it in if necessary and:

1. Click Challenged ballot
2. Verify the ballot number being issued is correct or enter the ballot number and click OK



Important note:
The Challenged ballot procedure for these voters is different than formal challenges. Outside of the EPB, perform the following steps when issuing the challenged ballot:

1. Write the ballot number in pencil on the upper left-hand corner of the ballot, being sure to avoid any barcodes or timing marks (not on the ballot stub).
2. Conceal this number with a small piece of white paper taped over the number.
3. Use the Challenged ballot button to enter the voter's ballot number into the e-Pollbook. If your precinct has more than one ballot style, issue the ballot style noted on the receipt.
4. The voter will then vote the ballot and place the ballot in the tabulator as usual.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

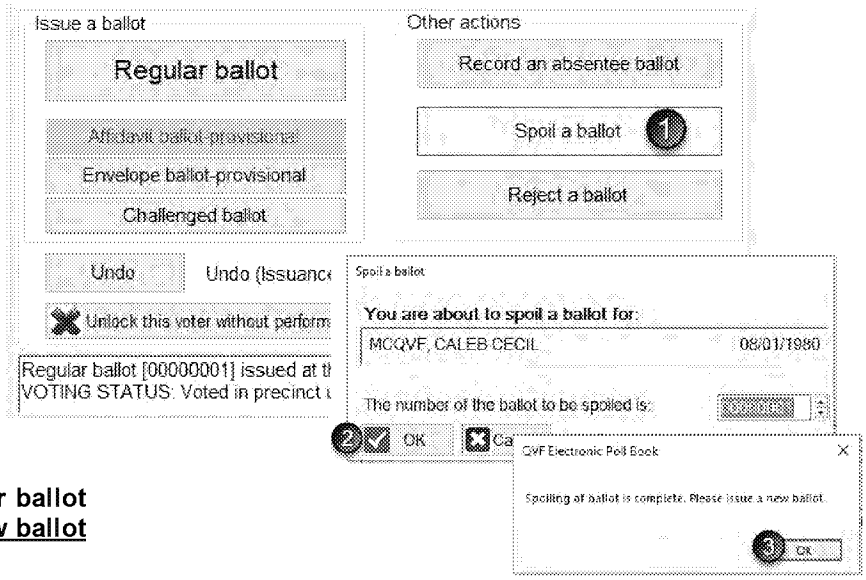
Process a Spoiled Ballot

A voter may request a new ballot if needed and a new ballot must be issued, no matter how many times the voter requests a new one. The voter should write "SPOILED" at the top of their ballot, remove the ballot stub, and place in the Spoiled Ballot Envelope. Change the Application to Vote to note the new ballot number and record the new ballot in the EPB software.

To spoil a ballot:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software by typing the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first, select the voter's name, click Lock this Voter Record and:

1. Click Spoil a ballot
2. Click OK – the software will automatically enter the ballot number you are spoiling.
3. Click OK



After the ballot is spoiled, the regular ballot process must be used to issue a new ballot to the voter.

Once the process is complete, verify the recording was done properly by looking at the Voter Status screen and the List of Voters.

Find a Voter Not Appearing On This Precinct List

Find a Voter in Other Precinct in Other Tab

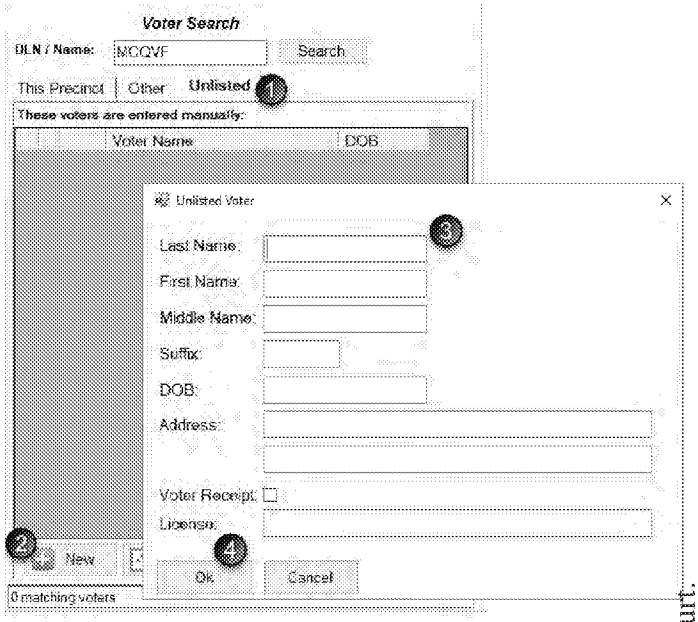
Election inspectors can look up voters throughout the jurisdiction, not just in the precinct they are working. If the voter does not pop up after a search, click on the Other tab. If the voter is registered to vote within the jurisdiction, click on their name and view their polling location. Explain to the voter that they are registered in a different polling location and/or precinct and direct them to the appropriate location. Be sure to click back to the This Precinct tab before processing the next voter.

Add an Unlisted Voter

If a voter is not found under the This Precinct tab or the Other tab, the citizen was not registered to vote in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) for that jurisdiction at the time of the EPB download.

If the voter registered at the local clerk's office after the EPB was downloaded and has a receipt, add the voter to the list (steps 1-4) and see the next section of this manual, Process Unlisted Voter with a Receipt.

The chairperson, with the assistance of the Clerk (and utilizing the Election Inspectors' Procedural Manual Flipchart and Missing Voters Flow Chart listing options including a provisional ballot) should determine whether the citizen is eligible to vote. If it is determined that the citizen is a qualified voter that should vote in that precinct, they must be added to the list.



To add a voter to the list:

1. Click the Unlisted tab
2. Click New
3. Enter the voter's information
4. Click OK

After the voter is added, a ballot number must be assigned.

The Clerk will provide guidance on the type of ballot to issue the voter.

Important note: You must manually enter ballot numbers for unlisted voters, and the next regular ballot issued (for that ballot style) will need to be adjusted; it will not auto advance correctly.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

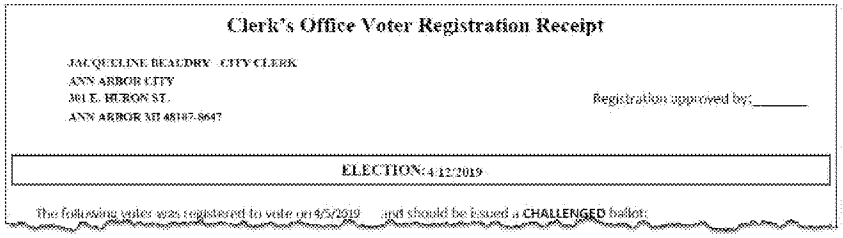
Process an Unlisted Voter with a Receipt

When a voter is not found under the This Precinct tab or the Other tab, and they were registered by the local clerk's office after the e-Pollbook was downloaded for the election they must present the Clerk's Office Voter Registration Receipt. The voter must be added to the EPB from the Unlisted tab, then a ballot can be issued per the instructions on the receipt.



Clerk's Office Voter Registration Receipt

JACQUELINE BEAUDRY - CITY CLERK
ANN ARBOR CITY
301 E. HURON ST.
ANN ARBOR MI 48107-8647

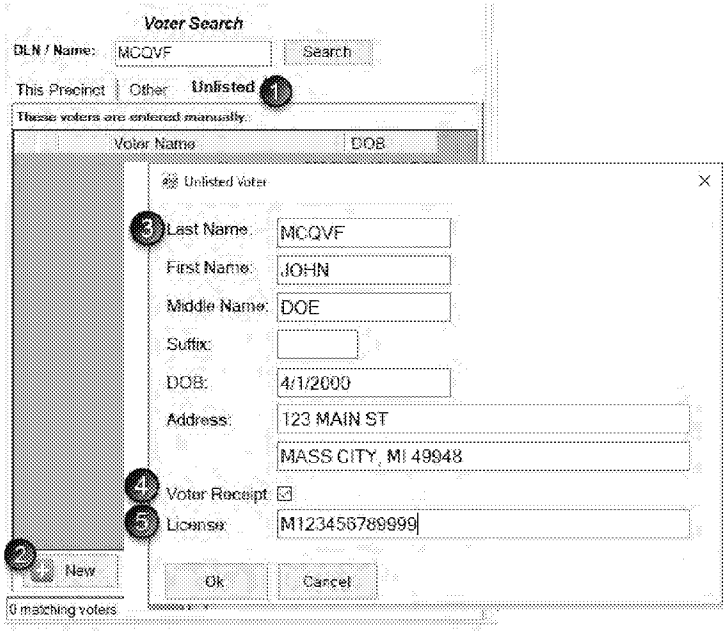
Registration approved by:_____

ELECTION: 4/12/2019

The following voter was registered to vote on 4/5/2019 and should be issued a CHALLENGED ballot:

To add a voter to the list:

1. Click the Unlisted tab
2. Click New
3. Enter the voter's information
4. Click the "Voter Receipt" box to enable the option and the cursor automatically moves to the License field
5. If the voter has a DL/PID, swipe the DL/PID or scan the barcode to add the id number and the Unlisted Voter window will automatically close. The ID number can also be hand-typed, then click OK.



After the voter is added, a ballot number must be assigned. Follow the instructions provided on the receipt to select the correct ballot type button (Regular or Challenged).

If the receipt says that the ballot must be prepared as "challenged" perform the following steps:

1. Write the ballot number in pencil on the upper left-hand corner of the ballot, being sure to avoid any barcodes or timing marks (not on the ballot stub).
2. Conceal this number with a small piece of white paper taped over the number.
3. Use the Challenged ballot button to enter the voter's ballot number into the e-Pollbook. If your precinct has more than one ballot style, issue the ballot style noted on the receipt.
4. The voter will then vote the ballot and place the ballot in the tabulator as usual.

Important note: You must manually enter ballot numbers for unlisted voters, and the next regular ballot issued (for that ballot style) will need to be adjusted; it will not auto advance correctly.

Process Other Voter Types

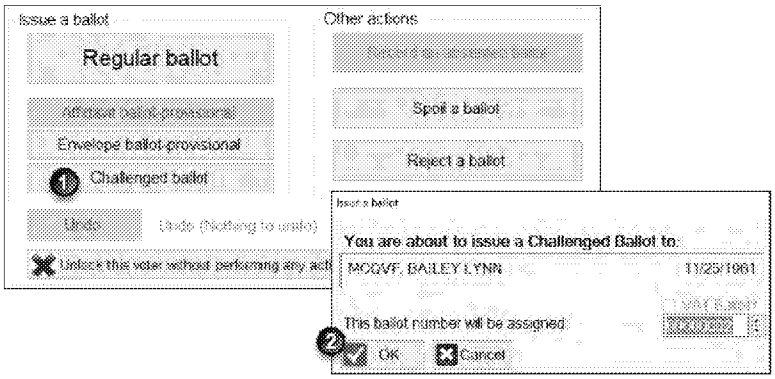
Process a Voter Challenged by a Challenger

If a voter is challenged by a Challenger, the voter must be issued a Challenged ballot and that Challenged ballot must be recorded in the EPB. Please note, the Challenge must be directed to the chairperson and all steps must be carried out prior to issuing the challenged ballot. Follow the instructions below to issue a challenged ballot in the EPB software.

To issue a Ballot to a Challenged Voter:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, lock it in if necessary and:

1. Click Challenged ballot
2. Verify the ballot number being issued is correct or enter the ballot number and Click OK



Important note: The ballot number must be written on the physical ballot and covered with a piece of paper or post-it tapes. In addition, full documentation of the challenge must be recorded in the paper binder pollbook.

Record an Absentee Ballot

If absentee ballots are processed in the precinct and the Clerk has instructed entry into the EPB software versus using the paper Addendum List of AV voters, follow the instructions below to process the ballots in the EPB software.

To record an absentee ballot:

Pull the absent voter's record up in the EPB software, lock it in if necessary and:

1. Click Record an absentee ballot
2. Verify ballot number (enter if not auto filled) is the same as assigned and click OK

Once the process is complete, verify the recording was done properly by looking for AV next to the voter's name, the Voter Status screen and the List of Voters.

NOTE: If processing a FWAB or electronic MOVE or ACCESSIBLE ballot, simply accept the regular AV ballot number assigned or enter the AV ballot number assigned by the clerk.

Record a Voter Assist Terminal (VAT) Ballot

When a voter requests to use the Voter Assist Terminal (VAT) to vote, issue a blank ballot (with a numbered stub). Since they will make their selections using the VAT which prints their votes on a blank ballot, they will not receive a regular ballot with a traditional number sequence.

To record such ballots in the Electronic Pollbook, search for the voter in the EPB as usual and select a ballot type to record. When assigning this voter's ballot number, indicate that it is a VAT Ballot by checking the VAT box. This action tells the system to use the blank ballot numbering sequence when auto advancing. If it is the first VAT ballot of the day, enter the first ballot number of the blank ballot stock. VAT ballot numbers will advance automatically like other ballots do when the Auto Advance option is enabled and after the first number is entered.

To record a VAT ballot:

1. Click the button for the kind of ballot being assigned (Regular, Provisional…)
2. Add a checkmark to the VAT box
3. If this is the first VAT ballot of the day, enter the ballot number in, otherwise, confirm the VAT ballot number matches the sequence and click OK.

Avoid or Correct Mistakes

If a voter is selected in error, simply click Unlock this voter without performing any action to return to the main screen.

If an entry mistake occurs, whether the wrong ballot number or the wrong voter was issued a ballot, using the Undo function will aid in correcting the mistake.

To correct a mistake:

1. Search for the voter, using the DLN/Name search box
2. Select the voter
3. Click Lock this voter record
4. Click Undo
5. Click Yes

Notice the action you are undoing is in brackets next to the Undo button and in the confirmation box. Use the Application(s) to Vote to ensure you are making the correction properly. The Undo function should not be used to attempt to fix major mistakes. If several ballots have been issued out of sequence, correct this type of error with a remark and by ensuring the next voter is correct from that point forward.

Important note: The Undo feature is NOT for spoiling ballots (see Spoiled Ballots section for detail). If you have questions as to when the Undo function is appropriate to use, consult your local Clerk.

See FAQ #1 at the back of this manual if a voter was issued an incorrect ballot style.

Make a Remark

Any time a correction is made, a remark should be entered. In addition, remarks should be made throughout the day to document events that happened in the polling place that are significant. Providing this information aids the Clerk in understanding what took place throughout the day. There are two types of remarks, General and Specific. Be sure to use the correct type based on the comment you need to make.

To make a general remark:

1. Click File (or the General Remarks button and skip to step 3)
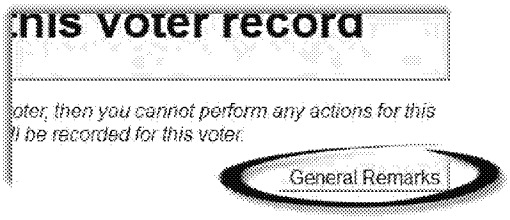
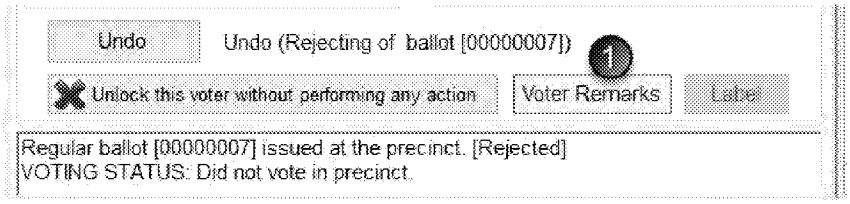
2. Click Remarks
3. Click New
4. Enter Remark, the EPB automatically records the date and time of the entry; however, if entry of the remark is delayed from the time the event occurred, then include the time the event took place in the remark.
5. Click OK
6. Click Close

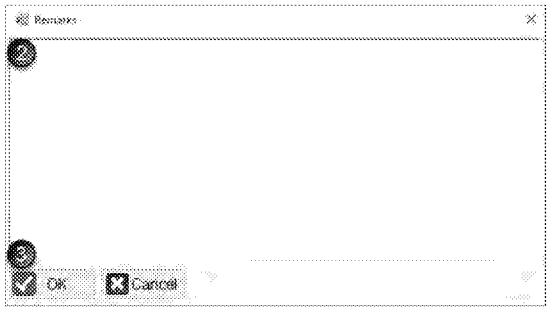


To make a voter remark:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, by typing the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first, click Lock this Voter Record and:



1. Click Voter Remarks
2. Enter Remark, the EPB automatically records the Voter Name, Voter Number, and date and time of the entry, however, adding the time is recommended as the EPB is not always available for remark entry at the time the event took place.
3. Click OK



If there are no other actions to perform on that voter, Unlock the voter and proceed to process the next voter.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Reject a Ballot

A ballot is rejected only in a situation where a voter will not be issued a new ballot. Valid reasons for rejection are:

- Exposure – A voter intentionally exposed his or her marked ballot to others at the polling place.
- Missing stub/ballot number does not agree – It is discovered during the ballot serial number verification process that the stub on the ballot that was issued to the voter at the polls is missing or bears a different number than the number recorded on the voter's Application to Vote.
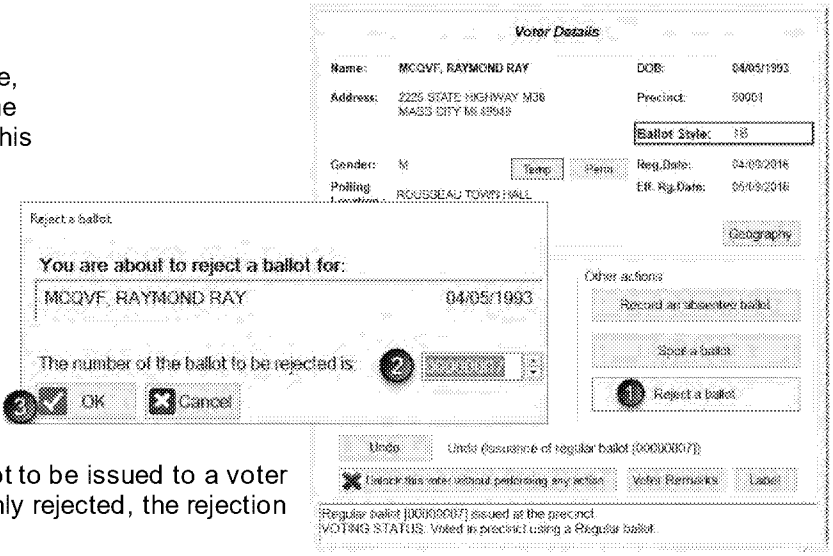
- Ballot was left in booth/voter did not tabulate – A voter neglected or refused to tabulate his or her ballot.

If any of these situations arise, a voter may not be issued a replacement ballot. The ballot must be rejected.

To Reject a ballot:

Pull the voter's record up in the EPB software, by typing the voter's name into the DLN/Name field, entering the last name first, click Lock this Voter Record and:

1. Click Reject a ballot
2. Verify ballot number is the same as assigned - Click OK
3. Click OK
4. Record a Voter Remark (See previous page) that includes the reason for rejection



The EPB software will not allow another ballot to be issued to a voter with a rejected ballot. If a ballot was mistakenly rejected, the rejection must be removed by using the Undo button.

Mark Unissued Ballots Defective

If a ballot becomes unusable and it is within the number range being used, record it defective in the EPB software to ensure balancing at the end of the night.

To record defective ballots:

1. Click File
2. Click Un-issued Defective Ballots
3. Click Render Ballots Defective
4. Select the ballot style, enter the ballot number range, and record the reason the ballot is defective.
5. Click OK
6. Click Close

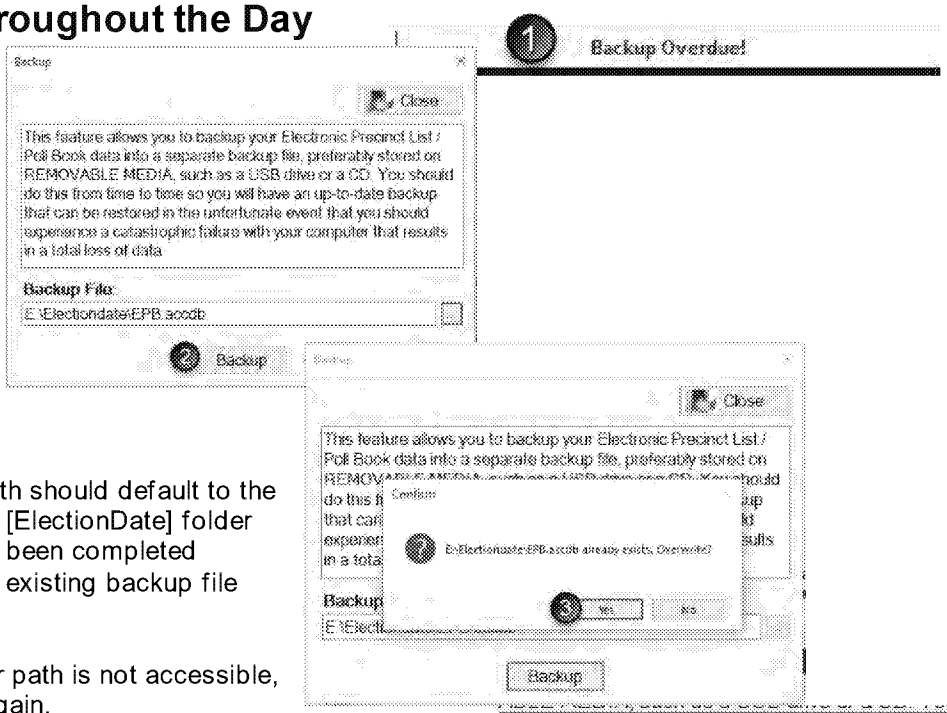
Back up Regularly Throughout the Day

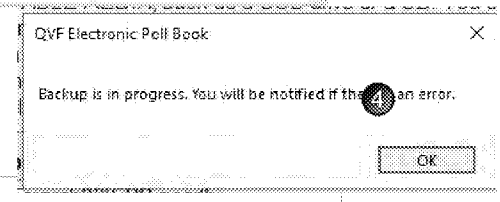
Approximately every half hour, the EPB software will notify the user that a backup is overdue. It is important to take a moment after processing a voter to update the backup. This will ensure the flash drive has the most recent data entered into the EPB in the event of a hardware failure.



To Backup to the flash drive:

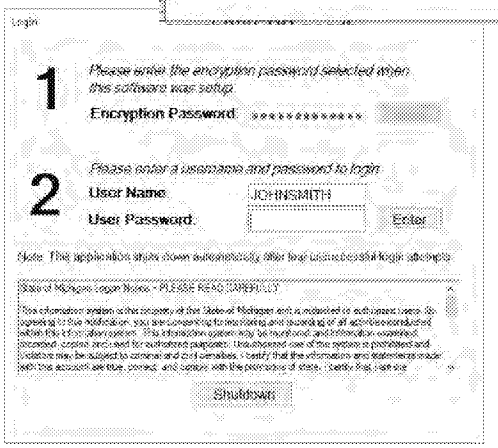
1. Click Backup Overdue
2. Click Backup – the file path should default to the encrypted flash drive and [ElectionDate] folder once the first backup has been completed
3. Click Yes to overwrite the existing backup file
4. Click OK

If you get an error that the drive or path is not accessible, log into your flash drive and try again.



Understand Timeout Features

For security reasons, the EPB software will logout a user after thirty minutes of inactivity. This can be avoided by moving the mouse and/or clicking into the DLN/Name field if there are long periods of inactivity. If the EPB software logs out the user, simply reenter the User Name and User Password and click Enter.



Switch Users

To switch users, simply use the Logout function by:

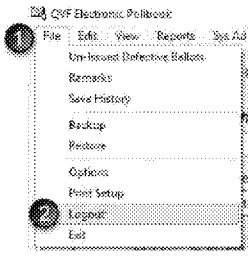
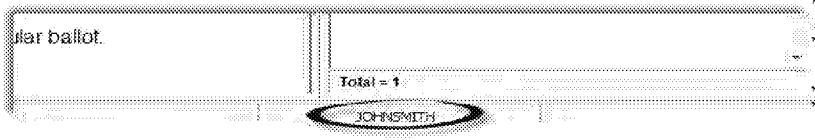
1. Click File
2. Click Logout



Then simply log in with the new username and password.

The current user is listed in the lower right-hand corner of the screen as illustrated:



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

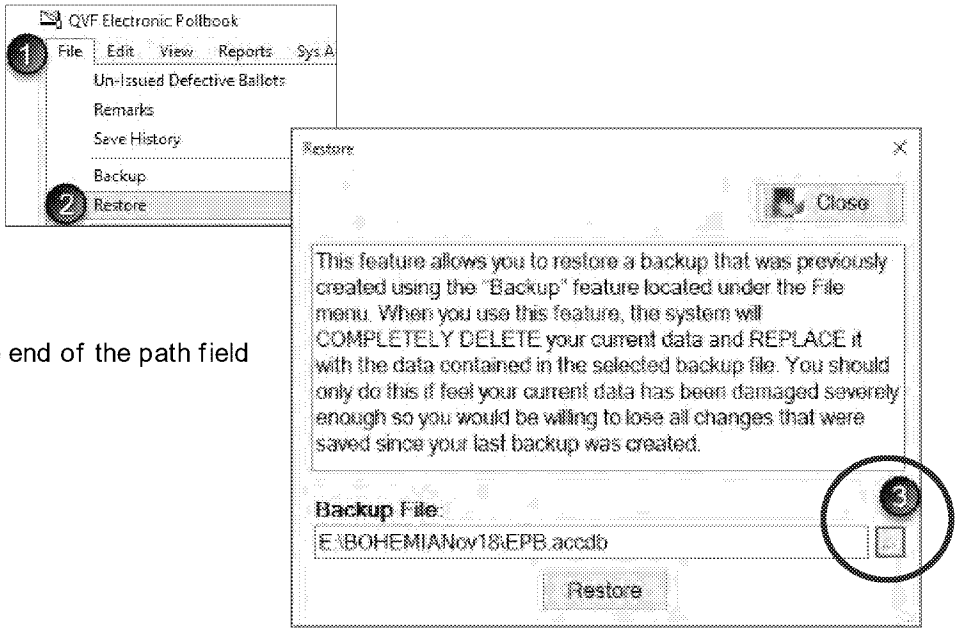
Restore the Database

In the event the laptop fails and the EPB needs to be reinstalled on a new laptop on election day, the Restore feature will reload all of the information entered up to the point of the last backup. The only voter data missing would be entries made in the EPB since the last backup. That information can be added back in using the Applications to Vote. The Administrator username and password must be obtained from the Clerk for the initial login when the software is re-installed.

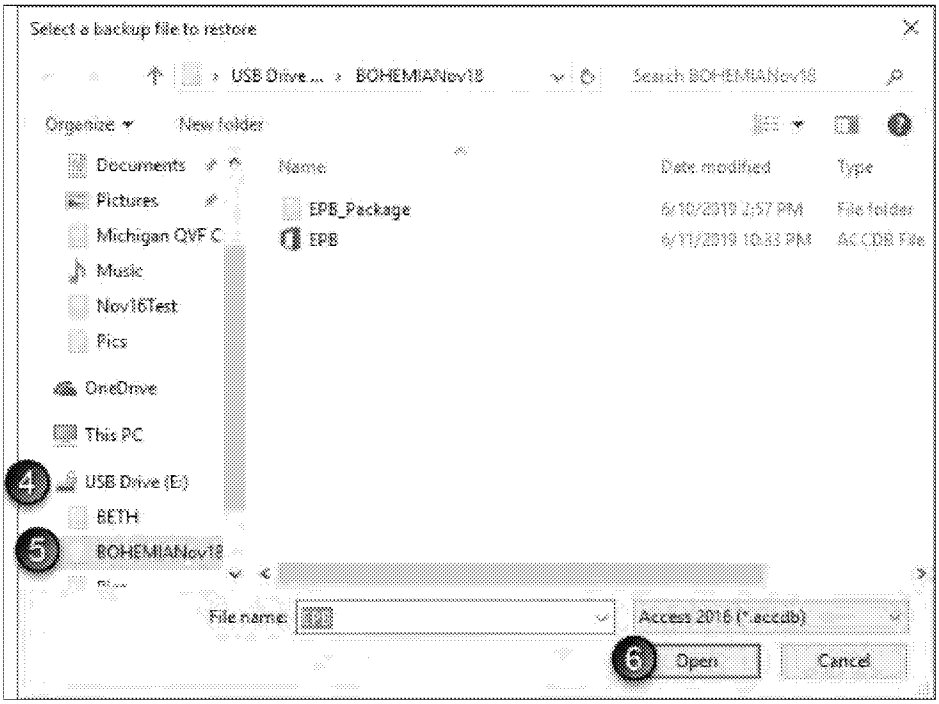
Once the EPB software has been installed onto the new laptop, login to the EPB software, and perform the following steps:

1. Click File
2. Click Restore



3. Click this button at the end of the path field

4. Make sure the encrypted flash drive is selected (Removable Disk E:) Drive letters may vary.
5. Double click [ElectionDate] folder
6. Click Open



Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

7. Click Restore
8. Click Yes
9. Click OK

After restoration is complete, the election inspectors should review the Options under File>Options, then log out of the EPB and log back in with the username and password they had used prior to the laptop/software failure.

If time elapsed between the last backup and the restoring of data, use the Application(s) to Vote to re-enter voter(s) and process new voters.

Election Day: Close the Polls

After the close of polls on Election Day, data processed in the EPB software must be saved one last time to the encrypted flash drive and reports must be generated to complete the paper binder pollbook. The EPB software generates the three reports necessary for completion of the paper binder pollbook/official record of the precinct in just a few steps. Those reports include the Ballot Summary, the List of Voters, and the Remarks report. After reports are saved and printed, save voter history in a manner that can easily be uploaded into the Qualified Voter File (QVF) in a matter of seconds, ensuring accurate recording of voters in the master voter registration database.

Review and complete the next six required steps. If your receiving board prints the reports, simply save each report.

1. Save one last Backup file
2. Save and print the Ballot Summary Report
3. Save and print the List of Voters Report
4. Save and print the Remarks Report
5. Save Voting History (This is a frequently missed step, so please pay extra attention here!)
6. Look at the files saved on the flash drive and go back to save anything that was missed.

Save Backup

After all voters have been processed in the EPB, perform one last Backup to ensure all data is saved to the encrypted flash drive.

1. Click File
2. Click Backup
3. Click Backup
4. Click Yes
5. Click OK

If you get an error that the drive or path is not accessible, log into your flash drive and try again.

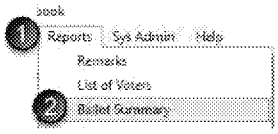
Save and Print Reports

Save and print Ballot Summary Report

The Ballot Summary documents the total number of ballots assigned to the precinct and how each ballot was used. You already recorded spoiled or defective (F), rejected (G) and Provisional "envelope" (I) ballots and the software enters those numbers. The designated inspector enters the remaining numbers, and the EPB software will calculate and balance the Ballot Summary. Type in numbers carefully and use the Tab key to move between fields.

To complete the Ballot Summary:

1. Click Reports
2. Click Ballot Summary



Enter the Number of ballots delivered to the precinct for each ballot style:

3. (A) Enter the Starting number and the Ending number of the first ballot style. If using more than one ballot style or if any VAT ballots were used, tab to create a new line and repeat the process until all styles are listed. The Count will be calculated automatically.

4. (B) Enter the Number of AV return envelopes received by board, if absentee ballots are being processed in the precinct. If absentee ballots are not being processed in the precinct, this box will already be completed with a 0.

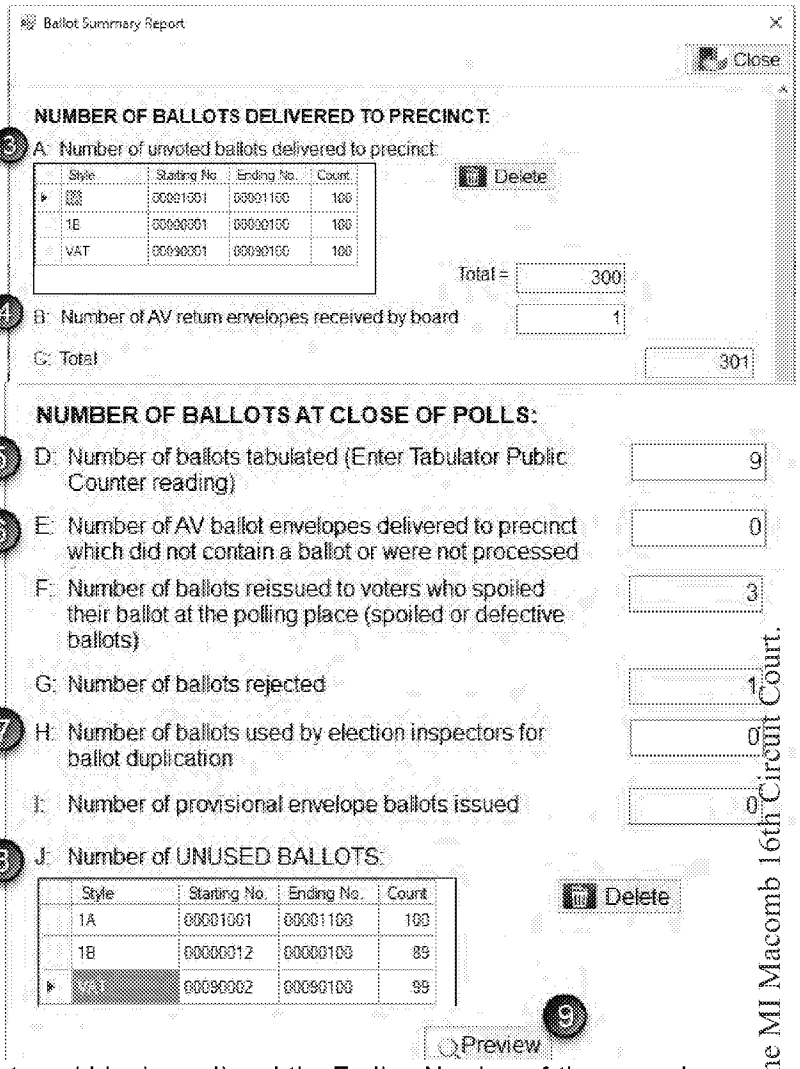
Enter the Number of ballots at close of polls:

5. (D) Enter Number of ballots tabulated from the Tabulator Public Counter reading

6. (E) Enter the Number of AV ballot envelopes delivered to precinct which did not contain a ballot or were not processed for any reason, if absentee ballots are being processed in the precinct. If absentee ballots are not being processed in the precinct, this box will already be completed with a 0.

7. (H) Enter the Number of ballots used by election inspectors for ballot duplication.

8. (J) Enter the Number of Unused Ballots by entering the Starting Number (the next ballot that would be issued) and the Ending Number of the unused ballots. If using more than one ballot style, tab to create a new line and repeat the process until all styles are listed. Tab out of the box or place the cursor in a different box to make the totals calculate.



SCROLL DOWN AND STOP – L must be 0. If L is not 0, double check items 3-8 and ensure everything was entered correctly. If there is a known reason for not balancing and it is unable to be resolved, a detailed Remark must be made to explain to the Board of Canvassers why the precinct does not balance.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

9. Click Preview

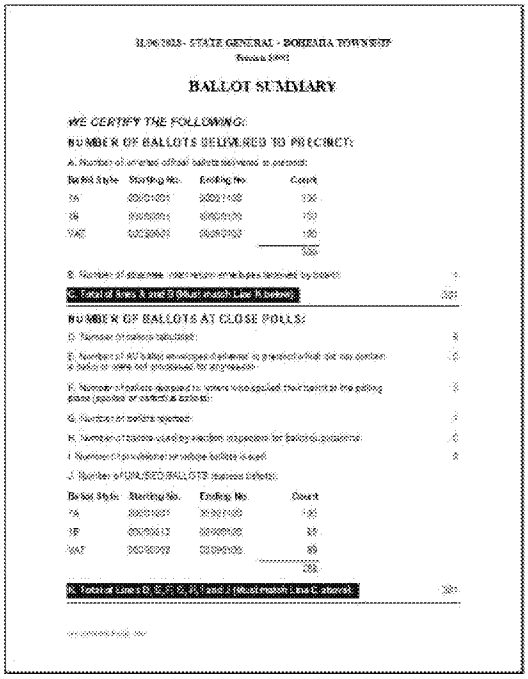
The Ballot Summary report will pop-up after clicking Preview. Be sure to review the summary to ensure all information was entered correctly and that the summary balances (Line L = 0). Line L may appear on a second page, so click the arrow to view the next page if necessary.



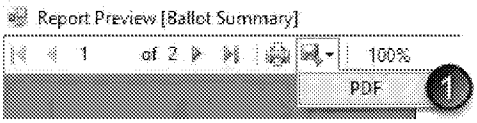
BALLOT SUMMARY

WE CERTIFY THE FOLLOWING:

NUMBER OF BALLOTS DELIVERED TO PRECINCT:

NUMBER OF BALLOTS AT CLOSE POLLS:

At this point, the Ballot Summary must be saved to the encrypted flash drive. If your precinct has the ability to print, the Ballot Summary should be printed as well. Otherwise, the reports will be printed at the Receiving Board.



To save the Ballot Summary:

1. Click the disk icon and PDF

2. Double click the [ElectionDate] folder in the encrypted flash drive (Removable Disk E:). Drive letters may vary.

3. Click Save

After the Ballot Summary has been saved, print the report (if applicable), close out of the preview screen, and close the Ballot Summary screen as well.

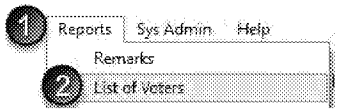
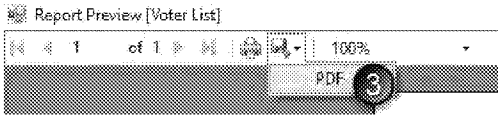
Save and Print List of Voters Report





To save the List of Voters:

1. Click Reports
2. Click List of Voters
3. Click the disk icon and PDF
4. The [ElectionDate] folder selected for the Ballot Summary should automatically pop up. Always check to make sure you are in the encrypted flash drive and the correct folder before clicking Save

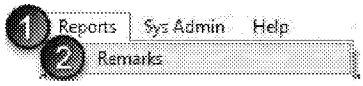
After the List of Voters has been saved, print the report (if printing in the precinct) and close out of the preview screen.

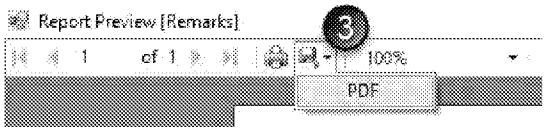
Save and Print Remarks Report

Remarks recorded in the EPB software using the General Remarks and/or Voter Remarks are also saved in a also and must be saved to the encrypted flash drive. If your precinct has the ability to print, the Remarks should be printed as well.

To save the Remarks report:



1. Click Reports
2. Click Remarks
3. Click the disk icon and PDF



4. The [ElectionDate] folder selected for the last two reports should automatically pop up. Always check to make sure you are in the encrypted flash drive and the correct folder before clicking Save

Note: There must be one recorded Remark for the report to save.

REMARKS

Date / Time	User	Voter #	Voter Name	Remarks
8/11/2019 10:38:12 PM	JOHNSMITH	6	MCQVF, RAYMOND RAY	ballot rejected because voter failed to tabulate votes
8/11/2019 10:25:45 PM	JOHNSMITH			Compared tabulator and list of voters, we still balance!

After the Remarks report has been saved, print the report (if using printers in the precinct) and close out of the preview screen.

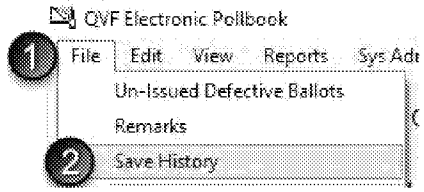
Save Voter History: Redirection Action Required!

After all other reports are saved, save the voter history to the flash drive. The clerk needs to use this file to update the voter registration files in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) recording who voted on Election Day.

To save Voter History:



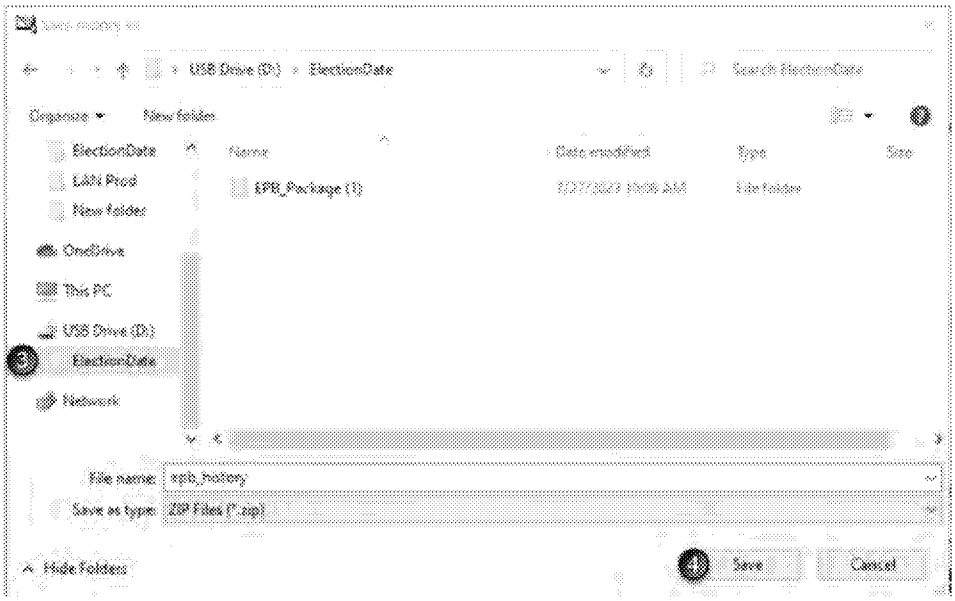
1. Click File

2. Click Save History

3. Redirect the file by clicking on the flash drive under This PC, then double-click on the Election Date folder. The file name should say epb_history with no preceding d:\

   If d:\ is still in the File name, click the cursor at the beginning of the File name field and use the Delete key to delete the d:\

4. Click Save



Please note: the history file is now an compressed .zip file, no longer a .csv file type. You will no longer be able to open or proofread this file, only upload it back in QVF.

A user double-clicking to open the file will see the following error.

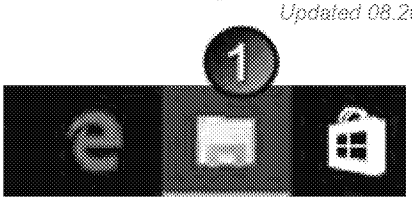
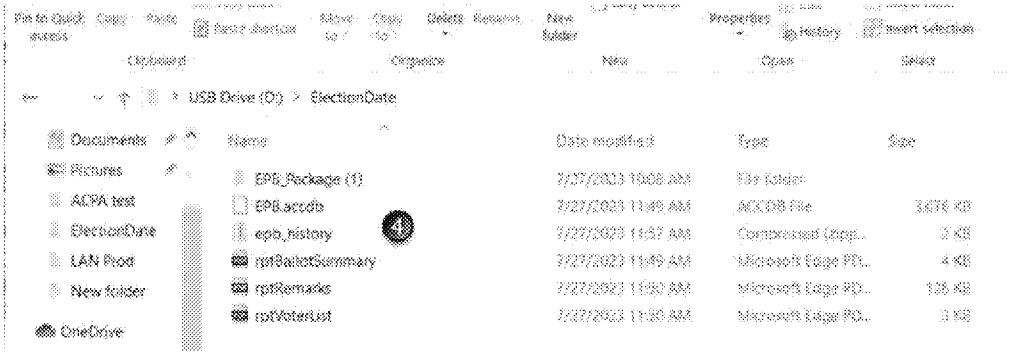
Ensure Files are on Flash Drive



To verify files have been saved on the encrypted flash drive:

1. Click on the file folder icon to open Windows File Explorer
2. Click Removable Disk (E:) Drive letters may vary
3. Double Click the [ElectionDate] folder



4. You must have the following files:

File Name	File Type
EPB Back Up	ACCDB file
EPB_History	ZIP file
rptBallot Summary	PDF file
rptRemarks	PDF file
rptVoter List	PDF file

You may also see the following files in your folder:

File Name	File Type
EPB_Package	File Folder
EPB_Package	Compressed (zipped)

Once all reports have been saved, close all programs and shut down the laptop. Return all items to the case except the encrypted flash drive. The encrypted flash drive must be placed into the container the Clerk recommends, sealed (either an envelope with a red paper seal or an approved container and the appropriate seal), and returned to the Clerk on election night.

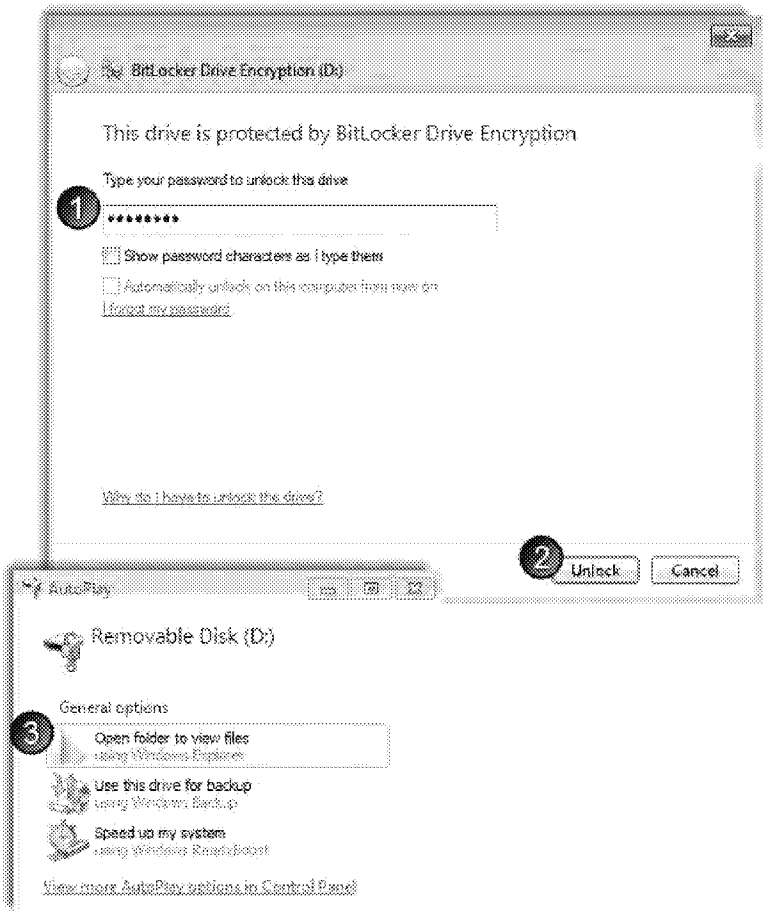
Printing Reports at the Receiving Board

The receiving board must print the reports saved on the encrypted flash drive (if not done in the polls) to complete the paper binder pollbook. After the reports have been printed, the receiving board must reseal the encrypted flash drive into the Clerk recommended container. The PC or laptop used to print reports must have Adobe Reader installed. Adobe Reader is a free download found at http://www.adobe.com/go/EN_US-H-GET-READER.

To print the 3 Election Day reports, insert the encrypted flash drive into the USB port of the PC or laptop connected to the printer and unlock the flash:

1. Enter flash drive password
2. Click Unlock
3. Click Open Folder to View Files

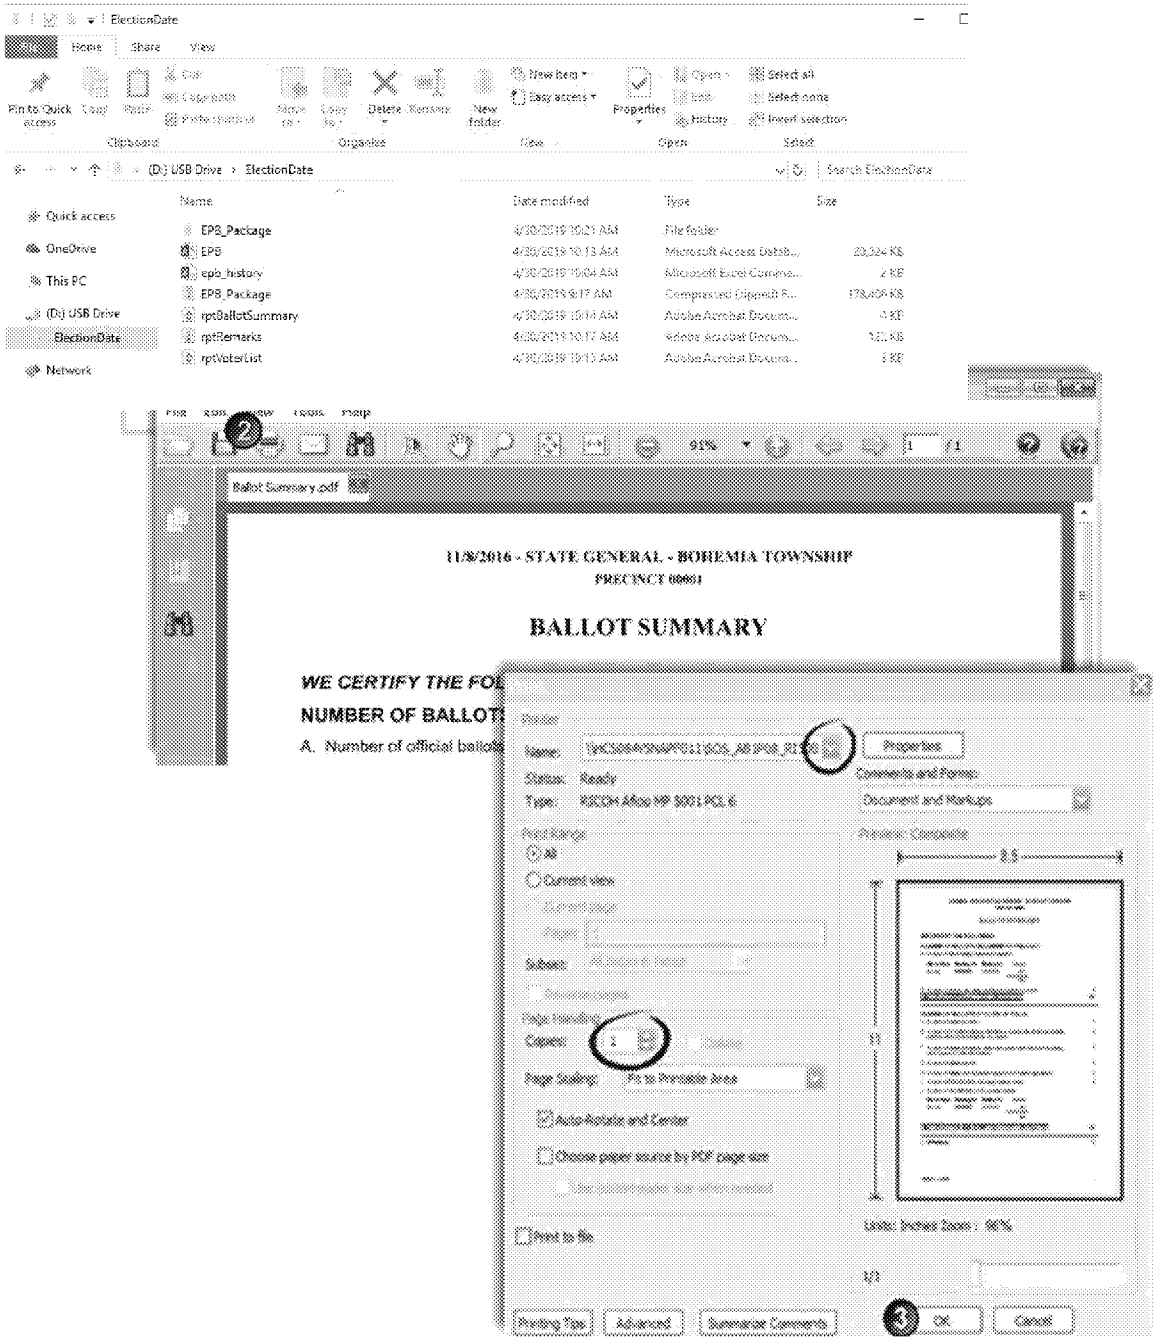


Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

Print copies of the Ballot Summary, List of Voters, and the Remarks by:

1. Double Click on the Report name (one at a time)
2. Click the printer button
3. Ensure the printer and number of copies are properly selected (screens may vary but all should have similar options available). Click OK.
4. Repeat Steps 1-3 for all three reports.



The encrypted flash drive must be placed into the container the Clerk recommends, sealed (either an envelope with a red paper seal or an approved container and the appropriate seal), and returned to the Clerk on election night.

Post-election Tasks: Import Voter History (within 7 days)

The clerk or a designated QVF user (either Basic or Complete) must upload Voter history into QVF within seven days of the election. To enter Voter History via the QVF, insert the encrypted flash drive into a USB port and log into the flash drive, then log into QVF.

NOTE: Voters added to the Unlisted tab or voters that were issued a Provisional - Envelope ballot will not automatically update (with the exception of unlisted voters with receipts and driver's license or state identification card numbers). If those voters' ballots were processed, they must be added to QVF and updated manually under Voter and Voting History.

If Absentee Ballots were processed in the precinct, the Updates Applied will not be the same number as Records Processed because AV information is updated at the time of recording the ballot as received in QVF.

Voting History
Below are the steps to import voting history.

1. Select Elections
2. Select Electronic Poll Book
3. Select Import voting history
4. Select Choose File
5. Locate and select the EPB History file you have saved
6. Click the open button on the file upload screen
7. You will see the file path in the import screen; click Import
8. An Upload_EPB_History_Error_Log.csv file will download which you may open or save to review details. See also Reports>Reports>Statistical>EPB Reports.

Post-election Tasks: Provisional Ballot/Affidavit Counts

QVF has been updated to permit you to enter or correct your precinct totals for Affidavits of Voters Not In Possession of Picture Identification, Provisional Affidavit Ballots, and Provisional Envelope Ballots under Elections>Electronic Pollbook on the Prov. Ballot/Affidavit tab. This task can be completed once all provisional envelope ballots have been resolved or the 6-day evaluation period has elapsed.

1. Select Region Type and Region
2. Select Election
3. Select View Affidavit Counts. Data uploaded with Voting History will display.
4. Click into the first box, correct or enter that precinct's totals, and tab or click to each subsequent item for each precinct. Save periodically as needed.
5. Click Save when finished.

Uninstall EPB software and delete associated files

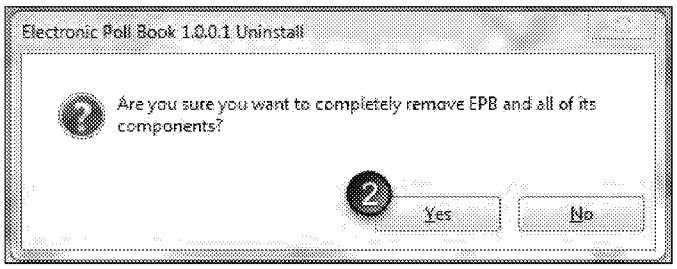
The EPB software and associated files must be deleted from all devices by the seventh calendar day following the final canvass and certification of the election unless a petition for recount has been filed and the recount has not been completed or the deletion of the data has been stayed by an order of the court or the Secretary of State. Remember, there are three locations files may have been saved. Be sure to note any other locations you have saved files and delete those as well. Delete these files after voter history has been uploaded to the QVF and after you have verified that the paper EPB report has been printed and retained.

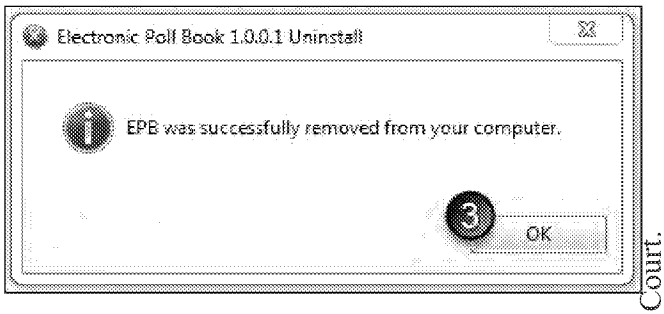
Deleting files is very important to keep voter data secure and prevent the common error of loading an old election onto the EPB laptop. The EPB software must be re-downloaded for each election as each download is unique and will contain the most up to date voter registration and absent voter information.

Uninstalling EPB software from the laptop
Because the EPB software must be downloaded and installed for each election, uninstalling the past version of the EPB software from the laptop is essential. The files used to install the software must also be deleted from the laptop.

To uninstall the EPB software:

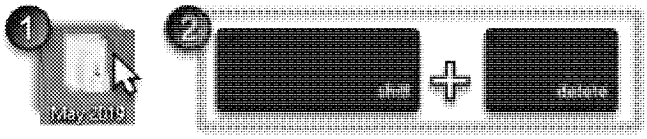
1. Double-click the Uninstall Electronic Pollbook shortcut on the Desktop
2. Click Yes
3. Click OK

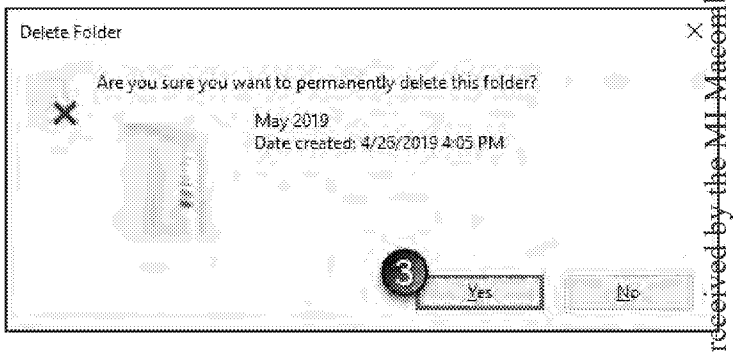




To remove the installation files from the laptop:

1. Select the [Election Date] folder on the Desktop
2. On the keyboard, click Shift + Delete at the same time
3. Click Yes





Repeat these steps for all laptops.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

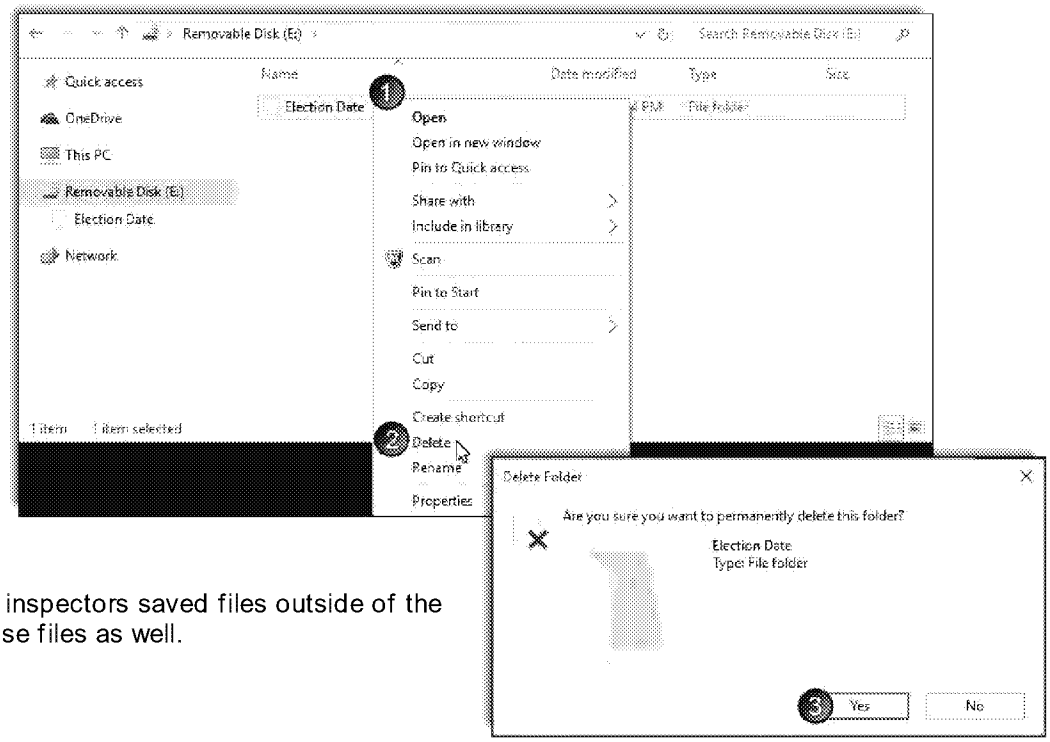
Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

To delete EPB files from the flash drive:

Plug the flash drive into a computer and unlock the drive by entering the password. To log in and view the contents of the drive, click on the File Explorer icon

1. Right click the [ElectionDate] folder within Removable Disk
2. Click Delete
3. Click Yes

Repeat these steps for all flash drives.

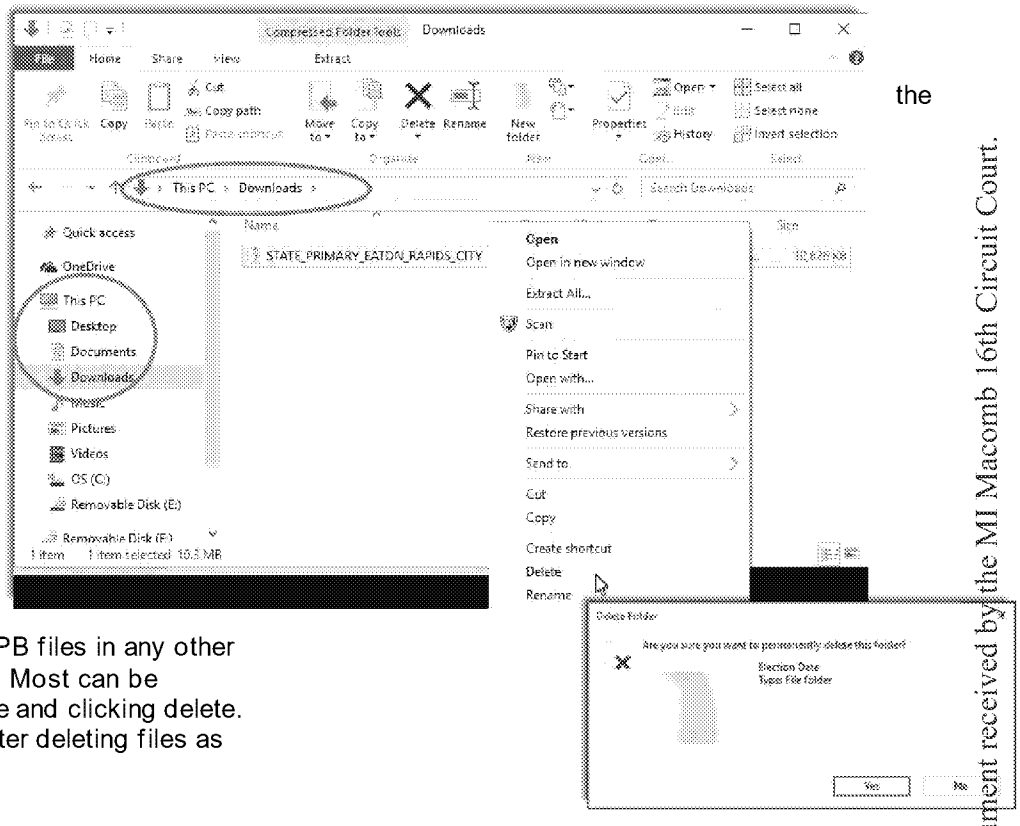


Important note: If election inspectors saved files outside of the folder, be sure to delete those files as well.

Deleting QVF PC Files

Lastly, delete all files saved on the QVF (if any).

1. Right click [ElectionDate] folder under This PC > Desktop
2. Click Delete
3. Click Yes
4. Right click [ElectionDate] folder under This PC > Downloads
5. Click Delete
6. Click Yes
7. Right click Recycle Bin on desktop
8. Click Empty Recycle Bin
9. Click Yes



Important note: If you saved EPB files in any other place(s) remove those files now. Most can be deleted by right clicking on the file and clicking delete. Always empty the Recycle Bin after deleting files as well.

Helpful Hints

Bar Code Scanners and Absent Voter Ballots
When processing absent voter ballots in the precinct, bar code scanners may be used to scan the absentee ballot application for voter look-up. If the laptop has 4 USB ports, the bar code scanner may be used along with the magnetic card reader. If the laptop only has 3 USB ports, the bar code scanner can be used to scan the back of a driver's license, replacing the need for a magnetic card reader.

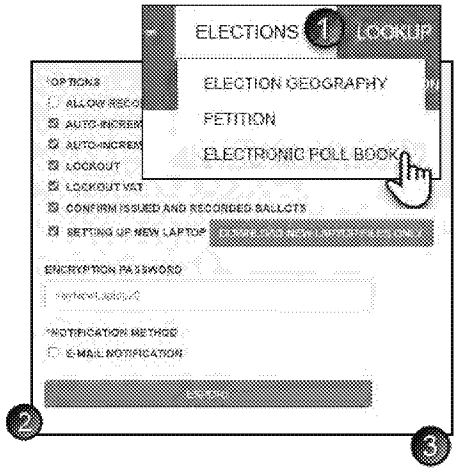
Screen Resolution
Optimal screen resolution for the EPB laptop has been 1366x768. If your list of voters is not displaying on the right-hand side of your screen, the resolution needs to be adjusted.

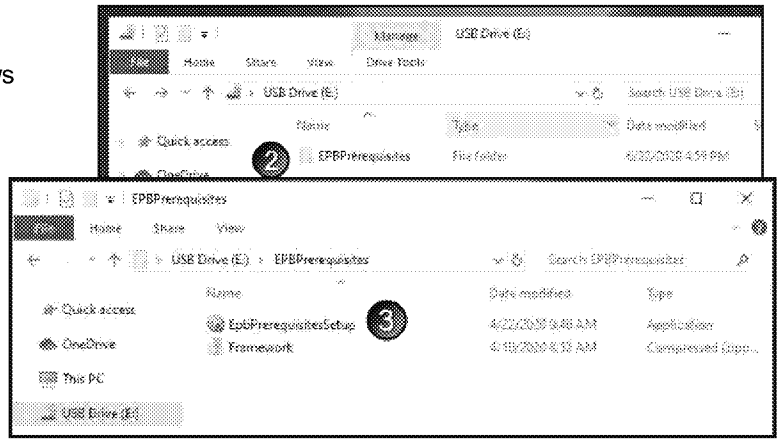
To adjust the screen resolution:

1. Go to the desktop and right click
2. Click screen resolution
3. Select 1366x768

Download and Install EPB New Laptop Files Only (optional separate download process)

1. Open the Elections menu and select Electronic Pollbook
2. Under Options, check the Setting Up New Laptop box.
3. Click the Download New Laptop Files Only blue button
4. Follow on-screen instructions for download depending on your browser.
5. Follow steps as on pp. 13-14 to:
    a. open folder to view files
    b. open zipped folder with Windows Explorer
    c. extract all files
    d. copy unzipped EPB Prerequisites folder to encrypted flash drive.





To install the EPB New Laptop Files (also known as EPB Prerequisites):

1. On each laptop, log into the encrypted flash drive
2. Double-click the EPBPrerequisites folder
3. Double-click the EpbPrerequisitesSetup file to begin installation

If a warning screen about the publisher pops up and requests you to confirm installation, click yes.

4. Click Next
5. Click I Agree
6. Click Install

A window showing the progress of the installation will appear, along with a command window (black screen). The command window will automatically close.

7. Click Finish

Frequently Asked Questions

1. The wrong ballot style was issued to a voter; how can it be corrected?

   Answer: If using different ballot numbers for each ballot style, no action is required except to remark the situation in the Remarks. If your ballot styles are numbered with the same ballot number series, open the voter's record, undo the issuance of the ballot with the incorrect ballot style, and reissue a Regular Ballot with a modified number using a letter before the number (for example, X0000012) and remark the situation in the Remarks.

2. If using the QVF AV module, do I have to extract the EPB software from QVF after 4:00 p.m. on the Monday before the election to get the most up to date absent voter information?

   Answer: Yes, this is now required by law. Jurisdictions with over 50 precincts are required to do so on the Saturday prior to Election Day after 2:00 p.m.

3. Is there a way to update absent voter activity on the encrypted flash drive or in the Voter List portion of the EPB software after it has been installed on the laptop?

   Answer: No, not at this time. Also, remember that election inspectors record AV ballots in the EPB software (unless using the addendum list or an AVCB), but they must not record AV ballots in the EPB software before the opening of the polls.

4. Do I have to print the paper binder pollbook reports in the precinct?

   Answer: No, in fact, having the Receiving Board print the reports is highly recommended. Reports must be delivered to the Receiving Board on the encrypted flash drive in a sealed container by two election inspectors of opposing political party after the polls close. The Receiving Board then prints the reports and completes the paper binder pollbook.

5. Do I need to use a particular type of printer with the laptops?

   Answer: No. Most printers will work with the laptops as long as the proper printer driver is installed. Complete the installation as soon as possible to verify the laptop and printer are compatible.

6. Do I have to have a hardcopy precinct list and full paper binder pollbook with a List of Voters, Ballot Summary and a Remarks section at each precinct if I use the EPB software?

   Answer: Under the terms of your User Agreement, you are required to have a hardcopy Precinct List and a hardcopy List of Voters, Ballot Summary, and Remarks Section available for immediate delivery to the precinct in the event of a system failure. One may be printed from the Elections eLearning Center; see Reverting to Paper Poll Book Guide.

7. The EPB software allows me to issue a ballot to a voter who has already returned an absent voter ballot. Why is this permitted?

   Answer: Under rare circumstances, an absentee ballot may have been recorded incorrectly in QVF. Election inspectors MUST contact the local clerk to verify the status of the absentee ballot before issuing a ballot to a voter who, according to the EPB software, has already returned an absent voter ballot.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

8. How do I change the time and time zone on my laptop?

   Answer: Right-click on the time and date, click Date and Time Settings. Here you can select the appropriate time zone. If you need to adjust the time, turn off the "Set time automatically" option, then click the Change button. Once the time is corrected, you can turn the "Set time automatically" option back on.

9. Do I have to use the EPB software to process absent voters in the precinct?

   Answer: No, you may use the Addendum List of Absent Voters method and add the list to the paper binder pollbook.

10. What if an absent voter does not return their ballot? Or if the absent voter surrenders their AV ballot in the polls? Do I need to indicate this in the EPB software?

    Answer: No. Only process an absentee ballot in the voter's record when the ballot has been received for processing. If the voter has surrendered their absent voter ballot, simply issue a precinct ballot using the normal process. The Spoil a ballot function should never be used for an absent voter ballot in the EPB software.

11. Will Unlisted Voters transfer to QVF after the Voter History has been updated?

    Answer: Some may, and some may not. Unlisted voters without a driver's license or state ID number will not transfer into QVF after Voter History has been updated. The registration of an Unlisted voter must be added to QVF if it has not been already added, and then Voter History for the Unlisted voter can be entered manually in QVF under Voter>Voting History.

12. Is there a way to view all actions taken in the EPB on Election Day?

    Answer: Yes. An Activity Log Report can be viewed at any time by selecting Reports > Activity Log Report. This Report may be printed as well.

13. Is there a way to convert the List of Voters into a .csv file?

    Answer: Not at this time.

14. What if my laptop "freezes up" and stops responding?

    Answer: First, try to close and reopen the EPB program, using Ctrl + Alt + Delete if necessary to use the Task Manager to end the task and close the EPB application. If that doesn't work, you may restart the computer. Remember to log back into the flash drive as well as the EPB program before you begin working again.

Glossary

Antivirus Software is a software program that helps protect the laptop from viruses that could damage or shut down the machine.

Backup is a file that replicates and saves entered data for use in the event of a system failure.

Ballot Style is a designation to distinguish amongst ballots in a precinct that has a District split. For example, Precinct One represents voters from County Commission District 5 and 7. If the County Commission position is on the ballot, Precinct One will have two ballot styles, one for District 5 and one for District 7.

BitLocker is free encryption software from Microsoft. For the E-Pollbook, it is software on flash drives issued by the State after 2015, used to protect data on a flash drive with a password.

Data Security is the means of ensuring that data is kept safe from corruption and that access to it is suitably controlled. Thus, data security helps to ensure privacy. It also helps in protecting personal data.

e-Pollbook Software is a computer software program created in the Qualified Voter File (QVF) to be loaded on a laptop and used in the precinct on election day to record voters and the ballots they are issued.

Encryption is the process of transforming information using an algorithm to make it unreadable to anyone except those possessing the password.

Encrypted Flash Drive is a digital storage device that has the ability to encrypt data and keep the data secure.

Encryption Password is a password created to allow access to the encrypted e-pollbook software once downloaded from QVF.

Election Geography is a function of QVF where precinct combinations and ballot style names can be set for an election. The information entered in the QVF Election Geography module will then tell the EPB software which precincts have been combined and the preferred name for ballot styles in split precincts.

Lockout is an e-pollbook software feature that disallows the issuance of a ballot number more than once per ballot style.

Privacy Zone is a term the V-Safe 100 software uses to define the encrypted area of the flash drive. This only applies to flash drives issued by the State prior to 2015.

Receiving Board is a board established by the local Election Commission responsible for ensuring 1) all ballot containers delivered to the clerk after the polls close are properly sealed 2) all seal numbers are properly recorded and 3) the number of names entered in the Poll Book balances with the number of ballots counted in the precinct. For more information visit michigan.gov/elections and click on "Information for Election Administrators."

Strong Password is a password that contains a combination of 8-20 characters, mixed case with at least one number.

V-Safe 100 is the name of the encryption software installed on earlier versions of the State issued flash drive prior to 2015.

MEMORANDUM

DATE: February 12, 2021
TO: County Clerks
FROM: Michigan Bureau of Elections
SUBJECT: Release of Voting Equipment

Please be advised of the following:

RELEASE OF VOTING EQUIPMENT: The security of ballots and election equipment is released as follows:

Ballots, programs and related materials: The security of all optical scan ballots, programs, test decks, accuracy test results, edit listings and any other related materials are released.

E-Pollbook laptops and flash drives: The EPB software and associated files must be deleted unless a post-election audit is planned but has not yet been completed or the deletion of the data has been stayed by an order of the court or the Secretary of State. Jurisdictions should consult with city, township, or county counsel regarding any pending court orders, subpoenas, or records requests regarding these materials.

FEDERAL BALLOT RETENTION REQUIREMENT: If the office of President, U.S. Senator or U.S. Representative in Congress appears on the ballot (all appeared on the November 3, 2020 general election ballot), federal law requires that all documents relating to the election -- including optical scan ballots and the programs used to tabulate optical scan ballots -- be retained for 22 months from the date of the certification of the election. To comply with the requirement, the Bureau of Elections recommends that optical scan ballots and the programs relating to federal elections be stored in sealed ballot bags in a secure place during the 22-month retention period. The documents subject to the federal retention requirement must not be transferred to ballot bags for extended retention until after they are released under Michigan election law as detailed in this memo.

Subject: Recent FOIA Requests

Clerks,

We are aware that clerks have received a request for the following:

"1. An electronic copy of the Qualified Voter File (QVF) extract for all precincts completed on Monday November 7, 2022 and loaded to the electronic pollbooks.

2. The historical electronic pollbook flash drive for all voting precincts in the jurisdiction for the election concluding November 8, 2022. (This is likely in a CSV – comma separated value format).

3. An electronic copy of the Qualified Voter File extract for all precincts completed as soon as the November midterm election voter history is uploaded to the QVF which must be within 7 days pursuant to MCL 168.813."

Before responding to these FOIA requests, you should consult with your city or township attorney regarding the requests and exemptions that may apply including those contained in MCL 15.243(1)(y) and (z). Under FOIA, you may shield sensitive information from disclosure. Clerks must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the Electronic Poll Book, as doing so could compromise the Bureau of Elections' ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss or destruction. In response to previous FOIA requests regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(y). In addition, the responsive records include sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z).

Further, electronic poll book files contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which is exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software and program files are disclosed.

Please note that certain specific data derived from the qualified voter file electronic pollbook is subject to disclosure under FOIA, including the lists of registered voters from the Qualified Voter File and the paper printout of the electronic pollbook generated on election night. If members of the public are interested in verifying the names of individuals registered to vote on a certain date or included in the electronic pollbook, they may obtain this information by submitting a FOIA for publicly available records.

Additionally, we are aware that clerks received FOIA requests for a copy of or the opportunity to view tabulator tapes. While the tapes are a public record that can be provided, they are election records that should remain secured until security is released after the final canvass and certification, recounts, and audits. Once you are notified that security has been released in your jurisdiction, you can fulfill these requests.

MEMORANDUM

Date: July 10, 2023
To: Municipal and County Election Officials
From: Jonathan Brater, Director of Elections
Subject: Security of Qualified Voter File and Electronic Pollbooks

Introduction

Election officials have experienced a series of attempts to access election materials that, if disclosed, pose privacy threats to Michigan voters and security threats to Michigan's election system. At times, these attempts have been accompanied by aggressive and even threatening language and behavior. Consistent with the Michigan Election Law and its responsibility to safeguard election security in Michigan, the Bureau of Elections (the Bureau) has instructed clerks that while Qualified Voter File (QVF) and Electronic Pollbook (EPB) records are public and subject to disclosure, certain components of these systems cannot be released without compromising voter privacy and election system security.

This memorandum provides further explanation of these issues and information for clerks to consider when reviewing public records requests with their legal counsel. It also describes the potential consequences of providing inappropriate access to election equipment to unauthorized individuals. Additionally, the memorandum addresses several false claims that have been made about QVF and EPB data and election administration in Michigan.

Record Requests Seeking QVF and EPB Data

Clerks have received requests for access to QVF and EPB data in a variety of different formats, including:

- Requests under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act (FOIA)
- Demands that records be preserved for "investigation"
- Demands to perform "inspections" of election records or equipment

Regardless of the format of any request to inspect QVF or EPB data, clerks should consult with their own counsel for legal questions regarding any of these requests.[1] The Bureau provides the following information in this memorandum: a summary of applicable provisions of FOIA and the Michigan Election Law; a description of the manner in which the Bureau has responded to

[1] Any clerk who receives a subpoena, request to preserve records pursuant to a lawsuit, or a request to inspect records from law enforcement should consult with legal counsel and inform the Bureau of Elections and the Michigan Department of Attorney General.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

specific requests, and; instructions not to disclose certain materials that pose a threat to election system security if released.

Requests for Electronic EPB Files

Clerks have received requests for electronic copies of EPB materials in various formats. These include requests for "an electronic copy of the Qualified Voter File (QVF) extract"; an "electronic pollbook flash drive", a "CSV- Comma separate value format", or other similar requests. At times, these requests have been accompanied by "helpful" instructions showing clerks how to potentially compromise the security of their election systems and render their election equipment unusable by illegally providing security-compromising information to unauthorized individuals.

Before responding to these or any FOIA requests, clerks should consult with their legal counsel regarding the requests and exemptions that may apply. Under FOIA, officials may shield sensitive information from disclosure. In the case of EPB files, the Bureau of Elections instructs clerks that they must not publicly release data or files that would reveal the software design or data architecture of the EPB. The Bureau gives this lawful instruction[2] under its supervisory authority pursuant to MCL 168.21, 168.31, and 168.32, as doing so could compromise the Bureau's ability to secure and safeguard the software and data from hacking, theft, loss or destruction, and accordingly interfere with the Bureau's obligation under the Michigan Election law to provide EPB software to clerks. MCL 168.668b.

In response to previous FOIA requests regarding EPB data, the Bureau of Elections has not disclosed these records because the records sought constitute "cybersecurity plans, assessments, or vulnerabilities" that are exempt from disclosure. The Bureau has an interest in maximizing the protection and defense of its information systems, which outweighs the public interest in the disclosure of this information as the release of this sensitive information could jeopardize the security of Michigan's electoral process. MCL 15.243(1)(y). In addition, the responsive records include proprietary software information, security feature information, and sensitive information which, if released, "would disclose a person's cybersecurity plans or cybersecurity-related practices, procedures, methods, results, organizational information system infrastructure, hardware, or software." MCL 15.243(1)(z). Additionally, these files contain sensitive information regarding jurisdictions' EPB laptop(s) that might compromise the security of these laptops.

EPB files also contain personal identifying information such as full birth dates for voters, which are exempt from disclosure. MCL 168.509gg. Attempted manual redaction of personal identifying information may not be sufficient to protect this information from disclosure if the software and program files are disclosed.

[2] See MCL 168.931(h) ("A person shall not willfully fail to perform a duty imposed upon that person by this act, or disobey a lawful instruction or order of the secretary of state as chief state election officer[.]""

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

Obtained by Judicial Watch via Michigan FOIA

If clerks receive a FOIA request for EPB data, the requestor can be directed to the county clerk for paper pollbook copies or to the Bureau for the log file or voter history.

Notwithstanding the above restrictions on the release of certain information, there are numerous ways in which members of the public can review public QVF and EPB data. Clerks can provide the paper records they are legally obligated to maintain for the required retention period after each election, as soon as the security period has elapsed. Certain specific data derived from the QVF and EPB is subject to disclosure under FOIA, including the lists of registered voters from the QVF and the paper printout of the EPB generated on election night.

If members of the public are interested in verifying the names of individuals registered to vote on a certain date or included in the EPB, they may obtain this information by submitting a FOIA request for publicly available records. If members of the public with concerns about EPB data wish to verify the names of individuals who cast ballots, they can also do so by submitting a FOIA request and reviewing the paper applications to vote completed by all in-person voters and the absent voter ballot applications submitted by all absentee voters.

Electronic records such as the EPB log file or voter history can be requested from the Bureau. Requests for EPB data must be directed to the Bureau to ensure that sensitive information related to both individual voters and the EPB are removed before public disclosure of otherwise available information. Even if clerks were to attempt to redact a voter's date of birth and other personally identifiable information, the disclosure of security and technical information is also exempt from FOIA and may not be properly redacted if produced by clerks, instead of the Bureau.

Clerks have also received communications demanding that they disregard instructions contained in the Bureau of Elections communications, including the Recount/Release of Security Memorandum circulated after each election. The Bureau's instructions are lawful directives in compliance with state and federal law.

Going back to at least 2012 (under Secretary of State Ruth Johnson), the Bureau has issued a directive to destroy electronic copies of the EPB and flash drive. As clerks are no doubt aware, numerous candidates of both major political parties have won statewide elections since 2012. This procedure is necessary to safeguard security and voter privacy. Clerks destroy electronic copies only after they have already printed the paper copy of pollbook information (which must be retained for the required retention period).

Clerks must comply with this instruction regardless of whatever claims private individuals make. A private individual has no authority to instruct clerks on their duties. Whatever "investigation" these individuals claim to be conducting or threats of "prosecution" they may make toward local or state officials, in the absence of a court-issued subpoena or other court order, clerks are not required to comply with their demands. If clerks do receive one of these demands, they should consult with their attorney on how to respond.

Clerks should also be wary of private individuals, including self-proclaimed "experts," attempting to instruct them on the issue of whether disclosure of electronic materials would or would not constitute a security concern. In reality, it is often not possible for an individual unfamiliar with a system to determine whether any one individual piece of information, if known, would be useful in compromising that system. This is one of the reasons software and data elements which may, on their own or in combination with other elements, jeopardize security are not disclosed. Similarly, clerks should not accept at face value claims from private individuals, whatever expertise they claim to have, that clerks can easily redact security-related or personal identifying information.

Consequences of Improper Disclosure

Clerks should understand that the disclosure of this sensitive information may compromise the integrity of Michigan's elections and may warrant an investigation by the Department of State, Department of Attorney General, or Michigan State Police. Improper disclosure may also result in fiscal implications for the jurisdiction. Specifically, disclosure could require the purchase of new EPB laptops for each precinct for which data was compromised.

False and Misleading Claims About QVF and EPB Data

Individuals seeking improper access to QVF and EPB records have made numerous false or misleading claims about QVF and EPB data and election administration in Michigan. Although making or believing false statements has no bearing on whether individuals are permitted to access a record, clerks may find these explanations useful in communicating with the public or other local and county officials, including law enforcement.

Election Turnout and Voter History

Some individuals have claimed that because, in past elections, the total number of ballots tabulated statewide does not exactly match the number of voters with a voter history indicator in QVF, this means that election results and files cannot be trusted, or that there is some sort of unknown or unexplained irregularity involving voter data.

In reality, these numbers do not match exactly because they come from two different sources. County-certified election results are based on the number of ballots cast and tabulated in each jurisdiction, as determined by the county canvass. This includes canvasser review of tabulator tapes showing election night results, in addition to any corrections or adjustments at the county canvass and recounts, if applicable.

Voter history in QVF is based on entry of voter history data from the EPBs (for in-person voters) and absent voter ballot return envelopes (for absentee voters). Following each election, each clerk uploads their EPB data for each of their precincts to the QVF. This automatically updates the voter history in QVF for all voters recorded in the EPB as voting at the polling place. Alternatively, clerks can manually add voter history to the QVF using the paper printout of the EPB.

If any of Michigan's 1,520 municipal clerks do not update QVF with EPB data for any of their precincts, voter history for voters in those precincts will not appear in QVF even though those voters did in fact appear at the precinct, apply to vote, get recorded in the poll book, and cast ballots. Following each election, the Bureau sends multiple communications and reminders to clerks to add voter history data to the QVF. Most clerks do so promptly, but some are delayed and some fail to do so.

This was the case in the November 2020 election, as it was in other past elections. Approximately 5.57 million ballots were cast in the November 2020 election according to certified results. As of April 2021, when the Office of the Auditor General reviewed QVF data for its audit of the Bureau, voter history for approximately 5.53 million voters had been uploaded to the QVF. In subsequent months, the Bureau sent additional communications to clerks reminding them to add voter history data to the QVF, and more clerks did so. As of 2022, the number of voters showing history in QVF for the November 2020 election was approximately 5.55 million.

Ultimately, a small percentage of jurisdictions did not add QVF data for at least one of their precincts in 2020 which meant that a small percentage of voter history was not recorded in QVF. Approximately 99.6% of voter history was uploaded in the QVF for the November 2020 election, which is a higher percentage than was uploaded for the November 2016 election (approximately 99.0%) and November 2018 election (approximately 98.5%). In subsequent elections, the percentage of voter history uploaded has increased even further.

EPB Time and Date Records

Individuals have claimed that the absence of a specific "time stamp" on some voter history tables is suspicious because, on election day, the EPB records the specific time at which a voter appeared on Election Day. These individuals misunderstand the table they are viewing. In reality, some QVF tables include "00:00" in the time field because the record is referring to an election date, not a time on election day. Elections occur all day, so it does not make sense for QVF to display any specific time. Like other programs that include voluminous amounts of data, QVF generates tables of data that are programmed and populated using numerous databases.[3] When there is no entry needed for a field (for example, a time field corresponding to election day), the default value that databases display is "00:00."

Voter History from Previous Addresses

Some voters who have moved from one jurisdiction to another in Michigan have noticed that voter history from prior elections, when they voted at their prior address, may appear as voter history from their current address. This is because the old version of QVF (QVF Legacy) did not track the jurisdiction where a past vote occurred. One of the many benefits of QVF Refresh, released in 2019, is that voter history from prior addresses can be tracked at the prior address. Therefore, voters who moved to and voted from prior addresses in elections that occurred after QVF Refresh was released will see voter history appear as having voted at the prior address.

[3] Some individuals have claimed that there are multiple QVF "databases" and that this is somehow being used to perpetuate fraud. Aside from being impossible for the reasons described later in the memo, this claim is based on misconceptions regarding the QVF. The QVF is not a single "database" but instead a program used by the Bureau and Clerks for many purposes, requiring numerous tables and reports, which are in turn programmed and populated by numerous databases. For an explanation of what a database actually is, see this explanation from Microsoft: https://azure.microsoft.com/en-us/resources/cloud-computing-dictionary/what-are-databases/.

However, votes that occurred at addresses when the voter's move predated QVF Refresh will display at the current address. This is not because of some nefarious purpose, but because QVF Legacy did not have the data capability as the current system.

QVF Record Identifying and Voter ID Numbers

Some individuals have claimed that the fact that there are multiple identifying numbers corresponding to voter records in QVF suspicious. In reality, there are multiple numbers for security reasons. Voters have a public voter ID number in QVF and the EPB, which is public and disclosed in public record requests. QVF also contains separate record-identifying numbers that correspond to voter records, which are used for security and verification purposes (and which are not publicly disclosed for security reasons). Again, the non-disclosed record-identifying number is not different from the voter ID number for some nefarious purpose, but as an internal verification and security measure.

Security Procedures Used to Verify EPB is Offline

As clerks are aware, the EPB used on Election Day must be offline and laptops operating the EPB software must be turned to "airplane mode" to ensure there is no internet connection. In order to make sure that EPBs are offline, the EPB software is designed to receive a periodic "Ping" from the State of Michigan network on Election Day to check for improper internet connectivity. If the Ping detects an internet connection on the EPB laptop, the EPB software displays a warning message instructing the user to disconnect the laptop from an internet connection by turning the laptop to airplane mode. Some individuals have suggested this connection is suspicious, when in fact it is a security feature designed to ensure EPB laptops remain offline throughout Election Day.

General QVF-Related Conspiracy Theories

In general, some individuals have pointed to various data or program elements in QVF and claimed – whether because QVF data is imperfect or incomplete, because these individuals do not understand what they are looking at, or some combination of the above – that this shows some broad conspiracy to perpetrate election fraud. While it is of course true that QVF – a constantly changing voter file that needs to be updated whenever a voter registers, moves, cancels a registration, dies, applies for an absentee ballot, or various other activities – will never be 100 percent accurate or up to date, this does not mean there is some conspiracy to manipulate QVF data to perpetrate fraud. In fact, in recent years the Bureau and clerks have done more than ever before to keep QVF accurate and up to date.[4]

Regardless of how accurate or up to date QVF is at any given time, however, the suggestion that QVF could be used to perpetuate massive undetected election fraud is without merit. Even if one were to assume that Bureau staff (many of whom have worked at the nonpartisan Bureau of Elections for years or decades under multiple Secretaries of State of both political parties) and staff at the nonpartisan Department of Technology, Management, and Budget were involved in such a scheme, it would require thousands of clerks and election inspectors of both political parties to be involved as well.

[4] For more information on how QVF is kept up to date, see https://www.michigan.gov/sos/elections/voting/voters/voter-registration-cancellation-procedures.

Document received by the MI Macomb 16th Circuit Court.

This is because while QVF is used to maintain electronic registration and voting records, voting is done by human beings using paper ballots, in elections that are run by municipal clerks across the state. In addition to the paper ballots, there are also polling place applications to vote (which must be completed by in-person voters, and which are retained by clerks after election) and absentee ballot applications (which must be completed by absentee voters, and which are also retained by clerks after elections). These materials provide an independent, paper record of all the individuals who cast ballots in an election. If there were actually some kind of fraud being perpetrated using QVF, this could be easily proven by reviewing these paper records.

In many respects, these nonsensical claims about QVF are similar to the false claims previously made about ballot tabulation equipment, which if true could have been proven by reviewing paper ballots (when in fact, reviews of paper ballots all confirmed that tabulators counted ballots accurately).

Additional Information and Support Available

It is unfortunate that election officials continue to be subjected to false claims, abusive behavior, and even threats. Whatever assertions individuals make about election officials, clerks should be mindful that there are legal avenues for individuals to pursue these assertions. If individuals disagree with a FOIA determination by a local or state official, they can file a lawsuit. If they believe criminal activity occurred, they can make a complaint in writing to law enforcement.

The Bureau encourages election officials to communicate with local and state law enforcement regarding any threats they may have received, and to continue to communicate with law enforcement regarding the various false claims and allegations of criminal activity that some individuals continue to make. Clerks are also encouraged to communicate with municipal and county government associations for additional independent support and advice. Finally, the Bureau of Elections remains available for any additional questions you have or support you may need. If clerks believe that any unauthorized or unsupervised access to their equipment may have occurred, they should contact the Bureau immediately. Please do not hesitate to contact the Bureau if we can be of further assistance.

City and Township Clerks,

Jurisdictions have received Freedom of Information Act Requests to view Qualified Voter File (QVF) records, voter registration records, and absent voter ballot records for registered voters in Michigan. You should consult with your local legal counsel regarding any public records requests. The Bureau of Elections' position is that the Michigan Election Law prohibits the release of the digitized voter signature images from the Qualified Voter File. MCL 168.509gg(f). The Bureau's position is that the Michigan Election Law does not prohibit clerks from allowing members of the public to view voter registration forms, voter registration master cards, absent voter ballot applications, or absent voter ballot applications that include a voter's handwritten signature.
